A. There are four herſies which were condemned by four general councils. 1. Arius and his followers denied the eternity of Chriſt's Godhead: And therefore it is aſſerted he is God, and that from all eternity. 2. Marcian and his followers denied the verity of Chriſt's human nature, ſaying he was only man in appearance: But the anſwer aſſerts, He became Man, and real Man. 3 Eutyches and his followers would have the two natures mixed and confounded, ſo as to make one: Therefore it is aſſerted, That he hath two diſtinct natures. 4 Neſtorius and his followers divided the two natures of Chriſt, ſo as to make him two perſons: Therefore it is aſſerted, That theſe two natures are ſo united as to make him but one perſon.

Q. Is Chriſt true God, co-eſſential, co-eternal, and co-equal with the Father?

A. Yes; as is evident from the ſcriptures, John x. 30. Phil. ii. 6. See this fully proven before, in the explication of the 6th Queſt. Pag. 36. 37, 38, 39, 40.

Q. How do you prove that Chriſt is true man as well as true God?

A. He hath the eſſential conſtituent parts of a man, a true body, and a rational ſoul: He was hungry; he ate, drank, ſlept, ſwate, ſuffered, bled, and died.

Q. Was he man from all eternity?

A. No, Heb. ii. 14.

Q. When became he Man?

A. In the fulneſs of time when the ſceptre was departed from Judah. Then a body was prepared for him; being conceived in the womb of the Virgin Mary, and born of her, in an extraordinary way, Gal. iv. 4. Heb. x. 5. Luke ii. 1, 2, &c.

Q. How long time was there between Chriſt's coming in the fleſh, and the firſt promiſe made thereof to our firſt Parents?

A. About four thouſand years.

Q. Why did he delay the accompliſhing of this promiſe ſo long?

A. To convince fallen ſinners of God's indignation againſt ſin, and of the wretched ſtate ſin hath plunged them into, and that their deliverance could never ariſe from themſelves: And alſo to teach us to wait patiently for the fulfilment of other of God's promiſes to his church.

Q. How many years is it ſince Chriſt came into the world?

A. We may know that from the preſent year of God, which is 1737 years; for that is the reckoning of years among Chriſtians, ſince God became Man.

Q. Why was it neceſſary that our Redeemer ſhould be true Man?

A. That he might be our near kinſman, and have the right of redemption lodged in him: And that he might be capable to ſhed blood and ſuffer death in our room; for without the ſhedding of blood there was no remiſſion, Ruth iv. 3, 4. Heb. ix. 22.

Q. Why was it neceſſary that our Redeemer ſhould be God?

A. To ſupport the human nature, and keep it from ſinking under the wrath of God and power of death; and to give ſufficient value and efficacy to his blood and ſufferings, for ſatisfying juſtice, and purchaſing life for us.

Q. Do theſe two natures in Chriſt make two perſons?

A. No.

Q. How can he be but one perſon, ſeeing he is both God and man?

A. By the human nature its ſubſiſting in union with the ſecond Perſon of the glorious Trinity.

Q. Why was it neceſſary that the ſecond Perſon ſhould have taken the human nature to ſubſiſt in his own perſonality, ſo that our Redeemer ſhould be but one Perſon?

A. That his ſufferings, tho' only in his human nature, might be reckoned the ſufferings of one that was truly God, and ſo be of infinite value to redeem a loſt world.

Q. How is this union called?

A. A hypoſtatical or perſonal union; but it is ſuch a myſtery as neither men nor angels can comprehend, 1 Tim. iii. 16. 1 Pet. 1. 12.

Q. How long will this union laſt?

A. For ever.

Q. Doth Chriſt continue to be God and Man ſtill in heaven?

A. Yes.

Q. Is not the human nature highly exalted by this hypoſtatical union?

A. Yes.

Q. Have we not ground to ſay with wonder, Lord what is man, that thou art mindful of him in ſuch a manner?

A. Yes; for it is moſt amazing conduct to ſhew ſuch reſpect to fallen men, when fallen angels are paſt by.

Q. Is it not a ſtrong argument to avoid brutiſh luſts and ſenſual pleaſures, that theſe would debaſe the human nature which Chriſt hath ſo highly advanced?

A. Yes.

Q. Ought we not cheerfully to act, ſuffer, and be abaſed for Chriſt, that ſtooped ſo low as to become man for us?

A. Yes.

QUEST. XXII.

How did Chriſt, being the Son of God, become Man?

A. Chriſt the Son of God became Man, by taking to himſelf a true body and a reaſonable ſoul; being conceived by the power of the Holy Ghoſt, in the womb of the Virgin Mary, and born of her, yet without ſin.

Q. Did Chriſt, in aſſuming our nature take all the neceſſary eſſential parts of a man?

A. Yes, he took a true body, and a reaſonable ſoul.

Q. Why is it called a true body?

A. To ſhew that it was not a phantaſtical body, or only the ſhape and appearance of a body, as ſome old hereticks maintained; but that he took a real body of fleſh and blood, as we have, Luke xxiv. 39. Heb. ii. 14.

Q. Did Chriſt's divine nature ſupply the place of a ſoul to him?

A. No; tho' ſome hereticks taught ſo. He took a reaſonable ſoul, as well as a true body, Iſa. liii. 10. Mat. xxvi. 38.

Q. Did Chriſt bring his body or fleſh from heaven?

A. No; he was the ſeed of the woman, Gen. iii. 15.

Q. Was Chriſt's birth like that of other men?

A. No; for he was born of a virgin, without any earthly father, Iſa. vii. 14. Mat. 1. 24, 25.

Q. How could that be?

A. He was miraculouſly conceived by the power of the Holy Ghoſt, in the womb of the virgin Mary, Luke 1. 34, 35.

Q. Of what nation, tribe or family did Chriſt deſcend as he was a man?

A. By his mother Mary, he came of the nation of the Jews, of the tribe of Judah, and of the family of David, Luke i. 69.

Q. If Chriſt had a mother, how is Melchizedec a type of him, as being recorded without father and without mother? Heb. vii. 3.

A. In regard Chriſt is without any human Father as man, and without mother as God.

Q. Why was he conceived and born of a virgin?

A. To fulfil ſcripture-prophecies concerning him, and to keep him pure from original ſin, which is conveyed to all Adam's poſterity by natural generation.

Q. How could he be free of ſin, ſeeing he was born of a ſinful woman?

A. The Holy Ghoſt did miraculouſly ſanctify ſo much of the virgin's ſubſtance as formed Chriſt's body, which therefore is called that Holy Thing which ſhall be born of her, Luke i. 35.

Q. Why was it neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould be conceived and born without ſin?

A. If he had not been without all ſpot or blemiſh, he could not have been a ſacrifice for ſin acceptable to God: Neither could his righteouſneſs, which was to be imputed to all believers, have been infinitely perfect, as was neceſſary for our redemption, Lev. iii. 1. 6. Jer. xxiii. 6. 2 Cor. v. 21. Heb. vii. 26, 27. Num. xxviii. 3. 1 Pet. i. 19.

Q. Do not we read that Chriſt was ſent in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh? Rom. viii. 3.

A. That doth not import he was really tainted with ſin, but only that he had the likeneſs or appearance of ſinful fleſh, in partaking of theſe infirmities of our nature which were the conſequents of ſin, tho' they were ſinleſs in themſelves.

Q. What were theſe ſinleſs infirmities?

A. Such as wearineſs, ſleeping, weeping, ſorrowing, ſuffering, bleeding, ſweating, and dying.

Q. Did not Chriſt ſuffer for ſin?

A. Yes, but not for any ſin of his own; for he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for our iniquities, Iſa. liii. 5.

Q. Should we not all deſire to be like our head, and, as much as poſſible, to be without ſin?

A. Yes, 1 Pet. ii. 21.—— 25.

QUEST. XXIII.

Q. What offices doth Chriſt execute as our Redeemer?

A. Chriſt, as our Redeemer, executeth the office of a Prophet, of a Prieſt, and of a King, both in his eſtate of humiliation and exaltation.

Q. Are not theſe three offices called Chriſt's mediatory offices?

A. Yes; or they are three branches of Chriſt's mediatory office, in each of which Chriſt doth perform what he undertook, by mediating and acting, either for God with us, or for us with God.

Q. Why is Chriſt's mediatory office threefold?

A. To anſwer his peoples threefold miſery, ignorance, guilt, and bondage: For, as a Prophet, he cures our ignorance by his divine teaching; as a Prieſt, he atones for our guilt by his ſacrifice; as a King, he reſcues us from bondage by his power, and ſettles us under a good government.

Q. What mean you by Chriſt's executing of his offices?

A. His doing or performing theſe things which properly belong to ſuch an office or charge.

Q. Did Chriſt take upon him theſe offices without a call?

A. No; he was lawfully called to every one of them by the Father, who hath put all power and judgment in his hand. And therefore he is called the LORD's Chriſt, Matth. xxviii. 18. Luke ii. 26. John v. 27.

Q. How doth it appear from ſcripture, that Chriſt is called and appointed by the Father to his threefold office, of Prophet, Prieſt, and King?

A. It appears from theſe three following plain texts, Acts iii. 22. Heb. v. 6. Pſal. ii. 6.

Q. Was ever any man honoured with all the three offices of Prophet, Prieſt, and King, but the man Chriſt?

A. No: for, though Melchizedec was a king and a prieſt, yet he was not a prophet; David was a king and a prophet, yet he was not a prieſt; Samuel was a prieſt and a prophet, yet he was not a king. Which ſhews us how far ſhort the types and ſhadows came of the ſubſtance.

Q. Do not all the promiſes of the new covenant flow from Chriſt's ſeveral offices as their proper fountain?

A. Yes: the promiſes of inſtruction, illumination and conduct, flow from his Prophetical office: the promiſe of pardon, peace and healing, from his Prieſtly office; and the promiſe of deliverance, protection, grace and glory, flow from his Kingly office.

Q. Do not theſe three offices of Chriſt render him a moſt ſuitable help and complete remedy for all the grievances and neceſſities of his people?

A. Yes.

Q. Can a man cloſe with Chriſt in one of theſe offices, and not in another?

A. No: they are but hypocrites who would divide his offices, and receive him partially; for whoever would reap benefit by one office, muſt receive Chriſt in all.

Q. In which of Chriſt's eſtates doth he execute his three offices?

A. In both of his eſtates, to wit, of humiliation and exaltation.

Q. What do you mean by theſe two eſtates of Chriſt?

A. By his eſtate of humiliation, I underſtand that low and afflicted condition Chriſt was in here upon earth; and by his eſtate of exaltation, that raiſed, high and glorious condition he is now in heaven.

Q. How did Chriſt execute all his three offices in his eſtate of humiliation?

A. 1ſt, He executed his office as a Prophet, by his perſonal miniſtry upon earth, and ſending out his diſciples to inſtruct the world in the way of ſalvation. 2dly, He executed his Prieſtly office, by offering up himſelf a ſacrifice on the croſs, and praying for his people. 3dly, He executed his Kingly office, in promulgating and explaining laws to the world, purging the temple, and riding in triumph to Jeruſalem.

Q. How doth Chriſt execute theſe three offices now in his eſtate of exaltation?

A. 1ſt, He executes that of a Prophet, by furniſhing and ſending forth his miniſters to teach the world. 2dly, That of a Prieſt, by making interceſſion for his people. 3dly, That of a King, by proclaming his laws, ſubduing his enemies, and governing his church.

Q. Did Chriſt execute none of theſe offices before either his ſtate of humiliation or exaltation?

A. Chriſt being inſtalled in all theſe three offices by virtue of the covenant of redemption, he entered upon the execution of them immediately after the fall, and did execute them ſo far as his work did not neceſſarily require his incarnation.

QUEST. XXIV.

Q. How doth Chriſt execute the office of a Prophet?

A. Chriſt executeth the office of a Prophet in revealing to us, by his word and Spirit the will of God for our ſalvation.

Q. What do you mean by a Prophet, or his office?

A. One whoſe employment it is, either to foretell things to come, or to teach ſinners the will of God, and expound his word to them.

Q. Is Chriſt a Prophet in all theſe reſpects ?

A. Yes.

Q. What do we read of his propheſying or foretelling things to come ?

A. He foretold Judas his betraying him, Peter's denying him, all the diſciples their forſaking him, the manner of his death and ſufferings, his riſing on the third day, the deſtruction of the city and temple of Jeruſalem, the perſecution of his diſciples, the calling of the Gentiles, &c. Mat. xxvi. 23, 31, 34. Mat. xx. 18, 19, Luke xix. 44. Mat. xxiv. 2. John xvi. 2. Mat. xxi. 43.

Q. By what other way did Chriſt execute his prophetical office ?

A. He did it by his perſonal miniſtry, and teaching ſinners the will of God, while he was on earth ; and by ſending forth his apoſtles and their ſucceſſors to teach them ; and by illuminating the minds of goſpel hearers by his Spirit, to underſtand and reliſh divine truths.

Q. What was the need of ſuch an extraordinary prophet as Jeſus Chriſt to teach us the will of God ?

A. Becauſe of the groſs darkneſs and blindneſs which came upon us by the fall ; and becauſe none but he, that was in the boſom of the Father from eternity, was capable to make known to us the hid myſteries of the goſpel, John i. 18, Acts xxvi. 18.

Q. Did Chriſt execute his prophetical office under the Old Teſtament as well as the New ?

A. Yes ; for he exiſted before he became man, and taught his church of old.

Q. How doth that appear ?

A. By the holy ſcripture, which tells us, that Chriſt was in the Old Teſtament prophets by his Spirit ; that he preached in the days of Noah, to theſe who are now in priſon ; that he ſpoke with Moſes and the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, and was tempted by them there. See 1 Pet. i. 11. 1 Pet. iii. 19. Acts vii. 38. 39. 1 Cor. x. 9.

Q. Wherein doth Chriſt excell all other prophets ?

A. In regard Chriſt authoriſes them all, and teacheth the heart as well as the ear. No prophet ever taught with ſuch authority, power, wiſdom, diligence, faithfulneſs, zeal and compaſſion as Chriſt did ; nor ever confirmed his doctrine with ſuch miracles and holineſs of life as Chriſt did his, Mat. xxii. 16. 22. 34. 46. Luke iv. 22. Mat. vii. 28. 29. John vii. 46. Luke xxiv. 32. 45. John xv. 24. John viii. 46.

Q. By what means doth Chriſt reveal to us the will of God ?

A. He doth it outwardly by his word, and inwardly by his Spirit.

Q. Why are the ſcriptures called the word of Chriſt ? Col. iii. 16.

A. Tho' they be alſo the word of the Father and of the Holy Ghoſt, yet they are Chriſt's word in a peculiar manner, becauſe by them he ſpeaks as Mediator in the name of God, and executes the prophetical office for teaching the church.

Q. Is it only by the word read that Chriſt teacheth his church ?

A. He teacheth alſo by preaching and hearing of the word ; and therefore he hath appointed paſtors for opening up the ſcriptures, and teaching his church thereby to the end of the world, Mat. xxviii. 19. 20. Neh. viii. 8. Rom. x. 14. 15. 16. 17. Prov. viii. 34.

Q. Is the word ſufficient to teach us the will of God without the Spirit ?

A. No ; for tho' the ſcriptures are in themſelves a ſufficient rule to direct, yet ſuch is the darkneſs of our minds that we cannot ſavingly diſcern and receive divine truths without the Spirit's illumination, 1 Cor. ii. 14.

Q. How is it that the Spirit teacheth us the will of God ?

A. He teacheth us in and by his word, giving inward light, writing his laws in our hearts and ſetting home ſpiritual truths upon the conſcience.

Q. What are theſe ſpecial leſſons which our great Prophet teacheth ſinners by his Spirit ?

A. Such as theſe ; the great evil in ſin, the woful corruption of our natures, the dreadful wrath we deſerve, our inſufficiency to ſave ourſelves, the fulneſs of ſaving power that is in Chriſt, the excellency of the new covenant and a ſurety-righteouſneſs, the neceſſity of the Spirit's work in the ſoul, and of faith and holineſs.

Q. Is not the Spirit ſufficient to teach us theſe things without the word ?

A. No doubt he could have taught us by the Spirit alone, without the word, if he had ſo pleaſed ; but he hath inſtituted the words as the means he will make uſe of in teaching his church, Iſa. viii. 20. Rom. xv. 4.

Q. What caſe are theſe in, who have not the ſcriptures to reveal the will of God to them ?

A. They muſt be in a periſhing condition, Prov. xxix. 18.

Q. Cannot the light of reaſon, or the ſun, moon and ſtars, make known the will of God to us ?

A. No ; for tho' they may teach us ſome general things concerning God, yet they cannot ſhew us the way of ſalvation thro' Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. Who are theſe that are taught the will of God by his word and ſpirit ?

A. All true believers are ſo taught.

Q. Do not others know the will of God beſides them ?

A. Tho' natural men may have much literal knowledge and ſome common illuminations ; yet none but believers attain to the ſaving knowledge of God's will.

Q. How may we know if our knowledge of God's will be ſaving ?

A. We may conclude it is ſo, if it tend to humble us and exalt Chriſt ; if it warm our hearts, transform our ſouls, and reform our lives ; and if we ſtudy to live up to our light in all reſpects, Phil. iii. 8, 9. John xiii. 17. 2 Cor. iii. 18.

Q. What ſhall become of theſe who are ignorant of God and his will, and ſlight the means of knowledge which God hath appointed ?

A. He that made them will not have mercy on them ; but will come with flaming fire, to take vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the goſpel, Iſa. xxvii. 11. 1 Theſſ. i. 8.

Q. What ſhall ignorant perſons do for knowledge ?

A. They muſt read and hear the word, and go to Chriſt the great Prophet and Teacher of his church, and cry, ‘ Lord, open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law,’ Pſal. cxix. 18.

QUEST. XXV.

Q. How doth Chriſt execute the office of a Prieſt ?

A. Chriſt executeth the office of a Prieſt in his once offering up of himſelf a ſacrifice to ſatisfy divine juſtice, and reconcile us to God: and in making continual interceſſion for us.

Q. What are the two parts of Chriſt's Prieſtly office in the anſwer?

A. They are his offering ſacrifice, and making interceſſion for us.

Q. What do you mean by a ſacrifice?

A. In the ſcripture ſenſe, it is a living creature ſlain, and offered to God to make atonement for ſin.

Q. What is it to make atonement for ſin?

A. It is to ſatisfy God's juſtice for ſin, and pacify his wrath.

Q. What was the ſacrifice which Chriſt our Prieſt offered up to God for us?

A. It was himſelf.

Q. What mean you by himſelf? Was it his body or his ſoul, that he offered?

A. He offered up both his body and ſoul for us, according to Heb. x. 10. Iſa. liii. 10.

Q. What is meant by his offering up himſelf a ſacrifice for us?

A. His repreſenting his death and ſufferings to God for his acceptance, as an equivalent for the ſins of an elect world.

Q. How often did Chriſt offer up himſelf for us?

A. Once, and no more; tho' yet the Papiſts moſt abſurdly pretend to offer him up frequently in their unbloody ſacrifice of the maſs, and to ſet every maſs prieſt upon a level with Chriſt.

Q. Why may not Chriſt be offered oftener than once?

A. Becauſe his once offering up of himſelf did ſufficiently ſatisfy juſtice: And none elſe can offer up Chriſt but himſelf; nor can he be offered without new ſuffering, which is inconſiſtent with his exalted ſtate. See Heb. ix. 25, 26, 28.

Q. For what ends did Chriſt offer up himſelf as a ſacrifice?

A. We are told in the anſwer, that he did it, to ſatisfy divine juſtice for our ſins, and to reconcile us unto God.

Q. Could neither men nor angels offer a ſacrifice ſufficient to ſatisfy the juſtice of God for our ſins?

A. No.

Q. Why ſo?

A. Becauſe no ſatisfaction of theirs could be of infinite value.

Q. Was divine juſtice fully ſatisfied by Chriſt's ſacrifice?

A. Yes.

Q. How do that appear?

A. By the infinite dignity of the perſon that offered it; by the Father's voice from heaven, declaring he was well pleaſed in him; by Chriſt himſelf ſaying on the croſs, It is finiſhed; and by the glorious marks of reſpect God put upon him after his ſufferings in raiſing him from the dead, in receiving him up to heaven, and ſetting him down on his right-hand.

Q. But why might not God have pardoned our ſins without any ſuch ſacrifice?

A. Becauſe he behoved to ſee his juſt threatening in the covenant of works fulfilled in the puniſhing of ſin; and the glory of his juſtice diſplayed, as well as that of his mercy.

Q. What is the happy conſequent to us of Chriſt's ſatisfying divine juſtice?

A. Our reconciliation to God.

Q. What is it to be reconciled to God?

A. It is to make God and men friends, who were enemies before.

Q. How is this reconciliation brought about?

A. By Chriſt's ſhedding his blood as a price to purchaſe our peace and friendſhip with God, of which we are to ſhare upon our receiving Chriſt by faith.

Q. What are the benefits which Chriſt purchaſed by his ſacrifice for his people?

A. All needful bleſſings, whether temporal, ſpiritual, or eternal; ſo that faith, repentance, converſion, juſtification, holineſs, with all the graces of the Spirit, daily bread, communion with God, and eternal life, are all the purchaſe of Chriſt to his people.

Q. Whence had the ſacrifice of Chriſt ſo much efficacy?

A. From his divine nature, to which his ſoul and body were cloſely united; and hence his blood is called the blood of God, Acts xx. 28.

Q. How could the ſufferings of one man ſatisfy for the ſins of others?

A. By his having the ſins of theſe others laid upon him, and imputed to him.

Q. How could the ſins and crimes of men be imputed to Chriſt, an innocent perſon, who had no hand in them?

A. By Chriſt's becoming Surety for ſinners, ſubſtituting himſelf in their place, and voluntarily taking their guilt upon him.

Q. What view doth this ſacrifice give us of ſin?

A. It ſhews us the malignity and hainous nature of ſin, that no leſs could expiate or wipe it away than the blood of Chriſt's ſacrifice on the croſs.

Q. Doth Chriſt's ſacrifice ſo completely ſatisfy juſtice for ſin, as to exclude all further ſatisfaction from us?

A. Yes; and hence all Popiſh ſatisfaction for ſin, by penances, pilgrimages, prayers, alms-deeds, and purgatory, are vain and preſumptuous.

Q. Why then are good works, prayers, confeſſions, tears, afflictions and ſufferings, required of, and appointed to, believers here below?

A. Not to ſatisfy or atone for their ſins, but to glorify God, and promote their ſanctification and meetneſs for a better world.

Q. For whom did Chriſt offer up his ſacrifice?

A. For the elect, and theſe who believe on him, Iſa. liii. 11. Mat. xxvi. 28. John x. 15, 16. John xvii. 9, 19, 20. Acts xx. 28.

Q. Do we not read alſo of Chriſt's dying for all, of his reconciling the world to God, and of his being a propitiation for the ſins of the whole world? 2 Cor. v. 15, 19. 1 John ii. 2.

A. Yes, but theſe texts are to be underſtood only of the elect world; it being abſurd to ſay, that Chriſt did ſhed his blood for thoſe, for whom he would not pray; that he ſatisfied juſtice for great numbers, who were actually in hell before he ſuffered.

Q. How could Chriſt's ſacrifice ſatisfy for the Old Teſtament ſaints, who died before it was offered?

A. See the anſwer before, page 306.

Of CHRIST's Interceſſion.

Q. What is the ſecond part of Chriſt's prieſtly office?

A. His making continual interceſſion for us.

Q. Doth this office properly belong to Chriſt's prieſthood?

Q. Yes; for under the law the prieſts made interceſſion for the people, and for that end carried the blood of the ſacrifices into the moſt holy place, and ſprinkled the mercy-ſeat with it.

Q. What is the end of Chriſt's interceſſion?

A. Becauſe there are many to accuſe us, and plead againſt us; and of ourſelves we are vile and unworthy of acceſs to God.

Q. How is it that Chriſt makes interceſſion for us?

A. When he was on earth, he did it by humble prayers and ſupplications to God; but now in heaven he doth it by his glorious appearing as a public perſon in our name, and preſenting before the throne of glory his all-ſufficient merits, willing his Father to accept of his blood in behalf of the elect, that all and every one of them may in due time enjoy the benefits of his purchaſe, John xvii. 11, 17, 24. Heb. ix. 12, 24. and xii. 24.

Q. Is this the way that the blood of Chriſt is ſaid to ſpeak?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it upon the account of Chriſt's interceſſion that our duties and ſervices are now accepted of God?

A. Yes, John xiv. 13.

Q. Is not the Holy Ghoſt ſaid to make interceſſion for us, Rom. viii. 26. How is that conſiſtent with Chriſt's office?

A. It is Chriſt's office to intercede with us, by preſenting his blood and ſufferings for us: It is the Spirit's work to intercede within us, by exciting our deſires, and ſuggeſting arguments in prayer to God.

Q. Did not Chriſt finiſh his prieſtly work when he was upon the croſs?

A. Yes, with reſpect to his ſatisfaction, but not his interceſſion; the one was then perfected, the other ſtill continues.

Q. Is not his ſatisfaction the foundation of his interceſſion?

A. Yes.

Q. How long will Chriſt's interceſſion continue?

A. For ever, Pſal. cx. 4. Heb. vii. 25.

Q. Will there be any need for the interceſſion of Chriſt after the laſt day, when all the elect will be gathered home?

A. Yes, in order to preſerve them for ever in the poſſeſſion of that happineſs to which they are come.

Q. Doth Chriſt intercede only for actual believers?

A. No; he interceeds for all the elect, both theſe who have believed, and theſe who are yet to believe, John xvii. 20.

Q. What are the reſpective bleſſings which he pleads for to them?

A. To the uncoverted, he pleads for converting grace, faith, repentance, &c. To them who believe, for more grace and holineſs, for renewed pardons, preſervation from the evil of the world, perſeverance in grace, unity among themſelves, and accompliſhment of all the promiſes, and good things purchaſed to them, both here and hereafter.

Q. When Chriſt pleads for his people that they may be kept from the evil in the world, John xvii. doth he mean to keep them from all afflictions?

A. No.

Q. Are not ſanctified afflictions a part of Chriſt's purchaſe to them?

A. Yes; and in reſpect, they are not evil to them, but good.

Q. What evil is it then that Chriſt ſpeaks of?

A. The evil of ſin, and the evil of wrath.

Q. Is Chriſt's interceſſion ſtill prevalent and ſucceſsful?

A. Yes; for him the Father heareth always, John xi. 42.

Q. What are the grounds of Chriſt's prevalency?

A. The dignity of his perſon and of his ſacrifice, and becauſe he pleads for nothing but what is agreeable to the divine will, and for thoſe whom the Father loves as well as he.

Q. Doth not Chriſt infinitely excel all other advocates in the world?

A. Yes; for there is none ſo ſkilful, ſo prevalent, ſo diligent, ſo cheap, or ſo ready as he is.

Q. May we employ any other mediator or advocate beſide Chriſt?

A. No; for the ſcripture tells us, 'There is but one Mediator between God and men, the Man Chriſt Jeſus,' 1 Tim. ii. 5. Chriſt is the ſole Mediator of interceſſion, as well as of redemption.

Q. Why cannot ſaints or angels be our mediators with God?

A. Becauſe they have no merit to plead upon, neither do they know us, nor our caſes and wants, Iſa. lxiii. 16.

Q. Wherein doth the prieſthood of Chriſt excel that of the Levitical prieſts?

A. All theſe were but types and ſhadows of Chriſt, he is the ſubſtance: Theſe offered many ſacrifices, and the blood of beaſts, which could not ſatisfy juſtice for ſin: but Chriſt offered only one ſacrifice, even his own blood, which gave full ſatisfaction: In the Levitical prieſthood, there was ſtill a difference between the prieſt, the ſacrifice, and the altar; but Chriſt is all the three in one.

Q. How is it that Chriſt is all three, the prieſt, the ſacrifice and the altar?

A. Chriſt in his own perſon was the prieſt which made the offering that atoned for ſin; his human nature was the ſacrifice, and his divine nature was the altar.

Q. Was not the croſs the altar on which the ſacrifice was offered?

A. The croſs may be called ſo improperly, or in a large ſenſe, as being the material part to which the ſacrifice was affixed: but it was by no means the altar which ſanctified the gift, and made it acceptable for the great ends it was offered for: this only was Chriſt's Godhead.

Q. How is Chriſt ſaid to be a prieſt after the order of Melchiſedec, rather than after the order of Aaron?

A. Becauſe, tho' both of them typified Chriſt, yet Melchiſedec was a more exact and lively type and repreſentation of Chriſt as a prieſt than Aaron was; ſeeing he is ſet forth as ſuperior to Abraham, and was a King as well as a Prieſt, having neither predeceſſors nor ſucceſſors in his office, and his genealogy and deſcent wholly concealed; thereby prefiguring Chriſt's eternal generation and duration.

Q. What ſhall we do to ſecure an intereſt in the ſacrifice and interceſſion of this glorious High Prieſt?

A. 1. Let us ſeek to be duly affected with our miſery while without it, as being every moment expoſed to the ſtroke of unſatisfied juſtice. 2. Let us be perſwaded that no ſacrifice will ſatisfy, no blood will protect, but that which Chriſt hath offered. 3. Let us renounce all confidence in our own righteouſneſs and duties. 4. We muſt heartily approve of the glorious device of ſaving penitents by the merits and interceſſion of our High Prieſt. 5. We muſt receive this bleeding High Prieſt into faith's arms, as one freely offered to us, and entirely truſt him with our ſalvation. 6. Accept of him as a Prieſt upon his throne, and give up ourſelves unto his government.

QUEST. XXVI.

Q. How doth Chriſt execute the office of a King?

A. Chriſt executeth the office of a King in ſubduing us to himſelf, in ruling and defending us, and in reſtraining and conquering all his and our enemies.

Q. What ſort of a kingdom is it which Chriſt hath?

A. Beſides his eſſential kingdom, which he hath as God equal with the Father over all the world; he hath alſo a Mediatorial kingdom, given him as Immanuel, in which he acts as the Father's viceroy, Pſal. ii. 6. Acts ii. 36.

Q. What is Chriſt's Mediatorial kingdom?

A. It is the great dominion and power which is given to him as a Mediator; and this is twofold, 1. Chriſt's ſpiritual kingdom in and over the church. 2. His providential kingdom over all things for the good of the church.

Q. What do you mean by Chriſt's ſpiritual kingdom?

A. Both his kingdom of grace, and his kingdom of glory; or, in other words, the church militant on earth and the church triumphant in heaven; which are not two different kingdoms, but two provinces of one and the ſame kingdom; they both being but one body united together under one head, in and over which Chriſt doth reign and rule both in a gracious and glorious manner.

Q. What do ye mean by Chriſt's providential kingdom?

A. The adminiſtration of the kingdom of providence, or the power which is given to Chriſt over all things, whether in heaven, earth, or hell, to be managed for the good of the church; by which he is made the King of kings, and King of nations, as well as the King of ſaints, Mat. xxviii. 18. Eph. i. 22. Prov. viii. 15. 16. Rev. xv 3. 4. and xix. 15. 16.

Q. Over whom doth Chriſt exerciſe his kingly power?

A. Both over his own people, and over his enemies.

Q. Doth he govern them both alike?

A. No; for he puts forth and executes different acts of his power concerning them.

Q. What are theſe different acts?

A. With reſpect to his people, he ſubdues them to himſelf, he rules them, and defends them: With reſpect to his enemies, he reſtrains them, and conquers them.

Q. In what eſtate doth the King of Zion find his own people and ſubjects at firſt?

A. In a ſtate of enmity and rebellion to him.

Q. Do they ſubmit to him of their own accord?

A. No; he muſt ſubdue them to himſelf.

Q. What is that to ſubdue them?

A. It is to conquer their wills, and to make them, who were children of diſobedience, willing and obedient in the day of his power.

Q. How ſhall we know if a day of Chriſt's power hath paſſed upon us, to make us his willing people?

A. It is a good ſign, if our love to ſin be changed into a hatred of it, and if we ſincerely deſire to do the things that pleaſe God, and that not only in duties which are outward and public, but in theſe which are inward and ſecret.

Q. Doth Chriſt leave his church and people to their own care and conduct, after he hath ſubdued them?

A. No; but like a good king, brings them under a good government, and continues to rule them in a gracious manner.

Q. How is it that Chriſt doth rule his ſubjects?

A. 1. He rules them outwardly, by giving them good laws with promiſes and threatenings annexed thereto, and appointing church-officers and diſcipline for applying the ſame. 2. He rules them inwardly by his Spirit, writing his laws in their hearts, and diſpoſing them to yield obedience to what he requires them: thus he ſets up his throne in the hearts of his ſubjects, and makes all the faculties of their ſouls to ſubmit unto him.

Q. What further doth Zion's King for his ſubjects beſides ruling them?

A. He defends them alſo.

Q. From what doth he defend them?

A. From whatever may hurt their ſouls; and, ſo far as it is for his glory, he defends their bodies from enemies alſo.

Q. How doth Chriſt defend his people?

A. He ſets a hedge about them, he hides them under his wings, he intercedes for them; he gives ſtrength to his people, he upholds them in the ſtate of grace; and reſtrains and conquers their enemies.

Q. Have Chriſt and his ſubjects always the ſame enemies?

A. Yes.

Q. How comes that?

A. Becauſe of the near relation between them; he being the head, and they the members: So, whatever injures the one, the other feels it.

Q. Who are the enemies of Chriſt and his people?

A. Sin, ſatan, wicked men, and death, which is called the laſt enemy.

Q. How doth Chriſt reſtrain his and his peoples enemies?

A. By ſetting bounds to their rage, diſappointing or over-ruling their evil deſigns, and making their wrath to praiſe him, Rev. ii. 10 Pſal. lxxvi. 10.

Q. Will Chriſt ſuffer theſe enemies to prevail at laſt?

A. No; for he will at length conquer them all.

Q. When doth he conquer them?

A. He did it partly at his death and aſcenſion, when he triumphed over them, and led captivity captive; for then he diveſted them of that legal power they held over the elect, as executioners of divine juſtice. He ruins many of them by particular judgments within time; and he will bring final deſtruction upon them all at his ſecond coming.

Q. Is there not a great difference betwixt Chriſt's ſubduing of his people, and his conquering of his enemies?

A. Yes; for he makes the one ſweetly bow to his golden ſceptre, the other he breaks with his rod of iron.

Q. Are not devils and wicked men ſubject to Chriſt, as well as his people?

A. Yes; but the one are ſubject by conſtraint and againſt their will, and the other are ſubject by free choice and conſent.

Q. Have we not many things to engage us to become Chriſt's willing ſubjects?

A. Yes; for he it is that hath beſt right to us, and there is none ſo good a maſter; his yoke is eaſy, and his rewards are glorious.

Q. Can any truſt to Chriſt as their Prieſt, who do not ſubmit to him as their King?

A. No; for they who will not be governed by his laws cannot expect to be ſaved by his blood.

Q. Will not Chriſt look on them as his enemies, who refuſe to ſubmit to his government?

A. Yes.

Q. What will the King ſay to them at laſt?

A. Thoſe mine enemies, which would not that I ſhould reign over them, bring hither, and ſlay them before me, Luke xix. 27.

QUEST. XXVII.

Q. Wherein did Chriſt's humiliation conſiſt?

A. Chriſt's humiliation conſiſted in his being born, and that in a low condition, made under the law, undergoing the miſeries of this life, the wrath of God, and the curſed death of the croſs; in being buried, and continuing under the power of death for a time.

Q. What do you mean by Chriſt's humiliation?

A. His coming from a high condition to a low one.

Q. What was the neceſſity of his doing ſo?

A. That he, as our Surety and Cautioner, might ſuffer the puniſhment due unto us.

Q. What are the ſeveral ſteps of Chriſt's humiliation mentioned in the anſwer?

A. They are chiefly three, namely, with reſpect to, 1. His birth. 2. His life. 3. His death.

Q. How did Chriſt humble himſelf in his birth?

A. 1. In that ſuch a glorious Perſon ſhould be willing to reſide in fleſh, and be born of a woman. 2. In his being born in ſuch a low condition as he ſubmitted to.

Q. Was it not a low ſtep of humiliation in Chriſt to be incarnate, or to become man?

A. Yes; this was a much lower ſtep for the eternal Son of God, than for the ſun in the heavens to become a clod of duſt, or an angel a worm.

Q. What was the low condition that Chriſt ſubmitted to be born in?

A. He was born of a mean woman, in a mean city, and that in the ſtable of an inn, having the beaſts manger for his cradle.

Q. How did Chriſt humble himſelf in this life?

Q. There are three things relative thereto, mentioned in the anſwer; 1. His being made under the law. 2. His undergoing the miſeries of this life; and, 3. Suffering the wrath of God.

Q. What is meant by Chriſt's being made under the law? Gal. iv. 4.

A. That, according to his engagement as our Surety he ſubjected himſelf to the law both cermonial and moral, and did exactly fulfil and obey the ſame.

Q. How did Chriſt ſubject himſelf to the ceremonial law?

A. In ſubmitting to circumciſion, making the offerings, and attending the ordinances therein required; and, in order to fulfil it at once, he offered himſelf a ſacrifice upon the croſs.

Q. How did Chriſt ſubject himſelf to the moral law?

A. He did it as our Surety, fulfilling the preceptive part of it by the perfect obedience of his holy life, and ſatisfying the minatory part, by bearing the curſe and penalties of the law, which we incurred for breaking it.

Q. Was it not a piece of amazing humiliation for the eternal lawgiver to be thus ſubjected to his own law? A. Yes.

Q. What is meant by the miſeries of this life which Chriſt did undergo for us?

A. Theſe are manifold, and do include, 1. The common ſinleſs infirmities of the human nature which Chriſt took upon him; as hunger, thirſt, wearineſs, pain, ſleeping, weeping, and the like. 2. The aſſaults and temptations of the devil which he endured. 3. Outward poverty and want. 4. The contradictions, reproaches and perſecutions of a wicked world.

Q. Why did he take all theſe miſeries upon him?

A. That he might bear what we deſerved, and be the more ſypathizing with us in our troubles.

Q. Why became he ſo poor, that was Lord of all?

A. That through his poverty we might be made rich, and to teach us contentment in a low condition.

Q. Did Chriſt undergo no more trouble in this world than what he endured from devils and wicked men?

A. Yes, he underwent the wrath of God alſo; as in the anſwer.

Q. What is to be meant by that?

A. That Chriſt became the butt of God's wrath and anger for our ſins, and felt the direful effects of it in his ſoul as well as his body.

Q. Was God really angry with Chriſt, who was perfectly innocent and his dearly beloved Son?

A. Chriſt in himſelf conſidered was always the Father's delight; but as he became our Surety, and took on him our ſins the object of God's indignation, and which had a burden of wrath neceſſarily annexed thereto, he behoved to feel the ſenſe and preſſure of that inſupportable load in a very extraordinary manner.

Q. How did his feeling of it appear?

A. By expreſſing his ſoul-trouble and nonpluſſing ſtrait at the diſtant proſpect of it; by the ſhrinking of his human nature at taſting of the bitter cup, and praying it might paſs from him if poſſible; by his wreſtling in an agony, and ſweating great drops of blood that fell to the ground about him; by his crying out of his ſoul its being exceeding ſorrowful even unto death, and complaining of God's forſaking of him, John xii. 27. Mat. xxvi. 38, 39 Luke xxii. 44. Mat. xxvii. 46.

Q. Is it not upon this account alſo, that Chriſt is ſaid to be made a curſe for us, and a man of ſorrows?

A. Yes.

Q. Could any mere creature have borne the load of the Almighty's wrath?

A. No; and Chriſt's human nature could not have borne it, had it not been united to, and ſupported by his Godhead.

Q. Was it not poſſible this bitter cup could paſs from our Surety Chriſt?

A. No; for the juſtice of God could not be otherwiſe ſatisfied.

Q. Was not Chriſt heard in that prayer he made concerning it?

A. Yes; for we are told, 'He was heard in that he feared,' Heb. v. 7.

Q. How was he heard, when the cup did not paſs from him?

A. In the extraordinary ſupplies granted to his human nature for enabling him to drink it.

Q. Was it neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould ſuffer death after all other ſufferings?

A. Yes; that he might fully anſwer the threatening of the firſt covenant, ſatisfy juſtice, and confirm the truth by his reſurrection.

Q. Was our Lord greatly humbled in his death?

A. Yes.

Q. In what reſpects?

A. In reſpect of the previous circumſtances of his death, the kind and manner of it, and the things following upon it.

Q. How was he humbled in the previous circumſtances of his death?

A. 1. In being betrayed by his own diſciple Judas. 2. In being ſold for a ſmall price. 3. In being taken and bound like a thief. 4. In being forſaken by all his diſciples. 5. In being denied by Peter in his own hearing. 6. In being accuſed by the Jews of crimes he was wholly innocent of. 7. In being buffeted, ſpit on, cruelly mocked, arrayed and crowned with thorns, by the ſoldiers and Herod. 8. In being ſcourged and condemned by Pilate as a notorious criminal. 9. In being put to carry his own croſs to the place of execution.

Q. How was Chriſt humbled in the kind and manner of his death?

A. In being crucified, or put to ſuffer the death of the croſs, which was a curſed, painful, lingring, and ſhameful death.

Q. What manner of death was the death of the croſs?

A. A death uſed among the Romans for the greateſt of malefactors, in which the man was ſo racked that they might tell his bones, his feet being nailed to the lower part of a tree, and his hands to a croſs tree above where he hang alive for ſeveral hours; the wounds ſtill widening by his own weight, and the blood guſhing out, till he died in extreme pain.

Q. Why is it called a curſed death?

A. Becauſe God had ſaid, Deut. xxi. 'Curſed is every one that hangeth on a tree:' That is, he is expoſed to the higheſt diſgrace and reproach that can be done to a man, which proclaims him as much under the curſe of God as any external puniſhment can do it.

Q. Why is it called a ſhameful death?

A. Becauſe the perſon ſuffering it was expoſed naked, and accounted one of the vileſt criminals; and our bleſſed Lord was placed between two of them, as if he had been the greateſt of the three.

Q. What love was this, that made him to endure the croſs, and deſpiſe the ſhame?

A. Love that cannot be comprehended, for it paſſeth knowledge, Eph. iii. 18, 19.

Q. What was the moſt afflicting and humbling ingredient of all in Chriſt's death?

A. His being deſerted and forſaken of God at the time of it; as appears by that amazing outcry on the croſs, Eli, Eli, lama ſabachthani.

Q. Why was Chriſt thus forſaken?

A. To teſtify God's diſpleaſure againſt ſin, and to bear the puniſhment of deſertion which was due to us for ever.

Q. In that dark hour of Chriſt's death, did nothing fall out to give teſtimony to Chriſt?

A. Yes; the ſun was eclipſed, the earth quaked, the rocks rent together with the vail of the temple, and many graves were opened; ſo that the centurion with his guard, that attended Chriſt, were forced to own, that truly he was the Son of God, Mat. xxvii. 51, 52, 53, 54.

Q. Doth not the death of Chriſt afford the ſtrongeſt arguments to cauſe us hate and forſake ſin?

A. Yes; for in it we ſee the infinite mercy of God towards us in providing ſuch a Surety for us; we ſee God's indignation againſt ſin as the moſt curſed evil in the world, and the dreadful ſtorm of wrath which he will bring upon the workers of iniquity.

Q. What humbling things followed upon Chriſt's death?

A. There are two things mentioned in the anſwer; 1. He was buried. 2. He continued under the power of death for a time.

A. Was it a piece of great humiliation for Chriſt to be laid in the grave?

A. Yes certainly; for it is humbling to any man to be ſent there, where he muſt call the worms his brethren and ſiſters: But much more was it ſo for him, who hath the keys of hell and death, to be himſelf locked up in the grave.

Q. Was not Chriſt's burying attended with ſeveral humbling circumſtances?

A. Yes.

Q. What are they?

A. It was done in great haſte, with few attending it 2. Theſe few were not his relations, but ſtrangers. 3. His body was not carried from his own houſe, nor from any houſe, but from the ignominious croſs. 4 It was not laid in his own, but in another man's ſepulchre.

Q. What is meant by Chriſt's continuing under the power of death?

A. His remaining in the ſtate of the dead, and being death's priſoner for a time.

Q. What gives death a power over any man?

A. Sin.

Q. How could death have any power over Chriſt, who had no ſin?

A. Tho' he had no ſin of his own, yet he was made ſin for us; and ſo death ſeized him as his priſoner in our ſtead.

Q. How then ſhould death have any more power over believers?

A. Death cannot ſeize them as priſoners for puniſhment, but is only continued as a mean to purge away the remainders of ſin perfectly from them.

Q. Was it not a great humiliation for him, who is the Lord of life, to be laid under the power of death for a time?

A. Yes.

Q. How long was the time he was in this ſtate?

A. To the third day after his death.

Q. What type have we in the ſcripture of his continuing ſo long in the grave?

A. Jonah, his being three days in the whale's belly, Mat. xii. 40.

Q. Why did Chriſt continue ſo long?

A. To ſhew that he was really dead.

Q. Why could not death hold him under its power any longer?

A. Becauſe he had given full ſatisfaction to divine juſtice for his peoples ſins, and could not ſee any corruption in the grave.

Q. Why could he not ſee corruption there?

A. Becauſe he was the holy One of God, and free of all ſin.

Q. Whither did Chriſt's ſoul go after his death?

A. We read in the goſpels, that he reſigned it into his Father's hands, and that it went to paradiſe, the ſeat of the bleſſed.

Q. Do we not read in the Creed, that he deſcended into hell?

A. Yes; but the meaning is not that he deſcended locally into hell, the place of the damned; but, the ſame word in the original ſignifying both hell and the grave, it muſt be underſtood either of his body's lying in the grave, or of his ſuffering the pains of hell in his ſoul.

QUEST. XXVII.

Q. Wherein conſiſteth Chriſt's exaltation?

A. Chriſt's exaltation conſiſteth in his riſing again from the dead on the third day, in aſcending up into heaven, ſitting at the right-hand of God the Father, and in coming to judge the world at the laſt day.

Q. What may we learn from Chriſt exaltation its following his humiliation?

A. That we ſhould patiently bear an afflicted ſtate here, in hope of the glory that is to follow.

Q. In reſpect of what nature was Chriſt exalted?

A. Seeing Chriſt as to his divine nature cannot be exalted, really but declaratively only; it behoved to be with reſpect to his human nature that he was really and properly exalted.

Q. What are the ſteps or degrees of Chriſt's exaltation mentioned in the anſwer?

A. They are four; 1. His reſurrection. 2. Aſcenſion. 3. Sitting at God's right hand. 4. Judging the world.

Q. When did Chriſt riſe from the dead? -

A. On the third day.

Q. What day of the week did that day fall upon?

A. The firſt day of the week, which, ever ſince, is called, The Lord's day.

Q. By whoſe power did Chriſt riſe?

A. By his own power, and by the power of his Father, John ii. 19. Rom. vi. 4.

Q. In what manner did he riſe?

A. In a triumphant manner, with a great earthquake, the angels attending, and the keepers trembling for fear, and becoming as dead men, Mat. xxviii. 2, 3, 4.

Q. How do we know the truth of Chriſt's reſurrection?

A. By the teſtimony of the apoſtles, who ſaw him very often after it, and heard his excellent inſtructions about their future conduct, and, for their greater ſatiſfaction, were allowed to handle his body, and to eat and drink with him in a familiar manner.

Q. Did none ſee him after his reſurrection beſides the apoſtles?

A. Yes, many others, both men and women; and the apoſtle Paul writing to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. xv. 6. ſays, He was ſeen of above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the moſt part were then alive.

Q. But how can we be ſure that the apoſtles teſtimony was true?

A. Becauſe they were men of great ſincerity, and could propoſe no worldly advantage by declaring their maſter's reſurrection, but the greateſt perſecution from the Jews. And, if it had not been certain, they had not choſen Jeruſalem as the firſt place of publiſhing it, and that within a few days after he was crucified there; and yet there they began, and many thouſands embraced their doctrine. Nay, God from heaven confirmed their teſtimony, by enduing them with the gift of tongues, and a power of working all kinds of miracles.

Q. What was the neceſſity of Chriſt's riſing again?

A. To declare that he was the Son of God, and that juſtice was fully ſatisfied for our ſins, and to aſſure all believers of their reſurrection from the dead alſo.

Q. Did Chriſt riſe with the very ſame body that was crucified? A. Yes.

Q. How doth that appear?

A. By the print of the nails, and ſpears in his hands, feet, and ſide, which he ſhewed to his diſciples after he roſe.

Q. Did never any riſe from the dead but Chriſt?

A Yes, ſuch as Lazarus, Jairus's ſon, and ſeveral others.

Q. What is the difference betwixt their reſurrection, and Chriſt's?

A. They roſe but as private perſons, by the power of God: but Chriſt roſe by his own power, and that as a public perſon, the great head and repreſentative of the church, for their juſtification, and to aſſure them of the truth of all his promiſes.

Q. How long did Chriſt ſtay with his diſciples after his reſurrection? A. Forty days.

Q. For what end?

A. That he might convince them he was truly riſen, and alſo inſtruct them of the nature of his kingdom and church, and give them directions about the government thereof.

Of CHRIST's Aſcenſion.

Q. What is the ſecond ſtep of Chriſt's exaltation?

A. His aſcending up into heaven.

Q From what place did he aſcend?

A. From the mount of Olives.

Q. In what manner?

A. Viſibly and triumphantly with a cloud receiving him and angels attending; leading captivity captive, and diſpenſing gifts, Acts i 9, 10. Pſal. lxviii. 17, 18.

Q. How was he employed at parting from his diſciples ?

A. He was bleſſing them with uplifted hands, Luke xxiv. 50, 51.

Q. For what end did Chriſt aſcend into heaven ?

A. That he might take poſſeſſion of the kingdom, both in his own name, and in the name of all his people; and as a forerunner he might prepare manſions for them, and as an advocate he might plead their cauſe effectually.

Q. Where is Chriſt now bodily preſent ?

A. In heaven.

Q. How long will he continue there ?

A. Until his ſecond coming.

Q. Are we not to look for his bodily preſence on earth till that time ?

A. No; for him the heavens muſt receive, until the reſtitution of all things, Acts iii. 21.

Q. Is not this a good argument againſt tranſubſtantiation, or Chriſt's bodily preſence in the ſacrament ?

A. Yes.

Q. Doth not Chriſt promiſe his preſence to his people upon earth ?

A. Yes; but that is meant of his ſpiritual, not his bodily preſence.

Q. What do you mean by Chriſt's ſpiritual preſence ?

A. His coming to his people by the influences of his Spirit, for quickening and comforting their ſouls.

Q. Did never any aſcend bodily to heaven but Chriſt ?

A. Yes, Enoch and Elijah did alſo.

Q. What was the difference between their aſcenſion and Chriſt's ?

A. They were taken up, but Chriſt went by his own power; they as private perſons without witneſſes, but Chriſt as a public perſon before many witneſſes.

Q. What are the great leſſons which Chriſt's aſcenſion ſhould teach us ?

A. To be heavenly minded, to ſet our affections upon things above where Chriſt is, and to deſire to be with him, Col. iii. 1. Phil. i. 23.

Q. What comfort may believers draw from Chriſt's aſcenſion ?

A. They may conclude that manſions will be ready, and that they will follow their head: They may promiſe themſelves welcome, and kind uſage, ſeeing he who hath got all power in heaven, is nearly related to them, and hath all the compaſſions of both God and man in him.

Of CHRIST's Sitting at God's Right-hand.

Q. What is the third ſtep of Chriſt's exaltation ?

A. His ſitting at the right hand of God the Father, Eph. i. 20. 1 Pet. iii. 22.

Q. Hath God a right or left hand as we have ?

A. No, for God is a ſpirit that hath no bodily parts: Only his right hand is ſpoken of, in condeſcenſion to our weak capacities.

Q. What is meant by Chriſt's ſitting at God's right-hand ?

A. That he is advanced to the higheſt place of honour, power and dignity in heaven, having all things ſubjected to him, 1 Pet. iii. 22.

Q. How long will Chriſt ſit at the Father's right-hand ?

A. Until he make all his enemies his footſtool, Pſal. cx. 1.

Q. What is the laſt enemy which he hath to deſtroy ?

A. Death

Q. When will that enemy be finally deſtroyed ?

A. At the general reſurrection, then it is that mortality ſhall be ſwallowed up of life, 2 Cor. v. 4.

Q How is it that we read of Chriſt ſometimes, as ſitting, and at other times as ſtanding at God's right-hand ? Acts vii. 56.

A. His ſitting is mentioned, to denote his perpetual poſſeſſion of the kingdom; his ſtanding, to repreſent his readineſs for the mediatory work, and particularly to help, plead for, and receive afflicted and dying ſaints, ſuch as Stephen was, who ſaw him in that poſture, Acts vii. 56.

Q. What may we learn from Chriſt's ſitting at the right hand of God ?

A. That it muſt go well with the church, ſeeing her Friend and Agent is ſo high in favour, and ruleth over all things; and that all the members of the body muſt be exalted, ſeeing the head is raiſed ſo high.

Of CHRIST's Judging the World.

Q. What is the fourth ſtep of Chriſt's exaltation ?

A. His coming to judge the world at the laſt day.

Q. Is not this called Chriſt's ſecond coming:

A. Yes, Heb. ix 28.

Q. Why is it called ſo ?

A. Becauſe we read of two famous comings of Chriſt to the world, and this is one of them.

Q. What is the other ?

A. His coming in the fleſh.

Q. Is not the difference between theſe two comings of Chriſt very great ?

A. Yes; for the firſt was in a ſtate of deep humiliation, but the ſecond is in a ſtate of glorious exaltation.

Q. Do we read of any other comings of Chriſt in ſcripture ?

A. Yes; we read of his coming by his Spirit in his ordinances; and of his coming in the diſpenſations of his providence, to deſtroy Antichriſt, and deliver his church from his enemies, John xiv. 18. 2 Theſſ. ii. 8.

Q. For what end will Chriſt come the ſecond time ?

A. To judge the world.

Q. What is underſtood by the world ?

A. All mankind, quick and dead, ſmall and great, righteous and wicked; and likewiſe the fallen angels.

Q. What is meant by Chriſt's judging of the quick and the dead, 2 Tim. iv. 1. and other places ?

A. That Chriſt at the end of the world ſhall deſcend from heaven, to judge all that will be then living on the earth, and all the dead then in their graves.

Q. How is it evident that there will be ſuch a judgment day ?

A. 1. Conſcience in every man declares for it, by creating remorſe and fears upon the doing of evil; and, on the other hand, ſatisfaction and hope upon the doing of good. 2. The juſtice of God requires it, that the wicked may be duly puniſhed, and the Godly rewarded: which is not done in this life. 3 The holy ſcriptures do often aſſure us of it, that we muſt all appear before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt, John v. 28, 29. Acts xvii. 31. 2 Cor. v. 10. 1 Theſſ. iv. 16, 17.

Q. Who is to be the judge in that day ?

A. Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. Is not God the judge of all? Heb. xii. 23.

A. Yes, and Chriſt is that God equally with the Father and Holy Ghoſt: But God hath ordained the Man Chriſt to be the viſible Judge of the world, Acts xvii. 31.

Q. Why is Chriſt ordained for that end?

A. That he might be rewarded for his obedience and ſufferings, and every eye might ſee the judge; and that man being thus judged by his peers, the equity of God's proceedings might the more appear.

Q. When will Chriſt come to judge the world?

A. At the laſt day.

Q. Why is it called the laſt day?

A. Becauſe it will be the concluding period of the world, when God will put an end to its days by the diſſolution of all things; for then 'the heavens ſhall paſs away with a great noiſe, and the elements ſhall melt with fervent heat, the earth alſo and the works therein ſhall be burnt up,' 2 Pet. iii. 10.

Q. Doth any man know the particular time of Chriſt's coming?

A. No, tho' yet we may diſcern its approach to be near by ſigns and forerunners. The Apoſtles declare the goſpel-times which we enjoy to be the laſt times, and that the ends of the world are come upon us, 1 Pet. 1. 20. 1 John ii. 18. 1 Cor. x. 11.

Q. Are there not ſtill ſome great events to be expected in the world before the laſt day come?

A. Yes, ſuch as the converſion of the Jews, the downfall of Antichriſt and Mahomet, and the great enlargemnt and purity of the church.

Q. Why hath God kept the particular time hid from us?

A. To prevent carnal ſecurity, and to keep us preparing and watching for it every day; ſtill ready to ſay, 'Even ſo, come, Lord Jeſus, make haſte, O my Beloved.'

Q. What will be the manner of Chriſt's coming at the laſt day?

A. 1. It will be ſurpzing and unexpected; and therefore it is compared to the coming of a thief in the night. 2. It will be with power and great glory: For the heaven ſhall rend, and fire iſſue before him; and he, attended with a multitude of glorious angels and ſaints, ſhall deſcend with a great ſhout, with the voice of the arch-angel and the trumpet of God which will raiſe the dead: And thus ſhall he aſcend the great white throne, and have all the world gathered before him, 2 Theſſ. v. 2. Mat. xxv. 31. Pſal. l. 3. Jude 14. 2 Theſſ. i. 7, 8. 1 Theſſ. iv. 6. Rev. xx. 11.

Q. Why do the ſcriptures inſiſt ſo much upon Chriſt's coming to judgment?

A. To aſſure the world of it, to excite us to duty, to deter men from ſinning, and to comfort the godly under diſtreſs, 2 Pet. iii. 10, 11, 14. 2 Theſſ. i. 6, 7.

Q. What is the great neceſſity of a day of judgment?

A. To make a ſolemn manifeſtation of the glory of God's attributes and perfections; as of his omniſcience, in diſcovering the ſecrets of mens hearts and lives; of his mercy, in ſaving the elect; and of his juſtice, in puniſhing the wicked.

Q. In what manner will Chriſt judge the world?

A. He will judge the world in righteouſneſs, and render to every one according to what he hath done in the body whether it be good or evil, Acts xvii. 31. 2 Cor. v. 10.

Q. Muſt all men come into judgment at that day good and bad, Chriſtians and Heathens?

A. Yes.

Q. May not ſome be overlooked and concealed in that great crowd?

A. No; for God's all-ſeeing eye will find them all out.

Q. Upon which of the Judge's hands will the good and bad be placed in that day?

A. The godly will be ſet upon the right-hand, and the ungodly upon the left.

Q. What will be the difference betwixt the judgment of the godly and of the ungodly?

A. The one ſhall come into a judgment of abſolution, the other into a judgment of condemnation: The ſentence of the one will be, Come unto me, ye bleſſed; but the ſentence of the other will be, Depart from me, ye curſed. And likewiſe, the judgment of believers will go before that of the wicked.

Q. How do you know that?

A. By the ſcriptures, which tell us that the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt, and be immediately caught up to meet the Lord in the air; and that they ſhall be ſet on thrones, and become aſſeſſors to Chriſt in judging the world, 1 Theſſ. iv. 16, 17. Mat. xix. 28. 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3.

Q. Seeing believers are guilty of many ſinful thoughts and actions, as well as the wicked, how is it that they are not condemned with them?

A. Becauſe all their ſins are laid upon Jeſus Chriſt, and he hath anſwered for them to the juſtice of God.

Q. Who are theſe ſinners that ſhall be moſt miſerable in the day of judgment?

A. Wicked Chriſtians, and eſpecially theſe who have had the cleareſt diſpenſations of goſpel-light, and greater meaſures of knowledge of God's will than others, and yet have abuſed them, and ſinned againſt them, Mat. xi. 23, 24. Luke xii. 47.

Q. Will God judge heathens, who never had his law or goſpel revealed unto them?

A. Yes, he will judge them by the law of nature, and the dictates of their own conſciences, Rom. ii. 12, 14, 15.

Q. Will not the wicked have many accuſers and witneſſes to appear againſt them in that day?

A. Yes; ſuch as the attributes of God, his mercy, patience, omniſcience, bounty; and the creatures of God which they have abuſed: The blood of Chriſt which they have trampled, conſcience which they have ſtifled, and the devil and companions in ſins which have tempted them, will then accuſe them, and witneſs againſt them.

Q. Do we not read of books that will be opened in that day, Rev. xx. what are thoſe?

A. This is ſpoke with alluſion to the courts here below which have books for the rule of judgment. Accordingly in that day will be opened the book of God's remembrance or omniſcience, wherein all the actions of men will be found written. 2. The book of conſcience, which will bring convincing evidences of ſinners guilt. 3. The book of the law, with all its precepts, threatenings and curſes, which they have deſpiſed. 4. The book of the goſpel, with all its calls, offers and promiſes, which they have ſlighted. All which will afford terrible matter of indictment againſt the wicked.

Q. What are the things which will be brought into judgment at that day?

A. All the thoughts and deſigns, as well as the words and actions of men.

Q. Muſt we give an account in that day of every idle word?

A. Yes. Mat. xii. 36.

Q. Should not this teach us to take good heed to all our words, thoughts and deſigns now? A. Yes.

Q. Will not the conſequences of this judgment be very awful? A. Yes.

Q. In what reſpects?

A. In regard the wicked ſhall thereupon go into everlaſting puniſhment, and the righteous into life eternal, Mat. xxv. 46.

Q. How will the Judge's ſentence be executed againſt the wicked?

A. The devils, the executioners of God's juſtice, will be waiting on, and ready, upon the paſſing of the ſentence, to hale away the wicked to the place of torment.

Q. Will angels be judged at that day?

A. Yes, evil angels.

Q. How is it ſaid, that the ſaints ſhall judge angels? 1 Cor. vi. 3.

A. In regard they ſhall approve of the ſentence which Chriſt ſhall paſs upon them and upon all his enemies.

Q. What ought we to learn from Chriſt's coming to judgment?

A. We ſhould endeavour always to be ready for it, and to love his appearing; we ſhould be diligent to be found of him in peace, and to aim at all holy converſation and godlineſs; and we ſhould ſuſpend all raſh judgments till that time, Luke xii. 40. 2 Tim. iv. 8. Tit. ii. 11, 13. 2 Pet. iii. 11, 14. 1 Cor. iv. 5.

QUEST. XXIX.

Q. How are we made partakers of the redemption purchaſed by Chriſt?

A. We are made partakers of the redemption purchaſed by Chriſt, by the effectual application of it to us by his holy Spirit.

Q. What is the proper office and agency of the holy Ghoſt in the work of man's redemption?

A. To apply it to elect ſouls.

Q. Hath not each perſon in the glorious Trinity an eminent hand in the work of our redemption?

A. Yes; the Father projected it, the Son purchaſed it, and the Holy Ghoſt applies it.

Q. What is meant by the work of our redemption?

A. The delivering of loſt ſinners from ſin, ſatan, and the wrath of God.

Q. What is meant by the purchaſing of our redemption?

A. The buying or obtaining it at a valuable price.

Q. Who was it that purchaſed our redemption?

A. Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God.

Q. At what price did he purchaſe it?

A. At the price of his own precious blood.

Q. What is meant by our being partakers of this purchaſed redemption?

A. Our being made ſharers of the benefits and advantages of it.

Q. What are theſe benefits?

A. Such as pardon of ſin, protection from wrath, peace with God, peace of conſcience, a change of nature, ſanctifying grace, the unſtinging of death, reſurrection to life and eternal glory.

Q. What is meant by the applying of this redemption to us?

A. The making of it ours, by producing the firſt beginnings of it in the ſoul, and thereby bringing us gradually into the full poſſeſſion of its benefits. We begin the poſſeſſion of them in our juſtification, and ſanctification here, and we complete it in our glorification hereafter.

Q. Is it only the Holy Spirit that can apply this redemption to us effectually, and poſſeſs us of it?

A. Yes.

Q. Cannot godly parents, miniſters or goſpel-ordinances do this? A. No.

Q. Why is the Holy Spirit ſaid to apply this redemption to us effectually?

A. To teach us that all that can be done by means and inſtruments to apply this redemption to us, will be ineffectual, without the work of the Holy Spirit.

Q. Is not the Spirit's application of this redemption as neceſſary to us, as Chriſt's purchaſing of it? A. Yes.

Q. What is the difference between the purchaſing and application of it?

A. The firſt is a work done without us, but the ſecond a work done within us.

QUEST. XXX.

Q. How doth the Spirit apply to us, the redemption purchaſed by Chriſt?

A. The Spirit applieth to us the redemption purchaſed by Chriſt, by working faith in us, and thereby uniting us to Chriſt, in our effectual calling.

Q. What doth the Spirit work in us, in order to apply the purchaſed rdemption to us?

A. Faith.

Q. Cannot we produce faith, or believe of ourſelves?

A. No.

Q. Is not faith an act of the believing ſoul?

A. Yes; but ſtill the ſcripture makes it God's gift to him, and the Spirit's work within him, Eph. ii. 8. Col. ii. 12.

Q. Is not the Spirit of God the Author or Worker of all grace?

A. Yes; and therefore he is called the Spirit of Grace.

Q. What means doth he uſe for working faith in us?

A. The word, or miniſtry of the goſpel, Rom. x. 14, 17.

Q. What ſhall become of thoſe who want the goſpel? May not the Spirit work faith in them for their ſalvation?

A. We have no promiſe for his doing ſo.

Q. What is the uſe of faith for applying Chriſt's purchaſe to us?

A. Faith is the grace that brings us to Chriſt, and is the means of our union with him.

Q. What is it to be united to Chriſt?

A. It is to be joined to him, and made one with him.

Q. Is it hereby that every believer hath an actual intereſt in Chriſt, and a title to his purchaſe? A. Yes.

Q. What ſort of union is there between Chriſt and believers ?

A. It is a ſpiritual, ſupernatural and myſtical union hard to be explained by any thing we find here below. It is ſomewhat like the union that is between a debtor and his ſurety, ſeeing by it the righteouſneſs and ſatiſfaction of Chriſt becomes believers ; or like the union that is between the head and the members, and the root and the branches, ſeeing by it the Spirit of Chriſt brings vital and refreſhing influences from Chriſt to all true believers, 2 Cor. v. 21. Col. ii. 19. John xv. 5. 1 Cor. vi. 17.

Q. Are not believers ſaid to be in Chriſt, and Chriſt in believers, by virtue of this union ?

Q. Yes, Rom. viii. 1, 10. 2 Cor. v. 17. and xiii. 5.

A. What are the bonds of this union with Chriſt and believers ?

A. There is the Spirit on Chriſt's part, taking hold of us ; and there is faith on our part, taking hold of Chriſt.

Q. What advantage doth believers reap by this union ?

A. By it they have ſympathy from Chriſt in their ſufferings, and communion with Chriſt in his fulneſs ; and, becauſe he lives, they ſhall live alſo.

Q. Is there any diſſolving of this union ?

A. No ; for death, which looſeth all the ties of nature, cannot diſſolve this union ; for Chriſt is united to believers duſt in the grave, as well as to their ſouls in heaven.

Q. What muſt we do to be united to Chriſt ?

A. We muſt be deeply ſenſible of our miſery without Chriſt, caſt off our ſins which ſeparate us from Chriſt, and receive him by a lively faith as he is offered to us in the goſpel.

Q. How ſhall we attain to this uniting grace of faith ?

A. Let us look and cry to the Holy Spirit to work it in us ?

Q. When doth he that ?

A. In our effectual calling.

QUEST. XXXI.

Q. What is effectual calling ?

A. Effectual calling is the work of God's Spirit, whereby, convincing us of our ſin and miſery, inlightning our minds in the knowledge of Chriſt, and renewing our wills, he doth perſwade and enable us to embrace Jeſus Chriſt, freely offered to us in the goſpel.

Q. Is not effectual calling the ſame thing with converſion or regeneration ? A. Yes.

Q. Why is our converſion termed a call or calling ?

A. In regard that it is by the voice or word of God, that we are rouzed from the ſleep of ſin, reduced from our wanderings, and brought home to himſelf.

Q. Why is it termed effectual calling ?

A. Becauſe it takes effect to bring the ſoul to God, and to diſtinguiſh it from the outward call of the word, which of itſelf is inſufficient to prevail with us ; for many are called, but few are choſen, Mat. xxii. 14.

Q. What do you mean by few are choſen ?

A. That few are determined effectually to embrace the call.

Q. Whoſe work is the inward and effectual call ?

A. It is the work of the Spirit of God.

Q. Why is it called a work ?

A. Becauſe it is not perfected all at once, but done by ſeveral ſteps and degrees.

Q. What are the ſeveral ſteps of the Spirit's work mentioned in the anſwer ?

A. There are, 1. A work of conviction. 2. A work of illumination. 3. A work of renovation.

Q. What is the ſtate which the ſoul is called from by this work ?

A. From a ſtate of ſin, of darkneſs, of enmity, of ſlavery, and miſery.

Q. What is the ſtate which the ſoul is called to ?

A. It is a ſtate of grace, of light, of peace, of liberty, and bliſs.

Q. Whence is it that God doth call ſome, and not others ?

A. It is not from any worth or goodneſs in them, but from his own mere good will and pleaſure.

Q. What means doth the Spirit make uſe of in the calling of men ?

A. Chiefly the voice and miniſtry of the word.

Q. Whether is it the voice of the law or the goſpel ?

A. It is both ; the law to ſhew us our miſery, and the goſpel to diſcover our remedy.

Q. What is the firſt ſtep of the Spirit's work in our effectual calling ?

A. Conviction.

Q. What doth the Spirit convince us of ?

A. Of our ſin and miſery, or the defiled and wretched condition we were born and ly in, till a gracious change be wrought in us.

Q. What is it in ſin that the Spirit doth convince us of ?

A. Of ſin's evil, malignity, guilt and pollution ; of its fountain, numerouſneſs, aggravations and deſervings.

Q. By what means doth the Spirit bring men to the conviction of ſin ?

A. By the law's precepts and threatenings, by rods, and by conſcience.

Q. May not any of theſe convince us of ſin without the Spirit ?

A. No.

Q. Was not this one great deſign of ſending the Spirit ?

A. Yes, John xvi. 8.

Q. Is there no converſion without conviction going before ?

A. No ; for, unleſs we have it in ſome meaſure, we will not ſee our need of Chriſt, nor come to him for help.

Q. Is the work of conviction alike great in all true converts ?

A. No ; ſome have more and ſome leſs, according to God's holy pleaſure.

Q. What degree of conviction is neceſſary to all who are converted ?

A. So much as is needful to diſcover a man's loſtneſs, to make him value Chriſt above all things, and willing to part with all things for Chriſt.

Q. Doth converſion always follow upon a work of conviction ?

A. No ; for not a few like Judas and Felix, have had ſtrong convictions which have come to nothing.

Q. Whence is it that their convictions prove abortive ?

A. Becauſe they ſtifle them, and go to the world for eaſe, and not unto Chriſt : neither are their convictions of the right kind.

Q. What is the difference between the conviction of will,

natural men, and theſe of true penitents ?

A. 1. The firſt proceed only from a natural conſcience and the fears of hell ; but the ſecond from the operation of God's Spirit, and a view of ſin's evil, God's goodneſs and Chriſt's ſufferings. 2. The firſt are mainly upon the account of groſs ſins and outbreakings ; but the other reach alſo to heart-ſins, and theſe which are ſecret. 3. The convictions of natural men are cured by natural means, but theſe of true penitents only by the blood of Chriſt.

Q. What is the ſecond ſtep of the Spirit's work in effectual calling ?

A. The work of illumination with reſpect to the remedy for ſin.

Q. Are our minds dark by nature in that reſpect till the Spirit of God enlighten them ?

A. Yes.

Q. What doth he enlighten our minds with ?

A. With the knowledge of Chriſt, our only Surety and Saviour.

Q. Is not ignorance of Chriſt a ſad ſign of one that is not effectually called or converted ?

A. Yes.

Q. What knowledge or diſcoveries of Chriſt doth a ſinner get by the Spirit's light ?

A. He is brought to know the excellency of Chriſt's perſon, offices, righteouſneſs and fulneſs provided for believing ſinners : he is made to ſee Chriſt's all ſufficiency and ability to ſave to the uttermoſt, his ſuitableneſs to the various needs of our ſouls, and his willingneſs to ſave all that come to him for relief.

Q. What means doth the Spirit uſe for enlightening us with the knowledge of Chriſt ?

A. Ordinarily the preaching of the goſpel, Acts xxvi. 17. 18. Rom. x. 17.

Q. Are not then both the law and the goſpel uſeful in our converſion ?

A. Yes ; the law for diſcovering to us our diſeaſe, and the goſpel for ſhewing us a phyſician : the law for convincing us of ſin, and the goſpel for leading us to a Saviour.

Q. May not the minds of ſome be very much enlightened under the goſpel, without being called effectually or converted ?

A. Yes ; for Balaam was greatly illuminated ; and we read of ſome ſuppoſed to be once enlightened, that yet may make final apoſtaſy from Chriſt, Heb. vi. 4. 6.

Q. How may we know if the knowledge of Chriſt we are inlightened with, be true and ſaving ?

A. It will be a good ſign, if our knowledge humble us the more under a ſenſe of our vileneſs ; if it inflame our hearts with love to Chriſt, and a deſire to be like him ; if it engage us to put our truſt in him for the whole of our ſalvation, and to hate ſin as his great enemy, and to ſtudy to do the things that pleaſe him.

Q. What is the third ſtep of the Spirit's work in effectual calling ?

A. His renewing of the will.

Q. What do ye mean by the Spirit's renewing of the will of man ?

A. His making the will new and pliable, by putting new inclinations and diſpoſitions into it, to chuſe what is good, and refuſe what is evil.

Q. Doth the Spirit by his powerful work upon the will, offer any violence to the liberty of man's will ?

A. No ; for he inclines it in a way agreeable to its nature, and ſweetly changes its ſtubbornneſs and rebellion into a willing obedience.

Q. How may we know if our hearts and wills be yet renewed ?

A. By our embracing of Chriſt in all his offices ; by our preferring his will and glory before all earthly ſatisfactions ; by our loving the good we once hated, and hating the evil we formerly loved.

Q. Are we able to renew our own wills, or change them from evil to good ?

A. No ; we can no more do it than the 'Ethiopian can change his ſkin or the leopard his ſpots,' Jer. xiii. 23.

Q. What ſhall we do then to attain to this gracious change by the Spirit's renewing work ?

A. Let us be deeply ſenſible of the evil and miſery of ſin, diligently wait upon the means of ſalvation, earneſtly to look to God in Chriſt, pleading for his Spirit's work upon our hearts, and carefully entertain his motions when he begins to work.

Q. What end doth the Spirit aim at in his convincing, inlightening and renewing work in our effectual calling ?

A. That thereby he may perſwade and enable us to embrace Jeſus Chriſt as freely offered to us in the goſpel.

Q. What do ye mean by the Spirit's perſwading and enabling us to embrace Jeſus Chriſt ?

A. His prevailing with us, determining us, and making us able and willing to accept of Chriſt as our Saviour, and conſent to the terms he propoſeth to us in the goſpel.

Q. What do ye mean by the goſpel ?

A. The glad tidings or joyful news of ſalvation thro' Jeſus Chriſt, written at his direction by the prophets and apoſtles, and publiſhed by his meſſengers to loſt ſinners of mankind.

Q. How, or upon what terms, is Chriſt offered in the goſpel to ſinners, that they may embrace him ?

A. He is offered to them as a free gift from heaven, in all his offices, of Prophet, Prieſt, and King ; and they muſt embrace him accordingly.

Q. What mean you by embracing Chriſt freely as he is offered ?

A. That we muſt come to Chriſt without money or price ; that is, we muſt be ſenſible of our emptineſs of all good; and that we can bring no qualification nor worth to purchaſe or obtain Chriſt, but muſt come poor and empty-handed, willing to take Chriſt and his riches to furniſh us with every thing neceſſary for us.

Q. How may we know if we have thus embraced Chriſt in a right manner ?

A. By diligent examination of ourſelves, and particularly trying if we can ſay, that we have embraced Chriſt, not only for pardon of ſin and eternal ſalvation, but alſo for holineſs and newneſs of life ; believing and depending on him as the meritorious cauſe and fountain of ſanctification, as well as juſtification and glorification.

Q. Can no man thus embrace Chriſt until he is perſwaded and enabled by the Spirit to do it ?

A. No.

Q. Are we naturally averſe from accepting the offer of a Saviour ?

A. Yes, and therefore muſt be perſwaded to it.

Q. Are we without ſtrength, as well as averſe to do it ?

A. Yes; and therefore we muſt be enabled to embrace Chriſt.

Q. Cannot moral ſwaſions, ſuch as the exhortations, threatenings and promiſes of the word, perſwade ſinners to embrace Chriſt?

A. No; theſe can no more do it of themſelves, than the beams of the ſun can enlighten a man born blind, or arguments can raiſe a dead man from the grave: for we are naturally blind and dead in ſin.

Q. Is then the ſame power requiſite to our renovation and converſion, as to our creation and reſurrection?

A. Yes.

QUEST. XXXII.

Q. What benefits do they that are effectually called partake of in this life?

A. They that are effectually called do in this life partake of juſtification, adoption, ſanctification, and the ſeveral benefits which in this life do either accompany or flow from them.

Q. Have theſe who are effectually called, a title to ſpecial benefits and privileges above other perſons?

A. Yes.

Q. When is it that they partake of theſe benefits?

A. They have ſome of them in this life, and the reſt in the other life; they have ſome in hand, but much more in hope.

Q. What are the benefits or advantages they partake of in this life?

A. They are principally three, to wit, juſtification, adoption, and ſanctification.

Q. Are all theſe who are effectually called, juſtified, adopted, and ſanctified by God in this life?

A. Yes.

Q. What do ye mean by theſe words, juſtified, adopted, and ſanctified?

A. That they have their ſins pardoned, they become God's children and are made holy.

Q. Is holineſs then a ſpecial benefit and privilege, as well as our duty? A. Yes.

Q. Do theſe three benefits come ſingly to thoſe who are effectually called?

A. No; for they are attended with many other bleſſings that depend upon and flow from them; ſuch as inward peace, free acceſs to God, aſſurance of his love, fatherly proviſion, growth in grace, &c.

Q. Who then are the happieſt perſons even in this life?

A. Thoſe who are effectually called; for they are privileged above all others.

QUEST. XXXIII.

Q. What is juſtification?

A. Juſtification is an act of God's free grace wherein he pardoneth all our ſins, and accepteth us as righteous in his ſight, only for the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to us, and received by faith alone.

Q. Doth the word juſtify ſignify to make a perſon juſt, by infuſing of inherent righteouſneſs into him, as the word ſanctify ſignifieth to make a perſon holy in that manner?

A. No; for, if that were the meaning, it would confound juſtification with ſanctification, of which the Papiſts are guilty.

Q. What then is the true meaning of the word juſtify?

A. It is a legal or forenſick word, borrowed from courts of juſtice; and it ſignifies to abſolve one from guilt or puniſhment, and to pronounce him righteous or innocent.

Q. Whoſe act is it to juſtify a ſinner?

A. It is God's act; for it is God that juſtifieth, Rom. viii. 33.

Q. Doth God juſtify the ungodly?

A. Yes, Rom. iv. 5.

Q. Is it not written, Prov. xvii. 15. 'He that juſtifieth the wicked is an abomination to the Lord?' will God do that himſelf, which he abhors in another?

A. God indeed abhors the abſolving of guilty perſons without ſatisfaction made to juſtice; but, when God doth juſtify the ungodly, it is upon due ſatisfaction made to his juſtice.

Q. May any ungodly perſon take encouragement from this, to reckon himſelf among thoſe that are juſtified?

A. No; for tho' God doth juſtify thoſe who were ungodly before the paſſing of that act, yet none of theſe do continue to live ungodly afterwards: and theſe who continue to do ſo, ſhew plainly that they never were juſtified perſons, ſeeing juſtification and ſanctification are inſeparable.

Q. Why do you call juſtification an act and not a work?

A. Becauſe it is a thing done all at once, as the ſentence or declaration of a judge; and not a work of time, carried on by degrees, as effectual calling and ſanctification are.

Q. What is the moving cauſe of this act?

A. The free grace of God, that is, his undeſerved love and favour to ſinners, without any worth or merit in them.

Q. What are the conſtituent parts of juſtification?

A. They are two, as mentioned in the anſwer, to wit, God's pardoning of our ſins, and his accepting of our perſons as righteous.

Q. What is the meritorious cauſe of our juſtification?

A. The righteouſneſs of Chriſt.

Q. Is it upon account of this righteouſneſs that God both pardons our ſins, and accepts of our perſons?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt by which we are juſtified?

A. Not his eſſential righteouſneſs as God, which is incommunicable; but his ſurety-righteouſneſs, which as Mediator God-man he performed in our ſtead, to ſatisfy juſtice, and magnify the law.

Q. What was this ſurety-righteouſneſs of Chriſt made up of?

A. Of his active and paſſive obedience.

Q. What is Chriſt's active obedience?

A. The perfect obedience he gave to the precepts of the law in his holy life, which is imputed to believers; ſeeing by the obedience of this one man many are made righteous, Rom. v. 19.

Q. What is his paſſive obedience?

A. His ſuffering the penalties of the law due to us for ſin, whereby he gave perfect ſatisfaction to the juſtice of God.

Q. If Chriſt gave perfect and full ſatisfaction to juſtice for our ſins, how can our juſtification be ſaid to be of free grace?

A. Theſe two conſiſt very well together, according to Rom. iii. 24. ' Being juſtified freely by his grace, thro' the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt.' It is wholly free to us, ſeeing God doth graciouſly accept of a righteouſneſs and ſatisfaction from a Surety, which he might have demanded from us. It is free, ſeeing God hath provided the Surety for us, and furniſhed him to pay our debt, when it was impoſſible for us to find one to do it. It is free, ſeeing God requires nothing from us but faith in the Surety, which faith he alſo promiſeth freely to give us: So that our juſtification is altogether of free grace to us.

Q. How is it that the righteouſneſs of Chriſt becomes ours?

A. By God's imputing it to us, that is, his placing it to our account, as if we ourſelves had performed a perfect righteouſneſs to him.

Q. How is it according to truth for God to pronounce us righteous, who really are not ſo?

A. God doth not pronounce us righteous in ourſelves, but righteous in our Surety Chriſt, who is righteouſneſs to us in God's account; even as a creditor, having received payment from the ſurety, juſtly counts the debitor free and acquitted in law, 1 Cor. i. 30. 2 Cor. v. 21.

Q. Were the Old-Teſtament ſaints juſtified by Chriſt's righteouſneſs as well as we?

A. Yes.

Q. How could that be, ſeeeing they died before Chriſt's righteouſneſs was performed?

A. They believed in the promiſed Meſſiah that was to come, to be made an offering for ſin, and to bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs; and their faith in him was accepted of God for their juſtification.

Q. How doth it appear that they depended upon Chriſt for juſtification?

A. In regard we are told that the goſpel was preached unto them: That they ſaw the promiſes afar off, and embraced them. They had Chriſt exhibited to them in the antient prophecies, types and ſacrifices; and ſo they viewed him as the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world. Abraham ſaw Chriſt's day afar off. Job knew his Redeemer lived. Iſaiah foretels, That his ſoul ſhould be made an offering for ſin: And he calls all men to look to him for ſalvation; and he points him out as one in whom we have righteouſneſs and ſtrength, and one in whom all the ſeed of Iſrael would be juſtified and ſhould glory. Jeremiah calls him, The Lord our righteouſneſs. Daniel ſays, He ſhall make reconciliation for ſin, and bring in everlaſting righteouſneſs; and that for this end Meſſiah was to be cut off. Heb. iv. 2, & xi, 13. Rev. xiii. 8. John viii. 56. Job xix. 25. Iſa. liii. 10. and xiv, 22, 24, 25. Jer. xxiii. 6. Dan. xix. 24, 26.

Q. By what means do we receive and apply this righteouſneſs of Chriſt?

A. By faith alone, Rom. iii. 22.

Q Doth faith juſtify us as it is a work or act done by us?

A. No, but only as it is an inſtrument or hand whereby we receive and apply Chriſt's righteouſneſs, which is the only ground of our juſtification before God.

Q. Why would God have faith to be the alone inſtrument of our juſtification?

A. That it might appear to be wholly of free grace; for faith is of a ſelf-emptying quality, and aſcribes all to God, Rom. iv. 16.

Q. Doth the matter come all to one, when we are ſaid ſometimes to be juſtified by Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and ſometimes by faith?

A. Yes; for it is by the one meritoriouſly, and by the other inſtrumentally.

Q. Are we juſtified partly by Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and partly by our own?

A. No, we muſt not mix any thing of our own with Chriſt in the point of juſtification; therefore the apoſtle Paul aſſerts in ſtrong terms, that we are juſtified by faith in Chriſt, without the works of the law, Rom. iii. 28. Gal. ii. 16.

Q. How is it then that the apoſtle James doth ſay, that a man is juſtified by works, and not by faith only, Jam. ii. 24.

A. It appears from the context, that James is not ſpeaking of our juſtification before God, but of the juſtification of a perſon, and of his faith, before men: So good works declare before the world that we are juſtified perſons, and they declare our faith to be true and lively, ſeeing they are the genuine fruits of faith. And therefore the apoſtle ſaith, "I will ſhew thee my faith by my works:" and Abraham's faith was perfected by works, Jam. ii. 18, 22.

Q. Why cannot we be juſtified before God by our works?

A. Becauſe all the world is guilty, and all our works imperfect before God; and a juſt God requires a perfect righteouſneſs.

Q. Are good works then of no uſe?

A. Though they cannot juſtify us before God, yet they are moſt neceſſary and uſeful to glorify God, and to evidence the ſincerity of our faith; and therefore it is required of all believers, that they be careful to maintain all good works, Tit. iii. 8.

Q. Is there not ground to ſuſpect the truth of a man's faith, and of his juſtification, where holineſs and good works do not appear?

A. Yes: For by the ſame faith that a man is juſtified, his heart is alſo purified; and the goodneſs of a tree is known by its fruits, Acts xv. 9. Mat. vii. 16, 17.

Q. When is it that a perſon is actually juſtified?

A. As ſoon as he is brought actually to believe on Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. Did not God decree to juſtify the elect from eternity?

A. Yes, but that will not infer that we are juſtified from eternity; no more than, becauſe God decreed to create us from eternity, that therefore we were created from all eternity. All that we can draw from it is, that God graciouſly purpoſed our juſtification from eternity, and this only to take effect upon our believing.

Q. Are not the elect juſtified at the death or reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, ſeeing it is ſaid that he died for our ſins, and roſe again for our juſtification?

A. They were then juſtified virtually, but not actually; for though the price was truly then paid or completed, yet the purchaſed redemption is never actually ours, until it be applied.

Q. What is the firſt part of juſtification?

A. The pardoning of our ſins.

Q. Whoſe prerogative is it to pardon ſins?

A. It is God's only; for he is both the offended party, and the great Judge of all, Iſa. xliii. 25.

Q. Have not miniſters power to forgive ſins, ſeeing Chriſt ſaith to them, Whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted? John xx. 23.

A. That imports no more but a miniſterial declarative power to pronounce from God's word, that every penitent believing ſinner ſhall be forgiven: So that miniſters can only declare ſin to be pardoned upon the condition of faith and repentance.

Q. Have not private men power to forgive ſin? ſeeing Chriſt ſays to all, Mat. vi. 15. If ye forgive men their treſpaſſes, &c.

A. Private men have power only to forgive private injuries done againſt themſelves, but no power to forgive the wrong that at the ſame time is done to God.

Q. When doth God pardon men their ſins?

A. When they believe on Chriſt.

Q. Whether is pardon an act of juſtice, or of mercy?

A. It is both.

Q. How doth that appear?

A. 1. It is an act of juſtice in God to pardon every penitent believer, ſeeing Chriſt their Surety hath paid their debt, 1 John i. 9. 2. It is an act of mercy likewiſe, ſeeing God is graciouſly pleaſed to accept of a Surety's payment, and to provide the Surety alſo.

Q. What is it in ſin that pardon doth take away?

A. The guilt of it.

Q. What is that?

A. Our actual obligation to puniſhment.

Q. Doth pardon take away the demerit or deſervings of ſin?

A. No; for the ſins of believers in themſelves do deſerve hell, as well as the ſins of others.

Q. Doth pardon take away the inherence or being of ſin altogether?

A. No; for we find corruption ſtill remaining in theſe who are pardoned, Rom. vii.

Q. Hath every pardoned man the aſſurance of his pardon?

A. No; for an act of pardon may be paſt in the court of heaven, before it be intimated in the court of of conſcience.

Q. When God doth pardon the ſins of his people, whether is it their bypaſt ſins only, or is it their future ſins alſo?

A. All their bypaſt ſins are actually pardoned, and they have a right to pardon for their future ſins, upon their actual believing and repenting: But no ſin can be ſaid to be actually pardoned, until it be actually committed, and application made to the blood of Chriſt for the pardon of it?

Q. Is not God angry with the ſins of juſtified perſons?

A. Yes.

Q. What ſort of anger doth he manifeſt againſt them?

A. It is not vindictive wrath, as againſt the ſins of the wicked, but only fatherly diſpleaſure, which yet may be attended with ſharp rods, and the loſs of God's reconciled countenance, that cannot be recovered until they ſincerely humble themſelves, confeſs their ſin, renew their faith and repentance, and pray earneſtly for pardon.

Q. How may we know if our ſins be pardoned?

A. By our love to Chriſt that obtained it, and our deſire of conformity to him; by our mourning for ſin that pierced Chriſt, and our fear of grieving him for the future; By the uprightneſs of our hearts, and our readineſs to forgive others, Luke vii. 47. Rom. viii. 1. Pſal. cxxx. 4. Pſal. xxxii. 1. Mat. xviii. 35.

Q. What is the ſecond part of juſtification?

A. God's accepting of us as righteous in his ſight.

Q. What is meant by that?

A. It is God's adjudging us as righteous, or perſons acquitted from guilt; and his giving kindly acceſs and acceptance both to our perſons and ſervices upon the account of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt that covers both.

QUEST. XXXIV.

Q. What is adoption?

A. Adoption is an act of God's free grace, whereby we are received into the number, and have a right to all the privileges, of the ſons of God.

Q. Is adoption a ſcripture word?

A. Yes, Rom. viii. 15. Gal. iv. 5. Eph. 1. 5.

Q. What is the meaning of the word; or, what is it to adopt?

A. Among men it ſignifies, to take one that is a ſtranger into a family, to account him as a child or heir, and to provide for him as ſuch. So for God to adopt believers, it ſignifies his bringing them who are aliens by nature into his houſhold, his owning them as his ſons and daughters, and giving them a right to the privileges of his children.

Q. How many ſorts of ſons is God ſaid to have in ſcripture?

A. Three ſorts; 1. Jeſus Chriſt is his Son by eternal generation, being of the ſame nature and eſſence with the Father, Pſal. ii 7. 2. Angels and Adam are called the ſons of God, by reaſon of their immediate creation by him, Job xxxviii 7. Luke iii. 38. 3 Believers are his ſons by adoption, John 1. 12. 1 John iii. 1.

Q. Whoſe act is adoption?

A. It is God's.

Q. Why is it called an act?

A. Becauſe it is done at once.

Q. What ſort of an act is it?

A. An act of God's free grace.

Q. Why is it called ſo?

A. Becauſe it is wholly owing to the free love and favour of God, that he adopts any of mankind ſinners into his family.

Q. Is there nothing lovely in one more than another, that moves God to adopt them into his family?

A. No.

Q. In what condition are ſinners before they are adopted?

A. They have neither wiſdom, beauty, holineſs, nor any good thing to recommend them; but are black as Ethiopians, ſtrangers to God, children of wrath, and of the family of hell, when God adopts them into his family.

Q. Is it not wonderful grace and love in God, not only to pardon ſuch rebels, but alſo to make them his ſons and heirs?

A. Yes.

Q. Upon whom is this favour conferred? Is it upon all?

A. No, but only upon thoſe who receive Chriſt by faith, John i. 12. Gal. iii. 6.

Q. Have not God's adopted children a right to many privileges above others?

A. Yes.

Q. What are theſe?

A. They are under God's fatherly protection, proviſion, and conduct while here below: They are allowed acceſs to God as a Father, the Spirit's aſſiſtance in their prayers, and hearing of them: They have the miniſtry of angels, and are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt of an inheritance incorruptible.

Q. Do not theſe peculiar privileges call for ſpecial duties anſwerable to them from us?

A. Yes.

Q. What are the duties of adopted children to their father?

A. They ſhould love and honour him; they ſhould aſk his counſel in all things, ſubmit to his fatherly correction, fear to offend him, truſt him and depend on his care.

Q. By what ſigns may we know whether we be God's adopted children?

A. By ſuch as theſe: if we reſemble our Father, love him above all, and be heartily concerned for his glory. If we have the Spirit of adoption, who always, where he is, doth excite to prayer and the ſtudy of holineſs, Rom. viii. 14. Gal. iv. 6. 1 John ii. 29.

Q. Wherein doth the children of God reſemble their Father?

A. In holineſs, mercy, and beneficence to all, even to their enemies.

Q. Are not all God's adopted children his ſons alſo by regeneration?

A. Yes, they are all born again, and have new natures given them, John i. 12, 13.

QUEST. XXXV.

Q. What is ſanctification?

A. Sanctification is the work of God's free grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole man after the image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto ſin, and live unto righteouſneſs.

Q. What is it to ſanctify a thing or perſon?

A. In the ſcripture ſenſe, it is to devote a thing to God's uſe, or to cleanſe from ſin and make us holy.

Q. Are not juſtification and ſanctification inſeparable?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the difference betwixt them?

A. Juſtification is God's act or ſentence without us, abſolving us from the guilt of ſin; but ſanctification is God's work within us, cleanſing us from the filth of ſin: Juſtification is perfect and equal in all believers, and is done at once; but ſanctification is unequal and imperfect in this life, and is carried on by degrees.

Q. What is the difference between regeneration and ſanctification?

A. Regeneration is the firſt change of the nature by the infuſing of all gracious habits into the ſoul at our converſion or effectual calling, which are all much the ſame; but ſanctification is the continued exerciſe and advancement of the work of grace in the believer thro' his whole life.

Q. Whoſe work is it to ſanctify us?

A. It is the work of the Holy Spirit, 2 Theſſ. ii. 13. 1 Pet. i. 2.

Q. Why is ſanctification called a work, and not an act?

A. Becauſe it is wrought and carried on by degrees.

Q. Can we not ſanctify ourſelves?

A. No; we can no more actuate or increaſe grace, than we can implant it at firſt. We can defile ourſelves, but cannot cleanſe ourſelves.

Q. May not the view of our graces humble us as well as our ſins?

A. Yes.

Q. Why ſo?

A. Our ſins, becauſe they are ours; our graces, becauſe they are none of ours: For every degree of grace is freely beſtowed by God upon undeſerving creatures.

Q. What is the procuring cauſe of our ſanctification?

A. The blood of Chriſt.

Q. By what means is it carried on in believers?

A. By means of God's ordinances and providences as he pleaſeth to bleſs them.

Q. What is the ſubject of our ſanctification? Or what part of us is it that is ſanctified?

A. The whole man.

Q. What do you mean by the whole man?

A. The whole powers and faculties of the ſoul, and the whole ſenſes and members of the body, both inward and outward man is ſanctified.

Q. How are the powers and faculties of the ſoul renewed and ſanctified?

A. By the Holy Spirit's diffuſing his gracious influences upon the heart, underſtanding, will, conſcience, memory, and affections of the ſoul, whereby they are cleanſed from ſin, made new, ſpiritual and holy, and remarkably fitted for ſerving and glorifying God.

Q. How are the ſenſes and members of the body ſanctified?

A. By changing them into a holy uſe, making theſe that before were inſtruments of ſin, now become inſtruments of righteouſneſs; ſo that outward converſation is ordered aright according to the rule of God's word.

Q. After what pattern is the change made in ſanctification?

A. After the image of God.

Q. Wherein doth this image conſiſt?

A. In reſembling God, and becoming like him in holineſs and purity; in hatred to ſin, and love to righteouſneſs.

Q. Is the image of God perfectly reſtored to us while in this life?

A. No; For the work of ſanctification is imperfect in the beſt of God's people while on this ſide of heaven.

Q. How doth that appear?

A From the complaints they make of the remainders of ſin in them, which make a continual ſtruggle between grace and corruption: And hence it is that our beſt duties are marred with ſin.

Q. Why doth God leave corruption in his people as long as they are here?

A. 1. To keep them always humble under a ſenſe of ſin, and their need of a Saviour. 2. To teach them to make continual uſe of Chriſt for righteouſneſs and ſtrength. 3. To magnify his power in preſerving weak grace, in midſt of corruption. 4. To looſe their hearts from this world, where they have ſuch a ſtruggling life, and make them long for heaven, where they ſhall triumph over corruption, and have perfect purity for ever.

Q. Will ſanctification never be perfected till that time? A. No.

Q. Do ſanctification and glorification differ ſpecifically?

A. No, but only in degrees; for grace is glory begun, and glory is grace perfected.

Q. What are the parts of ſanctification mentioned in the anſwer?

A. They are two, to wit, mortification, and vivification; or dying to ſin, and living to righteouſneſs.

Q. What do you mean by mortification, or dying to ſin?

A. The gradual weakening and ſubduing the power of ſin in our ſouls.

Q. By what marks may we know whether we be dying to ſin?

A. 1. If we be growing in our hatred of ſin, and be labouring for its utter deſtruction. 2. If we be careful to withdraw every thing that proves fewel to our corruptions, and to check the firſt motions of ſin. 3. If we bewail it before the Lord when we feel its ſtrength, and pray earneſtly againſt it. And, 4 If we be ſtudying to improve the death of Chriſt for the death of ſin.

Q. What is imported in the other part of ſanctification, living more and more unto righteouſneſs?

A. It is to have a growing principle of ſpiritual life in our ſouls, prompting us to obey the will of God in all things, and to aim at further advancement in true holineſs.

Q. What is the difference betwixt morality in natural men, and true ſanctification in believers?

A. The firſt is the product of nature, and makes ſome change only upon the outward life; but the ſecond is the fruit of the Spirit, and makes a gracious change upon the heart. The firſt proceeds from ſelf, and tends to ſelf; but the ſecond proceeds from a principle of love to God, and tends to his glory. In the firſt Chriſt is neglected; but in the ſecond his ſtrength and righteouſneſs are ſought to and employed.

Q. Is there an abſolute neceſſity of ſanctification here, in order to ſalvation hereafter?

A. Yes; for we are aſſured of it, that "without holineſs no man ſhall ſee the Lord," Heb. xii. 14. An unſanctified man can have no communion with a holy God.

Q. Is it poſſible that great and notorious ſinners can be ſanctified?

A. Yes; for the apoſtle Paul, ſpeaking of the vileſt of ſinners, ſaith to the Corinthians, "Such were ſome of you, but ye are ſanctified," 1 Cor. vi. 11.

QUEST. XXXVI.

Q. What are the benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from juſtification, adoption and ſanctification?

A. The benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from juſtification, adoption and ſanctification, are, aſſurance of God's love, peace of conſcience joy in the Holy Ghoſt, increaſe of grace, and preſervance therein to the end.

Q. How many benefits belonging to juſtified and ſanctified perſons are there ſet forth in the anſwer?

A. Five.

Q. Which is the firſt?

A. Aſſurance of God's love.

Q. Doth God bear a ſpecial love to juſtified perſons above others?

A. Yes; they are the ſpecial objects of God's love.

Q. May believers in this life attain to the perſwaſion or aſſurance of this love?

A. Yes.

Q. How doth that appear.

A. From the command of God injoining all Chriſtians to ſeek after it; and from the inſtances of many believers who have actually attained to the ſure knowledge and perſwaſion of the love of God to them, 2 Pet. i. 10. Heb. vi. 11. Rom. v. 2. 3. Rom. viii. 16. 38. 39. 2 Cor. v. 1. 1 John iii. 14. 19. 21. 24. 1 John v. 13. Cant. vi. 3. Job xix. 25. 2 Tim. i. 12.

Q. Can any perſon attain to this aſſurance without ſpecial revelation from God?

A. Yes.

Q How do they come at it?

A. Two ways; 1. By rational evidence and proofs from the word of God, namely, when they diſcover the inward evidences of theſe graces wrought in their ſouls, to which the promiſes of God's ſpecial love are annexed. 2. By the teſtimony of God's Spirit, bearing witneſs with their ſpirits, that they are the children of God, 1 John ii. 3. 1 John iii. 14. 19. Rom. viii. 16.

Q By what marks and evidences may we know our intereſt in God's love?

A. By our receiving of Chriſt in the goſpel offers, and truſting in him; by our love to Chriſt and to his people; by our affection to God's laws, and care to obſerve them; by our oppoſing of all ſin, and particularly beloved luſts; by our deſires after holineſs, and the like, Mark xvi 16. John i. 12 Prov. viii. 17. 1 John iii. 14 Pſal cxix. 165 Pſal. xviii 23. 1 John iii. 3. Phil. iii. 3 Pſal. cxxx. 5. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 7.

Q. What do ye mean by the Spirit's witneſſing with our ſpirits? Rom. viii. 16.

A. His ſhining upon our graces, and enabling us to diſcern them: his concurring with the rational inferences of our ſpirits therefrom, and ſtrengthening us to conclude that we are the children of God.

Q. Is this aſſurance eſſential to faith, and the attainment of every believer?

A. No; for ſome of them may walk in darkneſs, and have no light, Iſa. l. 10.

Q. Do any true believers loſe their intereſt in God's love?

A. No; for nothing can ſeparate them from the love of God which is in Chriſt: but they may be without the ſenſe and aſſurance of that love.

Q. Whence is it that God's people loſe the ſenſe and aſſurance of his love?

A. It proceeds frequently from their ſloth and negligence in duty, and from their venturing upon ſin, againſt light; and ſometimes from God's withdrawing the light of his countenance, for wiſe and holy ends, 2 Pet. i. 10. Cant. v. 3. 6. Pſal. li 8. 12. 14. Pſal. lxxvii. 7. 8. 9

Q. Why doth God withdraw from his people, and deny them the ſenſe of his love?

A. He doth it ſometimes to hide pride from their eyes, and to teach them to live by faith rather than by ſenſe: hence it may be that ſome of weaker grace are allowed more ſenſible comfort than theſe who are ſtronger.

Q. How may we diſtinguiſh true aſſurance from preſumption?

A. True aſſurance humbles the ſoul, and makes it watchful againſt ſin; but preſumption puffs up, and makes men ſecure. True aſſurance is willing to come to the light for trial, but preſumption ſhuns the light Gal. ii. 20. 2 Cor. vii. 1. Pſal. cxxxix. 23. 24. John iii. 20. 21.

Q. Should not all Chriſtians preſs for the aſſurance of God's love, as a thing of great advantage to them?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the advantage of having it?

A. It quiets the mind, and removes the fear of death; it inlarges the heart with love and thankfulneſs to God, and gives ſtrength and cheerfulneſs in the performance of commanded duties.

Q. Doth this aſſurance tempt or incline men to negligence or looſeneſs?

A. No; but rather excites and quickens them to diligence in holy duties.

Of peace of Conſcience.

Q. Is peace of conſcience a benefit that belongs to thoſe who are juſtified, adopted, and ſanctified?

A. Yes.

Q. Do all ſanctified perſons enjoy this benefit at all times? A. No.

Q. What ſhould hinder it, ſeeing God ſpeaks peace to ſuch perſons, and forgives all their ſins?

A. Many times theſe whoſe ſins are forgiven them, cannot be brought to forgive themſelves; ſometimes clouds of unbelief and temptations do ſadly darken their evidences, and they relapſe into untender walking, whereby their conſciences may be much diſquieted, Pſal. xxxviii. 3. 8. Iſa. lix. 2.

Q. What is it that doth pacify conſcience when troubled or wounded?

A. Conſcience being God's deputy in us, nothing leſs can pacify it than what pacifieth divine juſtice, namely, the blood of Chriſt.

Q. How doth the blood of Chriſt pacify conſcience?

A. By obtaining the removal of the guilt and power of ſin from us, and the lifting up of God's countenance on us.

Q. Can any unbeliever have peace of conſcience?

A. He may have a falſe peace, but it is only the believer in Chriſt that hath true peace of conſcience, Luke xi. 21. Rom. v. 1.

Q. Whence doth the peace of unbelievers proceed?

A. Partly from the deceitfulneſs and flattery of their own hearts; and partly from the devil, that, as a ſtrong man armed keeps the houſe, Luke xi. 21.

Q. What is the difference between a true and falſe peace of conſcience?

A. True peace of conſcience is attained by the uſe of means, ſuch as the ordinances, earneſt prayer, brokenneſs of heart for ſin, tender and holy walking before God: It ariſes from faith in Chriſt the Peace-maker, and makes the man careful of pleaſing God, and fearful of offending him. Whereas a falſe or preſumptuous peace comes not this way, and hath no ſuch attendants; nay, it is grounded upon vain imaginations, and is attended with carnal ſecurity, neglect of duty and untender walking, 2 Theſſ. iii. 16. 1 Sam. i. 12, 18. Iſa. lvii. 15. Pſal. cxix. 165. Gal. vi. 16. Rom. v. 1, 2. Rev. iii. 17. Deut. xxix. 19.

Q. Doth the believer's inward peace come and go with his outward peace?

A. No; for he may have great tribulation in the world, when yet he may have much inward peace thro' Chriſt, John xvi. 33. Heb. iii. 17, 18.

Q. What is the beſt way to maintain our inward peace?

A. By making much uſe of Chriſt who is our peace, looking daily to him for righteouſneſs and ſtrength, and ſtrict walking by goſpel rules, Eph. ii. 14. Gal. vi. 16.

Q. Doth the believer's peace with God ſtill alter with his peace of conſcience?

A. No.

Q. How is it that the believer's ſtate of peace is maintained, when his ſenſe of peace is loſt?

A. By reaſon of the ſtability of God's covenant, and the prevalency of Chriſt's continued interceſſion with God for his people, Pſal. lxxxix. 31, 32, 33, 34. 1 John ii. 1.

Of joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. What do you mean by joy in the Holy Ghoſt?

A. That ſpiritual joy, delight and complacency, which the Holy Ghoſt works in his people, when he clears up their evidences, or allows them ſpecial favours to their ſouls.

Q. Why is this ſpiritual joy called joy in the Holy Ghoſt?

A. Becauſe he breeds and feeds this joy; hence it is called the Fruit of the Spirit, Gal. v. 22.

Q. What are the chief grounds of this joy?

A. Ordinarily they are a ſenſe of our intereſt in Chriſt, and of our juſtification by his righteouſneſs; or his gracious preſence with us, his work in us, the ſucceſs of his goſpel, or a proſpect of heaven, Pſal. cl. 2. Iſa. lxviii. 10. Heb. iii. 18. Phil. i. 25. Acts ii. 46, 47. Acts viii. 1. Pſal. li. 12. Rom. v. 2.

Q. Wherein doth this ſpiritual joy differ from the joy of the world?

A. Spiritual joy is inward and pure, deep and ſolid; it bears up under outward troubles, and diſpoſes the ſoul for all ſpiritual performances: But worldly joy is muddy and ſenſual, blown away by every croſs wind, leaves the mind under uneaſy reflections, indiſpoſeth for holy duties, and evaniſheth at the approach of death.

Q. What is it that is moſt deſtructive to the true Chriſtian's joy?

A. Sin, eſpecially when it is ventured upon againſt light, Pſal. li. 8.

Q. May not hypocrites have flaſhes of ſpiritual joy at ſome times?

A. Yes; for ſo had the ſtony ground hearers, and John's followers, Mat. xiii. 20. John v. 35.

Q. What is the difference between the true ſpiritual joy of believers and the temporary joy of hypocrites?

A. True ſpiritual joy comes in the way of godly ſorrow for ſin, and of faith in Jeſus Chriſt; it diſpoſeth a man to humility and lowlineſs of mind, to hate ſin more vehemently, reſiſt temptations more ſteadily; and perform duty more chearfully: But the hypocrite's joy being without any true foundation or right views of Chriſt, it keeps ſin in its ſtrength, puffs up the man with a conceit of himſelf, and very ſoon leaves him as carnal and unholy as ever.

Of Growth in Grace.

Q. What is meant by the word grace?

A. Sometimes grace is taken for God's good-will towards us, that is, his mercy and favour to ſinners through Chriſt; and it is by this grace we are ſaid to be elected, called, juſtified and ſaved, Rom. xi. 5. Gal. i. 15. Rom. iii. 24. Eph. ii. 8. Sometimes again grace is taken for God's good work in us, or theſe gracious qualites which he infuſes and plants in all juſtified perſons, ſuch as repentance, faith, love, &c. whereby they are ſanctified and made meet for heaven, 2 Pet. iii. 18. Jam. iv. 6. Col. iii. 19. Eph. iv. 7. John i. 16. And in this laſt ſenſe grace is to be underſtood in the anſwer.

Q. Is all true grace of a growing nature?

A. Yes.

Q. What doth the ſcriptures compare it to in its growing?

A. To the morning light, that increaſeth more and more unto the perfect day: And to the huſbandman's ſeed, which ſprings and groweth up, he knoweth not how, Prov. iv. 18. Mark iv. 26, 27.

Q. Wherefore is it that all true grace muſt grow?

A. Becauſe it is the ſeed of God, and every ſoul poſſeſſed of it is united to Chriſt: Likewiſe there is a ſtature appointed, to which every Chriſtian muſt gradually advance, that ſo he may be made meet for the inheritance above, 1 John iii. 9. John xv. 5. Eph. iv. 12, 13. Col. i. 12.

Q. When may grace be ſaid truly to grow in a believer?

A. When it receiveth new additions or degrees of ſtrength, which may be perceived, either, 1. When its growth is inward, in reſpect of heart-ſincerity and livelineſs: Or, 2. When it is outward, in reſpect of the fruits of holineſs produced in the life: Or, 3. When it is downward, in reſpect of ſelf-abaſement, and the rooting of gracious habits in the ſoul: Or, 4. When it is upward, in ſpirituality and heavenly-mindedneſs.

Q. Do believers at all times actually grow in grace?

A. No; but they are ſtill in a growing diſpoſition, and deſirous to grow.

Q. May not true grace ſometimes decay?

A. Yes; for ſometimes believers do leave their firſt love, and the good things which remain in them may be ready to die, Rev. ii. 4. and iii. 2.

Q. Whence is it that grace doth decay in believers?

A. Sometimes it proceeds from violent ſtorms of temptations; but ordinarily from their unwatchfulneſs, their neglect of employing Chriſt, their grieving of the Spirit, or harbouring of known ſin.

Q. What are the ordinary ſymptoms of grace in decay?

A. 1. Loſs of ſpiritual appetite, and of delight in duty. 2. Loſs of wonted hatred of ſin, and of tenderneſs of conſcience. 3. Loſs of deſire for the coming of Chriſt's kingdom. 4. A growing love to the world and time's things.

Q. How may we know whether grace be real or true, though it be very weak?

A. Wherever grace is true, ſin will be felt as a burden, the ſoul will eſteem Chriſt precious, his ordinances and people will be loved, and more grace and holineſs will be earneſtly deſired.

Q. What means ſhall we uſe to get weak and languiſhing grace brought to thrive and grow?

A. We muſt be duly ſenſible of the ſpiritual conſumption, and apply to the phyſician for help; we muſt ſearch if there be any unmortified luſt at the root of grace, and remove it; we muſt look to Chriſt for his Spirit's influences and bleſſing upon ordinances and providences, earneſtly pleading his promiſes of quickening and ſtrength, and that he may come as the dew to Iſrael, Pſal. lxxxv. 6. Hoſ. xiv. 4, 5, 6. Pſal. cxix. 25, 28.

Of Perſeverance in Grace.

Q. Is perſeverance in grace a privilege of juſtified perſons? A. Yes.

Q. What do you mean by perſeverance in grace?

A. A continuing ſtill in the ſtate of grace, and in the practice of godlineſs to the end.

Q. Can no juſtified perſon fall totally and finally from grace? A. No.

Q. How are you aſſured of that?

A. From the unchangeableneſs of God, and the nature of grace; for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance; and grace in believers is a well of water ſpringing up unto everlaſting life, Rom. xi. 29. John iv. 14.

Q. Do all that profeſs Chriſt perſevere in their profeſſion?

A. No; for we read of many who have fallen from it, John vi. 66.

Q. Why do not all the profeſſors of Chriſt perſevere?

A. Becauſe many of them are not rooted in ſincerity; and they who begin in hypocriſy do commonly end in apoſtaſy, Mat. xiii. 20, 21. Pſal. lxxviii. 37.

Q. May not truly gracious ſouls fall very foully into groſs ſins? A. Yes.

Q. Have we any examples of ſuch upon record?

A. Yes; we have Lot, Noah, David and Peter.

Q. Why are ſuch inſtances recorded?

A. To teach us to diſtruſt our own ſtrength, to avoid all temptations to ſin, to live and rely upon our Surety, and not to deſpair of mercy upon our penitent returning to the Lord.

Q. Did not theſe who fell ſo foully fall from grace?

A. 1. Not totally: For tho' they fell from many degrees of grace, yet not from all grace; they came to have little faith, but not to be quite without faith. 2. Not finally, or without recovery; for tho' they fell from God for a time, yet repentance and recovery was ſecured to them.

Q. Are there not many who have once looked well, who have become final apoſtates from God?

A. Yes; but, when they fall totally and finally from God, we may conclude they were never that in ſincerity which they appeared to be: They were only ſaints in profeſſion, but not in reality, 1 John ii. 19.

Q. Is it not ſaid, The branches in Chriſt that bear not fruit ſhall be taken away, John xv. 2. Is not that a falling from grace?

A. Theſe fruitleſs branches, there ſpoke of, were not in Chriſt by faith, but by profeſſion only.

Q. Did not Adam and Solomon, who were gracious perſons, fall totally and finally ?

A. As for Adam, he had no promiſe of perſeverance, tho' yet it is moſt probable he was recovered by believing in Chriſt upon the promiſe that was freely tendered to him by God himſelf. And as for Solomon, we have ground to believe he was recovered by the mercy of God unto repentance, 2 Sam. vii. 14, 15.

Q. Why have we ſo many cautions and warnings given to believers in ſcripture, if they could not fall away from grace ?

A. Theſe warnings and dehortations are ſome of the means which God makes uſe of to prevent their falling away.

Q. Is it owing to the free-will or ſtrength of grace in believers that they fall not away finally ?

A. No; for Adam and angels, who had ſtronger grace, fell; and ſo would believers, if they were not upheld by a power ſuperiour to any thing in themſelves.

Q. What are the main grounds of the ſaints perſeverance ?

A. The immutability of God's covenant and electing love; their being the purchaſe of Chriſt's blood, and united to him; Chriſt's potent interceſſion, together with the power and promiſe of God, John x. 11. 28. Luke xxii. 32. 1 Pet. i. 5.

Q. What promiſe have believers for their perſeverance in grace to the end ?

A. They have among others, that in Jer. xxxii. 40. "I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good, but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me."

QUEST. XXXVII.

Q. What benefits do believers receive from Chriſt at death ?

A. The ſouls of believers are at their death made perfect in holineſs, and do immediately paſs into glory; and their bodies being ſtill united to Chriſt do reſt in their graves till the reſurrection.

Q. Do the benefits which believers receive from Chriſt end with their lives ?

A. By no means; for they receive far greater benefits than ever at death, and after death.

Q. Whom do you underſtand by believers here ?

A. Theſe who give credit to the word of God, and do heartily receive and reſt upon Chriſt for ſalvation as he is offered to ſinners in the goſpel.

Q. Whether is it upon believers ſouls or bodies that Chriſt doth beſtow his benefits at death ?

A. It is both upon their ſouls and bodies.

Q. What are the benefits granted to their ſouls at death ?

A. There are two mentioned in the anſwer; 1. They are made perfect in holineſs. 2. They do immediately paſs into glory.

Q. Do all believers arrive at perfection in holineſs ?

A. Yes

Q. When do they arrive at it ? A. At their death.

Q. Can none attain to it during their life ? A. No.

Q. Why ſo ?

A. Becauſe ſin is never wholly rooted out of the ſoul till death.

Q. How doth that appear ?

A. Both from the word of God, and our own experience. 1 John i. 8. Rom. vii 23. 24.

Q. Why muſt all believers be made perfectly holy at death ?

A. Becauſe no unclean thing can enter within the gates of the new Jeruſalem. Rev. xxi. 27.

Q. How is it that believers are made perfectly holy at death ?

A. Their graces are perfected, and the roots of ſin plucked up out of their nature, which cannot be till the earthly fabric be diſſolved.

Q. Do the ſouls of believers die or ſleep with their bodies ?

A. No; they live, and act in a ſeparate ſtate.

Q. Whither do they go upon leaving the body ?

A. Into glory.

Q. How ſoon after death ?

A. Immediately, without any delay.

Q. Do they not go to Purgatory by the way, that they may be purged from ſin, and made pure to enter into heaven ?

A. There is no ground for that popiſh fiction in the word of God, there being no purgatory, but the blood of Chriſt.

Q. How do you prove from ſcripture that they paſs immediately into glory ?

A. From theſe paſſages which tell us, that Lazarus's ſoul was preſently carried by angels into Abraham's boſom; that the penitent thief was immediately glorified; that death is gain to the believer, and brings him to the Lord's preſence: all which made the apoſtle deſire to depart that he might be with Chriſt, Luke xvi. 22. Luke xxiii. 43. 2 Cor. v. 8. Phil. i. 21. 23.

Q. What do you mean by that glory which believers immediately paſs into at death ?

A. The immediate preſence, viſion and fruition of God, which they are preſently admitted to after death. Well may believers be ſaid then to paſs into glory; for then it is that they paſs into a glorious ſtate, a glorious place, a glorious company, and glorious employment.

Q. What is that glorious ſtate which believers enter into at death ?

A. It is a ſtate of eternal reſt and nearneſs with God, Heb. iv. 9 Rev. xiv. 13. 2 Cor. v. 8.

Q. What is that glorious place which they paſs into ?

A. It is their Father's houſe in heaven, called the King's palace, in which Chriſt hath prepared manſions for them, Pſal. xliii. 15. John xiv. 2.

Q. What is the glorious company they are admitted to ?

A. The company of God, of Chriſt, of the angels, and ſpirits of juſt men made perfect. 2 Cor. v. 8. Phil. i. 21. 1 Theſſ. iv. 17. Heb. xii 22. 23. 24.

Q. What is the glorious employment they enter upon ?

A. They will be employed continually in admiring and praiſing of God.

Q. What is it in God that will be the ſubject of their admiration and praiſe ?

A. His glorious perfections, and wonderful works; and eſpecially his redeeming love, and that amazing work of God manifeſted in the fleſh, and dying for us, Rev. i. 5. and iv. 11. and v. 9. 12.

Q. What benefits have believers from Chriſt at death in reſpect of their bodies ?

A. Their bodies at death do remain in union with Chriſt, and do reſt in their graves as in beds until the reſurrection, 1 Theſſ. iv. 14. Iſa. lvii. 2.

Q. Wherefore is it that believers muſt meet with death ?

A. Becauſe it is appointed unto men once to die ; and death doth paſs upon all men, for that all have ſinned, Heb. ix. 27. Rom. v. 12.

Q. Are none excepted from this law of death ?

A. None, but Enoch and Elias, who were tranſlated to heaven without taſting of death ; and theſe who will be found alive on the earth at Chriſt's ſecond coming, 1 Cor. xv. 51. 1 Theſſ. iv. 15.

Q. Was death appointed as the puniſhment of ſin ?

A. Yes, Rom. vi. 23.

Q. Why then do believers die, ſeeing they are freed from all the puniſhment of ſin, by Chriſt's ſuffering it for them ?

A. Chriſt might have removed death altogether from believers if he had pleaſed ; but he hath thought fit only by his death to change the nature of it, and take all that was penal out of it : ſo that he hath now quite altered death to believers, turning it from an enemy to be a friend, from a puniſhmenet to be a purgation, or a ſpecial mean for bringing about their perfect ſanctification, and thorough cleanſing from all ſin : and hence it is that death is ranked among the believer's bleſſings or privileges, 1 Cor. iii. 22.

Q. Is there not a great difference between the death of a believer, and of an unbeliever ?

A. Yes ; for to the one it is the effect of God's love, to the other it is the puniſhment of ſin ; to the one it is his Father's ſervant ſent to bring him home to his Father's houſe, to the other it is an officer of juſtice ſent to arreſt him for his fearful debts and crimes.

Q. What is the difference between the graves of believers, and unbelievers ?

A. The graves of believers are beds of reſt, wherein they ſleep in Jeſus ; and it is by virtue of the union ſubſiſting between him and them, that they ſhall be awaked from their ſleep in the morning of the reſurrection : but the grave is a priſon to unbelievers, wherein their bodies are kept in cuſtody until the judgment of the great day ; and from which they ſhall be raiſed by the power of God their terrible Judge.

Q. How can there be any union between ſo glorious a perſon as Chriſt, and our vile bodies when rotting in the grave ?

A. Not only becauſe the covenant which Chriſt ſtands in to believers reacheth to their very duſt, but more eſpecially becauſe there is a myſtical union between Chriſt as the head, and believers as the members of his myſtical body ; and, their duſt being parts of that body myſtical, Chriſt doth ſtill look upon the ſame as related to him.

Q. Since death doth diſſolve the union that is between the ſoul and body, why doth it not alſo diſſolve the union between Chriſt and the body ?

A. Becauſe the myſtical union that is between Chriſt and his people is in its nature indiſſolvable, ſo that death cannot looſe it, as it doth other unions and relations ; but in this reſpect it is like the hypoſtatical union that is between the divine and human nature in the perſon of Chriſt : for, when Chriſt died, the hypoſtatical union ſtill remained, his divine nature being united both to his ſoul in heaven, and to his body in the grave ; ſo, when believers die, the myſtical union ſtill remains, Chriſt their head being united both to their ſouls in heaven, and to their bodies lying in the grave.

Q. Are all believers bodies laid in the graves ?

A. No, ſtrictly ſpeaking ; for ſome martyrs have been burnt in fires to aſhes, ſome devoured by wild beaſts, and ſome drowned in the ſea : But the places whereſoever the bodies of ſuch are put to corrupt, are to them as their graves ; and thence will Chriſt bring them.

Q. In what reſpect is the believer's death called a ſleep ?

A. Becauſe, as ſleep doth eaſe and refreſh the man that is weary with toil and labour ; ſo death doth eaſe the weary believer of all his toil and ſtruggling with ſin, ſatan, and the world. Again, death is a ſleep to the believer, in regard he is to be wakened again from it in the morning of the reſurrection, Pſal. xvii. 15. and xlix. 14.

Q. Why are believers graves called beds of reſt ?

A. Becauſe therein they reſt from all their afflictions and labours in this world ; from the wicked's perſecutions, ſatan's temptations, and ſin's workings.

Q. How long ſhall they reſt in their graves ?

A. Till the reſurrection.

QUEST. XXXVIII.

Q. What benefits do belivers receive from Chriſt at the reſurrection ?

A. At the reſurrection, believers, being raiſed up in glory, ſhall be openly acknowledged, and acquitted in the day of judgment, and made perfely bleſſed in the full enjoying of God to all eternity.

Q. What is meant by the reſurrection here ſpoken of ?

A. The raiſing of all the dead from their graves, ſmall and great, juſt and unjuſt, who have lived in all ages of the world, from the creation of it, unto the laſt day, Acts xxiv. 15. Rev. xx. 12.

Q. How doth the reſurrection differ from creation ?

A. Creation is the making of a new body out of the earth, that did not ſubſiſt before ; but reſurrection is the raiſing up again of the ſame body out of its former duſt.

Q. When is this univerſal reſurrection to be ?

A. At the laſt day, when Chriſt ſhall come to judgment.

Q. How do you prove the truth and certainty of ſuch a reſurrection ?

A. From the almighty power of God, that is abundantly able to raiſe the dead ; and from the holy ſcriptures, wherein God expreſsly declares he will raiſe them.

Q. What was the cauſe of the Sadducees error, who denied the reſurrection ?

A. Their not knowing the two great foundations of this doctrine, namely, the ſcriptures, and the power of God, as Chriſt told them, Mat. xxii. 29.

Q. How could they be ignorant of this doctrine of the reſurrection from the ſcriptures of the Old Teſtament, ſeeing Job and Daniel plainly told them of it ? Job xix. 26, 27. Dan. xii. 2.

A. The Sadducees had little regard to any of theſe writings, except the five books of Moſes, which they imagined gave no hint of the reſurrection, or of a future ſtate; But our Lord did plainly evince the contrary from theſe very books, to the conviction of all, Mat. xxii. 31, 32, &c. Mark xii. 26, 27.

Q. How did Chriſt prove the reſurrection, and a future ſtate, from the books of Moſes?

A. From Exod. iii. 6. where God in the buſh ſpoke to Moſes long after Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob were dead, ſaying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob. Now, ſeeing he ſaith not I was their God; but, I am their God; Our Lord reaſons from it, He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living. And, ſeeing the covenant-relation ſtill ſtands, their ſouls muſt then be living, and ſo alſo muſt be united again to their bodies, to which they have an innate inclination, that ſo they may be made for ever happy in the enjoyment of their covenanted God.

Q. But have we not far clearer diſcoveries of this doctrine in the New Teſtament?

A. Yes, in many places of it.

Q. How is it credible, the dead bodies of men, after undergoing innumerable different alterations, ſhould afterwards be raiſed again to what they were?

A. It ſhould in no wiſe be thought incredible, that God ſhould raiſe the dead: For, if his power was able to raiſe the whole world out of nothing, it cannot be thought hard for him to raiſe our bodies out of the former duſt, Acts xxvi. 8.

Q. Hath not God given us many proofs aud inſtances of his power to raiſe the dead?

A. Yes, as in the raiſing of the widow of Zarephath's ſon by Elijah, the Shunamite's ſon by Eliſha, the dead man at the touch of Eliſha's bones, Dorcas by Peter, Eutychus by Paul, beſides the reſurrection of Chriſt himſelf, and many that were raiſed by him while he was on earth, 1 Kings xvii. 2 Kings iv. 2 Kings xiii. Acts ix. Acts xx. Mat. xxvii. Luke vii. Mat. ix. John xi.

Q. Doth not the nature and perfection of God's infinite juſtice require that there ſhould be a reſurrection?

A. Yes; For, ſeeing the bodies of the wicked have been actors in their ſins, it is juſt they ſhould ſhare in the puniſhment of them; and believers bodies having been inſtruments in God's ſervice, it is agreeable to equity that they ſhould ſhare in the reward and glory conferred upon them.

Q. Have you not ſome peculiar arguments for the reſurrection of believers bodies?

A. Yes; the reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt their head, and the nature of God's covenant with believers, are certain and ſatisfying arguments for it.

Q. Will the dead be raiſed with the ſame very bodies they had when they were alive?

A. Yes.

Q. How do you prove that?

A. Becauſe, theſe very bodies being the inſtruments of piety or vice, it is juſt that theſe, and no other, ſhould partake of the reward or puniſhment. Again, if they were not the ſame bodies, it would be more properly a new creation, than a reſurrection. But Job puts the matter out of doubt, by aſſuring us that the bodies will be the very ſame, Job xix. 26, 27. "And though after my ſkin, worms deſtroy this body, yet in my fleſh ſhall I ſee God; Whom I ſhall ſee for myſelf, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and not another."

Q. Will not the bodies of believers, when raiſed, differ from what they are now?

A. Not in regard of their ſubſtance or eſſence, tho' they will differ very much in reſpect of qualities.

Q. What will be the different qualities of believers bodies when raiſed again?

A. Here they were weak, ſickly, corrupt and dying bodies, and called vile bodies, as being the inſtruments of much ſin; but then they ſhall be ſtrong, healthful, pure, ſpiritual, incorruptible, immortal and beautiful bodies. Phil. iii. 21. 1 Cor. xv. 42, 43, 44, 52, 53, 54.

Q. How are believers bodies ſaid to be raiſed in glory, and to be made conform to Chriſt's glorious Body?

A. In regard they ſhall partake of his glory: For Chriſt's body ſhall ſhine as the ſun, and theirs ſhall ſhine as ſo many bright ſtars round about him; only all their glory will be borrowed from Chriſt their head.

Q. Will there not be a great difference betwixt the reſurrection of the juſt and unjuſt?

A. Yes: for the ſaints will be raiſed to eternal life, and that by virtue of Chriſt's reſurrection, and of their union with him; but the wicked ſhall be raiſed to condemnation by virtue of the power and juſtice of God, which ſhall bring them like malefactors from priſon to the judgment ſeat. The ſaints ſhall riſe with glory and triumph amidſt angels attending them; but the wicked ſhall riſe with trembling and horror, having muſt deformed and ghaſtly looks, as men going to be ſentenced to everlaſting burnings.

Q. What will be the great means of raiſing the dead at the laſt day?

A The voice of the archangel, and ſound of the laſt trumpet, which ſhall give ſuch a powerful ſummons to the dead, that none can ſit; all thereupon muſt riſe and appear before their judge.

Q. Will there not be a ſpeedy ſeparation made betwixt the righteous and wicked in that day?

A. Yes; the angels will then be employed to ſeparate the godly from the wicked, and gather them altogether in one bleſſed company.

Q. How ſhall believers be then diſpoſed of?

A. They will be caught up together to meet the Lord in the air.

Q. What privileges ſhall believers have at the judgment-ſeat above others?

A. Chriſt will place them on his right hand: He will openly acknowledge and acquit them: He will declare their right to the glorious inheritance prepared for them, and invite them to take poſſeſſion of it: He will cauſe them ſit with him as aſſeſſors in judging wicked angels and men.

Q. What do you mean by Chriſt's open acknowledging of believers in that day?

A. His public owning of them as his elect and redeemed ones.

Q. Whom doth Chriſt ſay he will acknowledge for his at that day?

A. Theſe who own and confeſs Chriſt now.

Q. Whom will Chriſt deny in that day?

A. Theſe who diſown and deny Chriſt now, Mat. x. 32, 33. "Whoſoever therefore ſhall confeſs me before men, him will I confeſs alſo before my Father who is in heaven. But whoſoever ſhall deny me before men, him will I alſo deny before my Father who is in heaven."

Q. What do you mean by Chriſt's open acquitting of believers in that day?

A. His public juſtifying and abſolving of them from all the guilt of their ſins; and his vindicating and clearing them from all the world's ſlanders and aſperſions.

Q. Are not believers acknowledged and acquitted by Chriſt before this time?

A. Yes; he doth it in this world when their ſins are pardoned, and he intimates this to them by his Spirit's bearing teſtimony with their conſciences, Rom. viii. 16, 33. 1 John iii. 21.

Q. How doth Chriſt's acknowledging and acquitting of believers, now, differ from his doing it at the judgment ſeat?

A. 1. In reſpect of promulgation; the firſt is ſecret in the believers boſom, the ſecond is public before men and angels. 2. In reſpect of ſubjective certainty; the believer may doubt of the firſt, but he cannot doubt of the ſecond, it being a judicial ſentence pronounced by the judge's own mouth with the greateſt ſolemnity.

Q. What will be the effect of this acknowledgment and acquittance?

A. It will for ever remove all doubts and fears from believers hearts, and fill them with joy unſpeakable and full of glory. Hence this day is called the time of refreſhing to them, Acts iii. 19.

Q. Should not the faith of this acknowledgment and acquittance by Chriſt, encourage us to own Chriſt in his perſon, offices, and truths, in the face of all dangers?

A. Yes.

Q. How ſhall we attain to that happy reſurrection and acquittance at the laſt day?

A. We muſt labour to be found in Chriſt, and clothed upon with his righteouſneſs: We muſt conſtantly adhere to Chriſt and his truths, advance in the work of mortification, and ſtudy holineſs in all manner of converſation.

Q. When Chriſt the Judge ſhall pronounce the ſentences of abſolution and condemnation, will not the execution thereof ſpeedily follow?

A. Yes; for after paſſing of them, it is added Mat. xxv. 46 "And the wicked ſhall go away into everlaſting puniſhment; but the righteous into life eternal."

Q. Will not the wicked be made to acknowledge the juſtice of the ſentence againſt them?

A. Yes, becauſe Chriſt, in paſſing the ſentence, gives them what was their own former wiſh and deſire.

Q. What was that?

A. The abſence of God: As they ſaid to God here, Depart from us: ſo Chriſt ſaith to them then, Depart from me.

Q. Will not the ſaints after their ſentence enter immediately upon perfect happineſs? A. Yes.

Q. What will be their happineſs after the judgment is over?

A. They ſhall be made perfectly bleſſed in the full enjoyment of God to all eternity.

Q. What is included in perfect bliſs?

A. Perfect freedom from all evil, and full enjoyment of all good.

Q. What evils will believers be freed from in heaven?

A. From all manner of ſin, guilt, or pollution; from all inclinations or temptations to ſin; and from all the bitter fruits and effects of ſin, ſuch as complaints, fears, or trouble of any kind.

Q. When is it that a man enjoys all that is good?

A. When he attains to the full enjoyment of God.

Q. Can we attain to that here upon earth?

A. No: for tho' God may be enjoyed by his people in ſome meaſure here, when they attain to communion with him in his ordinances; yet the full enjoyment of God is reſerved for heaven hereafter.

Q. Wherein doth the full enjoyment of God in heaven conſiſt?

A. 1. In being admitted to his glorious preſence. 2. In having the immediate beatifick viſion of his face. 3. In having the full perſwaſion and ſenſe of his love. 4. In being made like him. 5. In having fulneſs of delight and ſatisfaction in God as our everlaſting portion.

Q. Is it poſſible that any creature can fully enjoy God?

A. No creature can enjoy God fully, as God enjoys himſelf; but believers have ſuch enjoyment of God in heaven as fills them, in the meaſure they are capable of.

Q. How can any man ſee his face, when he is the inviſible God?

A. He is inviſible to the eye of the body, but not to the eye of the mind.

Q. How can a creature be made like to him that is infinite?

A. The holineſs and purity of the rational creature is ſome ſhadow or picture of the infinite holineſs of God.

Q. How long ſhall believers be bleſt with the full enjoyment of God in heaven?

A. Not for days or years, but for all eternity; and this is the ingredient that will exceedingly ſweeten their happineſs above, that it is without end, and they ſhall ever be with the Lord, 1 Theſſ. vi. 17.

Q. How is God ſaid to be All in All in heaven?

A. It imports theſe things; 1. That ſaints will be ſatisfied there from God alone. 2. That there will be no need there of theſe ſubordinate things, out of which they uſed formerly to bring comfort. 3. That every thing they before have found comfortable, will all be eminently found and enjoyed in God.

Q. Will not the ſaints be continually employed in adoring, praiſing and worſhipping God in heaven?

A. Yes.

Q. Will not their worſhip and adoration above, far tranſcend the moſt refined worſhip upon earth?

A. Yes, in regard there will be no mixture of ſin, no wandering, no hypocriſy, no imperfection in the worſhip above: They will act above with the higheſt delight and conſtancy, without any wearineſs or intermiſſion for ever.

QUEST. XXXIX.

Q. What is the duty which God requireth of man?

A. The duty which God requireth of man is obedience to his revealed will.

Q. Doth this queſtion begin the ſecond part of the catechiſm? A. Yes.

Q. What is the difference between the firſt and ſecond part of the catechiſm?

A. The firſt part doth treat of matters of faith, and what man is to believe concerning God: The ſecond part doth handle matters of practice, and what is man's duty towards God.

Q. Are not theſe the two great leſſons which the ſcriptures principally teach us?

A. Yes: And as we have heard the firſt, ſo we ought to be attentive to the ſecond; for man has ſomething to do as well as ſomething to believe.

Q. What do you mean by duty here?

A. That which a man oweth to God, or ought to do for God.

Q. What do you mean by obedience?

A. A man's going in with the will of God, either in what he commands or forbids.

Q. What is the rule of our duty and obedience?

A. The revealed will of God.

Q. What do you mean by God's revealed will?

A. God's mind diſcovered and made known to us in the ſcriptures.

Q. Why may not the traditions or inventions of men be our rule?

A. Becauſe God doth reject all will-worſhip and ſuperſtitious performances; ſaying, Who hath required this at your hand? Iſa. i. 12.

Q. Hath God any other will beſides his revealed will?

A. Yes his ſecret will.

Q. What is the difference between God's ſecret and revealed will?

A. God's ſecret will is his eternal counſel and decrees concerning all events whatſoever, which is not known till they come to paſs; but God's revealed will is that which he declares and lays before us as our duty, that we may practiſe and follow it.

Q. Is God's ſecret will no part of our rule?

A. No; "for ſecret things belong unto the Lord our God, but thoſe things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children," Deut. xxix. 29.

Q. Upon what account is our obedience and ſervice due to God?

A. Becauſe God is our Creator, our Preſerver, our Benefactor, and our ſupreme Lord and Lawgiver.

Q. Is there not obedience due to others beſides to God?

A. Yes; ſervants muſt obey their maſters, children their parents, and ſubjects their magiſtrates, but not as we are bound to obey God.

Q. What is the difference between the obedience we owe to God, and what we owe to man?

A. We muſt obey God for his own ſake, and becauſe of his ſupreme authority; but we muſt obey men our ſuperiors, chiefly becauſe God enjoins it, and becauſe their commands are agreeable to his will.

Q. What is to be done when the commands of God and of men are oppoſite one to another?

A. In that caſe we are to obey God rather than man, Acts iv. 19.

Q. What ſort of obedience is it that is acceptable to God?

A. It muſt be ſincere, univerſal and conſtant; it muſt proceed from right principles, namely, from a renewed heart; from faith, and from the love of God, and of Jeſus Chriſt, and it muſt be directed to right ends, namely, to advance the honour and glory of God.

Q. Can we merit any thing at God's hands by our obedience?

A No, but muſt count ourſelves unprofitable ſervants after we have done our beſt. Our beſt performances are imperfect, ſo that it is by Chriſt's obedience, not our own, that we muſt be ſaved.

Q. Is it our duty notwithſtanding to ſtudy to obey God in the beſt manner we can?

A. Yes, becauſe God commands it.

Q. Will not God accept of our obedience if ſincere, tho' attended with imperfection?

A. Yes, upon the account of Chriſt's merits and interceſſion.

Q. Is it not a yoke for men to be bound to conſtant obedience and ſervice to God all the days of their lives?

A. No; for theſe who know God, and love him, count his ſervice their greateſt freedom, Pſal. cxix. 45.

Q. Will they be free from this ſervice in heaven?

A. No; for there his ſervants ſhall ſerve him, and count this their greateſt happineſs, Rev. xxii. 3.

Q. Will not their ſervice in heaven differ much from what it is now?

A. Yes; for there they will ſerve God without ſin or wearineſs.

QUEST. XL.

Q. What did God at firſt reveal to man for the rule of his obedience?

A. The rule which God at firſt revealed to man for his obedience was the moral law.

Q. Is man appointed to be under the obligation and direction of a law?

A. Yes.

Q. Why ſo?

A. Becauſe, being made with rational faculties for the ſervice of his Creator, he muſt needs be accountable to God for his actions.

Q. What is the uſe of a law to men?

A. To ſhew to them what is ſin, and what is duty.

Q. What is the law that was firſt given to men?

A. The moral law.

Q. What do you mean by the moral law?

Q. That law which is the perpetually binding rule of our manners and practice, being the unalterable declation of the will of God concerning the duties of righteouſneſs, which all men do owe to God and their neighbours, in all ages of the world; which law is briefly ſummed up in the commandments.

Q. Why is it called moral?

A. Becauſe it is a perpetual rule for regulating our manners and converſation both towards God and man.

Q. How can the moral law be ſaid to be the firſt rule revealed to man, ſeeing the ten commandments were only given at Sinai, above two thouſand years after man was created?

A. The moral law notwithſtanding was the firſt rule, ſeeing it was written on the heart of man at his firſt creation, he being made after the image of God.

Q. Doth this law ſtill remain written upon man's heart?

A. The moral law being agreeable to the light of nature, though it be ſadly obſcured by the fall, yet ſome relicks of it are to be found on the hearts of all mankind,

Q. Is the moral law binding upon the heathen world, who have not the ſcriptures to make it known to them?

A. Yes; it is binding upon all mankind, ſeeing it was fully made known to man at his firſt creation, and which knowledge he loſt by his own fault. And tho' the heathen want the benefit of ſcripture light, yet ſo much of the moral law is made known to them by the light of nature, as is ſufficient to leave them without excuſe for their diſobedience, Rom. ii. 14, 15.

Q. If the moral law be natural, what need was there for writing it to us in the Bible?

A. 1. Becauſe the fall of man had wofully darkened our minds, and obſcured the knowledge of this law. 2. God would hereby ſhew that he is the Author of the law and light of nature. 3. He deſigned to leave ſinners the more inexcuſable.

Q. Can any man obtain ſalvation by his obedience to the moral law? A. No.

Q. Can any man now obey this law perfectly?

A. No.

Q. Is it juſt for God to require perfect obedience to the law when no man is able to give it?

A. Yes; for God may juſtly demand what he hath a right to, tho' we have loſt it by our own fault. God gave man at his creation power to obey perfectly, which he ſquandered away: now, tho' a debitor do diſable himſelf for paying his debt, the creditor doth not thereby loſe his right to aſk it.

Q. Why is the law given to men, ſeeing none can obtain life by it?

A. To be a reſtraint to ſin, and a rule of righteouſneſs; and particularly, the law is given to be a ſchoolmaſter to bring men to Chriſt, Gal. iii. 24.

Q. How doth the law as a ſchool-maſter bring men to Chriſt?

A. As a ſchool-maſter by his threats and whips doth excite dull ſcholars to learn knowledge for their good; ſo the law by its challenges, convictions, threatenings and curſes doth awake ſecure ſouls to ſee their ſins and dangers, and to flee to Chriſt for a perfect righteouſneſs to anſwer the demands of the law, and to ſhelter them from its curſes.

Q. Doth the law lead all men to Chriſt? A. No.

Q. For what uſe is the law to them who are not led to Chriſt?

A. It ſerves to render them inexcuſable, if they continue ſtill in their Chriſtleſs ſtate, after their ſin and danger are diſcovered to them by the law.

Q. Is the law of any uſe to the regenerate, who are already brought to Chriſt?

A. Yes; it ſerves to ſhew them how much they are bound to Chriſt for fulfilling it, and enduring its curſe for them; and to engage them to live holy and thankful lives to his glory: and particularly, the law is given to them as a rule of life, that they may order their converſations by it.

Q. How can the moral law be a rule of obedience under the goſpel, ſeeing it is ſaid of believers, that they are not under the law, but under grace? Rom. vi. 14.

A. The meaning is, that believers are not under the law as a covenant of works, being delivered from the curſing and condemning power of the law by their Surety Chriſt. But tho' it be not a covenant to them, whereby they are either to be juſtified or condemned; yet it is ſtill continued as a rule, by which they are to regulate both their hearts and lives, Rom. iii. 31. Rom. vii. 7, 12. Tit. ii. 11. 12. 1 Cor. ix. 21.

Q. How is Chriſt ſaid to be the end of the law for righteouſneſs to us? Rom. x. 4.

A. In regard Chriſt doth anſwer the primary deſign of the law under the firſt covenant, which was to bring men to a perfect obedience of righteouſneſs for their juſtification; this we cannot now find by the law, therefore we muſt ſeek it in Chriſt where it is to be found. The end and ſcope of the law is now gain'd in Chriſt, ſeeing he is that to a believer, which the law would have been to him if he could have perfectly kept it, namely, righteouſneſs, juſtification, and ſalvation.

Q. Doth the moral law preach Chriſt to us?

A. No; but God mercifully makes uſe of it as a ſpur to excite men to flee to Chriſt for ſalvation.

Q. How doth it that?

A. By ſhewing to men that they have deſtroyed themſelves, and that they cannot be their own ſaviours; and ſo it becomes a ſchool-maſter to bring them to Chriſt, as was before explained.

Q. What is it then that preacheth Chriſt to men and ſhews them plainly the way of ſalvation?

A. The goſpel.

Q. What do ye mean by the goſpel?

A. Any part of the Old and New Teſtament that brings to us the glad tidings of ſalvation, or points out the way to it; for the word goſpel ſignifies glad tidings, or good news.

Q. Are any news ſo welcome or refreſhing to ſenſible ſinners, as the news which the goſpel brings?

A No news are ſo joyful as the doctrine of free grace, no tidings ſo ſweet as the news of pardon, the news of a Saviour and of ſalvation to the chief of ſinners.

Q. Are the law and goſpel oppoſite to one another?

A. No; for the one is ſubſervient to the other, Gal. iii. 21. 1 Tim. i. 9. 10. 11. Rom. iii. 31.

Q. Did God give any other laws to men beſides the moral law?

A. Yes; he gave alſo to the Jews the judicial and the ceremonial law, which were explained before under the 14th queſt. page 294.

QUEST. XLI.

Q. Where is the moral law ſummarily comprehended?

A. The moral law is ſummarily comprehended in the ten commandments.

Q. What mean you by the law its being ſummarily comprehended?

A. That the law of God, or moral law, which is contained at large in the whole bible, is briefly, or in few words, ſummed up in the ten commandments: and theſe ten commandments are no more but a very ſhort ſum of the moral law, tho' they be a moſt comprehenſive ſum of it.

Q. How are the ten commandments commonly divided?

A. Into two tables; the firſt four commandments make the firſt table, containing our duty to God; the laſt ſix commandments make the ſecond table, containing our duty to our neighbour.

Q. How do the Papiſts divide theſe commandments?

A. Tho' they cannot refuſe them to be ten in number and theſe ten to be divided into two tables, ſeeing the ſcripture ſo expreſly doth aſſert both, Deut. iv. 13. Yet they make but three in the firſt table, and ſeven in the ſecond; deſigning this way to cloke their worſhipping of images: For they would gladly conceal the ſecond command, which ſtrikes directly againſt them, by making it a pendicle of the firſt; and ſo they reckon the firſt and ſecond commandment to be but one. And that they may ſtill have the number of ten commandments, they divide the tenth into two.

Q. What abſurdity is there in this way of doing?

A. It is againſt the plain ſenſe and ſcope of the words of the decalogue. For the firſt and ſecond commandments are evidently diſtinct, the firſt preſcribing the right object of worſhip. and the ſecond the right way of worſhip. And as for the tenth commandment, it appears plainly from the tenor of it, to be but one; the ſcope of it being to prohibit men to covet any thing that belongs to their neighbours: So that, if it was at all to be divided, it ſhould be divided at leaſt into ſix commands, or rather into as many commands as there are things which are our neighbours.

Q. Where were theſe ten commandments firſt promulgated?

A. At mount Sinai.

Q. After what manner was it done?

A. With the greateſt ſolemnity and terror: For the mount was railed about, that none might touch it: the angels attended; the glory of God viſibly deſcended in a cloud; there were thunderings, lightnings, the ſound of a trumpet, and God's voice was heard; the mountain ſhook; the people trembled, and even Moſes himſelf did quake: And laſtly, God with his own finger did engrave the ten commands upon two tables of ſtone.

Q. Why was the law given in this manner?

A. To poſſeſs the world with awful thoughts of the Lawgiver, and to ſhew them the danger of breaking his holy law.

Q. What are the properties of this law?

A. Is it holy, juſt, good, ſpiritual, and exceeding broad, Rom. vii. 12, 14. Pſal. cxix. 96.

Q. Why is it called ſpiritual?

A. Becauſe it reacheth to the thoughts and frame of the heart, as well as to the outward life and converſation.

Q. Why is it called exceeding broad?

A. Becauſe of the large extent and comprehenſiveneſs of its meaning.

Q. In what reſpect is the law ſo comprehenſive?

A. In many reſpects: As for inſtance, when it forbids any ſin, it doth at the ſame time command the contrary duty; and, when it commands any duty, it doth forbid the contrary ſin: and, when any ſin is forbidden, all inward motions and affections to it, all degrees and appearances of it, all temptations, means, words, or geſtures tending to it, are alſo forbidden; and, when any duty is commanded, the inward frame and affections ſuitable to it, and the means and helps for promoting it, are likewiſe injoined.

Q. Why did God write his law upon tables of ſtone

A. To teach us the laſting obligation of it, and that we ſhould write it on the tables of our hearts, or pray to God to do it for us.

Q. Can any man obtain to a conformity to this holy law in all things, in reſpect of his heart, words, and actions?

A. No.

Q. Are we not liable to the curſe and condemnation of the law, if we break it, or come ſhort of it in any thing.

A. Yes.

Q. How then ſhall we be ſheltered from this curſe?

A. By looking by faith to our Surety Jeſus, and to his perfect obedience and righteouſneſs to anſwer for us.

QUEST. XLII.

Q. What is the ſum of the ten commandment?

A. The ſum of the ten commandments is to love the Lord our God with all our heart, with all our ſoul, with all our ſtrength, and with all our mind; and our neighbour as ourſelves.

Q. What do you mean by the ſum of the ten commands.

A. The main ſubſtance or life of them.

Q. What is the ſum of the firſt table of the law?

A. Love to God.

Q. What is the ſum of the ſecond table?

A. Love to our neighbour.

Q. Why are the two tables ſummed up in love to God, and our neighbour?

A. Becauſe love is the great ſpring of all obedience to them; for, where true love is to God and our neighbour, all the duties required in both tables will certainly follow.

Q. How is it that we ought to love the Lord?

A. As our God, and, with all our heart, ſoul, ſtrength, and mind, Mat. xxii. 37.

Q. What is imported in loving the Lord as our God?

A. That we muſt chuſe him for our God, and give up ourſelves unto him.

Q. What is imported in loving the Lord with all our heart, ſoul, ſtrength, and mind?

A. It imports the ſincerity, ardency, activity, and ſupremacy of our love to God; that we ought to love and ſerve him with our whole powers and faculties, and above all other things whatſoever.

Q. What are theſe things we ought to love the Lord above?

A. Above all things that we enjoy on earth, ſuch as our money or eſtates, our houſes or lands, our children or relations, our liberties, or even our very lives.

Q. What reaſon is there for loving the Lord above all things?

A. Becauſe he is the Author of all; his excellency infinitely tranſcends all; and from him we have our all, even our being, our breath, our ſouls, our ſtrength, our relations, and every thing elſe.

Q. May not a man lawfully love his relations and poſſeſſions in this world?

A. Yes, providing his love be not exceſſive.

Q. How may we know if our love to things in the world be exceſſive?

A. It is a token it is ſo, when the thoughts of theſe things juſtle out ſpiritual thoughts; and when they come to get our firſt thoughts in the morning, or our laſt at night: Or when the impreſſions of worldly things abide longer with us, than of things ſpiritual.

Q. How ſhall we know if we love God above all things?

A. It would be a good ſign if we could ſay, That we value the favour of God more than that of any creature; and that we are more affected with the loſs of God's favour than with any worldly loſs; and that we would chuſe rather to diſpleaſe all the world, than to offend him.

Q. Who is meant by our neighbour that we ought to love?

A. Every man is our neighbour, and therefore we ſhould bear affection to all men.

Q. What mean you by loving our neighbour as ourſelves?

A. That we ſhould love others with the ſame truth and ſincerity of love, as we do ourſelves; or as our Saviour explains it in that golden rule, Mat. vii. 12. We ſhould be ready to do to others as we would have them doing to us: And we ſhould not do that to others, which we would not have done to us, were they placed in our circumſtances, and we in theirs.

Q. Should (according to this rule) a robber be ſpared, becauſe he would ſpare thoſe who would puniſh him; or a drunkard have what liquor he demands from us, becauſe he would give it to us if it was in his power?

A. The rule is not to be underſtood of ſelf-love that is corrupt and vitious, but of ſelf-love that is natural and innocent; it is this only that ought to be the ſtandard of doing to our neighbour In doing as we would be done to, we muſt act from a well-informed judgment, and not from any corrupt biaſs to ſin or vice.

Q. Are we bound to love our neighbour with the ſame degree of love as we bear to ourſelves?

A, No, but with the ſame ſincerity of love only.

Q. Ought we to love all mankind alike?

A. No, we ought to love all men indeed with the love of benevolence, but the ſaints only with the love of complacency, Pſal. xvi. 6.

Q. Are there not many who break this law of love to their neighbour?

A. Yes; namely, theſe who backbite their neighbour, who wiſh them evil, are grieved at their proſperity, or are inwardly glad of their hurt.

QUEST. XLIII.

Q. What is the Preface to the Ten Commandments?

A. The Preface to the Ten Commandments is in theſe words, I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the houſe of bondage.

QUEST. XLIV.

Q. What doth the Preface to the Ten Commandments teach us?

A. The Preface to the Ten Commandments teacheth us, that, becauſe God is the Lord, and our God, and Redeemer; therefore we are bound to keep all his commandments.

Q. What mean you by a Preface?

A. Something that is ſpoken or written before, in order to introduce another thing?

Q. What is the deſign of the preface to the decalogue?

A. To lay before us ſome reaſons and arguments to enforce the keeping of the commands.

Q. Why doth God make uſe of arguments to perſwade men to obedience, ſeeing he is the abſolute Sovereign of the world, who may command what he will?

A. 1. To ſhew his condeſcenſion in dealing with man, who is a rational crature, according to the principles of his nature. 2. To teach us that obedience to God is our reaſonable ſervice. 3. To teach us that he would have all his people to ſerve him willingly, and from free choice.

Q. What arguments doth God make uſe of in this preface to enforce obedience to his law?

A. They are three: The firſt is taken from God's ſovereignty over us, I am the Lord; The ſecond from his covenant-relation to us, I am thy God; The third from the redemption he hath wrought for us, "I have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the houſe of bondage."

Q. How it is ſaid, of this preface and the ten commands, that God ſpake all theſe words, Exod. xx. 1. Was it only as he ſpoke the reſt of the bible?

A. No: For other parts of the bible, God ſpoke only mediately by the mouth of his prophets; but theſe words were ſpoke immediately by God himſelf.

Q. How can God be ſaid to ſpeak, who hath no mouth, tongue, or organs of ſpeech?

A. God ſpeaks not as we do; but it is eaſy for his almighty power to form a voice in the air, and to utter articulate words when he pleaſeth.

Q Should it not engage us to a ſpecial regard of theſe words, that God ſpake them himſelf?

A. Yes; for, where God hath a mouth to ſpeak, we ſhould have an ear to hear. Let us carefully hear God when he ſpeaks his laws to us, as we would have God to hear us when we ſpeak in prayer to him.

Q. What force is there in that argument for our obedience, I am the Lord?

A. It doth import, that he is JEHOVAH, the eternal, independent, ſelf-ſufficient, immutable, and almighty Creator, and ſupreme Sovereign, who hath being in and from himſelf, and gives being to all things; and therefore we his creatures and ſubjects owe to him all obedience.

Q. What is the force of that argument, I am thy God?

A. It imports that we have choſen God for our God: and that he hath owned us for his people, and beſtowed peculiar mercies on us: And therefore our covenant intereſt in him ſhould ſweeten all his commands, and ſtrongly engage us to obey them.

Q. Doth not the promiſe to believers, I will be your God, include greater bleſſings in it than any other promiſe in the covenant of grace?

A. Yes: For it hath in it, I'll not only give you pardon, give you heaven; but I'll give you myſelf, a whole Deity, a JEHOVAH; all I am, all I have, all I can do, ſhall be yours. I'll not only be your Friend, your Father, your Huſband; but I will be your God. All the divine attributes are yours, to make you happy; yea, all the Perſons of the glorious Trinity are yours, to contrive, carry on, and accompliſh the work of your ſalvation.

Q. How ſhall we come to get an intereſt in God as our God?

A. We muſt believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and heartily accept of him as our Mediator, who by his death hath made atonement for all who believe in him, yea hath purchaſed for them reconciliation with God, and a covenant-relation to him as their God.

Q. What force is there in that argument (I have brought thee out of the land of Egypt) to engage us to obedience who were never in Egypt ?

A. Tho' we were not in the earthly Egypt ; yet we are all by nature in the ſpiritual Egypt, and under the bondage of the devil and our luſts, which is worſe than Egyptian bondage. And the Iſraelites temporal deliverances from Egypt was typical of our ſpiritual deliverance from ſatan's bondage : ſo that the argument hath the ſame force with us as with the Jews.

Q. Why was the Iſraelites deliverance from Egypt ſo much made uſe of as an argument for their obedience ?

A. Becauſe Egypt was full of groſs idolatry, a plague with which they were in danger of being infected : and there they groaned under cruel bondage ; from which God delivered them in a moſt miraculous manner.

Q. Why ſhould it be reckoned ſo great a mercy to be delivered from places overſpread with idolatry.

A. Becauſe idolatry is a damnable ſin, and brings on great wrath : upon which account, the mercy of our anceſtors deliverance from myſtical Egypt (Rome's idolatry and bondage) ſhould engage us to thankful obedience to God's law, as well as the Iſraelites deliverance did their poſterity.

Q. Are not theſe who are redeemed by Chriſt from the bondage of ſatan and his luſts, ſtrongly obliged to keep his commands ?

A. Yes, Luke i. 74.

Q. Is not ſatan's ſlavery worſe than any other ?

A. Yes ; for other captives groan under their ſlavery, and long for deliverance, but ſatan's ſlaves are content and eaſy ; other tyrants rule only over the bodies of their ſlaves, but ſatan rules over the ſoul and all its faculties.

Q. How may we know if we be redeemed by Chriſt from this bondage ?

A. It will be a good ſign, if the Redeemer be precious to us, particularly in his kingly office ; and if we find the power of indwelling ſin ſo broken in us, that this boſom enemy doth not triumph over us.

QUEST. XLV.

Q. Which is the firſt commandment ?

A. The firſt commandment is, Thou ſhalt have no other gods before me.

QUEST. XLVI.

Q. What is required in the firſt commandment ?

A. The firſt commandment requireth us to know and acknowledge God to be the only true God, and our God ; and to worſhip and glorify him accordingly.

Q. Why doth this and the reſt of the commands ſtill run in the ſingular number, Thou, and not You ?

A. Becauſe God would have every man to notice the directions thereof as particularly as if they were ſpoke to himſelf by name.

Q. How is the firſt command ſaid to require things of us, when it ſeems only to forbid ?

A. Becauſe it is a rule for the right underſtanding of the commands. That where a ſin is forbidden, the contrary duty is commanded ; and, where a duty is commanded the contrary ſin is forbidden : and ſo we find the ſcripture explains the law, Mat. v. 21. 23. Eph. iv. 28. Iſa. lviii. 13. Mat. xv. 4. 5. 6.

Q. How many duties doth the firſt commandment chiefly require ?

A. Four ; 1. To know God. 2. To acknowledge God. 3. To worſhip God. 4. To glorify God.

Q. Doth God expreſly command us to ſtudy to know him ?

A. Yes, 1 Chron. xxviii. 9. And thou, Solomon my ſon, know thou the God of thy father.

Q. Is it not highly dangerous to live without the knowledge of God ?

A. Yes, Jer. x. 25. "Pour out thy fury upon the Heathen that know thee not."

Q. Is not ignorance of God yet more dangerous to theſe who live in a land of light and enjoy the means of knowledge ?

A. Yes, ſeeing they are without all excuſe.

Q. Is it ſufficient to know that there is a God ?

A. No ; we muſt alſo know what God is, and what are his works.

Q. What are theſe things we muſt know of God ?

A. We ſhould ſtudy to know God, 1. In his unity of eſſence. 2. In his Trinity of perſons. 3. In his attributes and perfections. 4. In his works of creation, of providence, and of redemption.

Q. What ſort of knowledge of God is it that we muſt ſeek after ?

A. A literal knowledge of God is not ſufficient ; a comprehenſive knowledge of God is unattainable : but an experimental, practical, ſoul-affecting, humbling, and transforming knowledge of God, is what we ſhould ſeek after, and labour to attain.

Q. Beſides knowing God, are we alſo bound to acknowledge God ?

A. Yes, Deut. xxvi. 17. "Thou haſt avouched the Lord this day to be thy God."

Q. What ſhould we acknowledge concerning God ?

A. We ſhould acknowledge him to be the only living and true God, and that he is the only object of divine worſhip ; we ſhould acknowledge him to be the Creator and Governour of the world, and own our dependence upon him for all things ; and we ſhould acknowledge him as our Lawgiver and Judge, to whom we are accountable for all that we do.

Q. Is it ſufficient to own and acknowledge God to be the true God ?

A. No, unleſs we alſo take him and acknowledge him to be our God, and ſerve him accordingly.

Q. What is imported in acknowledging God as our God ?

A. 1. It imports our renouncing all idols that would rival it with him. 2. Our making choice of God as our portion and chief good, and the God whom we will ſerve and pleaſe above all the world. 3. Our covenant-dedication, ſurrendering, and engaging ourſelves to be the Lord's. 4. Our owning of God, and of his truths and ways before the world, which is called a confeſſing or profeſſing of him before men, Mat. x. 32. John xii. 42. Rom. x. 9. 1 John iv. 15. 1 Tim. ii. 10. and vi. 12.

Q. What is the third duty required in this command ?

A. To worſhip God, Mat. iv. 10. "Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve."

Q. How is God to be worſhipped by us ?

A. Both inwardly and outwardly.

Q. When is it that we worſhip God inwardly ?

A. When we remember him, love him, highly eſteem him, deſire him, delight in him, honour and adore him, fear him, believe him, truſt and hope in him, Mal. iii. 16. Eccl. xii. 1. Deut. vi. 5. Pſal. lxxi. 19. Mal. i. 6. Iſa. xxvi. 4. 8. Pſal. cxxx. 7. Pſal. xxxvii. 4.

Q. How do we worſhip God outwardly?

A. By offering up our prayers and praiſes to God, attending to his word, and partaking of the ſacraments.

Q. What is the fourth duty required in this command?

A. To glorify God.

Q. Is there any difference between worſhipping and glorifying of God?

A. Yes, in regard glorifying of God is of larger ſignification than worſhipping of him, ſeeing it comprehends all obedience to his laws, and hath reſpect to all parts of our converſation. We are bound to glorify God, not only in our religious, but alſo in our civil and natural actions; whether we buy or ſell, eat or drink, or whatſoever we do; we ſhould do all to the glory of God, Pſal. l. 23. 1 Cor. vi. 20. 1 Cor. x. 31.

Q. What is the import of the word accordingly in the anſwer?

A. It imports that we ſhould worſhip and glorify God in ſuch a manner, as to make it appear that we really know him and own him both as the true God and as our God.

Q. Why is worſhipping God and glorifying him joined together?

A. To teach us, that we muſt not only worſhip God devoutly, but muſt alſo walk circumſpectly, and live holy lives in the world.

Q. What if a man worſhip God, and yet live in ſin?

A. His prayers cannot be heard, but will be an abomination to the Lord, Pſal. lxvi. 18. Prov. xxviii. 9.

Q. Who is the worſhipper that will be accepted of God?

A. The man that hath a tender walk, and makes conſcience of his ways, John ix. 31. "We know that God heareth not ſinners; but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth."

Q. Can we be ſaid to glorify God in the ſame ſenſe that God is ſaid to glorify us?

A. No: For our glorifying God is only declarative, but God's glorifying us is effective: We only declare God to be glorious, but God makes us glorious.

Q. How are we to declare God's glory?

A. By making known his glorious excellencies and perfections, and honouring him both with our lips and lives. See more of this before on the firſt queſtion, Page 281.

QUEST. XLVII.

Q. What is forbidden in the firſt commandment?

A. The firſt command forbiddeth the denying, or not worſhipping and glorifying the true God, as God, and our God; and the giving that worſhip and glory to any other which is due to him alone.

Q. What are the chief ſins here forbidden?

A. There are five mentioned in the anſwer; 1. Denying the true God. 2. Not worſhipping him. 3. Not glorifying him. 4. Giving his worſhip to another. 5. Giving his glory to another.

Q. Who are theſe that are guilty of the ſin of denying the true God?

A. 1. Atheiſts, who deny the being of a God. 2. Deiſts and infidels, who deny the truth of the holy ſcriptures, and do not believe what God ſaith in them. 3. Theſe who deny the true Deity of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, or diſown the doctrine of the Trinity; ſuch as Arians, Socinians, Quakers, and others. 4. Theſe who deny the providence of God in governing the world, and aſcribe events to other things.

Q. How many ſorts of Atheiſts are there?

A. Three ſorts; 1. Atheiſts in opinion. 2. Atheiſts in affection. 3. Atheiſts in converſation.

Q. Who are theſe that are Atheiſts in opinion?

A. Theſe who profeſs to believe that there is not a God. Some few have done ſo, and have been put to death for it. This truth of the exiſtence of God having the light of nature and general conſent of all nations to vouch for it, it is not eaſy to imagine how there can be a ſpeculative Atheiſt, or one that hath got the impreſſions of God entirely blotted out, which are naturally ingraven upon man's heart.

Q. Are there any ſuch Atheiſts in hell?

A. Atheiſm is a ſin that cannot have place there, no devil is guilty of it, Jam. ii. 19.

Q. Is not Atheiſm a dreadful ſin?

A. Yes; for it tends to open the flood-gates for all impiety and wickedneſs, and to deſtroy all order and government in the world; for thus a man might cheat, ſteal, rob, murder, and do the vileſt things, and yet not ſin, nor have any thing to fear hereafter.

Q. Who are theſe that are Atheiſts in affection?

A. Theſe who in their hearts wiſh there were no God, as all wicked men ſecretly do, Pſal. xiv. 1.

Q. Why do wicked men wiſh there were no God?

A. That ſo they might be freed from theſe reſtraints, which mar their ſinful pleaſures.

Q. Who are theſe that are Atheiſts in converſation?

A. Practical Atheiſts, or theſe who live as if there were no God, Tit. i. 16. "They profeſs they know God, but in works they deny him."

Q. Are there not many of theſe practical Atheiſts in the world? A. Yes.

Q. Who may be reckoned ſuch?

A. All theſe, 1. Who neglect the worſhip of God. 2. Who live in hypocriſy. 3. Who indulge ſecret ſins. 4. Who mock at the holy ſcriptures or holy perſons. 5. Who never think on death or judgment. 6. Who ſet their hearts wholly upon the world, or upon ſenſual things.

Q. What is the ſecond ſin mentioned in the anſwer?

A. Not worſhipping of God.

Q. Who are theſe who are guilty of this ſin of not worſhipping God?

A. Theſe who do not think of God, do not eſteem him, do not love him, do not believe him, do not honour him, do not fear him, do not humble themſelves before him, do not attend God's ordinances, do not offer prayers or praiſes to God in the public aſſemblies, nor in their families or cloſets.

Q. What is the third ſin forbidden in this command?

A. Not glorifying of God.

Q. Who are theſe that are guilty of this ſin?

A. 1. Theſe who neglect the knowledge of God, and live in ignorance of him. 2. Theſe who forget God, or hate the thoughts of him. 3. Theſe who do not admire and praiſe him, or are unthankful to him. 4. Theſe who deſire the creatures, or delight in objects of ſenſe more than God. 5. Theſe who are profane and ungodly in their lives and converſations.

Q. What is the fourth ſin forbidden in this command?

A. Idolatry, or the giving that worſhip to another which is due to God alone.

Q. How many kinds of idolatry are there?

A. Two kinds, 1. Idolatry that is outward and inviſible. 2. Idolatry that is more ſecret and inviſible.

Q. Who are guilty of the idolatory that is outward and inviſible?

A. 1. The Pagans, who worſhip their idol-gods, their demons and deified heroes, the ſun, the moon, the ſtars, the fire, ſeveral kinds of beaſts, &c. 2. The Papiſts, who worſhip other gods beſides the true God: For they deify ſeveral things both in heaven and earth, to which they pay religious worſhip and homage.

Q. What are theſe other gods in heaven which the Papiſts do worſhip?

A. They worſhip angels, the Virgin Mary, and ſaints departed.

Q. What are theſe other gods on earth which they worſhip?

A. They worſhip the Pope, the bread in the ſacrament, the ſign of the croſs, the images and relicks of ſaints.

Q. How doth it appear that the Papiſts give religious honour and worſhip to theſe things?

A. Both by their practice, and by their books: for they build churches, erect altars, and inſtitute holydays in honour of them; they burn incenſe, make and pay vows to them; they bow their knees and pray to them; they ſeek bleſſings from them, and make them their hope and truſt. As for inſtance, they adore the wood of the croſs, ſaying, O crux ave, ſpes unica, &c. that is, O holy croſs, our only hope and truſt, increaſe to the godly their righteouſneſs, and give unto ſinners grace and remiſſion of their ſins.

Q. But why may we not worſhip ſaints and angels?

A. It is idolatry to worſhip creatures; for men to pray to them, is to aſcribe divine honours, and perfections to them, as omniſcienee and omnipotence. God forbids this, as a giving of his glory to another; and tells us, that the ſaints in heaven do not know our wants, for proof of which, ſee Mat. iv. 10. Acts x. 25, 26. Rev. xix. 10. Iſa. xlii. 8. Iſa. lxiii. 16. And if it be idolatry to worſhip ſaints in heaven, far more is it to worſhip the bones, teeth, or relicks of ſaints on earth, as Papiſts do. To avoid this, God buried the body of Moſes ſecretly, that none might worſhip his body.

Q. Is there not idolatry more ſecret and inviſible, which others are guilty of beſides Pagans and Papiſts?

A. Yes; all carnal and unregenerate perſons are guilty of it, by putting the creature in room of the Creator, loving it and depending on it more than God. For whatever thing it be that hath moſt of our love, or of our truſt, or of our fear and dread, or hath moſt of our thoughts, or of our time and ſervice, that is really our god; ſeeing it is put in God's room, and hath the honour and glory which is only due to him.

Q. What are thoſe idols which men do commonly ſet up in God's room?

A. 1. Self is the great idol which men generally adore by ſeeking themſelves in all they do: And this idol appears in many different ſhapes, as ſelf-profit, ſelf-wiſdom, ſelf-righteouſneſs, ſelf-ability, ſelf-eaſe, ſelf-credit and applauſe. 2. The world is the great clay idol which worldly men adore; hence covetous men are called idolaters, and covetouſneſs idolatry. 3. The belly is the god of drunkards and gluttons, Phil. iii. 19. 4. Children and relations are the idols of many. 5. Great men or ſuperiors are put in the room of God, when we truſt in the arm of fleſh, or make them Lords of our faith and conſcience. 6. The devil is called the God of this world. 2 Cor. iv 4. So that we may hence ſee how ſadly idolatry abounds even among profeſſed proteſtants, who have renounced the Romiſh idolatry.

Q. In what reſpect is the devil called the God of this world?

A. Becauſe he is put in the room of the true God by the moſt part of the world. Why? in the firſt place we read and hear of many of the Indians who directly worſhip him, and he appears to them in a bodily ſhape: Beſides, it is at his inſtigation that the infidel world run into all manner of wickedneſs. Again, how much is he adored, honoured and ſerved among profeſſed Chriſtians! By witches who enter into compact with the devil, and give up themſelves to him; by theſe who conſult with witches and charmers, and theſe who uſe his ſpells and charms; by theſe who in their common diſcourſe pray to the devil, bidding him take them, or their neighbours; and by theſe who hearken to the devil's temptations more than God's counſels.

Q. What is the fifth ſin forbidden in the firſt command?

A. The giving of the glory, which is due to God to another.

Q. Who are guilty of this ſin?

A. Not only theſe who give divine worſhip to creatures, as above; but alſo theſe who aſcribe events, not to God's providence, but to luck or chance, or to ſecond cauſes only; and theſe who aſcribe the praiſe of any good thing they receive, and their ſucceſs in any buſineſs, to themſelves and their own induſtry, to creatures, or to fortune; and likewiſe theſe who have mens perſons in too great admiration, they are chargeable with this ſin of giving God's glory to others, 1 Sam. vi. 9. Deut. viii. 17. Dan. iv. 30. Heb. i. 16. Acts xii. 22, 23. Jude 16.

QUEST. XLVIII.

Q. What are we ſpecially taught by theſe words (Before me) in the firſt commandment.

A. Theſe words (Before me) in the firſt commandment, teach us, that God, who ſeeth all things, taketh notice of, and is much diſpleaſed with the ſin of having any other god.

Q. What is the argument in this command to diſwade or reſtrain us from the ſin of idolatry?

A. The conſideration of God's omniſcience, that the ſin is committed before him, or in his ſight, who exceedingly hates and abhors it.

Q. How doth it appear that God doth ſee all things?

A. In regard that he is preſent in all places, and infinite in knowledge, Pſal cxxxix. 7, 8, &c. Jer. xxiii. 24. Pſal. cxlvii. 5.

Q. What are theſe things which God doth ſee?

A. He ſeeth all paſt things, all preſent things, all future things, and all poſſible things: He ſees all his creatures, all their thoughts, all their words, and all their actions.

Q. Doth God take ſpecial notice of the ſin of idolatry above other ſins? A. Yes

Q. How doth that appear?

A. By the many tokens of diſpleaſure which God evidenced againſt it, both in threatening and puniſhing men for it, Deut. xxix. 24, 25, &c.

Q. Why is God ſo much diſpleaſed with the ſin of idolatry?

A. Becauſe God, who is jealous of his own glory, cannot but take it as a great indignity to ſee another put in his room, and ſet upon his throne, and that in his very ſight and preſence.

Q. Is not the attribute of God's omniſciency much affronted by the world?

A. Yes; namely, by their idolatry, hypocriſy and ſecret wickedneſs.

Q. Ought not God's omniſcience to be a powerful check to all ſins? A. Yes.

QUEST. XLIX.

Q. Which is the ſecond commandment?

A. The ſecond commandment is, Thou ſhalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeneſs of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: Thou ſhalt not bow down thyſelf to them nor ſerve them: For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, viſiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me: And ſhewing mercy to thouſands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

QUEST. L.

Q. What is required in the ſecond commandment?

A. The ſecond commandment requireth the receiving, obſerving, and keeping pure and intire, all ſuch religious worſhip and ordinances as God hath appointed in his word.

Q. Is the worſhip required, and idolatry forbidden in the ſecond commandment the ſame with that in the firſt commandment?

A. No: For the firſt command directs us as to the right object of worſhip; but the ſecond command directs us as to the right way and means of worſhip; The firſt forbids the worſhipping of any falſe god; The ſecond forbids the worſhipping of the true God in a falſe way or by any means but what he himſelf appoints.

Q. Hath God appointed all that religious worſhip, and all theſe means and ordinances, in and by which only he will be ſerved and worſhipped?

A. Yes.

Q. Where do we find theſe?

A. In his word.

Q. What are theſe ordinances and means of divine worſhip appointed us?

A. 1ſt, There is prayer in public, in private, and ſecret, Luke i. 10. Jer. x. 25. Mat. vi. 6.——2dly, There is thankſgiving and ſinging of Pſalms, Eph. v. 20. Iſa. lii. 8. Jam. v. 13.——3dly, There is the reading, preaching and hearing of the word, Acts v. 21. 2 Tim. iv. 2. Acts x. 33.——4thly, The adminiſtration and partaking of the ſacraments of baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper, Mat. xxvii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 23, 24, &c.——5thly, There is faſting, Luke v. 35.——6thly, Swearing by the name of the Lord when lawfully called, Deut. vi. 13.——7thly, Vowing to the Lord, Pſal. lxxvi. 11.——8thly, Inſtructing of children and ſervants, Gen. x. 18, &c.

Q. What doth God require of us concerning all theſe ordinances?

A. That we ſhould receive them, obſerve them, and keep them pure and intire.

Q. What is it to receive and obſerve them?

A. It is to approve them, attend upon them, and continue ſtedfaſtly in the practice of them.

Q. What is it to keep theſe ordinances pure and intire?

A. It is to uſe our beſt endeavours to preſerve them free from all corruption or mixture of human inventions; and to keep them ſo as nothing be added to them, nor taken away from them.

QUEST. LI.

Q. What is forbidden in the ſecond commandment?

A. The ſecond commandment forbiddeth the worſhipping of God by images, or any other way not appointed in his word.

Q. What is the chief ſin forbidden in this command?

A. Idolatry, or the worſhipping of the true God by images.

Q. What do you mean by an image?

A. The picture, ſhape, or likeneſs of any creature in heaven, on earth, or in the ſea.

Q. When is a perſon guilty of worſhipping God by images?

A. 1ſt, When he frames or takes any material picture or ſimilitude, and ſets it before him in worſhip; as the Papiſts do, who paint God the Father under the likeneſs of an old man; and Jeſus Chriſt in the likeneſs of a young man, or of a lamb; and the Holy Ghoſt by the figure of a dove; which is plainly to "change the glory of God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds and four-footed beaſts;" which the apoſtle condemns, Rom. i. 23.—2dly, A perſon is guilty of it, when he hath any carnal imagination or repreſentation of God in his mind while worſhipping him, as if he was like to a man or any creature.

Q. May not an image or picture, to look upon in time of prayer, be ſome help to us in devotion, as Papiſts ſay?

A. No; inſtead of a help, it is a great hinderance to it.

Q. How is it a hinderance?

A. In regard it promotes carnal and low thoughts of God, who is a glorious ſpirit, and infinitely exalted above all things viſible or earthly. It is as great a diſhonour and diſparagement to the majeſty of God to repreſent him by a dead image of a creature, as it would be to repreſent a king by the picture of a frog.

Q. But, may we not have ſuch images of God or of the Perſons of the Trinity by us, if we do not worſhip them?

A. No; for it is an abomination which God expreſſly forbids, Deut. iv. 15, 16. 'Take ye good heed to yourſelves (for ye ſaw no manner of ſimilitude on the day that the Lord ſpake to you in Horeb out of midſt the of the fire) leſt ye corrupt yourſelves, and make you a graven image, the ſimilitude of any figure, &c.' And further it is impoſſible to frame an image of him that is infinite, ſpiritual and inviſible; and therefore he frequently aſks the queſtion, as in Iſa. xl. 18. 25. and xlvi 5. To whom will ye liken God? Surely no ſhape of any creature, no dead image, can be a fit repreſentation of the living God.

Q. May we not have a picture of Jeſus Chriſt, who is truly a man?

A. No; becauſe, 1. His divine nature, which makes him to be God, cannot be pictured at all. 2. He left no picture of his body when he left the earth, nor any account of his features, as it were on purpoſe to diſcourage any to draw his picture. 3. His body, as now glorified, cannot be repreſented by any artiſt whatſomever; ſo that the pictures now made of him muſt be greatly debaſing of his glorious perſon. 4. If any ſuch picture be deſigned to excite devotion, it is a breach of this command, which forbids all worſhipping of God by images.

Q. Why do Papiſts leave the ſecond command out of their catechiſm and public offices?

A. Becauſe it ſo expreſly condemns their images, crucifixes and idolatrous practices.

Q. Will it free them from idolatry to ſay they only worſhip God or Chriſt before or by them, but not the images themſelves?

A. No; for the command forbids even bowing or kneeling before them. And, if this ſhift could excuſe the Papiſts, it had alſo excuſed the Iſraelites in worſhipping the golden calf; for they had it to ſay that they intended to worſhip Jehovah before the calf, Exod. xxxii. 4, 5.

Q. Is there any other ſin forbidden in the ſecond command beſides idolatry, or the worſhipping of God by images?

A. Yes; namely, the ſin of ſuperſtition or will-worſhip.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Mens preſuming to worſhip God by means of their own deviſing, adding human inventions to God's inſtitutions, or contriving other ways to ſerve and worſhip God than what he hath appointed or warranted in his word.

Q. Who are guilty of this ſin?

A. All theſe who add new ſacraments to the two of Chriſt's inſtitution, or theſe who add the ſign of the croſs to baptiſm, the poſture of kneeling to the Lord's ſupper, the keeping of holy-days to the Lord's day, playing with organs to ſinging with the voice, reading of a book to prayer: Or they who erect altars, pictures or croſſes in places of worſhip, and bow unto them, or bow to the eaſt, and at the name of Jeſus, or the like. All theſe are ſuperſtitious inventions in God's worſhip, and human additions to God's inſtitutions, without any warrant in his word, and therefore againſt the ſecond command.

Q. Why may not wiſe, holy and learned men add ſome ſuch things for beautifying the worſhip of God?

A. 1ſt, Becauſe an infinitely holy and wiſe God who hath unqueſtionable right to appoint the means and manner of his own worſhip, hath expreſly forbidden men to add any thing to the directions he hath given concerning the ſame, Deut. xii. 30, 31, 32.——2dly, He ſharply cenſures all ſuch additions, by calling them will-worſhip and vain worſhip, and ſaying, they had only a ſhew or pretence of wiſdom in them, Col. ii. 23, Mat. xv. 9. Nay, he looks upon it as a preſumptuous attempt to rival it with him, for men to add their own inventions to his inſtitutions; and calls it a ſetting of their threſholds by his threſhold, and their poſts by his poſts, Ezek. xliii. 8. and even ſaith it is a going a-whoring with their inventions, Pſal. cvi. 39.

Q. Why would God cenſure things which are ſo well deſigned for his glory, and beautifying his worſhip?

A. 1ſt, Becauſe he accounts it great pride and preſumption in men to take upon them to mend the ordinances of God as if they were wiſer than he. 2dly, Inſtead of beautifying his worſhip thereby, they rather disfigure it; for God's worſhip is moſt beautiful in its own native ſimplicity and luſtre: For to paint glaſs doth darken its light, to gild a diamond mars its ſparkling rays. 3dly, It is only the preſence and bleſſing of God that can make ordinances profitable to us; but God hath no where promiſed his bleſſing to mens inventions, but allenarly to his own inſtitutions, Mat. xxviii. 20.

Q. Had not the Jews ſeveral ſignificant ceremonies in their worſhip under the law?

A. Yes; but theſe were appointed by God's authority, as they were aboliſhed again by it at Chriſt's coming, and a plain ſimple way of worſhip inſtituted under the goſpel. And it is nowiſe likely that God would remove the ceremonies of his own inſtitution, merely to make way for mens inventing others in their room.

Q. May not the church appoint ſome rites or ceremonies for ſake of decency and order, by virtue of that command, 1 Cor. xiv. 40.

A. The text doth not warrant the church to add new parts to the worſhip of God, as ſignificant ceremonies would be, but only to keep and obſerve the ordinances as God has delivered them to us, with decency and order; and to take care that there be no undecency or diſorder in the worſhip of God, namely, as to the circumſtances of time and place and the like, which the command of God appointing the worſhip itſelf doth virtually include, ſeeing without ſuch circumſtances it cannot be performed.

Q. Is there any other ſin forbidden by the ſecond commandment?

A. Yes; ſuch as the countenancing, approving, or promoting of any falſe religion or ſuperſtitious worſhip; the neglecting, contemning, hindering or oppoſing of the true worſhip of God, or any of his ordinances; the reproaching or perſecuting theſe who worſhip God according to his word.

QUEST. LII.

Q. What are the reaſons annexed to the ſecond commandment?

Q. The reaſons annexed to the ſecond commandment are, God's ſovereignty over us, his propriety in us, and the zeal he hath to his own worſhip.

Q. What mean you by a reaſon annexed to a command?

A. An argument joined to it, to enforce the keeping of it.

Q. How many ſuch reaſons are annexed to this command?

A. Three; 1. God's ſovereignty over us. 2. God's propriety in us. 3. God's zeal for his own worſhip.

Q. What mean you by God's ſovereignty over us?

A. His abſolute power and authority over us, ſo that he may do with us as he pleaſeth.

Q. In what words of the command is this reaſon contained.

Q. In theſe, I the Lord.

Q. What do theſe words import ?

A. That he is the ſovereign Lord over us, and has a right to make what laws he pleaſes about his own worſhip ; and that we, as God's ſubjects are bound to obſerve the laws, and to worſhip him no other way.

A. In what words is the ſecond reaſon contained ?

A. In theſe words, Thy God, I the Lord thy God.

Q. What do theſe words import ?

A. That God hath a propriety or ſpecial intereſt in us, we belong to him by creation, redemption, or profeſſion ; and therefore we ought to keep cloſe to our God and his inſtitutions, and beware of idolatry and ſuperſtition in worſhip which tend to eſtrange the heart from God, Pſal. cvi. 19. 21.

Q. In what words of the command is the third reaſon contained ?

A. In theſe, I am a jealous God.

Q. What do theſe words import ?

A. That God hath a great jealouſy, zeal, or tender concern for his own worſhip, and is highly diſpleaſed with thoſe who corrupt it, by bringing mens inventions into it, Exod. xxxiv. 14. Pſal. cvi. 29.

Q. Wherein doth God ſhew his zeal and jealouſy for his own worſhip ?

A. In threatening to puniſh them as haters of God, who break this command, to the third and fourth generation ; and in ſhowing mercy to thouſands of them that love him, and keep his law.

Q. Is it juſt with God to puniſh children for the ſins of their parents ?

A. Yes, if the children go on in their parents ſins ; but if they forſake them, God will not puniſh them for them, Ezek. xviii. 14. 17.

Q. Doth not God eſteem any perſons as lovers of him, but ſuch as keep his commandments ?

A. No, John xiv. 21.

Q. Do not all theſe reaſons oblige us to the greateſt caution that we do not alter nor add to divine ordinances and inſtitutions of worſhip ? A. Yes.

Q. Have theſe who ſuffer for non-conformity to ſuch additions, ſufficient warrant for their ſufferings ?

A. Yes ; as it is evident from Deut. xii. 32. compared with Deut. iv. 2. Ye ſhall not add unto the word which I command you.

QUEST. LIII.

Q. Which is the third commandment ?

A. The third commandment is, Thou ſhalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain : For the Lord will not hold him guiltleſs that taketh his name in vain.

QUEST. LIV.

Q. What is required in the third commandment ?

A. The third commandment requireth the holy and reverend uſe of God's names, titles, attributes, ordinances, word, and works.

Q. In what manner muſt we uſe God's name ?

A. In a holy and reverend manner ; that is, with a humble and awful regard to God's infinite greatneſs and excellencies.

Q. What is meant by the name of God here ?

A. Any thing that is commonly aſcribed to God, and by which God makes himſelf known to us, as a man is known to us by his name.

Q. What are theſe things whereby God makes himſelf known to us ?

A. They are ſix, to wit, God's names, his titles, his attributes, his ordinances, his word, and his works.

Q. What are the names given to him which we muſt reverently uſe ?

A. They are ſuch as Jehovah, Lord, God, Jah, I Am, the Father, the Son, Jeſus Chriſt, the Holy Ghoſt, the Spirit.

Q. What are the titles of God, which we muſt uſe with reverence ?

A. They are his uſual deſignations taken from ſome of his peculiar excellencies, ſuch as, the Lord of Hoſts, King of kings, Lord of lords, Father of lights, Holy One of Iſrael, Creator of the ends of the earth, Preſerver of men, and the like.

Q. What are the attributes of God which we ſhould uſe reverently ?

A. The eſſential perfections, whereby his nature is deſcribed to us, and he is diſtinguiſhed from all his creatures, ſuch as Omnipotence, Omnipreſence, Eternity, Immutability, Infinite Wiſdom, Infinite Holineſs, Goodneſs, Faithfulneſs, Mercy, &c.

Q. Why are theſe called God's attributes ?

A. Becauſe God doth claim them to himſelf, excluſive of all others.

Q. What are the ordinances of God, which we muſt uſe reverently ?

A. The ſacraments, prayer, praiſe, preaching, oaths, vows, lots, &c.

Q. What is meant by God's word in the anſwer ?

A. Not his eſſential word, but his written word, or the Bible.

Q. What is meant by God's works ?

A. The works of Creation, of Providence, and of Redemption.

Q. When may it be ſaid that the names, titles, and attributes of God are uſed by us in a holy and reverend manner ?

A. When we entertain awful, admiring, and loving thoughts of them in our hearts, and mention them with gravity, reſpect, and tenderneſs with our lips.

Q. When do we make uſe of God's ordinances in a holy and reverend manner ?

A. When we make conſcience of attending upon them, ſeek to have a humble reverential frame of heart in all our approaches to God, and earneſtly deſire communion with God in every ordinance of his.

Q. When do we uſe God's word in a holy and reverend way ?

A. When we read it with ſeriouſneſs, attend to the majeſty of God as ſpeaking therein to us, and endeavour to yield preſent obedience to his holy will when revealed to us.

Q. When do we uſe God's works in a holy and reverend way ?

A. When we contemplate God's glory in his works of creation, and have an awful regard to his diſpenſations of providence, ſubmitting patiently to his corrections for ſin, and praiſing him for all his mercies, and eſpecially for Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour.

QUEST. LV.

Q. What is forbidden in the third commandment?

A. The third commandment forbiddeth all profaning or abuſing of any thing whereby God maketh himſelf known.

Q. When do we take God's name in vain?

A. When we uſe it irreverently, ſuperſtitiouſly, or profanely; or when we abuſe any thing whereby he makes himſelf known to us, ſuch as his names, titles, attributes, ordinances, &c.

Q. How is it that people are guilty of profaning or abuſing of God's names, titles or attributes?

A. Many ways; as, 1. By ſwearing falſly when called to it before a judge. 2. By curſing or ſwearing profanely in common diſcourſe. 3. By blaſphemy, or ſpeaking reproachfully of God. 4. By uſing the name of God in charms. 5. By offering prayers or praiſes to God with formal or careleſs minds. 6. By uſing God's name irreverently in common diſcourſe, crying without any awe, O Lord, O God, God help me, bleſs me, or the like. 7. By repeating the oaths of others without concern for them. 8. By raſh appeals to God, &c.

Q. Is it lawful to ſwear by the name of God when called to it by authority?

A. Yes, if what we ſwear be right and true, and if we have an awful ſenſe of God upon our hearts when we do it, Deut. vi. 13. Heb. vi. 16.

Q. Is it lawful for a man to ſwear by his ſoul, conſcience, faith, or the like?

A. No; for theſe being creatures, to ſwear by them is idolatry, or a putting of them in God's room, by giving them the worſhip and attributes which belong to him.

Q. What is the evil or ſin of profane ſwearing and curſing?

A. 1ſt, It is againſt God's command both here and in other texts, as Mat. v. 34. Rom. xii. 14.——2dly, It is a raſh way of appealing to the great Judge of heaven upon every trifling occaſion, which God doth look on as a horrid baffling of his name.—3dly, It is a ſad evidence of a graceleſs and profane heart: hence the Lord makes it a diſtinguiſhing character of the wicked and the righteous Eccl. ix. 2. He that ſweareth, and he that feareth an oath.

Q. Doth God look upon profane ſwearers as his enemies?

A. Yes; as in Pſalm cxxxix. 20. 'Thine enemies take thy name in vain.'

Q. What is the danger of profane or falſe ſwearing?

A. The Lord will deal with ſwearers as his enemies, by ſending his curſe into their houſes, Zech. v. 3. 4. and purſuing them with his judgments both here and hereafter: For with an awful voice from mount Sinai hath he declared, 'The Lord will not hold him guiltleſs that taketh his name in vain.'

Q. When are people guilty of profaning or abuſing God's ordinances?

A. 1. When they attend them hypocritically, or with dead and wandering hearts. 2. When they behave irreverently or indecently in the time of them, by talking, laughing, or ſleeping.

A. May lots be uſed in plays and games as cards or dice?

A. No; for lots being an appeal to God, for deciding things which cannot otherwiſe be determined, ought to be gone about with reverence, Prov. xvi. 33. & xviii. 18. Acts i. 26.

Q. How do men profane or abuſe God's word?

A. By profane jeſting upon it, or by perverting it to ſupport error or ſinful practices.

Q. How do men profane or abuſe God's works?

A. By deſpiſing God's workmanſhip, by uſing his creatures in exceſs to the pampering of their luſts, by impatience under afflictions, and unthankfulneſs for mercies.

QUEST. LVI.

Q. What is the reaſon annexed to the third commandment?

A. The reaſon annexed to the third commandment is, That however the breakers of this commandment may eſcape puniſhment from men, yet the Lord our God will not ſuffer them to eſcape his righteous judgment.

Q. What is the argument for enforcing this commandment?

A. It is contained in that dreadful threatening, 'For the Lord will not hold him guiltleſs that taketh his name in vain.'

Q. What is the import of that threatening?

A. It imports, That, tho' men ſhould ſuffer ſwearers and ſuch profane perſons to paſs, God will not let them eſcape without puniſhment, if they do not repent.

Q. How come the breakers of this commandment to paſs without puniſhment from men?

A. Partly becauſe human laws cannot extend to all profanations of God's name, and partly becauſe many of theſe who ſhould execute the laws againſt the profaners of God's name, are either guilty of the ſame or like ſins themſelves, or they are little concerned for God's glory.

Q. Tho' men let them paſs, will God let them go unpuniſhed?

A. No: For tho' he do not always puniſh them in this life with remarkable ſtrokes, yet he will do it in his own time; For he ſays, 'He will not hold him guiltleſs.'

Q. Will he keep an exact account of the ſins of the breakers of this commandment?

A. Yes; for he is much concerned for the glory of his name.

Q. When is it that God doth puniſh the breakers of this command?

A. Sometimes he inflicts judgment upon them in this life, according to Deut. xxviii. 58, 59. Zech. v. 3. 4. and theſe plagues are ſometimes outward, and ſometimes inward. But however they may eſcape temporal judgments, there are eternal judgments abiding them, which they cannot eſcape. Rom. ii. 3, 4, 5, 6.

Q. Is it not great folly to venture to break God's law, becauſe of his patience in forbearing to execute his judgments preſently againſt ſinners?

A. Yes.

QUEST. LVII.

Q. Which is the fourth commandment?

A. The fourth commandment is, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; Six days ſhalt thou labour and do all thy works: But the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: In it thou ſhalt not do any work, thou nor thy ſon, nor thy daughter, thy man ſervant, nor thy maid ſervant, nor thy cattle, nor thy ſtranger that is within thy gates. For in ſix days the Lord made heaven and earth, the ſea, and all that in them is, and reſted the ſeventh day: Wherefore the Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it.

QUEST. LVIII.

Q. What is required in the fourth commandment?

A. The fourth commandment requireth the keeping holy to God ſuch ſet times as he hath appointed in his word, expreſly one whole day in ſeven, to be a holy Sabbath to himſelf.

Q. What mean you by a Sabbath-day?

A. A day of holy reſt, wherein men are to ceaſe from worldly buſineſs, to attend upon the worſhip of God.

Q. How often is this day for the Sabbath to recur?

A. It is to be every ſeventh day, or ſtill one day after ſix days labour.

Q. Is this fourth commandment ceremonial and temporary, binding only upon the Jews before Chriſt's coming?

A. No; it is a command moral and perpetual, binding upon all men, Jews and Gentiles, to the end of the world.

Q. How do you prove the morality and perpetuity of this command?

A. 1. From its being firſt appointed in paradiſe. 2. From its being written by the finger of God upon ſtone, and put into the ark with the other nine commands, which was not done with any ceremonial precept. 3. The reaſons and arguments made uſe of to enforce this command are moral and perpetual. 4. The Gentiles and ſtrangers, who were not under the ceremonial law, were bound to keep the Sabbath as well as the Jews, Iſa. lvi. 4, 6. 5. Both the Old Teſtament Prophets, and Jeſus Chriſt, do ſpeak of the keeping of the Sabbath as a duty in force under New Teſtament times, when the ceremonial law was to be aboliſhed, Iſa. lvi. 1, 2. Mat. xxiv. 20. 6. The conſcience of men do ſtill challenge them moſt ſeverely from breaking of this command, and God doth ſtill purſue the breakers of it with his judgments.

Q. Whether is the fourth command authoriſed by the light of nature and ſound reaſon, as the other nine are, or only by expreſs revelation and a poſitive law?

A. It is authoriſed by both: For the light of nature doth require that a due part of our time be allotted for the public worſhip of God, which ſhould frequently recur; and that this time ſhould be the ſame over all, that ſo one man's buſineſs may not interfere with another man's devotions. Now, the Author of nature, who beſt knows what portion of time is moſt ſuitable to the exigencies both of our bodies and ſouls, our preſent and future ſtate, hath by expreſs revelation wiſely determined it to be the ſeventh part of our time.

Q. Doth not God ſhew ſpecial regard to this command, by putting ſeveral marks of honour and reſpect upon it above the reſt?

A. Yes: For, 1. As it is placed in the firſt table, ſo it is larger, and enforced with more arguments than any of the reſt. 2. It is delivered both poſitively and negatively (which no other of the ten is) for it is not only ſaid Keep holy the Sabbath, but alſo, In it thou ſhalt do no manner of works. 3. It hath a ſolemn memento prefixed to it, which the reſt have not, Remember to keep holy the Sabbath; q. d. See that ye remember this command; forget what ye will, forget not this. 4. It is placed in the midſt of the decalogue, as the heart in the body, for enlivening the ſeveral parts of it; it is ſet in the cloſe of the firſt table, and immediately before the ſecond, to ſhew that the keeping of both tables doth greatly depend upon the obſerving of this command.

Q. For what ſpecial ends hath God appointed a Sabbath to the world?

A. 1. For his own glory, and for the converſion of ſinners to himſelf, by the preaching of the word on that day. 2. For promoting ſpiritually and heavenly mindedneſs in us. He well knew that carnal things would be apt to dull our affections, and make us forget God and heaven; and therefore he thought fit to recal us every week from ſenſual objects to mind divine things by enjoining us to keep the Sabbath, which is a lively emblem of heaven, where the ſaints continually adore, praiſe and enjoy communion with God, without any mixture of worldly buſineſs.

Q. How much of the day appointed for the Sabbath is to be kept holy to the Lord?

A. One whole day in ſeven; a whole natural day, conſiſting of twenty four hours, commencing from midnight to midnight, ought to be dedicated unto the Lord, ſeeing he claims a ſeventh part of our time. It is true, time for eating and ſleeping muſt be allowed upon the Sabbath as well as on other days, being the works of neceſſity, ſeeing without theſe we cannot perform the duties of the Sabbath.

Q. Is it not ſinful for men to encroach upon this day for their own work?

A. Yes: As it was ſinful in Ananias and Sapphira to halve their dedicated goods, and give but a part to the Lord; ſo it is in us to halve it with God in reſpect of his holy day.

Q. Should not every day be a Sabbath to a Chriſtian?

A. Tho' Chriſtians ſhould ſerve God every day, yet they cannot make every day a Sabbath for the public worſhip of God; becauſe God calls us to other duties relating to ſecular affairs, which are inconſiſtent with the work of the Sabbath. And tho' we are bound to be holy and religious at all times, yet we are enjoined to expreſs our religion in outward acts of worſhip more at ſome times than others.

Q. To whom is the fourth command, and the charge of keeping the Sabbath holy more eſpecially directed.

A. To maſters of families and other ſuperiors, as the command itſelf bears, under which ſurely magiſtrates are included; for theſe words, within thy gates, may be underſtood of the magiſtrates dominions, and particularly of city-gates, and theſe who dwell within them, Neh. xiii. 15, 19. Jer. xvii. 24, 25, &c.

Q. Why is this command more eſpecially directed to them?

A. Becauſe God would have them not only to keep it themſelves, but to overſee the keeping of it by all that are under their authority, as Nehemiah did, Neh. xiii. 15, 16, &c.

Q. Why doth the Lord prefix the word remember to this command?

A. 1. To teſtify his ſpecial regard unto it, as being a fence to the other commands, and a help to the keeping of them all. 2. Becauſe he foreſaw that ſatan and his inſtruments would ſeek to extinguiſh the memory of the Sabbath, if they could; and men of themſelves would be ready to forget the duties of it, ſeeing nature's light doth not enforce them ſo ſtrongly as ſome others. 3. Becauſe he would have us much to think upon his works of creation and redemption, the compend of all religion, which this command brings to our view. 4. Becauſe he would have us to remember the Sabbath before it come, ſo as to prepare ourſelves for the keeping of it when it doth come.

Q. What reaſon is there for preparing for the Sabbath before hand?

A. 1. Becauſe we are naturally carnal and unfit for ſpiritual work; and being involved in worldly buſineſs through the week, ſome previous care is needful to abſtract our thoughts from earthly things, in order to fit us for Sabbath employments and enjoyments. 2. Becauſe God calls us to make near and ſolemn approach to him, who is infinitely holy, in the ordinances of the Sabbath; and this requires preparation, according to the Pſalmiſt's example, Pſal. xxvi. 6. I will waſh mine hands in innocency: So will I compaſs thine altar, O Lord. 3. It was the practice of God's ancient people to prepare for the Sabbath upon the foregoing day, which therefore was called the day of preparation, Luke xxiii. 54.

Q. What ought we to do by way of preparation for the Sabbath before it come?

A. 1. Let us remember the great end and deſign of the Sabbath, ſo as to inſtruct theſe committed to our charge about it; and to break off from worldly buſineſs, ſo as we may have a time to think of the work of the approaching day; and to get the guilt of the bygone week removed, that we may have a reconciled God to meet with upon his own day. 2. Let us order all our worldly affairs before-hand with ſuch prudence and foreſight, that the buſineſs of the Sabbath may not be interrupted thereby.

Q. Hath God appointed any other ſet times to be kept holy to the Lord beſides the Sabbath?

A. None but the Jewiſh feſtivals or ceremonial Sabbaths, which being only ſhadows of things to come, they expired with Chriſt's coming; but the command for the weekly Sabbath being moral, it continues ſtill in force, Col. ii. 16, 17. Gal. iv. 9, 10, 11. 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2.

Q. Are we bound to keep the holy-days obſerved by others, ſuch as days for Chriſt's birth, paſſion and aſcenſion: days dedicate to angels, as Michaelmas, to the Virgin Mary, as Candlemas, beſides many others dedicate to the apoſtles and other ſaints?

A. Though it be pretended that theſe days ſerve to promote piety and devotion, yet we have no warrant from God to obſerve any of them; nay, it appears to be unlawful to do it: For, 1ſt, God doth quarrel men for uſing any device of their own for promoting his ſervice or worſhip, without having his command or warrant for it, as in Deut. xii. 32. Iſa. i. 12. Jer. vii. 30. 2dly, The apoſtle Paul doth expreſsly condemn the Galatians for obſerving ſuch holy-days, Gal. iv. 10, 11. 3dly, It is a diſparaging of the Lord's day which God hath appointed, and an uſurping of his legiſlative power, for men to ſet days of their appointing on a level with his day, as the inſtitutors do, by hindering people to labour thereupon. 4thly, It is an idolatrous practice to conſecrate days to the honour of ſaints and angels, for commemorating their acts, and publiſhing their praiſe; ſuch honour and worſhip being due to God alone.

Q. Were not theſe days appointed by the ancient church, and authoriſed by great and holy men?

A. It was will-worſhip in them, ſeeing they had no power to inſtitute holy days: For, 1ſt, Under the law, when ceremonies and feſtivals were in uſe, the church appointed none of them, but God himſelf. 2dly, We read nothing of the apoſtles appointing or obſerving ſuch holy-days; not a word of their conſecrating a day for Chriſt's birth, his paſſion, or aſcenſion; nor a day to Stephen the protomartyr, nor to James, whom Herod killed with the ſword. We read of the apoſtles obſerving the Lord's day and keeping it holy, but not of any other. 3dly, Theſe other days are left unrecorded and uncertain, and ſo are concealed like the body of Moſes, that men might not be tempted to abuſe them to ſuperſtition. 4thly, Theſe days have not the divine bleſſing upon them; for they are the occaſions of much looſeneſs and immorality. 5thly, Tho' the obſerving of theſe days had been indifferent or lawful at firſt, yet the defiling of them with ſuperſtition and intemperance ſhould make all forbear them.

Q. May not the church appoint days for faſting and thankſgiving?

A. Yes, if there be be juſt occaſion for them; and the church is warranted ſo to do, both by ſcripture precepts and examples, Joel i. 14. Joel ii. 15. Ezra viii. 21. Neh. xii. 27, &c. Dan. ix. 3. And that ſuch days are to be continued in goſpel-times, is plain from Zech. xii. 11, 12, &c. Mat. ix. 15. Acts xiii. 2, 3. Acts xiv. 23. 1 Cor. vii. 5. 2 Cor. xi. 27. Moreover, it is God who by his providence doth call us to faſting or thankſgiving; the church only doth name the days convenient for theſe purpoſes.

QUEST. LIX.

Q. Which day of the ſeven hath God appointed to be the weekly Sabbath?

A. From the beginning of the world to the reſurrection of Chriſt, God appointed the ſeventh day of the week to be the weekly Sabbath, and the firſt day of the week ever ſince to continue to the end of the world, which is the Chriſtian Sabbath.

Q. Was the Sabbath ever changed from one day of the week to another?

A. Yes, it was changed from the laſt day of the week to the firſt.

Q. How long was the ſeventh or laſt day of the week obſerved for the Sabbath?

A. From the beginning of the world to the reſurrection of Chriſt, which was about four thouſand years.

Q. If the fourth command be moral, how could the day appointed in it for the Sabbath be ever altered?

A. The preciſe day of the week is an alterable circumſtance, and ſeparable from the eſſence of the fourth command; and the changing of it makes no more againſt the morality of the fourth command, than the change of the means of worſhip under the goſpel makes againſt the morality of the ſecond.

Q. How doth it appear that the preciſe day of the week is ſeparable from the ſubſtance of the command ?

A. Becauſe neither the firſt part of the command which is the mandatory, nor the laſt part of it which is the benedictory, do mention the ſeventh day of the week: For the one ſaith, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, and the other, Wherefore the Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it. He ſaith not, Remember the ſeventh day, nor that he bleſſed the ſeventh day, but only the Sabbath; to teach us, that the ſeventh day in order from the creation is not of the eſſence of the command, but only a ſeventh day in number; and that the ſeventh in order might be altered, without infringing the morality of the command.

Q. Wherefore did God at firſt appoint the ſeventh in order from the creation for the Sabbath ?

A. Becauſe it was the day of God's reſt from his works of creation; and therefore God would have men to reſt from their works on this day, and to remember his works.

Q. When did God inſtitute the Sabbath at firſt ?

A. Immediately after the creation of the world, when Adam was in paradiſe, Gen. ii. 3.

Q. What need had Adam of a Sabbath, while in that ſinleſs place and ſtate ?

A. Becauſe Adam, though ſinleſs, was but a finite creature, and his ordinary employment of dreſſing the garden would be ſome interruption to the ſolemn worſhip of God; wherefore God thought fit to appoint him a day in ſeven, wherein he might have uninterrupted freedom for it.

Q. By what authority was the day for the Sabbath changed ?

A. By the ſame authority which inſtituted the Sabbath at firſt, even Chriſt's, who is true God, and Lord of the Sabbath: For whether Chriſt did it immediately by himſelf, or directed his apoſtles to do it, it is all one. But it is evident that the apoſtles both obſerved the firſt day of the week, and gave directions about it, which they would not have done without inſtructions from their Lord.

Q. What was the neceſſity of a new day for the Sabbath ?

A. 1. To manifeſt the greatneſs and glory of Chriſt, and his headſhip over the church. 2. He would bury the ſeventh-day Sabbath, to ſhew that therewith he was to abrogate and bury the Levitical worſhip and ceremonies which were practiſed on that day.

Q. Why was the change made to the firſt day of the week ?

A. Becauſe on this day the Lord did reſt from his work of redemption, which was greater than that of creation. When God gave the ten commands, creation was his greateſt work; but now he having wrought a greater, it was fit the one ſhould cede to the other. The amazing work of redemption, wherein God had ſo wonderfully diſplayed his glorious perfections, being now finiſhed, it was neceſſary that the day of God's reſting from it, ſhould be kept in everlaſting remembrance. Of all days the firſt day of the week was the moſt honourable to our Redeemer, and the moſt joyful to the redeemed: For this day Chriſt was born from the dead, and declared to be the Son of God with power; This day our glorious Surety was diſcharged of all our debt, was liberate from priſon, and triumphed over all his and our enemies.

Q. Have we an expreſs command for keeping the Sabbath on this day ?

A. No, tho' yet we have good warrant from ſcripture for doing it. The fourth command expreſly obligeth us to obſerve one day of ſeven as a Sabbath; and the example of Chriſt and his apoſtles in keeping the firſt day of the week, being univerſally notour to the whole church, was ſufficient to enter them upon the uniform obſervation of it: And accordingly it hath been the uninterrupted practice of all the churches of Chriſt thro' the world, ſince the apoſtles days, to keep the firſt day of the week as the Chriſtian Sabbath.

Q. What grounds have we from ſcripture for keeping the firſt day of the week ?

A. 1ſt, We are told this was Chriſt's reſurrection-day. 2dly, We have Chriſt's own example in meeting frequently with his diſciples on this day for religious work; on this day he met with his two diſciples going to Emmaus, and opened the ſcriptures to them; on this day he came to the eleven, ſhewed them his hands and feet, and opened their underſtandings; on this day he came and bleſſed them, and gave them the Holy Ghoſt; on this day he met with them, and graciouſly convinced Thomas; as we may ſee in Luke xxiv. 15, 27, 36, 40, 45. John xx. 19, 22, 26, 27. 3dly, Upon this day, being Pentecoſt, God ſent down that extraordinary effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt upon the apoſtles and brethren being met together, Acts ii. 1. &c. 4thly, Upon this day the diſciples uſually met for divine worſhip, for preaching and hearing the word, and celebrating the Lord's ſupper, Acts xx. 7. 5thly, Upon this firſt day of the week the apoſtles ordered their collections to be made for the poor, becauſe of their public aſſemblies on it, 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2. 6thly, As Chriſt hath put his name upon the ſacrament of the ſupper, calling it the Lord's ſupper, becauſe it derives its inſtitution from him; ſo upon the ſame account he hath put his name upon the firſt day of the week, calling it the Lord's day, Rev. i. 10.

Q. Doth the fourth command, transfer all the honour and dignity of the ſeventh-day Sabbath upon the firſt day of the week ?

A. Yes; becauſe God on this day reſted from a far greater work than that of creation (mentioned only in the fourth command, becauſe then it was the greateſt) and which now by all men ought to be remembered with more thankfulneſs and praiſe than it.

QUEST. LX.

Q. How is the Sabbath to be ſanctified?

A. The Sabbath is to be ſanctified, by a holy reſting all that day, even from ſuch worldly employments and recreations as are lawful on other days, and ſpending the whole time in the public and private exerciſes of God's worſhip, except ſo much as is to be taken up about the works of neceſſity and mercy.

Q. In what ſenſe is God ſaid to ſanctify the Sabbath or hallow it ?

A. By conſecrating or ſetting it apart to holy uſes and employments.

Q. In what ſenſe is God ſaid to ſanctify the Sabbath ?

A By keeping it holy to God, or applying it to theſe holy ends and exerciſes for which God hath ſet it apart.

Q. What is the holy reſt which is required upon the Sabbath ?

A. It is a total ceſſation from worldly enjoyments and recreations.

Q. Why muſt we abſtain from theſe upon the Sabbath ?

A. Becauſe God hath forbidden them, and becauſe they would prove a hinderance to his worſhip and ſervice upon it.

Q. How long muſt we abſtain from our enjoyments and recreations ?

A. Through the whole Sabbath-day.

Q. May we not uſe ſome recreations after public worſhip is over, ſuch as walking in the fields, or the like ?

A. No; 1. Becauſe the whole day is the Lord's, and ought to be kept holy to him; and it is ſacrilege to alienate any part of what is the Lord's to our own uſe or pleaſure. 2. We are expreſly prohibited to find our own pleaſure upon God's holy day, Iſa. lviii. 13.

A. Why are worldly recreations or diverſions forbidden on this day ?

A. Becauſe they hinder the ſpiritual work of the Sabbath and indiſpoſe the mind more for ſpiritual exerciſes than mens ordinary employments would do.

Q. Is there no kind of work or buſineſs of ours lawful on the Sabbath-day ?

A. No, except it be the works of neceſſity and mercy.

Q. What are theſe works of neceſſity which are lawful on the Sabbath ?

A. They are ſuch actions as could not be prevented by our previous care, nor ſafely delayed till afterwards; as the defending ourſelves againſt enemies, or fleeing from them; quenching fire, putting on clothes, and the like.

Q. What are the works of mercy lawful on the Sabbath ?

A. Actions for preſerving life; ſuch as the feeding of our bodies and of our beaſts, relieving them when in diſtreſs, attending and viſiting the ſick, collecting for the poor, and the like.

Q. How ought we to manage in doing works of neceſſity this day, ſo as not to offend ?

A. We muſt have no active hand in bringing them on, nor any ſecret complacency in their falling out; we muſt ſtudy to keep our hearts in a ſpiritual frame while doing them, and diſpatch them as ſoon as poſſible, that we may return to the main work of the Sabbath.

Q. What is the frame of ſpirit proper for us on the Lord's day ?

A. It is a holy ſpiritual frame of heart, ſuch as John ſpeaks of Rev. i. 10. I was in the ſpirit on the Lord's day ?

Q. What is imported in that expreſſion, I was in the ſpirit ?

A. It imports, to have our thoughts abſtracted from earthly things, and to lay our ſouls open to the influences of God's Spirit, and to depend upon his aſſiſtance in all the duties of the day. It is to have the graces of the Spirit in exerciſe, and to have ſpiritual ends in all our Sabbath exerciſes, not to be ſeen of men, but to glorify God, and enjoy communion with him.

Q. What are the holy duties which are the proper work of the Sabbath ?

A. The public, private, and ſecret exerciſes of God's worſhip.

Q. What are the public exerciſes requiſite ?

A. The joining in prayers and praiſes with the aſſemblies of God's people, the hearing of the word read and preached, and partaking of the ſacraments.

Q. What are the private exerciſes required on this day ?

A. It is neceſſary for families to join together this day in the worſhip of God, by reading his word, ſinging his praiſe, and calling upon his name; and to ſpend ſome time in catechiſing of children and ſervants, repeating the ſermons, or Chriſtian conference.

Q. Are all maſters of families bound to worſhip God with their families ? A. Yes.

Q. How do you prove that ?

A. 1ſt, From the fourth command, that enjoins every head of a family, with all that are within his gates, be they his children, his ſervants, or ſtrangers, to keep holy the Sabbath day, which muſt be by worſhipping of God as well as reſting from labour, otherwiſe he would keep it no better than the beaſts: and this worſhip is not to be reſtricted to what is public only; for the command is ſtill binding upon maſters of families, tho' no public worſhip could be had: they muſt ſanctify the Sabbath in their dwellings, Lev. xxiii. 3. 2dly, Maſters of families are bound to rule their families as miniſters do the church which partly is by going before them in the worſhip of God, 1 Tim. iii. 4. 5. 3dly, We are enjoined to pray every where, and with all manner of prayer, and conſequently with family-prayer, 1 Tim. ii. 8. Eph. vi. 18. 4thly, Upon the Lord's returning to his people, he promiſes to pour out a ſpirit of grace and ſupplication upon families, ſo as every family ſhall mourn apart, Zech. xii. 10. 12. 13. 5thly, Wrath hangs over the families who call not upon God, Jer. x. 25. Laſtly, Family worſhip is powerfully recommended by the examples of Chriſt and the ſaints, as Abraham, Joſhua, David, Daniel, and Cornelius, Mat. xxvi. 30. Luke ix. 18. Gen. xii. 8. and xiii. 4. and xxi. 23. Joſhua iv. 15. 2 Sam. vi. 20. Pſal. ci. 2. Dan. vi. 10. Acts x. 2.

Q. What are the ſecret duties requiſite on the Lord's day ?

A. Secret prayer, reading the ſcriptures and other pious books, meditations upon divine ſubjects, and ſelf-examination.

Q. What ſhould we pray for upon the morning of the Lord's day ?

A. For ſuitable ſpiritual frames for the work of the day; for the Lord's gracious preſence to be with miniſters and hearers; and particularly that he may give us the aſſiſtance of his Holy Spirit in all the duties of the day, that he may give us attention to hearken, underſtanding to conceive, wiſdom to apply, judgment to diſcern, faith to believe, memory to retain, and grace to practice what we areto hear, that ſo the word may prove to us the ſavour of life unto life, and not the ſavour of death unto death.

Q. What ſhould we pray for in the Sabbath evening ?

A. For pardon of all our ſhortcomings in our Sabbath performances, for the ſake of Chriſt's atoning blood: At which times we ſhould confeſs and bewail our earthlineſs, formality, wanderings, wearyings, and byends in duty; or dark underſtanding, hard hearts, cold affections, and treacherous memories: and alſo we ſhould bleſs God for the Sabbath, and the joyful ſound that we hear therein; and pray that our Sabbath-day's frame may laſt in ſome meaſure thro' the week, that we may walk with God, and live ſtill in the view of the everlaſting Sabbath above.

Q. Is the happineſs of heaven like the keeping of a Sabbath?

A. Yes, it is called ſo Heb. iv. 9. The word reſt is in the original a ſabbatiſm, or the keeping of a Sabbath; and ſo it is in theſe reſpects, 1. As the Sabbath is a reſt from the toil of the week, ſo heaven is a reſt from the toil which the ſaints had here with an ill heart and an ill world. 2. As the Sabbath is a day of thankful remembrance of Chriſt's finiſhing the work of our redemption, ſo in heaven they will be always commemorating Chriſt's mighty acts, and offering eternal thankſgiving and praiſe for redeeming love. 3. As the Sabbath is a day of holy convocation, ſo in heaven there is a glorious gathering of all the ſaints in one body. 4. As the Sabbath is a day of communion with God in ordinances, ſo in heaven there is eternal communion with God in an immediate way.

Q. Wherein will the Sabbath above excel the Sabbath below.

A. 1. The ſaints hearts will never be out of frame for keeping the heavenly Sabbath, as they are often here. 2. There will be no mixture of mourning with their ſongs of praiſe, as here. 3. Their Sabbath-work will never be interrupted thro' the neceſſities of the body, by ſleeping, clothing, eating, &c. as here. 4. The Sabbath above hath no night to ſucceed it, nor weekly day to come after it; yet none there ſhall ever ſay, What a wearineſs is it? as many do here.

QUEST. LXI.

Q. What is forbidden in the fourth commandment?

A. The fourth commandment forbiddeth the omiſſion or careleſs performance of the duties required, and the profaning the day by idleneſs, or doing that which is in itſelf ſinful, or by unneceſſary thoughts, words or works, about our worldly employments and recreations.

Q. What are the evils forbidden in this command?

A. They are three, namely, the omiſſion of the duties required by it, the careleſs performing of theſe duties, and all profaning of this holy day, which may be done ſeveral ways, as in the anſwer.

Q. What mean you by the omiſſion of the duties required?

A. The neglect of the duties enjoined upon this day, either by forſaking the public aſſemblies of God's people or by neglecting the worſhip of God in our families, or in ſecret.

Q. Are ſins of omiſſion great ſins?

A. Yes; for by them God's authority is ſlighted, and conſcience wounded: And hence ſome eminently pious have been made to cry out on a death bed, Lord, forgive me my ſins of omiſſion.

Q. What is the evil of neglecting to attend upon public ordinances upon the Sabbath?

A. 1. It is a denying God that public homage and ſervice which he hath a juſt title to from all men, Iſa. lxvi. 23. "From one Sabbath to another ſhall all fleſh come to worſhip before me, ſaith the Lord." 2. It is a deſpiſing the ordinary means which God hath appointed for converting of ſouls, weakening of corruptions, and ſtrengthening of grace. 3. The damned will bewail the neglecting of opportunities to all eternity.

Q. Is it a ſufficient excuſe for ſuch neglect, for perſons to ſay they were taking phyſic or letting blood on this day, or they wanted ſuch apparel, or the day was cold, or ſtormy, or the like?

A. The excuſes of perſons for neglecting God's ordinances, which would not detain them from a gainful worldly market, will not be ſuſtained at God's bar.

Q. What mean you by the careleſs performances of the duties of the Sabbath, here forbidden?

A. When people attend ordinances without any care or delight, or in a formal, dead, wandering, wearying or drowſy manner.

Q. Is not the Sabbath otherwiſe profaned than by ſins of omiſſion, or the careleſs performance of duty?

A. Yes, by manifold ſins of commiſſion, ſins both of the heart and of the life.

Q. What are the ſins of the heart, whereby the Sabbath is profaned?

A. They are many, ſuch as Atheiſm or unbelief of God's truths preached to us on this day, ignorance of theſe truths, averſion to the duties of the Sabbath, hypocriſy and formality in theſe duties, wearying of them, drowſineſs or ſleeping in time of them, thinking upon worldly things, prejudice at Chriſt's truths and theſe who publiſh them, undervaluing of goſpel-news, and ſlighting the offers of precious Chriſt made to us.

Q. What are the ſins of the life or outward man, by which the Sabbath is profaned?

A. There are many of them, ſuch as, 1. Speaking our own words upon this day, or talking of worldly affairs. 2. Doing our own works, to wit, pieces of ſervile work, which might either have been done the day before, or delayed until the day after. 3. Finding our own pleaſures, by uſing worldly diverſions or recreations upon the Lord's day; all which are expreſsly forbidden, Iſa. lviii. 13. (ſee before, page 340.) 4. Doing things on this day which are in themſelves ſinful, whereby ſin is greatly aggravated; which perſons are guilty of, when inſtead of attending upon God's worſhip upon the Sabbath, they ſpend this holy day in drinking, ſwearing, unclean practices, jeſting upon ſacred things, or reproaching the ſerious worſhippers of God.

QUEST. LXII.

Q. What are the reaſons annexed to the fourth commandment?

A. The reaſons annexed to the fourth commandment are, God's allowing us ſix days of the week for our own employments, his challenging a ſpecial propriety in the ſeventh, his own example, and his bleſſing the Sabbath-day.

Q. What is the firſt reaſon for enforcing this command?

A. The firſt is taken from the great goodneſs and condeſcenſion of God in allowing us ſix days of ſeven for our own affairs, and reſerving but one of them for himſelf; when he might have taken ſix, and left us but one.

Q. In what words of the command is this reaſon contained?

A. In theſe words, Six days ſhalt thou labour, and do all thy works.

Q. What is the ſecond reaſon for enforcing this command?

A. It is taken from God's right and title to the ſeventh day of our time; he challengeth a ſpecial propriety in it.

Q. In what words of the command do we find this reaſon?

A. In theſe words, But the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God.

Q. But are not all the days of the week the Lord's?

A. Yes; but he hath a peculiar intereſt in the ſeventh above the reſt, as having ſanctified and ſet it apart from common uſe, for his own worſhip and ſervice.

Q. Would it not be a high degree of ſacrilege to rob God of his own day, or any part of it, ſeeing he claims it as his own?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the third reaſon for enforcing this command?

A. God's example, in reſting from his works of creation upon the ſeventh day, which ſhould prevail with us to imitate him by keeping every ſeventh day as a holy reſt after ſix days labour.

Q. In what words of the command is this reaſon contained?

A. In theſe, "For in ſix days the Lord made heaven and earth, the ſea, and all that in them is, and reſted the ſeventh day."

Q. How can it be ſaid that God reſted then from creating, ſeeing he ſtill creates mens ſouls, and daily produceth multitudes of creatures?

A. The meaning is, that God reſted from creating any new ſpecies or kinds of creatures after the firſt ſix days, but not new individuals.

Q. What is the fourth reaſon for keeping this command?

A. God's bleſſing the Sabbath day, in theſe words; "Wherefore the Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."

Q. What is the import of theſe words?

A. That God hath not only ſanctified this day for his ſervice, but he hath ordained the Sabbath to be a means and time for conveying bleſſings to theſe that keep it; and we may hope for a bleſſing from God, if we duly wait on him this day in his ordinances.

QUEST. LXIII.

Q Which is the fifth commandment?

A. The fifth commandment is, Honour thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

QUEST. LXIV.

Q. What is required in the fifth commandment?

A. The fifth commandment requireth the preſerving the honour, and performing the duties belonging to every one in their ſeveral places and relations, as ſuperiors, inferiors, or equals.

Q. Who are meant by father and mother in the fifth command?

A. Not only our natural parents, but all our ſuperiors: for theſe alſo get the title of fathers and mothers in ſcripture; kings and queens are our fathers and mothers in a political ſenſe, Iſa. xlix. 23. Aged perſons are ſo called, 1 Tim. v. 1, 2. Miniſters are ſpiritual fathers, 1 Cor. iv. 15. Heads of families are oeconomical fathers, 2 Kings v. 13. And theſe who are eminent in gifts, grace or ſtation in the world, are ſtiled fathers, Gen. iv. 20, 21, 22. 2 Kings ii. 12. Gen. xlv. 8. Acts vii. 2.

Q. Why are ſuperiors ſtiled father and mother?

A. To teach them, like natural parents, to treat their inferiors with love and tenderneſs, as if they were their children, and not to ſlight or deſpiſe them.

Q. What is meant by the honour we are required to give our ſuperiors by this command?

A. It comprehends all that eſteem, reſpect, ſubmiſſion, obedience and duty which we owe unto them by the law of God.

Q. What is the general ſcope of the fifth command?

A. It is to enjoin us the performance of theſe duties which we owe to our neighbours in their ſeveral ſtations and relations, whether they be our ſuperiors, inferiors or equals.

Q. Why is this command called the firſt commandment with promiſe? Eph. vi. 2.

A. Becauſe it is the firſt command of the ſecond table, and is the foundation of obedience to all the other commands of it; and it hath a promiſe annexed to it, to ſhew its dignity above them.

Q. Who are meant by ſuperiors in the anſwer?

A. Not only our natural parents, but alſo magiſtrates, miniſters, maſters, huſbands, the aged, and theſe who excel us in gifts or grace.

Q. Who are meant by inferiors?

A. Theſe who are in lower ſtations, as ſubjects, children, and ſervants, and theſe who are weak in gifts and grace.

Q. Who are meant by equals?

A. Theſe who are in like ſtations and conditions in the world.

Q. Why is the mother mentioned in the command as well as the father?

A. That children might not diſregard her upon the account of her weakneſs or ſubjection to her huſband. Nay, the Lord mentions the mother before the father, Lev. xix. 3. "Ye ſhall fear every man his mother and his father:" Why? To meet with the humour of thoſe who would diminiſh the reſpect and duty they owe to their mother.

Q. What duties are required of children to their parents?

A. To eſteem and love them; to honour, reverence, and to obey them; to hearken to their counſels and inſtructions, and to ſubmit to their reproofs and corrections; to marry with their conſent; to cover their infirmities; and to ſupply them when in ſtraits, Mal. ii. 6. 1 Kings xix. 29, 1 Kings ii. 19, Eph. vi. 1. Heb. xii. 9, Prov. xxiii. 22. Judg. xiv. 2. Gen. ix. 23. and xlvii. 12.

Q. What ſhall children do when parents adviſe any thing contrary to God's word?

A. Children are only to obey parents in the Lord, and they muſt love and obey God before all men; for "he that loveth father or mother (ſaith our Lord) more than me, is not worthy of me, Mat. x. 37."

Q. What duties are required of parents to their children?

A. To love them tenderly; to educate them in the knowledge and fear of God; to reprove, chaſten, and keep them in ſubjection; to pity and pray for them; to inſtruct them in the ways of the Lord, and be good examples to them; to encourage them therein with endearing language; to provide and lay up for them, and put them in ſuitable callings, and to be concerned for a better portion to them than things of the world, Tit. ii. 4, Prov. xxii. 6, 1 Tim. iii. 4, Prov. xxix. 15, 17, Eph. vi. 4, Pſal. ciii. 13, Gen. xvii. 18, 2 Sam. xii. 16. Exod. xii. 26, 27, Deut. iv. 9, 10, Pſal. ci. 2, 3, Prov. xxxi. 2, 3, 1 Tim v. 8, 2 Cor xii. 14, Gen. xxv. 5. 6. 2 Chron. xxi. 3, Luke xv. 12, Gen. iv. 1, 2, Gen. xlviii. 1, Mat. xix. 13, 14.

Q. May parents reprove their children when they are in paſſion?

A. Reproofs at that time ſeldom do good; it were better for them to forbear until their paſſion be over, that they may reprove in the ſpirit of meekneſs, Gen. iii. 8. Gal. vi. 1.

Q. May we not lawfully be angry with children for their faults?

A. The beſt way to be angry and not ſin, is to be angry at ſin; wherefore, when children offend, we ſhould not be angry ſo much with them as with their ſin.

Q. What duties are required of ſubjects to their magiſtrates?

A. To pray for them, to honour them, and be ſubject to them, to obey their juſt laws, to pay them tribute, to protect and defend them, to bear injuries from them patiently, and to be faithful to them, 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2. 1 Pet. ii. 13. 14, 17, Rom. xiii. 1, 6, 7, 1 Sam. xxvi. 9, 10, 15.

Q. What are the duties of magiſtrates to their ſubjects?

A. To make good laws, and appoint faithful officers to execute them; to be careful of the peace and ſafety of the ſubjects; to be encouragers of virtue, and puniſhers of vice; to govern with prudence, juſtice and clemency; to relieve the oppreſſed; to provide means of grace for all the ſouls in their dominions; and to be nurſing fathers to the church, 2 Chron. xix. 5. 6. 7. and xvii. 8, 9, 12, 1 Pet. ii. 14, 2 Chron. i. 10, and ii. 1, Iſa. xlix. 23, 2 Kings xii. 7, and xviii. 4, and xxiii. 21, Neh. xiii. 10, 11.

A. To eſteem and love them dearly for their office and works ſake; to pray for them, and attend upon the ordinances diſpenſed by them; to ſubmit to their reproofs and cenſures; to hearken, to apply and conform to their doctrine; to ſhut their ears againſt malicious reports raiſed againſt them, and communicate to them in temporal good things, 1 Theſ. v. 12, 13, 25, Rom. xv. 30. Luke x. 16 Heb. xiii. 17, 18, James i. 21, 1 Tim. v. 19, Gal. vi. 6, 1 Cor. ix. 14.

Q. What are the duties of miniſters to their people?

A. To preach the word faithfully, and diſpenſe all ordinances to them; to have tender love and affection to their ſouls; to pray fervently for them; to reſide amongſt them, and watch carefully over them; to be patterns of godly living unto them; and to be willing to make the greateſt condeſcenſions for the edification and good of ſouls, 2 Tim. iv. 2, 3, 5, 1 Theſſ. ii. 7, 8, 9, 10. Eph. i. 15, 16, 1 Pet. v. 2, 3, Tit. ii. 7, 1 Cor. ix. 19, 21, 22, 2 Cor. xii. 19.

Q. What duties are required of ſervants to their maſters?

A. To love, honour and obey them; to be faithful in all things intruſted to them; to be diligent in their work, and ſtudy to pleaſe them in all things; to bear their rebukes patiently, not anſwering again, Mat. vi. 24, 1 Tim. vi. 1, Col. iii. 22, Tit. ii. 9, 10, 1 Pet. ii. 18, 19, Gen. xxiv. 12.

Q. What are the duties of maſters to their ſervants?

A. To rule over them with gentleneſs, and not with rigour; to give them ſufficient food, and pay them their wages juſtly; to be careful of them under ſickneſs; to reprove ſin in them, inſtruct them, and command them to keep the ways of the Lord, and particularly his Sabbaths, Eph. vi. 9. Lev xxv. 43. Prov. xxvii. 27, Deut. xxiv. 14, 15, Mat. viii. 6, Prov. xxix. 19, Gen. xviii. 19, Exod. xx. 10.

Prov. xxxi. 27, Gen. ii. 18, Mat. xxvii. 19.

Q. What are the duties of huſbands to their wives?

A. To love them, and live chaſtely with them; to nouriſh and cheriſh them; to cover their infirmities, and protect them from injuries; to ſtudy to pleaſe them; to counſel and adviſe them, pray with them and for them, and praiſe them when they do well, Eph. v. 28, 29, Prov. v. 18, 19, 20, 1 Pet. iv. 8, 1 Sam. xxx. 18, 1 Cor. vii, 33, 1 Pet. iii. 7, Gen. xxv. 21, Prov. xxxi. 28, 29.

Q. What are the duties of the younger and inferior in gifts and grace, to the aged and ſuperior?

A. To riſe up before the hoary head, and honour the face of the old man; to ſpeak to them with reſpect, give them the place in ſpeaking, ſubmit to their advice, and imitate their holy lives, Lev. xix. 32, 1 Tim. v. 1, 2, Job xxxii. iv. 6, 7, 1 Pet. v. 5, 1 Cor. xi. 1.

QUEST. LXV.

Q. What is forbidden in the fifth commandment?

A. The fifth commandment forbiddeth the neglecting of, or doing any thing againſt the honour and duty which belong to every one in their ſeveral places and relations.

Q. How many ways may this command be broken?

A. Two ways; 1. By neglecting the duties of the ſtations and relations in which God hath placed us, whether we be ſuperiors, inferiors, or equals. 2. By doing things directly contrary to the honour and duty which we owe to our ſuperiors, inferiors or equals.

Q. What are theſe ſins which inferiors are commonly guilty of againſt their ſuperiors?

A. They are many, ſuch as ſlighting and deſpiſing them, envying their elevation, reviling and curſing them; diſobedience to their juſt commands and counſels, contempt of their reproofs and corrections, mocking and ſtudying to expoſe them, making a ſhew of reverence and obedience without reality, not imitating their good examples, and the like.

Q. What are the ſins which ſuperiors are commonly guilty of againſt their inferiors?

A. They are, ſuch as commanding unlawful things, enjoining things not in their power to perform; adviſing and encouraging them to what is evil, diſſuading and diſcouraging them from what is good; cruel treating of them, and provoking them to wrath; proud imperious carriage toward them; reproving with bitterneſs, or correcting with rigour, oppreſſion and tyranny; debaſing themſelves, and loſing their authority; not giving good examples, and the like.

Q. What are the ſins of equals againſt one another?

A. Hatred, anger, malice, envy, evil ſpeaking, injuring, reproaching or backbiting one another; affecting preheminence one over another, tempting and encouraging one another to ſin, and the like.

Q. Is it a ſin in children to diſpoſe of their parents goods as their own?

A. Yes, Prov. xxviii. 24. "Whoſo robbeth his father or his mother, and ſaith, It is no tranſgreſſion, the ſame is the companion of a deſtroyer."

Q. Is it not a great diſhonour done to parents for children to diſpoſe of themſelves in marriage without their conſent?

A. Yes, Exod. xxii. 17. Num. xxx. 5. Deut. vii. 3. Jer. xxix. 6 1 Cor. vii. 38. Col. iii. 20.

Q. What if children ſet light by their parents, or expoſe their weakneſſes?

A. They draw down the curſe of God upon themſelves, Deut. xxvii. 16. "Curſed be he that ſetteth light by his father or his mother: And all the people ſhall ſay, Amen."

Q. Do you read of any upon whom this curſe came for ſo doing?

A. Yes, of Ham the ſon of Noah, Gen. ix. 22, 25, 26.

Q. What ſhall become of theſe who curſe their parents?

A. Whoſo curſeth his father or his mother, his lamp ſhall be put out in obſcure darkneſs, Prov. xx. 20. Nay death is threatened to them, Exod. xxi. 17.

Q. What is threatened againſt theſe who not only diſobey, but mock their parents?

A. The eye that mocketh at his father, and deſpiſeth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley ſhall pick it out, and the young eagels ſhall eat it, Prov. xxx. 17.

Q. What is due to theſe children who beat their parents?

A. He that ſmiteth his father or his mother, ſhall be ſurely put to death, Exod. xxi. 15.

Q. What if the magiſtrate neglect to puniſh ſuch diſobedient children?

A. God will take the puniſhing of ſuch into his own hand.

Q. Do you read of any inſtances of his ſo doing?

A. Yes, I read of Eli's ſons, 1 Sam. ii. 25. "They hearkened not to the voice of their father, becauſe the Lord would ſlay them." And of David's rebellious ſon Abſalom, that was taken up by an oak between the heaven and the earth, to hang as a monument of God's juſtice for breaking the fifth command, 2 Sam. xviii. 9.

Q. What became of the little children of Bethel who mocked Eliſha as he paſſed by, ſaying, Go up, thou baldhead, &c.

A. God ſent forth two ſhe-bears out of the wood, that tare forty and two children of them, 2 Kings ii. 24.

Q. Are not theſe children guilty of diſhonouring their parents, who deſpiſe them when they are poor or old, or ſuffer them to be in want. A. Yes.

Q. Is it not monſtrous ingratitude in children to requite their parents ſo badly for their love and tenderneſs toward them?

A. Yes.

Q. What may ſuch expect for it?

A. To meet with the ſame uſage from their own children in this world, and with dreadful puniſhment in the other, if they repent not.

QUEST. LXVI.

Q. What are the reaſons annexed to the fifth commandment?

A. The reaſons annexed to the fifth commandment is a promiſe of long life and proſperity (as far it ſhall ſerve for God's glory and their own good) to all ſuch as keep this commandment.

Q. Since the light of nature doth ſo clearly teach us to honour our parents, why is there ſuch a promiſe annexed to it?

A. To ſhew how greatly concerned God is to ſupport the authority of parents.

Q. How is the fifth commandment called the firſt with promiſe Eph. vi. 2. ſeeing the ſecond hath a promiſe in it of God's ſhewing mercy to thouſands?

A. The promiſe in the ſecond doth likewiſe extend to the keeping of all the other commands, but the promiſe in the fifth is made to the keeping of it only.

Q. What doth God here promiſe to theſe who keep the fifth command?

A. Long life.

Q. What is included in the promiſe of long life here?

A. It includes a promiſe of proſperity, with the bleſſings and comforts of life: For, without this, long life would not be a reward; death being more eligible than long life in miſery, Eph. vi. 3. Rev. ix. 6.

Q. What courſe then ſhould children take to live long and happy lives?

A. They ſhould honour and obey their parents.

Q. Is this promiſe of long life and proſperity to obedient children, to be underſtood abſolutely, or with limitation?

A. It is to be underſtood, as other temporal promiſes, with this limitation, ſo far as the beſtowing of it ſhall ſerve for God's glory and their own good.

Q. What if God ſometimes take away obedient children in their youth?

A. We are then to think that God did not ſee long living here to be for their good, but thought fit in place of it to give them a long life in heaven, which is far better, Phil. i. 23.

Q. May not then diſobedient children look for ſhort and miſerable lives here?

A. Yes.

QUEST. LXVII.

Q. Which is the ſixth commandment?

A. The ſixth commandment is, Thou ſhalt not kill?

QUEST. LXVIII.

Q. What is required in the ſixth commandment?

A. The ſixth commandment requireth all lawful endeavours to preſerve our own life, and the life of others.

Q. Is there not a comely order among the commands of the ſecond table?

A. Yes; for the fifth command, or firſt of the ſecond table, preſcribes in general, what reſpect men ſhould ſhew to one another in their ſeveral ſtations and relations. In the next place, we have particular directions with reſpect to theſe things which are moſt valuable to men; the firſt is with reſpect to our lives, in the ſixth command; the next relates to our chaſtity, in the ſeventh command; the third is concerning our eſtates, in the eighth command; the fourth is with reſpect to our good name, in the ninth command; the laſt is concerning the inward frame of our hearts in reference to our own eſtate and the eſtate of others, in the tenth command.

Q. Whoſe life is it that we are bound to preſerve by the ſixth commandment?

A. Both our own life and the life of others; and this is to be underſtood, not only of the life of the body, but alſo of the ſoul.

Q. Doth this command require us to ſtudy and endeavour by any means whatſoever to preſerve our own life and other mens?

A. No; we are only to uſe all lawful means and endeavours for that end.

Q. May we uſe no unlawful endeavour, or venture upon any ſin, to preſerve our own life, or the life of others?

A. No.

Q. Did not Iſaac tell a lie, in calling his wife his ſiſter, to ſave his life, Gen. xxvi. 7. And did not Peter deny Chriſt, to preſerve his life?

A. Iſaac's lie and Peter's denial were ſins againſt God, and are recorded, not for imitation, but for caution; for we muſt not do evil that good may come, Rom. iii. 8. Nay, to go about to ſave our lives by ſuch ſinful means is the way to loſe our lives and our ſouls for ever, Mat. xvi. 25, 26. and x. 33.

Q. What are the lawful endeavours which we ſhould uſe to preſerve the life of our bodies?

A. Juſt ſelf-defence againſt violence; the temperate uſe of meat, drink, clothes; bodily exerciſe, and phyſick when needful, likewiſe we ſhould ſtudy a cheerful, peaceable and contented temper of mind, without harbouring anger, envy, grief, or ſuch paſſions as prejudge the healthy, Luke xxii. 36. Eph. v. 29. Prov. xxv. 16, 27. 1 Tim. v. 23. Iſa. xxxviii. 21. Prov. xvii. 22. Col. iii. 12. 13.

Q. What are the endeavours we ſhould uſe for preſerving the bodily life of others?

A. A pleading for, and labouring to reſcue, the innocent in danger of death; hiding the perſecuted, or warning them of danger; relieving thoſe that are in wants; bearing injuries without revenging them, and the like, Prov. xxxi. 8, 9. 1 Sam. xiv. 45. and xix. 4, 5. 1 Kings xviii. 4. Acts xxiii. 16. Rom. xii. 17, 20. Job. xxxi. 19 Mat. xxv. 35.

Q. What endeavours ſhould we uſe for preſerving the life of our ſouls?

A. Attending upon the outward means of ſalvation, believing, repenting, mortifying ſin, and ſtudying holineſs, Prov. viii. 34, 35, 36, Mark xvi. 19, Ezek. xviii. 31, 32, Rom. viii. 13, Heb. xii. 14.

Q. What endeavours muſt we uſe for preſerving the ſouls of others?

A. We muſt uſe all the means which God hath appointed for reclaiming men from evil, and promoting their converſion; ſuch as warning, reproof, inſtruction, prayer, holy example, and recommending Chriſt to them, James v. 20, 1 Cor. vii. 16, 1 Pet. iii. 1. 1 Theſſ. v. 14. Rev. xix. 17, Acts xx. 26, 27, and xvi. 31.

QUEST. LXIX.

Q. What is forbidden in the ſixth commandment?

A. The ſixth commandment forbiddeth the taking away of our own life, or the life of our neighbour unjuſtly, and whatſoever tendeth thereunto.

Q. Whoſe life is it that this command forbids to take away?

A. Our own life, or the life of our neighbour.

Q. Doth it forbid the taking away of our neighbour's life in any caſe?

A. No, but the taking it away unjuſtly.

Q. When is it that our neighbour's life may be juſtly taken away?

A. 1. In caſe of public juſtice by a magiſtrate. 2. In caſe of a lawful war. 3. In caſe of neceſſary ſelf defence.

Q. Is killing in any other caſe to be looked upon as murder?

A. Yes, except when it is done by pure accident without knowledge or deſign of harm, in which caſe there were of old cities of refuge for the ſlayer to flee to, Deut. xix. 5, 6.

Q. How doth it appear that the magiſtrate hath power to take away mens lives, notwithſtanding of the ſixth command?

A. Becauſe God hath appointed ſeveral crimes, particularly murder, to be puniſhed with death, Gen. ix. 6. "Whoſo ſheddeth man's blood, by man ſhall his blood be ſhed." Exod. xxi 12. "He that ſmiteth a man ſo that he die, ſhall be ſurely put to death." And this is confirmed in the New Teſtament, Mat. xxvi. 52. Rev. xiii. 10.

Q. May the magiſtrate ſpare or pardon a murderer?

A. No; for God hath forbidden it, Num. xxxv. 31. 33. "Ye ſhall take no ſatisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is guilty of death; but he ſhall be ſurely put to death: For blood it defileth the land, and the land cannot be cleanſed of the blood that is ſhed therein, but by the blood of him that ſhed it."

Q. How doth it appear to be lawful to kill in a juſt war?

A. Becauſe it is done by the authority of the ſupreme magiſtrate, who even under the New Teſtament is warranted to bear the ſword againſt evil-doers, Rom. xiii. 4. And we are frequently aſſured, that true piety is very well conſiſtent with the office of a ſoldier, Luke iii. 14. Matth. xviii. 9, 10. Acts x. 1, 2. and xiii. 12. And theſe ſoldiers are recorded with ſignal honour, who through faith ſubdued kingdoms, waxed valiant in fight, and turned to flight the armies of the aliens, Heb. xi. 33. 34.

Q. How doth it appear to be lawful to kill in our own defence, when attacked by robbers or murderers?

A. From Exod. xxii. 2. "If a thief be found breaking up, and be ſmitten that he die, there ſhall be no blood ſhed for him." And Luke xxii. 36, 38. Chriſt approves of the diſciples having ſwords for their protection, although they might not uſe them when Chriſt's hour was come. And Prov. xxiv. 11, 12. we are called to defend our neighbour in danger, and much more ourſelves.

Q. What are we to think of thoſe who ſhed blood in duellings?

A. They are the devil's martyrs, and murderers in God's ſight; for they uſurp God's right of vengeance, which he hath expreſly reſerved to himſelf, Rom. xii. 19.

Q. If another challenge me to fight, how can I avoid to accept of it without loſing my honour?

A. In that caſe we muſt leave our name and credit with God, and not to be drawn on by airy notions of honour to the God diſhonouring ſin of murder, or to ſet ourſelves above all laws both of God and man, and thereby throw our precious ſouls a prey to the devil.

Q. Did not David fight a duel with Goliah?

A. He did that by public authority in a lawful war for the good of his country, by the motion of God's Spirit, and not from any paſſion or corrupt affection of his own. For God forbids all men to be their own avengers, Rom. xii. 19.

Q. Is it not the worſt kind of murder for a man to kill himſelf?

A. Yes; for, in other murders, a man may live to repent of his ſins; but in this, if he die immediately, the man dies in his ſin, without time for repentance.

Q. What are the temptations which uſually prompt men to deſtroy themſelves?

A. It was impatience under a croſs, or diſhonour he met with, that provoked Ahithophel to do it, 2 Sam. xvii. 23. It was horrour of conſcience, under guilt and deſpair of mercy, that drove Judas to it, Matth. xxvii. 4, 5. It was fear of torture, or an ignominious death from others, that puſhed Saul to do it, and the jaylor to attempt it, 1 Sam. xxxi. 4. Acts xvi. 27.

Q. Are not the temptations of men to ſelf-murder contrary to all reaſon?

A. Yes, ſeeing it is moſt fooliſh and unreaſonable for a man to adventure upon unſpeakable torture and anguiſh which will laſt for ever, that he may ſhun a ſmall diſtreſs here that would ſoon be over.

Q. Did not many of the ancient heathens applaud mens killing themſelves, in ſome caſes as an act of heroiſm and magnanimity?

A. Theſe men were not illuminated by goſpel light, otherwiſe they would have reckoned it an act of rebellion and treachery for a man to break priſon or deſert his poſt until he was fairly diſmiſt by his ſovereign Lord; yea, an act of puſillanimity and cowardice for a man to flee from a ſmall conflict or trial, which God had appointed for the diſcovery of his valour.

Q. Did not Samſon kill himſelf in pulling down Dagon's temple? Judges xvi. 30.

A. His intention was not againſt his own life, but againſt Iſrael's enemies; beſides, he acted as a judge in Iſrael, being moved by the Spirit of God to deliver God's people, but not from deſpair; and ſo his action is not imitable by us.

Q. Doth the ſixth command forbid only the direct taking away of our own or our neighbour's life?

A. It doth alſo forbid whatſoever tendeth thereunto.

Q. May not a man thus be guilty of ſelf-murder without putting violent hands on himſelf?

A. Yes; as when he neglects or refuſes food or phyſic, or neceſſary means of preſerving life. Or, 2dly, When he is guilty of ſurfeiting, drunkenneſs, or any kind of intemperance. 3dly, When he indulges exceſſive ſorrows, diſtracting cares, ſinful anger, envy, or ſuch hurtful paſſions which breed diſtempers in the body, Luke xxi. 34. Eccl. ii. 22, 23. and vi. 2. Prov. xiv. 30. and xvii. 22.

Q. How may a man be guilty of murdering his own ſoul?

A. By neglecting the outward means of ſalvation, refuſing Chriſt the only remedy for ſin, deſpiſing warnings, counſels and reproofs, and continuing obſtinate in ſinful courſes, Prov. viii. 36. Ezek xviii. 30, 31. John v. 40. Prov. vi. 32.

Q. How may a man be guilty of murder with reſpect to others?

A. He may be guilty of murder with reſpect to their bodies, and with reſpect to their ſouls; and this he may be guilty of in thoughts, in words, and in deeds.

Q. How may a man be a murderer in his thoughts?

A. By entertaining ſinful anger, hatred, envy, and deſire of revenge; by contriving or conſenting to the death of others, 1 John iii. 15, "Whoſo hateth his brother is a murderer," Mat xv. 19, "Out of the heart proceeds murders." See alſo Mat. v. 21, 22, Zech. viii. 17. Eph. iv. 31, Gen. xxxvii. 11, 20, and xlix. 6, Acts xxii. 20.

Q. How may a man be a murderer in words?

A. By backbiting his neighbour, or uſing opprobrious words againſt him, which cauſe murders; by curſing or imprecating evil upon him; by informing or bearing falſe witneſs againſt the innocent, or ſwearing to kill him, Mat. v. 22. Eph. iv. 31. Prov. xii. 18, and xv. 1, Pſal. lvii. 4, and lxiv. 3, Jer. xviii. 18, 1 Sam. xxii. 9, 10, &c. 1 Kings xxi. 10, 1 Sam. xxv. 10, 11, Acts xxiii. 12.

Q. How may men be murderers by their deeds?

A. Many ways, both directly and indirectly; as by ſtriking, wounding or hurting the bodies of men, or doing any thing that tends to the deſtruction of their lives; by oppreſſing or robbing the poor, or not relieving them when ready to ſtarve; by murdering the innocent under the forms of law and juſtice; by ſetting them in dangerous poſts to be cut off; by not hindering their death when in their power; by not executing the law againſt murderers, ſo that they are ſpared to ſhed more blood, Num. xxxv. 16, 17, 18, &c. Ezek. xxiii. 7. 2 Sam. xi. 15, and xii. 9, 1 Kings xxi. 12, 13, Prov. xxiv. 11. Iſa. i. 15.

Q. How are men guilty of murdering the ſouls of others ?

A. By counſelling or commanding them to do evil; by tempting and enticing them to ſin; by giving a bad example to them; by not reproving ſin, and giving warning againſt it; by miniſters not warning ſinners of their danger, or teaching them unſound doctrine, 1 Sam. xxii. 18, 2 Sam. xiii. 5, Prov. vii. 10, 2 Kings x. 29, Lev. xix. 17, Ezek. iii. 18, 2 Pet. ii. 1..

Q. Have we not many evidences of God's ſpecial hatred and abhorrence of the ſin of murder ?

A. Yes, in his commands and threatenings againſt it, his ſtrict injunctions concerning its puniſhment, in his making inquiſition for blood, and the ſtrange methods of his providence for bringing ſecret murder to light and the judgments he inflicts for it, when it is paſt unpuniſhed by men.

Q. Wherefore is murder ſo hateful to God ?

A. 1. Becauſe it deſtroys a creature made after the image of God, and a creature which the Son of God ſhed his blood to ranſom. 2. It is an uſurping of the power and prerogative of God, who ſaith, Vengeance is mine. 3. It is an imitating of the devil, who was a murderer from the beginning: upon all which accounts the blood of murdered perſons cries loudly to God for vengeance. And therefore all who are guilty in any degree, ſhould flee to the blood of Chriſt for refuge and cleanſing, crying, Deliver me from blood-guiltineſs, O God, Gen. ix. 6, Rom. xii. 19, John viii. 44, Gen. iv. 10, Pſal. li. 14.

QUEST. LXX.

Q. Which is the ſeventh commandment ?

A. The ſeventh commandment is, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery.

QUEST. LXXI.

Q. What is required in the ſeventh commandment ?

A. The ſeventh commandment requireth the preſervation of our own and our neighbour's chaſtity in heart, ſpeech and behaviour.

Q. What is it that ought to be the deareſt to us next to our life ? A. Our chaſtity.

Q. Whoſe chaſtity doth the ſeventh command require the preſervation of ?

A. Our own and our neighbour's.

Q. In what muſt we preſerve our own and our neighbour's chaſtity ?

A. In heart, ſpeech, and behaviour.

Q. What is meant here by chaſtity ?

A. Not abſtinence from marriage, but abiſtnence from all uncleanneſs and filthineſs, whether in a married or unmarried ſtate.

Q. May perſons be both chaſte and married ?

A. Yes; for the apoſtle recommends to married women a "chaſte converſation coupled with fear," 1 Pet. iii. 2.

Q. What is meant by that chaſtity in heart, ſpeech and behaviour, which we muſt ſtudy to preſerve ?

A. 1. That we muſt entertain no thoughts nor deſires but what are pure and chaſte, whatever company we be in. 2. That our diſcourſe one with another muſt be grave and uncorrupt, and ſuch as may tend to edification. 3. That our whole converſation, geſtures and actions, muſt be chaſte, modeſt and decent, as becometh Chriſtians.

Q. Why ſhould we be ſo careful as to preſerve our chaſtity ?

A. Becauſe we are rational creatures, and not brutes; Chriſtians, and not heathens; and the bodies of Chriſtians ſhould be members of Chriſt, and temples of the Holy Ghoſt, and conſequently ought to be kept clean and pure. Nay, it is God's expreſs command, that we ſhould abſtain from fornication and all uncleanneſs, and that we ſhould poſſeſs our veſſels in ſanctification and honour, 1 Cor. vi. 15, 18, 19. 1 Theſſ. iv. 3, 4, 5, Eph. iv. 17, 18, 19, Eph. v. 3.

Q. By what means ſhall we preſerve our chaſtity ?

A. By faith and prayer; by watching over our hearts and eyes; by temperance in our diet, diligence in our callings, keeping of chaſte company, and avoiding all temptations to and occaſions of uncleanneſs, Acts xv. 9. Mat. vi. 13, Prov. iv. 23, Job xxxi. 1, Jer. v. 8, Gen. xxxiv. 1, 2, Prov. ii. 16, Gen. xxxiv. 10, 1 Cor. ix. 27, Prov. v. 8.

QUEST. LXXII.

Q. What is forbidden in the ſeventh commandment ?

A. The ſeventh commandment forbiddeth all unchaſte thoughts, words and actions.

Q. Doth this command forbid all luſtful thoughts and deſires ?

A. Yes, Mat. v. 28. "Whoſoever looketh on a woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

Q. Is not adultry here to be underſtood of any ſort of uncleanneſs ? A. Yes.

Q. Doth this command forbid all obſcene ſpeeches, lacivious jeſts and ſongs ?

A. Yes, Eph. v. 4. " Neither filthineſs, nor fooliſh talking, nor jeſting, which are not convenient.

Q. What are the unchaſte actions, or acts of uncleanneſs, here forbidden ?

A. Adultery, fornication, polygamy, rape, inceſt, ſodomy, and all unnatural luſt; prohibiting of lawful marriages, and diſpenſing with thoſe that are unlawful, unjuſt divorce or deſertion; keeping or allowing of ſtews, and all other actions which have a tendency to promote or encourage unchaſtity and uncleanneſs, Heb. xiii. 4. 1 Cor. vi. 18. Gal. v. 19. Mal. ii. 14, 15, 16. Mat. xix. 5. Deut. xxii. 25. Lev. xviii. 6, 20, 22, 23. Gen. xxxviii. 9. Rom. i. 24, 26. 1 Tim. iv. 3. Mark vi. 18. 1 Cor. v. 1. 2 Cor. vi. 14. Mat. v. 32. 1 Cor. vii. 12, 13. Lev. xix. 29. Jer. v. 7.

Q. Who are theſe who prohibit lawful marriages ?

A. The Papiſts, who forbid the marriage of eccleſiaſtical perſons, and thoſe who (they pretend) have ſpiritual affinity together, as god-fathers, god-mothers, and the children they preſent to baptiſm.

Q. Have they any ground for ſuch prohibitions from ſcripture ?

A. No: For the ſcripture doth declare marriage to be lawful and honourable in all, as being inſtituted by God before the fall; and doth condemn the forbidding to marry, as falſe doctrine. Beſides, the prophets and prieſts were married under the Old Teſtament, as were

Peter and other apoſtles under the New, Heb. xiii. 4, Gen. ii. 18, 22, 24, Lev. xxi. 7, 13, 1 Cor. vii. 2, 9, and ix. 5, Luke iv. 38, Acts xxi. 8, 9, 1 Tim. iii. 2, 4.

Q. Who doth diſpenſe with unlawful marriages?

A. The Pope, who for money doth diſpenſe with inceſtuous marriages, that is, of perſons near a kin, and within the degrees forbidden by the word of God.

Q. Where are thoſe degrees explained in which inceſt is committed?

A. In Lev. xviii. 7, 8, 9, &c. and xx. 11, 14, Deut. xxvii. 20, 22, 23.

Q. In what caſes can married perſons be divorced, or their marriage diſannulled?

A. Only in the caſes of adultery and wilful deſertion, Mat. xix. 9, 1 Cor. vii. 15.

Q. Who teach otherwiſe?

A. The Papiſts, who hold that they may be divorced when either the man or the woman think fit to retire into a cloiſter.

Q. What other actions or things are there forbidden in this commandment, which have a tendency to promote or encourage uncleanneſs?

A. They are ſuch as drunkenneſs, gluttony, idleneſs, frequenting light company, liſtening to filthy ſpeeches or ſongs, lacivious books and pictures, plays and dancings, immodeſt attire, wanton looks and geſtures, and the like.

Q. What are the evils of this ſin of uncleanneſs?

A. It is moſt hateful and diſhonourable a holy God: It debaſes a man from the excellency of his nature, and levels him with the beaſts: It is an infatuating ſin, that takes away the heart, blinds the mind, and ſtupifies the conſcience: It waſtes the means, deſtroyes the body, rots the good name, and damns the ſoul. Nay, it murders two ſouls at once, 2 Sam. xi. 27, 1 Cor. vi. 15, 18, 19, Hoſ. iv. 11, Prov. vi. 26, 32, 33, Prov. v. 7, 9, 10, 11, Eph. v. 3, 4, 5, Rev. xiii. 4, Rev. xxi. 8, and xxii. 15.

Q. What are the remedies againſt this ſin?

A. We muſt pray to God, for Chriſt's ſake, for a new heart to hate all ſin, and to be kept from temptation to it; ſhun lewd company, and watch over the heart and eyes; keep up the remembrance of God's all-ſeeing eye being ſtill upon us, and think often upon the burning flames prepared for theſe who burn with luſt.

QUEST. LXXIII.

Q. Which is the eighth commandment?

A. The eighth commandment is, Thou ſhalt not ſteal.

QUEST. LXXIV.

Q. What is required in the eighth commandment?

A. The eighth commandment requireth the lawful procuring and furthering the wealth and outward eſtate of ourſelves and others.

Q. Whoſe wealth and eſtate doth this command concern?

A. Both our own and other mens.

Q. What doth it require of us with reſpect to them?

A. To uſe means to procure and preſerve them.

Q. May we uſe any means whatſoever for that end?

A. No; for we muſt uſe only lawful means to profit ourſelves or others.

Q. Doth not this command ſuppoſe, that there is no community of goods, but that every man hath a propriety in his eſtate?

A. Yes: For otherwiſe there would be no place for this command; no man could ſay, This is mine, or, That is thine; nor could he give alms to others. A community of goods cannot take place but by conſent of the proprietors in a time or caſe extraordinary, Acts ii. 44.

Q. Is it lawful to ſeek to increaſe our worldly eſtate more than it is?

A. Yes, Gen. 47. 14, Deut. viii. 18, Prov. 13. 11.

Q. For what ends ſhould we endeavour to increaſe it?

A. 1ſt, We ſhould chiefly aim at the glory of God, that we may be capable to honour him with our ſubſtance, and be kept from ſinning againſt him by ſtealing or falſe-ſwearing, as in Prov. 30. 8, 9. 2dly, That we may help others, Eph. iv. 28. 3dly, That we may keep ourſelves and families from being burdenſome to others. And, laſtly, That we may avoid idleneſs.

Q. What means muſt we uſe to procure and further our wordly eſtate?

A. We muſt be diligent and laborious in honeſt and lawful callings; we muſt live ſoberly and frugally, and manage our affairs with prudence and diſcretion; we muſt look to the Lord for ſucceſs in our endeavours, be juſt in all our dealings, be ready to ſupply the needy, uſe proper means to obtain what belongs to us, but avoid unneceſſary law ſuits and ſuretiſhip, 1 Cor. vii. 20. Gen. iv. 2. Prov. x. 4. Eph. iv. 28. Tit. ii. 12. Pſal. cxii. 5. Prov. x. 22. 1 Pet. v. 7. Prov. x. 6. and xi. 24, 25. 1 Cor. vi. 1, 2, &c. Prov. vi. 1, 2.

Q. Is it unlawful for Chriſtians to go to law, to defend or recover their own?

A. No.

Q. Doth not the apoſtle blame them for going to law one with another, ſaying, Why do ye not rather take wrong? &c. 1 Cor. vi. 7.

A. He is there blaming them for going to law about ſmaller matters before heathen magiſtrates, and telling them that they ſhould make up differences among themſelves, or ſuffer wrong, rather than by wrangling to bring a ſcandal upon their holy religion and ſtumble the heathen at chriſtianity.

Q. Doth not Chriſt ſay, Mat. v. 49. If any man will ſue thee at law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke alſo?

A. His meaning is, That we ſhould part with ſome ſmaller thing, ſuch as a coat or a cloke, rather than involve ourſelves into a vexatious law ſuit; But not that we ſhould let any man undo us, when God hath bleſſed us with good laws for our protection.

Q. May we ſeek after the world as our treaſure?

A. No, but as a help under God in our journey. We muſt lay up our treaſure in heaven, and ſecure a portion for ourſelves there thro' eternity.

Q. Should we not be ready to aſſiſt poor widows and orphans with our money, and lend to theſe who are in need?

A. Yes, James i. 27. Pſal. cxii. 5.

Q. What muſt we do to promote and further the wealth of others?

A. We muſt be true and juſt in all our tranſactions with others, and render to every one his due. We ſhould preſerve our neighbour's goods, and reſtore them to him if they be in our hands; we ſhould wiſh and ſeek their good as well as our own, and do in all things to them as we would have them to do to us, Pſal. xv. 2, 4. Zech. viii. 16. 17. Rom. xiii. 7. Lev. vi. 2, 3, &c. 1 Cor x. 24. Mat. vii. 12.

QUEST. LXXV.

Q. What is forbidden in the eighth commandment?

A. The eighth commandment forbiddeth whatſoever doth or may unjuſtly hinder our own or our neighbour's wealth, or outward eſtate.

Q. What is implied in the ſin of ſtealing, here forbidden?

A The injuring of ourſelves or others in wordly eſtates and the uſing unlawful means to gain the world.

Q What way may we injure our own wordly eſtate, and thereby ſteal from ourſelves and our families?

A. By idleneſs, ſloth, negligence in our callings; by raſh engaging in ſuretiſhip and imprudent bargains: by prodigality, and waſteful ſpending, in gluttony, drunkenneſs, lewd company, coſtly apparel, gaming, and the like, 2 Theſſ. iii. 11. Prov. xviii. 9. and xxiii. 21. and xxii. 26, 27. and xxviii. 19. and 21. 17.

Q. Is it a ſin for men to live above their incomes or gains?

A. Yes; for hereby they deſtroy their own eſtate, hinder their own charity, and waſte the ſubſtance of others alſo.

Q. Is not the uſing of unlawful ways and means, to enrich or ſubſiſt ourſelves and families, a ſin againſt the eighth commandment?

A. Yes; for this is no better than ſtealing and diſhoneſty in the ſight of God, however matters be diſguiſed with fair clokes and pretexts before men.

Q. What are theſe unlawful ways of enriching or ſubſiſting ourſelves?

A. They are ſuch as theſe; immoderate cares and labour, covetouſneſs, haſtening to be rich, exceſſive narrowneſs, gaming, uſury, monopolies, running of goods, lying, falſe ſwearing, breaking the ſabbath, bribery, ſimony, ſelling maſſes, pardons and indulgences, uſing unlawful callings and occupations, or taking any ways to defraud or overreach others to gain money.

Q. How is coveteuſneſs againſt the eighth command?

A. Becauſe the covetous man is guilty of ſtealing from ſeverals; 1. From God and his church, in not giving any thing to pious uſes. 2. From his neighbour, in refuſing to help him in ſtraits. 3. From himſelf and his family, in depriving them of the neceſſary comforts of life. All which are againſt Prov. iii. 9, Mal. iii. 8, 10, 1 Cor. ix. 14, Gal. vi. 6, Iſa. lviii. 7. Eccl. iv. 8, and vi. 2. 1 Tim. v. 8.

Q. Do niggards, who have no heart to uſe what they have, ſin greatly?

A. Yes; for they defraud themſelves and their families of the comfort and uſe of theſe good things which God hath beſtowed on them, and ſo cannot be thankful to God the bountiful giver. They are uncharitable to thoſe in need; for he that will not allow it to himſelf, will not love another better than himſelf. They are hurtful to the ſociety and generation they live among; for they hoard up that, which if others had, the poor would be employed, and others would be the better of it, Eccl. iv. 8, and vi. 2, 1 Tim. v. 8, Pſal. xxxvii, 3, 26, 27, Job xxix, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, Pſal, cxii, 3, 5, 9,

Q. Is the gaining of money by uſury unlawful?

A. Yes, Prov. xxviii. 8. Pſal. xv. 5.

Q. What is uſury?

A. The taking of unlawful profit for money that is lent out.

Q. Is it lawful to take any intereſt or gain for money lent?

A. Yes, when it is taken according to the laws of the land, and from theſe who make gain by it, by trading or purchaſing of lands; ſeeing it is equally juſt for the owner of money to aſk a ſhare of the profit which others make by it, as for the owner of land to demand farm from the tenant of it, money being improvable by art and labour as well as land.

Q. What is the unlawful profit for money which may be called uſury?

A. The taking profit for money from the poor who borrow for mere neceſſity, or taking needful things from them in pawn for it; or the taking more profit from any than law allows, as theſe who take ten, fifteen or twenty in the hundred, Exod. xxii. 25, 26. Deut. xxiv. 12, 17 Ezek. xviii. 7, 8.

Q. But the people of Iſrael were diſcharged to take any uſury or profit for lent money from their brethren, Deut. xxiii. 19.

A. This law ſeems to have been peculiar to the Jewiſh ſtate, and that in regard of their eſtates being ſo divided, ſettled and ſecured to their families by the year of jubilee, and their not being employed in trading or making purchaſes like other nations, ſo that they had no occaſion to borrow money but for the preſent ſubſiſtence of their families. But for ſtrangers, who had another way of living, the Iſraelites were allowed to lend to them upon uſury, and to ſhare with them in their profits, Deut. xxiii. 20. Which ſhews that the taking of intereſt is not oppreſſive in itſelf; for they are frequently prohibited to oppreſs a ſtranger, and yet allowed to take uſury from him, Exod. xxii. 21. and xxiii. 9.

Q. What is meant by monopolies, here forbidden?

A. The ingroſſing or buying up of ſome commodities, eſpecially corn and proviſions for the poor, in order to exact great prices from them afterwards, Prov. 11. 26. 'He that withholdeth corn, the people ſhall curſe him: But bleſſing ſhall be upon the head of him that ſelleth it.'

Q. What is the evil of running of goods?

A. It is a denying to render cuſtom to whom it is due; beſides, there are many other ſins which commonly attend this practice, as perjury, bribery, lying, Sabbath-breaking, bloodſhed, &c.

Q. What is meant by bribery, which is here forbidden?

A. It is the taking or giving of bribes or gifts to pervert juſtice, Prov. 17. 23. 'A wicked man taketh a gift out of the boſom, to pervert the ways of judgment.'

Q. What is meant by Simony here forbidden?

A. It is a buying and ſelling of the offices and places of miniſters and other ſpiritual things, for money, good deeds, or favour. A vile practice! it being a token that the deſign of the purch[illegible]s is to make money by them. It is a ſin marked out as odious by the Spirit of God, for it tends to deſtroy all true religion. It is called Simony, from that wicked perſon, Simon Magus, Acts xviii. 19, "He offered them money, ſaying, Give me alſo this power, that on whomſoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghoſt."

Q. Who are theſe who ſell pardons, indulgences and maſſes ?

A. The Popiſh prieſts do it for money, like the Phariſees, who under a pretence of long prayers devoured widows houſes, Mat. 33. 14. So the prieſts under pretence of long prayers for the dead, and ſaying ſoul-maſſes, inrich themſelves by devouring the houſes of the widows and fatherleſs, Rev. 18. 13.

Q. Who are theſe who uſe unlawful trades and occupations to gain money ?

A. Highway-men, thieves, bawds, ſtage-players, jugglers, fortune-tellers, uſurers, ſmugglers, ingroſſers, gameſters, and theſe who make gain by carding, dicing, and ſuch lottery-games : Alſo theſe who make a trade of harbouring ſuch people in their houſes, or letting out houſes to them ; and particularly theſe change-keepers, who for the love of gain do entertain drunkards, unclean perſons, thieves, profaners of the Lord's day, and ſuch looſe perſons.

Q. How are people guilty of breaking the eighth command, by plain ſtealing from others, or injuring them in their worldly eſtate ?

A. Beſides what hath been already mentioned, people are guilty of it by thieving, robbing, man-ſtealing, reſetting of thieves and ſtolen goods, frauds in merchandizing, unfaithfulneſs in contracts and matters of truſt; falſehood in promiſes, denying juſt debts, or not paying them, vexatious law-ſuits, borrowing what we cannot pay, detaining any thing ſtrayed or loſt, or what we have wrongouſly taken ; all extortion and oppreſſion, unjuſt incloſures and depopulations, removing ancient land-marks, ſacrilege, wronging the coin, denying public taxes, withholding the wages of ſervants and labourers, rigorous exacting of debts, ſtopping the ear at the cry of the poor, Eph. iv. 28, Pſal. lxii. 10, 1 Tim. i. 10, Prov. 29, 24, 1 Theſſ. iv. 6, Pſal. 37, 21, Luke 16, 12, Hoſ. iv. 1, Deut. 22, 1, 2, &c. Prov. iii. 28, 29, 30, 1 Cor. vi. 6, Luke 19, 8, Ezek. 22, 12, 29, Lev. 25, 17, Iſa. 8, Mic. 2, 2, Prov. 23, 10, Rom. 2, 22, Mat. 22, 21, Rom. 13, 6, 7, Lev. 19, 13, Mat. 18, 28, Prov. 13, Deut. 15, 7.

Q. What are theſe frauds in merchandizing here forbidden ?

A. Circumveening or overreaching others in buying or ſelling ; taking advantage of their ignorance or neceſſity ; impoſing on them lyes ; deceitful commending of goods when ſelling, and undervaluing them when buying ; ſelling things bad for good ; uſing falſe balances, weights or meaſures ; taking exorbitant prices ; undermining others in their trade, by withdrawing their cuſtomers, or wronging their credit, Lev. xxv. 14. Prov. xx. 14. Lev. xix. 35, 36, Deut. xxv. 13, &c. Prov. xi. 1. Amos viii. 5, 6. Prov. xxviii. 22. 1 Cor. xiii. 4. Phil. ii. 4.

Q. What is the ſin of ſacrilege here forbidden ?

A. Robbing or taking things away from God or his church, that do properly belong unto them ; or alienating any thing dedicated to ſacred uſes : Which, among other things, doth include the ſins of non-reſidence and negligence of paſtors : and the robbing Chriſtian congregations of their right of calling their own miniſters, Mal. iii. 8, 9. Prov. xx. 25. Joſh. vii. 20. 21, 2 Chron. xxviii. 21. 2 Tim. iv. 2. 1 Pet. v. 2, 3. Acts i. 23. and vi. 3. Jer. xxiii. 1, 2.

Q. Is ſtealing a way to be rich ?

A. No, it brings poverty ; for the curſe of God is againſt the thief, Zech. v. 3, 4.

Q. Is not the thief of kin to an Atheiſt ?

A. Yes ; for he practically denies God's omnipreſence and his all-ſeeing eye over him, and that he is a righteous Judge who will call him to account.

Q. Muſt not all guilty of wronging others in their goods, repent and make reſtitution, as they would have mercy from God ?

A. Yes, Lev. vi. 4. Ezek. xxxiii. 15. Luke xix. 8.

QUEST. LXXVI.

Q. Which is the ninth commandment ?

A. The ninth commandment is, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs againſt thy neighbour.

QUEST. LXXVII.

Q. What is required in the ninth commandment ?

A. The ninth commandment requireth the maintaining and promoting of truth between man and man, and of our own and our neighbour's good name, eſpecially in witneſs bearing.

Q. How many duties doth this anſwer mention as required of us by the ninth commandment ?

A. They are four ; 1. The maintaining and promoting of truth between man and man. 2. Maintaining and promoting of our own good name. 3. Maintaining and promoting of our neighbour's good name. 4. Being concerned for all theſe, eſpecially in witneſs-bearing.

Q. Why eſpecially in witneſs-bearing ?

A. Becauſe then we are ſolemnly required to tell the truth, as being before a judge, and upon oath, whereby God is appealed to.

Q. How ought we to maintain and promote truth amongſt men ?

A. By loving the truth, ſpeaking the truth ſincerely, ſtanding and appearing for the truth, and judging and deciding for the truth, Zech. 8, 16, 19, Prov. 31, 8, 9, Exod. 18, 21, Pſal. 15, 2.

Q. Why are we required to ſpeak the truth ſincerely or from the heart ?

A. Becauſe the devil and bad men ſometimes ſpeak the truth from an evil deſign, Mark i. 24, 1 Sam. 22, 9, 10.

Q. Wherefore ought we to maintain and promote our own good name ?

A. That we may be capable to glorify God, and do the more good in our day and generation.

Q. Doth an evil report of men hinder their uſefulneſs ?

A. Yes.

Q. Who are more eſpecially concerned to maintain their good name ?

A. Magiſtrates, miniſters, and profeſſors of religion.

Q. Is commending ourſelves, or carrying proudly, the way to maintain or promote our good name ?

A. No, but rather the way to procure contempt.

Q. What are the proper means then to obtain a good name ?

A. We muſt ſtudy to be humble, harmleſs, ſober, meek, chaſte and juſt ; to keep our word exactly ; to be ready to ſerve others ; and in a word, to practiſe whatever things are true, honeſt, lovely, and of good report, Col. 3, 12, Phil, 2, 15, and iv. 8.

Q. Ought we not to vindicate ourſelves when we are reproached ?

A. Yes ; but with meekneſs, and readineſs to forgive theſe who reproach us,

Q. What if they do not hearken to us, nor believe us ?

A. We muſt commit the cauſe to him that judgeth righteouſly.

Q. What is incumbent upon us to maintain our neighbour's good name ?

A. We ought to have a due eſteem of all the good we ſee in them, and be willing to expreſs this ſeaſonably for their encouragement in the ways of God : we ſhould be ready to hearken to a good report, and unwilling to receive a bad report concerning them ; conceal their infirmities, diſcourage tale bearers, ſpeak well of them behind their backs, and ſtand up in their defence when we know them traduced, Phil. 2, 3, Heb. 6, 9, Rom. 1, 8, 1 Cor. 13, 6, Pſal. 15, 3, Prov. 25, 23, Prov. 17, 9, 1 Sam. 22, 14.

Q. But what ſhould we do when the bad reports we hear of our neighbours are evidently true ?

A. We ſhould be grieved for their miſcarriages, and contribute what we can, by our admonitions, advices, and prayers, for their amendment, and for the recovery of their good names again, 2 Cor. 2, 4, Mat. 18, 15, &c.

QUEST. LXXVIII.

Q. What is forbidden in the ninth commandment ?

A. The ninth commandment forbiddeth whatſoever is prejudicial to truth, or injurious to our own or our neighbour's good name.

Q. What evils doth this anſwer ſet forth as forbidden in this command ?

A. Three ; 1. Saying or doing any thing that is prejudicial to truth. 2. Saying or doing any thing injurious to our own good name. 3. Saying or doing any thing injurious to our neighbour's good name.

Q. What are theſe things here forbidden, which are prejudicial to truth ?

A. The wronging of truth, or any wiſe acting againſt it, in courts of judicature ; the ſpeaking of untruth, falſhood, or telling lies upon any account whatſoever ; equivocating, perverting the truth, falſifying our word, and the like.

Q. How do men injure the truth in courts of judicature ?

A. By perſons informing againſt, or accuſing others falſely ; by the accuſed perſon's denying that of which he is guilty ; by ſuborning falſe witneſſes ; by witneſſes concealing or diſguiſing the truth, or witneſſing falſely ; by perſons agenting and pleading againſt the truth, for an evil cauſe by forgery, or making uſe of falſe writings ; by perverting of mens words to a wrong meaning ; by undue ſilence in a juſt cauſe, or not acting faithfully for it ; by paſſing unjuſt ſentences, juſtifying the guilty, or condemning the innocent, Luke xxiii. 2, Acts xxiv. 2, 5, Gen. iv. 9, Acts vi. 13, 1 Kings xxi. 13, Iſa. v. 23, Pſal. cxix. 69, Lev. v. 1, 2 Tim. iv. 16, Iſa. x. 4, Prov. xvii. 15, and xxxi. 8, 9.

Q. Is every man that ſpeaks an untruth guilty of lying ?

A. No, he is not if he really think the thing to be true which he ſpeaks, altho' it may be falſe.

Q. What is it you mean by a lie then ?

A. A man's ſpeaking of any thing which he knows to be falſe, and telling it with a deſign to deceive.

Q. What is the evil of lying ?

A. 1. It is a ſin moſt hateful to God, who is a God of truth. 2. It tends to deſtroy all human ſociety and commerce among men. 3. It makes a man a child of the devil ; for he is a liar, and the father of lies, Prov. vi. 17. John viii. 44, Deut. xxxii. 4.

Q. Doth not God teſtify his high diſpleaſure againſt the ſin of lying ?

A. Yes, and that even in this world ; for God ſtruck Ananias and Sapphira dead with a lie in their mouths.

Q. What is the portion of liars hereafter ?

A. All liars have their part with the father of lies in the lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone ; for God hath ſaid it, Rev. xxi. 8.

Q. Is it not then one of the worſt of names, to call a man a liar ?

A. Yes ; and therefore we ſhould guard againſt doing it.

Q. But what if the perſons ſo called do deſerve the name ?

A. Then we ſhould be grieved for it, and reprove him, not in paſſion to expoſe him, but in the ſpirit of meekneſs in order to amend him.

Q. May not a man tell a lie to preſerve his own or his neighbour's life ?

A. No ; for we muſt not do evil that good may come. Nay, we may not lie, tho' it were to advance the glory of God, Job xiii. 7, Rom. iii. 7, 8. And, tho' ſome of the ſcripture ſaints may have failed in this reſpect, we muſt not follow their example, but live by precept.

Q. What think you of the popiſh doctrine and practice of equivocations and of keeping no faith with Hereticks ?

A. They are abominable.

Q. What do you think of theſe who lie in jeſt, to make ſport to others ?

A. God calls them fools that make a mock of ſin, Prov. xiv. 9.

Q. What are theſe things injurious to our own good name, which the ninth command forbids ?

A. They are ſuch as thinking or ſpeaking too highly, or too meanly of ourſelves ; flattering, vaunting and vain glorious boaſting ; accuſing ourſelves of what we are not guilty ; aggravating ſmaller faults too much ; excuſing or extenuating ſins, when called to a free confeſſion ; denying the gifts or graces which God hath given us ; raſh expoſing our infirmities before the wicked ; ſpeaking or doing any thing which may be a blot upon our name, Rom. xii. 16. Luke xviii. 11. Exod. iv. 10, 2 Tim. iii. 2. Pſal. xii. 3, 1 Cor. xiii. 4, 5, Mat. vii. 3, Prov. xxviii. 13, Gen. iii. 12, 13, Job xxvii. 5, Col. ii. 18, Prov. 14. 34.

Q. What are the things injurious to our neighbour's good name, here forbidden ?

A. All ſlandering, backbiting, reproaching, ſcolding, taking up and ſpreading evil reports, evil ſpeaking, raſh judging or cenſuring, whiſpering, tale bearing, miſconſtructing the actions, words, or intentions of others ; not covering their infirmities, ſtopping our ears againſt their vindication ; not clearing their innocence when we know it ; ſpeaking truth with an ill deſign againſt them ; being glad at their miſcarriage or diſgrace ; ſcornful contempt, ſcoffing ; fond admiration of ſome, to the diſparagement of others, Pſal. l. 20. Job xix. 3. Pſal. xv. 3. James iv. 11. Rom. i. 29, 30. Lev. xix. 6. Neh. vi. 6. &c. Rom. iii. 8. Pſal. lxix. 10. 1 Sam. i. 13, 14. Acts vii. 57. 1 Sam. xxii. 9. Jer. xlviii. 27. Pſal. xxxv. 15, 16. Gen. xxi. 9. Jude 16.

Q. Tho' we may not raiſe a falſe report, yet may we not repeat it after hearing it?

A. No; for that is to ſpread it: Wherefore, tho' a falſe report be laid at our foot, we ſhould be unwilling to take it up, Pſal. xv. 3.

Q. Ought we not to diſcourage all backbiters and tale-bearers?

A. Yes; for ſuch do 'ſow diſcord among brethren, and ſeparate chief friends:' And we may ſuſpect, that theſe who bring ſuch tales to us, will be ready alſo to take ſome away, Prov. vi. 19, & xvii. 9. & xxv. 23.

QUEST. LXXIX.

Q. Which is the tenth commandment?

A. The tenth commandment is, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbour's houſe, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his man ſervant nor his maid ſervant, nor his ox, nor his aſs, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

QUEST. LXXX.

Q. What is required in the tenth commandment?

A. The tenth commandment requireth full contentment with our own condition, with a right and charitable frame of ſpirit toward our neighbour and all that is his.

Q. In what verſe of the New Teſtament have we this command ſumm'd up and explained?

A. In Heb. xiii. 5. Let your converſation be without covetouſneſs, and be content with ſuch things as ye have.

Q. When the anſwer bears that the command requires full contentment with our condition, doth it mean that we ſhould be content to live in a ſinful condition?

A. No; for God quarrels with ſinners for ſuch a contentment, Rev. iii. 17.

Q. Doth it mean that we ſhould be inſenſible or unconcerned under an afflicted condition?

A. No; for God is diſpleaſed with this too, Jer. v. 3. Hoſ. vii. 9.

Q. What is the meaning of it then?

A. That we ſhould be well ſatisfied with that portion of the neceſſaries and comforts of this life, which God in his wiſdom ſees fit to beſtow upon us, without grudging or repining at his will, but freely acquieſcing in God's determination, as that which is beſt and moſt fit for us.

Q. Who are theſe that attain to this contentment?

A. Theſe who have their ſpirits ſuited to their condition.

Q. Are not theſe the happieſt perſons in this world?

A. Yes; for they have a mercy that is better than the greateſt fulneſs of earthly things.

Q. May a man as ſoon attain to this happineſs of contentment with a little of the world, as with much of it?

A. Yes: for the apoſtle Paul, who had little of it, was well contented with his little; and upon the occaſion of a ſmall ſupply ſent him from Philippi, he ſaith, I have all, and abound; I am full, Phil. iv. 11, 18. Whereas Ahab, who had a kingdom, was full of vexation and diſcontent for want of Naboth's vineyard: and ſo was Haman, tho' laden with riches and honours, for want of a bow from Mordecai, 1 Kings xxi. 4, 5, 6, Eſther v. 11, 12, 13.

Q. How do believers arrive at ſuch contentment with a little of the world?

A. They learn it of God, who teacheth them to believe and think upon their own unworthineſs; to conſider that their Lord had no where to lay his head, that God will give them what is beſt for them, and that their portion in Chriſt and eternal life is large enough for all their wants.

Q. How is it that riches do not afford contentment to the men of this world?

A. Beſides that the world is but vanity, there is a ſecret curſe attending their enjoyments, which blaſts the comfort of them; hence the earthly heart is, like the grave, never ſatisfied, but ſtill would have more, Eccl. v. 10. Prov. xxx. 15, 16.

Q. Is it covetouſneſs for a man to deſire more of this world than what he hath?

A. No, if he deſire it for good ends, with ſubmiſſion to God's will, and uſe honeſt means to get it.

Q. What then is the covetouſneſs here forbidden?

A. It is to deſire the good things which another enjoys, and to grugde at their having of them.

Q. May not a man wiſh for the eſtate of another, if he deſign to do more good with it than he doth?

A. No; for the heart is moſt deceitful, and its purpoſes variable: Hence he is called a fool that truſteth in his own heart, Prov. xxviii. 26, Jer. xvii. 9.

Q. Are they not ſtrangers then to their own hearts, who think they would be contented if they had a little more of the world than what they have?

A. Yes; for the deſires of the heart enlarge with the eſtate.

Q. Are not theſe far wiſer, who are deſirous to obtain the true riches of ſaving grace, and the promiſes of the covenant?

A. Yes; for theſe will abide with them, when other riches will make themſelves wings, and fly away from them, and even then when they ſtand moſt in need of help.

Q. How may thoſe who are poor attain to contentment with their lot, and be kept from covetouſneſs?

A. By placing their chief happineſs in the enjoyment of God; and by conſidering that their worldly condition is of God's carving, and that they have more than they deſerve; that many better have been in worſe circumſtances; that many are the worſe for riches, but few or none the better; and that as they brought nothing into this world, ſo they ſhall carry nothing out, Pſal. xvi. 5, 6, Hab. iii. 17, 18, Gen. xxxii. 10, Job. i. 21, Heb. xi. 38, Eccl. v. 13, 1 Tim. vi. 7, 8.

Q. Is not to be truly godly, the ſhort way to contentment?

A. Yes; for godlineſs is that, unto which only true contentment is annexed, 1 Tim. vi. 6. Chriſt hath purchaſed this grace unto all who believe in him.

Q. Have not the godly poor ſome ſpecial arguments to make them eaſy under their ſtraits?

A. Yes, by conſidering that God deſigns theſe very ſtraits for their good, to keep them humble and depending; that he ſees riches would be a ſnare to draw their hearts away from God; that it is rare to ſee a rich man eminent in grace; that God hath been far kinder to them in giving them a portion in his well-ordered covenant, a goodly heritage, which is infinitely more excellent and durable than any other.

Q. How ſhall the rich attain contentment in their full condition?

A. By ſeeking this grace from God, and not expecting happineſs from the things of time; by ſtudying to employ their riches for the glory of God, and the good of others; by keeping ſtill in mind that God in Chriſt is the ſoul's portion, that the world cannot give them true comfort, that it cannot lengthen out their lives, nor profit them at the hour of death, Luke xii. 15, Pſal. lxii. 10, Prov. xi. 4. 2 Cor. xi. 7, 8.

Q. How ſhall theſe be content and eaſy who are reduced from a proſperous ſtate to low circumſtances?

A. By conſidering that God hath abſolute dominion over us, hath right to do with his own what he will; that he taketh nothing from us, but what he gave, or rather lent to us for a time; that he is holy, juſt, and wiſe, and knows what ſtate is fitteſt for us.

Q. What are the advantages of this grace of contentment?

A. It produceth much inward peace, compoſeth the ſoul for duty, calms the ſpirit in adverſity, and preſerves from many temptations, ſnares, and ſins which thoſe that are diſcontented fall into, ſuch as fretting, murmuring, paſſion, bitterneſs, envy, lying, ſtealing, injuſtice, ſwearing raſhly or falſly, and many others.

Q. What is meant by the right and charitable frame of ſpirit toward our neighbour and all that is his, which this command requireth?

A. It is to be kindly affectioned to others, to wiſh their good, to rejoice in their proſperity, and to be ſorry for their afflictions, Rom. xii. 10, 15, 3 John ii. 3, Heb xiii. 3.

QUEST. LXXXI.

Q. What is forbidden in the tenth commandment?

A. The tenth commandment forbiddeth all diſcontentment with our own eſtate, envying or grieving at the good of our neighbour, and all inordinate motions and affections to any thing that is his.

Q. After God had forbidden the ſins of ſtealing and adultery in the preceeding commands, why doth he add, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbour's houſe, nor his wife?

A. To aſſure us of the ſpiritual extent and meaning of the law, and that it forbids the very firſt motions or riſings of ſin in the heart; the conſideration whereof opened Paul's eyes to ſee his vileneſs thro' indwelling ſin, tho' he was free of groſs vices; Rom. vii. 7. 'I had not known luſt, except the law had ſaid, thou ſhalt not covet.'

Q. What is the firſt ſin which the anſwer mentions as here forbidden?

A. Diſcontentment with our eſtate, which is the ſin of both rich and poor.

Q. Whence doth mens diſcontent with their condition ariſe?

A. From pride, love to the world, and diſtruſt of God's providence.

Q. How doth it ariſe from pride?

A. Becauſe it appears that they who are diſcontented with God's carving, have too high thoughts of themſelves; They either think they deſerve better at God's hand, or that they could have ordered matters better for themſelves than God hath done.

Q. What are the evils of diſcontentment?

A. Beſides theſe mentioned a little before, it makes men unthankful for mercies, unfit for duties, uneaſy to their relations and neighbours; it breeds ſtrifes, debates, law-ſuits, rebellions and murders; it robs men of the comfort of their lives, makes their croſſes heavier, and provokes God to prolong and add to them.

Q. What is the ſecond ſin here forbidden?

A. Envy, which is a ſecret diſcontentedneſs at the proſperous ſtate of others, or a grudging or grieving at their wealth, qualifications or honours.

Q. What are the evils of this ſin of envy?

A. It is heart-murder, and a ſin againſt all reaſon; yea, 'tis deviliſh to be a man's enemy for no other reaſon but becauſe God is kind to him; 'Tis a quarreling with God's wiſdom and goodneſs; it is a rottenneſs to the bones; it produceth confuſion and every evil work, Mat. xx. 15. Prov. xiv. 30. James iii. 16.

Q. What are theſe inordinate motions and affections to the things of our neighbour, which are here forbidden?

A. All deſires after theſe things which we cannot have by lawful means, or without wronging our neighbour; and all inclinations to coveting, Col. iii. 5.

QUEST. LXXXII.

Q. Is any man able perfectly to keep the commandments of God?

A. No mere man, ſince the fall, is able in this life perfectly to keep the commandments of God, but doth daily break them in thought, word, and deed.

Q. Why is it ſaid in the anſwer, No mere man?

A. To except the Man Chriſt Jeſus, who did perfectly keep God's commands.

Q. Was not Chriſt a mere man?

A. No; he was both God and Man.

Q. Why is it ſaid, ſince the fall?

A. To except our firſt parents when in the eſtate of innocence, who then were able to keep God's commands perfectly.

Q. Why is it ſaid is able in this life?

A. To except the ſaints in heaven, who are perfectly able to do it there.

Q. Can no ſaint on earth attain to perfection in keeping God's law?

A. No; for there is not a juſt man upon earth that doth good and ſinneth not, Eccl. vii. 20. 1 John i. 8, 10.

Q. How comes it to be ſo?

A. Becauſe the beſt ſaints here are but renewed in part, and they have remains of corruption in them, which fight againſt the ſpiritual and renewed part, Gal. v. 17. And we find the beſt of ſcripture ſaints acknowledging this, and complaining of their imperfections, Job ix. 2, 3. Pſal. ix. 13. and cxxx. 3. and cxliii. 2. Iſa. lxiv. 6. Dan. ix. 5. Rom. vii. 18, &c.

Q. Are not Noah, Job and Hezekiah called perfect men? Gen vi. 9. Job. i. 8. 2 Kings xx. 3.

A. That is not meant of an abſolute perfection, or a perfection of degrees; but only of the perfection of ſincerity, or a perfection of parts; as the body of an infant is reckoned perfect, tho' it be not come to the higheſt perfection. And that the ſcripture doth not mean abſolute perfection, is evident from its recording the ſins and imperfections of theſe very perſons which are called perfect, Gen. ix. 21. Job iii. 1, 3. 2 Chron. xxxii. 25.

Q. What is meant by ſincerity or a perfection of parts?

A. A ſincere or upright aiming at conformity to the will of God in all things, and a conſtant preſſing on for farther degrees of holineſs.

Q. Doth not David ſay, Judge me, O Lord, according to my righteouſneſs? Pſal. vii. 8

A. He ſpeaks there, not of the righteouſneſs of his perſon, but of the righteouſneſs of his cauſe, which he defended againſt his adverſaries, and to which he appealed.

Q. Doth not the apoſtle ſay, whoſoever is born of God doth not commit ſin? 1 John iii. 9.

A. The ſenſe is, That the regenerate do not commit ſin as they once did, with delight, or full conſent of the will; they do not allow ſin to reign in them. But that they are not without ſin, is evident from 1 John i. 8.

Q. Why doth Chriſt require us to be perfect, Mat. v. 48. if we cannot attain to it?

A. 1. To let us know what he hath right to demand of us. 2. To humble us, and drive us to Chriſt for perfect righteouſneſs. 3. To teach us to deſire, aim at, and preſs toward perfection in holineſs.

Q. In what reſpect are we guilty of breaking the commands of God?

A. We are guilty of it daily, in thought, word, and deed.

Q. Doth God look upon thoughts of ſin as breaches of his law?

A. Yes, Gen. viii. 21. Mat. v. 28. & xv. 19, Jer. iv. 14.

QUEST. LXXXIII.

Q. Are all tranſgreſſions of the law equally hainous?

A. Some ſins in themſelves, and by reaſon of ſeveral aggravations, are more hainous in the ſight of God than others.

Q. Are all ſins equal?

A. No, ſome are more hainous than others.

Q. What is that for ſins to be hainous?

A. It is to be more hateful and offenſive to a holy God, than others are.

Q. How doth it appear that ſome ſins are more offenſive to God than others?

A. From theſe things; 1. The ſin-offering under the law was to be greater than the treſpaſs-offering. 2. Some ſins are more ſeverely threatened and puniſhed than others. 3. Some ſins are declared not capable of pardon Lev. ix. 3. Mat. xxiii. 14, and xii. 31.

Q. Why is it ſaid in the anſwer that ſome ſins are more heinous in the ſight of God than others?

A. To teach us by what rule we ſhould judge of the greatneſs of ſins, ſeeing many are apt to make light of that which is heinous before God, who certainly is the proper judge in this matter.

Q. What is it that makes ſome ſins more heinous than others?

A. Some ſins are more heinous in themſelves, or in their own nature; and ſome by reaſon of certain aggravations attending them.

Q. What are theſe ſins which are more heinous in their own nature than others?

A. Sins againſt the firſt table of the law, or theſe which are committed more immediately againſt God, are more heinous than ſins againſt the ſecond table, or theſe which are immediately againſt man; as for inſtance, ſacrilege is more heinous than theft, idolatry than adultery, blaſphemy againſt God than defaming of our nighbour, 1 Sam. ii. 25.

Q. Are not ſome of the ſins againſt the firſt table more heinous than others?

A. Yes; and we find atheiſm and idolatry marked out as ſins of the greateſt magnitude, Exod. v. 2, Jer. xliv. 4

Q. Are not ſome of the ſins againſt the ſecond table more heinous than others, in their own nature?

A. Yes, and murder is noted for a moſt heinous and crying ſin; and ſo is oppreſſion, eſpecially of the widow and fatherleſs, Gen. iv. 10, Exod. xxii. 23.

Q. Are heinous and crying ſins capable of forgiveneſs?

A. Yes, upon true faith and repentance, Iſa. i. 18, 1 Cor. vi. 11.

Q. What are the only fountains of pardon which ſinners muſt look to?

A. The free grace of God, and the meritorious blood of Jeſus Chriſt, Luke vii. 42, Eph. i. 7, 1 John i, 7.

Q. What are the moſt heinous of all ſins in the world?

A. The ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, being a ſin unto death, which is not forgiven, Mat. xii, 31, 1 John v, 16.

Q. What is the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt?

A. It may be deſcribed, an apoſtaſy, or turning from God and his truths and ways, after clear illumination and a fair profeſſion; and ſinning wilfully with hatred, malice and deſpite, againſt Chriſt and his people, and continuing impenitent therein to the end, Mat. xii. 31, 32, Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6, and x, 26, 29.

Q. What are the aggravations which make ſome ſins more heinous than others?

A. They are the particular circumſtances which do attend them, that make them greater than otherwiſe they would be. And from ſcripture we find ſins do receive their aggravations, 1. From the perſons offending. 2. From the parties offended. 3. From the means againſt which ſins are committed. 4. From the manner of committing ſin. 5. From the time of ſinning. 6. From the place where ſins are committed.

Q. How is ſin aggravated from the perſon offending?

A. Sin is aggravated, if the perſon guilty be of age and experience, or be eminent for his gifts, profeſſion, ſtation or office in the world; ſo that his example may encourage or draw others into ſin, 2 Sam. xii. 14, 1 Kings xiv. 16, Mic. iii. 5, Rom. ii. 24, Gal. ii. 13.

Q. Are not the ſins of Chriſtians more heinous than the ſins of Heathens? A. Yes.

Q. Are not the ſins of theſe children who have had religious education and examples, more heinous than the ſins of others? A. Yes.

Q. How is ſin aggravated from the parties offended?

A Sin is aggravated, when it is committed immediately againſt God and his perfections, againſt Chriſt and his grace, againſt the Holy Spirit and his operations; againſt men in eminent ſtations, our ſuperiours and friends to whom we are much obliged; againſt the ſouls of men, and theſe who are dear to Chriſt, Pſal. li. 4, Rom, ii, 4, Mat. xxi, 38, Heb. 12, 25, Eph. 4, 30, Acts 7, 51, Numb. 12, 8, Iſa. 3, 5, Prov. 30, 17, Pſal, 41, 9, Ezek. 13, 19, Mat. 18, 6, 1 Cor. 8, 12.

Q. How is ſin aggravated from the means againſt which it is committed?

A. Sin is much aggravated, when it is committed againſt a clear and lively diſpenſation of goſpel light and love, againſt the moſt gracious calls and offers, againſt the light of nature, and the convictions of conſcience; againſt mercies, threatenings and judgments; againſt counſel and admonitions; againſt long patience and good examples; againſt church cenſures and civil puniſhments; againſt prayers and purpoſes, vows and covenants, Mat. xi, 21, 23, John xv, 22, Rom. i, 27, Dan. v, 22, Deut. 32, 6, Amos 4, 9, Jer. 5, 3, Prov. 29, 1, Tit. 3, 10, Prov. 23, 35, Pſal, 78, 36, 37, Eccl. 5, 4 Lev, 26, 25.

Q. How is ſin aggravated from the manner of committing it?

A. When a man ſins wilfully and without temptation, preſumptuouſly and without fear, deliberately and with contrivance, obſtinately and with reſolution, impudently and with boaſting, willingly and with delight, maliciouſly and with deſpite, cuſtomarily and with continuance, openly and with contempt. Likewiſe ſin is much aggravated, when a man is guilty of doing that which he condemns in others, of relapſing into ſin after repentance, of doing evil under a cloke of religion, or of teaching and encouraging others to ſin, Jer. vi. 16. Numb xv. 30. Pſal. xxxvi. 4. Pſal. lii. 1, Prov. ii. 14, Iſa. lvii. 17, Zech. vii. 11, 2 Pet. ii. 20, Rom. i, 32, and ii. 21, Rev. ii. 14.

Q. How is ſin aggravated from the time of ſinning?

A. Sin becomes more heinous, when it is committed upon the Sabbath-day, or when the perſon ought to have been at divine worſhip, or after ſolemn ordinances and engagements to be the Lord's, or in time of affliction, when the Lord is calling to humiliation, Ezek. xxiii. 38, Iſa. xxii. 12, 13, and lviii. 3, Numb. xxv, 6, 2 Chron. xxviii. 22, Iſa. i. 1.

Q. How may ſin be aggravated from the place of ſinning?

A. When it is committed in a land of light, in a place dedicate to the worſhip of God, in a place of gracious deliverances, or in a public place before others, who may thereby be tempted and enſnared, Iſa. xxvi. 10, 1 Sam. ii. 22, Pſal. cvi. 7, 2 Sam. xvi. 22.

QUEST. LXXXIV.

Q. What doth every ſin deſerve?

A. Every ſin deſerveth God's wrath and curſe, both in this life and that which is to come.

Q. What is meant by God's wrath and curſe due to ſin?

A. Theſe dreadful puniſhments, which are the effects of the ſin revenging juſtice of God, and the condemning ſentence of his broken law, both here and hereafter.

Q. Doth the leaſt ſin deſerve eternal puniſhment?

A. Yes.

Q. How is that evident?

A. Becauſe every ſin is an offence done againſt an infinitely holy and righteous God, and his juſt law, wherefore God's juſtice doth demand infinite ſatisfaction for it, Gal. iii. 10, Rom. vi. 23, Ezek. xviii. 4.

Q. How doth it appear that there is ſo much evil in every ſin?

A. Becauſe every ſin in its own nature is a walking contrary to God, and a contemning of him who is infinitely good: It ſtrikes againſt his ſovereignty, his infinite power, his wiſdom, his goodneſs, and holineſs, Lev. xxvi. 40. Pſal. x. 13. James ii. 10, 11. 1 Cor. x. 22. Jer. ii. 5. Hab. i. 13.

Q. Is there no ground for the Popiſh diſtinction of ſins venial and mortal?

A. No; for every ſin in its own nature is mortal and deadly; and though every ſin be venial or pardonable through Chriſt, yet in itſelf it deſerves eternal puniſhment, Rom, vi. 23. Deut. xxvii. 26. Rom. i. 18.

Q. Is there not more evil in the leaſt ſin, than the ſufferings of a finite creature can make atonement for?

A. Yes; and therefore the ſufferings of the damned, being never ſatisfactory, muſt be eternal.

Q. Cannot the leaſt ſin be expiated by any thing but the blood of Chriſt?

A. No, Heb. ix. 22.

QUEST. LXXXV.

Q. What doth God require of us, that we may eſcape his wrath and curſe due to us for ſin?

A. To eſcape the wrath and curſe of God due to us for ſin, God requireth of us faith in Jeſus Chriſt, repentance unto life, with the diligent uſe of all the outward means, whereby Chriſt communicateth to us the benefits of redemption.

Q. How know you that the wrath of God is due to us for every ſin?

A. Becauſe the wrath of God is revealed from heaven againſt all unrighteouſneſs of men, and every ſin is a contempt of an infinite God, Rom. i. 18. Pſal. x. 13.

Q. Hath God revealed any way for eſcaping that wrath which is due to us for ſin?

A. Yes, namely, the way of faith and repentance, with a diligent uſe of all the means of grace.

Q. Doth God require faith, repentance, and the uſe of means in order to ſatisfy for ſin, and purchaſe ſalvation to us?

A. No; for that would be to make a Saviour of our duties, and to render Chriſt's death in vain, Gal. ii 21.

Q. Why then doth God require theſe things of us?

A. He requires them only as means for applying the purchaſe of Chriſt's death, and communicating the grace he hath merited unto us, Luke xxiv. 47. Rom. i. 16, 17, Luke xxi. 36.

Q. Are faith, repentance, and other duties the conditions of our ſalvation?

A. Yes, they may be called ſo, if by conditions we underſtand no more but that they are neceſſary means of our ſalvation, as being appointed by God for applying the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which is the only meritorious and pleadable condition of our ſalvation.

Q. Could not God ſave us by Chriſt's righteouſneſs, without faith, repentance, or any other means?

A. Whatever God might do in his abſolute ſovereignty, it ought to ſatisfy us, that God hath expreſly revealed his will in this matter, and hath declared that it is through the uſe of theſe means only that he will communicate to us the benefits of redemption; and this makes them abſolutely neceſſary to all who expect ſalvation by Chriſt: And indeed it would not be for the honour of God to pardon or ſave any that go on in ſin, and neglect Chriſt and his worſhip.

QUEST. LXXXVI.

Q. What is faith in Jeſus Chriſt?

A. Faith in Jeſus Chriſt is a ſaving grace, whereby we receive and reſt upon him alone for ſalvation, as he is offered to us in the goſpel.

Q. Is not faith taken in different ſenſes in ſcripture?

A. Yes; ſometimes it is taken for the doctrine of faith and ſometimes for the grace of faith.

Q. How is it otherwiſe diſtinguiſhed?

A. Into hiſtorical faith, the faith of miracles, and ſaving faith.

Q. Is it ſaving faith for a man to believe that there is a God, or that Jeſus Chriſt is the Saviour of ſinners, or that the Bible is true?

A. No; for that is only hiſtorical faith, and the devils come this length, James ii. 19.

Q. What is hiſtorical faith?

A. It is the aſſent of the underſtanding unto the truths revealed in the word, whereby a man believes and gives credit to them as he doth to the truth of a hiſtory. So did theſe, Mat. xiii. 20, John ii. 23, Acts viii. 13, and Acts xxvi. 27.

Q. What more is there in ſaving faith than for a man to aſſent or give credit to the divine teſtimony?

A. If the aſſent be ſtrong and full, it will indeed bring along with it the other act of faith; that is, if a man not only aſſent to the things revealed in the goſpel as true, but alſo firmly believe that they are as valuable and excellent as they are held forth to be, then he cannot but cloſe with them. But if our aſſent doth only regard the truth of the things propoſed, and not their goodneſs and ſuitableneſs to us, it is not true and ſaving: for, where faith is true, there is not only an aſſent of the mind to the verity of goſpel-truths, but alſo a conſent of the heart unto them, as worthy of all acceptation, 1 Tim. i. 15, Rom. x. 10.

Q. What is the faith of miracles?

A. It is a peculiar confidence in the power of God, for producing of miraculous effects, which many had in the firſt times of the goſpel both actively and paſſively. Some had faith to heal, and others to be healed; and both theſe were ſometimes found in perſons void of ſaving faith, as in Judas and the unthankful lepers.

Q. Why is faith in the anſwer called a grace?

A. Becauſe it is God's free gift without any deſerving in us, Eph. ii. 8.

Q. Why is it called a ſaving grace.?

A. Becauſe there is no ſalvation without it, and all theſe who have it ſhall be ſaved, Mark xvi. 16.

Q. How is it that faith doth ſave us?

A. Not by virtue of any worth in faith, or of its being a deed or work of ours; but becauſe faith is the grace that takes hold of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, by which only we are juſtified and ſaved.

Q. Why then are we ſaid to be juſtified and ſaved by faith?

A. Becauſe faith is the inſtrument and means of our juſtification and ſalvation.

Q. Is not faith the fruit of Chriſt's purchaſe?

A. Yes: For it is given in the behalf of Chriſt to believers; he ſends his Spirit to work faith, and hence he is called both the Author and Finiſher of faith, Phil. i, 29.

Q. What mean you by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which is the matter and ground of our juſtification before God?

A. Chriſt doing and dying, or all that he did and ſuffered for us as our Surety and Cautioner. See before, 33. queſt. Page 320.

Q. Is it the ſame righteouſneſs then, which we find ſometimes called the righteouſneſs of God, and ſometimes the righteouſneſs of faith? Rom. x. 3, 6.

A. Yes, it is the very ſame; and it is called the righteouſneſs of God, becauſe it is of God's deviſing and of God's performing, he being God that wrought it out for us. It is called the righteouſneſs of faith, becauſe it is by or thro' faith that the righteouſneſs of Chriſt becomes ours; and hence we find it ſometimes called the righteouſneſs of God by faith, Phil. iii. 9.

Q. What is the proper object of faith?

A. The general object of faith is the whole word of God; faith doth aſſent and conſent to all its truths, offers, commands, promiſes, and threatenings: But the ſpecial object of faith is Chriſt and his Surety-righteouſneſs; for it is to this the penitent ſoul doth look as the only ground of his juſtification before God, 2 Cor. ii. 2.

Q. What are the principal acts of juſtifying or ſaving faith?

A. There are two mentioned in the anſwer, namely, receiving and reſting upon Chriſt.

Q. What are we to underſtand by theſe two acts of faith?

A. 1. To receive Chriſt is to make choice of Chriſt, and embrace the offer of him as our Surety, and to conſent with a hearty approbation to the goſpel-way of juſtification and ſalvation thro' Chriſt. 2. To reſt upon Chriſt, is to adventure our all upon a crucified Jeſus, by truſting in him alone, and laying the full weight and ſtreſs of our ſouls and our whole ſalvation upon him, as the only foundation and ground ſtone laid in Zion for periſhing ſinners to reſt on, Pſal. ii. 12. 1 Pet. ii. 6.

Q. Why is faith ſaid to reſt upon Chriſt alone in the anſwer?

A. To ſhew that ſinners muſt not reſt partly upon Chriſt and partly upon their own doings for ſalvation, but upon Jeſus Chriſt alone.

Q. Doth not the ſoul's reſting on Chriſt import that it is laden and burdened when it comes to Chriſt?

A. Yes; for the ſoul is burdened, not only with the fears of wrath, but alſo with the guilt and pollution of ſin, and with the power of indwelling corruption which it longs to get rid of.

Q. What is there in Chriſt to give reſt to the burdened ſoul?

A. There is in him a fulneſs of merit to expiate guilt, ſatisfy juſtice, and obtain cleanſing and purity to the ſoul; yea, there is a fulneſs of the Spirit in him, to renew and ſanctify the natures of all who come to him.

Q. Muſt not we by faith receive and reſt on Chriſt in all his three offices, of Prophet, Prieſt and King?

A. Yes, we muſt receive and reſt on Chriſt, 1. As our Prieſt by renouncing all confidence in our own doings, and being content to be juſtified by Chriſt's ſacrifice and righteouſneſs only. 2. We muſt receive and reſt upon Chriſt as our Prophet, by renouncing all our carnal reaſonings, and ſubmitting to be taught by Chriſt, and to learn and believe according to the revelation of his word. 3. We muſt receive and reſt upon Chriſt as our King, by renouncing our own wills and inclinations, and ſubjecting our whole man, hearts and wills, to Chriſt to be inclined and ruled by his Spirit according to the directions of his word.

Q. Hath ſaving faith any other act beſides theſe of receiving and reſting upon Jeſus Chriſt?

A. Yes; for ſaving faith doth alſo receive and believe the whole word of God, and that becauſe of the divine teſtimony; and acteth differently upon the ſeveral parts thereof, giving credit to its hiſtories and prophecies, yielding obedience to its commands, trembling at its threatenings, and embracing its promiſes as infallibly true and certain: Tho' ſtill the receiving and reſting upon Chriſt, as tendered in the goſpel-promiſes for ſalvation, be the chief and main acts of ſaving faith, John iv. 42. 1 John v. 10. Acts. xxiv. 14. Rom. xvi. 26. Iſa. lxvi. 2. Heb. 11. 13. John i. 12. Iſa. xxvi. 3.

Q. For what ends are we by faith to receive and reſt upon Chriſt?

A. For ſalvation, that is, for our complete ſalvation, not only from wrath, but from the filth, power and being of ſin, and all the effects of it; ſo that it includes juſtification, ſanctification, and eternal glory.

Q. What is the ground upon which we are warranted to receive and reſt upon Chriſt for ſalvation?

A. Upon this, that he is offered to us in the goſpel.

Q. Unto whom is Chriſt offered in the goſpel?

A. Not to believers only, but to all who hear the goſpel, even the greateſt ſinners, Mark xvi. 15. Rom. x. 18. Iſa. xlv. 22. and xlvi. 12.

Q. Upon what terms is Chriſt offered to us?

A. He is offered, 1ſt, Freely without money or price, or without regard to any good thing in us, but merely to our need, Iſa. lv. 1. and lxv. 1. 2dly, Chriſt is offered to us wholly and undividedly, in all his offices, of Prophet, Prieſt and King; in all which we muſt receive him as before mentioned.

Q. Do any refuſe Chriſt who have him offered to them?

A. Yes, the moſt part do refuſe him, John i. 11. Iſa liii. 1.

Q. Who are they that will be reckoned refuſers of Chriſt?

A. All who do not believe the report of the goſpel, and embrace the offer made unto them.

Q. Is ſaving faith a ſure proof of our being elected to eternal life?

A. Yes, and therefore it is called the faith of God's elect; and it is ſaid, As many as were ordained to eternal life believed, Tit. i. 1. Acts xiii. 48.

Q. Why is faith called precious in ſcripture? 1 Pet. i. 7 2 Pet. i. 1.

A. Becauſe it is honoured of God to be the inſtrument of our juſtification, to be the eye that diſcerns Chriſt, the hand that takes hold of him, and the bond of our union with him, it is the ſpring of the other graces, and doth ſet them a-work; it is the means of our ſpiritual life and ſupplies, and of our peace and joy, Rom. v. 1, 2, 3, &c. Eph. iii. 17. Gal. ii. 20. Rom. xv. 13.

Q. Why doth God put ſuch reſpect upon faith above the other graces?

A. Becauſe faith puts the higheſt honour upon his beloved Son, and approves of God's device of ſaving us thro' him, it ſtrips the creature of all ground of boaſting and doth highly exalt free grace; it gives God all the glory of our ſalvation, which is moſt acceptable to him, Mat. xvii. 5. 1 Pet. ii. 7. Rom. iii. 27, and iv. 16. Eph. ii. 7, 8.

Q. By what marks may we know if we have ſaving faith?

A True faith produceth a high eſteem of Chriſt, and worketh by love; it ſoftens and purifies the heart; it vents itſelf much in prayer and good works, and looſes the heart from earthly things, 1 Pet. ii. 7. Gal. v. 6. Mark ix. 24. Acts xv. 9. Heb. iv. 14, 16. Jam. ii. 18. 2 Cor. iv. 18.

Q. Have all believers ſaving faith in the ſame degree?

A No; for ſome are weak, while others are ſtrong.

Q. How doth the weakneſs of faith diſcover itſelf?

A. In much doubting and ſtaggering at the promiſes, in depending upon the means more than Chriſt, in living much by ſenſe, in diſtruſting of God, and fainting in the day of adverſity.

Q. How may we know if there be faith in reality, amidſt ſuch weakneſſes and ſigns of unbelief?

A. It is a hopeful evidence, if the ſoul in the mean time be mourning for its unbelief, crying for more faith, and looking ſincerely to Chriſt for righteouſneſs and ſtrength.

Q. What are the evidences of a ſtrong faith?

A. Where faith is ſtrong, the ſoul will be aiming at the Redeemer's honour in all its actions. The love of Chriſt will conſtrain more powerfully to hate ſin, and live godly, than the fear of hell or hope of reward can do: The ſoul will rejoice in tribulation, and be much in the exerciſe of praiſe; it will truſt God in time of danger, and look thro' all diſcouragements to the faithfulneſs of God, and rely upon it.

QUEST. LXXXVII.

Q. What is repentance unto life?

A. Repentance unto life is a ſaving grace, whereby a ſinner out of the true ſenſe of his ſin, and apprehenſion of the mercy of God in Chriſt, doth with grief and and hatred of his ſin, turn from it unto God, with full purpoſe of and endeavour after new obedience.

Q. Why is repentance called a grace and a ſaving grace?

A. See the anſwers before, concerning faith.

Q. Why is it here called repentance unto life?

A. So true repentance is called, Acts xi. 18. becauſe it is a neceſſary means to attain eternal life, and to diſtinguiſh it from the ſorrow of the world that worketh death, 2 Cor. vii. 10.

Q. What is that ſorrow of the world?

A. It is that which we call a legal repentance, that hath no good effect; being a ſorrow only for ſome groſs ſin, for fear of wrath, but not a ſorrow for all ſin as it diſhonours God, ſuch as goſpel penitents have.

Q. Can a man by his own natural powers attain to goſpel repentance?

A. No; for the heart by nature is like a ſtone, and none but the Spirit of God can take it away and give a heart of fleſh, according to Ezek. xxxvi. 26.

Q. What are the parts of true repentance, held forth in the awſwer?

A. There are ſix; 1. A true ſenſe of ſin, 2. An apprehenſion of the mercy of God in Chriſt. 3. A grief for ſin. 4, A hatred of ſin. 5. A turning from ſin. 6. A turning to God and the ways of new obedience.

Q. What is the true ſenſe of ſin, which is neceſſary to repentance unto life?

A. It is a heart-affecting diſcovery of the guilt, malignity, and aggravations of ſin, our undone ſtate by it, and our inability, to deliver ourſelves from it, which wounds and diſtreſſes the conſcience, and fills the mind with perplexity and reſtleſsneſs until it can ſee ſome ground of hope, Pſal. xxxviii, 3, 4. Acts ii. 37.

Q, Wherefore is ſuch a ſenſe of ſin neceſſary in penitents?

A, To make ſin hateful, and Chriſt deſirable in their eyes; for it is only ſuch ſick ſouls who will value the phyſician, Mat ix. 12,

Q, Are there not many who may be affected with a ſenſe of ſin, who never become true penitents?

A, Yes; there is frequently conviction and trouble for ſin, without converſion.

Q. What is the differnce between the convictions and trouble of unconverted perſons and theſe of true penitents?

A. The convictions and trouble of the one are only for ſome groſs ſins, ariſing from a natural conſcience and fears of hell; they are of ſhort continuance, and are cured by natural means: But the convictions and trouble of the other are for all ſins whatſoever, inward and outward, ſecret and open; they ariſe from the Holy Spirit, a view of the evil of ſin, and the injury done to God thereby; they are abiding, and are only cured by the blood of Chriſt,

Q. What mean you by the apprehenſion of the mercy of God, which is needful to true repentance?

A. That it is needful to bring a loſt ſinner to true repentance, that he diſcover that God is merciful, ready to forgive, and willing to be reconciled to repenting and returning prodigals.

Q. Why is this needful?

A. Becauſe, without it, a deep ſenſe of his ſin is ready to overwhelm the ſoul with deſpair, as it did Judas.

Q. After what way and manner is the mercy of God diſcoverable to ſinners?

A. Only in and thro' Chriſt the Mediator, who hath given ſatisfaction to the juſtice of God for ſin.

Q. Can then the general goodneſs of God, or his abſolute mercy, be any relief to convinced ſinners?

A. No; becauſe God is alſo infinite in juſtice, and holineſs, and therefore muſt be a conſuming fire to ſinners out of Chriſt.

Q. What is that true grief for ſin which is neceſſary to true repentance?

A. It is a hearty ſorrow and mourning of the ſoul for committing ſuch an abominable thing as ſin is, and that mainly becauſe ſin hath contemned and diſhonoured God, it hath crucified Jeſus Chriſt, it hath grieved the Holy Spirit, it hath deformed and defiled our ſouls, it hath diſabled us from glorifying God and debarred us from communion with him.

Q. What is that hatred of ſin which is neceſſary in true repentance?

A. It is an inward abhorrence of ſin, as the moſt abominable thing, and a lothing of ourſelves becauſe of it, Jer. xxxi. 19.

Q. Can any who hate ſin make a ſport of it?

A. No.

Q. Whence is it that a true penitent doth hate ſin?

A. Becauſe ſin is moſt hateful to God, it is the murderer of Chriſt, and an enemy to his own ſoul.

Q. What kind of hatred doth the true penitent bear to ſin?

A. 1. It is a deep and implacable hatred, which makes him aim at the utter ruin and extirpation of ſin in his ſoul. 2 It is an univerſal hatred; for ſeeing the true penitent doth hate ſin as ſin, he muſt hate every ſin, whether ſecret and open, pleaſant or profitable, in himſelf or in others, Rom. vii. 24. Pſalm cxix. 128.

Q. Is not the ſoul's turning from ſin an eſſential part of true repentance?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of turning muſt it be?

A. 1. It muſt be a turning from ſin in heart, with a real grief for it, and hatred of it, Pſalm xxxviii. 18. Ezek. xxxvi. 31 2. It muſt be an univerſal turning from ſin both in the heart and in the life, without reſerving of one known ſin, Ezek. xviii. 31. 3, It muſt be attended with turning to God, and the ways of new obedience, Iſa. i. 16, 17. Iſa. lv. 7.

Q. Is turning from ſin always a ſure ſign of true repentance?

A. Not always: For we read of ſome who turn, but not to the Moſt High; they may ceaſe to do evil, and not learn to do well; They may turn from one ſin to another, from profaneneſs to ſuperſtition, or from preſumption to deſpair, Hoſ vii. 16. Jer. iv. 1.

Q. Is not turning from ſin, when it is followed with turning to the Lord, a certain evidence of true repentance?

A. Yes; for theſe two are the very eſſential parts of it.

Q. What is this turning to the Lord which is eſſential to true repentance?

A. It imports, 1 Our applying to God in Chriſt for pardon of ſin, and cleanſing from it 2. Our having the outgoings of our hearts and affections to him, as our portion and happineſs. 4 Our giving up ourſelves to his ſervice and obedience, Iſa. lv. 7. Jer. iii. 22. Iſa. xxvi, 8. Pſalm cxix. 57, 58, 59.

Q. How may we know if our turning from ſin to God be true and real?

A. When it is accompanied with a full purpoſe of, and ſincere endeavours after new obedience; for purpoſes to continue in ſin, or negligence in God's ſervice, are inconſiſtent with true repentance.

Q. Why is the penitent believer's obedience called new obedience.

A. 1. Becauſe it ſprings from new principles, faith and love. 2. It is done for new ends, not for worldly intereſt, but to pleaſe God, and to advance his glory. 3. It is performed in a new manner, to wit, with the heart, and by faith looking to Chriſt for ſtrength to do it, and for righteouſneſs to make it acceptable to God.

Q. What may we think of their repentance, who live in the neglect of duty, or in the practice of ſin, afterwards?

A. We may think that their profeſſion of repentance hath not been ſincere.

Q. Can any man look for pardon or ſalvation without repentance?

A. No; for Chriſt hath expreſly told us, "Except ye repent ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh," Luke xiii. 3.

Q. May a man delay his repentance until he come to a death-bed?

A. By no means; for many die very ſuddenly, neither have we power of ourſelves to repent when we will, and men turn hardened in ſin by continuing in it.

Q. Is there room for repentance for old ſinners, and theſe who have been notoriouſly wicked?

A. Yes; for, if they repent, God hath ſaid, he will abundantly pardon, Iſa lv. 7. And we have inſtances of his doing ſo, 1 Tim. i. 13, 14, 15.

Q. But how ſhall we attain to true repentance?

A. We muſt cry earneſtly to God for it, and plead his promiſes of giving it to theſe who aſk it of him, James i. 5. Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 37. And we muſt look frequently to Chriſt crucified, whom we have pierced with our ſins, Zech. xii. 10.

Q. Is it not ſaid of Eſau that he found no place of repentance, though he ſought it carefully with tears? Heb. xii. 17.

A. It is not ſaid there, that Eſau ſought the grace of repentance from God to his own ſoul, but only that he ſought of his father Iſaac that he might repent of giving the bleſſing to his brother Jacob; which indeed he could not obtain: But it had been well for him, had he been as careful to ſeek God's bleſſing as his father's.

Q. Hath not repentance ſeveral counterfeits, which we ought to beware of?

A. Yes: For Saul confeſſed his ſin, Ahab had outward expreſſions of mourning, Judas and Felix had great convictions and terrors; but none of theſe did turn from their ſins to God in Chriſt for mercy.

Q. Do we need repentance only at our firſt turning to God?

A. Believers through their whole lives have need to be daily repenting and making application to Chriſt's blood, becauſe they are daily ſinning by infirmity, and falling ſhort of their duty.

QUEST. LXXXVIII.

Q. What are the outward means, whereby Chriſt communicateth to us the benefits of redemption?

A. The outward and ordinary means, whereby Chriſt communicateth to us the benefits of redemption are, his ordinances, eſpecially the word, ſacraments and prayer; all which are made effectual to the elect for ſalvation.

Q. What do you mean by Chriſt's ordinances here?

A. All theſe means of grace and ſalvation which he hath appointed in his word.

Q. May not ordinances of man's appointment be made uſe of for our ſpiritual benefit?

A. No; for theſe the Spirit of God doth call will-worſhip and vain things, upon which we cannot expect his bleſſing, Col. ii. 23. Matth. xv. 9.

Q. What are theſe benefits of redemption which are communicated to us in the uſe of Chriſt's ordinances?

A. They are many, ſuch as knowledge, conviction, converſion, faith, repentance, pardon, peace, ſpiritual life, ſtrength, &c.

Q. What are the ordinances of Chriſt, by which he communicates theſe benefits to us?

A. They are, the word, the ſacraments, prayer, praiſe, a goſpel-miniſtry, church government and diſcipline, religious faſting, vowing, conference, meditation, ſelf examination, &c.

Q. Why are theſe ordinances called means of grace or of ſalvation?

A. Becauſe by them or through them, the Holy Spirit conveys grace into his peoples ſouls, and thereby promotes their ſalvation.

Q. Which of theſe ordinances doth he chiefly make uſe of for that end?

A. Eſpecially the word, ſacraments and prayer; but not excluding the reſt from being alſo uſeful that way.

Q. Why are theſe three called the outward means of ſalvation?

A. To diſtinguiſh them from meditation, faith, repentance, and ſuch inward means.

Q. Why are they called the ordinary means?

A. Becauſe they are God's common and uſual way of conveying grace.

Q. Doth not God ſometimes make uſe of extraordinary means for converting ſinners?

A. Yes, as in the primitive times, he frequently made uſe of the miraculous gifts of tongues, healing, caſting out devils, inflicting of judgments, and ſometimes voices from heaven and earthquakes, as means to convert ſouls; as in the caſe of Paul and the jaylor.

Q. Are the ordinances means of ſalvation to all who enjoy them?

A. No; inſtead of that, they are the ſavour of death unto death, to many who have them and abuſe them, 2 Cor. ii. 16. Iſa. lv. 11.

Q. To whom are they made effectual to ſalvation?

A. To the elect only.

Q. Whence have the ordinances that efficacy?

A. Not from themſelves, but from the bleſſing and Spirit of God, 1 Cor. iii. 7.

QUEST. LXXXIX.

Q. How is the word made effectual to ſalvation?

A. The Spirit of God maketh the reading, but eſpecially the preaching of the word, an effectual means of convincing and converting ſinners, and of building them up in holineſs and comfort, thro' faith unto ſalvation.

Q. Who is it that makes the word effectual to ſalvation?

A. The Spirit of God.

Q. How are we to uſe the word, if we would have it made effectual to ſalvation?

A. We muſt both read it, and hear it preached.

Q. What need we go to hear ſermons, when we can read the bible, or as good ſermons at home?

A. Becauſe it hath pleaſed God by the fooliſhneſs of preaching to ſave them that believe: and he calls us to hear, that our ſouls may live; for (ſaith he) Faith comes by hearing, 1 Cor i, 21, Iſa. lv, 3, Rom. x, 17.

Q. Do they not ſlight God's ordinances for ſaving ſouls, who ſlight the preaching of the word?

A. Yes.

Q. Is not the reading of the word God's ordinance for the converſion and ſalvation of ſouls, as well as the preaching of it?

A. Yes, as is evident from Deut. xvii, 19, Acts viii, 28, 29, Col. iv, 16.

Q. Why is it ſaid in the anſwer, eſpecially the preaching of the word?

A. Becauſe it pleaſeth the Lord to honour the preaching of the word more frequently and uſually to convince and convert ſouls; as is manifeſt both from ſcripture and experience, 1 Cor. i, 21, Mat. xxviii, 19, Rom. i. 16, and x, 14, 15, 16, 17, Acts ii, 37, and iv, 2, 4, and vi, 7, and viii, 5, 6, and x, 44, and xi, 19, 20, and xiii, 48, and xvii, 3, 4, and xviii, 8, 9, 10, and xxvi, 18.

Q. Whence is it that the preaching of the word is ſo honoured?

A. Becauſe it is an ordinance inſtituted for explaining and applying the word, which God makes uſe of to awaken, convince, rebuke, exhort, and comfort ſouls; and to ſpeak directly and particularly to the conſciences of men. And, ſeeing God hath thought fit to inſtitute a ſtanding miniſtry in his church, for theſe very purpoſes, we may expect he will own and bleſs it, 2 Tim. iv, 2, Acts xxvi. 18, 2 Cor. v. 20, Eph. iv. 12. As, under the law, God had thoſe who gave the ſenſe of the word and cauſed the people to underſtand it; ſo, under the goſpel, he hath a convincing miniſtry, by which the ſecrets of mens hearts are made manifeſt, Neh. viii. 8, 1 Cor. xiv. 24, 25.

Q. Would it not be a better way to convince and convert ſouls, to ſend an angel or one from the dead unto them?

A. No: for we have greater evidence of the truth, certainty, and divinity of the word of God, than we could have of any apparition; ſo that, if men do not hear the prophets and apoſtles, neither would they be perſuaded tho' one roſe from the dead, Luke xvi. 31.

Q. What uſe doth the Spirit of God make of the word, in order to the ſalvation of men?

A. He makes uſe of it to convince and convert ſinners, and to build up the ſaints, as ſet forth in the anſwer.

Q. How is the word made the means of convincing ſinners?

A. By ſearching out hidden ſins, and diſcovering the thoughts and intents of the heart; and by laying before us the evil and malignity of ſin in contemning God, the pollution of ſin in making us odious in his ſight, and the guilt of ſin in drawing eternal wrath and damnation upon us, Heb. iv. 12, Acts ii. 37.

Q. How is the word made the means of converſion?

A. The Spirit of God writes the threatenings, precepts and promiſes of it upon the heart: ſo that the ſoul is brought under the affecting impreſſions of the reality of the things of the other world, the evil of ſin, and excellency of Chriſt and holineſs; whereby the man is gradually changed into a new creature.

Q. Is there not a difference between the words convincing and converting of a ſinner?

A. Yes; for a ſinner may be convinced without being converted, but he cannot be converted without being convinced.

Q. Is not the efficacy of the word very wonderful in converſion?

A. Yes; and upon that account the ſcripture reſembles it to rain, to light, to fire, to a hammer, and to a ſword, Iſa. lv. 10, 11, Pſal. cxix. 105, Jer. xxiii. 29, Heb. iv. 12.

Q. Wherein doth the wonderful efficacy of the word appear?

A. In this, that one plain word or ſentence of it will prevail more with the ſoul, than the moſt rhetorical diſcourſes, or cogent arguments of men; it doth ſometimes of a ſudden turn the tide of the heart and ſtream of the affections to another courſe; it diſpoſſeſſes ſatan and throws down his ſtrong-holds; it perſuades men to mortify darling luſts, and reſiſt the ſtrongeſt temptations to ſin; it cauſes men to ſee things in another light, to abhor what they loved, and love what before they abhorred: yea, ſo great is the change that the word makes upon men in converſion, that the ſcripture calls it a creation, a regeneration, and a reſurrection.

Q. What is converſion?

A. It is the implanting of new habits and principles in the ſoul, whereby there is an univerſal change wrought in the mind, heart and life; the whole man is turned from the creature to God, from ſelf to Chriſt, and from ſin to duty: the ſoul is conformed to the image of God, and the will is ſubdued to his will; and the man ſtudies to pleaſe God in a holy life. In a word, converſion is the ſame thing with regeneration or effectual calling. See more of it before, on 31ſt queſtion, page 318.

Q. Of what uſe is the word to thoſe who are converted?

A. It doth build them up in holineſs and comfort, thro' faith unto ſalvation, Acts xx. 32, 2 Tim. iii. 15, Rom. xv. 4.

Q. What is imported in building up of the converted?

A. 1. It ſuppoſes that there is a good foundation laid by their believing and reſting upon Chriſt crucified, and receiving grace from him. 2. It imports their growing in grace, and that there is added to them more knowledge, more faith, more love, more ſtrength, more holineſs, and more comfort.

Q. What mean you by holineſs?

A. It is a principle of new life, which inclines the ſoul to hate all ſin, and to love what is pure and pleaſing to God, and to ſtudy conformity in the whole man to the nature and will of God.

Q. How doth the word build up converted perſons in holineſs?

A. 1. By diſcovering to them the defects of their graces and duties. 2. By finding and reproving every luſt and hidden ſin. 3. By ſhewing them more and more of the evil and deformity of all ſin. 4. By fortifying them againſt the ſuggeſtions of ſatan, wicked men, and the corrupt heart. 5. By pointing forth their duty, and diſcovering to them more and more of the beauty and neceſſity of holineſs 6. By ſetting before them the attractive examples of Chriſt and the ſcripture ſaints. 7. By directing them where to go for ſtrength for every duty.

Q. How doth the word build them up in comfort?

A. 1. By furniſhing them with marks and evidences of the work of grace in their ſouls. 2. By bringing to them the refreſhing promiſes of pardon thro' the blood of Jeſus Chriſt. 3. By diſcovering to them the promiſes of perſevering grace, and of new ſupplies of ſtrength both for work and warfare, duty and difficulty. 4. By aſſuring them of the unalterable nature of Chriſt's love, and of the well-ordered covenant. 5.

By holding forth to them the great and glorious things laid up for them hereafter.

Q. How doth the Spirit by the word, build up the ſaints in holineſs and comfort ?

A. He doth it through faith, or by their exerciſing faith upon the truths and promiſes of the word ; whereby they firmly embrace them, and feed upon them, Acts xv. 9. Rom. xv. 13. 1 Pet. i. 5, 6.

Q. Wherefore hath the word ſo little efficacy in converting and building up us in our duty ?

A. Becauſe we have provoked the Spirit of God to withdraw from the preaching of the word, and we come not to it with preparation and prayer, faith and attention ; or elſe the good ſeed falls upon rocks, upon the high-way-ſide, or among thorns.

QUEST. XC.

How is the word to be read and heard, that it may become effectual to ſalvation ?

A. That the word may become effectual to ſalvation we muſt attend thereunto with diligence, preparation and prayer, receive it with faith and love, lay it up in our hearts, and practiſe it in our lives.

Q. Is the word of God effectual to the ſalvation of all who read and hear it ?

A. No ; for many do read and hear it, yea, underſtand and remember it too, who do not truly believe it.

Q. Is it warrantable for common people to read the ſcriptures ?

A. Yes ; for Chriſt commands it, and the Bereans are commended for it, John v. 39. Acts xvii. 11.

Q. Have they warrant to preach the word alſo ?

A. None have warrant to preach the word but theſe who have gifts for it, and are duly called to it, Rom. x. 14, 15.

Q. Ought not all true Chriſtians to bear a great love to God's word ?

A. Yes ; for it is the directory of our lives, our counſeller in ſtraits, our ſupport in the day of affliction, and the book in which we find our evidences for heaven.

Q. Should not the conſideration of the Author, deſign, and uſefulneſs of this book, engage us to read it carefully ?

A. Yes ; for we ſhould look upon it as a golden epiſtle indited by the Spirit of God ; we ſhould receive it as a love-letter from heaven, opening up God's deſigns of love to our ſouls ; we ſhould go to it as for our daily food and ſubſiſtance, and duly enquire in it for the will of God, and hereby conſult with God about our duty in all caſes.

Q. At what times ought we to read the Bible ?

A. Not only upon the Lord's day, but alſo upon week-days, both morning and evening, ſeeing we have ſuch conſtant occaſion for it to quicken us in duty, encourage us in trials, reſolve us in doubts, and ſtrengthen us againſt temptations.

Q. In what manner ought we to read the word of God ?

A. We ſhould firſt look up to God for his bleſſing upon it, and then we ſhould read with faith, reverence, and application to ourſelves, as if we were particularly named in the precepts, promiſes, reproofs, threatenings, and conſolations of it ; and carefully obſerve theſe which are moſt applicable to us. And, in reading every part, we ſhould ſtill keep Chriſt in our eye, as the end, ſcope, and ſubſtance of the whole ſcriptures.

Q. In what manner ought we to hear the word read and preached to us ?

A. Something is to be done before, ſomething in time of it, and ſomething after it.

Q. What things are needful before hearing the word, that it may be effectual to our ſalvation ?

A. Two things, namely, preparation and prayer.

Q. What is that preparation which is needful before hearing of the word ?

A. We muſt ſtudy to lay aſide all worldly thoughts and cares, and get awful impreſſions of the majeſty of God whoſe word we are to hear ; and be willing humbly to be taught of him. We ſhould enquire into our ſtate, our wants and ſins, and be content to put away every ſin that the word condemns, acd comply with every duty that the word calls for.

Q. What is the need of ſuch preparation before ſolemn duties ?

A. The greatneſs and jealouſy of that God whom we approach do call for it ; and it is a good token of the ſucceſs of duty, when the heart is prepared for it Pſal. x. 17. Thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear.

Q. Hath the word no ſucceſs at any time upon unprepared ſouls ?

A. Tho' they have no right to expect it, yet God in his ſovereign mercy is ſometimes found of them that ſought him not, Iſa. lxvi 1.

Q. May any man go to the word depending upon his own preparation ?

A. No, but only in dependance on Chriſt's merits, and the Spirit's aſſiſtance.

Q. What kind of prayer is requiſite before hearing the word ?

A. Humble and fervent prayer both in ſecret and in our families.

Q. What ſhould we pray for, if we would have the word effectual ?

A. We ſhould pray that God may direct the miniſter rightly to divide the word of truth, and to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon to all ; that God may pour out his Spirit upon us, and upon the whole congregation ; and that he may give a bleſſing to his word, for convincing, converting and edifying of our ſouls.

Q. What is required in time of hearing the word, to make it effectual to ſalvation ?

A. We muſt hear it with attention, faith, love, meekneſs, and tenderneſs, Luke xix. 48, Heb. iv. 2, Luke xxiv. 32, James i. 21, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 27.

Q. What is that attention which is needful in hearing the word ?

A. It is a diligent hearkening to the word with our minds fixed upon it, and guarding againſt all earthly and impertinent thoughts in time of it.

Q. Whence do wandering thoughts proceed in time of hearing ?

A. From an earthly heart, from a careleſs mind, from a wandering eye, or from an evil cuſtom.

Q. What is the evil of wandering thoughts in time of hearing ?

A. They are provoking to God, a contempt of his omniſcience ; they keep us from remembering the word, and hinder the impreſſions and ſucceſs of it.

Q. How ſhall we be delivered from wandering thoughts?

A. We ought to pray and watch againſt them; overawe our hearts with God's preſence, and all-ſeeing eye; and ſtudy to bring more love to the word: For what we love we fix our minds upon.

Q. How ſhall we prevent dulneſs, drouſineſs or ſleeping in time of hearing?

A. By conſidering that the great God is ſpeaking to us, that life and death are ſet before us, and we are called to hear for our life, 2 Cor. v. 20. Deut. xxx. 19. and xxxii. 46, 47.

Q. What is that faith which is required in reading and hearing the word, that it may be effectual to our ſalvation?

A. It is the ſoul's believing and giving credit to the truth of the word, becauſe of the divine teſtimony ſupporting it. If our faith in hearing be of the right ſtamp, we muſt believe that the word is God's, and that what he ſaith in it is infallibly certain, and we muſt receive it as ſuch; and particularly the record which God hath given us of his Son. Again, we muſt believe that God ſpeaks to us in particular, in the promiſes, threatenings and reproofs of his word; and therefore we muſt apply them to ourſelves, and not put them by us.

Q. Why did not the word preached profit the Iſraelites?

A. Becauſe it was not mixed with faith in them that heard it, Heb. iv. 2.

Q. Do they who hear the word in faith, receive it alſo with great love and eſteem?

A. Yes.

Q. How doth that appear?

A. By their diligent attendance on it, and by their prizing it above the moſt valuable things here below, ſuch as gold, ſilver, or even their neceſſary food, Pſal. xix. 10. and cxix. 72. 127, Job xxiii. 12.

Q. What is required of us after hearing, ſo as the word may be effectual to ſalvation?

A. We muſt lay up the word in our hearts, and practiſe it in our lives.

Q. What do you mean by laying up the word in our hearts?

A. It is to give the word ſuch a place in our underſtandings, memories and affections, that the things of the world ſhall not be able to thruſt it out, but we ſhall continue to remember, ponder and meditate upon it long afterwards.

Q. What is the advantage of laying up the word in this manner?

A. It would ſerve for a bridle to keep us back from ſin, Pſal. cxix. 11. "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not ſin againſt thee."

Q. What ſhall I do with a bad memory, that doth not retain the word after I hear it?

A. Labour to feel the power of the word, and get a high eſteem of it; for what we highly value, we will not forget; as a bride will not forget her jewels, Pſal. cxix. 16, 93, Jer. ii. 32.

Q. What is it to practiſe the word we hear, in our lives?

A. It is to be ready to obey and put in practice whatever thing the word of God informs us to be our duty, James i. 22, 25.

Q. What ſhall we think of theſe who hear the word, but walk contrary to it, and ſtill go on in ſin?

A. They are to be looked upon as unbelievers, and enemies of Chriſt and his goſpel.

QUEST. XCI.

Q. How do the ſacraments become effectual means of ſalvation?

A. The ſacraments become effectual means of ſalvation not from any virtue in them or in him that doth adminiſter them, but only by the bleſſing of Chriſt, and the working of his Spirit in them that by faith receive them.

Q. What hath God appointed ſacraments for?

A. To be means of ſalvation, and particularly to promote grace and comfort in his people while in their ſojourning ſtate.

Q. Is not the word ſufficient for that end without the ſacrament?

A. It ſhould ſatiſfy us that a wiſe God had thought fit to appoint us to make uſe of both the one and the other, as means of ſalvation.

Q. How do the word and ſacraments differ as means of ſalvation?

A. The one is for begetting faith, the other for confirming it; the one is directed to the ear, the other to the eye.

Q. Why hath Chriſt added ſacraments to his word?

A. To be viſible ſigns of his love to mankind, to cure our unbelief, to help our faith, and to quicken all our graces and affections. He knows our frame, that we are more affected by things which our eyes ſee, than by theſe which we only hear of by the ear.

Q. Do the ſacraments prove effectual means of grace and ſalvation to all who partake of them?

A. No, but to the elect only.

Q. What is the reaſon they prove not effectual to all?

A. Becauſe their efficacy and virtue is not from themſelves, but from God the Author, who being a free Agent communicates virtue to them according to his pleaſure.

Q. Have the ſacraments then no virtue in themſelves, or by the external action, to confer grace upon the partakers? A. No.

Q. Have the ſacraments their virtue from the intention, the preparation, the learning, the holineſs or zeal of the adminiſtrator? A. No.

Q. From whence then have the ſacraments their efficacy and virtue?

A. Only from the bleſſing of Chriſt, and the working of his Spirit.

Q. Should any man reſt upon his bare attendance upon ordinances? A. No.

Q. What ought we always to ſeek and look after under ordinances?

A. Chriſt's bleſſing, and his Spirit's working.

Q. What doth the Spirit, by his working, in order to make the ſacraments effectual?

A. He puts life and virtue in the ordinances, and by them doth convey and apply Chriſt and his benefits to the ſouls of men.

Q. Doth not the Spirit by his working put life in all the powers and faculties of the ſoul? A. Yes.

Q. What may we think of theſe who deny or ſcoff at the workings of the Spirit upon ſouls under ordinances?

A. They are ſenſual, not having the Spirit; and they are ſtrangers to the grace of God.

Q. Is not the caſe of ſuch very deplorable?

A. Yes; for, "if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his," Rom. viii. 9.

Q. In whom doth the Spirit make the ſacraments effectual?

A. Not in all who receive them, but only in theſe who by faith receive them.

Q. Is not this faith, by which other bleſſings are conveyed, alſo wrought in the ſoul by the Holy Spirit?

A. Yes.

QUEST. XCII.

Q. What is a ſacrament?

A. A ſacrament is an holy ordinance inſtituted by Chriſt, wherein by ſenſible ſigns, Chriſt and the benefits of the new covenant are repreſented, ſealed and applied to believers.

Q. Is the word ſacrament to be found in ſcripture?

A. No, but the thing ſignified is there, and the word is very ſignificant, and ancient.

Q. What words have we in ſcripture inſtead thereof?

A. We have ſigns and ſeals, Rom. iv. 11. Gen. xvii. 11. Exod xii. 13.

Q. From whom is the word ſacrament borrowed?

A. From the Romans, who underſtood by it a military oath, whereby ſoldiers bound themſelves to be true and faithful to their general: But gradually it came to be applied to baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper, becauſe in them we engage to be faithful ſoldiers to Jeſus Chriſt the Captain of our ſalvation.

Q. Why is it called, in the anſwer, a holy ordinance?

A. It is called an ordinance, as being a thing ordained of God; it is called holy, becauſe it is ordained by a holy God, for holy perſons and for holy purpoſes.

Q. Why is it ſaid to be inſtituted by Chriſt?

A. To let us know that Chriſt, who is the head of the church, hath only power to appoint ſacraments to her; and that they are not true ſacraments which are not inſtituted by him.

Q. What is the uſe of ſacraments?

A. The uſe of them is to be viſible ſigns and ſeals to the church, of the benefits of Chriſt's mediation and purchaſe.

Q. What are the two parts of a ſacrament?

A, There are, 1. The outward viſible or ſenſible ſigns. 2. The inviſible things ſignified and repreſented by them.

Q. What mean you by ſenſible ſigns?

A. The elements and actions uſed in the ſacraments, called ſenſible becauſe they are perceived by our outward ſenſes.

Q. What are theſe ſenſible ſigns uſed in the ſacraments?

A. In baptiſm, there is water ſprinkled on the body. In the Lord's ſupper, there is bread broken and eaten, and wine poured and drunk.

Q. Are not theſe elements and actions ſeals as well ſigns?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the difference between their being ſigns and ſeals?

A. As they are ſigns, they ſignify or repreſent bleſſings or benefits to us; as they are ſeals, they ratify and confirm our right to them.

Q. What are the bleſſings or benefits which are repreſented, ſealed and applied to us by theſe ſigns and ſeals

A. They are Chriſt and the benefits of the new covenant; that is, the bleſſings of Chriſt's purchaſe, which are exhibited and tendered to us in the covenant of grace.

Q. Do the ſacraments ſeal and confirm theſe benefits to all who partake of them?

A. No, but to believers only, who are within the covenant; for theſe who are not within it, do apply God's ſeal to a blank.

Q. Why is the covenant of grace called the new covenant?

A. It is called new, 1. In oppoſition to the old covenant of works made with our firſt parents, which they brake. 2. It is ſometimes called the new covenant or teſtament, in oppoſition to the old manner of diſpenſing of the covenant of grace by types and ſacrifices before Chriſt's incarnation.

Q. Had the old covenant of works any ſacraments annexed to it?

A. Yes, it had two, to wit, the tree of knowledge, and the tree of life.

QUEST. XCIII.

Q. Which are the ſacraments of the New Teſtament?

A. The ſacraments of the New Teſtament are baptiſm, and the Lord's ſupper.

Q. What were the ſacraments of the covenant of grace under the Old Teſtament?

A. They were two, namely, circumciſion and the paſſover; in place of which, we have now baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper.

Q. Are the ſacraments of the Old and New Teſtament the ſame for ſubſtance?

A. Yes; for they are ſeals of the ſame covenant, and they both repreſent Chriſt and his benefits.

Q. Wherein then do they differ?

A. The Old Teſtament ſacraments repreſented Chriſt as to come, and that in a darker way; but the New repreſent Chriſt as already come, and in a more clear and plain manner.

Q. What is the difference between baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper?

A. Baptiſm is for initiation, and to be received but once by us, as circumciſion was: The Lord's ſupper is for nutrition, and to be received often, as the paſſover was.

Q. What was the paſſover?

A. It was a lamb ſlain, roaſted with fire and eaten wholly, with bitter herbs, and unleavened bread; whereby was repreſented Chriſt and his ſufferings; and the receiving of him by faith, with ſincere repentance.

Q. How doth it appear that there are no more ſacraments under the New Teſtament than two?

A. Becauſe Chriſt the Head of the church hath inſtituted no more for ſacraments, than baptiſm and the Lord's ſupper; neither are any more needful, ſeeing the one is a ſign and ſeal of our ſpiritual birth, and the other of our ſpiritual nouriſhment.

Q. Do not the Papiſts add more ſacraments to theſe two?

A. Yes, they add other five, to wit, confirmation, penance, ordination, marriage, and extreme unction.

Q. Why may not theſe be received as ſacraments?

A. Becauſe none of them are inſtituted by Chriſt for ſacraments; and though ordination and marriage be of divine appointment, yet neither they nor any of the reſt have the parts of true ſacraments, nor are they ſeals of the covenant of grace.

QUEST. XCIV.

Q. What is baptiſm?

A. Baptiſm is a ſacrament, wherein the waſhing with water in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, doth ſignify and ſeal our ingrafting into Chriſt, and partaking of the benefits of the covenant of grace, and our engagement to be the Lord's.

Q. What doth the word baptiſm ſignify?

A. It is a Greek word, and ſignifieth a waſhing; ſo it is rendered in Mark vii. 4. Luke xi. 38.

Q. What are the two parts in this ſacrament?

A. 1. There is the outward viſible or ſenſible ſign made uſe of. 2. There is the inviſible or ſpiritual thing ſignified by it.

Q. What is the ſenſible ſign here?

A. It is the ſprinkling or waſhing of the body with water, and uſing of the words of inſtitution.

Q. What is the ſpiritual thing ſignified by the waſhing with water?

A. There is, 1. The waſhing away of the guilt of ſin by the blood of Chriſt in our juſtification. 2. The waſhing away of the filth of ſin by the Spirit of Chriſt in our regeneration and ſanctification, Rev. i. 5. John iii. 5.

Q. Wherein lies the reſemblance between water, and Chriſt's blood, or the bleſſings purchaſed thereby?

A. In theſe things; 1. Water waſhes away the filth of the body, ſo the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth the ſoul from ſin. 2. Water doth extinguiſh fire, ſo Chriſt's blood quencheth the fire of God's wrath. 3. Water doth mollify the earth, ſo Chriſt's blood ſoftens our hard hearts. 4. Our bodies cannot live without water, neither can our ſouls without the blood of Chriſt. 5. Water is cheap and free to all, ſo is the blood of Chriſt with its benefits. 6. Water hath no effect upon us unleſs it be applied, ſo neither hath the blood of Chriſt without the application of faith.

Q. Is it lawful to add any thing to the water made uſe of in baptiſm?

A. No: For though the Papiſts mix oil, ſalt, cream and ſpittle with the water, and likewiſe uſe the ſign of the croſs at baptiſm; yet all theſe are but vain and ſinful additions, without any warrant from God's word.

Q. Why may not the ſign of the croſs be retained in baptiſm ſeeing it is deſigned to teach all thoſe who are baptized not to be aſhamed to own a crucified Chriſt?

A. The Papiſts give plauſible reaſons for the other additions, as well as for this: But ſeeing the ſign of the croſs was brought into the church by the Papiſts, as well as the cream and ſpittle; it ought to be laid aſide with them, as unſcriptural and antichriſtian inventions.

Q. Is it neceſſary to dip or plunge the whole body into the water in baptiſm, as, ſome ſay, was the practice in the primitive times?

A. Whatever might be done with ſome in hotter countries, it would be highly dangerous, eſpecially for infants, in our colder climates to plunge them in water; and therefore we muſt reſt with ſprinkling of them: And for this practice we find ſufficient warrant in the ſcriptures.

Q. What warrant is there in ſcripture for baptizing by ſprinkling?

A. 1. We find the waſhing of tables is termed baptizing, Mark vii. 4. which we know is done, not by dipping, but by ſprinkling. 2. The Iſraelites are ſaid to have been baptized unto Moſes in the cloud, 1 Cor. x. 2. which was by ſprinkling them with its rain. 3. When it is ſaid that all things under the law were purged by blood, we are told at the ſame time that this was done by ſprinkling them with the blood of the ſacrifice, and not by dipping them in it, Heb. ix. 21, 22. and hence Chriſt's blood is called the blood of ſprinkling. 4. The circumſtances of many of the perſons baptized, recorded in ſcripture, make it highly probable that it was done by ſprinkling or pouring water on them.

Q. What inſtances are theſe you refer to?

A. 1ſt, We read of three thouſand baptized by the apoſtles in a part of one day, Acts ii. 41. which could not have been done in ſo ſhort a time, had they taken them all to a river, and plunged them one by one into it. 2dly, When Philip baptized the Ethiopian eunuch, Acts viii. 38, it was not likely he would ſtrip him and plunge him in the river when he was in a journey and nowiſe provided for it; but rather that they went into the water to the ancles, being bare-footed according to the cuſtom, where he ſprinkled water upon him, according to the prophecy in which the Eunuch had been reading, Iſa. lii. 15. So ſhall he ſprinkle many nations. 3dly, When Ananias went to baptize Paul we find he was in the houſe, Acts ix. 17, 18, 19. Neither is it likely he would go out of it, to be plunged in a river, in the weak and faint caſe his body was in at that time. 4thly, When Cornelius and his friends were baptized, they were in the houſe, and water was called for there to do it, Acts x. 47, 48. 5thly, Likewiſe the Jaylor in Philippi, and his family, were in the houſe when they were baptized by Paul and Silas, Acts xvi. 32, 33. For it cannot be imagined that the Jaylor would leave his poſt and go out of the city with all his family in the middle of the night, and let Paul and Silas who were priſoners go too, to ſeek a river to plunge them in. Laſtly, It was the cuſtom of the primitive church to baptize the ſick upon their beds, who hence were called Cliniei; and ſurely theſe could not be plunged, but ſprinkled only.

Q. Do we not read of John's baptizing at Jordan and Enon, becauſe of the plenty of water there; and of perſons baptized going down into the water, and coming up out of the water? Acts viii. 38. 39.

A. John chuſed theſe places, becauſe the waters there were common, which was not the caſe in other parts of that dry country. And for going down into the water, and coming up out of it, this is ſaid of the baptizer, as well as of the baptized, and ſo cannot infer dipping. Beſides, the words may be rendered, they went unto the water, and they came up from the water.

Q. What doth the ſprinkling with water in baptiſm declare unto us?

A. It declareth to us, that we are all filthy and polluted by nature, by reaſon of original ſin and corruption; and that we ſtand greatly in need of being waſhed from it.

Q. Can the water in baptiſm waſh us from it?

A. No; it is only the blood of Chriſt, repreſented by the water that can do it.

Q. How is it that the blood of Chriſt doth waſh us from ſin?

A. It is by the Holy Spirit's applying the merits and virtue of Chriſt's blood unto our ſouls.

Q. In whoſe name are perſons to be baptized?

A. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. What is ſignified and meant by uſing theſe words in baptiſm?

A. Several things: as that the ordinance is diſpenſed by divine warrant; and that the perſon baptized vows ſubjection to God's authority; and that he is thereby conſecrated and bound to the faith, profeſſion, worſhip, and obedience of the holy Trinity; and that he will always depend upon the favour, grace, and protection of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.

Q. Is not baptiſm the ſealing of a covenant between God and us? A. Yes.

Q. What is here ſealed and engaged on his part?

A. That he will be our God, ingraft us into Chriſt, and entitle us to all the benefits of the new covenant which Chriſt hath purchaſed by his blood.

Q. What is here ſealed and engaged on our part?

A. That we will be the Lord's, in ſoul and body, in practice as well as profeſſion, to ſerve him, and fight for him all the days of our lives.

Q. What is meant by that privilege of our being ingrafted into Chriſt?

A. It is for us to be cut off from the old ſtock of nature, and to be united to Chriſt as our bleſſed root, from whom we may draw ſap for our growth and fruitfulneſs, John xv. 5. Rom. xi. 17.

Q. Is this privilege ſealed to us by baptiſm?

A. Yes.

Q. What are the benefits of the covenant of grace, which are ſealed to us in baptiſm?

A. They are all theſe bleſſings which Chriſt hath purchaſed by his blood, ſuch as admiſſion into the viſible church, and a right to all church-ordinances and privileges, ſpiritual illumination, remiſſion of ſin, deliverance from wrath, friendſhip with God, regeneration and ſanctification, the conduct of the Spirit, fatherly protection and proviſion, increaſe of grace and perſeverance in it, meetneſs for heaven, victory over death, and reſurrection to eternal life.

Q. Doth baptiſm ſeal and apply theſe bleſſings and benefits equally to all who are baptized?

A. No: for, to thoſe who are truly elect or believers, it doth ſeal them abſolutely; but, to theſe who are only ſuch in profeſſion, it ſeals them but conditionally, that is upon condition they are what they profeſs to be.

Q. Do believers partake immediately of the benefits ſealed to them in baptiſm?

A. Tho' their right be then ſealed, yet God is a free agent, and not tied to that moment of time; but doth confer his grace, and make his ordinance effectual, when and how he pleaſeth.

Q. Have unbelievers any benefit by their baptiſm?

A. Yes; for by it they are outwardly ſeparated from the reſt of the world, and from the devil and the fleſh, and are ſolemnly conſecrated to Chriſt and his ſervice; they are become members of the viſible church, and have a ſealed right and claim to plead the ordinances, offers, and promiſes of the goſpel, if they do not forfeit theſe by their after carriage, Rom. ix. 4. 1 Cor. vii. 14.

Q. Doth not baptiſm take away original ſin, and regenerate all theſe who partake of it; as Papiſts and others do teach?

A. No; for Simon Magus remained ſtill in his unregenerate ſtate after he was baptized, and the beſt of God's people are troubled with the inherence of original ſin all their lives.

Q. Is baptiſm abſolutely neceſſary to ſalvation?

A. No; for the converted thief was ſaved without it. It is not the want, but the contempt of baptiſm, which expoſeth to damnation.

Q. What is the neceſſity then of baptiſm?

A. It is neceſſary by virtue of Chriſt's command, who hath thought fit to appoint it, 1. As a badge of Chriſtianity. 2. As a channel of grace. 3. As a ſign for teaching us our pollution by ſin, and our remedy by Chriſt. 4. As a ſeal for confirming believers right to the bleſſings of his covenant. 5. As a bond for engaging us to his ſervice.

QUEST. XCV.

Q. To whom is baptiſm to be adminiſtred?

A. Baptiſm is not to be adminiſtred to any that are out of the viſible church, till they profeſs their faith in Chriſt, and obedience to him; but the infants of ſuch as are members of the viſible church are to be baptized.

Q. Is baptiſm to be adminiſtred to all perſons whatſoever?

A. No.

Q. To whom is baptiſm to be adminiſtred?

A. Not to Heathens or infidels, nor to thoſe who call themſelves Chriſtians, if they be ignorant, or if their lives be vitious and ſcandalous.

Q. Why may not theſe be baptized?

A. Becauſe they are not to be looked upon as members of the viſible church, nor within the covenant, and ſo have no right to the ſeals of it, Eph. ii. 12.

Q. Upon what terms may ſuch perſons be admitted to baptiſm?

A. Only upon ſubmitting to the goſpel, and their profeſſing of repentance, and of their faith in Chriſt, and reſolutions of obedience to him, Acts ii. 38. Mat. iii. 6. Acts viii. 13.

Q. Who are they that properly have a right to baptiſm?

A. Theſe who are members of the viſible church, and their infant-offspring, Acts ii. 39.

Q. What is it you call the viſible church?

A. It is a ſociety made up of all the profeſſors of Chriſt throughout the world, who openly embrace the true religion, together with their children, 1 Cor. vii. 14. Acts ii. 39. Rom. 11. 16. Gen. xvii. 7.

Q. What are the privileges of the viſible church above the reſt of the world?

A. The viſible church is entitled to God's preſerving care in the midſt of dangers and enemies, to the enjoyments of a goſpel-miniſtry and ordinances, and to the communion of ſaints, 1 Tim. iv. 10. Iſa. xxxi. 5. Eph. iv. 11, 12. Mark xvi. 15, 16. Acts ii. 39, 42.

What is it you call the inviſible church?

A. The whole body of true believers, that is, theſe who not only profeſs Chriſt outwardly, but have a real and vital union with Chriſt as their head, whereby their ſouls are inwardly renewed, which God only ſees, and therefore called inviſible.

Q. What are their privileges above others?

A. They have communion with Chriſt both in grace and glory.

Q. Have infants a right to baptiſm?

A. Yes, the infants of theſe who are believers or members of the viſible church have a right to baptiſm, but not others.

Q. How do you inſtruct their right to baptiſm?

A. Becauſe the infants of believing parents are within the covenant, as well as the parents themſelves; ſo God told Abraham in the covenant he made with him, and did thereupon eſtabliſh and declare the right of his infant-ſeed to the initiatory ſeal of the covenant, Gen. xvii. 7, 10. 'I will eſtabliſh my covenant between me and thee, and thy ſeed after thee in their generations, for an everlaſting covenant; to be a God unto thee, and to thy ſeed after thee. And, every man-child among you ſhall be circumciſed.' Now, Abraham's covenant being the covenant of grace, of which Chriſt is the Mediator; and believers now being Abraham's children by faith, and heirs of the ſame covenant with him, which is everlaſting, and its promiſes and privileges the ſame now as of old, tho' its ſeals be changed: Wherefore the infant-ſeed of believers now have the ſame right to baptiſm that Abraham's ſeed of old had to circumciſion, which was the ſame in ſubſtance with it. And this right of ſucceſſion we find expreſly declared by the apoſtle Peter, Acts ii. 38, 39. Repent and be baptized every one of you. For the promiſe is unto you, and to your children. And hence the apoſtle Paul calls the children of believers now holy, 1 Cor. vii. 14. that is, federally holy, as the Jews were called a holy nation, being by circumciſion inſtated within the covenant, ſolemnly dedicated to the Lord, and made viſible church-members, as our infants are by baptiſm.

Q. How doth it appear that baptiſm is come in the place of circumciſion?

A. It is evident from Col. ii. 11, 12. Beſides, it is plain that both of them repreſent the pollution of our nature and the way of our purification by the ſhedding of Chriſt's blood.

Q. What further warrant have you from ſcripture for infant-baptiſm?

A. 1ſt, Chriſt commanded his apoſtles, Mat. xxviii. 19. to go diſciple and baptize all nations, of which infants are a conſiderable part. There was no need to mention them there expreſly, ſeeing their privilege was ſettled for many ages before by circumciſion: Tho' ſoon after we are told that their right continued as formerly, Acts ii. 38, 39. And indeed it were moſt unreaſonable to think that their condition ſhould be worſe by Chriſt's incarnation than it was before. 2dly, We are aſſured that the privilege of the Gentiles now is as large as that of the Jews was, they being all one in Chriſt, Rom. iii. 29. and x. 12. Gal. iii. 14. 28. 3*dly*, We are told, Rom. xi. that the Jews ſhall be grafted again into their own olive tree, as they were broken off. From which it is eaſy to infer, that their ſeed, which were broken off with them, ſhall be grafted in with them as before. 4*thly*, The ſcripture declares infants to be capable of the divine bleſſings of pardon, of the Spirit, of faith, of grace and of glory; upon which account Chriſt doth kindly invite and take them into his arms. See Iſa. xliv. 3. and lxv. 23. Jer. i. 5 Mat. xviii. 6. Mark x. 14. 16. Luke i. 15. And therefore the ſign and ſeal of theſe bleſſings muſt alſo pertain to them. 5*thly*, We read of the apoſtles baptizing whole houſholds together, and including the infants therein, Acts xvi. 15. 33. 1 Cor. i. 16. And in this they followed the example of the Jews, who circumciſed all the proſelytes that came over to them, and their children alſo. And, after the example of the apoſtles, it is notour the ancient church did baptize the infants of the Chriſtian parents.

Q. Do not we read of the apoſtles teaching, and of preſons profeſſing their faith, before they were baptized?

A. Yes; but theſe were only the adult or aged without the viſible church, who were firſt to be won to the Chriſtian faith before they or their children might be baptized. But infants, who are not capable of being taught, or of profeſſing their faith, are to be deemed as parts of their parents, and to be judged of by them till they come to the uſe of reaſon; ſo that if parents be holy, and among the bleſſed of the Lord, their infant offſpring are to be deemed ſo with them according to Rom. xi. 16. and Iſa. lxv. 23. In the covenant made with Abraham and his ſeed, of which circumciſion was the ſeal, and they all partook, God ſaid not to the infants, but to Abraham, Gen. xvii. 1. 'Walk before me, and be thou perfect.'

Q. If children be admitted to baptiſm, why not alſo to the Lord's ſupper?

A. Becauſe it is required of all who partake of the Lord's ſupper to examine themſelves, and to diſcern the Lord's body; which children cannot do, not having the exerciſe of reaſon. And, upon the ſame account, the children of the Jews, who did partake of circumciſion, were not admitted to the paſſover; they not being capable to aſk, or to be inſtructed concerning the meaning of it, according to Exod. xii. 26. The initiatory ſeal is for conveying a right, but the other is for commemorating a benefit, which neceſſarily ſuppoſeth underſtanding.

Q. To whom doth it pertain to preſent the infants of the viſible church to baptiſm, and to act as ſponſors for them?

A. Infants being conſidered as parts of their parents, and having a right to baptiſm as ſuch, it belongs properly to parents to preſent them to God in baptiſm, and in their name to conſent to the covenant of grace; and not to theſe who are called Godfathers or Godmothers. It is only the parents who have the power of their education, and who are accountable to God for them; and, till they be capable to chuſe their own way, the will of the parents only is to be taken for theirs.

Q. Are not Chriſtian parents bound by the ſtrongeſt ties to bring their children to God in baptiſm?

A. Yes; 1*ſt*, Becauſe they have dedicated themſelves and all they have unto the Lord. And, 2*dly*, They being the inſtruments of conveying original ſin to them they are bound in juſtice to repair the injury (ſo far as they can) by bringing them to the fountain of Chriſt's blood for their cleanſing, and to the congregation of God's people for the help of their prayers.

Q. Are all theſe in covenant with God, and entitled to heaven, who get this ſeal of it; particularly theſe children who are born of truly godly parents, that gave them up ſincerely to God in baptiſm ?

A. 1ſt, If ſuch children die young before they do any thing to diſinherit themſelves, we have ground to believe they are ſaved. 2dly, Theſe children by their birth and baptiſm are entitled to many external privileges and mercies more than others ; hence baptiſm is reſembled to Noah's ark, by which all Noah's family were ſaved from the temporal deluge as well as himſelf, 1 Pet. iii. 21. 3dly, Children of godly parents have a ſtronger claim to the bleſſings of the covenant than others, ſeeing they cannot only plead They are the Lord's by baptiſmal dedication, but that God is truly their fathers God, and they are the ſeed of his people with whom the covenant was eſtabliſhed, and to whom the promiſes were made. But, 4thly, They ſhould remember, if they do not put in their claim when they come to age, take hold of the covenant for themſelves, and ratify their parents deed, they forfeit their right and claim to the ſaving bleſſings of the covenant.

Q. How ſhould parents be affected and exerciſed when they preſent their infants to God in baptiſm ?

A. They ſhould look back to their own baptiſmal dedication, tranſact with God in ſercet both for themſelves and their infants, and endeavour to make it ſure that they are really in covenant with God, ſince this is of the utmoſt concern both to them and their poſterity; for the promiſe runs, I'll be your God, and the God of your ſeed. They ſhould earneſtly pray for grace to enable them to give them good inſtructions and a good example, that they may like Abraham the father of the faithful command their children and their houſhold after them to keep the ways of the Lord, Gen. xviii. 19.

Q. How ſhould children improve their baptiſm when come to age ?

A. 1. Children of godly parents ſhould bleſs God that they are born of ſuch parents, and that their claim to the covenant-bleſſings is ſo much ſtrengthened thereby. 2. They ſhould timeouſly ratify their baptiſmal covenant and their parents deed, by a perſonal tranſaction with God, and giving away themſelves unto the Lord : and this they ſhould do ſolemnly at the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, that ſo they may become Chriſtians by their own conſent, as well as by their parents dedication. 3. They ſhould plead their baptiſm, as God's ſeal and pledge to them of the remiſſion of ſins, thro' the blood of Chriſt, which was then ſacramentally applied to them. 4. They ſhould improve their baptiſm as a ſpur to holy living, a ſhield againſt temptation, and an incitement to couragious owning of Chriſt and his truths, without being aſhamed of him before men.

QUEST. XCVI.

Q. What is the Lord's ſupper ?

A. The Lord's ſupper is a ſacrament, wherein, by giving and receiving bread and wine according to Chriſt's appointment, his death is ſhewed forth ; and the worthy receivers are, not after a corporal and carnal manner, but by faith made partakers of his body and blood, with all his benefits, to their ſpiritual nouriſhment, and growth in grace.

Q. What are the uſual names given to this ordinance ?

A. It is called the Lord's ſupper, 1 Cor. xi. 20. It is called the Lord's table, 1 Cor. x. 21. The communion, 1 Cor. x. 16. Breaking of bread, Acts ii. 42. The cup of bleſſing, 1 Cor. x. 16. Chriſt's Teſtament, Luke xxii. 20. The feaſt, 1 Cor. v. 8. The ancients uſually called it the Euchariſt : and we commonly call it the Sacrament.

Q. Why is it called the LORD's ſupper ?

A. From the time when the LORD JESUS its Author did inſtitute it, which was in the ſame night wherein he was betrayed.

Q. Why did he appoint it at night ?

A. Becauſe the paſſover was to be eaten at night, and ſupper then was the principal meal of the family : And it may teach us that this feaſt is only for the members of Chriſt's family, who dwell with him both day and night.

Q. Are we then neceſſarily bound to celebrate the ſacrament at night, as was done at its firſt inſtitution ?

A. No ; for the reaſon of doing it at night, and in a private family, doth not now ſubſiſt : This was done at firſt only upon the account of the paſſover ſupper that was to be ſo eaten, and in the room of which the Lord's ſupper was to ſucceed : But, in numerous aſſemblies for worſhip, the night would be highly inconvenient for it.

Q. Why did Chriſt appoint the ſupper immediately after the paſſover ?

A. To ſhew that the one was to come in the room of the other, and that they are both the ſame in ſubſtance.

Q. How doth it appear that they are the ſame in ſubſtance ?

A. In regard the Iſraelites kept the lamb four days tied to their bed-poſts before it was ſlain ; that by its conſtant bleatings they might be kept in mind of their ſore bondage in Egypt from which God wonderfully delivered them, and alſo put in mind of the ſorrows and agonies which the Meſſiah was to ſuffer to deliver them from ſin and hell: So, in like manner, the Lord's ſupper is a ſtanding memorial of our ſalvation by the ſufferings and death of Jeſus Chriſt, our glorious deliverer from ſin and wrath.

Q. Why did Chriſt appoint this ordinance the ſame night in which he was betrayed ?

A. 1. That he might give a ſtrong proof of his love to his diſciples, in providing more for their comfort than for his own ſafety, and that at a time when he ſaw heaven, earth and hell coming all in battle aray againſt him. 2. That we might obſerve the charge he gave us about this ordinance, as the words of a dying Jeſus, who was going to do more for us than all the world could do.

Q. Is the Lord's ſupper a ſacrifice, as well as a ſacrament ?

A. No : For tho' the Papiſts have horridly corrupted this ordinance, and turned it to the ſacrifice of the maſs, whereby they diſown the ſufficiency of Chriſt's ſacrifice on the croſs to take away ſin, and are guilty of the vileſt ſurperſtition and idolatry ; yet the Lord's ſupper is no more but a ſacrament, which is of a quite different nature from a ſacrifice : A ſacrament being the commemoration of a benefit received from God ; but a ſacrifice the offering of ſomething propitiatory to God for ſin, which was done at once by Chriſt upon the croſs, and can never be repeated.

Q. In what poſture ought we to receive the ſacrament?

A. In a table poſture, ſuch as is common at meals; which we find Chriſt and his apoſtles uſed, Mat. xxvi. 20, 26. Luke xxii. 14. where it is ſaid, they ſat down at the table.

Q. Is it not more decent and reverend to uſe kneeling at this time?

A. We are not to be wiſer than Chriſt, nor to accuſe the apoſtles and primitive church, who uſed ſitting, of indecency or irreverence.

Q. Who then appointed kneeling, and when came it in?

A. It was Pope Honorius the ſecond, in the beginning of the thirteenth century.

Q. Upon what pretence did he appoint kneeling?

A. It was in conſequence of the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, which had been decreed not long before by Pope Innocent the third. Then it was judged proper to kneel for worſhipping the ſacramental bread, which they believed to be turned into Chriſt's real body.

Q. Should any Proteſtant ſymbolize with Papiſts and idolaters in their errors and ſuperſtitions?

A. No.

Q. What are the elements or viſible ſigns appointed in the Lord's ſupper?

A. Bread and wine.

Q How are theſe to be diſpoſed of?

A. After conſecration, the bread is to be broken, given, and eaten; and the wine, being poured forth, is to be given, and drunk.

Q. Why are both theſe ſigns appointed?

A. The more to confirm our faith, and to give us the more diſtinct repreſentation of Chriſt's death and ſufferings, and to ſhew us the plentiful redemption and rich ſupplies we have in a crucified Chriſt for our periſhing ſouls.

Q. May we make uſe of wafers inſtead of bread, as the Papiſts do?

A. No; for then we ſhould not have a fit ſign of ſpiritual nouriſhment, nor any breaking of bread according to Chriſt's inſtitution.

Q. What is ſignified by the bread here?

A. Jeſus Chriſt the bread of life, who is given for the life and nouriſhment of our ſouls.

Q. What is ſignified by the wine?

A. Chriſt's precious blood, with all the rich bleſſings and refreſhing comforts proceeding from it to us; ſuch as deliverance from wrath, pardon of ſin, peace with God and conſcience, acceſs to God in duty, ſtrength and increaſe of grace, intimations of God's love, and ſweet views of Immanuel's land.

Q. What is ſignified by the breaking of the bread, and the pouring forth of the wine?

A. All the ſorrows and ſufferings of Chriſt for us, and particularly the breaking and wounding of his body on the croſs, and the ſhedding of his blood for our ſins.

Q. What is ſignified by giving the bread and wine to the communicants?

A. It ſignifies God's giving a whole crucified Chriſt, with all his offices and benefits, to believing partakers.

Q. What is ſignified by communicants receiving the bread and wine?

A. It ſignifies their ſtretching forth faith's hand to receive a whole Chriſt, according to the goſpel offer, and that with cloſe and particular application to their ſouls neceſſities.

Q. Have the people a right to the cup, as well as to the bread?

A. Yes; and none may deprive them of it, ſeeing Chriſt appointed a full feaſt and complete nouriſhment to his people, and ſaid to the firſt communicants, Drink ye all of it, Mat. xxvi. 27.

Q. How ſhould we be affected and employed when beholding and receiving the bread broken and wine poured forth?

A. We ſhould contemplate a broken and bleeding Saviour, with broken and contrite hearts, for our ſins, that pierced him: Our hearts ſhould be warmed with love and gratitude to him, that loved us in ſuch a manner, as to give himſelf to be a propitiation for our ſins; We ſhould lodge our ſouls in his wounds as our only refuge from the avenger of blood, and plead Chriſt's blood and merits for all that we want from God.

Q. What is the chief end of this inſtitution, firſt mentioned in the anſwer?

A. It is to ſhew forth Chriſt's death; according to 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25, 26.

Q. How are we to ſhew forth Chriſt's death in this ordinance?

A. By recalling it into our minds with admiration, giving thanks to God for ſuch a ſacrifice, and pleading it with him as the only ground of our hope: And alſo by proclaiming before the world the wonderful love of Chriſt in dying for us, and our hope and confidence in the merits thereof; publicly owning ourſelves to be his diſciples, and declaring by this action that we are not aſhamed of the croſs, but do glory in it.

Q. Why will Chriſt have us to ſhew forth his death in this manner?

A. To teſtify our thankfulneſs for it, and that we do believe it to be the only foundation of our ſalvation; and alſo becauſe this commemoration is an excellent means to ſubdue ſin, quicken grace, melt our hearts, and adminiſter comfort to us under all diſcouragements.

Q. Who are theſe meant by the worthy receivers mentioned in the anſwer?

A. They are believers, who are fit to receive, and do exerciſe faith and love in the act of receiving: Not that they are worthy in a legal ſenſe of any mercy, but called worthy, becauſe they receive in a ſuitable and becoming manner, both with reſpect to their ſtate and frame; which is worthineſs in a goſpel ſenſe.

Q. May theſe who have weak faith, and many fears, be admitted to join with the worthy receivers?

A. Yes; for weak believers are among Chriſt's friends whom he invites, and are theſe who have a right to the childrens bread: beſides, this ordinance is appointed as a means of our ſpiritual ſtrength and growth in grace.

Q. But, may theſe weak and doubting ſouls keep back till they arrive at comfort and ſtrength?

A. No: for ſtrength and comfort are attained in the way of believing, and uſing the means which God hath appointed for that end; and we have no ground to expect them while we neglect this ordinance, which is one of theſe means.

Q. What advantage do worthy receivers reap by this ordinance?

A. They are made partakers of Chriſt's body and blood with all his benefits.

Q. How are worthy receivers made partakers of Chriſt's body and blood?

A. Not corporally, but ſpiritually.

Q. How do they partake of theſe ſpiritually in the ſacrament?

A. When they get their title ſecured to the benefits or fruits of Chriſt's broken body and ſhed blood, as by ſaſine or infeftment; or when their ſouls do actually ſhare of theſe benefits here in part.

Q. What are theſe benefits or fruits of Chrſt's body and blood which worthy receivers partake of?

A. They are pardon of ſin, deliverance from wrath, the ſubduing of ſin, the ſtrengthening of grace, curing of heart plagues, reſolving of doubts, looſing of bands, ſweet views of God's love, and of eternal glory, and the like.

Q. Are we not made partakers of Chriſt's body and blood in a corrupt and carnal manner in the ſacrament?

A. No.

Q. What is meant by theſe words in the anſwer?

A. That there is no tranſubſtantiation or turning of the bread and wine in the ſacrament, into the very body and blood of Chriſt, as the Papiſts do maintain.

Q. Is not Chriſt really preſent in the ſacrament?

A. Yes, he is ſpiritually preſent by his Spirit and grace, but not preſent in a bodily manner.

Q. Do the elements remain ſtill bread and wine after the conſecration?

A. Yes; for our reaſon and ſenſes do plainly teſtify them to be ſo, and Chriſt and his apoſtles do expreſly call them ſo. The apoſtle Paul, ſpeaking of the bread, doth three times over call it bread after conſecration; and Chriſt calls the cup when diſtributing it, the fruit of the vine. See 1 Cor. xi. 26, 27, 28. and Mat. xxvi. 29.

Q. What is the meaning then of theſe words of Chriſt, Take, eat; this is my body broken for you?

A. The plain and obvious meaning is, That the broken bread doth ſignify and repreſent Chriſt's body as it was to be broken and wounded for us. In like manner, Chriſt ſaid, This cup is the New Teſtament; not that he meant the very cup was turned into the New Teſtament, but only that it was a ſign and ſeal of the New Teſtament and its bleſſings.

Q. Muſt not Chriſt's body continue in heaven until the reſurrection of all things at his ſecond coming?

A. Yes; the apoſtle Peter ſaith ſo, Acts iii. 21. Nay, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf ſaid, Now I am no more in the world, John xvii. 11.

Q. Can a true human body be in heaven, and on earth and in many thouſand places of the earth at the ſame time? A. No.

Q. Is it conſiſtent with the glorified ſtate of Chriſt's body, to have it ſtill liable to ſufferings and contempt?

A. No.

Q. Would it not be liable to theſe, if tranſubſtantiation was true?

A. Yes; for ſo it might ſtill be pierced, nay, torn in pieces, or burnt: It might be eaten by wicked men, nay, by beaſts, and thrown out to the dunghill; which is abſurd to imagine concerning the glorified body of the Son God.

Q. Seeing ſuch abſurdities would follow, ought not we to underſtand Chriſt's words, This is my body, in a figurative ſenſe?

A. Yes, eſpecially ſeeing our Lord frequently uſed this way of ſpeaking to his diſciples, calling himſelf bread, a door, a way, a vine, &c. and particularly concerning the ſacraments, ſaying of circumciſion, This is my covenant; and of the lamb, It is the Lord's paſſover, Gen. xvii. 10. Exod. xii. 11. And we ſee how expreſly the Holy Ghoſt ſaith of believers, 1 Cor. xii. 27. Ye are the body of Chriſt. Yet all agree to take theſe words figuratively; and why not alſo Chriſt's words, This is my body.

Q. Seeing believers are not partakers of Chriſt's body and blood in the ſacrament in a corporal manner, how is it they do partake of him?

A. They are partakers of Chriſt by faith in the ſacrament, when the fruits and benefits of Chriſt's death are applied by faith unto their ſouls, by which they get ſpiritual nouriſhment and growth in grace, Heb. iii. 14. 1 Cor. x. 16. John vi. 35, 47, 58, 63.

Q. How is faith to be exerciſed in communicating?

A. Many ways; 1. In diſcerning a crucified Chriſt and his benefits under the elements, and looking to him for healing and ſalvation. 2. In fleeing in to the clift of his wounds for protection from wrath. 3. In embracing Chriſt in all his offices, and with all his benefits, as he is offered to us in the giving of the bread and wine. 4. In being firmly perſwaded of the truth of the goſpel revelation, and of the promiſes of ſalvation by the blood and merits of Jeſus Chriſt. 5. In applying the virtue and efficacy of the blood and merits of Chriſt to ourſelves, for ſilencing conſcience, renewing the ſoul, ſubduing of ſin, and for quickening and ſtrengthening of grace. 6. In pleading this blood with God for pardon and acceptance, for ſanctification and glorification. 7. In yielding up ourſelves both ſoul and body to Jeſus Chriſt, to be taught by his Spirit, governed by his laws, and ſaved by his blood.

Q. Do believers get ſpiritual nouriſhment and growth in grace by exerciſing faith in partaking in the foreſaid manner? A. Yes.

Q. How may we know if we receive ſpiritual nouriſhment and growth in grace in and by the ſacrament?

A. We may know it by theſe marks; 1. If we have a better taſte and reliſh of ſpiritual things than we had before. 2. If we draw virtue from Chriſt's death for crucifying of ſin, which hinders our ſtrength and growth. 3. If we be more rooted and eſtabliſhed in grace, confirmed in our faith, and increaſed in humility and ſpiritual-mindedneſs. 4. If we abound more in prayer, and in the fruits of holineſs, and in the duties which we owe both to God and man.

QUEST. XCVII.

Q What is required to the worthy receiving of the Lord's ſupper?

A. It is required of them that would worthily partake of the Lord's ſupper, that they examine themſelves of their knowledge to diſcern the Lord's body, of their faith to feed upon him, of their repentance, love and new obedience; leſt, coming unworthily, they eat and drink judgment to themſelves.

Q. Can unbelievers, while remaining ſo, be worthy partakers?

A. No: for they, not being in covenant with God thro' Chriſt, have no right to this confirming ſeal of the covenant.

Q. Is this an ordinance appointed for converſion?

A. No?

Q. Is it not dangerous to come to it unworthily?

A. Yes.

Q. How ſhall we prevent that danger?

A. By ſeeking after both habitual and actual prepa ration for it, that is, by labouring both to be in a ſtate of grace, and to have grace drawn forth into exerciſe.

Q. How ſhall we attain to this preparation ?

A. By examining ourſelves, 1 Cor. xi. 28.

Q. What is it for a man to examine himſelf in this caſe ?

A. It is for a man to retire from the world, and to poſe his own heart with certain queſtions concerning his qualifications for the Lord's table, and to urge his heart to make plain anſwers.

Q. What are the things we ſhould examine ourſelves about in order to our partaking of the Lord's ſupper ?

A. The anſwer mentions five ſpecial things which we are to examine ourſelves about, namely our knowledge, faith, repentance, love, and new obedience.

Q. For what end muſt we have knowledge ?

A. That we may be able to diſcern the Lord's body in the ſacrament.

Q. What is it to diſcern the Lord's body in the ſacrament ?

A. It is to diſtinguiſh rightly between the outward ſigns and the ſpiritual things ſignified ; and to have a due uptaking of the value and excellency of the body and blood of Chriſt, and the bleſſings thereby purchaſed ; and alſo to diſcern the greatneſs of our Lord's ſufferings, ſo as to be duly affected with his love manifeſted therein, and grieved for our ſins that were the procuring cauſe of them.

Q. What are we to examine about our knowledge ?

A. Two things ; 1. If it be competent in its meaſure. 2. If it be ſaving in its quality.

Q. What is that competent meaſure of knowledge needful for worthy partaking ?

A. We muſt have the knowledge, 1. Of God in the unity of his eſſence and trinity of perſons. 2. Of man in his eſtate both before and ſince his fall. 3. Of Chriſt the Mediator in his two natures and three offices. 4. Of the covenant of grace, and of the way of our juſtification by faith in the Surety's righteouſneſs. 5. Of the ſeals of this covenant, and particularly of the holy ſupper, and the deſign of it.

Q. How may we diſcern if our knowledge be ſaving in its quality ?

A. We may reckon it is ſo, 1. If it be humbling, and cauſe us to mourn for ſin, Zech. xii. 10. 2. If it take us off from ſelf, and lead to Chriſt and his righteouſneſs as the only ground of our hope, Phil. iii. 8, 9. 3. If it influence both heart and life, and make us breathe after conformity to Chriſt our Head, 2 Cor. iii. 18.

Q. What is the uſe of faith in the Lord's ſupper ?

A. To feed upon a crucified Chriſt, or to apply the fruits and benefits of his death unto our ſouls. See more of its uſefulneſs before, page 368.

Q. What is implied in faith's feeding on Chriſt in the ſacrament ?

A. It imports the ſoul's hungering and thirſting after Chriſt, and embracing of him by faith : Alſo it imports the ſoul's union with Chriſt, and partaking of the benefits of his death ; its having great ſatisfaction in him, and deriving life, ſtrength and growth from him.

Q. How may we know if our faith be true and ſaving ?

A. We may judge it ſo, if it ſoften and purify the heart, if it make Chriſt precious to us, if it work by love, if it carry us above the world, and make us fruitful in good works.

Q. What is the uſe of repentance in partaking of the Lord's ſupper ?

A. That in renewing covenant with God, we may be ſorry for former breaches and backſlidings : That, in looking upon a bleeding Saviour, we may mourn for our ſins, which brought all theſe ſufferings upon him : That we may receive a broken Chriſt into broken hearts, and firmly reſolve in his ſtrength, that we will not pierce him any more.

Q. How may we know if our repentance be true ?

A. It is ſo, if our ſenſe of ſin drive us to Chriſt the only remedy ; if our grief for ſin be univerſal, for the corruption of nature, as well as the outbreakings of our life ; if we ſincerly deſire deliverance from all ſin and corruption, ſtudy univerſal holineſs, endeavour to avoid all known ſins, and to perform all known duties both to God and our neighbour.

Q. Why is love ſo needful at the Lord's table ?

A. Becauſe it is a love feaſt, wherein we have the greateſt diſcovery of God's love to ſinners ever was given, which requires ſuitable returns of love from us, namely, love to God and Chriſt, and to his people, and to our very enemies.

Q. How may we know if our love to God and Jeſus Chriſt be true ?

A. We may judge it ſo, if we love God above all things ; if we keep his commands, if we be afraid to offend him, if we be tender of his honour, if we rejoice in the ſucceſs of his goſpel, if we mourn under his abſence, long for his preſence, and deſire to be like him.

Q. Is not every worthy communicant reſolved in Chriſt's ſtrength to perform new obedience, by forſaking all ſin, and following the Lamb whitherſoever he goeth ? A. Yes.

Q. Is not ſelf-examination with reſpect to all theſe things very uſeful before partaking ?

A. Yes ; for it ſerves to diſcover how it is with us, to humble us for defects, and to excite us to go to the fulneſs that is in Chriſt for the ſupply of all our wants.

Q. Is it not moſt dangerous to neglect ſelf-examination before communicating ?

A. Yes ; for the anſwer ſaith, all muſt examine themſelves, leſt coming unworthily they eat and drink judgment to themſelves.

Q. Is not ſelf-examination to be joined with earneſt prayer ? A. Yes.

Q. What ſhould we pray for before we come to the Lord's table ?

A. That God would prepare our ſouls for ſo near an approach to God ; that he would quicken all the ſacramental graces, and bring them to a lively exerciſe in us ; and that he would ſave us from coming unworthily to his holy table.

Q. Who are theſe that come unworthily to the Lord's table ?

A. Theſe who are ignorant or graceleſs, and they who live in any known ſin, or come without reconciliation to God and their neighbour : Alſo they who neglect to prepare themſelves by ſelf-examination, and prayer for exciting of grace before they come.

Q. What is the ſin of theſe who come unworthily ?

A. They are guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, being acceſſory to the Jews ſin who crucified him, by their harbouring the murderer ſin, 1 Cor. xi. 27.

Q. What is the danger of theſe who come unworthily?

A. They eat and drink judgment to themſelves, 1 Cor. ix. 29, 30.

Q. What judgments were inflicted on the unworthy communicants at Corinth?

A. Sickneſs and death, 1 Cor. xi. 30.

Q. Is this ſin pardonable upon repentance?

A. Yes; the blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſin.

Q. May theſe who want aſſurance come to the Lord's table?

A. Yes, if they have a ſenſe of their need of Chriſt, and earneſt deſires to be found in him; for this ſacrament is a means for ſtrengthening weak grace, and obtaining the evidences of God's love to doubting ſouls.

Q. What ſhall theſe do, who after all their endeavours cannot get their hearts brought to any ſuitable frame for approaching to God in this ordinance?

A. They ought to bewail their caſe before the Lord, and yet in obedience to his command they ſhould come to put honour upon their dying Saviour, who has appointed this ordinance as a means for bringing ſuch exerciſed ſouls into a right frame. It is our beſt courſe, even in our worſt caſes, to lay ourſelves in God's road, who has promiſed to meet ſuch as remember him in his ways, and doth many times ſurprize his people with ſupplies of life, when he ſees them ſtruggling with their deadneſs in the uſe of appointed means.

QUEST. XCVIII.

Q. What is Prayer?

A. Prayer is an offering up of our deſires to God, for things agreeable to his will, in the name of Chriſt, with confeſſion of our ſins, and thankful acknowledgement of his mercies.

Q. What are the parts of prayer mentioned in this anſwer?

A. They are three; petition, confeſſion, and thankſgiving.

Q. What are our petitions to God called in the anſwer?

A. They are called an offering up of our deſires to God.

Q. Doth God account the offering up of the words of the mouth, as petitions or prayers to him?

A. No, without the deſires of the heart: Tho' he will accept of the deſires of the heart, if ſincere, without the words of the mouth, as in the caſe of Moſes and Hannah, Exod. xiv. 15. 1 Sam. i. 13.

Q. Are we not to make uſe of our voice and words in uttering our deſires to God?

A. Yes, when the circumſtances of the time and place allow it; for theſe are proper and needful to prevent wandering, to increaſe fervency, and to glorify God with the outward man, Pſal. v. 3. & lv. 17. & lxix. 3.

Q. If ſome, as they alledge, cannot pray in ſuch proper words as others, may they omit prayer?

A. No: For God looks chiefly to the heart, and its deſires; and he accepts them when ſincere, tho' the words be not ſo proper or exact. Hence the Pſalmiſt encouraged himſelf in his diſtreſs, Pſal. xxxviii. 9. 'Lord, all my deſire is before thee, and my groaning is not hid from thee.'

Q. To whom are we to offer up our deſires in prayer?

A. To God only, Pſal. l. 15. & lxii. 8. Mat. iv. 10. & vi. 9.

Q. May we pray to any of the Three Perſons of the Godhead?

A. Yes; for in ſcripture we find prayer directed, ſometimes to the Father, John xvi. 23. Eph. iii. 14. ſometimes to the Son, Mat. viii. 2. Acts vii. 59. 1 Cor. i. 2. ſometimes to the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Cor. xiii. 14. Yet ſo as, when any one of the three is named, the other two are underſtood as included, they being all three but one and the ſame God.

Q. Why muſt we pray to God only?

A. Becauſe ſo we are commanded, and it is God only that ſearches our hearts, that knows our caſes, and can help us in ſtraits, Mat. iv. 30. Pſal. xxxiv, 15, 17. 2 Kings vi. 26, 27. And hence he ſtiles himſelf, The God hearing prayers, Pſal. lxv. 2.

Q. May we not pray to ſaints or angels, or to the virgin Mary?

A. No: For in all the ſcripture there is neither command, promiſe nor example for it; nay, we are forbidden to do it, for it is idolatry. The ſaints know not our caſes, and they are curſed who truſt in man. See Mat. iv. 10. Iſa. xlii. 8. Exod. xx. 3. Gal. ii. 18. Rev. xix. 10. Iſa. lxiii. 16. Jer. xvii. 5.

Q. May we not pray to the ſaints in heaven, as well as apply to the ſaints on earth to pray to us?

A. We do not pray to ſaints here with religious honour, but only aſk their charitable aſſiſtance while we have acceſs to converſe with them here below, which we are warranted to do, 2 Theſſ. iii. 1. James v. 14, 16. But the ſaints in heaven are ignorant of us, Iſa. lxiii. 16.

Q. Can we in prayer make known to God that which he knew not before?

A. No; for he underſtands our thoughts affar off, Pſal. cxxxix. 2, 4. But yet he thinks fit to enjoin us thus to make known our requeſts to him, as the means by which we are to receive the good things promiſed, Phil. iv. 6 Pſal. l. 15. Joel ii. 32. Rom. x. 12.

Q. Can prayer merit any thing from God?

A. No; for in prayer we come, as needy beggars, to aſk mercy only by mere favour.

Q. If God hath decreed to give us what we need, what need we pray for it?

A Becauſe God hath commanded us, and he hath decreed to beſtow bleſſings in the way of prayer.

Q. Is not prayer our privilege as well as our duty?

A. Yes; and a great privilege it is, for ſuch poor beggars to be admitted in a familiar manner to open our caſes to ſo great a King, in whoſe preſence the angels cover their faces.

Q. For what things may we offer up our deſires to God?

A. Not for things unlawful, but for things which are agreeable to God's will, 1 John v. 14.

Q. What do you mean by the will of God, which is to be the rule of our prayers?

A. Not his ſecret will which is unknown to us, but his revealed will which is contained in his word.

Q. What are theſe things agreeable to God's revealed will, which we are to pray for?

A. They are good things both ſpiritual and temporal that we ſtand in need of, and which he hath promiſed to us in his covenant.

Q. What are theſe ſpiritual things which we ſhould pray for ?

A. They are ſuch as an intereſt in Chriſt, pardon of ſin, ſupplies of grace, deliverance from ſin and wrath, and eternal life.

Q. May we pray for the good things of this life ?

A. Yes, but not principally or in the firſt place.

Q. What things are we to ſeek in the firſt place ?

A. Spiritual things, particularly Jeſus Chriſt and his grace.

Q. Ought not ſpiritual things and temporal things be aſked in a different way ?

A. Yes; for the one we are to pray abſolutely, and for the other conditionally and with ſubmiſſion to God's will.

Q. What is the condition upon which we are to pray for temporal good things ?

A. It is upon condition that God ſee it fit for his own glory and our good to grant them to us, 2 Sam. x. 12. and xv. 15, 26, Mat. viii. 2.

Q. Ought we to ſeek for temporal mercies with the ſame fervency as for ſpiritual ? A. No.

Q. Should we pray for all ſorts of ſpiritual mercies in the ſame way ?

A. No; for we ſhould pray abſolutely for theſe that are abſolutely neceſſary for us, ſuch as Chriſt, faith, remiſſion of ſin, perſeverance, &c. But for things which are not abſolutely needful to ſalvation, ſuch as the higheſt degrees of grace, ſpiritual gifts and comforts, deliverance from temptations, &c. theſe we ſhould pray for conditionally, and with ſubmiſſion to the will of God.

Q. Why may we pray abſolutely for God and his grace ?

A. Becauſe they are abſolutely promiſed, and we are ſure they are for God's glory and our real good, ſeeing without them we cannot ſerve God here, nor enjoy him hereafter.

Q. Ought we to pray for all ſorts of perſons ?

A. Yes; as for kings, for magiſtrates and miniſters, for all ſaints, for the afflicted, for the unconverted, for our relations and friends, and even for our enemies, 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2. Eph. iv. 18, 19. Mat. v. 44. Pſal. lxxii. 19. and lxvi. 2, 3, 4.

Q. Are not there ſome perſons excepted, for whom we muſt not pray ?

A. Yes; we may not pray for them that have committed the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, nor for the dead, nor for the damned in hell, 1 John v. 16.

Q. What if we ſhould aſk any thing diſagreeable to the will of God ?

A. In that caſe, we muſt not expect to receive it, James iv. 3.

Q. Is it enough that the matter of our prayer be right, to wit, that they be for things agreeable to God's will ?

A. No; for the manner of our prayers muſt be ſo too.

Q. May we go to God without a Mediator ?

A. No; for we are guilty and obnoxious to his juſtice, and ſo can no more approach to God, than ſtubble to a conſuming fire.

Q. Who is the Mediator between God and man ?

A. The man Chriſt Jeſus, and beſide him there is none elſe, 1 Tim. ii. 5.

Q. In whoſe name muſt we offer up our deſires to God ?

A. Only in the name of Chriſt this one Mediator, John xiv. 13, 14, and xvi. 23.

Q. What do you mean by praying in the name of Chriſt ? Is it only to uſe his name in our prayers ?

A. There is more in it; for it imports our pleading the merits of Chriſt the purchaſer for every thing we want, and depending thereupon as the only ground of our acceptance and audience with God, Eph. iii. 12.

Q. Is Chriſt that angel mentioned, Rev. vii. 3, 4, with the golden cenſer, that offers up our prayers before the throne of God ? A. Yes.

Q. What is that incenſe he is ſaid to mix with the prayers of the ſaints ?

A. It is the merits of his obedience and ſufferings, or his perfect righteouſneſs.

Q. What need is there for mixing this incenſe with our prayers ?

A. To perfume them, and take away the ill ſavour of the imperfections and defilements which cleave to our beſt duties.

Q. May we not in prayer make uſe of the names of ſaints or angels as our interceſſors with God ?

A. No; for this would be highly injurious to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is the alone interceſſor and advocate with the Father for us, 1 Tim. ii. 5. Heb. vii. 25. 1 John ii. 1.

Q. Beſides praying in Chriſt's name, is there any thing more required in the manner of our prayers that they be acceptable to God ?

A. Yes; they muſt be offered up with humility, ſincerity, faith, fervency and perſeverance, Pſal. x. 17. Jer. xxix. 13. Heb. x. 22. James i. 6. James v. 16. Luke xviii. 1.

Q. When we are bid pray without ceaſing, 1 Theſſ. v. 17. muſt we do no other work but pray ?

A. The meaning is, that we ſhould continue in prayer without wearying, keep up ſtated times, and embrace all other proper occaſions for prayer, and ſtudy to keep the heart always in a praying frame.

Q. Muſt we omit prayer when we do not find our hearts in a good frame for it ?

A. No; we muſt go and make our complaint to God who can help us, and not ceaſe praying till we find ourſelves in a better frame.

Q. If the deſired mercy do not ſoon come, may we then give over ?

A. No; we muſt continue inſtant in prayer, and not faint, Rom. xii. 12. Luke xviii. 1.

Q. Can we of ourſelves pray in this acceptable manner to God ?

A. No; and therefore we muſt have the Spirit of God to help our infirmities, Rom. viii. 26, 27. and hence he is called the Spirit of ſupplication, Zech. xii. 10.

Q. How doth the Spirit of God help us in prayer ?

A. He both raiſes ſuitable affections in us for prayer, and directs us to ſuitable matter and arguments in prayer, becauſe we know not what we ſhould pray for as we ought, Rom. viii. 26.

Q. Is it not thus that the Spirit makes interceſſion in us ?

A. Yes.

Q. Are all prayers, offered up to God, accepted and anſwered ?

A. No; for the prayers of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord, Prov. xv. 8.

Q. How cometh it that the prayers of many are not regarded?

A. Becauſe they regard iniquity in their hearts, ſuch as unbelief, pride, covetouſneſs, malice, or unmercifulneſs to the poor; for each of which God threatens to ſhut out our prayers, Pſal. lxvi. 18. James i. 7. Pſal. cxxxviii. 6. Iſa. lvii. 17. Mat. v. 24. and vi. 15. Prov. xxi. 13.

Q. Doth not God ſometimes delay long to hear the prayers of his own people?

A. Yes; he doth ſo, to chaſten and humble them for their ſins, to try their faith and patience, to quicken them to more fervency in prayer, and make mercies more ſweet to them when obtained, Iſa. lix. 2. Mat. xv. 26, 28. Iſa. lxiv. 7. 2 Cor. xii. 8, 9.

Q. How may we know that our prayers are accepted of God, when yet we receive no anſwer to them?

A. It is a good ſign of acceptance, when we are helped ſtill to wait upon God in the way of duty, or get our hearts enlarged in prayer; or when we are inclined to juſtify God and blame ourſelves for the cauſe of his ſilence, Iſa. viii. 17. Pſal. cxxxviii. 3. Lam. iii. 39, 40, 41.

Q. Doth not God ſometimes anſwer his peoples prayers, though the very things aſked be not given?

A. Yes, when he grants them the equivalent, or things more neceſſary for them; as when he gives ſpiritual bleſſings inſtead of temporal, ſtronger adherence to Chriſt inſtead of aſſurance, or greater humility and meltings of heart for ſin, inſtead of conſolation and joy.

Q. What is the ſecond part of prayer mentioned in the anſwer? A. Confeſſion of our ſins.

Q. Ought not our petitions for pardon and mercy to be attended with humble confeſſion of ſin?

A. Yes, if we would have them acceptable and ſucceſsful, Luke xviii. 13. 14.

Q. What ſins ſhould we confeſs unto the Lord?

A. All our ſins, both original and actual, of omiſſion and commiſſion, in heart and life, in words and actions; with the ſeveral aggravations of them, and their deſervings at God's hand.

Q. In what manner ought we to confeſs our ſins to the Lord?

A. We ſhould confeſs our ſins humbly, freely, fully, and in a moſt penitent manner, with grief for them, hatred of them, and ſtrong reſolutions againſt them in the ſtrength of Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. Muſt we not forſake our ſins, as well as confeſs them?

A. Yes; for it is only theſe who do ſo, that ſhall find mercy, according to Prov. xxviii. 13.

Q. What is the third part of prayer mentioned in the anſwer?

A. Thankful acknowledgment of God's mercies to us.

Q. Is thankſgiving to be always joined with our petitions and ſupplications to God?

A. Yes; for God requires and expects it, and it is moſt pleaſing unto him, Phil. iv. 6. Luke xvii. 17. Pſal. lxix. 31.

Q. What are the mercies we ought to acknowledge and give thanks for?

A. All the ſpiritual and temporal mercies which we preſently enjoy; and the eternal mercies which we hope for, and have promiſed unto us.

Q. Which is the greateſt mercy that we have to acknowledge?

A. Jeſus Chriſt is the mercy of mercies, and the unſpeakable gift of God to a periſhing world, for which we ſhould offer thanks to God, both now, and thro' all eternity, Luke i. 72. 2 Cor. ix. 15.

Q. Is not this thankfulneſs for mercies, a ſpecial way of glorifying God?

A. Yes; for God hath ſaid, 'Whoſo offereth praiſe, glorifieth me,' Pſal. l. 23.

Q. How ſhould we acknowledge our mercies, ſo as to glorify God?

A. We ſhould acknowledge them thankfully and with admiration, affectionately and with delight in the Author, humbly and with ſelf abhorrence, obediently and with fruitful lives, fiducially and with encouragement to aſk for more, Pſal. ciii. 1. 2. &c. Pſal. cxvi. 1. 2. 9. 12. Gen. xxxii. 10. 11. Pſal. iv. 1. 3. 2 Cor. i. 10. Pſal. lxvii. 5. 6.

Q. Ought we not to bewail it, that we are ſo negligent and backward in this duty of thankfulneſs for mercies received? A. Yes.

QUEST. XCIX.

Q. What rule hath God given for our direction in prayer?

A. The whole word of God is of uſe to direct us in prayer, but the ſpecial rule of direction is that form of prayer which Chriſt taught his diſciples commonly called, The Lord's prayer.

Q. Why do men need rules and directions in prayer?

A. Becauſe of ourſelves we know not what to pray for as we ought, nor how to pray for it aright when we know it; but are ready to miſtake either as to the matter or manner of our prayers.

Q. When do men miſtake in the matter of prayer?

A. When they aſk things not good in themſelves, or not proper for them; ſo the diſciples did miſtake, when they would have called for fire againſt the Samaritans, Luke ix. 54.

Q. When do men miſtake in the manner of prayer?

A. When they pray for mercies in a formed way, or for carnal ends, as to make proviſion for their luſts, Iſa. lxiv. 7. James iv. 3.

Q. What helps hath God furniſhed us with for prayer?

A. He hath given us both a general and ſpecial directory for it.

Q. What is the general directory which God hath given us for prayer?

A. The whole word of God, which is of great uſe to direct us both as the matter and manner of prayer.

Q. How is the word of God uſeful to direct us in the matter of prayer?

A. The word doth furniſh us with matter for preface, for confeſſion, for petition, and for thankſgiving in prayer.

Q. What matter doth the word furniſh us with for the preface of prayer?

A. It affords us the moſt noble and lofty deſcriptions of God, with his title and attributes, which are proper in our addreſſes to him; ſuch as theſe in Exod. xv. 11. and xxxiv. 6. 7. Neh. ix. 6. Job ix. 4. and xi. 7. and 40. 9. Pſal. lxxxiii. 18. and lxxxvi. 8. 10. and xix. 6. 8. and xc. 2. and cii. 25. 26. 27. and civ. 1. 2. 24. and cxxxix. 7. 8. 9. 10, and cxlv. 3. 8. 9. 14. 17. Iſa. xxviii. 29. and xl. 12. 15. 17. 22. 28. and lv. 9. Jer. 17. 10. and xxxi. 35. Mal. iii. 6. Dan. ii. 34. 35. 1 Tim. i. 17. Rev. iv. 6. 11.

Q. What matter doth God's word furniſh us with for the confeſſion of ſin ?

A. It doth ſet before us many examples of religious perſons, humbling themſelves before God for their ſins, and confeſſing their original ſin and corruption, the blindneſs of their minds, the ſtubborneſs of their wills, the carnality of their affections, their ſins of omiſſion and commiſſion, and the manifold aggravations of their ſins; as in Ezra ix. 6, 13. 15. Neh. ix. 32. 33. 34. &c. Job vii. 20. and ix. 3. 20. and xv. 14. 15 &c. and xl. 4. and xlii. 5, 6, Pſal. xiv. 3. and xix. 12, and xxxviii. 4, 18. and xl. 12, and li. 3, 4. 5, &c. and lxxiii. 22. Pſal. cxix. ult. and cxxx. 3, 4, &c. Iſa. i. 6, and vi. 5, Jer. v. 3, and ix. 1. and xvii. 9, and xxxi. 18, Lam. iii. 39, 40, &c. Dan. iv. 5, 6, &c. Luke xv. 18, 19, 21. Rom. vii. 14, 15, &c. and viii. 7, Eph. xxi. 2, 3, &c. and iv. 18.

Q. What matter doth the word afford us for thankſgiving ?

A. It doth ſet before us the examples of God's people, who bleſſed and praiſed him for his goodneſs to them in creation and providence, in allowing them the comforts of life, peace, and tranquillity, ſucceſs in their callings, ſanctified afflictions, recovery from ſickneſs, the accompliſhment of promiſes, and eſpecially for Jeſus Chriſt, and all manner of ſpiritual bleſſings in him, Pſal. viii. 3. 4. and lxv. 9 10. and cxxxix. 14. and civ. 27. 28. &c. and iii. 5. and lxviii. 19. Deut. viii. 10. Gen. xxxii. 10. Iſa. xxxviii. 10. 17. Pſal. 119. 67. 1 Kings viii. 58. Luke i. 68, 69. &c. Eph. i. 3, 2 Cor. ix. 15, Iſa. lxiii. 7, Pſal. ciii, 1, 2, 3, &c. Rev. i, 5, 6, 1 John iv, 10.

Q. What matter doth the word afford for petitions and requeſts ?

A. The ſcriptures abound with many excellent precepts and precious promiſes, every one of which we may turn into prayers of requeſts, begging of God that he would give us grace to obey the precepts, and grace to enable us to plead and wait for the accompliſhment of the promiſes. Beſides, we have recorded many examples of ſaints petitioning for pardon of ſin, reconcilation with God, the divine bleſſing, the evidences of God's love, and peace of conſcience; for renovation of heart, ſaving illumination, holy fear, faith, and increaſe of all grace ; for preſervation from ſin and error, wiſdom to improve time, and prepare for death ; as in Pſal. li, 1, 2, 3, 7, 9, and cxliii. 2, Hoſ. xiv, 2, Luke xviii. 13, Jer xvii, 14, Pſal. lxvii, 1, 6, and cvi, 4, 5, and xxxv, 3, Pſal. li, 8, 10, 11, 12, Rom. xv, 13, Pſal. cxix, 10, 29, 33, 37, 80, 132, 133, Job 34, 32, 1 Theſſ. v, 23, 24, Pſal. xxvii, 11, and lxxxvi, 11, Luke xvii, 5, Pſal, xix, 12, 13, and xxxix, 4, 5, and xc, 12. All which may be uſeful to direct us in prayer.

Q. Do not we find the ſcripture ſaints making uſe of arguments with God in prayer for obtaining their requeſts ?

A. Yes, very many, taken from the mercy of God's nature, the glory of his name, his promiſes, faithfulneſs, power, and from the merit and righteouſneſs of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, Pſal. lxxxvi, 5, 15, and lxxix, 8, 9, Joſhua vii, 9, Numb. xiv, 17, 18, 19, Pſal. cxix, 49, and lxxiv, 20, Neh. i, 5, Mat. viii, 2, Iſa. lxiv. 6, Jer. xxiii, 6, Dan. ix, 17, 18, 19.

Q. If the word doth ſhew us the matter of prayer ſo fully, then what need have we of the Spirit of grace and ſupplication, which God promiſeth to pour out upon his people ?

A. It is the Spirit's office to take of the things of Chriſt and ſhew them unto us, John xvi, 15. He teaches us all things, and brings all things to our remembrance, John xiv, 16.

Q. Doth the ſcripture give us direction alſo as to the manner of prayer ?

A. Yes; it directs us to draw near to God with ſincerity, humility, fervency, conſtancy, and faith in the merits of Jeſus Chriſt, Heb. x, 22, Pſal. x, 17, James 5, 16, and i, 6, John xvi, 23, Luke xviii, 1.

Q. What is the ſpecial rule of direction in prayer, mentioned in the anſwer ?

A. That form of prayer which Chriſt taught his diſciples, commonly called the Lord's prayer. This we have recorded in Mat. vi. 9. to 14. After this manner therefore pray ye; Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, &c.

Q. Why is that prayer called the Lord's prayer ? Is it becauſe he uſed it himſelf ?

A. No, the Lord Jeſus could not uſe it, for he had no ſin to ſeek forgiveneſs of, as in the fifth petition; but it is called his prayer, becauſe he taught it to his diſciples, that they might make uſe of it.

Q. What was Chriſt's deſign in teaching them this prayer ?

A. He deſigned to teach his diſciples (who were then but private perſons) ſuitably to their weak infant ſtate, when they had little of the Spirit, and little knowledge of the goſpel myſtery; for he but gradually revealed himſelf to them: and therefore, in the mean time, he gives them a ſhort, plain and eaſy form of the words that might comprehend the heads or chief things they had to aſk of God, and from which they might draw materials for prayer. Likewiſe, taught them by it to aſk for things relating to God's glory before things relating to themſelves, and to prefer ſpiritual mercies before temporal.

Q. Why do you think this prayer was ſo much calculated for the diſciples preſent ſtate ?

A. Becauſe our Lord did not then think fit to direct them to pray in his name, or to make any mention of Chriſt in their prayers: but afterwards, when he was pleaſed plainly to reveal himſelf as the great Prieſt and ſacrifice for loſt ſinners, he did teach them expreſly to pray in his name, John xv, 23. 24.

Q. Was it our Lord's deſign to tye his diſciples to the preciſe words he gave them, and to uſe them always when they prayed ?

A. No; for he gave them this prayer chiefly as a pattern or directory for their aſſiſtance in prayer, ſo that they were left at freedom either to uſe theſe very words, which indeed are ſweet and excellent, or to enlarge upon them in other words ſuitably to their own caſe, or the caſe of others joining with them in prayer.

Q. How do you make it appear that they were left at that freedom ?

A. Becauſe, 1. Chriſt ſaith to his diſciples, Mat. vi, 9. Pray after this manner. 2. Matthew and Luke do very much differ, and alter the words in recording this prayer. 4. We have ſeveral prayers of the apoſtles recorded, as in Acts i. 24. and iv. 24. Eph. i. 24, 1 Theſſ. iii, 11, 2 Theſſ. ii, 16, Heb. xiii, 20. and yet in none of them do they uſe the expreſs words of this prayer. 4. The Lord gives directions for prayer in other texts, and preſcribes words as expreſsly as Chriſt doth in Mat. 6. ſuch as we have recorded in Hoſ. xiv. 2, Joel ii, 17. and yet none plead that we are ſtinted to theſe preciſe words, tho' there is the ſame reaſon for doing it in the one place, as in the other.

Q. Is not the Lord's prayer ſtill of excellent uſe unto us?

A. Yes, and we ought to value it highly, and have a ſpecial regard to it, as a pattern of divine contrivance, and a moſt comprehenſive ſummary of the chief things we have to aſk of God, which we ſhould diligently ſtudy both as to matter and method, and from which we ſhould take the materials of our prayers.

Q. Doth Chriſt's giving us this prayer warrant men to compoſe forms of prayer for others, ſo as to reſtrict them to the uſe of them, and cauſe them to read them when they pray?

A. By no means: For tho' forms of prayer may be uſeful to Chriſtians and weak perſons, who cannot pray without ſuch helps; yet to impoſe them upon ſuch as need them not, and to oblige men to read them as terms of communion, is unwarrantable.

Q. Wherefore is this practice unwarrantable?

A. 1ſt, Becauſe we have no ſcripture command nor example for it; we are enjoined to read and ſtudy the ſcriptures, but not to read any Prayer book. If the ſcripture ſaints had any ſuch book, they could not have ſaid, as in Rom. viii. 26. We know not what to pray for as we ought without the Spirit's help; for theſe who read ſuch books for prayer, ſeem to be at no loſs what to pray for. 2dly, We have many prayers of the ſcripture and primitive ſaints recorded, which they conceived ſuitable to their preſent circumſtances and neceſſities, without any book or ſet form; nay, theſe antient ſaints were ſo far from reading their prayers from a book, that we are aſſured the uſual poſture was to pray with their eyes either ſhut or elſe lift to heaven. 3dly, The caſes, frames, trials and circumſtances of Chriſtians are ſo various, and alter ſo frequently, that it is impoſſible that ſuch compoſed form can reach them. 4thly, To reſtrict men to ſuch forms, would hinder them from the ſearch of the ſcriptures, and of their own hearts; and ſeeing they muſt uſe the petitions prepared for them, whether they be ſuitable to their conditions or not. 5thly, This practice is injurious to the office of the Holy Spirit, and the deſign of Chriſt's aſcenſion.

Q. Is not the uſing and reading of forms of prayer, of very ancient ſtanding in the church?

A. For as ancient as it is, we are well aſſured there was no ſuch practice in the church for four hundred years after Chriſt: Neither came it in, till the ſpirit of grace had in a great meaſure left the church; and whenever he is poured out again upon the church, theſe forms will be laid aſide.

Q. How is this practice injurious to the Spirit's office and Chriſt's aſcenſion?

A. In regard it is the office of the Holy Spirit to help his peoples infirmities, when they know not what to pray for as they ought; and Chriſt aſcended up on high, that he might ſend the Spirit, and give gifts unto men, of prayer as well as of preaching: But, if reading of prayers take place, theſe gifts are uſeleſs, ſeeing one that can read well may pray as well as theſe who have the greateſt gifts: And hereby a grave is digged for burying the moſt uſeful gifts of God to men: which is an injury to Chriſt and his Spirit, and expreſly contrary to the injunction which he gives unto miniſters, to ſtir up the gift of God that is in them, 2 Tim. i. 6.

Q. What parts doth the Lord's Prayer conſiſt of?

A. Of three parts, namely, a preface, ſix petitions, and the concluſion.

QUEST. C.

Q. What doth the preface of the Lord's prayer teach us?

A. The preface of the Lord's prayer (which is, Our Father which art in heaven) teacheth us to draw near to God with all holy reverence and confidence, as children to a Father able and ready to help us; and that we ſhould pray with and for others.

Q. Why doth Chriſt teach us to begin prayer with a ſolemn preface?

A. To let us know that we muſt not ruſh into God's preſence without conſideration, but muſt ſtudy to have an awful ſenſe of the majeſty of that God whom we are to addreſs.

Q. What is the preface given to the Lord's prayer?

A. It is in theſe words, Our Father which art in heaven.

Q. What views doth Chriſt give us of the object of worſhip in this preface?

A. We have a twofold view of God in it; 1. In the near relation he ſtands to his people in theſe words, Our Father. 2. In his glorified majeſty, and dwelling place, in theſe words, which art in heaven.

Q. How is the word Father to be underſtood here?

A. Sometimes Father is underſtood perſonally for the firſt perſon of the bleſſed Trinity, and to whom prayer is directed; as in Eph. iii, 14. Sometimes Father is underſtood eſſentially for the Godhead, including all the three perſons as in 1 Chron. xxix, 10. 2 Cor. vi. 18. And in this laſt ſenſe we take it in the Lord's prayer.

Q. In what reſpect is God called our Father?

A. 1ſt, God is called our Father in reſpect of creation, as in Iſa. lxiv. 8. Mal. ii. 10. 2dly, In reſpect of our adoption into the family of God through Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. viii. 14, 15, Gal. iv. 5, 6.

Q. When Chriſt directs us in prayer to call God our Father, what doth he teach us thereby?

A. He teacheth us hereby to draw near to God, 1. With holy reverence and fear of God our Creator, 2. With a filial and kindly reſpect to God as our Benefactor and Provider. 3. With humble confidence and expectation of getting what we want from a loving Father. 4. With willingneſs and deſire, as children who delight to ſpeak to their kind father.

Q. Is it not unſpeakable love and goodneſs in God to allow ſuch ſinful worms to call him our Father?

A. Yes: and the apoſtle John is aſtoniſhed at it, 1 John iii. 1.

Q. May unregenerate men call God their father?

A. Not in a peculiar manner, or in a goſpel ſenſe; hence Chriſt would not allow the Phariſees to call God their Father, John viii. 42, 44.

Q. Who are theſe then that may warrantably do it?

A. Theſe who receive the ſpirit of adoption into their hearts may cry, Abba, Father, Rom. viii. 15.

Q. What is the ſpirit of adoption?

A. It is the Spirit of God that produces the nature and diſpoſitions of children in the ſouls of God's people; which appears in their filial love to God, their fear of offending him, their dependence upon him, their obedience and deſire of conformity to him.

Q. How ſhall theſe cry, Abba, Father, who ſee not the evidences of the ſpirit of adoption in them?

A. If they receive the Lord Jeſus by faith, they may call God their Father; for it is by faith in him that ſinners become the children of God, John i. 12. Gal. iii. 26.

Q. What ſhall theſe ſay, who doubt if they have got true faith?

A. If they be weary of their ſins and earneſtly deſirous of reconciliation with God thro' Chriſt, they may go to God with the prodigal, and ſay to him, Father, I have ſinned, &c. Luke xv. 18.

Q. Wherein doth God reſemble a father or earthly parent to his people?

A. In regard he pities them, provides bread for them, clothes them, loves to hear them ſpeak, is ready to hear their cries, gives them good inſtructions, and a good example, chaſtiſes them with yearning bowels, provides portions and inheritances for them, Prov. iii. 13, 1 Pet. ii, 2. Iſa. lxi, 10, Prov. xv, 8, Pſal. xxxiv. 15, Mat. v. 48, Jer. xxx, 11, Pſal. xxxi, 19, Luke xii, 32, 1 Pet. i. 4.

Q. Wherein doth God excel all earthly fathers?

A. In regard he is a Father infinitely rich, wiſe and loving, immortal and everlaſting: He gives his children whatever is good for them, and in beſt time; he never gives them what is hurtful to them: He makes all his children heirs, yea, heirs of a kingdom, even the youngeſt of them.

Q. Why is God in this preface ſaid to be in heaven? Is he no where elſe?

A. The meaning is not that God's preſence is included in the heavens; for the heaven of heavens cannot contain him, who fills heaven and earth, and is every where preſent, 1 Kings viii. 27. Jer. xxiii. 24. But he is ſaid to be in heaven, becauſe there is his throne and court, where he manifeſts himſelf moſt glorioufly, Pſal. xi. 4. and ciii. 19. Iſa. lxvi. 1.

Q. What doth Chriſt teach us by addreſſing God as our Father in heaven?

A. 1. That though we be allowed to ſpeak freely to God, yet we ſhould know our diſtance, and have exalted thoughts and awful apprehenſions of the divine Majeſty and glory. 2. That God beholds all things, and is able and ready to help us in every caſe. 3. That we ſhould be heavenly-minded and abſtracted from the world in duty; That we ſhould have our eyes on heaven as our country and home, and eſpecially on Jeſus Chriſt our interceſſor there for acceptance and audience in every duty?

Q. What doth the word OUR in this preface teach us?

A. That we ought not only to pray alone for ourſelves, but that we ſhould alſo pray in ſociety with others, and for others; and particularly, that family-prayers is a duty incumbent on theſe who have families, Jer. x. 25.

QUEST. CI.

Q. What do we pray for in the firſt petition?

A. In the firſt petition (which is, Hallowed be thy name) we pray, That God would enable us and others to glory him in all that whereby he maketh himſelf known, and that he would diſpoſe all things to his own glory.

Q. What is a petition?

A. It is a requeſt or aſking of a thing.

Q. How many petitions are in the Lord's prayer?

A. Six.

Q. How are theſe ſix petitions divided?

A. The three firſt relate chiefly to God's glory, and the three laſt to our good and benefit.

Q. What is the firſt of theſe petitions?

A. Hallowed be thy nane.

Q. Why is this petition put firſt?

A. To ſhew that we are to prefer the hallowing of God's name to all other things whatſoever. This is the firſt and great petition, and will laſt when the other petitions ſhall be out of date in heaven; for to all eternity the ſaints will inſiſt upon the hallowing of God's name.

Q. What is meant here by the Name of God?

A. God himſelf the perſon named; and particularly every thing whereby God makes himſelf known, ſuch as, his titles, attributes, words, &c.

Q. What is it to hallow the name of God?

A. It is to ſanctify, honour or glorify God himſelf, and to do it in theſe things by which he makes himſelf known, Iſa. viii, 13, and xxix, 23, 1 Pet. iii, 15

Q. Why is the word hallowed or ſanctified made uſe of, rather than glorified?

A. Becauſe God's glory doth ſhine moſt in his holineſs, and God's holineſs doth beautify all his other attributes, Iſa. vi. 3. and xii. 6. Exod. xv. 11.

Q. Is there not a vaſt difference between God's ſanctifying of us, and our ſanctifying of God?

A. Yes; for God's ſanctifying of us, is by infuſing holineſs into us, which we had not before; but our ſanctifying God, is only to manifeſt and acknowledge that holineſs of God, which he eternally had, and will have.

Q. Why is the petition ſet down in the third perſon, hallowed be thy name?

A. To include all perſons and things that are capable of doing it; as, 1. Let us who pray be fit, or make us fit, to hallow thy name. 2. Let all our fellow-creatures be fitted and employed to hallow thy name. 3. Becauſe creatures are inſufficient to do it, Lord, let thy name be hallowed by thyſelf, who only canſt do it to purpoſe.

Q. Are we not taught by this petition to acknowledge that we are incapable of ourſelves to do any thing for God's glory?

A. Yes; and therefore Chriſt will have us to aſk grace from God to fit us, and put us in the moſt uſeful circumſtances for the glorifying of his name.

Q. How is it that we by grace may hallow and glorify God's name?

A. By adoring his excellencies; owning our dependence on him; truſting and believing in him; reverencing his name, his word and ordinances; praiſing him, and calling upon him; confeſſing and forſaking our ſins; magnifying God in his works; juſtifying him in his judgments, fruitfulneſs in good works; aſcribing the honour of all we do to him; ſtanding up for his glory; eſpouſing the cauſe of truth and holineſs; ſuffering for them; witneſſing againſt error, ſin and every thing that diſhonours him; and commending the way and ſervice of God to others, both by our lips and lives.

Q. Doth Chriſt alſo teach us in this petition, that it ſhould be our joy and endeavour to have the name of God hallowed and glorified by others, as well as by ourſelves?

A. Yes.

Q. What muſt we pray for, that others in the world may alſo glorify his name?

A. That the nations, and theſe who know not God, may be converted to him; that they may glorify his name, in the ſame manner that we are endeavouring to do it; and that they may come and declare his righteouſneſs to a people that ſhall be born, Pſal. lxvii. 2, 3. and xxii. 27, 31.

Q. Should we not join our endeavours with our prayers in order to engage others to glorify God?

A. Yes, according to our ſtations.

Q. What direction hath Chriſt given to perſons of all ſtations for that end?

A. That in Mat. v. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

Q. Seeing we come ſo far ſhort of our duty in this reſpect, ought we not to pray that God may glorify his own name?

A. Yes, we have Chriſt teaching us this by his own example, John xii. 28. Father, glorify thy name. And we have God's promiſe that he will do it, Ezek. xxxviii. 23. and xxxvi. 23.

Q. How is it that God doth glorify his own name?

A. By pouring out his Spirit on the church, and diſpoſing all things in the world to his own glory.

Q. How doth God diſpoſe of the affairs of the world to his own glory?

A. By overruling the occurrences in it, to ſuch events and iſſues as may beſt promote and advance the glory of his name: As when he reſtrains or puniſhes his enemies, and vindicates his name from the reproaches of the wicked; when he relieves his church from oppreſſion, removes her grievances, eſtabliſhes pure worſhip and ordinances, opens a door for reformation, reſtores her judges as at the firſt, and her counſellors as at the beginning, Ezek. xxviii. 24, 25, 26, and xxxvi. 23, 24, 37, 38, and xx. 40, 41, Iſa. i. 26. Pſal. lxxvi. 9, 10.

Q. Doth not Chriſt teach us in this petition to pray againſt every thing whereby God's name is diſhonoured?

A. Yes.

Q. What are theſe evils whereby God's name is diſhonoured?

A. They are many, ſuch as atheiſm, idolatry, unbelief, contempt of God and his worſhip, ſwearing, Sabbath-breaking, uncleanneſs, &c.

Q. If any ſuch profane perſons ſay the Lord's prayer, doth not their practice contradict their prayers?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not a cutting affliction to a gracious ſoul to ſee or hear God's name diſhonoured?

A. Yes, Pſal. xlii. 10.

Q. Will not God pour contempt upon thoſe who diſhonour his name?

A. Yes, their name and memory ſhall rot here, and they ſhall riſe to ſhame and everlaſting contempt hereafter, Prov. x. 7, Dan. xii. 5.

Q. What ſhall be done to theſe who honour and glorify God's name?

A. They ſhall loſe nothing by it, 1 Sam. ii. 3. Them that honour me, I will honour.

Q. How will God honour thoſe who honour him?

A. He will put honour upon their perſons, upon their names, their ſouls, and their bodies: He will honour them at death by ſending angels for them, and after death by putting robes of immortality and crowns of righteouſneſs upon them.

QUEST. CII.

Q. What do we pray for in the ſecond petition?

A. In the ſecond petition, (which is, Thy kingdom come) we pray, That ſatan's kingdom may be deſtroyed, and that the kingdom of grace may be advanced, ourſelves and others brought into it and kept in it, and that the kingdom of glory may be haſtened.

Q. Why doth this petition follow the former?

A. Becauſe we cannot hallow or glorify God's name aright, till his kingdom come into our ſouls.

Q. What is ſignified by the kingdom of God here?

A. Three things; 1ſt, The preaching of the goſpel is called his kingdom, Mat. xiii. 47. 2dly, A work of ſaving grace in mens ſouls is ſo called, Luke xvii. 21. 3dly, The ſtate of glory in heaven is alſo called the kingdom of God, 1 Cor. xv. 50. The two firſt are called the kingdom of grace in the anſwer, and the third is called the kingdom of glory.

Q. Why are theſe called the kingdom of grace?

A. Becauſe it is by the diſpenſation of the goſpel that a work of grace is begun and carried on in the ſouls of the elect.

Q. Who is King in this kingdom?

A. God; but he governs it by Jeſus Chriſt his viceroy, whom he hath ſet to reign in it, and hence called King of Zion, Pſal. ii. 6.

Q. Why is Chriſt's gracious work in his peoples ſoul called a kingdom?

A. Becauſe, wherever grace comes, it ſubdues mutinous luſts rules in the will and affections, and brings the whole man in ſubjection to Chriſt and his righteous ſceptre, 2 Cor. x. 5.

Q. Whether is it the coming of the kingdom of grace or of glory that we pray for in the ſecond petition?

A. We pray for the coming of them both, and that becauſe the laſt is nothing but the perfection of the firſt, and the glory of God is more fully diſplayed in it.

Q. What is meant by the coming or advancement of the kingdom of grace, which we are here taught to pray for?

A. It includes the ſpreading and ſucceſs of the goſpel through the world, and removing of the impediments thereof. Alſo we pray therein, that the churches of Chriſt every-where may have faithful miniſters, pure doctrine, ordinances, and diſcipline, with much of the preſence and power of God's Spirit concurring with the ſame. That the kingdom of God may be ſet up in our ſouls, and in the ſouls of others, and a work of grace may be carried on therein to perfection?

Q. What are theſe impediments of the coming of this kingdom, that we muſt pray God to take out of the way ?

A. There is in general the kingdom of ſatan, which includes the dominion and tyranny of ſin, of Antichriſt, and all the enemies of the church ; the overſpreading of falſe religions ; the prevailing of error, idolatry, ſuperſtition, ſcandals, diviſions, or a corrupt miniſtry in the church : All theſe we muſt pray againſt.

Q. How doth it appear that ſatan hath a kingdom in the world ?

A. In regard ſatan is ſtiled the God and Prince of this world; and the wicked are his children and ſubjects, in and over whom he rules, 2 Cor. iv. 4. John xiv. 30, and viii. 44, Eph. ii. 2, 2 Tim. ii. 26.

Q. Is ſatan's kingdom very large ?

A. Yes, it is much further ſpread than the kingdom of Chriſt.

Q. How comes ſatan to have ſuch a large kingdom ?

A. By our firſt parents revolting from their rightful ſovereign.

Q Why doth God permit ſatan to rule over the world in ſuch a manner ?

A. God permits it as a righteous act of vengeance againſt man for revolting from the ſweet government of his Lord and Maker ; and alſo to glorify his name, by recovering the elect from ſatan's dominion.

Q. Has ſatan any right to govern the wicked ?

A. No ; he is an uſurper, tho' they are become his willing ſlaves.

Q. Ought we not to pray that ſatan's kingdom may be deſtroyed ?

A. Yes ; For while it ſtands it hinders the coming of Chriſt's kingdom ; and the precious ſouls he rules over, are under a cruel government.

Q. What is the meaning of the word ſatan ?

A. It ſignifies an adverſary ; and well he may be called ſo, for he is the adverſary that goes about as a roaring lion ſeeking to devour precious ſouls, 1 Pet. v. 8.

Q. What is meant by our praying to deſtroy ſatan's kingdom ?

A. We mean that Chriſt may bruiſe the old ſerpent's head, and deliver poor ſouls from his tyranny ; That Jews, Turks, Heathens, and wicked men, may be brought to the knowledge and obedience of Chriſt.

Q. How may we know if we be delivered from the kingdom of ſatan, and brought into the kingdom of Chriſt.

A. We may know it by our hearkening to the goſpel-call, by our cloſing with Chriſt in all his offices, by our ſurrendering our hearts to be his throne, our loving his laws and fighting againſt his enemies.

Q. Ought theſe to pray, Thy kingdom come, in whoſe ſouls the kingdom of grace is come already ?

A. Yes : For, it being in a weak condition, they muſt ſtill pray that it may come with more power into them ; that ſin may be more weakened, and grace more ſtrengthened and increaſed ; and that they perſevere in grace to the end.

Q. Would not the remarkable coming of the kingdom of grace produce bleſſed effects in the world ?

A. Yes : For then godlineſs would be in eſteem, truth would prevail againſt error, iniquity would ſtop its mouth, Jeruſalem would be a praiſe, her walls would be repaired, her grievances redreſſed, and her branches healed ; Then ſhould her miniſters be clothed with righteouſneſs, and her ſaints ſhout for joy ; Then ſhould ſinners fly together as a cloud, like doves to their windows : Then ſhould the lion ly down with the lamb, the weak ſhould be as David, and David as the angel of God.

Q. What do we pray for in this petition with reſpect to the kingdom of glory ?

A. That it may be haſtened.

Q. What is meant by the kingdom of God ?

A. The glorious ſtate of the church triumphant in heaven, when they ſhall be free from all evil, enjoy all good, and reign with Chriſt for ever.

Q Why is the heavenly ſtate called the kingdom of God ?

A. Becauſe in that ſtate God reigns over his people gloriouſly, there not being any mutinous luſt or rebellious thought to be found among them. And they themſelves ſhall be made kings, and ſhall ſit with Chriſt on his throne and reign with him for ever, Rev. iii. 21, and xxii. 5.

Q Who are theſe that are entitled to that kimgdom of glory ?

A. Theſe who receive Chriſt as their King now, who ſtrive to ſubdue their luſts, who live as pilgrims here, who keep up a correſpondence with that kingdom, and ſtudy to be made meet for it.

Q. Is there not a time fixed for the coming of this kingdom ? How then ſhould we pray to haſten it ?

A. Tho' the time be fixed, yet God makes it our duty to be longing and breathing out our deſires for the coming of it, according to Chriſt's promiſe, Cant. viii. 14, Rev. xxii. 20.

Q. How is this longing diſpoſition of the ſaints expreſſed ?

A. It is called a ‘ Looking for and haſting unto the coming of the day of God,’ 2 Pet. iii. 12.

Q. Why are ſaints of this longing diſpoſition ?

A. Becauſe the new nature inclines them to deſire perfect freedom from ſin, and full communion with God.

QUEST. CIII.

Q. What do we pray for in the third petition ?

A. In the third petition (which is, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven) we pray, That God by his grace would make us able and willing to know, obey and ſubmit to his will in all things as the angels do in heaven.

Q. Why doth this petition follow upon the former ?

A. To teach us, that the doing of God's will is the way to promote the coming of his kingdom.

Q. What is meant by the will of God here ?

A. Both the will of God's precept and the will of his providence, Mat. vii. 21. 1 Pet. iii. 17.

Q. What is it that we pray for when we aſk that the will of God's precept may be done ?

A. We pray, That we and others may by God's word and Spirit be enlightened to know his will revealed to us, and may by his grace be inclined and enabled to obey it.

Q. Doth not this ſuppoſe that we are naturally blind and ignorant of God's will ?

A. Yes ; and ſo the ſcripture tells us, Eph. iv. 18. and v. 8.

Q. Are we not by nature alſo unwilling to know the will of God ?

A. Yes, Job xxi. 14. " They ſay unto God, depart from us, for we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways, Rom. viii. 7."

Q. What muſt we do, in order to know the will of God ?

A. We muſt ſearch the ſcriptures where it is revealed to us, and pray for the teaching of the Spirit of God, who only can effectually remove our blindneſs and enmity, and give us the ſaving knowledge of God's will, John v. 39. Pſal. cxix. 18, 33, 36.

Q. Is it enough for a man to know God's will in a literal manner ?

A. No; for we muſt likewiſe be inclined and ſtrengthened to obey it. Therefore ſaith our Lord, John xiii. 17. " If ye know theſe things, happy are ye if ye do them."

Q. Will not knowledge without doing make a man's caſe the worſe ?

A. Yes, it will make hell the hotter, according to Luke xii. 47.

Q. Are we not naturally prone to rebel againſt God's will and to do the will of the fleſh and of the devil ?

A. Yes, Rom. viii. 7. 1 Pet. iv. 3, Eph. ii. 3. John viii. 44.

Q. Who are theſe that are inclined to do the will of God ?

A. Theſe who have God's law written in their hearts, which God promiſeth to do to all theſe whom he renews by his Spirit, Jer. xxxii, 33.

Q. What is it to write them in their hearts ?

A. It is to make them intimately acquaint with it, to give them a heart love and inward conformity to it, and a ready diſpoſition to obey it.

Q. Is it not the Spirit of God that muſt work in us both to will and to do what he requires in his law ?

A. Yes, Phil. ii, 13, Ezek. xxxvi. 27.

Q. What is it we aſk in this petition, when we pray that the will of God's providence may be done ?

A. It is a gracious diſpoſition of ſoul, whereby a Chriſtian is inclined to acknowledge God's wiſe hand in all he meets with, and to be content to be wholly at God's diſpoſals, without murmuring againſt him, 1 Sam. iii. 18, 2 Sam. xv, 26.

Q. Wherefore may we not murmur againſt affliction ?

A. Becauſe God is righteous in all his ways, and doth puniſh us leſs than our iniquities deſerve ; and, if he take away any of our comforts, he but takes what is his own, Pſal. cxlv, 17, Ezra ix, 13, 1 Chron. xxix, 14.

Q. When is it that a Chriſtian is in great hazard of murmuring ?

A. When he meets with poverty, reproach, the loſs of near relations, or with ſharp bodily pain.

Q. What ſhould quiet us in ſuch caſes ?

A. Serious conſideration, that we have procured all this to ourſelves, that he is a holy God that hath done it, and that he ſees it needful for us.

Q. What are we taught by theſe words in the petition, On earth ?

A. That our concern for the glory of God and good of ſouls ſhould be very extenſive ; for we ſhould deſire that all the inhabitants of the earth may be engaged to obey the will of our heavenly Father.

Q. What is meant by theſe words, As it is in heaven ?

A. Theſe words ſhew what manner of obedience we ſhould aim at and pray for, that it ſhould be like that of the angels and glorified ſaints in heaven.

Q. Where do we read of the angels doing the will of God ?

A. In Pſal. ciii. 21. " Ye angels that excel in ſtrength that do his commandments, hearkening to the voice of his word."

Q. Where do we read of the glorified ſaints doing the will of God ?

A. In Rev. xxii, 3. " There his ſervants ſhall ſerve him."

Q. What may we infer from ſuch texts ?

A. That it is no diſparagement, but our higheſt honour, to ſerve God on earth ; ſeeing in heaven both angels and ſaints do ſerve him.

Q. Is there not a great difference between their obedience and ours ?

A. Yes ; for they do the will of God in a perfect manner, but we do it imperfectly.

Q. How then can we imitate theſe heavenly inhabitants ?

A. In doing the will of God according to our ſtate and ability, as they do according to theirs.

Q. How is it that angels and ſaints do the will of God in heaven ?

A. They do it preſently, ſincerely, humbly, cheerfully, entirely, diligently, fervently, conſtantly, and unweariedly, and in theſe we ſhould ſtudy thro' grace to imitate them, humbly bewailing ſhort-comings, and earneſtly praying to God in Chriſt's name for more ſtrength.

Q. May not all ſuch upright ſouls firmly hope the time is haſtening when they ſhall obey God like angels ?

A. Yes, according to Luke xx, 36.

Q. Are not the moſt part on earth unmindful of theſe excellent patterns of obedience ?

A. Yes, and particularly they who make the practice of the world the rule of their doings ; and they who delay performing God's will ; alſo, they who do it only by fits, and they who do it negligently.

Q. Is it not a great part of the ſervice of angels and ſaints in heaven to ſing ſongs of praiſe to God ?

A. Yes.

Q. What do they praiſe him for ?

A. They praiſe him for his works of creation and providence, and eſpecially for his work of redemption by Jeſus Chriſt : hence they are ſaid to ſing the ſong of Moſes and the ſong of the Lamb, Rev. xv, 3.

Q. Wherefore are their ſongs in heaven ſo ſtiled ?

A. They are called the ſong of Moſes, becauſe it was Moſes that gave us the account of God's wonderful work of creation, and alſo his wonderful works of providence in preſerving the church and puniſhing her enemies, in the deluge of Egypt and the Red Sea, upon which occaſion we have Moſes's triumphant ſong recorded, Exod. xv. Again, their ſongs may well be called the ſong of the Lamb, ſeeing Chriſt the Lamb of God is the ſubject-matter of their ſongs, in regard of his amazing free love in undertaking, carrying on, and finiſhing that glorious work of redemption. And in theſe works of creation, providence and redemption, ſaints and angels will find abundant matter of praiſe to all eternity.

QUEST. CIV.

Q. What do we pray for in the fourth petition?

A. In the fourth petition (which is, Give us this day our daily bread) we pray, That of God's free gift, we may receive a competent portion of the good things of this life and enjoy his bleſſing with them.

Q. What is meant by bread here?

A. Food proper for our bodies, a part being taken for the whole; as in John xiii. 8. and other places.

Q. Are we not to pray for other things to our bodies beſides food?

A. Yes; and bread is ſometimes taken in a large ſenſe for all things needful for upholding the body in this life, as in Gen. iii. 19. and ſo it includes habitations, health, ſleep, clothes, medicines, and all other neceſſaries of life, which we are likewiſe to pray for. As alſo for averting of theſe evils which would deſtroy our bodies, or the means of ſupporting them; ſuch as bad ſeaſons, famine, war, violence, burnings, plagues, &c.

Q. Why doth Chriſt mention bread only in this prayer?

A. To teach us, that we have forfeited the good things of this life, and deſerve to be deprived of them all; that the leaſt crumb of bread is God's free gift, which we can nowiſe merit at his hand: And likewiſe teach us, not to aſk delicacies or dainties, but only neceſſaries and to be content with a ſober maintenance, 1 Tim. vi. 8.

Q. Is not the bread we aſk for the Lord's? Why then do we call it Our bread, as if we had a right to it?

A. It is called ours, not that we deſerve it from God, for he oweth no man any thing; but becauſe God is pleaſed, of his free gift to man to appoint it for preſervation: And likewiſe to teach us, to ſee what title we have to the bread we eat, that it be our own bread, and not another man's.

Q. Who are they that cannot call the bread they eat their own bread?

A. Such as eat the bread of idleneſs, mentioned in Prov. xxxi. 27. that is, bread they do not work for, but live at the coſt of others: likewiſe theſe who eat the bread of violence or deceit, mentioned in Prov. iv. 17. & xx. 17. that is, bread got by rapine and injuſtice; theſe cannot be ſaid to eat their own bread.

Q. What is required of us, that the bread we eat may be called ours?

A. 1ſt, We muſt ſee that we have a civil right to it, as having acquired it by honeſt and lawful means, 2 Theſſ. iii. 12. 2dly, We muſt ſee alſo to have a covenant-right to our bread, by being intereſted in Chriſt who is the heir of all things, thro' whoſe purchaſe earthly things are given to believers in a covenant way, Rom. viii. 32. 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23. Iſa. xxxiii. 16.

Q. Can unbelievers ſay before God, as well as believers, Our bread?

A. No, for whatever civil right they have to what they poſſeſs, they have nothing by covenant-right: What ever they have by God's providence, or with his love; it is only believers who are rightful heirs and poſſeſſors of the world. So that unbelievers who abound in wealth have cauſe to be deeply humbled before God, and to ſay, Alas! we are but uſurpers of God's good things, we have no good right to them before him, Pſal. xxxvii. 9, 11. Mat. v. 5. 1 Tim. iv, 8.

Q. What is meant by daily bread in this petition?

A. Such a portion of outward things as is neceſſary and ſufficient for our ſubſiſtance from one day to another.

Q. Why doth Chriſt direct us to pray for daily, and not for yearly bread?

A. To teach us theſe things; 1ſt, Not to look for many days, or great things in the world, but to live every day as it were our laſt; hence it is added in the petition, give us this day, Prov. xxvii. 1. 2dly, To live in a daily and conſtant dependance upon God, without anxious cares about futurity, Mat. vi. 34. Phil. iv. 6. 3dly, To exerciſe ourſelves daily in prayer, acknowledging God for every mercy, and ſeeking his bleſſing thereupon, Pſalm lv, 17. 1 Theſſ. v, 17.

Q. May we aſk for riches or great things for ourſelves?

A. No; for God forbids us, telling us that they who will be rich fall into many temptations and ſnares, Jer. xvii. 1 Tim. vi, 9.

Q. What if God ſhould think fit to beſtow riches upon us?

A. Then we ſhould receive them out of God's hand with thankfulneſs, begging for grace to uſe them for his glory, and to preſerve us from the ſnares and temptations which uſually attend them, Gen. xxxii. 10.

Q. What are theſe temptations?

A. When riches increaſe, men are tempted to ſet their hearts upon them, to truſt in them, to be proud, to forget God, and to oppreſs others, Pſal. lxii. 10. 1 Tim. vi. 17. Deut. viii. 13, 14. James ii. 6.

Q. Is not poverty attended alſo with temptations?

A. Yes.

Q. What are theſe temptations?

A The poor are tempted to diſcontentment with their lot, and to uſe unlawful ſhifts to better it, Prov. xxx. 9.

Q. What condition then is freeſt from temptations, and to be moſt deſired?

A. A middle condition, with a competent portion of the good things of this life: Upon which account Agur made it his prayer to God, Prov. xxx. 8. 'Give me neither poverty nor riches, feed me with food convenient for me.'

Q. What is to be underſtood by a competent portion?

A. Such a portion as our needs and circumſtances do require, and which God ſees to be fitteſt for us.

Q. Is God the beſt judge of what we need?

A. Yes; for our heavenly Father, who knows all our needs, is infinitely good and wiſe, Mat. vi. 32.

Q. Seeing our heavenly Father knows our need of temporal things, what need we aſk them of him?

A. Becauſe he deſires to hear his peoples voice, and he would have them to acknowledge that all things come from him?

Q. Have we nothing to do but pray for our daily bread?

A. God hath appointed us alſo to labour for it, Gen. iii. 19. 'In the ſweat of thy face ſhalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground.'

Q. Is not God offended with theſe who pretend to pray for bread, and will not work for it?

A. Yes. 2 Theſſ. iii. 10.

Q. If men muſt labour for their bread, why muſt they pray to God for it?

A. Becauſe it is God that muſt give us wiſdom and ſtrength to labour, that muſt make our labours ſucceſsful and make temporal things effectual to nouriſh and ſuſtain us, Deut. viii. 18. Pſal. cxxvii. 1. Lev. xxvi. 26. Deut. viii. 3.

Q. Ought the rich, who are well provided, to pray for their daily bread ?

A. Yes, they ought to pray that what is given may be bleſſed to them, continued with them, and that they may receive it as out of the Lord's hand.

Q. Why muſt we ſeek the bleſſing of God with outward good things ?

A. Becauſe without it they would be curſed and hurtful unto us, Hag. i. 6. Mal. ii. 2.

Q. Is not a little with the bleſſing of God better than the riches of the wicked ?

A. Yes, Pſal. xxxvii. 16.

Q. What muſt we do, that our portion in outward things may be bleſſed and comfortable to us ?

A. We muſt ſecure an intereſt in Chriſt the purchaſer, guard againſt diſtracting cares, truſt in the providence of our heavenly Father, be content with his allowance and thankful for it, deal juſtly with all men, and uſe the gifts of God for his glory.

Q. Doth this petition forbid all ſorts of care or laying up for afterwards ?

A. No; for ſome care in the way of prudent foreſight is needful to provide for children and families, and nowiſe inconſiſtent with truſting to God for daily bread; 2 Cor. xii. 14. 1 Tim. v. 8. We ſee Joſeph laid up for the approaching famine, and Solomon commends him that gathereth in ſummer. Nay, Chriſt himſelf deſired the remaining fragments to be gathered up, and he had a purſe-bearer to have ſomething before-hand for their needs, Gen xli 48. Prov. vi. 6, 7, 8, &c. John vi. 12, and xiii. 29, Prov. xxxi. 16.

Q. What are theſe cares which are inconſiſtent with this petition ?

A. Theſe which ariſe from affection to earthly things, which draw on men to uſe unlawful methods to get them, or are attended with diſquieting or diſtruſtful thoughts.

QUEST. CV.

Q. What do we pray for in the fifth petition ?

A. In the fifth petition (which is, And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors) we pray, That God, for Chriſt's ſake, would freely pardon all our ſins; which we are the rather encouraged to aſk, becauſe by his grace we are enabled from the heart to forgive others.

Q. How is it that we find in the Lord's prayer but one petition for temporal things, and ſo many for ſpiritual ?

A. To teach us to be far more careful about the precious immortal ſoul, than about the poor dying body.

Q. Why is this petition annexed, by the copulative, and, to the former petition ?

A. To teach us, that worldly enjoyments can give no comfort without pardon of ſin; and therefore, when we aſk for the one, we ſhould with the ſame breath pray for the other: For let a man have never ſo much of the world, he is a miſerable creature if he want pardon.

Q. What is meant by our debts here ?

A. Our ſins againſt God.

Q. How can ſin be called a debt, ſeeing obedience is properly the debt we owe unto God ?

A. Sin is alſo called a debt, becauſe, when we fail to pay the debt of obedience, we contract a new debt to the juſtice of God: By ſin we become bound to ſatisfy juſtice for the wrong done thereto, by ſuffering eternal puniſhment; and God, as the Creditor, hath right to inſiſt for this ſatisfaction when he will.

Q. Have we not the properties of bad debtors ?

A. Yes; for we are wholly inſolvent, we are turned careleſs about paying our debt, we are unwilling to confeſs debt, we ſhift clearing of accompts, we keep out of our creditors way, and love not to meet with him.

Q. Doth not the debt of ſin expoſe us to greater miſery than any other debt whatſoever ?

A. Yes: For other debts but expoſe mens bodies to miſery here, which death puts an end to; but the debt of ſin expoſeth both our ſouls and bodies to eternal miſeries in hell, the worſt of all priſons, out of which there is no hope of liberation.

Q. Is there any man able to pay his own debt ?

A. No, not the leaſt farthing of it.

Q. How then ſhall we be delivered from the burden of our debts ?

A. We muſt pray to God for a free pardon, as we are taught in this petition, Forgive us our debts.

Q. Will God forgive our debts without ſatisfaction to his juſtice ?

A. No; but he hath provided a Surety for us, who hath made full ſatisfaction, even the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for whoſe ſake we muſt pray for pardon.

Q. If Chriſt hath ſatisfied for the debt, how is the pardon free ?

A. It is free to us, becauſe God exacts no ſatisfaction from us; and for the Surety from whom he exacts it, he gave him to us freely, without our deſerving or deſire: So that the pardon is ſtill free to us, according to Rom. iii. 24. "Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt."

Q. What means muſt be uſed by us for receiving of this free pardon ?

A. We muſt with believing and penitent hearts go to the mercy of God in Jeſus Chriſt, and plead for forgiveneſs for his ſake: And at the ſame time we muſt be careful, as Chriſt teacheth us, to be in a diſpoſition to forgive our debtors.

Q. Who are theſe meant by our debtors here ?

A. All theſe who have injured or wronged us in our perſons, eſtates, names, relations, or in any thing elſe.

Q. What is it for us to forgive the faults of ſuch debitors ?

A. It is to paſs them over without any hatred or deſire of revenge againſt them, and to be ready to do them good when it is in our power.

Q. Do theſe forgive others heartily, who wiſh them evil, or are ſecretly glad when evil befals them ?

A. No.

Q. What caſe are theſe in, who will not forgive others their treſpaſſes ?

A. Chriſt ſaith, that neither will God forgive them, Mat. vi. 15.

Q. Do we any wiſe merit forgiveneſs from God, by our forgiving others ?

A. No; it is only an encouragement to expect forgiveneſs from God, when we feel this teſtimony of God's grace in our hearts, inclining us to forgive others.

Q. Are we not able of ourſelves to forgive others?

A. No; we muſt have the grace of God to enable us to do it, Luke xvii. 3, &c.

Q. Doth the particle as, in the petition, import an equality in our forgiving others with God's forgiving us?

A. No; for we cannot forgive as freely, perfectly, and finally as God doth: But it is a note of ſimiltude, and of our deſire to imitate God in his forgiving of us, and that we do it heartily and ſincerely.

Q. Is it not highly dangerous to uſe the Lord's prayer with a malicious heart?

A. Yes; for ſuch uſe a fearful imprecation againſt themſelves, praying that God may deal with them as they do with others, which is, that he may not forgive them at all.

Q. How ſhall we attain to this forgiving temper of ſpirit?

A. By ſeeking it from God, and conſidering our Saviour's precept and example, and the promiſe of forgiveneſs annexed to it, Mat. vi. 14. And alſo by minding that we wrong God much more than any man doth wrong us; and if God be willing to forgive us ten thouſand talents, we may well forgive our neighbour a few pence, Mat. xviii. 32. 33.

Q. Muſt we forgive theſe who do not deſire it of us, nor repent of what they have done to us?

A. Yes; for we find Chriſt and Stephen did ſo.

Q. Do they not ſtill remain debtors to God for theſe ſins if they repent not, tho' we have forgiven them?

A. Yes; and therefore theſe who injure their neighbours, ſhould not be ſatisfied with a remiſſion from them, but muſt cry to God for his forgiveneſs alſo, ſaying with David, Pſal. li. 4. Againſt thee, thee only have I ſinned: As if he had ſaid, The wrong I have done to others is little, in compariſon of what I have done againſt thee.

QUEST. CVI.

Q. What do we pray for in the ſixth petition?

A. In the ſixth petition (which is, And lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil) we pray that God would either keep us from being tempted to ſin, or ſupport and deliver us when we are tempted.

Q. Why is this petition connected with the former by the copulative and?

A. To teach us two things; 1. That pardoned ſouls are the ſpecial objects of ſatan's malice. 2. That, when paſt ſins are forgiven, we ſhould be very watchful againſt ſin for the future, Pſal. lxxxv. 8.

Q. What are theſe temptations we are liable to?

A. They are of two ſorts, ſome to try us, others to ſeduce us.

Q. Whence come theſe temptations for trial?

A. From God; thus did he tempt Abraham, Gen. xxii. 1.

Q. Why doth God thus tempt his people?

A. For the trial of their faith, and their other graces, 1 Pet. i. 6, 7.

Q. Seeing God knows perfectly what is in every man, what need is there for the trying of them?

A. God tries his people, not for his ſake but for their own ſakes, that they may know themſelves the better; and alſo for the ſake of others, who by ſeeing their graces may be quickened to imitate them, or by obſerving their weakneſs may learn to walk humbly before God.

Q. How is it ſaid, James i. 13. that God tempteth no man?

A. The meaning then is, that God doth not tempt any man to ſeduce or entice him to ſin.

Q. Whence then come theſe temptations for ſeduction?

A. From the devil, the world and the fleſh.

Q. Is not ſatan called the tempter, Mat. iv. 4. And why?

A. Becauſe he hath a main hand in our temptations to ſin, and it is his conſtant work and buſineſs to ſeduce and entice men to evil.

Q. Is not ſatan a very ſubtile tempter?

A. Yes, as appears by his conſidering the conditions of men, and his chooſing the fitteſt ſeaſons and inſtruments, and the moſt ſuitable baits to prevail with them; and by his tranſforming himſelf ſometimes into an angel of light. And hence the ſcriptures call him the old ſerpent, and ſpeak of his devices, wiles, and ſnares, Job. i. 8 Rev. xii. 9. 2 Cor. ii. 11. Eph. vi. 11. 2 Tim. ii. 26 2 Cor xi. 14.

Q. Is not the tempter very cruel as well as ſubtile?

A. Yes, and therefore he is called a roaring lion, 1 Pet. v. 8. for he devours his prey without mercy, when once he is maſter of it. Altho' at firſt he cunningly tempts and entices men to commit ſin, yet he afterwards cruelly accuſes them of it, and torments them for it.

Q. Doth not ſatan prevail the more eaſily againſt us, by reaſon of the ſtrong friends he hath within us?

A. Yes, the luſts of the fleſh are ready always, like Delilah, to deliver us up to him, Judges xvi.

Q. What is to be underſtood by theſe words, Lead us not into temptation?

A. In theſe words we pray, that God may not expoſe us to temptations, nor deliver us up to the tempter's will; that, when we are expoſed, God may not withhold his ſupporting grace, but may ſtrengthen us to reſiſt the temptation.

Q. Doth God ſometimes as a judge deſert men, and leave them to ſatan's power?

A. Yes; and he doth it juſtly, as being provoked to it by their ſins, 1 Sam. xvi. 14. Job. i. 12. Pſal. cix. 6. Rom. i. 24. 2 Theſ. ii. 11.

Q. Ought we not to pray that God would keep us from being tempted?

A. Yes; becauſe of ourſelves we are weak to reſiſt, and prone to yield.

Q. How doth God keep us from being tempted to ſin?

A. Either by ſanctifying our natures, or by binding up the tempter, or by keeping us from coming into the way of temptations. Sometimes the Lord doth hedge up his peoples way with the thorns of affliction, to keep them from ſtraying into dangerous by-paths, Hoſ. ii. 6.

Q. While we pray to God to keep us from being tempted to ſin, ſhould we not at the ſame time be diligent in watching over ourſelves?

A. Yes: our Lord will have watching to go alongſt with prayer, Mat. 26. 41. 'Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation?'

Q. Did not God ſometimes ſuffer his dear ſaints to be tempted by Satan?

A. Yes; he ſees fit to do ſo for their good to try their graces, to abate their pride, to excite their prayers, to ſhew them their need of living by faith on Chriſt, to make them weary of the land where ſatan goes his circuit, and long for heaven where they ſhall be out of his reach for ever.

Q. Why doth ſatan continue his aſſaults againſt God's people, ſeeing he cannot ruin them?

A. Such is his malice, if he cannot keep them out of heaven, he will make their paſſage to it as uneaſy as poſſible.

Q. What grounds of comfort doth God afford his people under temptation?

A. It is comfortable to them to know that their Redeemer hath ſatan in his chain, ſo that he can go no further in tempting than Chriſt gives him leave; that he hath given them his ſweet and faithful promiſes to ſupport them; and that he himſelf was willing to be tempted of the devil, that he might be the more capable to ſympathize with his people, and ready to ſuccour them when tempted, Heb. ii. 18.

Q. What are theſe promiſes which Chriſt hath given his people to ſupport them under temptation?

A. He hath promiſed them his gracious preſence with them under their ſharpeſt trials; and that he will not ſuffer them to be tempted above what they are able, but with the temptation will alſo make a way to eſcape, Iſa. xliii. 2. Heb. xiii. 5. 1 Cor. 10. 13.

Q. How is it that Chriſt ſuccours his people when they are tempted?

A. He ſends his ſpirit to fortify grace in them, and brings his promiſes to their remembrance; he interceeds for them that their faith fail not, and he ſeaſonably takes off the tempter from them.

Q. Can no man preſerve himſelf in the hour of temptation?

A. No; for it is God only that is able to keep us from falling, Jude 24.

Q. Doth not ſatan ſometimes throw in unbelievingand blaſphemous thoughts into the minds of God's people?

A. Yes.

Q. Will God charge his people with guilt upon account of theſe temptations?

A. No, if they hate them, grieve for them, and give no conſent unto them.

Q. What is meant by the evil, in this petition, we pray to be delivered from?

A. We here pray to be delivered from the evil one, the devil; from the evil of evils, ſin; from the evil of temptation here, and the evil of puniſhment in hell hereafter.

Q. Is there nothing elſe required of us, but to pray to be delivered from evil?

A. We muſt alſo watch, and carefully avoid all occaſions of ſin, ſuch as idleneſs, evil company, and the like; for theſe who do not ſo, their prayers are but mocking of the Lord.

QUEST. CVII.

Q. What doth the concluſion of the Lord's Prayer teach us?

A. The concluſion of the Lord's prayer (which is, For thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory for ever. Amen) teacheth us to take our encouragement in prayer from God only, and in our prayers to praiſe him, aſcribing kingdom, power, and glory to him: And in teſtimony of our deſire and aſſurance to be heard, we ſay, Amen.

Q. What are we taught by the particle for prefixed to the concluſion to this Prayer?

A. We are taught thereby to enforce our petitions with arguments; as we find was the practice of the ſaints in Scripture, Numb. xiv. 13. &c. Joſh. vii. 9. 2 Chron. xiv. 11. & xx. 6. &c.

Q. Why muſt we uſe arguments with God in prayer?

A. Not that we can thereby incline God to grant us any thing that he is averſe to; but we ought to do it in order to ſtrengthen our faith, and to excite our fervency in pleading with God,

Q. May we take our arguments or encouragements in prayer from any worthineſs or good thing in ourſelves?

A. No.

Q. From whence muſt we bring them?

A. Only from the infinite perfections of God, and merits of his Son.

Q. What are the arguments or grounds of encouragement mentioned in the concluſion of the Lord's prayer?

A. They are the kingdom, the power, and the glory of God, which laſt for ever.

Q. What is the deſign and meaning of this concluſion?

A. To ſhew us the reaſons why we ſhould pray to God, and the grounds we have to hope that he will hear us; and likewiſe to teach us, that the main end we ought to propoſe in our prayers is, that the kingdom, power, and glory of God may be declared and advanced more and more.

Q. What is meant by the kingdom of God here?

A. God's univerſal ſovereignty, dominion and authority which he hath over the world, and all things in heaven and earth.

Q. Hath God the diſpoſal of all the kingdoms and governments in the world?

A. Yes, he diſpoſeth of human kingdoms and ſtates; and he hath abſolute right to do it in the kingdoms of nature, of providence, of grace, and glory, as ſeemeth good to him.

Q. What encouragement may we draw from God's kingdom in prayer?

A. That ſeeing he is our King and Governor, who hath right to diſpoſe of all things, we have reaſon to expect he will be ready to give us what good things we need; for a king wiſheth well to his ſubjects. Hence the people of God do often plead with him upon this relation, Pſal. 5, 2. & 20, 9. & 74, 12.

Q. What is meant by the power of God here?

A. His infinite might and ability to do whatſoever he will.

Q. What encouragement may we take from God's power in prayer?

A. That, ſeeing he is almighty, he is ſufficiently able to give us all the good things we aſk: and this argument is often made uſe of in prayer, 1 Chron. 29. 12. 2 Chron. 20. 6 Mat. 8. 2. Mark 14. 36. Eph. 3. 20.

Q. But how doth it appear that God is willing to give, as well as able?

A. Becauſe he aſſumes the character of a gracious king to his ſubjects, and of a loving father to all his children.

Q. What is meant by the glory of God here?

A. The honour, dignity and praiſe which belong unto God, upon account of his infinite excellencies.

Q. What is the argument we draw from the glory of God in our prayers?

A. That the granting of theſe our petitions will greatly redound to the glory of his name; and that this is the great end we aim at in all we aſk, Pſal. 79, 9, & 86, 11, 12 & 113, 1, 2, Jer. 14, 21, John 14, 13.

Q. What encouragement may we take from theſe words, for ever.

A. It doth ſtrengthen our faith to think, that God's ſovereignty and perfections are everlaſting: that he ſhall never want power to help us, as earthly kings may.

Q. Doth Chiriſt by this concluſion teach us in prayer to extol and magnify the Lord, and to join praiſe to him always with our prayers?

A. Yes; for a thankful and praiſing diſpoſition is highly pleaſing to God, Pſal. 69. 30, 31. and engageth him to grant our deſires, Pſal. 67, 5, 6.

Q. What is meant by the word Amen?

A. It is a Hebrew word, which ſignifieth truth, or certainty; and it is as much as to ſay, Lord, So it is, or So let it be: And thereby we expreſs our fervent deſires to be heard, and our humble confidence of obtaining what we aſk in the name of Jeſus Chriſt, who, with the Father, and Holy Spirit, is the One ſupreme God, to whom be glory for ever, Amen.

SACRAMENTAL MEDITATIONS and ADVICES,

GROUNDED UPON

SCRIPTURE-TEXTS.

THE PREFACE.

THE eternal Son of God, when taking his leave of an ungrateful world, inſtituted the ſacrament of the Supper, as a lively reſemblance and memorial of his bloody ſufferings and death in the room of his people; and alſo to be a bright and laſting evidence of the amazing love of God the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt to periſhing ſinners.

As God once ſent his Son into the world in a lowly habit, clothed with human fleſh to ſave ſinners; ſo now he ſends him in a homely dreſs clothed with the elements of bread and wine to aſſure us of his love, and to engage us to come to him.——Kings expect that their children will be reſpected, tho' their officers be nelected. Surely (ſaith God) They will reverence my Son; They will make him welcome and hearken to him.

In this moſt auguſt ordinance of the New Teſtament, the great God approaches very near to us, and we to him; and yet it is to be deeply regreted that many who profeſs to believe this, come to it with ſo little thought and preparation, and with ſo much indifferency and careleſſneſs of ſpirit. Oh, ſhall we adventure ſo near the great God, who is infinitely holy, in whoſe ſight the heavens are not pure, and in whoſe preſence the ſun and ſtars are dimned, and the brighteſt ſeraphims do gather in their wings, and account themſelves as little flies before him! And ſhall we, who are creatures ſo mean and ſo vile, be careleſs and unconcerned, when we make the neareſt approach to this great and holy God, that we can make on this ſide heaven!

Ought we not to go bluſhing, aſhamed and deeply humbled on many accounts, and particularly for our ingratitude for redeeming love, that love which paſſeth knowledge; and for our contempt of God's unſpeakable gift, the greateſt ſin in the world; yea, we ſhould go wondering that we are out of hell, for many thouſands are burning there, who have not ſinned ſo heinouſly in making light of precious Chriſt as we have done.

Moreover, reader, conſider if you go to this ordinance unpreparedly, or with indifference, you not only make light of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, but you are guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, 1 Cor. xi. 27. Surely that word may cauſe you to quake and tremble; blood guiltineſs of any ſort is a dreadful ſin, and eſpecially to be guilty of the blood of the Lord. Murder is a ſin that cries for vengeance on the actor, and gives God no reſt till he puniſh it, Gen. iv. 10. The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to me from the earth. If it be a crying ſin to murder a common perſon, what muſt it be to murder a king? Who can ſtretch forth his hand againſt the Lord's anointed, and be guiltleſs, 1 Sam. xxv. 9.

O then what a crime muſt it be to murder the eternal Son of God, who is thy exalted King, thy everlaſting Father, thy dear Redeemer, and thy God who gave thee a being. Child murder is a heinous crime, but, what Chriſt murder is, no tongue can tell! If on him that ſlew Cain (that wicked man) vengeance ſhould be taken ſevenfold; what vengeance will be taken on him that crucifies afreſh the Lord of glory? This conſideration ſhould make all of us afraid of careleſs and unworthy communicating.

If we would communicate worthily, we muſt be earneſt, not only for the life of grace, but alſo for the livelineſs of grace; not only for the truth and ſincerity of grace, but likewiſe for the activity and vigorous exerciſe of grace. So that a believer himſelf doth not eat and drink worthily, unleſs the grace that is in him be excited and exerciſed at this ordinance.——There muſt be not only faith in the truth of it, but there muſt be faith realizing, applying, appropriating and making uſe of Chriſt's death and purchaſe in this ordinance.——Not only muſt there be a diſpoſition of ſoul to be humbled for ſin, but there muſt be actual mourning and melting of heart for ſin, and for particular ſins, when we look on him we have pierced by them.——Not only muſt there be a principle of love to Chriſt, but alſo an exciting of love to flame out to Chriſt, who loved us and gave himſelf for us.

Worthy communicating being a work of ſuch importance, the following Scriptural Meditations and Advices are humbly offered to Chriſtians, as an help in their preparations for it. Reading and thinking much on the ſubjects here propoſed, may, through God's bleſſing, be uſeful to promote their habitual preparation for the holy ſupper.—Chriſt's body and blood herein exhibited, are pure and holy things, and ſhould be received in prepared and cleanſed hearts. His body never ſaw corruption in the grave, nor will be mixed with it in hearts where corruption is allowed. It lay in a virgin womb, and in a virgin ſepulchre, and will ſtill be entertained in virgin ſouls and affections; in hearts purified and conſecrated to God. In theſe Chriſt chuſes to reſide, and not in theſe where ſin and the world, with the luſts thereof are haboured. Oh, had we grace to maintain and cheriſh the fear of God, and the love of Chriſt habitually in our ſouls, we might, without much pains, be prepared for coming to him at his table.

Did we always bear in our minds, that ſacramental occaſions are ſolemn appointments, and Bethel-meetings with God, for renewing covenant, and entertaining fellowſhip and communion with him, we would guard more againſt formality creeping in upon us in our preparation for, and in our attendance upon this ordinance, than, alas, we do. Oh, ſuch formality will provoke the Maſter of our ſolemn feaſts to withdraw from them, and then what poor, dry, melancholy and lifeleſs things will they be? What are ſacraments without Chriſt's preſence in them? O let us never be ſatisfied with communion-ſabbaths, without communion with Chriſt in them.

On the other hand, if we would keep up communion with Chriſt in theſe ordinances, let us beware of relying on our previous pains or preparations, either for our right performing of our duty, or for our acceptance in it: For we are never more ready to miſcarry, and to be diſappointed, than when we are guilty of this reſting. Sundry go to the Lord's table with great humiliation for ſin, and yet come away without comfort: Why? becauſe they make a Chriſt of their ſorrow.——O what worth can we ſee in our beſt preparations, confeſſions, prayers, tears, humiliations, &c. if we compare them with the law of God? We have more cauſe to be aſhamed of them, than to lay any ſtreſs on them. Could we renounce all ſelf-confidence, and diſclaim all our proviſion in point of dependence, and caſt ourſelves wholly on Chriſt for ſtrength, through-bearing and acceptance, we would have better ſucceſs at the Lord's table, than commonly we have.

We are never more fit for this holy table, than when we are moſt humbled, and moſt aſhamed of ourſelves, becauſe of our unfitneſs for this ſolemn approach; and we are never leſs fit than when we think ourſelves moſt fit and prepared for the duty.—A holy deniedneſs to all ſelf ſufficiency, and a deep ſenſe of unworthineſs and unfitneſs, is the beſt preparation we can attain to for this ſolemn ordinance. Let us make holy David our pattern, when going to partake, Pſal. lxxi. 16. "I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord God: "I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of "thine only"—And let us pray with the ſpouſe, Cant. iv. 16. "Awake, O north-wind, and come thou "ſouth, blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof "may flow out." Amen.

MEDITATION I.

From Heb. xi. 7. By faith Noah prepared an ark to the ſaving of his houſe.

THOUGH the flood that drowned the old world was at many years diſtance, yet Noah was moved with fear at God's warning him of it, and prepared an ark for his ſafety. And ſhall not unconverted unbelieving ſinners, who have a far more terrible flood threatened againſt them, and may be only a few days diſtant, take warning, and provide with all ſpeed for their ſafety?—Oh, ſhall I, a wretched guilty ſinner, take reſt, while I am within the flood-mark of God's wrath, and not ariſe in time to provide an Ark to flee to for my ſafety?—But O good news! I have not the Ark to provide, it is prepared to my hand: God, in his infinite wiſdom and pity, hath made ready an Ark long ago for loſt ſinners of Adam's race to fly to; and now it is completely furniſhed and finiſhed, and all things are ready, ſo that I have nothing to do but go and take poſſeſſion.

O what had become of me, and other periſhing ſinners, had we the Ark to build for ourſelves? Nay, the whole creation had not been able or ſufficient for this purpoſe. How ſoon would the raging flood of divine wrath ſweep away all the arks of men or angels building! But thanks be unto God for ever, for the excellent well built Ark of God's deviſing, for the many ſpacious rooms and ſafe lodging-places within it, for the ſuitable accommodation and plentiful proviſion laid up therein, and for the door opened in the ſide thereof for periſhing ſouls to enter by.——The ſalvation of ſinners by a crucified Chriſt is a well-ordered ſcheme, a beautiful contrivance! bleſſed be the infinitely wiſe Contriver for it. I ſee all things in Chriſt crucified neceſſary for me: He is made of God to men, wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification and redemption. There is in him infinite wiſdom to guide me, a ſpotleſs righteouſneſs to cover me, precious blood to waſh me, the holy Spirit to ſanctify me, his good word to direct me, his juſt laws to govern me, and his infinite fulneſs to ſupply all my needs: Safe and happy then would I be, were I found in him. O that, upon trial by ſcripture-marks, I could conclude myſelf to be within the Ark, to wit, a crucified Jeſus!

Can I ſay, I have been warned of God, and moved with fear, to fly to this Ark? Have I diſcovered my ſhelterleſs ſtate by nature, the waves and billows of wrath riſing and rolling againſt me? Have I ſeen my own inability to provide an Ark for myſelf, and the excellency and fitneſs of the Ark of God's providing? Have I been made willing to abandon all falſe arks, and earneſtly inquiſitive how to get into the true Ark? Have I been made willing to uſe all appointed means for this end, to read, hear, meditate, pray, repent, believe, eſſay to climb up the ſides of the Ark, and preſs to get in at the door thereof? Have I been willing to venture my all in the Ark, like Noah, notwithſtanding of the diſcouragements, ſcoffs and hatred of the world for ſo doing? Have I willingly acquieſced, ſheltered, and lodged my ſoul in God's Ark, and been made to ſay, This is my reſt for ever, here will I dwell? Come what floods will, Chriſt ſhall be my Ark, his righteouſneſs alone my refuge and hiding-place.

Alas! upon impartial ſearch, have I not cauſe to fear that I have not yet fled to the Ark, but am ſtill expoſed to the devouring flood? And can I be eaſy or quiet in ſuch a caſe? Can I forbear crying, What ſhall I do to get into the Ark Chriſt? Nay, what would I not do to get into it? Lord, what would thou have me to do? Wouldſt thou have me to humble myſelf, confeſs, mourn, part with ſin, cloſe with Chriſt in all his offices? Preſcribe, Lord, what thou wilt, I will not ſcruple what thou enjoins me, but obey thee without reſerve. I am reſolved upon it, whatever it coſt me, that the ſolicitations of the fleſh, the temptations of ſatan, the ſcoffs, reproaches or perſecutions of the world, ſhall not ſtop me from flying to the Ark; I would break thro' all theſe to be found in it. Lord, increaſe and ſtrengthen my faith for that end; and help my unbelief.

O how ſuitable is the Ark Chriſt to my deſtitute and miſerable condition: In myſelf I want all things, but I ſee a ſupply for all my wants in the Ark. I am poor, but I ſee gold in the Ark to make me rich: I am wounded by ſin, but I ſee balm in the Ark to heal my wounds: I am blind, but there is eye-ſalve in the Ark to make me ſee: I am periſhing with hunger, but I ſee bread in the Ark to ſatisfy me: I am naked, but in the Ark there is white raiment to clothe me: I am polluted, but in the Ark there is a fountain to waſh me: I am expoſed to more terrible floods than Noah was, but I ſee the Ark Chriſt can ſave me from them all: Noah's ark ſaved him only from a flood of water, but the Ark Chriſt ſaves from a flood of the curſes of the law, and the wrath of God which will ſweep away all the unbelieving world. This flood roſe, ſwelled high, and daſhed furiouſly againſt our Ark; but the Ark was proof againſt it, and ſheltered all the elect world from the flood, ſo that not one drop did light on them.——O how excellent is this Ark! for it can ſave me from being overwhelmed or carried away with any flood, and particularly it can ſave me from being carried away with a flood of Satan's temptations which ſweeps away many, or with a flood of indwelling corruption, with a flood of error, with a flood of profanity, or with a flood of neutrality and indifferency about ſpiritual concerns; by which floods, multitudes are deſtroyed. Let me then by faith fly to this bleſſed Ark, where all believers are preſerved from theſe deſtroying floods. Behold I run, I fly: May Jeſus draw me, and help me in.

Bleſſed for ever be the God of heaven, for providing ſuch an Ark for fallen ſinners upon earth. I deſire to count all things but loſs and dung, that I may be found in this Ark, among the preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus, whom no flood can reach. However this Ark be ſlighted by the world, I'll prize it above all things, and count them for ever happy who get into it, ſeeing God declares it, that there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus.—The ark was ſlighted by the old world, and Noah ridiculed for preparing it for himſelf and his houſe; but it ſoon appeared that Noah was the wiſeſt man that then lived upon the earth. Few there were that entered with Noah into the ark, and no doubt were reproached and mocked for their ſingularity; but ſoon was the world perſuaded that they were the only wiſe and happy men in it. Better ſurely it was to have followed the eight perſons that went into the ark, than to have joined eight millions of theſe who were drown'd in the flood. Should I be ſo fooliſh as follow the old world in undervaluing the Ark, I muſt lay my account to be ſhut out and periſh with them too: Wherefore I will not fear the reproach of men, for being ſingular in my eſteem for glorious Chriſt.—May I be numbered among that happy company (however few they be) who love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in ſincerity, and will bleſs God eternally for providing this Ark for drowning men! May I be one that will ever bleſs my lovely and loving Jeſus, that pitied me and took me in, when others were waſhed off from the ſides of the Ark, as adhering only to it by a dead and formal profeſſion! May I be one that will ever ſing to his praiſe, O amazing free love! that pitied and diſtinguiſhed me, when the flood came; that graciouſly drew and determined me in ſuch a manner, that I got into the Ark and was ſafe, when many others were waſhed off and periſhed for ever!

MEDITATION II.

From 2 Pet. ii. 4. God ſpared not the angels that ſinned, but caſt them down to hell.

HOW admirable, free and diſtinguiſhing is the love of God to mankind ſinners, in pitying them in their low and loſt eſtate! O how different is the caſe of fallen men upon the earth, from the caſe of fallen angels in hell, and that of damned ſouls there! Manna is rained down upon us, while an eternal ſhower of fire and brimſtone falls down upon them. They are bound in chains of darkneſs, whilſt thou, Lord, art drawing us with cords of love. Thou didſt not ſpare angels, nor take on their nature; but thou haſt ſpared us, married our nature, and exalted it to the heavens. They continue without hope under the deluge of God's wrath, whilſt the pleaſant rainbow of the ſacrament appears to us, as a token of God's covenant of grace, and of his willingneſs to ſecure us from that overflowing flood, by the interpoſition of his dear Son in our nature. O how welcome ſhould we make that goſpel rainbow!

Lord, thy wrath ſoon broke out againſt the angels that fell; thou didſt puniſh them immediately upon their ſinning aginſt thee. Thou didſt not wait for their repentance, nor make any offer of mercy to them: but, preſently upon their firſt offence, didſt condemn them to everlaſting chains of darkneſs. O how far different is thy manner of dealing with us! Long haſt thou waited upon us after we have ſinned; yea, thou haſt followed us with thy mercy after many refuſals of it, and even after our trampling the precious blood of Chriſt under our feet! Marvellous and peculiar is thy mercy to fallen men in reſpect of fallen angels! Glory to ſovereign free mercy, that thou didſt not caſt us off for ever without a parley, as thou didſt them; but waits to be gracious to us, long ſtretching out thy hand, and calling us to repentance, ſaying, Turn ye, turn ye; why will ye die?

Againſt the ſinning angels God was ſo provoked, that he reſolved within himſelf, and hath kept his reſolution ever ſince the beginning of the world, and will keep it to all eternity, that he will not ſo much as enter into a parley with theſe creatures, however glorious they once were, nor be reconciled to them upon any terms; yea, that he will hear of no terms, but will revenge himſelf upon them to all eternity—May not then the hearing of this cauſe us to quake and tremble? for, why might not the Lord have dealt with us in the ſame manner, who were far more wretched and miſerable creatures than angels? Surely if a king be ſo angry with an offending nobleman, that was once his ſpecial favourite, as to baniſh him from court, and afterwards hear of no terms of reconciliation with him; Would not a footman or mean ſervant, that had offended, when hearing of this, begin to dread, and ſay, O what will become of me a poor man, when the king treats his peers ſo ſeverely? I may ſurely deſpair of a remiſſion or reconciliation with him. So, in like manner, we poor clay worms, upon hearing of God's ſeverity to fallen angels, might have been overwhelmed with fear, if the Bible had not told us, that the Son of God his delights were with the ſons of men; that verily he took not on him the nature of angels, but he took upon him the ſeed of Abraham, Heb. ii. 16. and that he gave himſelf to be a ſin-offering and ſacrifice for men! Aſtoniſhing news! Glory to God for theſe glad-tidings of great joy.

O admirable love to Adam's rebellious offspring! Haſt thou, Lord, paſt by angels, and remembred us in our low eſtate! and in thy infinite compaſſion become our Surety, to appeaſe divine juſtice for our heinous ſins, when no other ſacrifice could do it! O what ſhall we render to thee for this diſtinguiſhihg love! Surely our condition in Adam was no better than that of the angels who left their firſt eſtate. By nature we were in a moſt dreadful caſe, lying like Iſaac, bound on the altar, to be a ſacrifice to the juſtice of God, and the ſword of juſtice lift up to give the killing blow, until the Son of God diſcovered himſelf as the ram caught in the thickets, and calling to juſtice, Hold thy hand, looſe them, and bind me in their room; I'll be the ſacrifice for them. In chooſing fallen men, and not angels, God gave an amazing inſtance of the ſovereignty of his grace, that would be merciful to whom he would be merciful; he would paſs by the ſuperiour nature, and chooſe the inferior; prefer veſſels of clay to veſſels of gold! What can we ſay? Nothing, but wonder at God's free grace!—Unſpeakable love! Lord, it had been much if thou hadſt provided an angel to mitigate our ſufferings in hell, by giving us drops of water to cool our tongue; but that thou ſhould have condeſcended to come and change rooms with us, ly in hell for us, and ſuffer the very pains and agonies due to us, is love that paſſeth knowledge.

Lord, when I conſider thy diſtinguiſhing pity, and low ſtoop, to purchaſe and recover ſuch clods of earth and ſin with thy blood and agonies, I am amazed at thy love, confounded at my own ingratitude, and aſhamed at the coldneſs and hardneſs of my heart! Oh! was Chriſt willing to change rooms with the like of me, and ſhall not I be willing to change rooms with him, and at his demand to part with the filthy rags of my ſins, and take on the robe of his righteouſneſs? O ſhall not this amazing love of Chriſt conſtrain me to love him again, and live to him that died for me? Shall it not conſtrain me to think on him? conſtrain me to cloſe with and truſt in him? conſtrain me to commend him? conſtrain me to hate and avoid his enemy, ſin? conſtrain me to adhere to Chriſt's truths and ways? to perſevere in prayer, praiſe, and holy walking?

Are fallen angels left, and fallen men pitched upon to be the monuments of free grace, to fill up the vacant rooms which angels fell from? What ſhall I ſay to this, but, "even ſo, Father, for ſo it pleaſed thee:" Let thy ſovereign free grace be the eternal ſong of both men and angels. "Not unto us, not unto us, but unto thy name be the glory."—Bleſſed be God, that I hear this joyful ſound of reconciliation with fallen men, and of a treaty of peace carried on with them: The devils never heard, and never will hear ſuch news.—But Oh, if I come not in, and accept of the terms and offers made to me in the goſpel, I'll put myſelf in a worſe caſe than the devils: For it cannot be charged upon fallen angels, as on fallen men, that God was willing to be reconciled to them, and they would not. Now then, when the goſpel-treaty is proclaimed, God forbid I be found guilty of refuſing his terms, ſcorning his offers, and defying his threatenings. O how ſhall I eſcape, if I neglect ſo great and wonderful ſalvation as is tendered to me? Neglect it, Lord, I dare not, I will not. Lo, I come, I accept, I embrace, I take hold of thy covenant, and the ſeal of it tendered to me: I renounce the old covenant, I break league this day with all thine enemies, I proclaim war againſt them: I cloſe with Chriſt Jeſus, both as my righteouſneſs and my ſtrength: I make a full and free ſurrender and reſignation of myſelf unto the Lord, to be his and his only, in all I am, and in all I enjoy, to be ordered and diſpoſed of for his glory and ſervice. Lord, I am thine; I will not be my own, I will not be the world's, but I'll be thine, thine only, and thine wholly; thine to love thee, ſerve and obey thee without reſerve: Since thou wouldſt have no nature but mine, I will have no will but thine. I renounce my own will, and take thine for my rule. Lord, I am thine, O ſave thou me; and I will trumpet forth the praiſes of free grace and redeeming love for ever. Amen.

MEDITATION III.

From Pſalm cxlvii. 20. He hath not dealt ſo with any nation.

THE nation of Iſrael was ſingularly privileged above others; they were taken into covenant with God, they had God's word and ordinances, the means of converſion and ſalvation; they had the goſpel-revelation, the knowledge and promiſes of the Meſſiah.—But we under the New-Teſtament times, and in Britain, are yet more peculiarly privileged with clearer light and diſcoveries of the Meſſiah than the nation of Iſrael had. They lived under a darker and harſher diſpenſation of the covenant of grace by Moſes, whoſe firſt miracle was the turning of water into blood; but we live under the clearer and ſweeter diſpenſation of it by Chriſt himſelf, whoſe firſt miracle was the turning of water into wine, that cheers the heart. The nation of Iſrael were called a people near unto God; but in goſpel-times we are allowed yet nearer acceſs to God, than they had.—The children of Iſrael were not allowed ſo much as to touch the mount on which the Lord came down; the men of Bethſhemeſh had not liberty to look into the ark, the place of his reſidence: But, behold, we are allowed to take a near view and ſteady look of a crucified Jeſus in the ſacrament, who is the image of the inviſible God, the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon. Yea, we have liberty not only to look to him, but alſo to touch him, handle his wounds, embrace his perſon, and lodge him in our hearts.

The advantage of a clear revelation of a crucified Chriſt in the goſpel-ordinances, and particularly in the Lord's ſupper, is an invaluable privilege. If the royal pſalmiſt admired the divine goodneſs in cauſing the ſun, moon and ſtars to ſhine in the firmament for man's behoof, and therefore cries, What is man, that God is thus mindful of him? How far greater cauſe have we to ſay ſo, when we obſerve how God cauſes the Sun of righteouſneſs ſhine ſo brightly in the firmament of goſpel-ordinances, and the day ſpring from on high to viſit us with the light of ſaving knowledge, and of eternal ſalvation through him?—Again, if the Pſalmiſt exalts God's goodneſs ſo much in his giving the beaſts of the field, fowls of the air, and fiſhes of the ſea to be food for man: What ground have we to admire and praiſe God's infinite mercy, in giving us the fleſh and blood of his own dear Son to preſerve the lives of our ſouls? O what rare goſpel-feaſts are theſe which God allows us in the land wherein we dwell! And O how wonderfully are they preſerved and continued with us, from time to time, by the miraculous working of God's mercy and power! While others are viſited with cleanneſs of teeth, and a famine of the word of God? He hath not dealt with every nation as with us.

And, Lord, how diſtinguiſhing is thy goodneſs unto me a moſt unworthy creature! By thy mercy I was born in a valley of viſion; and I dwell in a lightſome Goſhen, when multitudes of others, in Pagan and Popiſh nations, are covered with Egyptian darkneſs, and ſit in the region of the ſhadow of death; I hear heaven's free market-days of grace proclaimed, when others have ſilent ſabbaths; I am invited to a rich banqueting-houſe, when others are ſtarving for the want of the bread of life. O that I could value my mercies aright!—It is a great privilege that I am allowed to ſpeak to the great God in prayer, and to hear him ſpeak unto me in his word! But ſtill he puts a greater honour upon me, by calling me to enjoy intimate communion and fellowſhip with himſelf, yea, inviting me to ſit down with him at his table, and feaſt upon the fruits of Chriſt's death, and benefits of his purchaſe!—Oh, I am not worthy of the leaſt crumb that falls from the children's table, and far leſs of being ſet down at the table with the children to eat of their bread, and ſhare of the dainties provided for them by their heavenly Father. If Peter after having ſeen Chriſt's glory, and his own vileneſs, judged himſelf unworthy to be in the ſame ſhip with Chriſt, and therefore cried, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful man. How ſhould I, the chief of ſinners, adventure to ſit at the ſame table with him, and feed upon his fleſh and blood! Amazing condeſenſion!

O what diſtinction doth God make among nations, in ſending the goſpel to them, with clear views and preſſing offers of a crucified Jeſus to periſhing ſouls? And what cauſe have we in theſe nations of admiring the diſtinguiſhing goodneſs of God to us in this reſpect beyond others! Would we not admire his goodneſs, if he cauſed the ſun ſhine only in our horizon, as he did on Goſhen; when other nations were covered with darkneſs, as the land of Egypt was? Yet ſurely the goſpel-ſun is by far a greater mercy.—The goſpel is indeed a joyful ſound, Pſal. lxxxix. 15. ſo called, with alluſion to the ſilver-trumpets made uſe of under the law to call people to the ſolemn aſſemblies, and to intimate to them the feaſt of the paſſover, which repreſented the love and ſufferings of the Meſſiah. A joyful ſound the goſpel is indeed, if we compare it with the ſound of the law's curſes and threatenings thundered from mount Sinai againſt ſinners. But, behold, this joyful ſound bringing ſalvation comes from heaven, even to heaven-daring ſinners, who had openly rebelled againſt the God of heaven! Glad news! bleſſed are they who know this joyful ſound; know it ſo, as to believe it, admire it, entertain it, and comply with it ſo as to receive Chriſt offered therein to loſt ſinners.

Lord, I make this joyful ſound welcome; it is muſic to my ear, and a cordial to my heart. I reckon their feet beautiful who bring ſuch glad tidings to my ſoul. O how welcome would men make them, who would bring them an invention, that would ſecure their eſtates from conſuming, their houſes from burning, or their bodies from dying! But here we have the ſure news of an invention that doth much more for us than all this, even a device that ſecures us from hell, and enſures us of heaven. Ought I not then cheerfully to comply with this joyful ſound, and fall in with the call thereof? God forbid that I ſhould ſtop my ears at it; it had been better for me then never to have heard of it at all: How dreadful would my caſe be at the judgment-day! How would devils, Turks, heathens, and my own conſcience upbraid me in hell to all eternity for my folly in ſlighting this joyful ſound! Surely God may ſlight the mournful ſound of their prayers in the time of diſtreſs, who ſlight the joyful ſound of his goſpel in time of health.—But, Lord, I bleſs thee for it, I love it, I receive it, I welcome it, I fall heartily in with it, and will admire it for ever.

MEDITATION IV.

From 1 John iii. 1. Behold what manner of love the Father hath beſtowed upon us!

IN the amazing work of our redemption, we are called to behold and admire both the love of the Father, and the love of the Son. Unſpeakable love of the Father! that contrived our redemption, pitched upon and gave the Redeemer. O how readily accepted he of the Son's offer to ſuffer and ſatisfy infinite juſtice for ſin in our room! Upon our fall he might juſtly have ſaid, No, the ſoul that ſins ſhall die perſonally, I'll admit of no ſurety. But glory to the bleſſed Father, ſuch was his love to us, that when the dear Son ſaid, Father, I will be the Surety for ſinners of mankind, let my blood be ſhed for theirs, let the blow light on me, let me die in their room; ſuch was the love and pity of the Father to us, that he preſently accepted the offer, held our Redeemer at his word, ſaying, Be it as thou haſt ſaid: Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my Fellow; ſmite the Shepherd, and ſpare the ſheep. I'll glorify my juſtice upon my own dear Son, rather than upon them. Amen, ſaid the bleſſed Son of God: I will be the ſacrifice!

O love unſpeakable, both in the Father and the Son! human love, angelical love is nothing to it! O what is the love of creatures one to another, to this love of God to man! aſtoniſhing love! that the eternal Son of God, intreated by no man, but hated of all men, ſhould in his love and pity intreat for men: yea, undertake and die for them, when enemies to God and all that is good! O the breadth, O the length, O the depth, O the height of this love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge! I may poſſibly feel it, but I cannot fathom it. The love of creatures is nothing to the love of Chriſt. It was great love that Jacob bore to Rachel, that he endured the heat of ſummer, and froſts of winter for her: But all this was nothing to the winter-ſtorm which Chriſt ſuffered for us. It was extraordinary love that Jonathan had to David, that he would peril his life to avert his father's wrath from him: But what was that to Chriſt's love, that took on his eternal Father's wrath, which was infinitely greater than Saul's, and actually laid down his life to avert that dreadful ſtorm of wrath from us! What love was it that made him ſtand before the mouth of hell furnace, and ſuffer himſelf to be ſcorched with it in the moſt terrible manner, that he might ſtop the flame from breaking out on us! Behold him receiving the ſword of juſtice into his bowels, to prevent its being ſheathed into our hearts! Behold, when the ſea of God's wrath raged and was tempeſtuous, threatening to ſwallow us all up; Chriſt came, and ſaid, like Jonah, Spare theſe poor ſinners! take me up, and caſt me into the ſea in their ſtead, that the ſtorm may be appeaſed againſt them! Chriſt was willing to be caſt into the ſea of wrath, to be a bleſſed plank of mercy for ſhipwrecked ſouls to grip to, and be ſaved.

Admirable love of the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who would give his dearly beloved Son, out of free love and pity to man, to die and ſuffer wrath for him! and would chuſe rather to ſee his dear Son agonizing and ſtruggling under infinite wrath for a time, than to ſee an elect world ſtruggling in hell among devils for ever! O who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord! who can ſhew forth all his praiſe! O Father of mercies, from all eternity thou foreſaw our fall and miſery, and, in thy wiſdom and love, didſt contrive a noble remedy for us: Thou even didſt provide a Surety for man before the debt was contracted, a Saviour for him before he was loſt; and by this glorious Surety thou haſt found out a noble way to ſatisfy both the demands of juſtice and intreaties of mercy, and glorify both theſe divine perfections at once.——By this, Lord, we know thou loveſt us, that thou haſt not with-held thy Son, thine only Son from us, to be ſacrificed in our room, and graciouſly calleſt us to commemorate thy love, in providing this ſacrifice, at thy holy table.—Inſtead of this, thou mighteſt juſtly have called multitudes of us together, to make us a ſacrifice to thy juſtice for our heinous ſins and rebellions againſt heaven. But, behold, thou calls us together to thy table upon a quite other deſign, even to intimate to us, a ſacrifice of thy own providing, ſufficient for us all; and actually to behold the bleeding victim of the innocent Lamb of God, who willingly, at his Father's call, gave himſelf to be ſlain to take away the ſins of the world!—Lord, what didſt thou ſee in ſuch creatures, to make thee to love us after this manner? Nothing, but much to make thee lothe us; yet the time when we were moſt lotheſom, thou mad'ſt it the time of love! Surely thy thoughts are not as our thoughts, nor thy ways as our ways! How aſtoniſhing was thy conduct in redeeming us when loſt? And worſe are we than devils, if we be not raviſhed with the love of the Father in projecting our redemption, and with the love of his eternal Son that made him leave his glory in heaven, and even wade through hell to ſave the dregs of the creation.

O what manner of love is this, that the Father did give his eternal Son, to die for theſe who deſerved eternal wrath for their rebellion and treaſon againſt himſelf! When notice was firſt given in this lower world, that the Son of God was coming down to it from heaven; what could have been expected, but that his buſineſs here would be to condemn the world, and haſten the execution of thoſe he found in arms againſt him? But O who can think, and not wonder, that he ſhould have ſent him to ſuffer and die for ſuch as forfeited their lives, and deſerved to be ſlain; yea, for ſuch as were alienated from the life of God, and full of enmity againſt him, unworthy of any place of abode upon earth, and by their wickedneſs fully prepared for hell: O how ſurprizing is it, that God would, in this our miſerable ſtate, ſend the Son of his love to die for us, to reſcue us from deſerving wrath, and purchaſe a new title for us to life and glory! Behold what manner of love this is, that the juſt ſhould ſuffer for the unjuſt, the juſt Prince for the unjuſt rebels, that were in arms againſt him, the King of Glory for the children of diſobedience, the obedient Son for mortal enemies ! O this is ſuch a manner of loving, that the higheſt tranſport of wondering cannot reach : For ſcarcely for a righteous man will one dare to die ; but God commends his love to us, in that, while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for us, Rom. v. 7, 8.

Oh how am I able to hear, ſpeak, or think of this love, and my heart not burn with an admiring ſenſe of the freeneſs and riches of God's grace ; and with a vehement hatred and indignation againſt my ſins, which contributed to pierce and crucify my glorious Redeemer ! Can I be but raviſhed with love to him, when he comes to communicate his love to me at his table, and ſay, Behold how I have loved you, and given myſelf for you ! I was cut off, but not for myſelf ; I was wounded for your tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for your iniquities. It was for you I was betrayed, reviled, condemned and crucified ; for you my hands and feet were nailed to the tree, my head crowned with thorns, and my ſide pierced with a ſpear : And all this I ſuffered, that you might be ſaved from hell, and get ſin forgiven, and God reconciled to you for ever.

MEDITATION V.

From Pſalm viii. 4. What is man that thou art mindful of him ?

WHEN David beheld the heavens, with its glorious luminaries, the ſun, moon and ſtars, and the mighty works of God in the creation, and conſidered what a mean figure man made amongſt them ; he admires God's condeſcenſion and goodneſs in his concern and pains about him, in his works of providence and redemption. Lord, what is man, fallen man, that thou ſhouldſt notice him ſo much ? A poor vile ſinful worm ! And yet how ſingularly minded and honoured is he, in God the Son his undertaking to be his Cautioner and Ranſom ? Had he done it for angels, it had not been ſo marvellous ; but what is man that God ſhould viſit him in this manner ! ſhould pay him a homely viſit in human nature, to ſee what ailed him, to hear his complaints, and know feelingly his wants and miſeries, that he might the better ſympathize with him, relieve, and ſupply him !

But who is this that comes to pay this viſit to man ; even he that is King of kings, and Lord of lords, who is infinite in majeſty and power, in riches and glory. How awful are the deſcriptions given us of him in the Bible ? Great is the Lord and of great power, his underſtanding is infinite. He calls the ſtars by their names. Whatſoever he pleaſed, that did he in heaven and in earth, in the ſeas, and all the deep places. And it is ſaid of his coming to judgment, Dan. vii. 10. A fiery ſtream iſſued forth from before him, thouſand thouſands miniſtred unto him, and ten thouſand times ten thouſand ſtood before him. And yet this almighty Perſon, the great God, condeſcends to clothe himſelf with our nature, and ſtoops to the very ground, in the moſt lowly manner, to pay a kind viſit to his rebellious creature, man, even man that is a worm ; and when he gets not acceſs to him at firſt, he continues to ſtand and knock at his door.——O how marvellous is this, that he who was Omnipotent, that could by a word have annihilated fallen man, and created a more amiable creature in all reſpects in his room, ſhould ſtoop ſo low to him ! that he who was Omniſcient, and perfectly knew man's unworthineſs, his enmity, his ingratitude, and what unkind returns he would make for the greateſt kindneſs, ſhould court him ſo earneſtly ! That the Judge of heaven ſhould come down from the bench, and put on the pannel's clothes, that he might anſwer and ſatisfy the law for him !——That the great General of the armies of heaven, ſhould put himſelf in the room of a poor condemned deſerter to ſuffer for him !—That the Creator ſhould ſtoop to die for the creature, even the great God for a worm, man, is love that ſwallows up our thoughts and language ! What can we think ! what can we ſay of it ! it is love that paſſeth knowledge ! the moſt penetrating angel cannot fathom its height, its depth, its breadth, or its length ! Why ; for its height, it is infinitely higher than the higheſt heavens. For its depth, none can ſee its bottom, for it made him ſtoop as low as hell. For its breadth, it is as broad as the whole earth and the whole heavens too ; it comprehends all his people, even the pooreſt out-caſt on earth, as well as the higheſt ſaint in heaven. For its length, it never ends, but continues without interruption, notwithſtanding of provocations ; nay, it is drawn out parallel with the longeſt line of eternity.

Lord, what is man that thou ſhould have minded him, viſited him, and loved him ſo ! a creature moſt unlovely, ugly and black as hell ; that had got the image of God razed out, and the image of Satan pictured in its room.—A creature lame and impotent, that could not riſe but as Chriſt lifted him, could not ſtand but as he upheld him, could not walk but as he led him, nor move but as he drew him.—A rebel, that was in league with hell, that hated his Sovereign, and was plotting with the devil to pull the crown off his head.—A creature made lothſome by ſin in God's ſight, yea, more lothſome than the new born infant wallowing in its blood, than Job when full of boils, than Lazarus full of ſores, or a dead carcaſe crawling with worms.—A creature that was undeſirous of God's viſit or help, and unwilling to accept of it ; that ſaid to him, Depart from us, we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways. A creature that contemned his love, rejected his offers, and trampled his blood.——Who would have pitied ſuch a creature ? one ſo poor, ſo vile, ſo miſerable ! It had been much to have given him an alms ; but for the Son of God to give his life for him, may ſtrike men and angels with aſtoniſhing ſurpriſe for ever. Lord, what is man ! a poor feeble crawling worm, that thou ſhouldſt be mindful of him after this manner ? And what are we, that we ſhould ſtill have the offers of this love continued to us ? Oh, ſhall we ever make light of this love any more ? I believe, Lord help my unbelief.

There is a parallel text, Pſal. cxliv. 3. Lord, what is man that thou takeſt knowledge of him ? Or the ſon of man, that thou makeſt account of him ? What a poor little thing is man, that thou ſhouldſt make ſo great account of him, put ſuch reſpect upon him above all other creatures, ſo as to condeſcend to ſtand in a nearer relation to him than to any other, as that of a Father, a Brother, a Huſband, a Friend, &c. yea more, thou haſt dignified this poor thing, man, ſo much, as to aſſume his nature into an ineffable, perſonal union with the ſecond Perſon of the ever glorious Trinity, whereby the nature of man is exalted above all the angels of heaven. It is not the angelical, but the human nature, which God hath choſen to tabernacle in; and now it is honoured ſo far, as to be ſet on the right-hand of the Majeſty on high.——The great account God hath of this little thing, man, appears further in the great coſt he hath laid out for him. Why, God not only gives his creatures to die for man, to yield him food, but he alſo gives his Chriſt to die for him, to procure him eternal life. Again, how great is the goodneſs which God hath laid up for him hereafter? Eye hath not ſeen it, ear hath not heard it, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive how great it is! O what a favourite of heaven muſt this little creature, man, be.

Lord, who can but wonder at the honour thou haſt already put upon man, and at the favours thou ſtill deſigns for him! great things haſt thou laid out, and great things haſt thou laid up for man. I admire thy low ſtoop in the viſit thou madſt man, in the incarnation of thy dear Son, and in thy viſit in the goſpel-proclamation, and offer of pardon thro' him! but let me ſtill plead for another viſit in the effuſion of thy holy Spirit: This other viſit thou knoweſt is neceſſary to make the former effectual to my ſalvation. May then thy holy Spirit work faith in me, to fall in with thy glorious device for the redemption of man in all points, to accept of thy love offers, and reſt upon thy free promiſes of ſalvation through Jeſus Chriſt, and his moſt perfect righteouſneſs. Amen.

MEDITATION VI.

From 1 Cor. x. 4. And that Rock was Chriſt.

HOW uſeful was that rock in the wilderneſs to the Iſraelites ſojourning there, after it was ſmitten by Moſes his rod: When they were ready to periſh in that dry deſert, the rock ſent forth ſtreams of water to them in great abundance; ſtreams that followed them, up hill and down hill, in all their turnings and windings, marches and countermarches through that weary land. That rock was to them a lively type of Chriſt, who being ſmitten by the rod of the law's curſes, whoſe miniſter Moſes was, ſends forth plentiful ſupplies to his people, while travelling in the wilderneſs of this world. There are two principal ſtreams of bleſſings which he ſends forth, moſt uſeful to us, to wit, a ſtream of blood for our juſtification, and a ſtream of the Spirit for our ſanctification. The channel or conduit-pipes, for conveying theſe ſtreams to us, are the ordinances and promiſes of the goſpel; and through theſe pipes, theſe bleſſed ſtreams run freely to all true believers, from the Rock Chriſt, which was broached for them.

Oh, how coſtly was our redemption to our dear kinſman Jeſus Chriſt, dear did our ſouls coſt him! The Rock of our ſalvation was cleaved aſunder, rent and pierced to the very heart, to let out the waters of life to us, by which only we can be preſerved from eternal death, and obtain eternal life. How coſtly and precious are the ſtreams of Chriſt's blood and Spirit, his mercy and grace, which flow from the ſmitten Rock, and follow us through the wilderneſs in the free offers of the goſpel! They are life-giving ſtreams, fire-quenching, heart-ſoftning, ſoul cleanſing, healing and fructifying ſtreams: Welcome then ſhould we make theſe ſtreams to our ſouls in this dry and thirſty land.——Likewiſe the rock was to the Iſraelites a ſhadow from the heat, and a covert from tempeſts and ſtorms: So Chriſt our Rock ſcreens us from the ſcorching heat of vindictive juſtice, and from the waves and billows of God's wrath.—How neceſſary and uſeful is the Rock Chriſt to the ſouls of fallen men! Oh, let me never Jeſhurun-like, lightly eſteem this Rock of our ſalvation. O let me never go to falſe rocks, or falſe ſtreams, for ſhelter and ſupply in ſtraits, when the true Rock is ſo near, and the ſaving ſtreams run ſo cloſs by my door; yea follow me daily in the channel of the word and ſacraments: Streams appointed by Heaven to anſwer all the caſes and ailments of loſt ſinners. O ſhall God in his tender mercy provide ſuch a wonderful remedy, ſet the Rock a-broach for me, and cauſe its ſtreams to follow me; and ſhall I be ſo fooliſh as turn my back upon them, and refuſe to apply or make uſe of them? O ſave me from ſuch curſed ingratitude and madneſs; I believe, Lord help my unbelief.

O how much ſhould my heart be affected at the holy table, when I ſee the Rock of my ſalvation ſmitten by the rod of juſtice, and behold the bloody ſpear pierce into his heart! O Rock of ages, what made thee to rend and cleave ſo! O brightneſs of thy Father's glory, who hath disfigured thee ſo? O River of life, clear as cryſtal, who hath troubled thee ſo? Oh, it was my ſins, my pride, my paſſion, my unbelief, my worldlineſs, my hardneſs, impenitence, &c. theſe were the cauſe of my Redeemer's ſufferings. The iniquities of ſinful men were laid upon him. When he was pierced, it was I that ſhould have been ſmitten. When he groaned and ſwate blood, I ſhould have howled and roared in hell. Harder than the rock is my heart, if I can ſee my dear Saviour ſmitten and pierced, and not mourn. O can I ſee his ſide and heart ſtreaming out blood, and mine eyes not pour out tears! Can I behold the Rock ſmitten for the ſins of men, and not adore the holineſs and juſtice of God manifeſted therein? Can I ſee my innocent Saviour wounded and ſlain for my ſins, and my ſoul not hate them; yea, ſhall I not be filled with horror and trembling at temptations to ſin?

Let me, at my Saviour's call, approach to his table, and come near to the Rock of my ſalvation, and hearken to the raging billows of infinite wrath, daſhing againſt the Rock for my ſins, and even making the Rock to grone, ſweat and tremble under the preſſure. O what a dreadful hurricane of wrath did he endure, to keep the ſwelling ocean of divine wrath from overflowing guilty men? Surely my glorious Immanuel's groaning and ſweating blood under the ſtrokes of God's vengeance, is a greater evidence of the implacable wrath and indignation of God againſt ſin, than if he had hurled all the rocks of the creation into the midſt of the ſea, yea, or a thouſand worlds of men and angels into hell. O that, while I am beholding this ſight, I may tremble at ſin, come by faith under the ſhadow of this Rock, and run into the clefts of it for ſafety. Here I would be out of the reach of the law's curſes, and threatenings of wrath; and though I hear the roarings and daſhings of the ſea upon the Rock, yet a drop of it could not touch me.

O that I could imitate Moſes, when I am at the table, and ſmite the Rock by the rod of faith, that the ſtreams of Chriſt's blood and Spirit may flow out to me. What was his error will be my wiſdom, to ſmite the Rock oftner than once, to put forth many acts of faith on Jeſus Chriſt, ſuch as the diſcerning, aſſenting, approving, deriving, receiving, cloſing, embracing, truſting, pleading, applying, appropriating acts of true faith. May I, like Iſrael of old, Deut. xxxii. 13. be helped by faith to ſuck honey out of the Rock, and oil out of the flinty Rock: Honey and oil, ſweetneſs and fatneſs, quickening and comfort. How ſhall I come at this honey and oil? only by ſucking: And how ſhall I ſuck, but by the mouth of faith? There is no ſucking without it. Neither can I ſuck by faith, unleſs God make me do it; for it is ſaid Deut. xxxii. He made them to ſuck honey out of the rock. It is God that muſt give me both a mouth and ſtrength to ſuck, faith in the habit, and faith in exerciſe. It is only the blowings of the north and ſouth winds on the garden, that make the ſpices to flow out. Awake, O north wind, come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden; bring faith to life, that I may ſuck honey from Chriſt in the ſacrament. Chriſt's breaſts are now full; O let not faith be wanting, for if it be wanting, I can ſuck nothing: Bleſſed be God, Jeſus Chriſt, my Redeemer, is the author of faith. Lord, increaſe my faith, that I may ſuck honey from the Rock. 2. But what honey may I expect from it? Anſw. The honey of pardon of ſin. O how ſweet is this honey!—The honey of peace and reconciliation with God; —the honey of a law-biding righteouſneſs;—the honey of acceſs to, and communion with God;——the honey of enlargement of heart, and looſing of bands, &c. O let me ever ſuck from this Rock, the Rock that anſwers all my needs, and richly ſupplies all my wants.—Let me alſo under all my ſtraits, ſupport myſelf with the Pſalmiſt's cordial, Pſal. xviii. 46. The Lord liveth, and bleſſed be my Rock. Why ſhould believers in Chriſt droop in any condition, or look like dead men, while their Lord liveth, and their Rock ſtandeth? Bleſſed be God my Rock is a living and laſting Rock, my hopes may die, my comforts die, my frames die, my gifts, my wealth, and my relations, they may all die; but I rejoice in the news, that my Lord will not die, nor my Rock fall. He once died for me, but he is riſen again; good news! Now he is alive, and will die no more.

MEDITATION VII.

From Zech. xii. 10. They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and mourn.

THIS promiſe hath a reſpect, not only to the Jews when converted, but to all ſinners when brought to repentance. We have all pierced Chriſt, in as much as our ſins were the cauſe of his death; He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions. Now, a believing ſight of a pierced Saviour, is the beſt ſpring of ſorrow for ſin; it is faith's look to a crucified Chriſt, that will ſet us a mourning after a godly ſort. O that this promiſe may be made good to me at this time, that I may be helped to look believingly upon Chriſt as pierced for my ſins, my pride, my paſſion, my unbelief, my carnality, my diſobedience, my impenitence, my ſins of the heart, of the tongue, and of the life, that I may confeſs and bewail them, mourn and weep over them before the Lord. O! when ſhall I mourn and weep if not now, when I am called to look upon my dear Lord and Surety at his table, all red with blood for my red and ſcarlet coloured ſins? I will not now ſtand afar off, and look to my Saviour on the croſs, as theſe women who followed him from Galilee, Luke xxiii. 49. No, I will come cloſe to him, take a near look, and a narrow view of his wounds and piercings by my ſins, that I may ſee how wide and deep they are, that my eye may affect my heart with godly ſorrow for ſin.

When I look on him, I'll conſider the dignity of the Perſon pierced by and for me; he is the almighty Creator, the glorious Immanuel, the Plant of renown, the Prince of the kings of the earth, that is pierced and nailed to a croſs. Jeremiah laments in the captivity, that princes were hanged up by the hands, Lam. v. 12. But what were the princes of Iſrael to the Prince of peace, the King of glory, whom I ſee hanging nailed through the hands on the croſs, and his blood poured out like water upon the earth! O it is royal blood, the blood of God, that I ſee running down to ſatisfy juſtice for my ſins; and will not ſuch a ſight cauſe me to mourn for them? Can I look on my lovely Redeemer, ſtript naked, mounted up, and fixed with nails to a tormenting croſs? Can I ſee his head pierced with thorns, his back pierced with ſcourgings, his hands and feet pierced with big nails, his ſide pierced with a ſpear, and his heart pierced with ſorrows for my ſins, and my heart not mourn for them? Yet all the piercings and wounds of his ſacred body were but ſmall, to the piercings and agonies of his ſoul, when he drank of the cup of the Father's wrath for me, which made him cry out, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful even unto death; my God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Can I behold this loving Jeſus, ſtanding in my room, bearing the wrath of a Deity for me, and my heart not bleed? Can I ſee him, when the ſword of juſtice was drawn to ſmite me, opening his breaſt to receive the ſtroke into his heart, and my heart not melt within me? Lord, grant me ſuch a ſight by faith, of a wounded bleeding Saviour, as to make me a melting and mourning ſinner.

How can I leave this ſubject until my heart be more affected? Had I been perſonally at mount Calvary, and with my bodily eyes had ſeen my dear Redeemer racked and nailed to the tree! Had I ſeen him lifted up between heaven and earth, that the nations might behold him, with his arms ſtretched out to embrace ſinners! Had I beheld his dying looks, and heard his dying groans! Had I ſeen his precious blood for many hours run from his wounded hands and feet to the earth! Could I have ſtood by with dry eyes, or an unconcerned heart, eſpecially when I had thought he was ſuffering all this out of love to me, for my ſins, and in my room!——Why then ſhould not I be as much concerned, when I come to his table to celebrate the memorial of that fearful tragedy, and look upon the outward ſigns which repreſent the ſame! Lord, give me faith's eye to behold the things ſignified thereby, even the bleeding and dying of the glorious Immanuel.—And what kind of blood is it I ſee running down! It is innocent blood! precious blood! royal blood! heart-blood! Nay, the blood of the eternal Son of God, one drop whereof is worth an ocean of our blood, and is of infinite value; and yet behold all this blood is ſhed for ſuch worms as I am! O can I think long upon this ſubject, and not find my heart pained with love, and be ready, with Joſeph, to ſeek a ſecret place to weep in? Had an ordinary man been executed for my crime, it would have affected me all my days; how much ſhould it touch me to ſee the Son of God put to death for me! The ſun fainted, the heavens mourned in black, the earth quaked, and the rocks rent, when this black tragedy was acted; how much more ſhould my heart rend and mourn at the repreſentation of it before my eyes! Surely my mourning ſhould be great, deep, and bitter mourning, as in the text, like the mourning of a parent for the death of an only ſon; or like the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddo! O what was the death of king Joſiah to the death of King Jeſus, the eternal Son of God! O my dear ſlain Lamb, ſhall I not mourn and weep over thee!

Oh! can I ſee his blood run down in ſtreams, and my eyes not pour out ſome drops! Did Chriſt ſweat blood, and weep blood for my ſins, and ſhall not I weep tears for them? Shall I not give drops of water for ſtreams of blood! Alas! am I more ſparing of my tears for Chriſt, than Chriſt was of his blood for me! How faſt did the blood trickle down Chriſt's cheeks in the day he wore the crown of thorns for me? But how ſlowly do the tears fall from my eyes when I commemorate his dying love; Can I ſhed tears in plenty for a dead child! and have I reſerved none for a ſlain Saviour? Yea ſlain for my ſins! How ſad is it to ſee ſo many weeping eyes at a funeral, and ſo many dry eyes at a communion-table: Alas, this is a ſad ſign of few looking by faith to him we have pierced! few ſenſible of the evil of their ſins that were the hammers which drove in the nails into his body. O for a realizing act of faith, repreſenting all that the Lamb of God ſuffered, in the greateſt certainty and cleareſt evidence, that it is no deviſed fable. O for an applying and appropriating act of faith, to bring all home to myſelf, and ſay, He loved me, and gave himſelf for me!

What a hard heart is this I have beyond others! Can I ſee others weeping and mourning over a ſlain Saviour, that ſit at the ſame table, eat the ſame bread, and drink the ſame cup with me, and cannot I get one tear! Is God come with his bottle waiting for my tears? Do others pour into it plentifully, and have I not one tear to drop into God's bottle? Lord, what means the hardneſs of my heart, and the dryneſs of my eyes, at the ſight of my Saviour's bleeding and dying for my ſins? When ſhould I mourn and weep if not now! Was there ever ſuch an occaſion for tears? Oh! doth God intend to reſerve weeping for me in hell, where tears ſhall never be dryed up! This is what I deſerve, if I be hard-hearted and dry eyed now. But, Lord pity my hardneſs, and give me ſuch a look as thou gaveſt Peter, that may cauſe me weep, and weep bitterly, at the remembrance of my ſins which pierced thee.

MEDITATION VIII.

From Luke xxii. 61, 62. The Lord looked upon Peter.— And Peter went out, and wept bitterly.

LORD, ſince my looks to thee are ſo ſlight, ſo wavering and inconſtant, that they make little or no impreſſion on my hard heart, do thou vouchſafe to look upon me with pity and with power; for thy looks are efficacious, and melt down the hardeſt heart. O give me ſuch a look as thou gaveſt Peter, when he denied thee, and began to curſe and ſwear: A look that may bring me to myſelf, and cauſe me weep, and weep bitterly, at the remembrance of my ſins, my unbelief, my pride, my paſſion, my diſobedience which pierced thee, my deareſt Lord and Saviour. Look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me, Pſal. cxix. 132. Chriſt's look to backſliding Peter was merciful, and full of compſſion; his bowels yearned for his poor diſciple, when ready to fall into the devil's arms by total and final backſliding, and prevents him ſpeedily. He would not let him ly long in that diſmal ſtate he fell into, as it were on the very brink of hell, but preſently plucks him back, and recovers him. In like manner, Lord look on me, and recover me ſpeedily when I fall into ſin, leſt my next ſtep be into hell.

Chriſt's look to Peter was a preventing look; he looked on Peter before Peter looked to his Saviour for mercy, and before he looked on himſelf, or upon his ſin, and the danger he was expoſed to by it. Glory to my Redeemer that watches over his people, ſees and minds their danger, when they themſelves are little thinking upon it; he is more careful of them than they are of themſelves. How marvellous was Chriſt's love, that would be ſo concerned about Peter at ſuch a time, when he himſelf was amidſt his bloody enemies, and upon trial for his life: Even then, as it were, he forgets his own danger, and takes notice of the danger of his ſervant: He being the great Shepherd of his ſheep, ventures all to reſcue one of his flock out of the mouth of the lion, and from the paw of the bear. O who would not deſire to belong to the flock of ſuch a faithful, loving, and compaſſionate Shephed!

The look Chriſt gave Peter was a convincing look; it laid open his ſin to him with all its aggravations, which made it very bitter to him. It ſpoke ſuch language to him as this; "O Peter, what haſt thou done? Haſt thou caſt off thy Saviour? And haſt thou ſaid, thou knoweſt not me, who knew thee from the womb, and am going to die for thee? Doſt thou not know me that called thee from thy nets, that impowered thee to preach the goſpel, and work-miracles, that kept thee from ſinking in the waters? Am I not he thou ſaweſt ſhining on mount Tabor? Even he thou ſaidſt thou wouldſt rather die than deny?" O for ſuch a convincing look from Chriſt, that would pierce and melt my heart, and make me weep bitterly both now and at his table, for my baſe ingratitude, in diſowning and piercing my dear Redeemer!

Chriſt's look to Peter was a powerful and overcoming look, it conquered his will, looſed him from the world and ſin, and made him yield preſently to Chriſt: He was not able to hold out a moment longer, but, like Joſeph, ſeeks a ſecret place to weep in. O how powerful is a look from Chriſt! it is ſufficient to bow the moſt ſtubborn will, and melt the hardeſt heart; it can turn the rock into ſtanding water, and the flint into a fountain of water, Pſal. cxiv. 8. How powerful was the look he gave to poor Jeruſalem when lying in their blood; a look that cauſed them to live, Ezek. xvi. 6. How powerful was the look he gave to Zaccheus on the ſycamore tree, Luke xix. 5. O for ſuch a look as would bring me preſently down, in like manner, from the ſycamore of my ſelf-conceit and ſelf-righteouſneſs, and from my beſt beloved ſins and idols, and cauſe me receive Chriſt joyfully into my heart, and go with chearfulneſs to his table, and receive the ſeal of his covenant, ſaying, My Lord, and my God.

Chriſt's look to Peter was a peculiar and diſtinguiſhing look; the power and grace of God went alongſt with it to change Peter's heart, and bring him to his right mind. Chriſt looked on many thouſands that were never the better of it. He looked on Judas after he betrayed him, and when he preſumed to kiſs him, and reproved him too for his baſe treachery: But neither that look nor reproof melted his heart. As the beams of the ſame very ſun hardens clay and ſoftens frozen earth; ſo a look from the ſame Jeſus, the Sun of righteouſneſs, left Judas hard and impenitent, whilſt it ſoftened Peter's heart. The one went on in his villany, whilſt the other relented, and melted into tears. Why? he looked but on the face of Judas, but he looked on the heart of Peter. He looked upon the one with a frowning judicial look, but looked upon the other with a recovering and drawing look. Chriſt's look to Peter was accompanied with the inward influences of his Spirit on his heart, otherwiſe it had been ineffectual. Oh, if he would vouchſafe ſuch a gracious look to my frozen heart, and ſoften it! I would fain bring my hard heart and lay it before this bleſſed Sun, and wait until he draw by the cloud, look through, and ſhine upon it. Lord, I tremble to go to thy table with this hard heart, leſt thou ſhould look on me with anger, as thou didſt upon theſe, Mark iii 5. upon account of the hardneſs of their hearts. Lord, I deſire to be grieved for my heart hardneſs, and to look to thee whom I have pierced by it. Give ſuch a look to my heart as thou gave to Peter's, melt it down into penitential tears, and cauſe me to go aſide and weep bitterly.

Chriſt's look cauſed Peter to remember and think upon Chriſt's words to him. It is in and by his word that he works upon ſinners hearts. O if the Spirit would bring the word to my mind, ſet it powerfully home upon my conſcience, and ſo give the happy turn to my ſoul. Lord help me, to lay up thy words, and ponder them in my heart; and O bring them always ſeaſonably to my view, that when I fall, I may not ly long under ſin, nor continue in a ſtate of backſliding from thee. May I have ſuch a look from thee, as ſhall look all my idols out of countenance, and look my wandering heart into a right frame for the covenanting and communicating work: A look that ſhall put new life in all my drooping graces, and kindle ſuch a flame of love to Chriſt in my heart, and of indignation againſt ſin, as all the devils in hell ſhall never be able to quench. A look that ſhall make me weep, while I live for piercing Chriſt the Lamb.

Oh, ſhall others ſhed tears in plenty for ſin, and my eyes remain dry? Shall others get their hearts broken, and mine continue hard! Lord, thy grace is free; O how eaſy were it for thee to melt my heart, and moiſten my eyes: One touch of thy hand, nay one look of thy countenance, one caſt of thine eye is ſufficient to do it. O turn unto me, and give me one merciful look; for thy ordinance will be lifeleſs, and loſt unto me, if thou look not on me. How can I go to thy table to behold Jeſus, my Surety, all red with blood for my red and ſcarlet-coloured ſins, while my heart doth not mourn, nor my eyes run down? Surely the ſtreams of my Saviour's blood deſerve to be lamented with tears of blood, and ſhall I not do it, at leaſt with tears of water? Was he wounded for my tranſgreſſions, and ſhall not my heart bleed, and eyes weep for his wounds given him by my ſins?

MEDITATION IX.

From Math. xv. 27. And ſhe ſaid, Truth, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs.

THis woman was a Canaanite, and lived among heathens, yet ſhe had greater knowledge and faith of the Meſſiah than moſt of the Jews. Her faith, humility, patience and reſolution, amidſt the greateſt diſcouragements, are here recorded for a pattern and encouragement to diſponding believers in all ages.

This woman was ſo ſenſible of her miſery, that ſhe addreſſes Chriſt with great earneſtneſs for help: She doth not ſpeak calmly or coldly to Chriſt, but ſhe cried unto him, and followed him with her cries, ver. 22, 23. Surely, if I were duly affected with my ſpiritual wants and miſeries, I would ſpeak to God in no other language than that of cries and tears. O what cauſe have I to bewail my coldneſs and indifferency in prayer, and the little ſenſe I have of my dangers and neceſſities, which are great beyond expreſſion.

This woman, notwithſtanding of her great earneſtneſs and ſtrong faith, met with very great trials and diſcouragements in her addreſſes to Chriſt.

1. Her firſt trial is Chriſt's ſilence to her, when crying to him for mercy, ver. 23. He anſwered her not a word. Strange! not a word from a meek and merciful Saviour, that never put a poor ſinner, ſeeking for mercy, away from him before; but ſtill invited all to come to him for it. That is a ſore temptation, Lam. iii. 8. When I cry and ſhout, he ſhutteth out my prayer. Believers are apt to think that God ſhuts out their prayers in wrath, when it is not ſo. Chriſt heard this woman, accepted her, was pleaſed with her, and ſtrengthened her to hold on in prayer, tho' he did not immediately anſwer her. He entertained her with ſilence to draw her on to be more importunate, and to try her faith, patience and perſeverance, and thereby to teach us to be followers of thoſe who through faith and patience do now inherit the promiſes. Chriſt keeps the door bolted for a time, that we may knock the harder, Math. vii. 7. Aſk, ſeek, knock. The choiceſt mercies come to us after the greateſt wreſtlings. Likewiſe I ſee here, that there is love in Chriſt's heart to wreſtling ſouls, even when frowns appear in his looks; wherefore let me take encouragement from him, though he ſlay me, yet to truſt in him.

2. Another ſore trial the woman met with, was the anſwer Chriſt gave his diſciples when interceeding for her, whereby he ſeems to exclude her out of his commiſſion, ver. 24. I am not ſent but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael. The Jews were called ſheep, but the Gentiles, dogs. The Jews were indeed to have the firſt offer of Chriſt's grace and purchaſe. Though the woman might have taken Chriſt's words as a plain repulſe, yet ſhe ſtudies to put the beſt ſenſe on them ſhe can, and continues her importunity. Which teacheth us never to leave the throne of grace for any diſcouragement.

3. She gets a repulſe yet more ſharp than the two former, even after ſhe had come cloſe up to him, and fallen down at his feet, ſaying, Lord, help me. Then it is Chriſt ranks her among the dogs, theſe that were without the covenant profane and unclean. Now, one might think, ſhe is cut off by that word, and will inſiſt no more after it. Nay, ſhe takes hold of that word of reproach, and pleads upon it in the text, Truth, Lord, I am a dog, vile and unworthy; yet let me humbly aſk the dogs room and privilege, even to creep beneath the childrens table, and gather ſome crumbs of mercy. O how much is contained here for our inſtruction and imitation!

1ſt, What cauſe have we, O Lord, to bleſs thy goodneſs, that we Gentiles, of dogs are now become children, and allowed to come to thy table! And, at the ſame time to fear thy juſtice, ſince the Jews, of children, are now become dogs, and ſhut out as unclean! If they were cut of who crucified thee in thy low eſtate, what may we expect, if, by our ſins we crucify thee in thy glory? Let us not be high-minded, but fear.

2dly, Chriſt puts the ſtrongeſt faith of his people upon the ſharpeſt trials: He thinks fit, for his own glory, where he gives much grace, to try grace much.

6thly, When our diſcouragements are greateſt, we ſhould learn, from this woman, never to give over the exerciſe of faith and prayer; but to look on all our diſappointments in the ſucceſs of prayer, as excitements to greater earneſtneſs in prayer. Faith will not ſet limits to the holy One; though ſpeedy anſwers be not given to our prayers, it becomes us to wait on God's time, who is the beſt Judge of the fitteſt ſeaſon: He that believeth will not make haſte. Why? he knows his extremity is God's fit opportunity.

7thly, A reſolute adhering to Chriſt by faith under trials is moſt pleaſing and acceptable to him; as when we perſevere in the uſe of means when ſucceſs is ſmall, when we depend upon his promiſe, and look to his power; when under the darkeſt diſpenſations we watch over our hearts and ſteps, that they do not decline from his ways, as theſe in Pſal. xliv. 17. 18. And, glory to him that gives us ſuch encouragement for this reſolute adherence to him, as the mercifulneſs of his nature, and his faithfulneſs, which aſſure us, there is more good-will in his heart than is viſible in his dealings; and that his providence will never give his word the lie. He gives in ſecret ſtrength to his people to adhere to him, when he ſeems moſt oppoſite to them, as he did to this woman. He loves to bring about his peoples mercies by means improbable and contrary, to glorify his wiſdom. He delights to bring light out of darkneſs.

8thly, Great will the reward at laſt be of the believer's faith, humility and perſeverance in prayer; for, ſaith Chriſt at length, ver. 28. O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt.

MEDITATION X.

From 1 Cor. xi. 24. This do in remembrance of me.

O My ſoul, here is a ſolemn ordinance inſtituted for keeping up the remembrance of a crucified Jeſus; and behold it was appointed by himſelf, when he was juſt a-going to do more for us than all the angels of heaven could have done, even to make atonement for our ſins by his death and ſufferings; and he twice repeats his dying charge to us, ver. 24. and 25. This do, this do ye. Men uſe to regard the commands of their dying friends, and perform their wills religiouſly; and ſhall not I with pleaſure obey the will and command of a dying Redeemer, when the thing he requires is ſo eaſy and agreeable, to eat and drink at his table in remembrance of him? If I forget thee, O Friend of ſinners, let my right-hand forget its cunning, &c.

Our loving Redeemer well knew the treachery of our memories, the worldlineſs of our hearts, and inconſtancy of our affections, that we would be ready to let his death and love ſlip out of our thoughts, and therefore he would have the ſigns of his ſufferings frequently preſented to our eyes. Alas! for the curſed ingratitude of my heart, that is ſo apt to forget him that remembred me when there was none to pity me: but glory to him that takes ſuch pains to cure my forgetfulneſs, by ſetting forth Chriſt crucified ſo evidently before my eyes in the broken bread and poured out wine in the ſacrament.—I look upon this ordinance as a viſible repreſentation and commemoration of my Saviour's death and ſufferings for his people, which he will have continued till he come again to judgment. It is like a marble pillar ſet up upon his grave, with an inſcription bearing account of his glorious atchievements and mighty deeds, his glorious ſufferings, conflicts and victories for his people.—Wherefore, as oft as he calls me, I will go thither, and put all the honour and reſpect I can upon my kind Benefactor; I will remember his love, proclaim his worth, and publiſh his praiſes. I'll hereby own myſelf before the world to be one of his diſciples, and a follower of the Lamb. I'll declare my abhorrence of ſin that pierced him, and my gratitude to the Lamb for the atoning ſacrifice he offered up for me upon the croſs. I'll triumph in this as the only ground of my hope. I'll put the crown on his head, and caſt all my crowns down at his feet, and cry, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, and has redeemed me from my ſins by his blood; worthy is he to receive all honour, power, glory and dominion for ever and ever.

Glory to my dear Saviour, that ſeeks no greater return for all his labour of love, than a thankful remembrance of it at his table. Oh, ſhould I grudge to give ſuch a ſmall return to him that ſuffered the pains of death and hell for me! Had he bid me ſacrifice my firſt-born, gave all I have to the poor, or go in pilgrimage to the Holy Land to viſit his ſepulchre, or go to the top of mount Calvary where the croſs ſtood, as a token of thankfulneſs for his love, could I have refuſed it! But he puts me to no ſuch hard taſk.——Lord, thou bids me not go to a bloody ſcaffold to remember thee, but to a well-covered table to do it. Thou bids me not go there to bleed or burn for thee, but to eat and drink; not the bread of affliction or water of adverſity, but bread that ſtrengthens the heart, and wine that cheers the drooping ſpirit, bread and wine which thou haſt ſanctified and bleſſed for me.——Surely, O dear Saviour, I owe my life to thee, nay, a thouſand lives if I had them; but it is not my life, but my memory and thoughts, thou art calling for; it is not to die for thee, but to remember thee.——Didſt thou drink a cup of wrath on the croſs for me, and will not I drink a cup of bleſſing at the table for thee, nay for myſelf, and for my eternal ſalvation!

Let me go then to this holy table, with faith, love and thankfulneſs, to remember Chriſt and his dying love, as he commands me. And while I remember him, let me alſo receive and embrace him, as my bleeding High Prieſt, in the arms of my faith, and at the ſame time throw my guilty ſoul into his wounded arms, for ſaving me from wrath.——Let me go and remember the woundings and piercings of my Redeemer, with a pierced and wounded heart for theſe curſed ſins which nailed and killed the Prince of life. Let me henceforth be the death of ſin, which was the death of my dear Saviour. Oh, ſhall I ſuffer ſin to live any longer in me, that would not ſuffer my Redeemer to live in the world!

But let me conſider my High Prieſt before-hand, and what of his ſufferings I ſhould remember at his table.——I'll remember how the glorious Heir of all things denuded himſelf of his riches and glory, how he left his throne of majeſty to lodge in a virgin's womb; yea, to be born among beaſts, and cradled in a manger, for ſuch a worm as me.——I'll remember how he was attacked by the devil, contradicted by ſinners, and reproached by the world for my ſake!——I'll remember how ſorrowful his ſoul was in the garden, when the bitter cup was put in his hand; and how he ſwate, how he prayed, how he fell to the ground, till he was quite overwhelm'd with wrath, and cover'd with his own blood for my ſake!——I'll remember how he was ſold for a ſmall price, and baſely betrayed by Judas; how he was taken by the ſoldiers, tied as a malefactor with cords, denied by Peter, forſaken by all his diſciples, and left alone among his cruel inſulting enemies. I'll remember how he was blindfolded, mocked, ſpit upon, buffeted and affronted by ruffians a whole night, and patiently ſuffered all for my ſake! I'll remember how his lovely countenance was disfigured with blows, and the plucking the hair off his cheeks; and how the ſweeteſt face ever the ſun ſaw, was all beſmeared with blood and ſpitting for my ſake.——I'll remember how he that clothes the lillies of the field, was himſelf ſtript naked, bound to a pillar and cruelly ſcourged, till the pavement of Pilate's judgment-hall was all bedewed with his precious blood.——I'll remember how the crown of thorns was platted with the ſharp points turned inward, put upon his head, and driven into his temples with a reed, till they pierced his ſkull in many places, and a new ſhower of blood run down his bleſſed neck.——I'll remember how the heavy croſs-tree was laid upon his ſcourged and bleeding ſhoulders, and he made to carry it thro' the ſtreets of Jeruſalem, forth of the gates, and up mount Calvary, to the place of execution, until his ſtrength was ſpent, and he foundered under the burden.——I'll remember how the croſs tree was laid down, and my Saviour ſtript naked and ſtretched out upon it as a rack; and how he was faſtened to it with four big iron nails through his hands and feet, and the croſs lifted up and let fall into a deep hole digg'd for the foot of it, to the violent rending and widening of his ſacred wounds by which he hang, until all his blood ſtream'd forth at them, and he expired amidſt the moſt exquiſite tortures.

I'll remember alſo the ſufferings of his ſoul at that time, when the Lord ran upon him as a giant, and made his ſoul the butt of his envenom'd arrows, the poiſon whereof drank up his ſpirits, until his ſtrength was dried up like a potſherd.——I'll remember how his ſoul was troubled and non-pluſſed at the diſtant proſpect of this cup; and how ſore amazed he was ſoon after when it was put into his hand.——I'll remember how the taſting of it caſt him into a bloody ſweat and agony, which dyed his garments red, and bedewed the ground where he lay.——I'll remember how he was broken with breach upon breach, till all the ſea-billows of divine vengeance went over him, and the Lion of the tribe of Judah was made to roar under the ſtrokes and bruiſes of the flaming ſword, Pſal xxii. 1.——I'll remember the dreadful hidings of God's face he lay under, until he was made to cry, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?—I'll remember the inexorableneſs of divine juſtice, that would not ſpare him one ſtripe, bate him one farthing of the debt, nor one drop of the cup; ſo that he drank till he cried, It is finiſhed, and gave up the ghoſt. Glory to him for his love in finiſhing the work.

MEDITATION XI.

From Philip. i. 23. For I am in a ſtrait betwixt two—

AS the apoſtle was in a ſtrait whether to chuſe to die or live, ſo I am in a ſtrait whether to go to the Lord's table, or ſtay back. Now, thou calleſt me, Lord, to celebrate the memorials of thy death, yea, to feaſt with thee at thy holy table, and I know not what to chuſe; I am in a ſtrait betwixt two. My heart is ſo unholy, and my unworthineſs ſo great, I tremble to go forward to feaſt with a God ſo holy, and whoſe purity is infinite; and yet my wants are ſo many, and my neceſſities ſo great, that my caſe is hopeleſs if I ſtay back! Lord, I can go to none elſe in all the world to ſupply my needs, but to thyſelf alone.—But oh, when I think of going forward, my guilt ſtops my mouth, and fills me with bluſhing. Lord, if the holy angels, theſe pure and unſpotted ſeraphims, who burn in zeal for thy ſervice, muſt even cover their faces before thee; how ſhall I venture into thy preſence, I whoſe zeal is ſo languiſhing, whoſe love is ſo cold, whoſe mind is ſo earthly, and prayers ſo dull? Shall I approach ſo near a holy God in ſuch a caſe? But what then ſhall I do! Shall I join with theſe worldlings who were bidden to the feaſt of the great King, refuſe, and make my excuſe? Then I fear the King will be angry, declare me unworthy to taſte of his ſupper, yea, ſwear in his wrath that I ſhall never enter into his reſt.

Lord, I abhor myſelf for my unworthineſs and vileneſs, my guilt and pollution; but where ſhall I go to get help and remedy for it, but unto thee alone? Haſt thou not bidden me come, though my ſins be red as crimſon? Have not many ſuch come to thee, and found relief and help? Surely, O Lord, thy goodneſs is greater than my ſinfulneſs, and thy mercy ſurpaſſeth my miſery; for though my ſins reach even to the clouds, yet thy mercy is above the heavens. O merciful Father, extend thy free, boundleſs mercy to a miſerable, helpleſs ſinner: Surely miſery is the proper object of mercy. Holy God, if thou help me not for the ſake of my miſeries which I have deſerved, yet help me for the ſake of thy mercies which thou haſt promiſed in Chriſt thy dear Son. Wherefore I plead for Chriſt's ſake that thou wilt hear the cry of my miſeries, and not the cry of my ſins. O doth not his precious blood cry louder for pardon, than my ſins for puniſhment? Lord hear the cry of that blood, and let it not be as water ſpilt upon the ground. For the ſake of that prevalent blood, pity, pardon, and accept a poor unworthy creature, that deſires to obey thy call, and prepare his heart to ſeek thee, tho' he be not cleanſed according to the purification of the ſanctuary.

O Lord, though I may be aſhamed to come to thee, my needs are ſo preſſing and pinching that I cannot ſtay away. To whom ſhall I go but unto thee, for thou haſt the words of eternal life? The whole creation cannot ſupply my wants. Thou only art my Sun, from whoſe beams I muſt receive ſaving light: Thou art my Head, from whom I muſt get ſpiritual life: Thou art my Root, from which I muſt derive ſap and growth: Thou art the Fountain from which I muſt draw living water: Thou art the Treaſure from which I muſt obtain the riches of grace. So that without thee I am nothing, I have nothing, I can do nothing.——To thee then I muſt go for all my ſupplies, and out of thy fulneſs receive grace for grace.——Lord, thou haſt enough to ſupply many worlds of needy ſouls; for the ſun is not ſo full of light, nor the ſea ſo full of water, as thou art full of grace and mercy to needy creatures: and as thou art full, ſo, I am aſſured, thou art free, and willing to communicate thy fulneſs.—In ſpite then of all objections and difficulties, forward to thee I will go, and caſt myſelf down at thy feet; if I periſh, I periſh. Oh! did ever any periſh at mercy's door?

Lord, I have heard of thy mercy to the very chief of ſinners, and cannot this mercy reach the like of me? Surely the viler ſinner I am, thou haſt the fairer opportunity to ſhew the riches of thy mercy, the freeneſs of thy love, and the efficacy of thy blood; and if I be allowed to ſhare therein, the ſweeter and louder will the eternal hallelujahs be, that will be ſung to the Lamb of God on my account. O that he would glorify his mercy, his love and blood, in my relief O where ſhall a poor heavy laden ſinner go but to him that can free him of his burden? Where ſhall I go with a multitude of ſins and miſeries, but to thee who haſt a multitude of tender mercies? Where ſhall I go with my deep and heinous guilt, but to thee who haſt a deep fountain to waſh it away? Behold one depth called to another, the depth of my miſery to the depth of thy mercy? My wound is great, but thy balm is excellent! My ſore is broad, but thy plaiſter is anſwerable! O Lord be merciful to me, heal my ſoul, for I have ſinned againſt thee.

Lord, is not the goſpel-feaſt I am invited to, a feaſt of charity, to which thou calleſt not the rich, but the poor, maimed, halt and blind, who cannot make any return for thy bounty? And may not ſuch a miſerable object as I am, take encouragement from ſuch a free extenſive invitation? Luke xiv. 21.——My bleſt Redeemer, while he was on earth, did not diſdain to eat with publicans and ſinners, nor to dine with Simon a leper. And though he is now exalted in the higheſt heavens, yet he ſtill retains the bowels of a man, and all the pity and charity to periſhing ſinners he had while here in his ſtate of humiliation. Wherefore, ſenſible of my unworthineſs, loathing myſelf for my vileneſs, and truſting to my Saviour's compaſſion to the miſerable, I deſire to go forward to his holy table: O that he would direct and ſtrengthen me to go about ſuch a weighty work! Let not that ordinance, which God hath inſtituted for a bleſſing, be made a curſe to me through my unworthy partaking. Lord, rebuke all unſeaſonable thoughts and wanderings that would mar the duty; excite and actuate in me every proper grace, and enable me to manage ſo, that I may not diſhonour, but glorify thee; I may not increaſe my guilt, but augment my grace; I may not bring more hardneſs, but ſoftneſs into my heart. Lord, deſcend thou into my heart by the influences of thy Spirit, that I may aſcend unto thee by the actings of grace; and when the King ſits at his table, let my ſpikenard ſend forth the ſmell thereof. Lord, I look to thee for ſtrength, conduct and through-bearing, in every ſtrait. I truſt not in my preparation, but in thy free mercy for acceptance; I truſt not in my faith, but in thy faithfulneſs, who haſt promiſed to give power to the faint; I truſt not in my repentance, but in thy free pardoning mercy; I truſt not in my doings, but in Chriſt's doings. O take away my filthy garments, and clothe me with the beſt robe, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord God, I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of thine only. Awake, O north-wind, and come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden, that the ſpices may flow out. If thy preſence go not with me, carry me not up hence.

The Lord made a breach on the Iſraelites, for not ſeeking him after the due order, 1 Chron. xv. 13.—He ſmote 50,000 of the Bethſhemites for an irreverent look into the ark, which typified Chriſt, and what cauſe have I then to fear a ſtroke, ſhould I raſhly touch the ſymbols of his body and blood?—Seeing this ordinance is intended for doing honour to the King of Zion, O ſave me from doing indignity to him, by betraying him with a kiſs, or by throwing his picture, or great ſeal, into a puddle.—May I ſo prepare for this feaſt, that the bleſſed Maſter of it may ſee I am watchful of his eye, tender of his honour, and fearful of his anger. Lord, awake my heart, ſtir up my graces, and prepare me for a meeting with my Saviour, and let not my ſoul, whoſe only hope is to be ſaved by Chriſt's blood, be ſent away from his table with the guilt, inſtead of the benefit, of that blood upon it.

MEDITATION XII.

From Philip. iv. 19. But my God ſhall ſupply all your need, according to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus.

HEavenly Father, out of thy rich bounty thou waſt pleaſed once to lay up a great ſtock for me in my progenitors hands, but they very ſoon ſquandered it all away, ſo that I am become extremely poor and needy. Oh! what can I do in this indigent condition, but come back to thee for pity and new ſupplies?——For ever bleſſed be thy name, for the reviving news thou haſt publiſhed in the goſpel; that thou haſt now laid up a new ſtock for bankrupt ſinners in the hands of a Surety that cannot fail, and haſt erected a throne of grace for ſuch as I am to come to in time of need, where Chriſt Jeſus my Surety ſits, as commiſſioned by thee, with glorious riches to ſupply my wants.——Many are the needs which thou thinks fit to leave upon me, that I might have the more errands unto this throne, and that thou mayſt the oftener hear my voice. O pour out upon me a ſpirit of grace and ſupplication, and cauſe me delight in approaching to thee, and pouring out my wants before thee.

Behold, Lord, a needy creature, an object of pity, approaching to a liberal Saviour whoſe fulneſs is infinite! O how ſuitable is it to my wants which are great and innumerable! I am ſtarving and have no bread; I am naked and have no cloathing; I am wounded and have no cure; I am in debt and have no money; I am polluted and have no fountain; I am burdened and have no reſt; I have deſtroyed myſelf and can find no help in myſelf.——But yet there is help for me elſewhere; I have heard of the mercy of the King of Iſrael, and of the remedy he hath provided for theſe who are helpleſs, loſt and miſerable. Wherefore, though I be poor I will not deſpair, for thou art the Lord of the whole world, and haſt opened thy treaſures to the needy: Though I be polluted, I will not diſpond, for thou haſt the fountain of ſalvation: Though I be naked, I will not with Adam run from thee, and hide myſelf; nay, I will run to thee to cover me with the wool and fleece of the Lamb of God, even the ſpotleſs righteouſneſs and innocence of my Saviour: Though I be hungry and ſtarving, I will take encouragement from the glad tidings thou haſt proclaimed in the goſpel of a rich feaſt for the poor and needy.—Lord, I come to thee as the hungry to be fed, as the naked to be cloathed, as the wounded to be healed, as the cold ſtarving creature to the fire, as the unclean to be waſhed in the Fountain that is opened not to the houſe of David only, but even to the pooreſt inhabitant in Jeruſalem. Glory to God that it is ſo free and open to the poor and needy.

Lord, I come not to thy table, becauſe I am worthy; but becauſe thou art rich in mercy, and doſt promiſe that "the needy ſhall not be forgotten, and the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh." And that "when the poor and needy ſeek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, thou the Lord wilt hear them, and open rivers in the wilderneſs, and fountains in midſt of the vallies." O come, do as thou haſt ſaid, pity a poor, needy periſhing creature, and fill my narrow veſſel out of the ocean of thy mercy, where it will not be miſſed.—Come to the feaſt of thine own appointment, and diſplay thy fulneſs and liberality. Caſt open the doors of thy treaſures, and allow me acceſs to Chriſt's unſearchable riches.—Thy word, Lord, doth aſſure me, that in all ages thou haſt beſtowed theſe riches upon the poor and needy, without money, and without price. And this doth warrant me to plead with thee to come to thy houſe, where many needy beggars are gathered, and ſcatter thy bounty among them, and admit me to gather with them.—O let not ſuch a miſerable object go from thy door without an alms, without a crumb of the childrens bread, ſeeing there is bread enough in thy houſe, and to ſpare. O let none return aſhamed from the Fountain who come expecting water. Thou haſt promiſed to pour water upon the thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground. Oh, is there any more dry, more poor, more needy than I am! Lord, make me as thirſty as I am dry, as humble as I am poor, and as ſenſible as I am needy. Alas, that I have ſo little ſenſe of my wants! Oh, deal not with me according to my ſenſe of need, which is ſmall, but deal with me according to my real need, and thy royal bounty, which is exceeding great.

O that I were poor and needy in my own eyes, and truly ſenſible of my own wants: that I am drowned in debt to the law and juſtice of God, owe many thouſands, and have not one farthing to pay: That I am deſtitute of every thing that is good, can do nothing to pleaſe God, and am unworthy of the leaſt of his mercies. O that I were made willing to quit all confidence in my own righteouſneſs, duties, frames or attainments; and well content to go intirely out of myſelf to Chriſt, for righteouſneſs to juſtify me, and for his Spirit and grace to renew and ſanctify my nature

Lord, I am poor, but I ſee God has treaſured up unſearchable riches, and infinite fulneſs in Jeſus Chriſt to anſwer all my needs;—I am naked, but I ſee in Chriſt a robe of righteouſneſs, that is ſufficient to cover me, and a whole elect world;—I am a ſtarving creature, but in Chriſt there is the bread of life, and the waters of life for my ſoul;—I am fooliſh and ignorant, but Chriſt hath infinite wiſdom to teach me and guide me;—I am loaden with guilt, but Chriſt's ſacrifice is ſufficient to atone for it;—I have ſtrong luſts and corruptions, but Chriſt hath a kingly power to ſubdue them;—I am under much darkneſs, but Chriſt is the light of the world;—I am under fears and diſcouragements, but Chriſt is the Conſolation of Iſrael;—I am wounded and ſick, but Chriſt, my Phyſician, hath excellent balm for me;—I am under a burden of debt, but Chriſt, my Surety, is rich, and fully able to pay it;—I am in priſon, and under bonds, but Chriſt opens priſon doors, and looſes them that are bound;—I am fatherleſs, by Adam's fall, but Chriſt is the everlaſting Father in whom the fatherleſs find mercy;—I have many enemies to purſue and accuſe me, as law, juſtice, ſatan, and conſcience; but Chriſt my Advocate can anſwer them all:—Therefore I flee to him for refuge, I cloſe with him in all his offices, and put my whole confidence in him.

It gives great encouragement to my poor needy ſoul, that I have a Saviour ſo full of goodneſs and pity to look to, a mighty agent in heaven to plead my cauſe, and to preſent my bills, petitions and ſupplications to the Father. I put all my requeſts and concerns in his hand, and commit them to his care and management; he knows the fitteſt time to preſent them, and to ſend me an anſwer. In the ſacrament I ſwear allegiance to thee, as my Sovereign Lord and King, over thy broken body and ſhed blood; I engage to be a true and faithful ſoldier in thy army, and to take the field againſt thy enemies. Many pieces of furniture do I need for this warfare; I need the girdle of ſincerity, the ſhield of faith, the helmet of hope, the ſword of the Spirit, the breaſt plate of righteouſneſs, and to have my feet ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel of peace. But glory to thy name, my Redeemer and Captain of ſalvation hath provided a noble armoury and ſtore-houſe to anſwer all theſe my neceſſities and wants. Lord, ſupply all my needs out of thy infinite fulneſs, and furniſh me with every thing requiſite and neceſſary for the work and warfare thou calleſt me unto. Oh, my enemies are lively, and they are ſtrong: But I look to my glorious Captain, to gird me with ſtrength for the battle, and to teach my hands to war.

MEDITATION XIII.

From Epheſ. iii. 19. And to know the love of CHRIST, which paſſeth knowledge.

WHere ſhall I begin my thoughts upon the ſubject of the love of Chriſt to men? And when begun, how ſhall I make an end? It hath a breadth and length, a depth and height, that paſſeth knowledge. If the apoſtle Paul, that had the brighteſt diſcoveries of this love, owned this, much more may I. I may ſooner find out the height of heaven, the breadth of the earth, or the depth of the ſea, than meaſure Chriſt's love. It is an unfathomable ocean that hath neither bank nor bottom. O whither did his love carry him! From the height of glory to the depth of miſery. How low and deep was our fall, that nothing could recover and raiſe us up, but the low abaſement of the Son of God, the King of glory! How low was the ſtep he made to help us up; even to put on our nature and ſuffer himſelf to be pierced for our tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for our iniquities! Bleſſed Lord, thou tookeſt not on thee the nature of angels, but the ſeed of Abraham; theſe are faſt bound up from thee with chains of darkneſs, whilſt thou draweſt us to thee with cords of love! How diſtinguiſhing was thy love to man, that brought thee from heaven to earth, from the throne to the manger, from the manger to the wilderneſs, from the wilderneſs to the garden, from the garden to the judgment hall, from the judgment-hall to the croſs, from the croſs to the grave; yea, from the glory of heaven, to the very torments of hell, and all for creatures that were black and ugly as hell! How wonderful is the ſight thou calleſt me to ſee at the Lord's table! even to ſee him ſuffering for ſin that never committed ſin! To ſee him made ſin for us, who knew no ſin, that we, who knew no righteouſneſs, might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him! An amazing ſight indeed!

Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him! O what is he that thou ſhouldſt magnify and ſet thy heart on him! And what am I, the worſt of men, and vileſt of ſinners, that thou ſhouldſt ſtoop ſo low to exalt me! That thou ſhouldſt endure the poverty of this world, that I might enjoy the riches of heaven! Be content to live in the form of a ſervant, that I might have the adoption of ſons! Be willing to bow thyſelf unto death, to raiſe me to eternal life! Content to be numbered among tranſgreſſors, that I might have a room among the bleſſed! To be crowned with thorns, that I might be crowned with glory! To be condemned before men, that I might be juſtified before God! To drink the bitter cup of wrath, that I might drink the pure river of life! To cry out in ſorrow upon the croſs, that I might triumph with joy upon the throne! To ſtand before the mouth of hell-furnace to keep its flames from breaking out on me! O Lord Jeſus, thy love hath overflown all banks, and thy compaſſion knew no bounds! Can I think on it and my heart not burn! Can I ſpeak of it and not be overcome, ſo as to ſeek, with Joſeph, a ſecret place to weep in!

O love that paſſeth knowledge? How ſhall I think of it, and not ſtand amazed! that the General ſhould die for the ſoldier, the Phyſician for the patient! That the righteous Judge of heaven ſhould come to the bar, put himſelf in the malefactor's clothes, and be condemned for him! That the bleſſed Son of God ſhould interpoſe his innocent breaſt to receive the mortal ſtroke for us! That God all ſufficient ſhould be expoſed to hunger and thirſt, to grief and wearineſs, and the vileſt reproaches and indignities for worms like us! Behold the Creator of the world wounded, mangled and killed by ungrateful creatures whom he came to ſave! Behold his bowels yearning towards them who raked in them with their bloody hands! Behold his heart burning with affection toward them that cruelly pierced it! Surely a believing view of this love of Chriſt is ſufficient to mollify a heart more cold and frozen than ice itſelf! O love unfathomable! Who can meaſure its dimenſions! It hath a hieght without a top, a depth without a bottom, a breadth without a ſide, a length without end! Aſtoniſhing love! that my exalted Lord ſhould ſtoop ſo low as become a man; nay, a poo man, a man of ſorrows, a deſerted man, a dying ma and alſo a dead man, for ſuch a wretch as me! Nay, more, that he ſhould ſtoop to be made a curſe, and underly a dreadful load of wrath upon his innocent ſoul, infinitely more heavy than what is laid upon any damned ſoul in hell!

O what a ſea of wrath did my loving Jeſus ſwim through, to ſave me from periſhing! Behold how that raging ſea wrought and was tempeſtuous, roared moſt terribly, and threatened to ſwallow me up with the reſt of the elect world; till once my Redeemer ſtept in, and undertook to be the Sacrifice for calming the ſea! Take me up, (ſaid he like Jonah) and throw me into the ſea, and ye ſhall be all ſafe. In this red-ſea our bleſſed Jonah was content to ſwim for thirty-three years, without ſeeking deliverance, till once the ſea was perfectly calm, and every elect ſoul out of danger. Marvellous loving-kindneſs! Oh that I could, with a ſuitable frame of heart, both remember and admire redeeming love, and redeeming blood, when I go to ſit down at my Redeemer's table. O that I may there get faith's ſight of the various inſtances of his love, that paſſeth knowledge. Let me there view Chriſt in the womb, and in the manger; in his weary ſteps and hungry bowels; in his proſtrations in the garden, and clotted drops of bloody ſweat. Let me view his head with a crown of thorns, and his face beſmeared with the ſoldiers ſpitt. Let me view him in his march to Calvary, and his elevation upon a painful croſs, with his head bowed down, and his ſide ſtreaming blood! O unparalleled love! It had been wonderful love to have ſent one of the lofty ſeraphims to ſuffer for us; but to give him whom all the ſeraphims ſerve and adore, is love that paſſeth knowledge! Let me view the Scripture-deſignations and titles of him that loved us, and gave himſelf for us, that he might waſh us in his blood.

He is our Immanuel, the Wonderful, the Counſellor, the Mighty God, the Everlaſting Father, the Prince of peace, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, the Prince of the kings of the earth, the Lord of glory, the Roſe of Sharon, the Plant of renown, the Brightneſs of his Father's glory, the expreſs Image of his Perſon, the bright and Morning ſtar, the Sun of righteouſneſs, the Light of the world, the Head of the Church, the Beginning and Firſt born from the dead, the appointed Heir of all things. This is he that loved us, and gave himſelf to die for the redemption of a crew of rebels, grace-abuſing, and goſpel ſlighting ſinners! Oh! what am I that thou ſhouldeſt ſpare, yea ranſom and feaſt me in ſuch a manner! Long ago mightſt thou have ſhaken off the hand of thy providence ſuch a viper as I am into fire unquenchable; and there made me to know, to ſad experience, what it is to abuſe free grace, by the loſs of eternal glory.——But, inſtead of that, thou haſt pitied me, loved me, become my Surety, to appeaſe juſtice for my heinous ſins by thy blood, when no other ſacrifice would do. Lord, I welcome thy love-feaſt; I lay my hand on the head of thy Sacrifice, and reſt upon it; I believe, Lord, help my unbelief. O that I may henceforth live under the continual ſenſe of my infinite obligations to my glorious Surety, that would make his ſoul an offering for my ſin. O what return ſhall I give him for all his ſoul travail and agonies for me? O that I could ſpend my whole life, and each day of it, in magnifying his love, and living to his praiſe. Now, “bleſſed be his glorious name for ever and ever; let the whole earth be filled with his glory.” Amen, and Amen.

MEDITATION XIV.

From Luke xxii. 44. And being in an agony——his ſweat was as it were great drops of blood—

O My ſoul, this text affords thee great ſubject of thoughts, when thou goeſt to remember thy dear Saviour at his table. Here I ſee him in a bloody agony! And firſt, let me obſerve the place where his agony began, the garden of Gethſemane, which lay in the valley of Jehoſhaphat, on the eaſtſide of Jeruſalem, at the foot of the mount of Olives. Now, it was in the valley of Jehoſhaphat that God did plead with the nations in Chriſt their Surety, Joel iii. 2. The word Gethſemane ſignifies a mill or preſs for olives, as being probably the place where they preſſed the olives that grew on the mount, and there ſqueezed the oil out of them. In this place, it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe Chriſt our true Olive, that ſo out of his fulneſs the freſh oil of his merit and grace might flow abundantly to needy ſouls. Never was there ſuch an Olive preſſed there before ſince the firſt planting of that mount! Never was there ſuch precious oil ſeen as Jeſus's blood! O that I may partake of the root and fatneſs of that good Olive which was preſſed here, and of that oil, which will make my grace to grow, and my face to ſhine!

As it was in a garden that man's ſin and miſery firſt began, ſo it was in a garden that our bleſſed Surety began his laſt expiatory ſufferings for ſin, which caſt him into a fearful agony. As the garden of Eden produced man's miſery; ſo the garden of Gethſemane provided a remedy. O that when I walk and retire myſelf in a garden, I may have grace to think ſeriouſly, and with ſuitable affections upon the ſins of men, and the ſufferings of my Saviour for them! and, at the ſame time, to ſend up my ejaculations to God for an intereſt in his agony and atonement, and for the comfortable intimation thereof to my ſoul. When my dear Redeemer was in his agony of ſoul, I read of his offering up prayers and ſupplications to God, with ſtrong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7. And have I no prayers nor tears to offer up to God at the remembrance of his agony? eſpecially when I conſider how much my ſins contributed to throw him into it.——O how ſtrong and bitter were my Surety's cries at this time, when God bruiſed his ſoul, and poured down a flood of his wrath upon him! He cried, till he was ſpent with crying; he grew hoarſe with it, and his throat ſo dried, that he could cry no more, Pſal. lxix. 3. Now was his ſoul in travail, and great cauſe had he for his ſtrong crying and tears! He was ſilent under all the pains of his body, and under his ſufferings from men; all that time he is dumb as a ſheep before her ſhearers: But, behold, when fierce wrath from God alighted on his ſoul, he cried vehemently; and he prayed moſt earneſtly and importunately for ſupport and through-bearing under this terrible ſtorm. O that, from my Saviour's example I may learn, when under ſoul-trouble and inward diſtreſs, to make my prayers to God more earneſt and fervent, and to perſevere without fainting; which I have great encouragement to do from this, that my Saviour's fervent prayers and tears have made way for mine.

I obſerve alſo in this paſſage, that the agony of Chriſt's ſoul increaſed ſo much, that it produced a ſweat of blood over his body; yea, great drops or clods of blood, which, by his violent agony, burſt through his very clothes, and watered the ground where he lay. O what trouble and anguiſh, pangs and ſorrows, deſertions and ſtrugglings, muſt his ſoul have endured at this time under the burden of God's wrath for his peoples ſins, which put his ſacred body and blood into ſuch a dreadful commotion and ferment! O what a prodigious and preternatural ſweat was this! Never was the like heard of ſince the world began! According to the courſe of nature, Chriſt's lying in the open air, in a cold night, upon the cold ground, with the greatneſs of his conſternation, ſhould have drawn all his blood inward from the external parts of his body; but Chriſt's ſweating and bleeding was altogether preternatural. He ſwate without external heat, he bled without external wound. The fire of divine wrath now kindled in his ſoul, was ſo very hot and raging, that it made the blood about his heart to boil, and burſt through both fleſh and garments.——He had received, at this time, no wound nor external violence from any hand; no Judas, no ſoldier, no tormentor, had yet attacked him; no ſpear, no nail, no thorn or ſcourge had yet touched his ſacred body, and yet he bleeds moſt plentifully! Oh, but the ſword of juſtice had reached him, and made a deep wound and wide gaſh in his ſoul; at which breach a ſea of wrath brake in with ſuch violence, that it overwhelmed him; made him fall firſt on his knees, and then flat on the ground, where he lay agonizing and crying, till all the waves and billows of divine vengeance went over him. Oh, what a dreadful preſſure was my Saviour's ſoul under at this time! What ſqueezing anguiſh had he upon his heart, that made his body to ſtruggle, and ſweat in ſuch a manner, ſo that every pore of his body became a bleeding wound! O how awfully ſhould I be affected with this tragical ſight! How thankfully ſhould I remember my Redeemer's love, when he calls me to do it at his holy table!

In my Saviour's agony I may ſee, as in a glaſs, the malignant evil and curſed nature of ſin, that no leſs could atone for it, than the ſoul-travail and agony of the dear Son of God! Can I ever make light of ſin, when I view the great drops of blood ſtanding above his garments, while he lay groveling on the earth in the anguiſh of his ſoul! Shall I not henceforth abhor ſin, and ſtand in awe of offending a juſt and holy God, ſeeing it is ſuch a fearful thing to fall into his hands: If ſuch things were done in the green tree, what ſhall be done in the dry? Was the cup of wrath ſo terrible to the innocent human nature of Chriſt, when preſented to him, that he ſhrinked and cried out? O what will it be to guilty ſinners! Here I may ſee how coſtly the redemption of ſouls is; ere this could be compaſſed, God muſt become man, Eternity muſt ſuffer death, the Lord of angels muſt weep in a cradle, the Creator of the world muſt hang like a ſlave! He muſt lie in a manger at Bethlehem, cry in an agony at Gethſemane, die on a croſs at Calvary! Unſpotted Righteouſneſs muſt be made ſin, and unblemiſhed Bleſſedneſs muſt be made a curſe! O did Chriſt value ſouls at ſo high a rate! and ſhall men be ſo fooliſh as throw them away for a thing of nought?

Here I may ſee the great difficulty of making peace with God, when once his law is broken; no leſs could do it than the blood and ſoul-agony of the Son of God; even an infinite Ranſom muſt be paid ere God would be reconciled to man. O how much am I beholden to Chriſt that undertook the reconciliation, that prevented my ruin by taking the cup out of my hand! O the cup he drank for me was mingled with wrath and curſes, a cup full of vengeance, preſſed down, heaped up, ſhaken together, and running over; a cup, which if men or angels had but taſted, they had reeled, ſtaggered and fallen headlong into hell: Yet, ſaid Chriſt, ere any of my elect ones drink it, I will drink it for them; reach it hither to me bitter as it is.——Oh how ready was Chriſt to engage for men! and how willing was he to perform! How ready, full and free was his blood to waſh the defiled! Behold how freely it iſſued forth before a wound was opened; all his veins and pores poured it forth, without waiting for the tormentors. Lord make me as willing and ready to apply it. Did Chriſt wreſtle in an agony to obtain the redemption of loſt ſinners; and ſhall not I wreſtle as in an agony to get an intereſt in this redemption, and the evidence thereof cleared up to my ſoul! O for faith and fervency in prayer, that I may wreſtle without ceaſing for the aſſurance of his love, that I may go with joy to his table.

MEDITATION XV.

From Iſa. liii. 7. He opened not his mouth; he is brought as a Lamb to the ſlaughter.——

IT becomes me to read and conſider theſe words with great attention, ſeeing they were the occaſion of the Ethiopian eunuch's converſion; for it was while he read and thought on theſe words, that God ſent Philip to join him, Acts viii. 29. O that God would, in like manner, ſend his holy Spirit to join me while I am meditating on them.

1. I obſerve that Chriſt is the great Sacrifice provided by God to make atonement for our ſins: He is the great Antitype and ſubſtance of all the lambs and beaſts that were offered up in ſacrifice under the law, and therefore he is often in the New Teſtament called the Lamb, the Lamb of God, and the Lamb ſlain. The Spirit of God ſeems to have a peculiar delight in dwelling upon this type of the lamb, more than in any other of the Old-Teſtament types; and ſhould not I delight in it too, and often with pleaſure make mention of the Lamb, the worthy Lamb, that will be the object of the praiſes of ſaints and angels through all eternity?

2. Chriſt is repreſented by a lamb to point out the innocence of his perſon, the meekneſs of his nature, the uſefulneſs of his benefits, and his patience under ſufferings. How patient is the lamb under injuries! It is ſilent both before the ſhearer and the butcher; it parts with its fleece in ſhearing time, and with its life in ſlaughter time, without any noiſe or reſiſtance. Dogs and ſwine howl and cry when violence is offered to them, but the lamb is quite ſilent. So Chriſt the Lamb of God opened not his mouth, under the greateſt revilings, mockings, buffetings, ſpittings, piercings, and the moſt cruel death, which he ſuffered from men, 1 Pet. ii. 23. and hence it is ſaid in the text, when he was led to the ſlaughter, he opened not his mouth: He opened not his mouth, unleſs it was to bleſs, teach, or pray for theſe who injured him; yea, he not only did pray, but alſo plead an excuſe for them, Father forgive them, for they know not what they do. And after his reſurrection, how ready was this meek Lamb to forgive all that wronged him! When giving orders to preach remiſſion of ſins to a loſt world, he bids begin at Jeruſalem, Luke xxiv. 46. where they mocked and pierced him, becauſe there they had greateſt need of his blood to waſh them from guilt. How meekly did our bleſſed Lamb carry to Peter, when he denied him in his own hearing? He did not turn and frown upon Peter, as he well deſerved, though he might have frowned him into hell; it is ſaid only, He turned and looked on Peter, Luke xxii. 61. not with an angry look, but with an affectionate melting look, which recovered him to a penitent frame: Neither did he afterwards upbraid him with his carriage. O meek Lamb of God! can I remember thee at thy table without being filled with remorſe and grief for my impatience under injuries, and the proneneſs of my heart to reſent them? Shall I not be aſhamed of my unchriſtian temper, when I ſee my meek and loving Jeſus, willing to be the ſport and deriſion of men and devils, that he might be the author of ſalvation to periſhing ſouls? O, how aſtoniſhing is it to ſee the Creator affronted by the creature, the Potter by his clay, the King of glory by worms of the earth, and yet hold his peace! Now, is the Head ſo meek and patient, and ſhould not the members be ſo too! O how unſeemly is it to ſee a company of fierce lions following a meek Lamb! O that I could learn more of him that is meek and lowly in heart.

3. Here I ſee the greateſt inſtance of divine love that ever the world ſaw. Behold an offended God willing to ſpare wretched criminals, and take ſatisfaction from a Surety in their room; and he himſelf finds out the Lamb to be the ſacrifice, even his eternal Son, who willingly undertook to aſſume a body for that end. How aſtoniſhing are the Lamb's words, Heb x. 5 Sacrifice and offering thou wouldſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me; as if he had ſaid, “Father, ſince all the legal ſacrifices are inſufficient to ſatify thy juſtice, atone for ſin, and ranſom precious ſouls; even take the body thou haſt prepared for me, let that be the ſacrifice to juſtice; it is more valuable than any other, being the tabernacle of my divine Perſon; it will bring glory to thy offended juſtice, and ſatisfy it to the full. I yield myſelf willing to be the priſoner of juſtice, and go quietly as a lamb to the ſlaughter; not dragged to it as an ox or bullock, but meekly and pleaſantly like a lamb.” When, according to this agreement, juſtice required the Lamb to be ſacrificed, O how patient and ſilent was he under all the accuſations led againſt him, though he was wholly innocent; he would ſay nothing in his own defence; at which Pilate (not knowing the cauſe of his ſilence) marvelled greatly, having never ſeen the like before. But our Lamb conſidered that he ſtood not only at Pilate's bar, but alſo at the bar of God's juſtice as our Surety, bearing our guilt; and though man had nothing to lay to his charge, yet he knew what divine juſtice had to charge upon him, and therefore he is ſilent and anſwers nothing, that he might hinder our redemption, nor ſtop the payment of our debt. When juſtice charged him with our ſins, our unbelief, pride, covetouſneſs, &c. he might have ſaid, “O Father, theſe tranſgreſſions are not mine, I never offended thee;” but he will do nothing to reſcue himſelf. Therefore when the fearful charge of the whole ſins of an elect world was exhibited againſt him, and the ſword of juſtice drawn, ready to ſtrike, he opened not his mouth, but takes with the charge, as if he had been guilty of all. Glory to the ſilent Lamb for ever, that would not hinder our releaſe from puniſhment, but meekly took the ſtroke for us.

4. Behold this meek Lamb, before he was brought to the ſlaughter, led up and down from place to place; from the garden to the high prieſt, from the high prieſt to Pilate, from Pilate to Herod, from Herod back to Pilate, from Pilate to Calvary. Behold him mocked, abuſed, and diſgraced by them, buffeted and ſpite upon, crowned, ſcourged, and pierced, and yet never reſiſts nor complains. He willingly gave his back to the ſmiters, and his cheeks to them that plukt off the hair, and hid not his face from ſpitting. Now the meek Lamb is content to be, as the ram caught in the thickets, to be ſlaughtered and ſacrificed in our room, who were lying bound like Iſaac, to have been the ſacrifice. Oh, it was our ſins that platted the thorns; they alſo were the reed that drove them into his temples, yet he opened not his mouth.

5. Now this ſlaughtered Lamb is ſet before my eyes in the ſacrament, and God's call to me is, Behold the Lamb of God, John i. 29. Now let me behold him with an earneſt and ſteady look, with faith and expectation, that I may get healing to all my diſeaſes. As no ſtung Iſraelite got healing from the brazen ſerpent, unleſs they looked to it, ſo none can get benefit from Chriſt unleſs they behold him. May I never look away from this Lamb, to my tears, convictions, prayers, reformations, or any thing elſe; ſeeing the beſt of duties will make bad ſaviours. If I expect ſalvation from other things, I am undone, for there is no other name under heaven whereby men can be ſaved: But if I look to the Lamb of God, my ſalvation is ſecured by his promiſe, Iſa. xlv. 22.

6. There was no houſe in Egypt ſafe from the deſtroying angel, but theſe who had the doors ſprinkled with the blood of the paſchal lamb: So there is no ſoul ſafe from the ſword of revenging juſtice, but theſe who by faith put themſelves under the protection of the blood of this ſlain Lamb: Let me therefore take the bunch of hyſſop, faith, and dip it in the baſon of the new covenant, and ſprinkle this blood on my guilty ſoul, and ſo I ſhall be ſafe.

7. How bleſſed is their characters who follow the Lamb, Rev. xix. 4. May I follow him as my Phyſician to cure me, my Righteouſneſs to juſtify me, my Life to quicken me, my Huſband to ſupply my wants, my Guide to conduct me, my Pattern to direct me in my ſteps. Let me learn, from his example, to be patient without murmuring, when I am under affliction. Let me learn meekneſs towards men, when I meet with reproaches or injuries from them.——Let me learn a readineſs to obey God's call to every duty. O did Chriſt go willingly to the ſlaughter for us; and ſhall I be backward to pray, communicate, part with ſin, or do any thing he requires of me? Let me, in all duties and ordinances, ſeek the Lamb's preſence, ſeeing my eternal happineſs lies in being ever with the Lamb, and to be fed and led by him, Rev. vii. 16.

MEDITATION XVI.

From Eph. i 7. In whom we have redemption through his blood.

HOW diſmal is our caſe by nature! We are ſlaves to ſin and ſatan, and priſoners to the juſtice of God, being ſentenced to die, doomed to wrath, and reſerved to public judgment and execution. In this miſerable condition were all mankind, until Chriſt came to ranſom us: And O how difficult and coſtly was our redemption to Chriſt! no leſs could be the price of it, than his precious blood. The glorious Son of God who created heaven and earth, muſt become a creature, be born of a woman, and pour out his blood on an ignominious croſs, before we could be redeemed from ſin and wrath. O how valuable muſt the blood of this infinite Perſon be! What is the blood of earthly kings and princes to this blood! Surely one drop of it is of more value, than an ocean of theirs! and yet every drop of this blood was poured out upon the ground for our redemption.——In this blood I ſee ſundry things;

1. The amazing love of Chriſt, in ſhedding his blood for the redemption of ſuch creatures as I am; creatures muſt ugly, that had loſt the image of God, and got ſatan's image pictured in its room, and were thereby become black as hell.——Creatures, lothſome as dead carcaſes, being dead in treſpaſſes; and, yet theſe he loved ſo as to ſhed his blood, and bleed to death for them. For as lovely as Sarah was, while alive, yet when dead, Abraham could look on her no more, but would have her buried out of his ſight. But Chriſt ſaid not ſo of his elect ſpouſe when dead; no, ſaid he, let me bleed and die for her to bring her to life; though at the ſame time ſhe was more lothſome than Job with his boils, Lazarus with his ſores, or any dead carcaſe with vermin. O what cauſe could be given for the love of a bleeding Jeſus? Well might he ſay, I loved you, becauſe I loved you; and I loved you freely.——And O with what ſorrow, pain and agony, was his bleeding love attended, while his dear ſoul was overwhelmed with the terrible billows of his Father's wrath! Chriſt knew well before hand all theſe ſufferings, and all the ingredients in the cup, yet he would needs drink it for us: He foreſaw the poiſon of God's arrows that would drink up his ſpirits; the burning thirſt that the heat of divine wrath would create in him; yet willingly did he go to bleed and die, like a lamb to the ſlaughter. O love that paſſeth knowledge!

2 In Chriſt's blood I ſee the glory of infinite wiſdom diſplayed: Who could have found out a way to reconcile juſtice and mercy, and ſatisfy both their demands about Adam's fallen race? A general council of angels could never have thought of the Son of God his being made fleſh, and ſhedding blood! How ſhocking would the ſuggeſtion have been, if God had not made it? But, behold hereby infinite wiſdom hath diſcovered a way to gratify both juſtice and mercy; to puniſh ſin, and yet pardon the ſinner; to maintain the honour of the Law-giver, and yet preſerve the life of the law-breaker: Hereby mercy is ſatisfied in ſparing the rebel, and yet juſtice more glorified, and ſin rendered more odious, than if the ſinner himſelf had been eternally damned for it.—Nay, though all the men on earth had been caſt into hell fire for ſin, and the angels with them, it had been no ſuch inſtance of juſtice, as Chriſt's bleeding and dying for ſin: For what is the puniſhing of creatures, to the ſuffering of the Creator!

3. This blood being the blood of God, hath infinite virtue and efficacy; it hath purchaſed the church of God, and all grace and glory to her, Acts xx. 28. it protects all who come under the covert of it from the wrath of God, Exod. xii. 13. When I ſee the blood, I will paſs over you, and the plague ſhall not be upon you to deſtroy you, when I ſmite the land of Egypt.—This blood, which is the price of our redemption, hath marvellous effects; it pleads for the guilty, and obtains pardon of ſin, peace with God, nearneſs to and communion with him. It cleanſes, heals, ſatisfies and beautifies periſhing ſouls; it ſeals the New Teſtament, overcomes our enemies, liberates the priſoners, opens heaven's gates, and gives boldneſs to enter in: The Perſon of our Redeemer being preferable to a million of worlds full of men and angels, his blood alone might well ſerve for an elect world. What ſins can be ſo heinous or ſo numerous, but the blood of God can waſh away? This was famous Cranmer's ſupport that day he ſuffered martyrdom; when his heinous ſin of renouncing the truth ſtared him in the face, and he was greatly dejected for it; he brake out, Surely God was made fleſh, and ſhed his blood, not for leſſer ſins only, but for great ſins alſo: This relieved him, and made him die with courage. This blood can help in all ſtraits, deliver from all fears, and is able to ſave to the uttermoſt. It hath ſaved many who have condemned themſelves, and thought their ſalvation impoſſible. It hath eaſed many conſciences, when the terrors of the Almighty have ſurrounded them, and his arrows have ſtuck faſt in them. It hath unſtinged death, and carried many ſafe through its darkeſt vallies. This blood hath cleanſed many whoſe hearts were filthy as the mire, and whoſe lives ſwarmed with the moſt abominable luſts, ſuch as the Corinthians, 1 Cor. vi. 11. and three thouſand of theſe who had imbrued their hands in ſhedding of it, Acts ii. 36. Nay, it is able to take away the ſins of a world, John i. 29. and much more the ſins of any one ſoul, though like a mountain for weight, or the ſand for number.

4. I ſee this redeeming blood to be a ſuitable remedy for all my maladies; O that I could look to it by faith, apply it to my ſores, and plead it with God: 'Lord, 'I am an unrighteous creature, but here is juſtifying 'blood; my heart is unholy, but here ſanctifying 'blood; my ſoul is wounded, but here healing blood; 'my luſts are ſtrong, but here mortifying blood; my 'heart is hard, but here ſoftening blood; my affections 'are dead, but here quickening blood; my love i 'cold, but here is heart-warming blood.——When I 'am at the holy table, I am near this bleſſed remedy; 'O let me not miſs a cure when the balm of Gilead i 'among my hands; let me not periſh in my guilt be'ſide the open Fountain. Oh, this blood hath healed 'thouſands, and ſhall I remain under my plagues?— 'Let that innocent blood, which ran from thy hands, 'heart and ſide, drop on my guilty ſoul, and cleanſe 'me from all ſin. O my glorious bleeding Lamb,

‘thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean. O ſay to me as thou didſt to the leper, I will, be thou clean. Surely thy blood is more able to ſave me, than my ſins are to deſtroy me.’

5. How juſt is it that I ſhould commemorate the ſhedding of his blood in the way that Chriſt appoints? Lord help me to go to thy table, and realize the ſhedding of this blood to myſelf, as much as if I had ſtood by the croſs, and ſeen it with my eyes flowing from his wounds. Let my faith be the evidence of things not ſeen, and let it realize the ſhedding of Chriſt's blood as evidently to me, as if I had actually ſeen it. Ah, I cannot ſay it is ſo, while my eyes are ſo dry, and my heart ſo hard; alas for my ſtupid unconcerned heart, that doth not burſt into love and tears at the ſacramental view of this blood-ſhedding! How can I ſee theſe hands, that ſway the ſceptre of the heavens, nailed to the tree of reproach, and not mourn? How can I ſee theſe feet that trample on the powers of hell, nailed to a tree, and not weep! Did the earth tremble, rocks rend, ſun hide, and heavens darken, and will not my rocky heart rend for ſin that cauſed all?——Since thou, Lord, comes to me in ſtreams of blood, let me go forth and meet thee with ſtreams of tears. Oh, ſhall I be more ſparing of my tears for Chriſt, than he was of his blood for me? Can I ſee this precious blood run down in ſtreams, and my eyes not pour out ſome drops? Can I refuſe drops of water for ſtreams of blood? Can I ſee the blood of the King of kings ſpilt like water on the ground, and the earth drinking it up, and my heart not rend for ſhedding it? Oh, that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the ſlain Lamb of God!

6. How dreadful muſt the crime be to tread this blood under foot by unbelief, or unworthy communicoting! Had Zimri peace that ſlew his maſter? And can I have peace if I be guilty of the blood of him that is my Maſter and Redeemer both? How ſad will my caſe be, if that blood, which alone can procure my pardon, ſhall cry for my eternal puniſhment? Deliver me from blood-guiltineſs, O God.—O that I could value and eſteem, plead, and apply this precious blood more! Lord, accept of it as a full ſatisfaction for all my ſins, and an all-ſufficient price for my ſoul's redemption. Is not one drop of thy Son's blood of more value, than a ſea of mine? My ſins, alas, have ſhut me out of paradiſe, but O let this blood open paradiſe to me again; and let me, through this Red-ſea, enter into the heavenly Canaan; I know I can have no other paſſage to it. Lord, impute not the guilt, but the merit of this blood to me.

MEDITATION XVII.

From Pſal. lxxii. 6. He ſhall come down like rain upon the mown graſs, as ſhowers that water the earth.

THIS is ſpoken and promiſed of Chriſt, and ſerves to teach us, that Chriſt coming to his church and people, by the gracious influences of his holy Spirit, is moſt uſeful and refreſhing to their ſouls, like ſhowers of rain to the dry ground, or a meadow newly cut to make it ſpring again.——Chriſtleſs ſouls are like the dry ground, without the moiſture of ſaving grace, their hearts are hard; neither rods, mercies, nor ſermons, make impreſſion upon them; Why? they are without Chriſt the Fountain of grace and ſpiritual influences.——Before the fall man's ſoul was like a well watered garden, beautiful, green, and fragrant; but by his apoſtacy from God, in Adam our firſt head, the ſprings of grace and holineſs are quite dried up in his ſoul; and there is no curing of this drought, but the ſoul's union with a new Head, to wit, Chriſt our ſecond Adam, who has the Spirit given him without meaſure for the uſe of all his members. Now, when we are united by faith to Chriſt, our Head of influences, the dry land is turned into water-ſprings; Chriſt comes down as the rain by his Spirit of regeneration, and brings the ſprings of grace into the ſoul. He is the firſt and immediate receptacle of the holy Spirit, and all the regenerating and ſanctifying influences, and out of his fulneſs we muſt by faith receive them. And when at any time the ſprings of grace are interrupted in the ſoul by ſin or unbelief, ſo as the ground turns dry, the plants wither, and the things which remain are ready to die; the ſoul hath need to look up to Jeſus Chriſt, to come down with new ſhowers upon the thirſty ground, and decayed plants.

1. As the rain is the free gift of God to the dry ground, it comes free and cheap to poor and rich, ſmall and great, and coſts them nothing: So Chriſt with his bleſſings is God's free gift to a dry periſhing world, for which we ſhould continually be thankful. 2. As nothing can ſtop the falling of rain; ſo nothing can hinder Chriſt's gracious influences, when he deſigns to awake, convince, or ſoften a hard heart. When theſe ſhowers do fall on ſinners, the moſt obſtinate will muſt yield, and cry, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? 3. As the rain is moſt neceſſary and ſuitable to the dry ground, and to the various plants it produceth, and alſo to the different parts of every plant or tree; ſuch as the root, trunk, branches, leaves, flowers and fruit: So Chriſt is abſolutely neceſſary, and his influences moſt ſuitable to all his peoples ſouls, and to every faculty of them, the underſtanding, will, memory, and affections; and to all their different graces, faith, love, repentance, &c. to root and eſtabliſh them, ſtrengthen and confirm them, quicken and increaſe them, cheriſh and preſerve them. 4. As the rain comes down in diverſe ways and manners to the earth, ſometimes with cold winds and tempeſts, thunders and lightnings; and at other times with calmneſs and wrath: So Chriſt comes to ſinners, ſometimes with ſharp convictions and legal terrors, and ſometimes with alluring invitations and promiſes. 5. O how pleaſant are the effects of rain to languiſhing plants, to make them green and beautiful, lively and ſtrong, fragrant and fruitful? So the effects of Chriſt's influences are moſt deſireable to drooping ſouls, for enlightning and enlivening them, for confirming and ſtrengthning them, for comforting and enlarging them, for appetizing and ſatisfying them, transforming and beautifying them. A ſhower from Chriſt would ſoon make the church, though withered, turn green and beautiful, and to ſend forth a ſmell as of a field that the Lord hath bleſſed; and likewiſe ſome drops of this ſhower, falling down upon the languiſhing graces of communicants, would ſoon make vigorous and lively in ſhewing forth their Saviour's death at his table.

Here I may ſee the reaſon why many ſouls continue as dry ground in their parched natural condition, while others near them are flouriſhing and fruitful; Chriſt's ſhower hath come down upon the one, and not upon the other; one piece is rained upon, and another piece is dry and withered, according to that word in Amos iv. 7.—Oh, what cauſe is there to bewail the evident ſymptoms of this continuing natural drought in multitudes of ſouls! Why! their hearts are hard, impenetrable and unaffected with the miſerable ſtate they are in by nature, and with the woful plagues of their hearts. They have no ſenſe or feeling of the evil nature of ſin, notwithſtanding of all the reproofs and threatenings of the word, or the rods and ſtrokes it brings upon them; or of the ſufferings of Chriſt for ſin. And though God aſſures them, that the end of dry ground is curſing and burning they are impenitent and unconcerned under all.——O if parched ſouls in their natural eſtate were made ſenſible of their miſery, and brought to bewail their caſe, and ſay, "Oh, I am as the heath " in the deſart that ſees no rain; I am a dry tree, if " I continue in this ſtate, I will be cut down as cumbering the ground, and made fuel to hell-fire. I ſee " the ax of juſtice laid to my root, every hour I am " in danger of the blow. O if Chriſt would interpoſe " to ſpare me, and come down upon me as the rain, " and bring the moiſture of grace into my ſoul."

How lamentable alſo is the caſe of thoſe who once ſeemed to be watered by this heavenly rain, and now are parched by a long conſuming drought and withering wind! They have loſt their former greenneſs and moiſture, their ſpirituality and livelineſs, and their duties are quite dwindled away into a lifeleſs carcaſe and dead formality. They have loſt their wonted freedom and enlargement in prayer, and are fallen under ſad bonds and ſtraitnings of ſpirit, which makes them count holy things a wearineſs, and frequently neglect ſecret prayer. Surely ſuch have great need of Chriſt's coming down upon them as the rain, to make them ſpring up as the graſs, and reviving as the corn.——Alas, we have a ſinful hand in bringing on ſuch a ſpiritual drought, by quenching the motions of the Spirit, indulging filthy luſts, giving the world Chriſt's room in the heart, and neglecting to live by faith on the Son of God, who is the Rain and Dew of Iſrael.

How happy are theſe who live under the droppings of this rain! They are like trees planted by the waters, their roots ſpread forth, and their leaves are green, Jer. xvii. 8. "Have I the ſigns of ſuch perſons? Is " my heart ready to melt at the ſight of a crucified Jeſus ſet before me in the ſacrament? Do I mourn " for my ſins that pierced him? Am I ready to think " worſe of myſelf than any other perſon can? Is my " heart ſoft and plyable to the will of God, both in " his precepts and providences! Do the world's good " things bulk but little in my eye? Is it my deſire to " meet with Chriſt in every duty and ordinance? Do " I ſtill look on ſin as Chriſt's enemy? Am I afraid " of provoking him by ſin to withhold the ſhowers, " and make the heavens as braſs to me? Am I deſirous to bring forth fruit anſwerable to the waterings he graciouſly allows me." O may I find theſe marks in my ſoul.

O that I could earneſtly plead for the fulfilling of this promiſe in the text, that Chriſt would come down as the rain, that he would ſend the ſhowers he hath merited and promiſed, ſend them to myſelf, to the church, and to the whole land; to the preſent age and to the riſing generation. O what glorious effects would theſe ſhowers produce! They would beautify the church and her aſſemblies, make both miniſters and profeſſors to ſhine in holineſs, and congregations to be lively in worſhip. They would open priſon-doors, looſe bonds, inlarge hearts, revive drooping ſouls, turn their water into wine, their ſorrow into joy, their complaints into praiſes, and make them ſing in the ways of the Lord.—By theſe ſhowers God would be glorified, the church cemented, and her diſtempers healed. Ordinances would be ſucceſsful, communions more pleaſant, the godly more valued, religion more eſteemed, and the way to heaven more delightful.—Lord, look on the dry ground and preſent droughty ſeaſon with pity, open the windows of heaven, and ſend down ſhowers as in former times, and as in other parts of the world. Send a ſhower to young communicants, and to theſe who have not ſeen thy goings in the ſanctuary: A ſhower to ſtony hearts and withered hands; a ſhower to ſoften the clods, looſe the roots, and open the ſprings. O how much good would one of Chriſt's ſhowers do to a poor dry land! what wonders would it work! what priſoners would it looſe! What cloudy minds would it brighten, and what doubting ſouls would it reſolve! Come down Lord Jeſus. Amen.

MEDITATION XVIII.

From Matth. viii. 8 Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof.

FAith and repentance do ſtill go together; every believer is a true penitent: He that puts on the Lord Jeſus, is alſo clothed with humility. The higher thoughts a man hath of Chriſt, the lower thoughts will he have of himſelf. When the man's eyes are open to ſee the holineſs and excellency of Chriſt, he is made to own his own nothingneſs before him, and his infinite diſtance from him, and to ſay, like the centurion in the text, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof, q. d. It is too great a honour for ſuch a guilty and filthy creature to entertain a Saviour of infinite purity; my heart is more unworthy than my houſe, I have nothing to commend me to thee.——The lowly ſoul abhors himſelf, as vile in the ſight of a holy God; he ſays, I am all as an unclean thing, and all my righteouſneſs is as filthy rags; in me dwells no good thing; I am inſufficient of myſelf to do any thing that is good, or even to think a good thought; it is God that muſt work in me, both to will and to do, of his good pleaſure. He is under no obligation to pity or help me, it will be abſolute free mercy in him if he do it.——The lowly man hath undervaluing thoughts of himſelf, and of all his own doings and attainments: He renounceth all confidence in his own righteouſneſs and humbly ſubmits to the righteouſneſs of God by faith: He is content to be ſtript of all his own garments, that Chriſt may be his cloathing. He looks not to his own performances to recommend him to God, but only to Chriſt his Surety. He is willing to go out of himſelf, and live wholly upon borrowed righteouſneſs and borrowed ſtrength; even to live upon Chriſt crucified, and to derive, daily and hourly, from him ſtrength both for duty and difficulty, for work and warfare. ——The man that is lowly in heart, ſubmits to the will of God in all his diſpenſations, is content with every condition he thinks beſt for him; he is patient in affliction, and ſilent under God's rod without anſwering again. He is ſenſible that he juſtly deſerveth hell, and therefore is very thankful for the leaſt mercy; like the woman of Canaan, he owns himſelf unworthy as a dog, and will be thankful for the crumbs that fall from the childrens table. He will be thankful for a word from Chriſt, for a look, for a ſmile, for the leaſt token of his favour, or the ſmalleſt influence of his Spirit.

Wherever faith is in exerciſe, it is a ſoul-humbling and ſelf-emptying grace, and lays the ſoul very low before God; and God always hath reſpect to ſuch faith, and to ſuch lowlineſs, Pſal. cxxxviii. 6. Chriſt put great reſpect upon the centurion, v. 10, 13. I have not found ſo great faith, no not in Iſrael; go thy way, and as thou haſt believed, ſo be it done unto thee. He alſo put great reſpect on the humble publican, Luke xviii. 13, 14. and declared him juſtified; for (ſaith he) He that humbleth himſelf ſhall be exalted. He put great honour on the humble woman of Canaan, that owned herſelf vile as a dog, Matth. xv. 27. O woman, great is thy faith (ſaid he) be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And he ſaith of himſelf, Iſa. lviii. 15. though he be the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, yet he dwells with the humble ſpirit: And thus he ſets himſelf before us, as the great Pattern of humility, and bids us learn it of him. When he appeared unto Moſes, it was not on a lofty cedar, but in a low, mean, humble buſh. And when he would appear in our nature, it was not a great exalted woman he takes up with, but a low humble virgin, as Mary herſelf obſerves, Luke i. 48. 52. May I be helped then to appear before him at his holy table, with a humble ſpirit, and lowly frame, that he may vouchſafe to dwell and hold communion with me.

O that I had the marks of a lowly heart, and could ſay, that I bluſh, and am aſhamed before God in prayer, becauſe of my ſinfulneſs and pollution! that I am made to wonder at free grace in ſparing ſuch a vile unthankful wretch, in keeping me out of hell, in offering me Chriſt and pardon through his blood, and calling me to his holy table.——That I diſclaim all righteouſneſs by the law, and expect nothing but wrath and ruin from that airth; that I look only to Chriſt, and have admiring thoughts of him and his law biding righteouſneſs.——That I have a deep ſenſe of indwelling ſin, and of the corruptions of my heart, and think more meanly of myſelf than any other perſon can.——That I am jealous of my wicked heart, and afraid leſt I betray or wound the Son of God, and contract bloodguiltineſs; and therefore I adventure to his table with much fear and trembling. Lord beſtow upon me ſuch a humble heart.

O can ſuch an ill-deſerving creature appear before God, and expect mercy, who have ſo long abuſed mercy! Lord, inſtead of ſtretching forth a ſceptre of mercy to invite me to thy table, thou mighteſt, with the rod of thy juſtice, juſtly daſh me in pieces as a potter's veſſel. Inſtead of entertaining me with the bread of life, and the cup of bleſſing, thou mighteſt give me the bread and water of affliction; yea, caſt me into that pit, where I ſhould cry in vain for a drop of water to cool my tongue. O ſhall ſuch a wretched dog as I preſume to come to thy table, and eat of the children's bread, who am not worthy to eat of the crumbs that fall from it! But I have heard of the mercy of the King of Iſrael, that he delights to ſhew it to the unworthy, that humble themſelves before him. Oh, I am vile, and unfit to appear before thee; but ſurely, they are undone who keep away from thee. I am come to thee, not becauſe I am fit or worthy, but becauſe thou art rich in mercy; and haſt contrived a way for ſaving the like of me. —Lord I am not worthy to come within ſight of thee, but far leſs that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof to lodge with me! Will God in very deed come and dwell with men! This is a wonder, though all men were as innocent and righteous as once Adam was! But will he lodge or feaſt with me that am a leper? Will he come under the roof of my ſoul, a houſe ſo ruinous, ſmoaky and defiled, where he has not a fit place to lay his head? But, O my humble, condeſcending Saviour did not diſdain to ly in a manger among beaſts, nor to dine with Simon a leper! O Lord Jeſus, come in thyſelf and furniſh the houſe, prepare an upper-room in my ſoul, large, ſwept, and garniſhed, and there abide, and keep the paſſover with me.

Lord, I am not worthy to eat the crumbs that fall from my own table, much leſs thoſe that fall from thine. I deſerve not a room to ſtand among thy ſervants, far leſs to ſit down with thy children. I am not worthy of my daily bread from thee, and ſhall I be allowed to eat of the bread of life? Shall I, who deſerve not the bread of men, be admitted to eat the bread of angels? Shall I ſit down with him, at whoſe feet they fall? If John the Baptiſt (one of the greateſt that was born of women, who was filled with the Holy Ghoſt from the womb) thought himſelf not worthy to looſe Chriſt's ſhoes, how unworthy am I, the meaneſt of creatures, a tranſgreſſor from the womb, to be admitted to touch, nay feed upon Chriſt's broken body and ſhed blood! If Peter, after ſeeing Chriſt's glory, and his own vileneſs, judged himſelf unworthy to be in the ſame ſhip with Chriſt, and cried, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful man: How ſhall I, the chief of ſinners, adventure to ſit down at the ſame table with him in a familiar way! If the woman with the bloody-iſſue was afraid to come and touch the hem of Chriſt's garment, how much more may I, who am full of the running iſſues of ſin, fear to touch the ſymbols of his body and blood, or put my hand into his ſide? If the pureſt angels muſt cover their faces when before him, how ſhall I, who am ſo impure, appear openly in his preſence? But glory to God, for the bleſſed covering provided for my guilty ſoul, under which I may appear and be accepted. I come to thee wrapt in it, Lord, accept of me.

O how diſtinguiſhing are thy favours to me an unworthy creature! Thou mighteſt juſtly have put in my hand a cup of trembling and unmixed wrath, a cup filled with horror of conſcience and fearful deſpair: But, inſtead thereof, thou giveſt me the cup of bleſſing, filled with the hope of pardon and eternal life. I might have been in hell drinking the damned's cup of wrath, into which juſtice is ſtill pouring in as faſt as they drink out: But glory to free grace, thou calleſt me to drink the cup of ſalvation, which my Saviour hath purchaſed with his blood, and ſweetened with his bleſſing. Thanks be to God for it for ever.

MEDITATION XIX.

From 2 Cor. ix. 15. Thanks be unto God for his unſpeakable gift.

MANY give thanks to God for meat and drink to their bodies, which indeed is the duty of all; but alas, few give thanks to God for Jeſus Chriſt the only food of precious ſouls, and God's unſpeakable gift to men! Many are fond of temporal gifts and earthly riches, which are nothing but vanity; but ah, they are eaſy about this Pearl of great price, this matchleſs gift, whoſe value no tongue can expreſs, nor open up what is contained in it. The apoſtle tells us a great truth, Eph. i. 3. that God bleſſes us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt. In this gift of God, we have innumerable gifts beſtowed on theſe who believe on him, ſuch as the gifts of ſpiritual illumination, pardon of ſin, a law-biding righteouſneſs, reconciliation with God, adoption into his family, reſtoring of his image, ſanctifying influences, ſpiritual ſtrength for work and warfare, looſing of bonds, witneſſing of the Spirit, unſtinging of death, conduct through the dark valley, and a title to the manſions of glory, and the eternal enjoyment of God. Chriſt is the moſt neceſſary and moſt enriching gift ever was given to the world. God gave him to be a Plank of mercy, to ſave our ſouls when ſhipwreck'd. He gave him to be our Phyſician and balm, to heal us when our wounds ſeemed incurable. He gave him to be the Lord our righteouſneſs, when we had no righteouſneſs. He gave him to be our Advocate to plead for us when we had many accuſers, and none to take our part. He gave him to us to be wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption. In this gift there is infinite fulneſs, and unſearchable riches. Well may the ſpouſe call Chriſt a bundle of myrrh, and a cluſter of camphire, Cant. i. 13, 14. becauſe ſo many gifts and bleſſings are bundled up in this one gift. Oh, what can I conceive, or what can I expreſs of this gift! He that would deſcribe, or ſpeak of this gift, would need to have his tongue dipt in heaven. Should an angel come down from it to tell us of this gift, he would outſpeak all the men on earth; yet, when he had ſaid all he could, the gift would be far above his expreſſion; Why? becauſe he is unſpeakable.

Thanks be unto God that gave us not a ſervant, not an angel, not a friend, but his Son. Not an adopted ſon, but his own Son by eternal generation; "A Son, "who is the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his Perſon." Yea he gave us his only Son, to die as a ſacrifice in our room! How bitterly did Jacob bewail the parting with one ſon, when he had eleven behind! But God gave his only begotten Son, and the Son of his love for us! It is recorded as an admirable inſtance of Abraham's obedience, that he was willing to part with his only ſon at God's command, Gen. xxii. 12. "Now I know that thou feareſt God, "ſeeing thou haſt not withheld thy ſon, thine only ſon, "from me." But what was Abraham's ſon to God's eternal Son, the ſecond Perſon of the glorious Trinity! a Son that was his equal! a Son in whom his ſoul delighted! a Son that never diſpleaſed him at any time! How bitterly did David mourn at parting with a rebellious ſon! O Abſalom, my ſon, my ſon, would to God I had died for thee, &c. But what are all the ſons of men, or ten thouſand worlds full of men, or as many heavens full of angels, to the beloved Son of God, whom all the angels worſhip and adore! And yet this is the gift which God gives us. In giving this gift, divine bounty hath ſtretched itſelf to the uttermoſt: He could have created a million of heavens more bright, and millions of angels more glorious for us; but a more glorious Son he had not, nor could have; a greater gift he had not in all his treaſures, than his own co-eternal and con-ſubſtantial Son, yet he makes a free gift of him to us! O who would not give thanks unto God for this unſpeakable gift! And who would not part with all the world to have an intereſt in this gift ſealed to him at the Lord's table! This is the gift that ſweetens all other gifts, and without which nothing in a world hath any ſweetneſs in it.

This gift of God is moſt free; it was impoſſible that the world could have Chriſt any other way, than as [illegible] free gift. A man like old Jacob may be bereaved of his children, but it was not poſſible that God could be bereaved of his dear Son. Neither could we have him by purchaſe; we were ſo poor, we had nothing wherewith to pruchaſe the leaſt bleſſing. And what though all the riches of the world had been ours, though all its mountains had been gold, pearls or diamonds, they would not have been ſufficient to purchaſe one ſight of this gift, far leſs a right to it. Nor could ever any motive be found out for beſtowing this gift but the mere free love of God, John iii. 16. "God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son:" As if he had ſaid, ſince the world hath no merit, nor price, worth nor motive, to obtain this bleſſing, I juſt make a free gift of him to the world; Take him freely, poor beggars of Adam's family; take him, and he will enrich you all! And O how ſeaſonable and unexpectedly was this gift given! Adam, when he came trembling before God after his fall, looking for his final doom, did little expect ſuch a gift, until God himſelf to the aſtoniſhment of angels and men, promiſed the ſeed of the woman. Who could have thought, that the great God would have gifted his dear Son to ſuch vile wretches, ſinners that were not ſeeking him! Nay, who of mankind could have deſired ſuch a gift? Indeed, when we had been periſhing, we might have looked up, and cried, O God, have mercy upon us: But who would have ſaid, O give the Son of thy love to bear the wrath due to us! We neither deſerved, nor deſired this gift, but God gave it moſt freely and ſurprizingly! When Adam broke God's covenant, he was purſued with a cry, Adam, where art thou? Doubtleſs, Adam expected a terrible blow from the ſword of juſtice; but, behold, he is purſued with a cry, and the unſpeakable gift in the Crier's hand! O how ſurprizing was this to poor, trembling, guilty Adam! What cauſe had he to cry, Thanks be unto God for his unſpeakable Gift! What ſhall I render to the Lord for ſuch a Gift! And the ſame cauſe have we.

O wonderful love! this free gift is offered freely to the pooreſt creature of Adam's family; ſo tha ſuch an one as I, am warranted to accept and embrac it, and make ſure my intereſt in it; Lord, I believ help thou my unbelief. Many covet other gifts, but covet this beſt Gift, this enriching Gift; this is a lawful covetouſneſs: I receive this Gift of God into my boſom, into my very heart. O that I had the mark of theſe who poſſeſs this Gift, and are truly thankf for it! Can I ſay, that this Gift is truly precious in my eyes, and that I eſteem it far above all temporal gifts whatſoever: That I am oft thinking upon his matchleſs excellency, his low ſtep and condeſcending love; and do I frequently break out with the Pſalmiſt, whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth I deſire beſides thee.——Have I low thoughts of myſelf, as unworthy that Chriſt ſhould come under my roof, reckoning myſelf, with Paul, the leaſt of ſaints, and chief of ſinners? Do I renounce all Chriſt's rivals and competitors, ſuch as my beloved luſts, and beloved righteouſneſs? Do I count all my doings and duties but loſs and dung for the righteouſneſs of Chriſt? Do I take the crown off every head, and put it upon Chriſt's head, and give him all the glory of my ſalvation, and ſay, that in the Lord Jeſus only I have righteouſneſs and ſtrength? Am I careful to avoid every thing that would diſhonour Chriſt? and do I ſay to every temptation that offers, How ſhall I do this wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God, or bring a reproach upon Chriſt and his ways? Do I rejoice when Chriſt is honoured, his throne raiſed, his glory advanced, and his ſubjects increaſed; and when ſtrangers and young ones are drawn to love and admire him? Am I often ſaying, What ſhall I render unto the Lord for his unſpeakable Gift? I am at a loſs how to expreſs my thankfulneſs: I have nothing to give him; but I'll render all I have to him, my ſoul, my body, my love, my praiſes, my time, my talents, my walk and converſation. Lord, accept of my two poor mites, ſoul and body, in token of my gratitude for God's redeeming love and free Gift; and make me fit for giving thee thanks eternally for this unſpeakable Gift: O that I could apply theſe bleſſed marks to myſelf.

And O what thanks do I owe to my dear Saviour, that willingly ſubmitted to be Heaven's Gift to the children of men; yea frankly offered, and gave himſelf to be a Sacrifice for them, to drink of the brook in the way, even the cup of God's wrath, that we might drink the cup of God's bleſſing! O how low was our fall, that nothing could raiſe us up again, but the low abaſement of the Son of God! And O how low was the ſtep that he behoved to make to recover us! The Son of God muſt be tread upon as a worm! The almighty Phyſician muſt come from heaven, and let his heart be pierced, to prepare a medicine to cure our diſeaſe! He that thought it no robbery to be equal with God, muſt be made equal to robbers and murderers! He muſt not only ſuffer death, but deſertion alſo, from God, from man, and the whole creation! He gave himſelf not only to ſuffer the pangs of death, but the pains of hell; not only the ſorrows of dying men, but the ſorrows of damned ſouls! O unſpeakable Gift!

MEDITATION XX.

From Luke ix. 22. The Son of Man muſt ſuffer many things.

OUR Lord oft ſpoke of his ſufferings to his diſciples, becauſe he would have them deeply imprinted upon the hearts of all his people, that they might always think upon them, and carry about with them the dying of the Lord Jeſus. As Chriſt foretold his ſufferings before hand, ſo they came exactly to paſs. He ſaid he muſt ſuffer many things for his people, and accordingly he did ſo: Let me view his ſufferings before I go to commemorate them at his table.

1. I muſt conſider him that ſuffered many things for us; the Spirit of God requires us to conſider the High-Prieſt, who he is, Heb. iii. 1. Though he calls himſelf in the text the Son of man, as to his human nature; yet he is alſo the Son of God of God as to the divine nature; yea, God equal with the Father, the great God our Saviour: This God man, the WONDERFUL, is our High-Prieſt, that ſuffered many things for us. He is our glorious Immanuel, the innocent and immaculate Lamb of God, that had not the leaſt ſpot or crime of his own to ſuffer for.—He is the brightneſs of his Father's glory, the expreſs image of his Perſon; he is the King of kings and Lord of lords. He that ſuffered is he that went always about doing good to perſons of all ſorts, and deſerved well of thoſe who perſecuted and crucified him. He is the great lover of mankind, and Friend of ſinners, our glorious Benefactor, who remembered us in our low eſtate; one that comes under the moſt endearing characters to us, as that of our Father, our Huſband, our Brother, Maſter, Phyſician, Ranſomer, &c. Now will not a ſon be ſenſible of the ſufferings of his father, or a wife of the ſufferings of her huſband? Or one brother be touched with the ſufferings of another? This is the great High-Prieſt that ſuffered many things for us.

2. I am to conſider the many things he ſuffered. Ah, they are ſo great, ſo various, and manifold, I cannot recount nor comprehend them! I may ſay, he ſuffered in both natures: Though his Godhead could not properly ſuffer grief or pain, yet it ſuffered an eclipſe for thirty three years, except a ſhort time it ſhone forth on mount Tabor.——He ſuffered many things in his human nature, both in ſoul and body; he was perſecuted, tempted, calumniated, betrayed, bound, mocked, ſpit on, buffeted, ſcourged, wounded, crowned with thorns, and crucified. He ſuffered in all his offices; he was mocked as a Prophet, and bid propheſy who ſmote him; as a Prieſt he was bid ſave himſelf; ſeeing he pretended to ſave others; as a King he was mocked with an old purple robe and thorny crown.—He ſuffered in his honour and reputation, being diſgraced and reproached by men, called a Samaritan, one poſſeſſed of the devil, a blaſphemer, a glutton, a drunkard, a ſeducer, &c. He was even overwhelmed with calumny.—He ſuffered as a blaſphemer againſt God, as a traitor to Cæſar, and an enemy to Moſes law, though he was entirely free of them all.—He was wounded and pierced in all parts of his body, in his head, hands and feet; in his cheeks, back and ſide.—He ſuffered in his outward goods, being ſpoiled of all things, and even ſtript of his clothes to his very ſkin, and nailed to the croſs naked.—He ſuffered in all his five ſenſes; his ſight, with the ſpiteful carriage of thoſe that paſſed by wagging their heads; his hearing, with their blaſphemous talk; his ſmell, with the noiſom ſavour of the ſkulls of the dead; his taſte, with vinegar and gall; his feeling, with thorns and nails piercing his head, hands and feet. He ſuffered in the moſt tender and ſinewy parts of his body by the tormenting nails, eſpecially being violently ſtretched out, and probably disjointed, to make them reach to the holes; therefore he ſaith, Pſal. xxii. 16. 17. They have digged my hands and my feet, I may tell all my bones, they look and ſtare upon me.—He ſuffered moſt of all in his ſoul, and its noble faculties: How great was the agony and travel of his ſoul, when he ſwate blood in the garden through all the pores of his body! O how great was the anguiſh of his mind upon his heavenly Father's deſerting him, which made him ſend forth a dreadful cry to heaven for relief, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Then it was he cried and groaned under the preſſure, but no relief appeared; there was none to anſwer, every door was ſhut againſt him: For at this time his own Sun, his own Heaven, his own Father, his own Godhead, did all hide their faces and conſolations from him! O the many things he ſuffered for us, they cannot be numbered.

3. I am to conſider from whom the Son of Man ſuffered. He ſuffered from all hands, from earth, from hell, from heaven; from men, from devils, from infinite juſtice. He ſuffered from all ſorts of men, from king Herod and his men of war, who mocked him and ſet him at nought; from the Jewiſh prieſts and rulers, who cruelly uſed and proſecuted him to death; from governor Pilate, who ſcourged and condemned him to be crucified: He ſuffered from the Jews and from the Romans, from the clergy and from the lawyers, from ſoldiers and ſervants, from great ones and commons, and even from theſe he had done much good unto.——He ſuffered from theſe whom he came to ſave and waſh by his blood; for there were 3000 of theſe who crucified him, or were active in his ſufferings, that were converted to him by Peter's ſermon, Acts ii. He ſuffered not only from enemies, but from profeſſed friends and diſciples, one of theſe betrayed and ſold him, another of them denied and abjured him, and all the reſt forſook him, and left him alone to ſuffer in the midſt of devils and ruffians inſulting over him.——He ſuffered from the devils, and all the powers of hell; theſe dogs and bulls of Baſhan were all let looſe to tear and gore him in his laſt ſufferings; "for this (he ſaid) was their hour and power of darkneſs."—But, which was worſt of all, he ſuffered alſo from heaven; for he being ſubſtituted in the room of ſinners, a juſt and a holy God acted as an inexorable Judge towards him, he frowned terribly upon him, ſmote him with the ſword of juſtice, and withdrew all the feeling of his loving kindneſs from him, and all theſe divine influences which might any way refreſh his troubled ſoul in the hour of his greateſt need: And thus he fell a ſacrifice to incenſed juſtice for our heinous guilt and provocations. At this time a fearful black cloud was ſpread over the glorious Sun of righteouſneſs, never was there any ſuch eclipſe ſeen or heard of as this! For a candle to be put out is no great matter, but for the ſun to be darkened is very uncommon: But though ſun, moon and ſtars had all been blown out at once, it would be nowiſe ſo amazing as the darkening of the eternal Sun of righteouſneſs upon the croſs! A ſtrange and marvellous ſight! What meant the heat of this great anger! Muſt even the Creator himſelf ſuffer for the creature's ſins! Muſt he ſuffer ſuch a load of wrath as make him cry out to the aſtoniſhment of angels and men!

4. I am to conſider the high prieſt, and for whom it was he ſuffered theſe great and many things. He ſuffered not for himſelf, for he never offended either againſt God or man, and deſerved no puniſhment: He ſuffered none for fallen angels, they muſt all ſuffer for themſelves: It was only for men of Adam's race, that were debtors to juſtice, and priſoners of wrath; he ſuffered for creatures moſt undeſerving, for rebels, and for many that were his greateſt enemies; and even for theſe who were his murderers and executioners, for he both prayed and was heard for them, when they were pouring out his blood.

5. Let me conſider with what affection he ſuffered all theſe things for us. It was with ardent love to periſhing ſouls, which many waters could not quench; —with fervent wiſhings and longings for the hour of his paſſion, I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitned until it be accompliſhed?—with great liberality: It is not the blood of his finger, or a part of his blood, that he would ſhed for us; no, he would needs pour out all his blood, and even his heart-blood too, and with that he poured out his ſoul alſo, Iſa. liii. Why would he be ſo liberal? that with him there might be plenteous redemption, Pſal. cxxx. 7—He ſuffered with great meekneſs, patience, and reſignation; when he ſuffered, he threatened not, but was led as a ſheep to the ſlaughter, dumb, not opening his mouth: —With great humility and ſelf denial, content to be as a worm and no man, to bring glory to his Father:— With a thirſty zeal for the ſalvation of ſouls, and for compleating the work of our redemption? and hence it was, he cried on the croſs, I thirſt, and glad when he could ſay, It is finiſhed.

O what cauſe have I to obey his dying charge, to go to this memorial feaſt, and to think upon and wonder at the matchleſs love of Chriſt, that made him willing to ſuffer ſo many things for ſuch wretched creatures as I am. He knew well enough before-hand what our ſalvation would coſt him, yet he willingly undertook it, ſaying, upon the firſt motion of it, Lo I come. But ſaith God to him, if you will engage in this work, you muſt underly my wrath, and be handled as if you were the ſinner in law: Well, ſaith Chriſt, I come to do thy will, O God; I am ſatisfied with the terms: Let the cup be never ſo bitter, I will drink it ere theſe miſerable creatures do it. O loving high Prieſt! how ſhall I think of thy ſufferings without raptures of love and admiration! I had been in hell if thou hadſt not been in an agony here; I had for ever been ſcorched there, if thou hadſt not ſwate here; yea, not only I, but all the poſterity of Adam had periſhed if thou hadſt not ſuffered theſe many things for them: Surely the weight of wrath which made thee heavy, and cauſed thee fall to the ground, ſweat, groan and cry, would have ſunk all mankind into hell for ever.——O what ingratitude muſt it be to refuſe Chriſt's offers and terms of ſalvation after what he has ſuffered to purchaſe it! Was he at ſo much pains to obtain redemption for us, and will we be at no pains to get an intereſt in it! Did he ſhed blood, and will not I drop tears? Lord, pity this heart of mine.

MEDITATION XXI.

From John xviii. 4. Jeſus knowing all things that ſhould come upon him, went forth, &c.

CHRIST foreknew all his ſufferings, with all their ingredients, before they came upon him, yet he willingly and reſolutely went forth to meet them. He reaches forth his hand to take it. When the people would have forced him to a crown, he hid himſelf from them, John vi. 15. But when they would force him to a croſs, he offered himſelf to them, knowing that his hour was come to fulfil his ſuretyſhip for us, and compleat our redemption. Upon this account he made his ſufferings welcome, and the paſſover that introduced them, Luke xxii. 15. With deſire have I deſired to eat this paſſover. He abhorred all counſels that tended to hinder him, and rebuked Peter as ſmartly for diſſuading him from ſuffering, as he would have done ſatan himſelf, Matth. xvi. 23. And though all his diſciples would have diſſuaded him, John xi. 8. he marched with great forwardneſs to Jeruſalem, where he foretold the bloody tragedy was to be acted; he haſtened to the field of battle, and place of ſuffering: Yea, he went ſo faſt to it, that his diſciples were amazed at it, and afraid to follow him, Matth. xx. 18. Mark x. 32. They were behind him, and would have fallen behind altogether, had it not been for ſhame, and let him go alone; they were amazed to ſee a man haſten ſo faſt to a bloody death: But he would not ſtop, though they had all left him, as they did afterwards. And when his time was come to be apprehended, he will neither let Peter defend him, nor angels reſcue him, though there were twelve legions at his call: One angel would have been ſufficient to do it, or one word from his own mouth; but, ſaith he, The cup my Father hath given me to drink, ſhall I not drink it?——Wherefore when they accuſed him of blaſphemy againſt God, and of enmity to Cæſar and Moſes's law, and things he was perfectly innocent of, he would make no legal defence to ſave his life before Pilate, but held his peace, in ſo much that Pilate marvelled greatly. He might think it was eaſy for him to anſwer all they ſaid, but he knew not the reaſon of our Lord's ſilence, viz. that he would do nothing to hinder the elect's redemption, which he had undertaken.—And, as he was ſilent before Pilate, ſo was he before divine juſtice, and would do nothing to divert the ſtroke: Soon might he have reſcued himſelf when juſtice drew the ſword, by ſaying, Father, theſe ſins are not mine: No, he is ſilent, and takes with the charge, as if he had committed them all. On me, ſaith he, be the curſe; I will be the ſacrifice for theſe loſt ſheep. O love, unſpeakable!

The reaſons of my Saviour's willingneſs to ſuffer are obvious; he knew it was his Father's will he ſhould ſuffer, and therefore he ſaid, Pſal. xl. I delight to do thy will, O my God. He knew it would greatly diſplay the glory of the divine attributes, that was ſullied by our ſins; it would highly magnify his love to his ſheep, John x. I lay down my life for the ſheep: I do it of myſelf, freely, without compulſion: It was neceſſary to make his ſacrifice acceptable and well-pleaſing unto God. The Heathens would not offer a ſacrifice to their gods that came ſtruggling to the altar; ſo every ſacrifice offered to the true God muſt be a free-will-offering, as we would have it of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour unto him. This Chriſt hath taught us by his example, and upon this account God hath twice proclaimed from heaven, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed.

O was Chriſt's willingneſs to ſuffer for ſinners ſo well-pleaſing to the Father, and ſhall it not render him moſt amiable and lovely to us? Surely the Mediator's frank and cheerful undertaking to ſuffer ſo much for us, when unrequired by us, is a favour infinitely kind and obliging, and doth command raptures of love and praiſe from us when we celebrate his holy ſupper. What a moving ſight is it to the eye of faith, to behold our glorious Immanuel voluntarily ſtating himſelf in our law-room without the ſolliciting of any creature, and engaging cheerfully to go through ſatan's buffetings, death's pangs, and hell's flames for us! with what elevated thoughts, and raiſed affections, ſhould we admire, love and praiſe a crucified Jeſus, who did all this willingly and unrequired for us! Oh, he never had ſo good will to eat when hungry, as he had to ſuffer and ſatisfy juſtice for us! Hence he ſaid, My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work, John vi. 34. Here is food, moſt delicious for faith to feed upon at the Redeemer's table.—Again, from the willingneſs of Chriſt to ſuffer for us, I have good ground to conclude his willingneſs to receive us, when we come to him by faith to partake of the fruits of his ſufferings. O how can any believer, or ſenſible ſinner, queſtion or doubt of Chriſt's willingneſs to help and ſave them, who was ſo willing to offer himſelf a ſacrifice to juſtice for them? Surely he is far more willing to ſave, than any ſinner is to repent or believe. And from this I'll take my encouragement to come to him: Since my loving Jeſus came willingly as a lamb to the ſlaughter for ſinners, I'll venture, with humble confidence, to go to this meek, paſſionate, ſweet-natured Lamb for pity and help in time of my need, truſting he will not reject me, nor any that comes to him upon his call in the goſpel. I believe, Lord, help my unbelief.

O did Chriſt ſuffer the pains of death and hell ſo willingly for us, and ſhall not we be willing to ſuffer the reproaches and revilings of men, or any other perſecution for him? And when any ſuch injuries are done us, ſhall not we bear them with meekneſs and patience after Chriſt's example, who ſubmitted cheerfully to every thing he knew to be his Father's will? Though he was perfectly innocent, and met with the greateſt provocations from wicked men, yet he patiently bore them; taking all as out of his Father's hand, who had mingled the cup for him. Therefore, when he was reviled, he reviled not again; he could have told Pilate, Caiaphas, and his other perſecutors, what ſort of men they were, yet he opened not his mouth, but went willingly as a lamb to the ſlaughter. O that we could imitate the meekneſs, patience and willingneſs of the Lamb of God in all the ſufferings he calls us to.

O did Chriſt delight to do his Father's will, and go willingly through the moſt hard and difficult taſk of ſweating, bleeding and dying for us; and ſhall we find ſo little delight in doing his will, and performing the duties which lead to communion and fellowſhip with him, as prayer, praiſe, reading, hearing, or communicating? Did Chriſt come ſo cheerfully to die for us, and ſhall we go ſo backwardly and unwillingly to this table, to enjoy fellowſhip with him, when he invites us to it? O what a ſhameful requital is this! may not Chriſt ſay, Is this thy kindneſs to thy Friend? When the Father called me to ſuffer, and drink the cup of trembling for thee, how readily did I eccho back, I come, lo I come, to do thy will I take delight! but when I call thee to pray or communicate, how backward and dead-hearted are you in that work! I did not weary ſo ſoon in the garden, as thou doſt in the church! I did not ſo ſoon weary on the croſs, as thou doſt in thy cloſet! I was longer in my agony wreſtling under the wrath of God for thee, than ever thou waſt in wreſtling in prayer for thy ſoul.

Did Chriſt offer his ſacrifice ſo willingly for us, O then let me go to God my Saviour, with the ſacrifice of myſelf and my duties, and with a ready and a cheerful heart: God loveth a cheerful giver. As Amaziah offered himſelf willingly unto the Lord, 2 Chron. xvii. 16. and David ſaith, Accept of the free-will-offerings, of my mouth, Pſal. cxix. 108. O that with like willingneſs I could offer myſelf, my heart, and my ſacrifices of prayer and praiſes unto the Lord: And when I feel any reluctancy and backwardneſs of ſpirit to duty, let me ſtill call to mind how willingly Chriſt offered himſelf a ſacrifice to God for us, and chide my heart for its unwillingneſs.—Surely it is much for the honour of God, and the credit of religion, as it is moſt juſt and reaſonable in itſelf, to ſerve God with joyfulneſs, who has ſo willingly given us the unſpeakable gift of his dear Son to die for us. The wicked and profane are ready to reproach religion as a ſour and melancholy thing, when we ſerve God in a dead-hearted manner; and God himſelf is highly diſpleaſed with us for it, as is evident from that long and terrible chapter, the 28th of Deuteronomy, that is full of curſes and threatened judgments, ver. 47. where the cauſe of all is given, Becauſe thou ſervedſt not the Lord thy God with joyfulneſs and gladneſs of heart. Since the ſacrament is called the Euchariſt or thankſgiving, let me go to it with a joyful and thankful heart, bleſſing God for Chriſt. O thanks be to God for his unſpeakable gift. Amen.

MEDITATION. XXII.

From John xvi. 7. It is expedient for you that I go away.—

NO wonder that ſorrow filled the diſciples hearts at the intimation of Chriſt's departure from them: They had enjoyed a ſweet time with him at the communion-table; his preſence with them was their heaven, and they cannot think of parting with him: They are greatly troubled, that he will neither ſtay ſtill with them, nor take them away with him; nevertheleſs, ſaith he, it is expedient for you that I go away.——Lord, ſaith the ſoul, how is it expedient for me to be left behind thee in a ſtate of corruption, with indwelling ſin that darkens my mind, deadens my heart, diſorders my affections, and indiſpoſes me for ſpiritual work?——How ſhall I ſtay behind thee, amidſt ſatan's temptations and fiery darts, flying thick about me? Muſt I abide in the place where that enemy hath his circuit, and ſtill rangeth about devouring many thouſands! Could I win away with Chriſt, I would be quite out of the reach of his ſhot. Lord, either ſtay with me, or take me up to thee.——Oh, muſt I ſtay behind thee amidſt the infectious defilements and enſnaring examples of an ungodly world! When I open my eyes here, what will meet them but multitudes wallowing in pride, ſenſuality, covetouſneſs, injuſtice, malice, envy, drunkenneſs, gluttony, uncleanneſs, contempt of God and religion? Muſt I ſtay to ſee this horrible ſight, the whole world lying in wickedneſs! Muſt I ſtay to hear God daily diſhonoured by the tongues of the ungodly! Muſt I ſtay to ſee Chriſt ſlighted, wounded, and crucified afreſh by wicked men? O what danger will I be in of being infected by their examples! But, Lord, if I could win away with thee, I would be quite out of hazard, and out of ſight of the wickedneſs of the world—How ſhall I ſtay behind thee in ſuch an earthly tabernacle, to be burdened with bodily diſtreſſes, ſickneſs, pains, and manifold complaints; and amidſt innumerable loſſes, croſſes and diſappointments from the creature? How ſhall I ſtay to ſee ſuch melancholy diviſions, contentions, debates and ſeparations, as fall out among the people of God in Chriſt's abſence? Muſt I ſtay behind thee to ſuffer injuries, reproaches, cruel mockings, bad uſage and perſecutions, both from the tongues and hands of men? and ſometimes to be torn as with the teeth of wild beaſts? Hence this world is called a den of lions and mountain of leopards, Cant. iv. 8. Oh, could I win away to heaven with Chriſt, I would ſee no lion nor leopard there. There is none to hurt or deſtroy in all God's holy mountain above.

Have I ſeen the King in his beauty, and muſt I be left behind him? Hath the communion table been like mount Tabor, where he was transfigured before my eyes, with his countenance ſhining, and his raiment white as light? and muſt I go down from the mount again to a land of darkneſs, of drought, and of perplexing doubts and fears, where I ſhall ſmetimes go mourning without the Sun; yea neither ſun nor ſtars appearing to me for many days? Muſt I be put to walk without the light of God's countenance, and without the food of my ſoul, communion with my God? After I have been lifted up, muſt I lay my account with being caſt down again, perhaps into depths like theſe of Aſaph, Pſal. lxxvii. or like theſe of Heman, Pſal. lxxxviii. with fears of ſinking in them, and of falling ſhort of heaven for ever? Could I win away with Chriſt, I would be at once delivered from all theſe fears.——Here my knowledge of God is ſmall, and oft obſcured with darkneſs; my faith is weak, and oft in hazard of being overwhelmed with unbelief: here my love is cold, and oft like to be chilled with froſt-winds, from ſatan and the world; my prayers oft are formal and wandering, my praiſes low and flat; here my beſt wiſhes are attended with many ſhort-comings and defects: But O if I could win to heaven with Chriſt, where grace and holineſs are in perfection, I would praiſe him without wandering, and ſerve him without ſin for ever!—Here ſin ſtill cleaves to my nature, mixes itſelf with my ſervices, and defiles my beſt duties. Here I ſtill carry about with me a deceitful and treacherous heart, whereby I am in hazard of backſliding from God, and miſcarrying for ever, ſhould I be left to it: But O were I with Chriſt, I would be free of all theſe anxious thoughts and fears. Lord, ſtay here with me, or take me up to thee.

But thou ſayeſt, It is expedient for me to ſtay behind for a time. Why Lord? Muſt I ſtay that my travelling graces, my faith, hope and patience, may be tried and exerciſed here below, and thereby gradually ſtrengthned and ripened for the perfect ſtate? Muſt I ſtay that I may be conformed to my Head both in ſerving and ſuffering; and that thy wiſdom, power and mercy may be glorified in conducting and preſerving me thro' all difficulties and dangers of this wilderneſs; Thy will, Lord, be done, only leave me not alone; but for thy name's ſake lead me and guide me.——Or, is it thy pleaſure to ſuſpend my heaven for a while, that I may promote thy glory on earth, be uſeful to the ſouls of others, and recommend my dear Redeemer to theſe who know him not, which is a work I cannot do in heaven? O fit me for it by thy grace, and fill me with zeal for thy glory. O let thy kingdom come upon earth, that the kingdom of glory may be haſtened.

Thou ſayeſt, it is expedient for thee to go away. Why? Lord; muſt thou thyſelf be thy people's Forerunner to carry tidings to heaven of their compleat redemption, and of their coming after thee in their ſeveral generations! muſt thou go to open the paſſage and pave the way for acceſs to their perſons and duties, and prepare rooms and lodgings for them againſt the time they come home?——Muſt thou go away to be a public agent and interceſſor for thy people under all their trials and toſſings here below, and likewiſe to provide and furniſh a rich and glorious communion table for them in thy Father's houſe above? Lord ſend thy holy Spirit to fit and prepare me and many others for that bleſſed entertainment.——Lord, when thou ſaideſt, It is expedient for you, that I go away; thou didſt add, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; Why! it was ſo agreed in the council of the Trinity, that the ſending of the Spirit in his plentiful effuſion which was to be the purchaſe of Chriſt's death, ſhould be given in an anſwer to his interceſſion, when he entered within the vail, John xiv. 16. And the Spirit was to make uſe of it as an argument for convincing the world of the perfection and acceptableneſs of Chriſt's ſacrifice, that Chriſt was now received and welcomed into heaven. Likewiſe the Spirit was to be given only upon Chriſt's aſcenſion to ſupply the want of his bodily preſence to the church, as being far better for them, ſeeing Chriſt's bodily preſence could be in one place only at once, but the Spirit is in every place to animate and put life in ordinances. May the church have this fruit of Chriſt's aſcenſion ſtill more and more.

Lord, though thou haſt gone away for neceſſary ends, yet thy marriage-contract with thy people and the love-tokens thou giveſt them in the ſacrament, are a ſure pledge of thy returning to pay them a comfortable viſit at laſt, according to that ſweet word, John xiv. 3. If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you to myſelf, that where I am, there you may be alſo. O that I may be one of theſe to whom Chriſt's viſit at his ſecond coming will be joyful and comfortable. Let me examine myſelf after the ſacrament, if I have the marks of ſuch.——Am I eſpouſed to Chriſt? Have I a high eſteem of the Bridegroom? Have I ſubſcribed the marriage-contract and gone into Chriſt's terms? Do I heartily approve the whole contrivance of redemption, through the ſuretyſhip and righteouſneſs of Chriſt? Have I renounced my own righteouſneſs, my beloved ſins, and all Chriſt's enemies?——Do I mourn for the injures done to Chriſt by myſelf and others, and rejoice when his intereſt and kingdom proſper in the world? Do I mourn for Chriſt's departure and the withdrawing of his Spirit from ordinances, or from my own ſoul? Do I thirſt for more holineſs in heart and life, and for greater conformity and likeneſs to the glorious Bridegroom? Then I may expect his viſit and return will be comfortable to me, and I may rejoice in the view and expectation of it, and anſwer Chriſt when he ſaith, Rev. xxii. 20. Surely I come quickly; Amen, even ſo come Lord Jeſus.—Is my Forerunner now gone away? Let me follow him as cloſely and ſpeedily as I can: Let me follow him in the way of faith, in the way of obedience, in the way of ſuffering, in the way of patience, prayer, reſignation, deniedneſs to the world, heavenly-mindedneſs, &c.

MEDITATION XXIII.

From Hoſ. ii. 19. I will betroth thee unto me for ever.—

ABigail thought herſelf highly honoured, by David's propoſing to match with her: But much more honoured are we apoſtate ſinners of Adam's family by the eternal Son of God his propoſing to match with us, and courting us ſo earneſtly; when he neglected angels that ſeemed to be a fitter match for him in reſpect of the ſuperior dignity of their nature. Yet all theſe he would paſs by, and match with worms!—O how amazing is this ſtep! that the heavenly Bridegroom, whoſe kingdom is mighty, his riches infinite, and his beauty ſurpaſſing; that he ſhould chuſe a bride naturally polluted, deformed, uncomely and black as hell! and that he ſhould ſeek her through a ſea of blood, through the pains of death, the horrors of the grave, and torments of hell! And after many ſlights and refuſals, that he ſhould follow her in her wanderings through the wilderneſs of ſin, with his charming invitations, and alluring offers in the goſpel, preſenting her with the rings and bracelets of his precious promiſes and Spirit's conſolations; and all to win her heart and gain her conſent to him!—How aſtoniſhing is it to ſee this glorious Perſon coming over all objections from the blackneſs, guilt, poverty, and unworthineſs of the bride, ſaying, though ſhe be black, I'll make her comely thro' my comelineſs put upon her! Though ſhe be mean, I'll make her noble! Though a ſlave, I'll make her free! Though a fool, I'll make her wiſe! Though bankrupt, I'll pay all her debt! Come here law, juſtice, and all her creditors, here full ſatisfaction of all that is due to you, take it, and write her diſcharge! Now, who can lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? Chriſt's bride!—Behold God diſplaying his free love here to the uttermoſt! He never diſplayed his other attributes to the utmoſt; infinite wiſdom could have contrived ten thouſand worlds more beautiful than this, and infinite power could have produced them. But here infinite love and mercy hath gone to the utmoſt; a greater demonſtration of his love Chriſt could not give, than by leaving heaven, aſſuming a body, and giving his life for the bride, nay wading through hell for her, and in face of all diſcouragements courting and betrothing her to himſelf for ever!

After many meetings, treaties, and broken tryſts with ſome, the Bridegroom is come again to court a bride, and has ſent his friends in his name to demand her conſent, ſaying as they did to Rebekah, Gen. xxiv. 58. Wilt thou go with this man? Poor woman, lad, laſs, wilt thou yield to this glorious Immanuel; many former treaties have been broke off by the devil, the world, unbelief, and an ill heart! Oh, will not the long ſpoken of match hold at length! Miniſters, the Bridegroom's friends, are doing their beſt to draw on another meeting between the parties. Chriſt, I ſee, is content to hold another, and it may be the laſt tryſt he will ſet with many. To ſhew his earneſtneſs, he hath conveened his friends, angels, ſaints, and ambaſſadors to witneſs the ſincerity of parties; he hath put on his ſcarlet robes, his garments dipt in blood, to win ſinners hearts; he hath brought the marriage-contract and ſpread it before them, ſaying, "What think ye of its articles and terms? Are ye pleaſed with them? Are ye content to break with ſin and all my enemies? To renounce the world, ſelf-righteouſneſs, and all other lovers? to fall in with the ſelf-denying way of ſalvation through a borrowed righteouſneſs? to accept of me in all my offices? to live wholly upon your Huſband, borrow all of him, and be an eternal debtor to him? to make a ſurrender of your ſoul and body to him, and ſeal a covenant with him at his table? Are you reſolved to be faithful to your Huſband, cleave to him all the days of your life, and be oft looking out for his ſecond coming? And in the mean time to be oft commemorating his ſufferings, conflicts, conqueſts and atchievements, and for that end to be frequently looking on his picture in the ſacrament with a believing, penitent and thankful heart? Now what is your anſwer? Lay your hand to your heart."

Lord, unworthy as I am, I deſire to go foreward through all difficulties, impediments and diſcouragements, and ſay with Rebekah, when called to anſwer, I will go with the man: And with Eſther, I will go in to the king. Though I be not worthy of him, yet he is worthy to be obeyed that calls me: Tho' he hath no need of me, yet I have great need of him; Though my diſtance be great, he allows me to creep nearer to him: Though I cannot move of myſelf, yet he is able to draw me, be my clogs ever ſo great: Though my motion be ſmall, yet I will not turn back, but keep my face toward him, and fix my eye on him. As a look hath brought healing, ſo a look hath brought ſtrength; yea, though he ſhould ſeem to frown on me, and chide me away from him; yet, like Jonah, I will look again towards his holy temple: Though I have no worthineſs in myſelf, yet he hath worthineſs enough for me: Though I be a black aud uncomely bride, my glorious Huſband can beautify me with his perfect comelineſs put upon me. Therefore I do, with all my heart, accept of him as my Lord and Huſband: Lord, I make choice of thee, and all that is thine; for richer, for poorer, for better, for worſe; for well, for woe; for proſperity, for adverſity; I make choice of thee for all times and conditions, to love, honour and obey thee above all. I renounce all other lords or lovers, and will have none but Chriſt: I renounce my own will, and take thy will for my law. I eſteem thy precepts concerning all things to be right, and will hate every falſe way: I ſubmit to all thy providences and dealings with me, and am content to take up thy croſs and follow thee, whitherſoever thou goeſt: I take thy Spirit for my guide, thy word for my rule, thy glory for my ſcope, thy teſtimonies for my counſellors, thy promiſes for my encouragement, thy ſabbaths for my delight, thy people for my companions: Lord Jeſus, I take thee for my life, holineſs for my way, and heaven for my home.——And as I accept of thee, and all that is thine; ſo I give up myſelf to thee, and all that is mine, ſoul and body, with all my faculties and affections, ſenſes and members, to be thy agents and inſtruments; with all my enjoyments to be employed for thy uſe and ſervice.

I will go with the man, though I ſee him all over wounded, mangled and bleeding, and his viſage marred with the wounds, ſtripes and blows which he got from men and devils. Nay, I ſee him even in this mangled condition, to be fairer than all the ſons of men, and all the ſons of God too; for I ſee him wounded for my tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for my iniquities, that by his ſtripes I might be healed. I ſee him a match every way ſuitable for me, that can ſupply all my needs: I am a poor dying worm, but he is a living head that can make me live for ever: I am a needy creature all made up of wants, but in him doth all manner of fulneſs dwell: I want grace, but he hath all fulneſs of grace ſuitable for me: I want grace to believe, but he is the Author of faith: I want grace to repent, but he is a Prince and Saviour exalted to give repentance: I want grace to pray, to hear, to communicate, to mortify ſin, bear the croſs, reſiſt temptation, &c. but my Huſband hath all grace to beſtow. O let me be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus.

O that I had the true marks of theſe who are divorced from the law, and married to Chriſt as their Huſband, that I could ſay, I look upon all my doings in point of acceptance with God as old rags; I live wholly and freely upon my Huſband, and take all I want from him for nothing: I clothe myſelf with his righteouſneſs and eſſay the performance of every duty in his ſtrength; I deſire to live entirely upon his coſt.—I have a heart-love to my Huſband, and every thing that belongs to him, and a hatred to ſin, and averſion to every thing that is injurious to him: I am deſirous to pleaſe him in all things, and out of regard to his dying command, I go to his table, to remember his dying love, and renew my marriage vows: I delight in my Huſband's company, and preſs for communion with him in all ordinances. His honour is always dear to me, and I am eaſy about my own honour and intereſt in reſpect of his: Let me decreaſe, but let him increaſe. And in regard the devil reigns here, ſin abounds, error and corruption prevail; I am well pleaſed with the thoughts of Chriſt's ſecond coming to pull down ſatan's kingdom, and to conſummate the marriage with me, and all that are eſpouſed to him, and ſay, Why tarry the wheels of his chariot? Make haſte, my beloved, even ſo come Lord Jeſus. O that all the world would love him, exalt him, and ſubmit to him. Many in different places admire him, and ſee matchleſs charms in him, his name to them is as ointment poured forth, his garments ſmell of aloes, myrrh and caſſia, they have beheld his ſtately goings in the ſanctuary: O that all the world might ſo admire him, and ſubmit to him alſo.

MEDITATION XXIV.

From Iſa. liii. 8.—For the tranſgreſſion of my people was he ſtriken.

OUR ſins and tranſgreſſions are great and various, and therefore our Surety's ſufferings for them were heavy and manifold; he endured many wounds, bruiſes, chaſtiſements and ſtripes, which ſhould ſtill endear him the more unto us; for he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was bruiſed for our iniquities; the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed, ver. 5. O who can think on that verſe without ſorrow, or ſpeak of it without tears? He was wounded and bruiſed to death, to ſave us from deadly wounds and bruiſes: And when dying, he left us his portraiture, with the marks of his wounds, that we might look upon it at his table, and mourn for our ſins which gave him theſe wounds. Oh, can I ſee my dear Saviour all wounded and mangled by my ſins, and not be deeply affected for the tranſgreſſions for which my dear Jeſus was ſtricken! Stricken he was many ways, by many hands, by many rods, by many ſtripes: He was ſtricken by the hand of God, by the hand of men, by the hand of devils; ſtricken by the rod of Moſes, the rod of juſtice, the rod of the Jews, &c. O how early was he ſtricken by the ill uſage he met with from men, being thruſt out, to be born in a foul ſtable and laid in a manger; and ſoon after was he ſtricken by the rod of perſecution and baniſhment, being made to flee his native country for ſafety from Herod. All this he ſuffered for us, becauſe we deſerved to be deprived of all earthly accommodations and comforts, and to be baniſh'd from God and heaven for ever.

He was ſtricken by the rod of poverty, and pinching ſtraits. Though he was the King of the univerſe, and poſſeſſed all the riches in it, yet for our ſakes he became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich, 2 Cor. viii. 5. He was not born of a rich empreſs, but of a poor virgin; not in his own houſe, but in another man's: He had no houſe nor foot of ground of his own to live or lodge in: Though the foxes had holes, and the birds neſts, yet he that created them, had not where to lay his head. His diet was oft a-ſeeking, and commonly very mean, barley-bread and ſmall fiſhes. He had no money to pay his tax, but muſt borrow it from a fiſh of the ſea: He travelled ſtill on foot, except once he rode to Jeruſalem to fulfil a prophecy; and then he had neither horſe nor aſs of his own, but muſt borrow another man's aſs: He had no fine mounting, but the clothes of them that followed him: He had no burial-place of his own, but was laid in another man's; and all this he ſubmitted to for our ſakes.—He was alſo ſtricken by the rod of ſore labour and toil, by working at a mechanic trade, until he was thirty years of age; therefore they ſaid, Mark vi. 3. Is not this the Carpenter? Man having eaten the forbidden fruit, was doomed to ſore labour, that he ſhould eat his bread with the ſweat of his brow, Gen. iii. 19. and to this doom our Surety ſubmitted for us. Man broke God's covenant by eating of the tree, therefore his Surety muſt die on a tree. Man idolized a tree, and preferred its fruit to God's favour; therefore his Surety muſt labour in cutting and hewing trees moſt of his time.—Man lived a life of ſinning, and therefore Chriſt muſt live a life of labour and ſorrow; he even became a man of ſorrows, Iſa. liii. 3. that we might obtain everlaſting joy and conſolation.

He was ſtricken by mens reproachful tongues, ſcoffs and mockeries, being called a glutton, wine-biber, deceiver, Samaritan, blaſphemer, a devil; and one in compact with Beelzebub, the prince of devils. They derided him in all his offices, as a Prophet, by bidding him propheſy who ſmote him; as a Prieſt, bidding him ſave himſelf, ſince he pretended to ſave others; as a King, by putting on him a purple robe, a crown of thorns, and giving him a mock ſceptre. Yea, he endured the moſt cruel mockings, and that in the midſt of his ſharpeſt ſufferings and ſoul agonies, when he cried out on the bloody croſs, Eli, Eli, &c. O, ſay they, this man calls for Elias, playing on the word Eli. It was not out of ignorance or miſtake they ſaid ſo, but out of malice and deriſion; for they underſtood the Hebrew language well enough, and knew he called on God, and that Eli ſignified, My God. But, in their ſpite, they would repreſent him as an idolater; and when dying, that he prayed not to God, but to ſaints for help.—He was ſtricken by the moſt open affronts and indignities from men, by ſpitting in his face, condemning him to die for blaſphemy againſt God, and treaſon againſt Cæſar: By preferring Barabbas, a murderer, before him, and poſting him between two thieves. Thus the King of glory was deſpiſed and rejected of men for us, Iſa. liii. 3.

He was ſtricken by the ſcourges of platted cords on his back, and with the thorns they drove into his head: That thorny crown was deſigned for torture, as well as deriſion; for, if it had been only to mock him, a crown of ſtraw would have ſerved the purpoſe as well as one of thorns.—He was ſtricken by the pincers that pluckt the hair off his cheeks; and by the heavy croſs-tree laid on his bleeding ſhoulders, which he muſt carry to Calvary.—He was ſtricken with four big iron nails through his hands and feet, on which his whole weight muſt hang.—He was ſtricken with a burning heat and thirſt, which the wrath of God, for our ſins, created in him, and dried him up like a potſherd: This made him cry out, I thirſt; yet no wine, no fountain, no creature that he made muſt relieve him at this time.—He was ſtricken by a ſpear thruſt into his ſide, to let out his heart-blood, to be ſure, that no life remained. Well, (ſaid our dying Lamb) let my deareſt blood, my heart-blood go for theſe loſt ſinners, that their ſouls may live and ſing for ever.

He was ſtricken by the ungrateful behaviour of his own diſciples to him: By Judas his betraying and ſelling him for a ſmall ſum, the price of a ſlave: By Peter's denying him, and ſwearing he knew him not, at the temptation of a poor damſel: By all of them forſaking him, and leaving him in the midſt of his enemies.—Beſides all this, he was ſtricken in his ſoul, by the terrible glittering ſword of juſtice, by the curſes of the law, by deſertion from God, by the vials of his wrath poured out on him, which made fearful bruiſes, deep wounds, and wide gaſhes in his ſoul. Oh, our dear Surety was ſtricken till he fell to the ground; was overwhelmed with wrath, and covered with blood. With theſe ſtrokes our mighty Redeemer was thrown down, and broken with breach upon breach, till all the ſea billows of divine vengeance went over him. Oh, never was there any ſorrow like my dear Saviour's ſorrow, which he ſuffered when ſtricken for my ſins!

Lord, I am aſhamed of the hardneſs and unconcernedneſs of my heart at this moving ſpectacle! Oh, did the dead earth tremble, the hard rocks rend, the graves open, the heavens turn black at the ſight of a dying Jeſus, ſtricken by the ſword of juſtice? And ſhall not my rocky heart tremble and quake, rend and melt for my ſins, that were the cauſe of it? Shall the hiſtory of Joſeph in the pit move me more than that of Chriſt upon the croſs? Shall the news of the tragical death of a friend, or the ſufferings of an acquaintance among the Turks, move me more than the death and ſufferings of the innocent Son of God on my account? Alas, my heart of ſtone will neither break nor melt, till Chriſt turn and look on me, as he did on backſliding Peter. Lord, one look from thee can turn the rock into a ſtanding water, and the flint into a fountain of water. One blink of the Sun of righteouſneſs can melt the moſt frozen and icy heart in the world.

O how lovely is my ſtricken and bleeding Jeſus! Even when bleeding and mangled by my ſins, I ſee him to be white and ruddy, and the chiefeſt among ten thouſand. Every wound and ſtroke he got doth ſtill beautify him the more to me, and make my ſoul to cry, O my loving and lovely Jeſus! O how can I ſee him ſubſtituting himſelf in my room, and making himſelf the butt of the envenomed arrows of juſtice, and not be raviſhed with his love to me, and with the warmeſt affection to him! And at the ſame time, filled with ſorrow for my ſins, which brought on all his ſtrokes and wounds? Oh my ſins were the thorns that pierced his head, the nails that pierced his hands, and the ſpear that pierced his heart. My ſins preſſed him down, and made him ſweat blood in the garden. My ſoul being exceeding ſinful, made his ſoul exceeding ſorrowful. May I always hate ſin, and ſorrow for it.

MEDITATION XXV.

From Gal. ii. 20. I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me.

O How deſirable an attainment is the exerciſe of true faith upon the great Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, with an appropriating perſuaſion, or ſpecial application to a man himſelf, ſo as to ſay, "I believe and admire his "love to the elect in general, and to me in particular; "I truſt him with my ſoul, and my eternal ſalvation; "I embrace him, and put my whole confidence in him, "who loved me, and gave himſelf for me!" Surely, this is the faith that every one, that deſires to obey that great commandment, 1 John iii. 23. ſhould aim at, and preſs for, as a thing of the laſt moment, and conſequence: O Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief.

Lord, I will not reſt in a general belief and perſuaſion of the mercy of God in Chriſt, and of Chriſt's ability and willingneſs to ſave all that come unto him; but I will apply his blood and righteouſneſs to myſelf in particular, and reſt on him as one that loved me, and gave himſelf for me. This appropriating faith is neceſſary to my juſtification; for every juſtified perſon applies Chriſt's righteouſneſs to himſelf, ſaying, as in Iſa. xlv. 24. Surely in the Lord have I righteouſneſs. As the church in general calls him, the Lord our righteouſneſs, ſo I, in particular, call him the Lord my righteouſneſs. I make it my daily practice to wrap up my naked ſoul in this robe, and live by faith upon it. I make perſonal and particular application of the remedy to my ſoul's maladies, and draw virtue from it.—This particular appropriation in the actings of faith, is moſt needful for clearing up a believer's evidences, and for filling the ſoul with joy and peace in believing; for overcoming the fears of death, and giving comfort at a dying hour. And particularly, it contributes greatly to the ſoul's comfortable approach to the holy table of the Lord, when it can ſay, "I receive a crucified Chriſt as my Saviour; I go to him as one who loved me, "and gave himſelf for me; I take the ſymbols, and feed "upon his body as broken for me, and on his blood "as ſhed for me; and I accept of theſe as an earneſt "and pledge of my living and feaſting with my Saviour for ever."

A crucified Chriſt, with all his purchaſe, is offered to all the hearers of the goſpel: For Chriſt in the word, and by his miniſters in the goſpel-offer, ſpeaks to all and every one of them, yea, ſpeaks to every ſinner, man and woman in particular, as though he called them by name and ſirname. And every man is bound to take the call and offer home to himſelf, as if he were ſo named, and believe that Chriſt ſtands at his door and knocks, ſaying, If you, or any man, will open to me, I will come in. The promiſe is to you, and to all that are afar off, even to all the ends of the earth, and to the ſtout-hearted: to all the ſons of men, to every creature, to them that have no money, to the poor, maimed, blind, naked, wretched and miſerable, and to whoſoever will come; To you is the word of this ſalvation ſent. Chriſt doth beſeech you to be reconciled, and to beware of coming ſhort of the promiſe, by unbelief; ſuch a promiſe as that, Whoſoever believeth in the Son ſhall not periſh, but have eternal life: And that, him that cometh to me, I will in no ways caſt out: Beſides many others; John iii. 16.—vi. 37. Rev. iii. 17, 18, 20.—xxii. 17. Prov. viii. 4. Iſa. xlv. 22.—xlvi. 12. —lv. 1. Mark xvi. 15. Luke xiv. 21, 22, 23. Acts ii. 39.—iii. 26.—xiii. 26, 47. 2 Cor. v. 20. Heb. iv. 1.

Now, ſeeing the goſpel-call and offer is given to every one, faith, which is the eccho of the goſpel call, muſt needs receive an offered Chriſt, and ſalvation through him, with particular application to the ſoul that believes. As Chriſt offers himſelf, and his purchaſe, to every ſoul in particular; ſo faith appropriates Chriſt to the ſoul itſelf in particular. And indeed, the life and ſweetneſs of faith lies in this appropriation and applicatory act, when the ſoul is helped to ſay, with Thomas, Thou art my Lord, and my God; and, with the ſpouſe, My beloved is mine, and I am his; and, with David, Thou art my Rock, and the God of my ſalvation.—Unbelief would tempt me to put away the goſpel-offer from me, ſaying, It doth not belong to me, I am not elected, nor deſigned to ſhare of Chriſt's purchaſe; he did not love, nor die for me.——But in regard ſecret things belong to God, my ſalvation is at the ſtake, my need of a Saviour is unſpeakable, and the offer is made to me; I have no time to loſe in diſputing with the devil and unbelief, but I will go to Chriſt on the ground I have. He tells me, He came to ſave ſinners, I am ſure that is my name; he loved enemies, that is my name; he received gifts for the rebellious, that is my name; and now I hear the Maſter calling and inviting me in particular: Therefore, in ſpite of the devil and unbelief, and all my guilt, I'll go forward, and accept of Chriſt as my Saviour and my King; I'll truſt him with my ſalvation, and believe he loved me, and gave himſelf for me, vile and guilty as I am.——This eſſay to believe, Lord, I make in thy ſtrength, and in obedience to thy command; But, Oh, my mints are weak and feckleſs! it is only thy Spirit enlightning my mind, and opening up the goſpel-call and promiſe to me, ſaying, To you is the word of this ſalvation ſent; that determines me to make particular application of thy love-offer, by an acceptable appropriating faith: Let my help come from thee.

Oh Lord, my ſins are great and numerous; but, ſhould I add to them the ſin of refuſing the Remedy, and putting away Chriſt's love and blood offered to me in the goſpel, this would be greater than all the reſt; for ſo I would bring not only my own blood, but the guilt of the blood of God upon my head. This I dare not do; now my ſoul is at the ſtake, now the Remedy is in my offer, my need of it is great, I cannot delay cloſing with it, yet a little while and my opportunity is gone, and I muſt change my dwelling for ever; and how can I go any where without my Saviour? Chriſt I muſt have to teach me, juſtify and ſanctify me, none elſe can do it, on him all my help is laid. How ſhall I go to a communion table without him? How will I go to death without him? How will I go to a judgment ſeat without him? Lord, my caſe is deſperate without thee; wherefore I accept of thy offer, I believe thy love, I truſt in thy merits, I apply thy blood, I appropriate thy purchaſe, and cry, My Lord, and my God. I confide in a ſin-pardoning God, and reſt on his promiſe to me, through Chriſt's blood and merit, for life and ſalvation. And though clouds ariſe, and he ſhould threaten even to ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him, as one that loved me, and gave himſelf for me.

Object. But doth not the calling ſinners to ſuch appropriating acts of faith, encourage the preſumptuous confidence of hypocrites to call God their God, like Balaam, Num. xxii. 18. and to continue in ſin? Anſw. No; theſe goſpel-calls do encourage ſinners to love God, to repent and leave their ſins; for till we believe, and taſte ſomething of God's love to us, we cannot love him, nor turn to him, 1 John iv. 19. We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us. And the abuſe or preſumption of hypocrites muſt not hinder the publiſhing of free goſpel-offers, and promiſes. Again, the appropriating faith of believers humbles the creature, deſtroys ſelf confidence, purifies the heart, draws forth the ſoul in love to God, and hatred to ſin; whereas the preſumption of hypocrites hath no ſuch effects.

It is the duty then of every man that hath Chriſt's love-offers tendered to him, to repent and believe the goſpel, to ſee his loſt ſtate in Adam, and his need of Chriſt, to be well-pleaſed with the goſpel device, receive Chriſt in all his offices, to truſt in him as his Saviour, and thereupon believe that his ſins are forgiven through Chriſt's blood; and ſo perſuade and aſſure himſelf that Chriſt is his, that he died for him, and that he ſhall have life and ſalvation through him. This perſuaſion and aſſurance being moſt neceſſary to the ſpiritual life, it is the great duty of every one to preſs forwards, in the acts of faith, until they attain it, faith being ſtill weak and lame without it, But ſeeing many believers have it not always, through prevailing doubts and unbelief, it muſt ſurely belong more to the perfection of faith, than to the eſſence of it: Their caſe is like that of a ſhipwreck'd man that hath got hold of a plank, he believes the plank is ſufficient to bear him up, and keep him from ſinking, but the blowing ſtorm, and his own weakneſs, make him doubt if his grip be faſt enough to hold by it.——Indeed, Lord, if thou didſt not take faſter grips of me than I do of thee, my weak and ſlippery finger'd faith would ſoon let thee go; but I truſt not in my faith, but in thy faithfulneſs; I truſt not in my promiſes to thee, but in thine to me; that thou wilt never leave me, nor forſake me. Lord, do as thou haſt ſaid; be it to me according to thy word.

MEDITATION XXVI.

From 1 John iv. 19. We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

NO reaſon can be given why God loved any of Adam's race, but only becauſe he loved us: But good reaſons can be given why we love God, both becauſe he is infinitely lovely in himſelf, and becauſe he firſt loved us, and before we had any thoughts of love to him.—O what is our love, but a ſmall ſtream that flows from and returns again to the ocean of his love! God's love to us is the ſource, the incentive, the motive, and moral cauſe, of our love to him. We can never love God, until ſome rays of his everlaſting love break out to us; for conſciouſneſs of guilt, and fears of wrath, do rather incline us to hate him, and flee from him as an enemy, than to love him, and draw near to him: But the breaking out of the beams of God's ancient and preventing love to us in Jeſus Chriſt, makes way for breaking the enmity of our hearts, and bringing in the heavenly fire of love to him. The ſerious conſideration of God's eternal, free love to us poor, wretched and unlovely creatures, and his loving us at ſuch a rate as to ſeek and court our love at the expence of his Son's blood, is the moſt powerful motive in the world to engage and draw out our love to him; and the more we have of the faith or feeling of this love, the warmer ſtill will our love to him be. God's redeeming love diſplayed to men doth obſcure all the ſeeming glories of this world, as much as the meridian ſun doth darken candles or ſmaller fires; and ſoon convinces us that there is nothing that deſerves our affections but God and Chriſt. No man that ever taſted the ſweetneſs of God's love, but finds his heart warmed with love to him again. A forgiven ſoul cannot read his pardon but with tears of love and joy, and ſtill there is much love where much is forgiven. We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

Lord, at thy call I go to thy table to admire and give thanks for God's preventing love vented to man in the council of peace, the covenant of redemption, in the incarnation, the death, the blood and righteouſneſs of our Lord Redeemer, O amazing love! I admire it in the antiquity of it; God's love is from all eternity; his thoughts were long ſet upon man before he had a being. I admire the freeneſs and undeſervedneſs of this love; there was nothing in man to engage his love; he ſaw nothing in him but poverty, debt, impotency, and deformity; yea, man was ſo far from deſerving any love from God, that he deſerved all hatred, as being lothſome and full of enmity; having razed out the image of God, and got ſatan's ſet up in its room! yet even then, God loved him ſo, as to give his dearly beloved Son to die for him. O, did God love man when utterly unworthy of his love! and ſhall we not love God who infinitely deſerves all our affection, as being in himſelf entirely amiable, and altogether lovely; and likewiſe as affectionate to us, as he is lovely in himſelf!—Lord Jeſus, I admire the ſtrength and ardency of thy love! Many waters of affliction did not quench it; and the floods of wrath, that went over thee, could not drown it! ſtrong was that love that made thee engage, and carried thee thro' in ſuffering the pains both of the firſt and ſecond death in our ſtead! Oh, I am aſhamed and afflicted for my little love to thee!—I marvel at the conſtancy and ſteadfaſtneſs of thy love, that it continues firm to thy people from everlaſting to everlaſting; and that it is never altered by all the unkind returns, provocations, and ingratitude thou meets with from them! I wonder at the fruits and effects of thy love! O how great! how ſweet! how numerous! Who can value or ſet them forth? Such as, "Quenching the fire of juſtice, diſarming the law of its curſes, bruiſing the ſerpent's head, paying believers debt, obtaining for them regeneration, pardon of ſin, peace with God, peace with conſcience, peace with angels, adoption into God's family, juſtification, ſanctification, all the graces of the Spirit, audience of prayer, growth in grace, comfort in affliction, a bleſſing on all providences, perſeverance in holineſs, the miniſtry of angels, victory over death, a happy reſurrection, acquittance at the tribunal, the beatific viſion, and everlaſting life!" Who can declare the loving-kindneſs of the Lord? Who can utter his mighty acts! Who can ſhew forth all his praiſe? I may ſooner fathom the depth of the ſea, the breadth of the earth, or the height of heaven, than meaſure the love of God in Chriſt; for it paſſeth knowledge?

Oh, how little do we love him, that loved us firſt, and loved us at ſuch a rate! Nay, how unthankful are we for all the inſtances and fruits of his matchleſs love! How unkind are the returns we make to him for it? Be aſtoniſhed, O ye heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid at the ingratitude of men! How little do we think on redeeming love, and upon the propitiation provided by God for our ſins! How little do we ſpeak of this love, or recommend it to theſe who know it not! How do the ſmall trifles, and little nothings of this world, get more room in our hearts, than Chriſt's glorious purchaſe! How little pains are we at to ſecure an intereſt in the bleſſed fruits of his love! How unwilling are we to go into the terms of redeeming love, to renounce a covenant of works, ſelf-righteouſneſs, darling ſins, beloved idols! &c. How averſe are we to renounce the world, deny ſelf, and to be debtors wholly to free grace! How inclinable are we to ſatisfy conſcience after the commiſſion of ſin, by our own doings, confeſſions, mournings, reſolutions, &c. without going to the propitiation provided by the love of God! How great is the liking we have to ſin that killed the Lamb of God! How can we ſay, we love God that loved us firſt, when we hugg his enemy in our boſom! O that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep and mourn day and night for the ungrateful requitals of the ſons of men for the preventing love of God in Chriſt, and the amazing inſtances of it!

O that I could ſay on good ground, and from the bottom of my heart, I love him that firſt loved me. Surely a ſincere love to God and Chriſt would be a ſure evidence of God's eternal love to me! O that I had the marks of this love, and could ſay, My meditations of him are ſweet: I place my happineſs in his favour, and the comfort of all ordinances in his preſence: I rejoice in the flouriſhing of his kingdom, and abhor every thing that is injurious to him: I eſteem Chriſt the Mediator, and gift of God, as moſt precious, with every thing that belongs to him: I fall heartily in with the device of redeeming love for ſaving ſinners, and ſtudy the life of faith on the Son of God.——I renounce my own righteouſneſs and ſtrength, and deſire always to ſay, In the Lord Jeſus have I my righteouſneſs and ſtrength. Were this the language of my heart, I might appeal to himſelf, and ſay, Thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee, and deſire to render thee love for love.

It would be a great ſhame for believers, if they did not love him that firſt loved them, when they were enemies to him! Surely they cannot be believers without love to him. O for greater and warmer love to him that firſt loved us! Love is the great qualification of the ſaints above; the more love we have, the liker heaven we are, and the meeter to dwell in it. Were it poſſible there could be a man in heaven without love, he would reckon the place a hell, and the work a torment to him. It is love that makes ſpiritual and heavenly work delightful; hence love is ſaid to be the fulfilling of the law. If the love of God be in the heart, the law of God is there alſo, and the ſoul is inclined to all holy obedience. O may the love of God in Chriſt conſtrain me to live to him that died for me.—Have I ſeen the aſtoniſhing love of God in parting with his dear Son to ſave me? O let that love conſtrain me to part with all my ſins and idols for him.—Have I ſeen the dear Son's amazing love in bleeding to death on the curſed tree, to ſave me from lying in hell for ever? O let me never again wittingly walk in the road that leads to it.—Have I ſeen him ſtruggling in an agony to open heaven's gates for me? O let me never turn my back on heaven, and tell him thereby he might have ſaved his labour. O let his boundleſs love warm my heart more and more with love to him! May the charms of his love triumph over all the charms of ſin's pleaſures and ſatan's devices, and kindle ſuch a fire of love in my heart, as will burn up all my luſts like ſtubble. Amen.

MEDITATION XXVII.

From Pſal. cxxvi. 5. They that ſow in tears, ſhall reap in joy.

THE ſowing time of God's people is all here, but their reaping time is but partly here, and far more fully hereafter. Here they ſow very much in tears, there is need for it; this ſeed-time is the moſt promiſing of any. Men love a dry ſeed-time, but God loves wet ſeed-times beſt: A wet ſowing time doth promiſe a harveſt of joy, whereas a dry one portends a harveſt of ſorrow. Wo to them that laugh now, they ſhall weep. If men do not begin with tears, they ſhall end with them; if they weep not now, they ſhall weep and wail and gnaſh their teeth hereafter.—Godly weeping is a good ſign of ſpiritual life. If a child, when born, was heard cry, it is reckoned a legal proof of its living; but if not, it is accounted ſtill-born or dead. Alas, the number of ſtill-born children in the church is great! few are heard cry, or ſeen weep, in a godly ſort, if compared with theſe who do not.—There be many who pour out tears on worldly occaſions, but few on ſpiritual accounts. If a child die, we can mourn and weep over him, but who mourns for Chriſt as for an only ſon? Who weeps for ſin that pierced him? Oh, how little are we affected with the ſufferings of our dear Redeemer! Our ears are ſo accuſtomed to the hearing of Chriſt's love, his agonies, his wounds, his blood, his death, that they are become words of a common ſound, and make little impreſſion on us, though they be the moſt awful and moving things that ever the world heard of.—Thou, Lord, art preſent at ſacraments, thou obſerveſt our tears, and comeſt with thy bottle to receive and preſerve them; but, Oh, how empty is it of tears, for the moſt part, of goſpel-hearers! and how few are the tears which are dropt into it by communicants themſelves!

Lord, I am aſhamed of the hardneſs and unconcernedneſs of my heart, and the woful dryneſs of my eyes! Shall the rocks about Jeruſalem rend ſooner at Chriſt's ſufferings than my rocky heart? Shall others weep and ſow in tears, when Chriſt's wounds and blood are ſet before them, and I continue ſtupid and hardened? Shall the hiſtory of Joſeph in the pit move my heart more than that of Chriſt upon the croſs! Lord, look upon my ſtony heart with pity, look it into ſtreams of penitential tears, give me ſuch a look as thou gaveſt Peter when he denied thee, a look that may cauſe me weep, and weep bitterly at the remembrance of my ſins that pierced thee. If I have not openly denied my Saviour, ſurely I have ſhamefully forgot him, and forſaken him in my heart: I have had a deep hand in all his ſufferings. When my dear Lord was in the garden ſweating blood, neither Jew nor Gentile, Judas nor Pilate, were there to cauſe it; but Oh my unbelief, my pride, my carnality, my hypocriſy, my ſinful words and actions were there, and with their weight preſſed him to the ground, and brought that fearful agony and ſweat upon him. My diſſimulation was the traitor's kiſs, my ambition the thorny crown, my drinking up iniquity like water the portion of gall and vinegar; my want of tears cauſed him ſhed both tears and blood, my forſaking God made him to be forſaken of God, my ſoul's being exceeding guilty made his ſoul exceeding heavy! Oh, what means then the hardneſs of my heart, and dryneſs of my eyes, when theſe things are ſet before me! Is it that weeping is deſigned for me hereafter, where tears ſhall never be dried up! Lord ſave me, for Chriſt's ſake, from hell's tears, and give grace to prevent them by ſowing in tears now in the proper ſeaſon.

So long as I am in the valley of tears, there are many reaſons for ſowing the ſeed of tears. I ſee many grounds for them, may a glance of them be the means of melting my heart, and filling my eyes with tears.—Tears for my woful apoſtaſy from God in Adam, whereby I am baniſhed from God, have loſt his image and countenance, and am fallen under his wrath and curſe.—Tears for the woful corruption of my nature, my enmity againſt God, and the manifold plagues of my heart, as atheiſm, ignorance, pride, unbelief, hardneſs, hypocriſy, formality, &c.——Tears for the ſins of my life, open and ſecret, of omiſſion and commiſſion, of light and ignorance, which are more in number than the hairs of my head, and many of them very heinous becauſe of ſeveral aggravations; of all which I may have an affecting view by reading our larger Catechiſm upon the ten commandments.——Tears upon the remembrance of Chriſt's love, in ſuffering and dying in my room, to waſh away my ſins and ſave me from hell. Surely the thoughts of this love may inflame the coldeſt breaſt, melt the hardeſt heart, and make the drieſt conſtitution run down with tears. It was this that made Mary Magdalene's eyes guſh out ſo plentifully with tears of love and joy as were enough to waſh her Saviour's feet.——Tears for the abuſe of God's fatherly goodneſs, mercy, and patience towards me a ſinful hell deſerving creature: This conſideration melted the prodigal's heart, and made him cry, Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven and in thy ſight, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſon. David's undeſerved kindneſs made even the hard hearted Saul to lift up his voice and weep, and will not God's kindneſs which is infinitely greater and freer, make me drop ſome ſilent tears at his holy table?—Tears, becauſe of the frowns of my heavenly Father, the tokens of his diſpleaſure, his chaſtiſements, and even his chidings and ſhaking the rod at me: Theſe will melt the heart of a child whoſe nature is kindly and ingenuous, while the ſtubborn will ſtand againſt many ſtrokes. David though a man of the greateſt valour againſt his enemies; yet when he ſaw God was angry with him in Abſalom's rebellion, he wept like a child before the enemy while going up Olivet, 2 Sam. xv. 30. and ſeemed to have no courage at all.——Again, I ought to ſow in tears for the diſhonours done to God by the ſins of others; and eſpecially when damnable hereſies and blaſphemies are vented againſt God. And likewiſe tears for the miſeries and periſhing condition of others. And eſpecially tears of ſympathy with God's people in affliction. For I read of Chriſt himſelf, David, Hezekiah, Joſiah, Jeremiah and other ſaints ſowing ſuch tears. Well then may this world be called a valley of tears.

Beſides all theſe, it is well-pleaſing to God when Chriſtians ſow tears of tenderneſs in renewing covenant with him, in prayer, in hearing the word, in communicating and commemorating the death and ſufferings of Chriſt for their ſins. This laſt is a ſpecial ſeaſon for ſowing tears, according to Zech. xii. 10. O ſhall Chriſtians be more ſparing of their tears for Chriſt, than Chriſt was of his blood for them? We cry out againſt the Jews and Romans as hard hearted men for piercing Chriſt, and being unconcerned for his ſufferings. But what ſofter are our hearts if we can ſee how our ſins put him to death, and not be grieved nor weep. Lord, ſend thy Spirit to touch my heart, and then it will melt into a ſtream of tears for ſin, that curſed thing that butcher'd the Lamb of God. O let this be my weeping time, and ſeed time of tears, that hereafter I may reap in joy. Alas, my ſeed time is ſcrimp and inſignificant, O let not my harveſt be proportioned to it.——Lord, though I have not tears enough with Mary to waſh thy feet, yet thou haſt blood enough to waſh my feet, my heart, my hands, my tears, and all my duties, and to make me and them acceptable and ſavoury to God, ſo that I may reap in joy with his people above, and ſtand there as a monument of free grace for ever.

Many after ſowing the precions ſeed of tears at communion ſeaſons have even had their reaping times here below, as an earneſt and firſt-fruits of the full harveſt above. Lord, make me acquaint both with the ſowing and reaping of penitent believers in this world, that I may have good hope through grace, of ſharing with them in the harveſt of glory hereafter, even the full enjoyment of God in heaven, eternal communion with the glorious Trinity, with the ſaints and holy angels. Let me know what it is after a ſeed-time of tears, to reap even in ordinances here below, the clearing of my evidences of grace, and the evidences of my intereſt in Chriſt, and in the well-ordered covenant. Let me reap the lifting up of the light of thy countenance upon me, which will put more joy in my heart than worldlings have when they reap corn and wine in the greateſt plenty. Let me ſee my name written in heaven before I go thither, that my paſſage may be joyful in the midſt of tears.——Let me reap even here new ſupplies of grace, ſtrength to bear croſſes, and reſiſt temptations; give me gracious returns of prayer, and victory over my corruptions, that I may ſing with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. cxxxviii. 3. In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me; and ſtrengthenedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul.

MEDITATION XXVIII.

From Rev. i. 5. Unto him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood.

THE love of Chriſt in becoming man, and ſhedding his blood to ranſom and ſave ſinners of mankind will be the eternal ſong of the redeemed above, and why ſhould they not begin this ſong here below?—Never was there ſuch matter for ſongs of praiſe as the unfathomable love of Jeſus, his name is love; and therefore it is to me as ointment poured forth. I'll remember his love more than wine. His nature is love; his words and actions were love; he preached and practiſed love; he lived in love, was ſick of love, and died for love.—O what thoughts ſhould I have of this free and undeſerved love of the glorious Son of God, who was intreated by no man, and even hated by all men; yet in his free love intreats and undertakes for man, ſaying, Though he be my enemy, I'll be both his Surety and Sacrifice, I'll drink the cup of wrath, be made ſin, and a curſe for him, I'll pour out all my blood and die for him.——O how ſhall I ſpeak of this aſtoniſhing love to thy enemies? To have ſpared our lives had been great mercy, but to give thy life for ours is love unſpeakable!——Oh! Lord, thou haſt found me in my enmity, and yet loved me! When my hand was lifted up againſt thee, thy arms were open to embrace me! Nay, thou haſt opened thy loving heart to ſhelter rebels, who trode thee under foot! Thy heart burned with love to them who cruelly pierced it! Thy bowels yearned towards theſe that raked in them with bloody hands! Surely eternity itſelf will be ſhort enough to celebrate the praiſes of our glorious Immanuel, who loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood. Worthy is our ſlain bleeding Lamb of eternal hallelujahs from men and angels. Lord fit my heart for theſe new ſongs.

O never was there ſuch a miracle of condeſcending love to the ſons of men, as this of the eternal Son of God, his becoming man to ſuffer hell for them, and pour out his blood to waſh them from ſin that kindles hell-fire againſt them. Glory to the Lamb for his fire-quenching blood, and for his preventing love that kept me from feeling of this fire! O how would this love have affected me, if juſtice had ſent me to hell, and kept me there one year, or one month, or but one day! Surely, one day in hell would have made me prize and praiſe redeeming love and redeeming blood at another rate than now I do.—Or had I ſeen the damned in their miſery deſpairing and without hope! Or had I ſeen my agonizing Saviour in the garden ſweating blood for me; or ſeen him dying on the croſs pouring it out at five big wounds to the very laſt drop to waſh away ſin! O would not I then have valued the great remedy and ſalvation he now tenders to me!—And is not all this which now I hear in the word, and ſee repreſented in the ſacrament, as true, as real and certain, as if I had ſeen it with my eyes?

And now when I go to behold Chriſt dying and bleeding in this holy repreſentation, even the Lamb of God ſacrificed and ſlaughter'd for my ſins; Lord, touch my heart that it may be ſuitably affected with the ſight, ſo as intenſely to love my bleſſed Saviour, and to hate my curſed ſins.——O how ſhould I, at this occaſion, be covered with ſhame and lothe myſelf, who have both procured the death of Chriſt by ſin, and ſinned againſt his death, by ſlighting his blood and neglecting his great ſalvation.——Oh! I am chargeable both with the guilt of Chriſt's blood, and of murdering my own ſoul.——O pardon and deliver me from blood guiltineſs, O God, thou God of my ſalvation.

My ſins have indeed ſhed the blood of Chriſt, but, Lord, impute not the guilt, but the merit of this blood to me.—Lord, what profit is there in my blood? Surely the leaſt drop of thy dear Son's blood is of more value than a ſea of mine. A whole ſea of it cannot waſh away one ſin, but Lord thou calleſt me to look unto the Lamb's blood that takes away the ſins of the world. Oh, is not this blood more powerful to waſh me, than my ſins are to defile me! Is not its virtue as freſh ſtill as when it dropped from his wounds on the tree, or in the day when it cleanſed three thouſand at once? Is not thy Son's blood a ſufficient ſatisfaction for all my ſins, a full price for my redemption!—O my ſoul, thou art now near the bleſſed remedy for thy guilt and pollution, this is the only well of ſalvation and fountain of life! O canſt thou ſee Chriſt's blood running, and not deſire to be bathed in it! Now the cleanſing and healing ſtreams run on both ſides of the table, now let me apply and live, let me bring all my plagues and ſores to the ſtreams, my blind eyes, my deaf ears, my weak hands, my feeble knees, my hard heart, my cold affections, my unbelieving and doubting mind, my leprous and unclean ſoul. Lord, this blood has waſhed away the plagues, ſpots and ſtains of many thouſands, who are now praiſing the Lamb for it; Oh, let me be joined to the number, that I may alſo ſing to him that loved and waſhed me.

O bleeding Lamb, if thou wilt, thou can'ſt make me clean; O let that blood which guſhed from thy heart and ſide, but drop on my ſoul, and it will cleanſe me from all ſin.——And when thou art pleaſed to come to me in the ſacrament in ſtreams of blood, O raiſe me up, that I may meet thee with ſtreams of tears, tears of repentance, love and gratitude. O let me not be more ſparing of my tears for Chriſt, than he was of his blood for me. David's kindneſs made even a hard-hearted Saul lift up his voice and weep, and will not Chriſt's kindneſs, which is infinitely greater, make me drop at leaſt ſome ſilent tears?

O how dreadful a thing muſt it be to reject this remedy! Surely juſtice will not ſpare them that trample under foot the blood of the Son of God: If juſtice was inexorable when he himſelf prayed, If it be poſſible let this cup paſs; how will he ſpare me, or hear the cry of thoſe who reject his blood and ſacrifice? How is it poſſible that the cup of wrath can paſs from them who do it! No, they muſt drink it for ever themſelves! Lord, ſave me from rejecting this blood. I believe, Lord, help my unbelief.

MEDITATION XXIX.

From Luke xv. 18, 19. Father, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſon, make me as one, &c.

FAther. Ah, I may be aſhamed to call thee ſo, conſidering what a diſobedient and unthankful child I have been. I am a moſt wretched prodigal; I left thy houſe and preſence and went into a far country; far from thee my bliſs and happineſs. But now, Father, behold me deſiring to come back as a poor penitent, mourning, and returning prodigal. I come from a far country indeed, I come from the land of ſin and darkneſs; I come from the frontiers of hell, from the very borders of the burning lake! Ah, fooliſh creature that I am, How have I forſaken thee the Fountain of living waters! How fond have I been of broken ciſterns, and in love with filthy puddles. O the baſeneſs, the diſingenuity, the ingratitude that I have been guilty of! I have reſiſted thy power, deſpiſed thy wiſdom, undervalued thy goodneſs! Father of mercies, I now ſee what an evil thing and bitter it is to forſake the Lord Holy Lord Jeſus, I now ſee what indignities I have done againſt thee! Thy bleſſed body was dreadfully torn with nails upon the croſs, and thy precious blood inhumanely ſpilt by thy crucifiers! But Oh! have not I occaſioned more grief and ſorrow to thee by my manifold ſins againſt light and love? They crucified thee but once, but I have crucified thee day after day! They crucified thee, becauſe they knew thee not; but I have known thee what thou art in thyſelf, the Lord of glory; and what thou art to me, a tender and merciful Father; yet I have continued to crucify thee afreſh.—O holy Spirit, I have reſiſted thy ſtrivings, quenched thy motions, demoliſhed thy work, and put thee away grieved. But, Lord, I condemn my folly, and ſee my miſery. Oh, what have I gained by offending thee? Nothing but ſhame and confuſion, fear, trembling and horror! O what fruit had I in theſe things whereof I am now aſhamed!

But, Father, I have heard of thy compaſſions to the guilty, when they confeſs and forſake and turn to thee: wherefore though I am aſhamed like the publican to lift up my eyes to heaven; yet let me with humble Magdalene come behind thee weeping, and waſh thy feet with my tears, and kiſs them. And let me hear the news of pardon from thy mouth. Thou cameſt, Lord, not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance; and of theſe I am chief.—Lord, I am full of diſeaſes, full of wounds, full of plague-ſores, full of weakneſs and infirmities, full of ſins and pollutions. Here, Lord, is work for thy ſtrong hand, work for thy wonder-working blood, O ſtretch forth thy hand and ſave.—Father, I am no more worthy to be called thy ſon, make me as one of thy hired ſervants; and thou knoweſt no hire, no wages will ſatisfy me but thyſelf; Lord, give me thyſelf, be thou my exceeding great reward.

Lord, I am ſo vile a creature, that I may fear to come and preſent a petition to thee upon the knee, and far more to come and ſit down with thee at thy holy table: If John Baptiſt, a ſaint of the firſt magnitude, thought himſelf not worthy to ſtoop down and looſe the latchet of thy ſhoes, ſhall I, who am loaden with ſins, adventure to that holy feaſt, where angels wait as miniſtering ſpirits?—But, Lord, in thy compaſſion receive me, that comes not to excuſe, but to accuſe myſelf, with eyes caſt down, ſmiting on my breaſt with the publican, Lord, be merciful to me a ſinner. Thou didſt graciouſly accept of the publican's prayer, of Mary Magdalene's tears, the faith of the thief on the croſs, the repentance of Peter, and of theſe that crucified thee. By theſe inſtances of thy mercy, I am encouraged to draw near to thee; O ſend me not away empty, leſt I faint by the way; but ſatisfy my needy ſoul with the food of thy heavenly banquet, that I may receive ſpiritual ſtrength and nouriſhment to eternal life.

Lord, hear my cry, and hide not thy face from me: When Manaſſeh cried to thee, thou hadſt reſpect to his prayer: When the Ninivites humbled themſelves before thee, thou waſt intreated; yea, thou inviteſt the moſt crimſon and ſcarlet-coloured ſinners, to come and reaſon with thee, and aſſures them, thou wilt caſt out none that come.—Many thouſands, who have experienced the truth of thy word, are, at this hour, ſinging thy praiſes, and exalting thy free grace. Lord, do thou make me alſo a monument of thy free grace to all eternity.

Ah, I may be aſhamed to ſpeak of mercy and grace, who have ſo long abuſed thy grace, and trampled on the blood that ſhould ſave me. O that I could mourn and weep all my life for it. Oh, what ſhall I do with my ſtony heart that will not break and melt for abuſing God's mercy, and trampling Chriſt's blood! Oh, ſhall I mourn and weep for a dead corpſe, or a departed friend, and not mourn for a dead heart, or for God's departing from me! Shall the dear Son of God weep, ſweat, and bleed for us; and we not weep for ourſelves, or for our ſins that pierced his head with thorns, his hands with nails, and his ſide with a ſpear, and his heart with ſorrows. Lord Jeſus I look to thee for a penitent heart, ſeeing thou tells me, thou art exalted for this very end, to give repentance to Iſrael.

Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him? And what am I, the unworthieſt of men, that thou ſhouldſt call me to ſit with thy children at thy table, who am unworthy as a dog to creep under it; yea, calleſt me to eat the bread of angels, who am not worthy to eat the bread of men.——Amazing love! that God ſhould court thoſe to obedience, whom he can peremptorily command to it; and in caſe of diſobedience, puniſh inſtantly in hell; that he ſhould take poor ſlaves, condemned to the priſon of hell, and make them crowned kings in heaven; that he ſhould not only be willing to dwell in fleſh, but alſo to give us his fleſh for our food; that he ſhould not only ſave us from hell, but even leave his throne in heaven, and loſe his life on earth, to enthrone us in his kingdom!

theſe are prodigies of love, which ſhould engage us to love our Saviour, and mourn for ſin while we live.—Lord Jeſus, pity a relenting, returning prodigal, take him home, and make him thy ſervant for ever. It is highly juſt, that I ſhould offer up myſelf a living ſacrifice to my Redeemer, who offered up himſelf a dying Sacrifice for my redemption.

MEDITATION XXX.

From Song i. 4 ——We will remember thy love——

I Go, bleſſed Jeſus, at thy call to remember thy love at thy holy table; thy words have an awful ſound in my ear, Do this in remembrance of me. I ſee much in them, in obedience to them I'll do this in remembrance of thy dwelling in fleſh; in memory of thy love that carried thee to the manger, to the garden, and to the croſs for me; in memory of the infinite price of thy blood which thou didſt ſhed; in memory of the victory obtained by it over the enemies of my ſoul; in memory of the deliverance from wrath, and the immortal glory thou haſt purchaſed by it for me: Tho' thou didſt die and ly in the grave, yet thy love ſhall ever live in my heart. Glory to thee, thou art now alive in heaven; O come and live with me; let never thy love be one moment out of my view. I bleſs thee for this laſting memorial of thy love.

I look on this ſacrament as no real or proper ſacrifice, as many do, but only as a repreſentation or commemoration of the real ſacrifice Chriſt offered on the croſs. I do no more at the Lord's table, than what Chriſt did at it: Since he offered no ſacrifice at the table, neither do I: He only did commemorate that ſacrifice he was going to offer, and the ſame, and no more do I. If any ſhould ſay that Chriſt offered a real ſacrifice when he inſtituted this ſacrament, then the oblation on the croſs would have been ſuperfluous, becauſe ſinners would have been redeemed by that of the ſupper which went before.

Now is the time for a ſolemn commemoration of thy love: Oh, ſhall I be unmindful of thy love at this feaſt, when thou waſt ſo mindful of me at it, made thy teſtament, put me in it, and left me precious legacies to cauſe me remember thee, ſuch as life and light, pardon and peace, righteouſneſs and ſtrength, grace and glory.——O how heroic, how generous and free is thy love to ſinful worms! we had done nothing to oblige thee; nothing ſaweſt thou in us to engage thy love to us; but much didſt thou ſee in us to incenſe thee againſt us. When we were without ſtrength, ungodly, ſinners, and enemies, thou lovedſt us, and diedſt for us. Greater love hath no man than this, to lay down his life for his friends; but far greater love hath God-man, who laid down his life for his enemies! O what ſhall I think of this love! it had been wonderful love in an angel to have ſtooped to be united to a lump of earth, and therein ſuffer for us, though it could not have paid our debt. But, O my ſoul, here is one more valuable than all the angels in heaven, that has ſtooped to do it! The word was made fleſh and dwelt among us! when I was like Iſaac bound on the altar, he freely offered himſelf to be made a ſacrifice to ſatisfy juſtice for me, Father, ſaid he, lo I come, to do thy will I take delight!

Remember this love, O my ſoul, the Son of God is become the Son of man for thee, that thou mighteſt be raiſed to the dignity of a ſon of God! he that was infinitely rich, for my ſake became poor, that I, a poor naked creature, might become rich and well clothed. How can I look on the incarnation and birth of my Redeemer, and not remember his love with wonder! Can I behold the manger his bed, and not adore the love that brought him to ly in it? O how low were the circumſtances of the Heir of heaven, when he came to ſojourn on earth, who had neither a houſe to live in, nor an eſtate to live upon, but muſt be ſubſiſted by the hoſpitality of others, and frequently his fare was very mean! Amazing prodigy of divine love! God ſtoops to dwell in fleſh, and gives us his fleſh to feed upon in the ſacrament! He not only pardons our ſins, and ſaves us from hell; but leaves his throne in heaven, loſes his life on earth, and wades through hell, to enthrone us in his kingdom, and make us crowned kings for ever.——Bleſſed be the Lord that gives me a communion-ſabbath to remember this love! what ſhall I render to thee for it? A day of glad-tidings! thou haſt often, on ſuch a day viſited the earth, and watered it, and made it rich with thy ſhowers! may thy grace and Spirit drop on us this day, like rain on the mown graſs.

Lord, I am not worthy to touch the threſhold of thy houſe, and yet thou calleſt me to thy table! not worthy to ſtand among thy ſervants, and yet thou wouldſt have me ſit with my Redeemer! not worthy to ly at thy footſtool, and yet thou wouldſt make my heart thy throne! not worthy to eat the bread of men, and yet thou calleſt me to eat the bread of angels! O love worthy to be remembred to all generations! Lord enlighten my eyes, and give me a clearer view of thy love, than ever I got; and while I am muſing on it, let the fire burn; O make my heart burn within me with love to him that loved us.

O my ſoul, conſider the greatneſs of Chriſt's love in the cup he drank for thee! how legible is it in his tears and prayers, his groans and cries, his agony and ſweat, his wounds and blood, and all for us. O let this matchleſs love beget in me the warmeſt love and affection to him that loved us!——O let the fire of Chriſt's love burn up my luſts and worldly love like ſtubble; and remove the coldneſs of my heart to him! Oh that I could weep bitterly that I cannot bring this vile heart of mine to love the Lord Jeſus more! Oh, ſhall I throw away my affections upon every worthleſs object, and yet have none for the lovelieſt object in the whole creation of God; and yet one that would needs die for me, to become my Ranſom, Sacrifice and Atonement! Is it the character of theſe who are Chriſt's ſpouſe? Is it the character of the whole army of martyrs, and of every believer, to love Chriſt, and ſhall not I love him too?——Oh, the virgins love thee, the upright love thee; and every one of them cry, O thou whom my ſoul loveth; and ſhall not I join theſe chaſte lovers?—Or ſhall I be expoſed to the terrible fate of theſe who want love to Chriſt? 1 Cor. xvi. 22. If any man love not the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, let him be an anathema, maranatha.—O that I could expreſs my love to him in adorations and praiſes, in deſiring his preſence, loving his members, promoting his kingdom on earth, and longing to be with him for ever.

MEDITATION XXXI.

From Iſa. liii. 5. He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions.

HOW amazing is the love of God to fallen man, in taking a body to be pierced and wounded for him! Man did caſt off the image of his Maker, and became a rebel and run-away from God: And, behold, his Maker takes on him man's image to reſtore him again to favour: Yea, aſſumes our nature, when at the loweſt, that ſo he might ſigh, groan, grieve, weep, ſorrow, ſweat, bleed and die for undone man; and he did this, to raiſe him from his miſerable ſtate, to a happier condition than he was in before his fall.—Had not God become man, we could not have enjoyed him ſo nearly, ſo familiarly as we may do now. The enjoyment of God as a Redeemer, a Huſband, a Brother, is another manner of enjoyment of him than of God as a Creator. Though we ruined ourſelves, and fell under wrath, yet God, by the incarnation has recovered us, and made us up far above all we had to loſe. But ere this be done, he muſt not only be man, but he muſt be wounded for and by man's ſins; yea, wounded to death, and crucified, before man could be raiſed up to live with God.

Many, yea innumerable were the wounds my God Redeemer received for me; as, by the thorns that pricked his head, by the pincers that plucked his hair, by the ſcourge that tore and furrowed his back; beſides, the five big wounds made in his hands and feet by the four nails, and in his ſide by the ſpear; and the many wounds given his ſoul by the curſes of the law. Now all theſe wounds are opened as ſo many mouths, to call us to flee into them for ſafety from the ſword of juſtice.——Now theſe wounds were unſpeakably painful, being envenom'd by our ſins. Crucifying, in itſelf, was an exceeding painful death; the four big nails whereon the body hung, pierced the moſt ſinewy and nervous parts of the body, and conſequently moſt ſenſible of pain: And hence the Romans expreſſed torment by a word borrowed from the croſs; and make cruciate ſignify to torment. Thus was our innocent Saviour wounded on the croſs, cruciate or tormented, and all to ſave us from eternal torments.

Aſtoniſhing ſight! The eternal Son of God whom all the angels worſhip, wounded to death, hung by nails on a croſs, tortured and racked for ſeveral hours; and, in the mean time, loaded with reproach and ſcorn from theſe he died for! Never ſuch a ſight as this! It ſtruck terror in the whole creation. The ſun hid its face, and could not behold it, the vail of the temple rent in twain, the earth quaked, the rocks rent, the dead were moved, and their graves opened: And even his enemies were ſtruck with amazement, and made to ſhrink, and ſay, Truly this was a righteous perſon, this was the Son of God. O my ſoul, employ all thy faculties, all thy thoughts, to ſtudy, pore, and penetrate into this awful ſubject, it deſerves the profoundeſt regard and cloſeſt attention: Hence the great apoſtle determined to ſtudy and know nothing but it.

This amazing tragedy ought to create in me the greateſt abhorrence of ſin, the cauſe of it. Never can ſin appear more exceeding ſinful, and hateful, than in the wounding and crucifying of the Son of God. Our tranſgreſſions were the nails and ſpear that wounded his ſacred body, and the ſword that pierced his ſoul. Theſe were the Judas that betrayed him, the ſoldiers that bound him, blindfolded and mocked him, the Pilate that condemned him, the executioners that nailed him to the curſed tree: It was our ſins that put the ſword in his enemies hands. He became a curſe for us. All the deriſion, mockery, and contempt; all the pain, ſuffering and ſorrow he endured, did proceed from our ſins; theſe brought him to the croſs and to the grave. —Let us then turn our hatred, and diſcharge our fierceſt indignation againſt our ſins, let them be our averſion and dread for ever; let me always look on ſin, that crucified Chriſt, with horror and trembling. Never ſuch an inſtance of the ſtrictneſs and ſeverity of God's juſtice, and of his abhorrence of ſin as here! He would not ſpare his own Son, when he ſtood in the room of ſinners, nor ſpare him one ſtripe or wound, when he cried; but let him bleed, and die, till ſin was fully atoned for! Can I ſee this, and not cry, O curſed ſin! murderer of the Son of God; away with it, away with it; crucify it, crucify it.

Oh my ſoul, ſee the evil of ſin in the glaſs of Chriſt's wounds, and ſufferings in his body and ſoul! Say, O ſin, what haſt thou done? Thou haſt provoked the God of heaven to fiery indignation! Thou haſt killed the Prince of life, turned angels into devils, filled the earth with troubles, and hell with precious ſouls! If any body had killed my father, would I embrace the murderer, or love the dagger that was beſmeared with his blood? But what are all my relations to my Lord, my love that was crucified! O that my eyes were fountains of tears, that I might weep day and night for my ſins that ſlew my Saviour! Oh, ſtony heart, for ſhame, become now like wax, and be melted in the midſt of my bowels! Wo's me that I can grieve no more for my ſins. Let me, at leaſt, revenge my Saviour's death upon my ſins, and ſuffer them no longer to live in me.

How dreadful muſt the guilt of theſe be who willingly harbour ſin, and delight in the murder of our Lord! It is no leſs than to kiſs the nails, or to hug the ſpear that pierced him. They make that their joy, which made Chriſt a man of ſorrow! They make light of that which made his ſoul heavy unto death.—Oh, have I ſeen my Saviour bleeding to death by ſin, and ſhall I live any longer in ſin that wounded him: When a temptation to ſin is preſented, ſhall I ever diſpute any more, whether Chriſt or Barabbas ſhall be preferred? My luſts denied, or my Lord crucified; Whether theſe ſins ſhall be forſaken by me, that made Chriſt to be forſaken of God? Whether that ſhall be ſweet to me, that was ſo bitter and deadly to him? Oh, was my lovely Jeſus a man of ſorrows all his life, and ſometimes made to ſay, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful; and ſhall not I be ſorry for, and abhor theſe ſins that cauſed all his ſorrows?

O may the believing views of Chriſt's wounds and ſufferings which he endured for my ſins, and to ſave me from that wrath which they deſerved; kindle the fire of love in my ſoul to Chriſt.——Lord, thou art the God that wont to anſwer thy people by fire; O pity me, and anſwer my meditations and prayers, by kindling the holy fire of love in my heart, and let that fire put out the impure fire of my luſts and corruptions, and inſpire me with holy zeal and activity in thy ſervice. O did Chriſt freely give himſelf to be a ſin-offering for me; and ſhall not I give myſelf a thank offering to him? Surely, it is highly reaſonable that I ſhould offer up myſelf a living ſacrifice to my Redeemer, who offered up himſelf a dying ſacrifice for my redemption.

MEDITATION XXXII.

From John vi. 51. I am the living Bread that came down from heaven: If any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever.

CHRIST crucified is our Manna, or heavenly bread that preſerves the life of the ſoul, and it is only by faith it muſt be received and eaten.——Bread is a comprehenſive word, including all things neceſſary for this life; ſo Chriſt, our ſpiritual bread, is a moſt comprehenſive bleſſing, including all we want, ſeeing he is made of God to us, wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption——Again, bread is the moſt neceſſary thing for our life, and the want of it brings the greateſt miſery; ſo Chriſt is the moſt neceſſary bleſſing to the ſoul, and the want of him makes a man miſerable in time, and through eternity. It is a greater miſery to have no Saviour for the ſoul, than to have no bread for the body. Chriſt alone is the bread that preſerves us from ſoul famine, and nouriſheth us to eternal life; he is the bread of life, the living bread. Lord, give us evermore this bread.

Bread is called the ſtaff and ſtay of man's life; ſo Chriſt is the ſtaff and ſtay of our ſpiritual life, he upholds our ſouls in life. He is the ſtaff that faint and weary ſouls muſt lean to, in going up through this wilderneſs: Yea Chriſt, our living bread, is a ſtaff to defend us, and to beat off our enemies, and to put all the helliſh hoſts to flight. That was a ſtrange dream of one of the Midianites, Judg. viii. 13. Behold a cake of barley bread came tumbling into the hoſt of Midian, and ſmote a tent. Strange! a piece of bread to overturn a tent! Behold this dream made good in the ſacrament. The bread there which repreſents Chriſt, when received with faith upon him, will tumble into the hoſt of ſatan and his luſts; theſe Midianites who vex us with their wiles, ſtrike down their tents, and put them all to flight.

Chriſt is the bread that came down from heaven, of which the Iſraelites manna that God ſent miraculouſly from heaven was an eminent type. That manna was God's free gift to the murmuring and rebellious Iſraelites, to preſerve them from ſtarving in the deſarts where bread could not be had: This manna was a curious grain, that made fine bread, with which God furniſhed them plentifully every morning from the clouds, ſufficient to ſatisfy ſix hundred thouſand men. But Chriſt, our ſpiritual Manna, doth far excel theirs, though he was reſembled by theirs in ſome things. Manna was firſt grinded and beaten, and baken in ovens, before it was made bread for them; and ſo the grain which makes our ordinary bread muſt be threſhed, and grinded betwixt two milſtones, and baken by the force of fire, before we eat it: So Chriſt, the Antitype, was threſhed and bruiſed, and grinded betwixt the milſtones of divine juſtice and our ſins, and alſo roaſted by the fire of wrath, that he might be fit bread for ſaving the lives of our ſouls, and all this we ſhould call to mind, when we ſee and make uſe of the bread in the holy ſupper.

The Iſraelites manna came down to them with the dew; ſo Chriſt, with the benefits of his purchaſe, comes to us by the dews and influences of the holy Spirit.——Their manna fell round about their tents, and every man was free to gather it; ſo every man is at freedom to gather our heavenly Manna.—The Iſraelites behoved to go out of their tents to gather theirs; ſo God will have us go forth, and be at pains to get our ſpiritual food. God, who rained manna about their tents, could have rained it into their mouths; but he loves not to encourage ſloth in his people, but would have them at all pains to make ſure of Chriſt for their portion. As the Iſraelites gathered daily; ſo we muſt be daily going to Chriſt, and making uſe of him. As they gathered early in the morning; ſo God would have us ſeeking after Chriſt in the morning of our lives.

O how far doth our heavenly Manna excel that of the Iſraelites! Theirs but fed the body, and could not preſerve them from death at laſt; but our Manna feeds the ſoul, and nouriſhes to eternal life, and preſerves all that eat of it from eternal death.——Theirs fell not on the ſabbath day; nor durſt they go to ſeek it on that day; but ours falls every day, and double on the ſabbath; and therefore God calls us to double our diligence, in gathering it on the ſabbath.——Their manna continued only in the wilderneſs, and ceaſed when they came to Canaan; but ours continueth for ever, and our fulleſt enjoyment of it is in the heavenly Canaan; therefore all the true Iſraelites long to be there.

O how lamentable is their folly, who ſpend all their time and thoughts in ſeeking bread to their bodies, and are careleſs and indifferent about the bread of life to their ſouls! all their care is to ſupport the clay houſe, but let the ſoul ſtarve that inhabits it. Oh, it is but ſhort time they can enjoy the bread they are ſo concerned for; the bodies they mind ſo much, muſt ſoon be meat for worms, and the ſoul they neglect a prey for devils!

But, whatever others do, may I be wiſe to provide the living bread for my ſoul, and learn to eat it, and make uſe of it by faith, and eſpecially when I go to the Lord's table; for without faith we can get no nouriſhment, no life, nor ſtrength from this heavenly bread: Faith is the mouth that eats the bread of life, and ſucks honey out of this Rock. Now, the Spirit of God calls faith, or believing, an eating, becauſe, by it, we taſte the ſweetneſs and excellency of Chriſt, and have great ſatisfaction in partaking of Chriſt and his benefits. As by eating, our bodies increaſe in ſtrength and ſtature; ſo by believing, our ſouls grow in grace and ſpiritual ſtrength, to run in God's ways.——As by eating, the bread incorporates and becomes one with us; ſo by our receiving and applying Chriſt's broken body by faith, he is made one with us, and we one with him.——As by eating bread, men live upon it, and get ſupport and ſtrength for working or journeying; ſo believers, by looking to, and truſting wholly in the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and the merit of his blood, they feed and receive ſpiritual nouriſhment, and ſtrength for their work and warfare, and ſo make progreſs in their journey to Canaan.

O that I had a ſpiritual hunger and ſharp appetite for this bread of life, and were deſiring and longing for it, for the ſupport and nouriſhment of my ſoul, more than a hungry man doth for bread to his body. A hungry man periſhing for want of bread, would pefer a piece of bread, before many bags of gold, if both were ſet before him, and he allowed to make his choice; ſo the awakened ſoul, that ſees his need of Chriſt, prefers him to a whole world; give him never ſo much of the world's comforts, he is ſtill diſſatisfied without Chriſt, and ſays, What will all theſe things avail me, if my ſtarving ſoul periſh without Chriſt the bread of life?

I have many arguments to plead with God for this bread; Lord, do not thy free calls and promiſes bind thee to give it me? Thou haſt ſaid, The needy ſhall not be forgotten.—Is not Chriſt, the bread from heaven, the free gift of God to periſhing ſouls? And doſt not thou invite theſe to come and eat of it that have no money or price to give for it?—Lord, thou hadſt compaſſion upon the bodies of men when they had no bread to eat, and didſt provide bread for five thouſand of them by a miracle; and haſt thou not as much compaſſion to ſtarving ſouls that are far more precious?—Lord, thou giveſt natural affections to earthly parents, and makes them pitiful to their children, when they cry for bread, ſo that they cannot ſhut up their bowels againſt them when hungry, nor will they give them a ſtone inſtead of bread: And will my heavenly Father, who is infinitely more compaſſionate than the moſt tender parents, refuſe the bread of life to ſtarving ſouls who cry earneſtly for it? Lord, I truſt in thy mercy, and depend on thy promiſe, I believe thou wilt not let a poor hungry beggar ſtarve at thy door, when there is bread enough in thy houſe, and to ſpare. O cauſe me ſing with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. xiii. 5. But I have truſted in thy mercy, my heart ſhall rejoice in thy ſalvation.

SACRAMENTAL ADVICES

FROM VARIOUS SCRIPTURE-TEXTS.

ADVICE I.

From Gen. vii. 1. Come thou and all thine houſe unto the Ark.

AS God in his mercy called Noah to come into the ark prepared for him and his houſhold, to ſave him from drowning in the great deluge; ſo God by the goſpel calls you, O man, to come into the Ark, Chriſt crucified, which he hath provided for periſhing ſinners, to ſave them from the deluge of wrath that is coming. God hath long forewarned you of it, nay the flood is beginning to riſe, it is time for thee to flee to this Ark; believe it, there is no other way for thy ſafety: The ark of thy prayers, or of thy tears, convictions, or reformations, will not ſave thee from it; nothing will do it but the Ark Chriſt.

As all who were out of Noah's ark periſhed in the flood; ſo will all periſh who are out of Chriſt.—Theſe of the old world, who only came near to the ark, or touched the outſide of it, they periſhed if they did not enter into it; ſo in like manner will theſe periſh, who only come near Chriſt by an outward profeſſion, and are not found in him by a true faith.

As the ark gave a good account of all that entered into it, not one of them was loſt in the flood; ſo will Chriſt give a good account at the laſt day of all that fly to him by faith: None ſhall pluck them out of his hand, not one of them ſhall periſh in the deluge of wrath; Chriſt will preſent them all ſafe to his Father, Behold here am I, and the children thou haſt given me.

As Noah's ark was acceſſible, and had a door in it for people to enter; ſo in a crucified Jeſus there is a door of acceſs opened, even a door of faith, whereby poor ſinners of the Gentiles may have acceſs to Chriſt, and to God in him, Acts xiv. 27. As Paul and Barnabas rehearſed it as glad tidings to the church, that God had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles; ſo we Gentile ſinners ſhould gladly receive the news. Glory to God in the higheſt for opening this door of faith, and keeping it ſtill open to periſhing ſinners.

Come then, O Gentile ſinner, enter in by this door to the Ark, and lodge thy ſoul within it, that thou mayſt be ſafe from the flood of wrath that is coming upon the ungodly world. God forbid you be found hovering without the Ark, until the flood come and waſh you off from the very ſides of it. O how diſmal and cutting will the thought be to you through all eternity, that you was ſo near Chriſt, and within a ſtep of the Ark, and ſometimes touching it, and yet never entered it! How ſad will it be to periſh, like the thief upon the croſs, with a Saviour at your ſide! and to ſink into hell betwixt the arms of mercy ſtretched forth to ſave you! Now, poor ſoul, the Ark is near you, flee to it with ſpeed; behold, for your encouragement, there is a window opened in the ſide of the Ark, and mercy's hand is put forth to take in ſhelterleſs doves who come to it. Now is the time to beſtir yourſelf, to come into the Ark without delay, and ſo prevent your periſhing in the flood for ever.

Q. What ſhall I do to get into the Ark, to wit, a crucified Jeſus?

A. 1. Be like Noah's dove which he ſent forth, ſee that you find no reſt for the ſole of your foot any where elſe; turn your back upon all other arks of mens deviſing, they are all inſufficient to ſave you from the flood: Make not an ark of the abſolute mercy of God out of Chriſt, ſeeing he declares a crucified Jeſus to be the only channel of his mercy.—Make not an ark of church-privileges, as your good education, admiſſion to ſealing ordinances, &c. for the ark did not ſave Shiloh, nor the altar's horns ſave Joab, nor the temple ſave Jeruſalem.—Make not an ark of your gifts, knowledge, prayers, duties, moral honeſty, or ſelf-righteouſneſs, for the flood, when it comes, will daſh all theſe in pieces. Suppoſe theſe of the old world had built other ſhips as like the ark as poſſible, or had fled to high towers of their own contriving, the deluge would have deſtroyed them all; there was no ſafety for them but in Noah's ark alone. So whatever arks you deviſe to ſave you from wrath, if a crucified Chriſt, the Ark of God's building, be ſlighted, the flood will ſweep away all your own arks, as the refuge of lies, Iſa. xxviii. 17.

2*dly*, Labour to be thoroughly convinced of your miſery while out of the Ark; and, in a deep ſenſe of your neceſſity of getting into it, break preſently over all the bars and hinderances which the devil caſts in your way to ſtop your entry into the Ark, as unbelief, ſinful pleaſures, worldly cares, preſumptuous hopes, carnal company, diverſions, &c. break reſolutely through all theſe to the Ark, as David's three mighty men brake through the hoſt of the Philiſtines to the well of Bethlehem; ſurely your arguments for doing it are far ſtronger than theirs.

3*dly*, Approve heartily the whole contrivance of God's Ark in all its rooms and ſtories: Approve Chriſt crucified in his Perſon, natures, offices and relations, in his ſtates of humiliation and exaltation: Accept of him in them all, ſubſcribe to the whole new-covenant-ſcheme, as a device worthy of God, and of infinite wiſdom; conſent to the great end and deſign of it, namely, that ſelf be debaſed, and free grace eternally magnified.

4*thly*, Be frequently eſſaying faith's flight unto the Ark, and to the window in the ſide of it; make earneſt mints like Noah's reſtleſs dove to get in; ſay oft like David, Pſal. lv. 6. O that I had wings like a dove, for then I would fly away and be at reſt. I would haſten my eſcape from the flood, and lodge my ſoul this minute in one of the rooms of the Ark. Believing is a work you ſhould be often eſſaying, and though you cannot believe with ſaving faith, yet believe as you can, looking to God for more ſtrength. You cannot pray, praiſe, or ſanctify the ſabbath aright, yet you aim at theſe duties as you can; ſo in like manner make honeſt mints at believing and flying to Chriſt; and aim in his ſtrength to apply his blood, every man to his own ſoul in particular, by an appropriating faith (correſponding to the goſpel offer) and taking home the remedy as his own; depending ſtill upon the Spirit's grace, who will not fail theſe who truſt in him, but aſſiſt them in making ſaving application.

5*thly*, Be willing to part with every thing that would compete with God's ark, however ſpecious or plauſible a ſhew it may have. Renounce the old covenant, and all lurking places about mout Sinai, for in none of theſe you can find ſafety. Abhor your own righteouſneſs for an Ark, whatever ſhape it appear in; and embrace him alone for it, who is the Lord our righteouſneſs. His righteouſneſs only is ſpotleſs, perfect and law-biding.

6*thly*, Make a ſurrender of yourſelf, and all you have, to Jeſus Chriſt, to be diſpoſed of by him as he pleaſeth: Be willing to ſuffer the loſs of all things for him, yea, count all things loſs and dung that you may win to the Ark, and be found therein when the flood cometh.

ADVICE II.

From Rev. iii. 20. Behold I ſtand at the door and knock.—

LOST ſinner, I bring you good tidings; the eternal Son of God hath undertaken a long journey, and endured great ſufferings to purchaſe ſalvation for thee! A dear purchaſe it is, dear hath it coſt him to obtain it! and now he hath brought it the length of thy door, and there, O man, Chriſt is ſtanding, knocking, and ſaying, This day ſalvation is come to this houſe door, open and take it in.—Now can you refuſe, O ſinner, to take in Chriſt's purchaſed ſalvation, when Chriſt hath come with it to thy very door, even the door of thy heart. Behold he ſtands at it, and knocks for entrance! Open, open, &c.

The arguments for your opening are ſtrong and many;

1. Conſider at whoſe door Chriſt doth ſtand, even at the door of a creature infinitely below him.—Oh! it is at a beggar's door, that hath nothing to entertain Chriſt with when he enters! yet ſaith he, Open to me, and I will bring in proviſion with me, and make thee a rich feaſt.——It is at the door of a poor Lazarus, that is all full of ulcers and ſores; yet, ſaith Chriſt, Open, and I will bring in the balm of Gilead, a plaiſter of my blood for healing all your ſores, and for as coſtly as it is, it ſhall coſt you nothing.——It is even at the door of an enemy, a mortal enemy, that Chriſt ſtands; you have ſpoke ill of him, thought ill of him, and done ill to him; you have affronted him, wounded him, and lodged his traitors and murderers; yet, ſaith Chriſt, Open, and hearken to the offers and terms of reconciliation which I have purchaſed for you with my blood; they are moſt ſurpriſing and ſafe, eaſy and honourable.—It is at the door of ſatan's ſlaves that Chriſt ſtands, theſe who have been long drudging at his work and feeding upon his huſks; yet, ſaith Chriſt, Open to me, and I will ſet you at liberty, and make you God's freemen and children. Why then will you not open and receive him joyfully? O ſinner, ſtand amazed at Chriſt's condeſcending goodneſs, in ſtanding at the door of ſuch a ſmoaky cottage, ſo ill ſwept, and out of order! Good reaſon have you to cry out, Lord, I am not worthy thou ſhouldſt come under my roof; but ſeeing thou humbleſt thyſelf to viſit the unworthy in ſuch a manner, come in, and but ſpeak the word, and the houſe ſhall be cleanſed, diſeaſes healed, grievances redreſſed, and the ſoul made happy. It is highly your intereſt then to open the door, and welcome in your Saviour, who ſtands and knocks for acceſs.

2. Again, conſider who it is that ſtands at your door:—It is even the King of glory, a King of infinite power and majeſty! And will you not lift up the gates of your ſouls to this King? Were it but an earthly king that knocked at your door, you would ſoon open and receive him; yea, count it a great honour that you had ſuch a perſon in your houſe: But what are clay kings to the King of glory? To the Prince of the kings of the earth? To our great Immanuel, the glorious Plant of renown, the Head of the elect world? Who then would not caſt the gates wide open to ſuch a glorious King!—Again, he is the everlaſting Father, and the Father of all believers that ſtands and knocks! A Father full of pity, that follows after his prodigal children, and invites them to return to him! And will not a child open the door to his father? Can you find in your heart to keep your compaſſionate Father ſtanding at your door?—Nay, further, it is your Huſband that knocks, a loving Huſband, that hath ſuffered much for your cauſe: And will not an affectionate ſpouſe open and let in her huſband?——Moreover, it is your Phyſician that knocks, who brings healing medicines for all your diſeaſes, by which he hath cured many thouſands before now! And will not a ſick and dying man let in ſuch a Phyſician! Open, O ſinner, why will you die?

III. Conſider Chriſt's patience and long ſuffering at your door, he doth not knock and then go away as one indifferent whether you open or not; no, he knocks and ſtands ſtill; he ſtands and knocks again, and that after many repulſes! No beggar wanting an alms would ſtand ſo long at our doors, as Chriſt ſtands at a beggar's door, not ſeeking to take from him, but wanting to give unto him——O wonder at his goodneſs and long patience! Behold he that hath a throne of glory to ſit on, and ten thouſand times ten thouſand to bow before him, is willing, O ſinner, to ſtand at thy door! Yea, he ſtands whilſt thou doſt ly in the boſom of thy luſts.——He ſtands without, whilſt his enemies are let in and allowed to poſſeſs the beſt ſeats!——He ſtands at the door while ſatan is let in, and gets the eaſy chair! O wonderful patience! that Chriſt after ſo many affronts and repulſes, and after ſeeing enemies preferred before him, ſhould continue to ſtand at your door and knock! But, O ſinner, do not try his patience too much, nor provoke him too long; for, obſerve the text, he now ſtands, he is on his feet ready to go away; the knock will be given that will prove the laſt, and thou knoweſt not but the preſent knock may be it, do not then delay to open one moment longer.

IV. Conſider Chriſt's earneſt deſire to be let into your heart, he not only ſtands at the door, but he knocks; yea, knocks loud and knocks often, to convince you of his earneſtneſs. Many a loud knock doth he give, by his calls and invitations in his word, Come unto me, open unto me, look unto me. Many a knock gives he by his promiſes to you, I will come in, I will ſup with you, I will eaſe you, heal you, enlighten you, manifeſt myſelf to you, &c.——Many a knock gives he by his threatenings of wrath and vengeance againſt theſe who ſhut their doors againſt him. Many a knock gives he by your own conſcience and by his own Spirit raiſing convictions, inclinations, deſires and purpoſes within your heart to bring you to a Saviour——And many a rap and knock doth he give at your door on ſacrament occaſions. Then it is he knocks aloud with his nailed hands and pierced feet, and ſtands at your door with his wounds open, his blood ſtreaming, and his garments dyed with blood: And all this to ſhew his earneſtneſs to be let into your heart.——Open then to Chriſt, O ſinner, while he is knocking, be aſſured he will not knock always, this may poſſibly be the laſt day of the Spirit's knocks and ſtrivings with thee; ſo that if you refuſe to open at this preſent knock, God may ſtrike you dead and ſenſeleſs all your life, clap a ſeal on the door that it ſhall never open; you may hear miniſters knock after this, but never hear God's Spirit knock again; and wo unto you if he depart from you.——Remember, O man, for as many knocks God gives at your door, he keeps an exact account of them all, and will reckon them all up to you at the judgment-ſeat. And can you think he will open heaven to you then, who will not open your heart to him now! No, no; his ear will be as deaf to you hereafter, as yours is to him now. Read and believe that terrible word, Prov. i. 24. &c.

ADVICE III.

From Rev. iii. 20. If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in and ſup with him.

GReat and precious are the promiſes which Chriſt makes to them who hearken to his voice in the goſpel-offers, and open their hearts to receive him as offered to them in all his offices; I will come in, and bring all the benefits of my purchaſe with me to entertain and feaſt that ſoul, even pardon, peace, light, life, grace and glory.

I. Obſerve, the duty called for, is to hear Chriſt's voice and open the door to him, that is, to accept and embrace the free goſpel-offers, and heartily to acquieſce in the goſpel-method of a ſinner's reconciliation and ſanctification through the righteouſneſs of our glorious Immanuel, and willingly receive and ſubmit to him as our Prophet, Prieſt, and King. What is the preaching of the goſpel, but Chriſt's charming voice calling loſt ſinners home to himſelf?—What is it, but Chriſt's following them with invitations and intreaties to come to him and live? This is Chriſt's voice which he would have ſinners to hear, come and live; though they generally refuſe to do it! Oh what condemned malefactor would refuſe to hear the voice of his ſovereign offering him his life, as condemned ſinners do? John v. 40. Ye will not come to me that ye might have life. Yet behold, after many refuſals, he follows his offers with arguments, ſtrong arguments to prevail with ſinners, and after the greateſt obſtinacy he is loth to break off his treaty with them, Hoſ. xi. 8. How ſhall I give thee up Ephraim? Why will ye die? What reaſon can you give for refuſing life? or for chuſing death?

II. Obſerve, who it is that Chriſt calls to hear his voice, and open their doors to him, it is not this or that man only, or any particular ſort of men, it is only man, every man that ſits under the goſpel. If any man hear my voice and open the door, ſaith Chriſt, I will come in. If any man will open, be he old man, or young man, I will come in. If the greateſt ſinner, the moſt crimſon coloured ſinner will open, I will come in. Any man, if the ſwearer will open, if the ſabbath-breaker, if the murderer, if the drunkard, if the unclean, if the thief, if the cheat, if the liar, if the mocker, if the prayerleſs man, if the man that hates God and godlineſs will open to me, I will come in and ſup with him. O what encouragement doth this word, If any man, give to every ſinner to flee to Chriſt? If any man, whoever he be, whatever he hath done, if he will welcome me, receive me in the goſpel-offers, I will come in to him.

III. Obſerve, Chriſt requires ſinners to open the door that he may come in, to teach them; however unable they be, this is their duty, they muſt mint, and uſe all means to do it, and look up to him for ſtrength. He will have the ſinner's conſent, and the ſoul made willing to receive him. O then caſt open the door, open it wide, receive Chriſt wholly, receive him without reſerve, open before him the two leaved gates, not the wicket, or one leaf only, but both leaves of the door. Let Chriſt have the full and free conſent of the ſoul, an abundant entrance into it. There are ſome reſolving to open the door to Chriſt, others perhaps are beginning to open it, O let them not halt in doing it. With ſome the door is half open, and there they ſtop. They are almoſt, but not altogether Chriſtians. O almoſt Chriſtian, why do you halt? Why would you loſe all the pains you have been at? A little more would caſt the door wide open, and make you an altogether Chriſtian. Go then a little further, O ſinner, to ſave your ſoul. Open to Chriſt all the powers and faculties of your ſoul. Open to him fully here, as you would have him to open freely to you hereafter. Oh, what mean you to open to Chriſt by halves? Alas, the half open door will be ready to go to again, and if ſo, it may never open for the future. Let it be your concern then to go a little further than the almoſt Chriſtian, and reſt not in fair beginnings.

IV. Obſerve, how great the advantage is of opening the door to Chriſt; Why? I will come in to the houſe, ſaith he, even the friend of ſinners, the King of glory will come in, the beſt gueſt that ever came into a poor man's houſe: How honourable, how profitable, how happy and bleſſed muſt ſuch a viſit be!—— Q. For what end will Chriſt come in? A. He will come in to enlighten the houſe; for the ſoul is a dark dungeon while Chriſt is ſhut out: He will come in to adorn and enrich the ſoul with the ornaments and treaſures of his grace: He will come in to reign in the ſoul, and pull down the tyrant that hath long oppreſt you: As in the text, he will come in and ſup with you, and cauſe you to ſup with him: And becauſe you have no fitting proviſion in the houſe, he will bring it with him. And O how rare are Chriſt's dainties, his hidden manna, the fruits of the tree of life, the grapes of Canaan, the bread that comes down from heaven! How excellent is the water of life! One drop of it would be an everlaſting ſpring in thy ſoul, that would keep thee from thirſting after the creature any more. What a rich feaſt are the graces of the Spirit quickened to a lively exerciſe! What a bleſt feaſt is pardon of ſin, peace with juſtice, peace with the law, an intereſt in Chriſt's purchaſe, intimations of Chriſt's love, goſpel-promiſes applied, communion with God, views of eternal life, well grounded hopes of immortal glory, &c! O how precious and delicate are theſe goſpel-rarities which are ſet before you on the communion-table, and freely tendered to every one that opens the door to Chriſt! Who would not welcome ſuch a Gueſt that brings ſuch glorious proviſion with him? Had poor ſinners ſpiritual appetites ſharpened for Chriſt's feaſt, there would not be ſo many ſhut doors againſt him.

V. Obſerve, how ſolemnly Chriſt offers theſe goſpel-bleſſings to you, with a behold I ſtand, &c. Chriſt takes witneſſes upon it, witneſſes againſt the refuſers: Behold ye angels, and witneſs for me how kind and bountiful my offers are to Adam's rebellious children! Behold ye miniſters, and witneſs againſt thoſe who ſhut me out! Behold ye ſtones and timber of the houſe, ye elements and communion-tables, bear witneſs for me and againſt them! Behold ye fellow communicants and hearers, bear witneſs one againſt another, that I knocked, I called, I knocked loud, I knocked long, but ye kept your doors bolted againſt me.——It is a melancholly thought for theſe who are miniſters to entertain, that they will one day be brought in as witneſſes againſt thoſe who ſhut out their Saviour; but when called they muſt witneſs againſt ſuch, though never ſo dear to them now, that Chriſt called, but they refuſed; he made kind and large offers, but they regarded them not. O then let every ſoul ſet about ſweeping and waſhing all the rooms, and caſt open all the doors, as wide as they can, to the King of glory, and receive him with acclamation and praiſe. Take the crown off the head of ſelf, and put it on the head of Chriſt, aſcribing all the glory of our ſalvation to him, and nothing to free will, or your own doings.

ADVICE IV.

From Prov. ix. 5. Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine, &c.

CHRIST is the Wiſdom of God, who hath made rich proviſion for entertaining his people, and hath ſet it before them in the ordinance of the Lord's ſupper; even Chriſt crucified with all the fruits of his purchaſe. His fleſh is meat indeed, and his blood is drink indeed. The fruits we feaſt upon are pardon and peace, righteouſneſs and grace, the aſſurance of God's love, the conſolations of his Spirit, the promiſes of the goſpel, and all the earneſts and pledges of eternal life. To this feaſt ſtarving ſouls are invited, to feed by faith upon theſe promiſes Chriſt hath prepared for them, applying them to themſelves, and taking the comfort of them.

Bread and wine are choſen as fit reſemblances of his ſpiritual feaſt. As bread and wine ſerve to preſerve our natural life, and to ſtrengthen and chear us when weak or fainting; ſo Chriſt crucified, apprehended by faith, preſerves our ſpiritual life, and procures eternal life, ſtrengthens the weak believers, and chears drooping ſouls.—As bread and wine incorporate with our bodies; ſo Chriſt by his Spirit dwells in us, and we by faith and love dwell in him.——As bread and wine ſatisfy our hunger and thirſt; ſo theſe, who by faith lay hold and partake of Chriſt's fleſh and blood, ſhall no more hunger or thirſt after earthly things.—Bread is the moſt neceſſary thing in the world, hence called the ſtaff of bread, it upholds our lives; ſo Chriſt is the mercy of mercies, the moſt uſeful and neceſſary bleſſing to preſerve our ſtarving ſouls.——Chriſt is the Staff of bread indeed to believing communicants, a Staff that ſupports you, a Staff that defends you, a Staff that will beat off all your enemies: If you take hold of this Staff by faith, it will rout and put all your foes to flight. There is no bread like this! I am the Bread of life, ſaith Chriſt.

We read, Judges vii. 13. of a dream of one of the Midianitiſh hoſt, he dreamed when Gideon was coming upon them, that a cake of barley bread came tumbling into the hoſt of Midian, and ſmote a tent that it fell to the ground. Strange! a piece of bread overturn a tent! Behold the interpretation of that dream, in the holy ſacrament! Here a piece of bread, if eaten by faith, that will invade the Midianitiſh hoſt of the devil, and the luſts of the fleſh, ſtrike down all their tents, and put them to flight. Come then, eat of this bread believingly, and take faith's view of Chriſt's body repreſented by it, as bruiſed and broken by your ſins; this will weaken their power, and turn your heart againſt them, and make you reſolve that theſe enemies of Chriſt ſhall not live in your ſoul. If the ſight of Cæſar's bloody robe incenſed the Romans againſt the murderers who ſlew him; much more a ſight of Chriſt's wounds and bruiſes in the ſacrament, ſhould excite you to hate and kill ſin, and revenge Chriſt's death upon this cruel murderer.

Again, would you have ſtrength for your wilderneſs journey, and for the temptations and trials you meet with, before you have occaſion of another ſacrament? Come eat of this bread that ſtrengtheneth the hearts of men.——Here is food more ſubſtantial, durable and nouriſhing, than Elijah's cake baken on the coals, and the cruſe of water provided for him by the angel; and yet it is ſaid, he went in the ſtrength of that meat forty days and forty nights, until he came to Horeb the mount of God, 1 Kings xix. 7. 8. There we find Elijah twice wakened by the angel, that he might take a double meal, Ariſe and eat for thy journey is long: So God may be ſaying to thee, O Chriſtian-traveller, Ariſe and eat, awake O faith, awake O ſpiritual appetite, thy journey may be long; take a good meal, you know not what hills you have to climb, what winds and ſtorms may blow in thy face, before another occaſion of this ſort: Satan's ſtorm may blow, and death's ſtorms may blow, ſo that you may not ſee another table like this, till you come to the mount of God above.—This is the ſame bread the glorified ſaints do feed on in heaven. Chriſt is the Manna that came down from heaven to feed periſhing ſouls. The Iſraelites manna was a type of Chriſt, and hence called ſpiritual bread, 1 Cor. x. 4.

The manna was freely given to them, and fell every morning round their tents, and all of them were at freedom to gather it, and there was enough for the whole camp; ſo Chriſt is God's free gift, and in him is a fulneſs of grace for the whole believing world, and every goſpel-hearer is free to gather it, though indeed the morning of our lives is the moſt proper gathering time. There was a memorial of this manna preſerved in the ark; ſo is there of Chriſt in the Lord's ſupper, as the food of our ſouls.——Manna was ground in a mill, or beaten in a mortar, and baken in an oven, before it was fit for food; ſo Chriſt was bruiſed and ground by his ſufferings, and ſcorched in the fiery oven of his Father's wrath, that he might become a fit Saviour, and fit food for our ſouls.

But Chriſt crucified infinitely excells the Iſraelites manna: Theirs was peculiar to themſelves; but Chriſt is free to both Jews and Gentiles: Theirs ceaſed when they came to Canaan; but ours continues for ever, and is enjoyed moſt fully in the Canaan above: Theirs only preſerved a natural life; but ours gives a ſpiritual and eternal life.—O come then, eat of this heavenly Bread, when ſet before you in plenty, with hunger and deſire, bleſſing God for it, ſaying, Lord, evermore give us this Bread: Come with ſpiritual appetites and purified hearts. The Iſraelites manna was laid up in the ark, and kept in a pure golden pot, to teach you to cleanſe your hearts from ſin and corruption, that they may be fit to lodge Jeſus Chriſt our heavenly Manna. If the veſſels which contain the ſacramental bread, were foul or polluted, you would cenſure it as moſt indecent; but much more unbecoming is it, to receive Chriſt into a foul heart.

Come to this table with humility, and a deep ſenſe of your ill deſervings, acknowledging, that the leaſt crumb of this Bread will be a great mercy to ſuch an unworthy creature! Truth, Lord, I am a dog, vile and polluted, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the childrens table! May I plead for a crumb for thy free mercies ſake.—Oh, I am unworthy of the common bread that is ſet upon my own table, much more of the heavenly Bread that is ſet upon thine! Inſtead of bread thou mayſt give me a ſtone; inſtead of a ſmile, a frown; inſtead of the cup of the New Teſtament, thou mayſt put a cup of wrath and trembling in my hand: But thy free grace, and large offers, encourage me to wait and hope, that the needy ſhall not be forgotten, and the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh.

Come with a lively faith to receive and eat, not only of the bread of life, but alſo to receive the Bread, the Lord, your Immanuel in perſon, and make uſe of him in all his offices.—Come eat with love and thankfulneſs, to him that was willing to be beaten, bruiſed, ground and ſcorched, that he might be Bread for nouriſhing of ſtarving ſouls. Receive this Bread of heaven thankfully as a diſtinguiſhing bleſſing, which is not granted to all indifferently; for as God rained down manna from heaven upon the Iſraelites; ſo he rained down fire and brimſtone on Sodom and Gomorrah.

ADVICE V.

From Gen. xlv. 4.—Come near to me, I am Joſeph your brother, whom you ſold.—

JOSEPH was an eminent type of Chriſt: though he was hated, ſold, and cruelly uſed by his brethren; yet he ſtill loved them, forgave them, and laid out himſelf for their preſervation and happineſs.—Though Chriſt be Lord of heaven and earth; yet, O believing communicants, he owns himſelf as your brother, Bone of your bone, and fleſh of your fleſh; nay, he is not aſhamed to call you brethren, Go tell my brethren, ſaid he to Mary, Matth. xxviii. 10. Though you be mean and low, and Chriſt highly raiſed, yet his exaltation doth not cauſe him forget his poor friends below; he ſtill owns them as his brethren. He is indeed the elder Brother, and Heir of all things; yet he is pleaſed to adopt his younger brethren into his right, and make them joint heirs with him of the inheritance above. As Joſeph was moſt condeſcending to his poor brethren, though he was lord over all the land; ſo is Chriſt. As they did not know Joſeph, until he told them I am Joſeph your brother; ſo neither do we know Chriſt, untill he diſcover himſelf to us. As Joſeph ſeemed to deal roughly with his brethren at firſt, to make them remember the injuries they did him; yet in the mean time he loved them, gave them food, and afterwards ſpoke kindly to them: So Chriſt at firſt takes ways to humble his people, and make them ſenſible of their ſin; yet at the ſame time he ſecretly ſupports them, and at length brings in conſolation to them, ſaying, I am Jeſus your brother, it is I, be not afraid. Come near to me, ſaid Joſeph in a kind and familiar way to his brethren; ſo Chriſt ſaith to you, draw near to me with a ſincere heart, and I will manifeſt myſelf unto you, as a loving Brother.

But if you would have the gracious intimations of his favour, you muſt firſt be humbled for the wrongs you have done him. You have dealt treacherouſly and inhumanly with Chriſt, as Jacob's ſons did with their brother Joſeph: Theſe ſold their brother for twenty pieces of ſilver; but ah! have not ſome of you ſold Jeſus, your brother, for leſs, even for ſome vile luſt or filthy pleaſure? Nay, have you not murdered him by your ſins? As Cain ſlew his innocent brother openly in the field; ſo your ſins have openly nailed Jeſus to the croſs, in the fields without Jeruſalem, and ſhed his blood like water on the ground. O how can you anſwer for ſuch horrid cruelty to your innocent Brother? How can you look him in the face, after all you have done againſt him? What feeling have you of the injuries you have done him? Are you deeply humbled, and heartily grieved for them? Then I have good news to tell you, you have to do with a moſt loving and forgiving Brother; tho' you have betrayed him, ſold him, wounded him, murdered him; yet he is willing to forget and forgive all to the humble penitent: Come near to me, ſaith he, I am Joſeph your brother, ſtand not at a diſtance, but come near me by faith and prayer, embrace me in the ſacrament, and I will give you a ſealed pardon of all your crimes; I will give you all the good things of the land, far excelling the richeſt fruits of Egypt, even my own body and blood, with all the ſpiritual and eternal bleſſings purchaſed thereby.

Object. But alas, I have dealt ſo baſely and treacherouſly with my Brother Joſeph, I have no confidence to go and meet him, I am afraid he frown on me. Anſw. He has indeed good ground to do it, but he is full of bowels, tenderneſs and pity to penitents, and moſt ready to forgive. Let me adviſe you to imitate Jacob when going to meet his brother Eſau, whoſe wrath he very much dreaded: He carried preſents alongſt with him to his brother. In like manner do you take preſents with you, ſuch as, 1. A broken, contrite and humbled heart, a broken heart he will not deſpiſe.—2. Take faith with you, and the ſtronger it is, it will be the more agreeable preſent to Chriſt; put a firm truſt and confidence in his blood and bowels, bode and threap kindneſs on him like the woman of Canaan, Truth, Lord, I am a dog, but dog as I am, I may plead for a crumb, ſeeing thy faithful word warrants me to do it. This preſent from that poor creature was ſo acceptable to Chriſt, that he immediately anſwered, O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt, Mat. xv. 28. 3. Take with you a firm purpoſe and reſolution, in the ſtrength of your Brother, not to betray or wound him any more, and ſeal a covenant with him upon theſe terms. 4. Take with you a ſincere heart and purpoſe of imitating your Brother, and ſtudying conformity to him. Learn of me, ſaith he, for I am meek and lowly in heart. Theſe preſents would be moſt acceptable to your grieved and offended Brother. But ſeeing you have nothing of your own, cry, Lord, give them firſt to me, and I'll offer them unto thee.

What condeſcenſion is this, that Chriſt, the King of kings, ſhould ſay to all believers, Ye are my brethren and ſiſters! Who would not deſire to ſtand in this honourable relation to an earthly king, and far more to the King of glory! Would we have him then for our Brother to own us, ſuccour and ſympathize with us in all our troubles; let us forthwith embrace and cloſe with him by faith, as he is tendered to us in the rich, large and free offers of the goſpel, and then the relation is preſently made up. O how inviting and alluring is that word, I am Jeſus your Brother! It ſhould conquer the moſt ſtubborn will, and make every unbelieving heart to receive him like Thomas and ſay, My Lord, and my God.

Let every believer in diſtreſs come like the bee, and ſuck honey from this Flower, I am Jeſus your Brother, Be not afraid, it is I. Do not miſtake me for an enemy in any of my dealings with you. It is I your Brother that means you no harm. It is I that loves you, and laid down my life for you. It is I who by my blood purchaſed ſanctified afflictions to you, to work for your good. It is I that doth all things well, and have infinite wiſdom and love to order and direct every diſpenſation for your intereſt and benefit. It was I that ſwate blood for you in the garden, was ſpit on and buffeted in the high prieſt's hall, and nailed for you to the croſs, and all to purchaſe eternal happineſs and glory for my afflicted brethren. I am Jeſus your Brother, behold my hands and my feet. It is I that died and roſe again for you, and have aſcended to my Father and your Father, to my God and your God; and have gone up to prepare a place for you. It is I that ſit at the helm, and all power given to me. It is I that am faithful and true, and I have the ſame tender heart and yearning bowels for you I had on earth. It is I that never failed any that truſted in me. It is Jeſus your Brother who am ſtill the ſame yeſterday to day and for ever. Be not afraid in trouble, it is I your dear Friend and Brother; come near to me in the daily exerciſe of faith. Come near and cloſe to me at my table, and take a narrow look to my five big wounds, and draw conſolation from them. Behold the two wounds in my hands, and the two wounds in my feet, which were made to bring you back from hell to heaven. Behold a fifth wound in my ſide, and look into my heart and ſee it panting with love, and do not queſtion your Brother's love to you any more.

ADVICE. VI.

From Matth. xxii. 2. A certain king made a marriage for his ſon.

THE goſpel covenant, or covenant of grace, is a marriage-covenant betwixt Chriſt and believers; a ſurprizing marriage this is, and yet a marriage of God's making. Wonderful! the great God is content to give his dear Son in marriage to fallen Adam's daughter, that was become a ſlave to the devil! Yea, he hath drawn up the contract, and all the articles of it. Chriſt the Bridegroom hath cheerfully ſubſcribed the contract, he dipt the pen in his own blood on the croſs, and put his hand to it in the view of God, angels, and all the world. Now the Bridegroom wants your conſent to the marriage contract, and he hath long been courting you to ſubſcribe it: Some of you have often been purpoſed to do it, yea, taken the pen in your hand, but, upon ſome ſmall temptation, have ſtopt and thrown by the pen. This day Chriſt hath ſet a tryſt with you to conclude the bargain, and his ambaſſadors are come, in his name, to ſpread the contract before you with all its articles. Well then, Will you go with this man? Will you put your hand to the contract?

O ſinners, you have no reaſon to be ſhy in this matter, you have nothing to be vain of, you are mean born, of low extract; you are lothſome lepers, you are deformed, black, and have no beauty; you are cripples, cannot walk, unleſs Chriſt lift you; you are drowned in debt, many old ſcores hath Chriſt to clear for you, if he match with you. O who would make love to ſuch a wretched creature! Yet, behold, here is one that is fairer than the ſons of men, of the blood-royal of heaven, the Heir of all things, courting you! Be aſtoniſhed, O ye heavens, at this match! One infinitely rich with a beggar, the Heir of heaven with the heir of hell, the Beauty of heaven and earth with a deformed negro! But if the Bridegroom be content, why ſhould you ſtick? Can you give any reaſon for your refuſal or delay? Now the God of heaven is ſetting tryſt with you to conclude this bleſſed bargain with you at his table, and calling you there to ſign and ſeal a marriage-contract with his Son, and that before all the Perſons of the glorious Trinity, before the elect angels, before Chriſt's ambaſſadors, and before all the congregation, witneſſes thereto. There have been many meetings heretofore, about this grand affair, to no effect; The world, ſatan, and the fleſh have formerly broke off the treaty; forbid it, Lord, that they do it this day. O that the long ſpoke of match betwixt a crucified Jeſus and loſt ſouls may hold at laſt. This may be the laſt tryſt, the laſt offer Chriſt will make; it may be now or never with you. Lay your hand to your heart then, and conſider well before you refuſe.

Come take another view of this beautiful Bridegroom that is in your offer. Behold how delicate his complexion is, He is white and ruddy; white in regard of his innocence, and ruddy in his bloody paſſion. O how peerleſs is his Perſon! how raviſhing his beauty! how charming his voice! how ſtately his goings! how fragrant are his garments! They ſmell of aloes, myrrh and caſſia! Search all the world, you cannot find his equal. One glimpſe of him is enough to raviſh men and angels; His locks are black and buſhy as the raven, his lips are like lillies dropping ſweet ſmelling myrrh, his legs as pillars of marble ſet upon ſockets of fine gold; his countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars; yea, he is altogether lovely! Now, can you refuſe ſuch a lovely Perſon, eſpecially when you think how he loved you, ſo as to ſuffer a cruel and bloody death for you, and to ſend his portraiture with the marks of his wounds to be put in your hands at his holy table, and all to win your heart? Come view and remember the many wounds he received for you, by the thorns which pierced his head, by the pincers that plucked his hair, by the ſcourges that tore his back, by the nails that pierced his hands and feet, and by the ſpear that opened his ſide! Surely theſe wounds do not mar his beauty to the eye of faith; nay, though he be all over wounded, mangled and bleeding, yet to a believer he is ſtill white and ruddy, the chiefeſt among ten thouſands, fairer than all the ſons of men, nay, and all the ſons of God too.

Certainly the Bridegroom muſt be in earneſt, when he comes in his marriage robes to win backward hearts, when he puts on his dyed garments, and is red in his apparel; when he diſplays his glory, brings the marriage-contract in his hand, ſpreads it on the communion-table, and calls all who love him to ſign it. O that many were made willing, in a day of his power, to go in to all the articles of this marriage-covenant, ſaying, My heart is now content to go with the man Chriſt, that wonderful man; I conſent to all his terms, he is my Lord and my God, my glorious Immanuel; my Beloved is mine, and I am his. Queſt. I would know particularly what he requires on my part of the contract, that I may diſtinctly cloſe with him? Anſ. He would have you, 1. Convinced of your ſinking and periſhing ſtate, while you ſtand upon the old bottom of a covenant of works; and willing to leave it, and leap from it, and cleave to a covenant of grace, aud a borrowed righteouſneſs for all the ground of your hope.—2. He would have you humbled and grieved for your long ſlighting his kind offers by your unbelief, and for your preferring ſatan's drudgery to his ſervice.—3. Give up with all other lovers, and theſe that would rival it with Chriſt, ſuch as ſin, the world, or the law, ſelf-righteouſneſs muſt be reuounced and parted with; you muſt break league with all Chriſt's enemies.—4. Accept of Jeſus Chriſt as your Huſband, receive him in all his offices, reſt and depend on him alone for righteouſneſs, ſtrength, and ſalvation.—5. Give away yourſelves, ſoul and body to Chriſt; reſign your will to his will, and ſurrender all you have to his diſpoſal.—6. Reſolve and vow, in Chriſt's ſtrength, to crucify ſin, and walk with him in all the ways of new obedience.—7 Engage to be true and faithful to your Huſband, and never to retract.—8. Keep up the remembrance of your Huſband's coming at the laſt day to ſolemnize the marriage, and take you home to himſelf, and be always in readineſs to go forth to meet him. The Bridegroom is ready long ſince, and will ſoon rend theſe clouds to meet you in the air, and ſend his angels to bring you up to him; Therefore be ye alſo ready.

O why doth he delay his coming? What ſtops the wheels of his chariot? Surely it is not becauſe he is unready, but becauſe you are not ready. All the elect are not yet brought in to him, and he is determined not to want one of them. O then be providing for the marriage-day all proper furniture, robes, jewels, rings and ornaments, againſt the time that Chriſt and you take up houſe together in heaven. Be ſure to go to Chriſt for every bit of your pleniſhing, for righteouſneſs, and for all the graces of the Spirit.—In the mean time, take home with you the marriage-contract, the precious promiſes which Chriſt hath ſubſcribed with his blood. Be often looking into it, and viewing your Bridegroom's hand-writ and engagement. His writing is fair and beautiful; let not ſatan or unbelief caſt blots on it to deface it; keep it fair and legible, and draw all your comforts from it; your Huſband is faithful, and will keep his word.

ADVICE VII.

From Lam. i. 12. Behold and ſee, the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

WITH far better ground may Chriſt make uſe of theſe words of his church, and call us to behold his ſufferings for us under the fierce anger of God, in the day when it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, and put him to grief in our ſtead, Iſa. liii. 10. Many things did he ſuffer from men and devils; but his afflictions and bruiſes from the immediate hand of God taking vengeance for the elects ſins, were far more heavy. His ſoul-ſufferings were the moſt afflicting of all others. Let every communicant behold, ſee, and conſider theſe with ſuitable affections.

Behold not only the buffetings, ſcourgings, woundings, and cruel mockings your lovely Jeſus endured from men, the inſtruments of God's juſtice; but eſpecially what he ſuffered in his ſoul by the deſertion or dereliction of God the Father, whereby the gracious influences and comforts from the divine to the human nature of Chriſt were ſuſpended for a time, and a black cloud of wrath overwhelmed him; ſo that no light appeared to him; which made him cry out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?—Nay, at this time he had a torrent of wrath flowing in upon his ſoul, and the moſt dreadful impreſſions of his Father's anger, and the law's curſe, which fell upon him for man's ſin, when he was made a curſe for us, that it caſt him into a fit of ſore amazement, conſternation and terrible agony, and into a ſweat of blood. The fire of wrath raging in his ſoul affected his body ſo, that it dryed up his ſtrength and moiſture as a potſherd, and made his tongue cleave to his jaws. He held his peace under all his ſufferings from men, and opened not his mouth; but when God's immediate wrath fell heavily on him, then he cried out: It is ſaid, He put up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7. Yet God would not ſpare him, nor abate him one ſtripe or farthing of the debt; let him cry never ſo loud, juſtice was inexorable; he muſt ſatisfy to the full.

O can you ſee the great Immanuel ſubſtitute in your room and ſtead; God acting againſt him as an inexorable Judge; Jehovah running upon him as a giant, not only withdrawing his countenance, and all feeling of his loving-kindneſs from him, but making him the butt of his envenomed arrows; and not be filled with admiration at Chriſt's love, and ſorrow for your ſins, which brought ſuch a ſtorm of wrath upon him!—O how ſad were the bruiſes! how deep were the wounds! how wide the gaſhes! and how heavy the blows he got from the ſword of juſtice for our ſins! The ſword was not dull nor ſleepy, but furbiſhed and awakened by juſtice to the execution.——O how heavy were the blows our Surety got from this awakened ſword in the garden of Gethſemane, which made his ſoul exceeding ſorrowful, and put him in a dreadful agony and bloody ſweat!——Behold and ſee how patiently he drank the bitter cup of God's wrath for you, the poiſon whereof drank up his ſpirits, and made his blood to boil in his veins, and burſt through his body, clothes and all! He ſwate without any outward fire or heat, and bled without any external wound.——Behold his garments dyed red, and the ground and graſs where he lay all bedewed with his precious blood!——Behold him broken with breach upon breach, till all the ſea billows of divine vengeance went over him; ſo that he fell to the ground, was covered with blood, and overwhelmed with wrath! Behold and ſee, if there be any ſorrow like his ſorrows!

It is ſaid Mark xiv. 33. He began to be ſore amazed and very heavy! which ſhews what a load and preſſure of wrath his ſoul lay under, that put him in an agony that ſtill increaſed more and more, like the waters in Ezekiel's viſion ſtill deeper and deeper, from the ankles to the knees, till they became waters to ſwim in, yea ſwelled into an ocean that would have overwhelmed the whole elect world. Into this ocean our bleſſed Jonah was willing to be thrown for our ſake, and in it he continued to ſwim, until he brought every elect ſoul ſafe aſhore.——It is recorded of Abraham when offering his ſacrifice, Gen. xv. 12. That in the evening lo an horror of great darkneſs fell upon him. This was verified much more of Chriſt in the evening before his paſſion, in the garden. There, a terrible horror of great darkneſs fell upon Chriſt's ſoul, which made him exceeding heavy, and ſore amazed, at the proſpect of the ſea of wrath that was coming rolling upon him; while the Father was hiding his face from him. O how great was the anguiſh of Chriſt's mind at this time, when he found himſelf preſſed and bruiſed betwixt the milſtone of God's juſtice and our ſins! which preſſure made him ſweat without heat, and bleed without wound! Ah! the fire, the heat, the wounds were inward, even in his ſoul! O communicants, behold and ſee Chriſt's ſorrows for you, nothing can be more acceptable to Chriſt than often to meditate thereon with admiration and love. If any of you had loſt a hand, or even a finger in defending or reſcuing your friend from an enemy, you would expect he would be ever mindful of the favour, and never forget you. But O what is that, to the ſufferings of the Son of God for you! He hath loſt not a hand but his heart-blood, yea, the favour and countenance of God for you for a time. He left his glorious throne in heaven, and ſtooped to become a man, a poor man, a man of ſorrows, a deſerted man, and a dead man for you. Nay, he was willing to be made a curſe for you, and to take on a dreadful load of wrath upon his innocent ſoul, yea infinitely more than any damned ſoul in hell can bear; and to ſwim long in a ſea of wrath to ſave you from periſhing in it. Let the ſurprizing love of Chriſt fill your ſoul with wonder, and kindle a flame of love in your ſoul to him.

Again, meditate on Chriſt's ſorrows, with deep ſorrow for ſin the cauſe thereof, believe that amazing word, Iſa. liii. 6. He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was bruiſed for our iniquities. Let the ſound of it never go out of your ears, ſay, Oh! my ſins were the thorns which pierced his head, the nails which pierced his hands, and the ſpear that pierced his ſide. My curſed ſins put the Lord of life to a cruel death, they wounded him more than all his other enemies. When my dear Lord was in the garden, no Judas, no Pilate, no Jew, nor Gentile was there, to cauſe his amazing horror of ſoul, and his fearful ſweat of blood; but, Oh, my unbelief, my pride, my carnality, my hypocriſy and other ſins were there, and with their weight preſſed him to the ground, and brought that agony and ſweat upon him. Oh, that my head were waters, that I might weep a flood of tears for my ſins!

Laſtly, Abhor ſin as the greateſt evil, and never have ſlight thoughts of it any more; can you behold your agonizing Saviour under a burden of wrath, and hear him complaining of the burning heat and thirſt which the fire of juſtice created within him! Can you ſee the great drops of blood ſtanding above his garments! Can you hear his cries and roarings under the bruiſes and anguiſh of his ſoul, and not be convinced of the evil and demerit of ſin! Can that ſit light upon your ſoul which ſat ſo heavy upon Chriſt's ſoul! O what deſperate malignity muſt there be in that, which could not be expiated without ſuch a coſtly ſacrifice! Look on them as fools who make a ſport of ſin, which coſt the Son of God ſo much ſoul-travail and inward horror: Never yield any more to the temptations of ſin, which coſt ſo dear before it could be forgiven.

ADVICE VIII.

From Matth. xxvi. 22. They were exceeding ſorrowful, and began every one to ſay, Lord, is it I?

IT was a commendable exerciſe of Chriſt's diſciples, before partaking of the holy ſupper, to be ſearching themſelves, and looking inward with a holy ſuſpicion upon their own hearts, eſpecially when Chriſt had told them, there was a traitor among them, and at the ſame time looking up to him that is omniſcient to aſſiſt them in the ſearch, ſaying, Lord, is it I? Am I the traitor? Will I betray my dear Lord and Saviour? Ah! every one of us have within us traiterous hearts to Jeſus Chriſt, and have reaſon to ſuſpect ourſelves as they did, and acknowledge we have many enemies of Chriſt lodged in our boſoms, ſuch as unbelief, hypocriſy, pride, malice, envy, ambition, worldlineſs, atheiſm, wanderings from God, backwardneſs to duty, &c. by which we have betrayed Jeſus Chriſt.——And as the diſciples when ſearching themſelves were exceeding ſorrowful; ſo ought we before we partake: And good reaſon have we for it, when we reflect upon our former guilt and treacherous dealing with God, and when we conſider the preſent deceitfulneſs and deſperate wickedneſs of our hearts, and that they are as ready to betray Chriſt as ever; yea, that there is hypocriſy and treachery in our hearts againſt Chriſt which we have not yet diſcovered. Upon all which accounts we have ground with the diſciples to be exceeding ſorrowful.

Now is the time, O communicants, to ſearch and examine yourſelves, and to be exceeding ſorrowful for the many traiterous wounds you have given Chriſt, by breaking both tables of the law, and every command thereof; by ſinning againſt light and conſcience, againſt mercies and judgments, warnings and reproofs, confeſſions and prayers. By unthankfulneſs for redeeming love, neglecting goſpel-offers, not loving and reſting upon a crucified Jeſus, not accounting all things loſs and dung for him; not delighting in attending his ordinances, and in remembering his love in the holy ſupſuper.——O how treacherous have your hearts been to Chriſt! how blood-thirſty have your ſins been againſt him, in preſſing him down in the garden, in nailing him to the curſed tree! How are you able to look to Gethſemane or Golgotha with unconcerned hearts or dry eyes! Were not your ſins the principal actors in that horrid tragedy? Theſe, to be ſure, were the traitors, which by the hands of Judas, delivered up Jeſus to be crucified: What were Pilate, the Jews or Romans, but the executioners of your ſins? Who put the ſword in juſtice hands? Who raiſed the tempeſt of wrath againſt your Surety? Oh! it was your ſins. Blame none ſo much as them; they were the Judas that betrayed him, the Herod that mocked him, the Pilate that condemned him, and the ſoldier that pierced him; will you not then be exceeding ſorrowful for your traiterous hearts and bloody ſins? Could they ever been guilty of a more horrid crime than murdering the Lord of glory! O ſhall the rocks about Jeruſalem rend aſunder, the earth tremble and ſhake, the ſun vail its face, and the whole heavens put on a mourning habit, when Chriſt ſuffered for your ſins? And ſhall you the criminals, who deſerved all this puniſhment, ſtand unaffected? O what ſtupid hearts muſt you have, if they do not mourn for your ſins which brought on ſuch agonies upon the Son of God, before they could be expiated. Had you, in your paſſion, given a deadly wound to any poor innocent man, your hearts would have bled for it all your days; and will not your hearts much more relent for the ſlaughtering the innocent Lamb of God! One that never wronged you, but was always interpoſing for you, and doing you good!

Remember what David ſaid to the Lord, when he ſaw the people deſtroyed for his ſin, 2 Sam. xxiv. 17. Lo I have ſinned, and done wickedly; but as for theſe ſheep, what have they done? In like manner ſay you, Lord, I have ſinned, I have done wickedly; but as for this ſpotleſs Lamb, what hath he done? I have eaten the ſour grapes, but his teeth were ſet on edge. O when will your heart melt, and your eyes weep, if not now? Never was there ſuch a moving ſight ſet before your eyes, as the Lord of glory pierced and ſlain by your ſins. Now it is that deep calleth unto deep, deep ſufferings in Chriſt for deep ſorrow in thee.

O ſaith one, I deſire to be grieved for my hypocriſy and treacherous dealing with Chriſt, and for ſin that crucified him, but how ſhall I know if my ſorrow be of the right ſort? Anſ. Examine it by ſuch marks as theſe, 1. Godly-ſorrow, is accompanied with ſome view of the mercy of God in Chriſt, which ſupports the ſoul, and keeps it from deſpair. Judas ſorrow, however deep it was, wanted this neceſſary ingredient.——2. If true, it will be univerſal, both for your own ſins, and the ſins of others; for the ſins of the place where you live, and for theſe of the whole land.——3. If it be right ſorrow, it will bring you to conſider the aggravation and heinous circumſtances of your ſins, as being againſt light, againſt love, and againſt ſolemn engagements and profeſſions of friendſhip; ſo as to mourn and cry, How traiterous hath my heart been to ſo kind a Maſter?——4. It will produce theſe ſeven happy effects mentioned, 2 Cor. vii. 11. There it is ſaid, Godly ſorrow for ſins works, 1. Carefulneſs, that is a care to recover peace with God for what is paſt, and to pleaſe God for the time to come, by amending what is amiſs, and avoiding all temptations and occaſions that lead to ſin.—2. Clearing of yourſelves, by mourning over the ſins of other men, diſſenting from them, and ſhewing your deteſtation of them.—3. Indignation againſt ſin, as the abominable thing which God hates. The heart of a true penitent riſes, ſwells, and boils, againſt ſin. Then it is you are angry and ſin not, when you are angry at ſin, and at yourſelves for ſin.—4. Fear, the true penitent fears to offend God as he hath done, and that he may not do it, he nouriſheth a holy fear and awful impreſſion of the holineſs of God; and alſo a fear of holy jealouſy and watchfulneſs over himſelf, leſt ſin ſurprize him at any time.—5. Vehement deſire, to wit, after reconciliation with God through Chriſt, and after reformation of every thing amiſs, and to be entirely rid of all ſin.—6. Godly ſorrow produceth zeal, which is an affection or grace compounded of love and anger, to wit, love to God and duty, and anger againſt ſin and every thing oppoſite to God.—7. Revenge, by ſeeking the utter extirpation of ſin, by faſting, mortifying the fleſh, and denying yourſelves in ſome things lawful for a time. A good way to execute this revenge againſt ſin, is for penitents to take frequent views of the deep and bloody wounds which ſin hath given to your dear Redeemer. It is written of the emperor Julius Cæſar, that after he was murdered in the ſenate, they brought forth his robe all beſmeared with his blood to the market-place, and expoſed it to open view, in order to awaken his friends to take revenge on his enemies. This is ſurely one deſign of the holy ſacrament to waken your zeal againſt ſin which murdered the Lord of glory.—Laſtly, godly-ſorrow for ſin, will drive you to Chriſt for help againſt ſin; it will make you flee to Chriſt for deliverance from an ill heart, as well as from the wrath that ſin deſerveth; hence the apoſtle cried, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death! Rom. vii. 24.

ADVICE IX.

From Heb. vi. 18.——Who have fled for refuge, to lay hold upon the hope ſet before us.

WE have here a two-fold deſcription of true believers, which come to one; 1. They are ſuch as have fled to Chriſt as the true city of refuge, to ſhelter them from avenging juſtice.—2. They are ſuch as have by faith laid hold on Chriſt ſet before them in the goſpel-promiſe, as their only hope of ſalvation.

Chriſt is our refuge city from the curſes of the law which hang over us, from the avenger of blood, divine juſtice that purſues us, and from the devils which ly in wait for us. The cities of refuge under the law were ſix, but under the goſpel we have one better than them all. Theirs only protected the body from the wrath of man; but ours doth protect both ſoul and body from the wrath of an angry God. The way to it is made plain and patent, pillars are ſet up, Chriſt's miniſters to direct ſinners in the way to it. In this bleſſed city there is protection, inſtruction, proviſion and fulneſs for all that flee to it. Here is all our hope of ſalvation, and it is in vain to hope for ſafety any where elſe. Now, communicants, this bleſſed hope is ſet before you, come lay hold of it, and cleave faſt to it. Now the city is ſet on a hill, the way to it prepared, and the gates open: The goſpel trumpet is ſounded, and proclamation made, whoſoever flees to the city, be his caſe what it will, ſhall in no wiſe be caſt out.

Under the law, he that ſaw his danger, and fled to the city of refuge, did firmly believe there was ſafety and ſecurity for him by public authority in that privileged place, if he could but get into it in time before the avenger of blood did overtake him: Therefore he earneſtly deſired to be once within the gates of it, and for that end put forth his utmoſt vigour in running. He did not linger, halt, nor ſit down by the way; nor would he turn aſide to any crooked by-path that might lead him about, but keep the ſtraight and neareſt way to the city, as the pillars ſet up directed him. No perſuaſion of any man could make him look or flee to any other city, caſtle, or hiding place for ſafety, but to the city authorized by law. In like manner let every convinced ſinner, learn from this to flee to Jeſus Chriſt our ſafety from wrath, as the only Refuge appointed by God for him. Look, deſire and pant earneſtly to be within the gates. O ſinner, run with ſpeed, now the gates are wide open in the word and in the ſacrament. Put forth your utmoſt vigour, and eſcape for your life. Do not linger nor delay, but flee as one that ſees juſtice cloſe at your heels. Avoid all other ſhelters and by-ways for relief; away with carnal company, ſinful pleaſures, worldly mirth or diverſion; nay, take no ſhelter in your own duties and performances; believe that none of theſe can ſkreen or protect you from the ſword of juſtice, and that none elſe can, but he who is the Lord our righteouſneſs.

Of old, nothing could ſtop the man when flying to the city of refuge; had his wife and children hung about him, or his own heart ſuggeſted to him, will you leave your houſe, your garden, lands, relations, and many accommodations, and go to a ſtrange city and ſpend your days? He would have flung them all from him, and taken flight, ſaying to wife and children, Better part with all things, than part with my life, if you will not follow me, I muſt leave you all behind.——So let awakened ſouls flee with ſpeed and reſolution to Jeſus Chriſt; ſay to the world's profits, ſins, pleaſures, ſatan's allurements, and whatever would tempt you to ſtay behind, Get you hence; away with every thing that would hinder me from Chriſt. My Saviour and my ſoul are more precious to me than all the world; take all things from me, and give me Chriſt.——How great was Jerom one of the ancient fathers, his love to Chriſt? How ſtrong was his reſolution, when he ſaid, "If my father were weeping on his knees before me, my mother hanging about my neck behind me, my brethren, ſiſters and kinsfolk howling on every ſide to retain me from Chriſt, I would caſt my mother to the ground, run over my father, and deſpiſe all my kindred, tread all under my feet, and run to Chriſt."

O awakened ſoul, behold how Chriſt diſplays his love to thee in the ſacrament, he opens his wounds to be a refuge and hiding-place to thee, and calls aloud to thee to come and flee in thither, Turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die? To whom will ye flee for help, when the avenger of blood is at your heels, if you flee not to Chriſt the only refuge from wrath? Hills and mountains, ſeas and depths, heaven and earth cannot hide thee from the ſtorm, if Chriſt do it not. Now you have a noble opportunity, while the clefts of Chriſt's wounds ſtand open, and the bleſſed hope is ſet before you in the ſacrament, and Chriſt ſtretching out his hand, and waiting to ſee who will riſe and flee to him! O to ſee ſouls riſing in flocks, and flying as doves to their windows! What a pleaſant ſight would this be!

O, ſaith one, I can't riſe, my wings are clipt, my ſoul clogged I can't mount up. Anſw. If you can't mount up as with eagels wings, ſee if you can run to Chriſt, and kneel before him, like that young man, Mark x. 17.——Object. I find myſelf ſo burdened and heavy laden, that I cannot run. Anſw. Then ſhew a willingneſs to run to Chriſt; and cry, Draw me, and I will run after thee; even a deſire to run will be accepted, as of thoſe in Neh. i. 11.——Object. But, ſaith one, My heart is ſo dead and ſluggiſh, I have neither ſtrength nor will to run to Chriſt. Anſw. If you cannot run, then ſee if you can but go towards him; for we read in Jer. ii. 2. Theſe who went after him in the wilderneſs, were accepted of him.——Object. Alas, ſaith one, I am ſo weak and feeble, I cannot go. Anſw. Then endeavour to creep and move towards him as you can.——Object. But I am ſo lame and impotent both in hands and feet, that I can't creep nor move. Anſw. If you cannot move to Chriſt, then look to him as the Iſraelites did when ſtung with fiery ſerpents.

calls every feeble ſoul to do it, Iſ. xlv. 22. Look unto me, and be ye ſaved, all the ends of the earth: and would you have Chriſt come any lower than a look? O look up to Jeſus as lifted up upon the pole of the croſs, for all nations to behold him.—Object. My eyes are dim, the croſs far off; Jeruſalem, where it was ſet up, is out of ſight. Anſw. The pole of the goſpel and of the ſacrament, on which Chriſt is now lifted up, is near hand; look up to him thereon, and be ſaved.——Object. Saith one, I am ſo burdened with guilt, I cannot lift up mine eyes. Anſw. Then ly low before him like the humble publican, who was ſo burdened that he was aſhamed to lift up his eyes to heaven, and under a deep ſenſe of his vileneſs cried, God be merciful to me a ſinner, and ſo doing was accepted: In like manner humble yourſelf before a merciful Redeemer, and plead his promiſe, Mat. xi. 28. Truſt his word for eaſe and reſt to your burdened ſoul.

ADVICE X.

From John iii. 14.—Even ſo muſt the Son of man be lifted up.

THE lifting up of the brazen ſerpent upon a pole, to heal ſerpent-ſtung Iſraelites, was a type of the lifting up of Chriſt on the croſs, to heal convinced ſinners of their wounds by ſin.——As there was but one brazen ſerpent for healing the whole camp of Iſrael; ſo Chriſt crucified is the only Remedy and Saviour for a loſt world.—He muſt be lifted up; his dying on the croſs was neceſſary to fulfil his engagements from eternity to be our Surety; he muſt be offered up as a Sacrifice to ſatisfy divine juſtice for the ſins of men, ſeeing nothing elſe could do it. Though Chriſt's engagement to ſuffer for us was entirely voluntary at firſt; yet having once undertaken, it became neceſſary for him to be lifted up. And glory to him that would not go back from his word, however great his ſufferings were.

Come then, O communicants, behold and conſider, with ſuitable thoughts and affections, your lifted up Jeſus dying on the croſs. After he had borne the heavy croſs on his bleeding ſhoulders up mount Calvary, this croſs muſt next bear him upon the top of the mount, being firſt nailed to it, and lifted up with it.——Come ſee how this was done; behold the croſs-tree laid down upon the ground, and the Lord Jeſus ſtript naked, laid on his back, with hands and feet ſtretched out upon the tree, that they might take the meaſure of his body, and mark the holes for the nails! and lo, they take the meaſure longer than the truth, that they might both crucify and rack him at once, till his bones ſhould go out of joint: So the croſs was a rack as well as a death.—Our firſt parents ſtretched forth their guilty hands to take the forbidden fruit from the tree; therefore our glorious Saviour did willingly ſtretch forth his innocent hands to be nailed to the tree, to ſatisfy for their guilt.——Come ſee four big nails driven into his hands and feet, the moſt ſinewy and ſenſible parts of his body, and faſtened to the tree; apply your ear, and hear the hideous ſound of the hammers knocking in theſe nails! Oh, your ſins were the hammers that did it, mourn for them.

Come next and ſee the Lord of glory, when nailed faſt to the tree, lift up with it on high, and made to ſtand upright to the view of all the world! and then the foot of the tree let fall down with violence into the deep hole they had digged to faſten it, which fall did unſpeakably increaſe his torments, and rend the four wounds made by the nails. Thus his own weight became his torture, ſtill widening the wounds more and more, till all his precious blood ſtreamed out at them.——Behold your great Immanuel lift up on a croſs betwixt heaven and earth, as if he had been unworthy of a place in either, hanging betwixt two thieves, as if he had been the greateſt malefactor of the three! O what a ſpectacle was your Redeemer to both heaven and earth when thus lifted up! an aſtoniſhment to angels! a deriſion to the wicked! compunction to believers! but a Sacrifice acceptable to the juſtice of his eternal Father.—Look on this moving ſpectacle with deep ſorrow for ſin that faſtened him to the tree, and made him hang on theſe tormenting nails for ſeveral hours without comfort inward or outward! No way could he turn for eaſe, being fixed to the tree; if he ſtirred his bleſſed body at all, he was tormented afreſh by the wounds of his hands and feet, on which the whole weight of his body did hang: If he moved his head, which had the crown of thorns on it, the thorns would but pierce into it the deeper; yet for all this he complained not; no groan or ſigh was heard from him, but what he offered up to God for your ſins!

When the Son of man was thus lifted up, obſerve how the ſtreams of his precious blood run down to the ground, and ſtood in a little pool at the foot of the croſs, until the earth drank it up. Let this ſight affect your hearts, and open all the ſprings of ſorrow for ſin that pierced him. Sit down at the foot of the croſs, and receive this ſacred blood, as it falls, upon your hard hearts; let it drop on them, until it make them as ſoft as the ground it fell on. Let it drop on all the ſores and wounds of your ſouls, for it is the balm that muſt heal them.——Obſerve alſo the great extent of Chriſt's ſufferings at this time, they reached to all the parts of his body, and to all the powers of his ſoul: He ſuffered in all his ſenſes; his ſeeing, with the ſcornful geſtures of enemies; his hearing, with their ſcoffs and blaſphemies; his ſmell, with the noiſome ſtench of Golgotha; his taſte, with gall and vinegar; his feeling, with the piercing nails and thorns. Behold his hands that were ſtill beſtowing bleſſings, now fixed with nails; his feet that walked in God's ways, now digged through; his bowels that yearned for ſinners, now ſhrunk and dried up; his lips, that ſpoke as never man ſpoke, now ſwollen with blows. Now he ſuffered on the croſs till his ſtrength was dried up like a potſherd, and his tongue cleaved to his jaws; the fire of God's wrath ſcorched him inwardly, which made him cry out, I thirſt. His enemies mingled, at this time, a cup of vinegar and gall to him, which he refuſed; but glory to him, he refuſed not the cup which his Father mingled to him, though filled with wrath and curſes: This he drank for us, though it filled his whole ſoul with anguiſh, and made him roar and complain of his Father's deſerting him: "The arrows of the Almighty "were within him, the poiſon whereof drank up his "Spirit." Amidſt theſe fearful ſufferings, our lifted up Jeſus expired, willingly offering up himſelf, on the croſs, a propitiatory Sacrifice for us.

O believers, did Chriſt lift up himſelf as a willing Sacrifice for you on the croſs; ſee then to lift up the gates of your ſouls to receive in this Saviour; let him have a joyful welcome into your ſouls, and give him the beſt entertainment, the beſt affections, and the beſt ſervice.—Did he willingly ſtretch out his arms to be nailed to the croſs for you? Then be not unwilling to ſtretch out the arms of faith to embrace him; but ſee to embrace him wholly in all his offices, of Prophet, Prieſt and King: Be willing to be taught, ſaved, and ruled by him.

Was Chriſt lifted up on the croſs (as the brazen ſerpent was lift up in the wilderneſs) for healing all the ſtings and wounds given us by ſin and Satan? O then look up to him with the eye of faith for healing. This is the great remedy of God's contriving and providing, put ſtrong confidence in it, and look to it with hope and expectation: Never diſtruſt the virtue of God's Remedy, nor deſpair of healing from it, however deep your ſtings, or large your wounds be: For Chriſt was lifted up to be a remedy for the chief of ſinners, 1 Tim. i. 15. and none ever periſhed that looked to him. —Was Chriſt willing to be lift up to ſuffer for you? Then let your hearts be lift up to ſerve and obey him, like king Jehoſhaphat, whoſe heart was lift up in the ways of the Lord, 2 Chron. xvii. 6. Lift up your hearts with your voice in his praiſe; ſpeak of the glorious honour of his Majeſty, and make known his mighty acts: Obey his commands, and particularly his dying command; to remember him at his table with activity and delight: Go with lift up hearts to a communion-table to remember him, that went ſo willingly to be lift up on a bloody croſs for you. The ancient exhortation to communicants was, SURSUM CORDA, Lift up your hearts to meet with a lift up Jeſus.

ADVICE XI.

From Exod. xiv. 15.——Speak unto the children of Iſrael, that they go forward.——

THIS is the anſwer of Moſes's prayer for Iſrael, when in a great ſtrait at the Red-Sea. It is ſaid, he cried to God; yet we read not of one word he ſpake: He only lift up his heart to God, who well underſtands the language of the heart. Moſes's ſilent prayers of faith, prevailed more with God, than Iſrael's loud outcries of fear. A believing communicant may, in a ſtrait, cry to God, in prayer, without ſpeaking a word, ſo did Moſes for fainting Iſrael. When they came out of the land of bondage, and fled from Pharaoh's tyranny, the Lord ordered them to march toward the ſea; but now when they are near to it, and ſee Pharaoh's mighty army purſuing, and cloſe at their heels, they are in a great ſtrait what courſe to take; they think certainly they muſt turn either to the right or left hand to make their eſcape from Pharaoh: No, ſaith God, ſpeak to them to go ſtill forward, as ſtraight towards the ſea, as if they ſaw a fleet of tranſport ſhips there waiting to take them in. O might they think, 'This is a hard command, Go forward, when we ſee nothing but the deep devouring ſea before us; as good go back to the Egyptians, or ſtand ſtill until they come up and put us to the ſword, as go forward into the ſea and be drowned: Will the deep ſea have any more mercy on us, than the cruel Egyptians?'—But ſaith the Lord, make no objections, aſk no queſtions, let the people go forward, obey my command, and truſt me with their lives.

Obſerve here, O timorous communicant, O doubting believer, when you are in fears and ſtraits with reſpect to the management or ſucceſs of your duty, you are to ſet yourſelves to obey God's command, go forward in the uſe of means, with a ſincere heart, and leave the event to God. You may poſſibly, at this time, be brought to the ſtraitning caſe of the children of Iſrael, when at the Red-Sea, and their hearts in great perplexity, ready to ſink within them for fear. Some may be ſaying within themſelves, how ſhall ſuch a vile, black unworthy creature go forward to the red-ſea of Chriſt's blood, who have both ſpilt it and deſpiſed it? How ſhall I, after all, venture to go forward, to waſh or bath my unclean ſoul in it? Well it is God's plain command to you to go forward to it, however heavy loaden you be with guilt, ſee 1 John iii. 23. Matth. xi. 28. John i. 29. others as vile and black have obeyed his command, have gone forward to this red-ſea, and been waſhed in it, ſee 1 Cor. vi. 9. 10, 11. yea we read, Acts ii. 36. of three thouſand of theſe who actually imbrued their hands in this blood, who were waſhed by it. How wonderful is its virtue! it is able to take away the ſins of a whole world, and much more the ſins of a few; therefore do not, O ſinner, rebel againſt God's command any longer.

Again, conſider what is God's ſpecial command to thee at this time, namely, Do this in remembrance of me; his precept is plain and expreſs to keep up the memory of his love to loſt men. Can you think to look on his face with comfort at the laſt day, if you have no pleaſure to remember him now: Surely his preſence will be terrible then to thoſe, to whom his memory is not delightful now. But you may have ſtraits and difficulties about this duty, O ſaith one, 'My ſtrait is great, I know not what to do; whether to ſtay back from God's holy table, or go forward: If I ſtay back, I diſobey my dying Saviour's command to ſhew forth his death in this manner: If I go forward unworthily, I contract the guilt of his body and blood, and eat and drink my own damnation. Alas, what ſhall I do? my need of Chriſt and his blood is ſo great, I cannot think of ſtaying back; and yet my preparation is ſo little, I know not how to go forward.——Ah! my unworthineſs is great, how ſhall I go to the table of ſo great a King in the ſtate and caſe I am in, ſo vile, ſo ſinful, ſo indiſpoſed, ſo hard-hearted? If the woman, that had the bloody iſſue, feared ſo much to come and touch the hem of Chriſt's garment; how much more may I, who am full of the running iſſues of ſin, fear to go forward to touch the ſacred ſymbols of his body and blood, and put my hand into his wounds, and feel the print of the nails?' Come then, unworthy as you are, obey Chriſt's command, and venture your ſoul in his hand: Go forward with all the preparation you can attain to, deeply ſenſible of your own vileneſs, and humbled for your ſhort-comings, truſting in the worthineſs of the Lamb that was ſlain to anſwer for your unworthineſs, in his blood to waſh away your pollution, and in his ſtrength to help your weakneſs. Venture forward, ſaying like Jehoſhaphat, 'Lord, I have no ability, no might for this great ordinance, neither know I what to do; but my eyes are unto thee, it is in thy name, in thy ſtrength, and at thy command, 'that I go forward to remember a dying Jeſus at his 'holy table. Lord, put on me the wedding-garment, 'prepare, receive, and welcome me.'

Object. Some may ſay, They are only the children of Iſrael, who, in the text, are bid go forward; and we are afraid we are none of theſe.—Anſw. All are bidden, without exception, come to Chriſt, yea, even the ſtout-hearted are called to go to him. Now, if you come to Chriſt, it will be a ſure proof of your being Iſrael's children, and among theſe who are bid go forward. Miniſters indeed have a ſpecial commiſſion to ſpeak to the children of Iſrael, that they go forward to this table; whoever ſtay back, they ought not.

Queſt. Who are theſe that may be numbered among Iſrael's children, or the ſeed of Jacob? Anſw. The children of Jacob or Iſrael, if they be of the true kind, will be like their father, particularly in theſe things, 1. Jacob was a great wreſtler with God in prayer, and hence he got the name of Iſrael, he wept and made ſupplication at Bethel, and prevailed as a prince with God, which is the meaning of the name Iſrael. Now if you be wreſtlers with God, you are Iſrael's children, and called to go forward.—2. Jacob was a plain man; ſo he is called, Gen. xxv. 27. that is a ſingle-hearted man: It was by this character that Chriſt deſcribes a true Iſraelite, John i. 47. Behold an Iſraelite indeed, in whom is no guile. Now if you ſtudy godly ſincerity, and plain dealing in your behaviour both to God and man, you are Iſrael's children, and called to go forward.—3. Jacob had faith in Chriſt, and believing views of him as the glorious Shiloh; he waited for his coming, drew his comfort from it, and rejoiced in the gathering of the people to him: If it be ſo with you, then we bid you go forward. ——4. Iſrael and his children were God's covenanted people; they chuſed God for their God, and gave themſelves up to him: If it be ſo with you, you are Iſrael's children, go forward.——5. Jacob was zealous for reformation, both with reſpect to himſelf and his family, and cauſed them put away all their idols, cleanſe themſelves, and change their garments, when going to renew covenant with God, Gen. xxxv. 2. Now if you ſtudy ſincerely to follow his example, you are among the children of Iſrael, to whom God warrands miniſters to ſpeak, and bid them go forward to his table. Now, if you have any of the foreſaid five characters, in Chrriſt's name we can promiſe you welcome to his table. Go forward to it then with hearts burning with love to Chriſt and to his people; go with thankfulneſs and praiſe to God for providing ſuch a Saviour, and ſpiritual feaſt for you; and go with hunger and thirſt to partake of it. Go forward with humility and ſelf-denial, renouncing all confidence in your preparations and performances and depending only upon Chriſt's mediation for acceptance with God.

ADVICE XII.

From John xii. 32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

AS the ſacrifices under the law were heaved and lifted up before the Lord; ſo Chriſt the Antitype muſt be lifted up on the croſs as the atoning Sacrifice for our ſins. The Jews were not more willing to lift him up, than he was to lift himſelf; he readily undertook to be lift up, Lo I come, ſaid he; he willingly carried his croſs to the place, that he might be lift up on it. He diſſuades the women to weep for him. Why? Becauſe I am going to be lift up a Sacrifice to juſtice for your ſins, and to draw your ſouls unto me.

Queſt. But how doth he draw all men, when ſatan keeps many ſtill faſt in his grips? Anſw. Chriſt was lifted up to obtain drawing offers and invitations to all men without exception, and accordingly gives drawing calls to all men in his word; and if they be not drawn to him it is their own fault. But though many be called, and multitudes flock to the word; yet there are none effectually drawn to Chriſt but the elect; and theſe may be called all men, as they are gathered out of all nations, kindreds and languages, ages, ſexes and qualities. All men, Gentiles as well as Jews: All ſorts of men, ſinners of all ſizes, greater as well as leſſer. Queſt. But how doth the lifting up of Chriſt draw ſinners effectually to him? Anſw. By the merit of his lift up ſacrifice he obtained the removal of all hinderances of their coming to him, ſuch as the guilt of their ſins, the enmity of their natures, the power of their corruptions, their unbelief, hardneſs, blindneſs and diſcouraging fears. And likewiſe by it he purchaſed all the means requiſite for drawing men to him, ſuch as the preaching of the goſpel, ſanctified rods, the grace of faith, and, above all, the powerful influences of the Spirit. As Chriſt was lifted up on the croſs; ſo he muſt alſo be lift up on the pole of the goſpel, for drawing ſinners to him. Thus the brazen ſerpent was lift up in the wilderneſs, for drawing the ſtung Iſraelites about it, and it proved moſt effectual for that end; ſo a crucified Jeſus held out and evidently ſet forth in the goſpel, as he was lifted up on a bloody croſs, with his pierced hands ſtretched out to embrace loſt ſinners, is ſurely the moſt attractive and drawing ſight in the world. This wonderful Loadſtone hath drawn thouſands of hard iron hearts to it at once. A natural loadſtone, though it draw iron to it; yet it may be drawn away from it again: But a crucified Chriſt draws the heart ſo powerfully and cloſely to him, that they can never be ſeparated again. Never was there ſuch a drawing engine in the world as this! A lift up ſtandard or enſign draws numbers of ſcattered ſoldiers unto it, but it is ſeen by few: But a crucified Jeſus lift up in the goſpel is an enſign to draw great multitudes in different nations under the banner of love, Iſa. xi. 10. The firſt experiment that was made of its virtue in Jeruſalem by the Apoſtle Peter, three thouſand ſouls were drawn to Chriſt at once, and after that many nations that knew him not, did run unto him. Come then, O ſinners, admire and experience the power of this lift up Enſign; let your iron hearts be drawn by this Loadſtone; it hath loſt nothing of its virtue to this day. Thouſands of hearts in other places do ſtill feel its power; we are ſometimes refreſhed with the welcome news of their being drawn off from the vanities of time, and the love of ſin, to glorious Chriſt: Why then don't your hearts alſo yield to the power of this bleſſed Loadſtone, Chriſt crucified lift up in the word and ſacrament? It hath the ſame virtue here as elſewhere, were but the eyes of faith opened to behold it, according to that alluring call, Iſa. xlv. 22.

When Chriſt was lift up on the croſs, his face was turned to the Gentiles, for the Jews out of malice (as ſeveral write) would have him crucified with his face toward the weſt, as reckoning him unworthy to look to the temple and holy city that ſtood on the eaſt ſide of mount Calvary; but Chriſt had a loving deſign in it to us Gentiles, and to accompliſh that word, Pſal. lxvi. 7. His eyes behold the nations. Behold, O ſinners, Chriſt turned his face to you on the croſs to draw you unto him; there he bowed his head toward you to draw you; there he opened a cleft in his ſide to draw you; there blood and water flowed from his heart to draw you to him! And now he hath ſent his word and Spirit to draw you: now he diſplays his blood and wounds in the ſacrament to draw you; now he is caſting his cords of love about your hearts to draw you to him; now the devil is holding, and Chriſt drawing; Chriſt and the devil are now ſtruggling for your hearts; the eyes of many are on you, the eyes of the glorious Trinity, the eyes of angels, the eyes of miniſters and ſaints are on you, to ſee what the iſſue of the combat ſhall be, which of them ſhall gain the prize. Satan indeed is the ſtrong man, but, glory to God, Chriſt is ſtronger than he. O that he may prevail, the heart is his by right, ſurrender it to him without delay. He will not enter without your conſent; his people muſt all be made willing in the day of his power. Oh, if the will were once conquered, the day were Chriſt's, and the field were won for ever.

Would you then have ſatan defeat, your biaſſed will overcome, and your ſouls ſavingly brought to Chriſt, O look up and cry for a draught of Chriſt's power. You have neither ſtrength nor will to come to a crucified Chriſt, unleſs he draw you. Ordinances or providences cannot draw you, the word or ſacraments cannot draw you, judgments or mercies cannot do it; yea neither miniſters nor angels can draw your dead and heavy hearts. O then look beyond them all to a lift-up Immanuel, Draw me, Lord, and I will run after thee. The ordinance you have in view can never be a drawing ordinance, if Chriſt put not forth his virtue with it; the ſacrament will be lifeleſs, and the adminiſtrators lifeleſs, if Chriſt draw you not. The moſt powerful ſermons, the moſt alluring calls will all be loſt, if he draw not. You will ſit ſtill in the Sodom of a natural and wrathful ſtate, if he draw not; you will die in your ſins, if he draw not; you will be eternally damned, if Chriſt draw you not to him. You can never overcome the ſtrong and ſubtile temptations ſatan caſts in your way; you can never deny ſelf, forſake beloved luſts, renounce juſtification by works, quite all confidence in your own doings, go naked and empty to Chriſt, be content to live wholly upon his righteouſneſs, and receive grace, life, ſtrength and glory as a free gift from Chriſt, without the drawing virtue of a lift-up Saviour. Oh, if you were once acquainted with this drawing power, you might go with comfort to his table, and feed upon his purchaſe.

Queſt. How ſhall I know, if I have yet been drawn effectually to a lift up Jeſus?

Anſw. Try it by theſe marks, Have you diſcovered his matchleſs excellency ſo as to draw off your heart from ſin and the periſhing things of the world? Have you felt the cords of his love about your heart and will, conſtraining you to yield yourſelf wholly to him? Is your hearts drawn out in love and affection to a crucified Chriſt above all things, ſo that the deſire of your ſoul is to him and the remembrance of his name?——Are you growing ſtill liker to him, more holy, more humble, meek, and heavenly minded? Nearneſs will breed likeneſs.—Are you troubled for diſtance from Chriſt, when at any time you are drawn off him by ſin, ſatan, or the world's allurements?——Are you drawn to duty with a view of the enjoying his preſence therein? In the mean time are you drawn off from reſting on duties, or putting any attainments in Chriſt's room? Then you may conclude your heart is effectually drawn by a lift-up Saviour; and ſo may, with holy confidence and joy, draw near to him in the ſacramental tryſting place, and hold communion with him there.

ADVICE XIII.

From John i. 36.—xix. 5. Behold the Lamb of God.——Behold the Man.

O Communicants, both John and Pilate call you to behold Chriſt ſuffering and ſacrificed for you, and which is more, the Spirit of God calls you to this duty alſo. Let each one of you then ſay with Moſes, Exod. iii. 3. I will now turn aſide, and ſee this great ſight. A great ſight indeed! For though he be called a Lamb, and a Man, he is alſo God, God in human nature ſuffering, bleeding and dying, a great and wonderful ſight! All the Perſons of the glorious Trinity call you to behold it, Iſa. xlii. 1.——xlv. 22. John i. 29. Draw then as near as poſſible, that you may get a good view of it; ſtand not at a diſtance like theſe who followed him from Galilee to the croſs, of whom it is ſaid Luke xxiii. 49. They ſtood afar off beholding theſe things. Do not now ſtand afar off, nor take a far off look of a crucified Chriſt, but come cloſe to him by faith, and take a near and ſaving look of him, as he calls you, Iſa. xlv. 22. Look unto me, and be ſaved; I am God, and there is no Saviour beſide me. O then turn not your back or ſhoulder to him, look not aſquint to him, look not by him to other things; but look with a broad, ſtraight and ſteady look unto him. The Man Chriſt Jeſus is the Lamb of God, appointed by him to be ſacrificed to make atonement for our ſins, and to purchaſe pardon, life and ſalvation to us: And looking to him by faith is the great mean of ſecuring and applying the bleſſings of his purchaſe to us. And in a ſpecial manner he calls us to look unto him in his ſufferings for us, Behold me, behold me!

Behold the ſuffering Man, a Man of ſorrow indeed! And particularly behold him entering upon that fearful ſcene in the garden of Gethſemane, when he began to fear, turn ſorrowful, and very heavy: When he was ſore amazed, fell into an agony, and cried out, “My “ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful even unto death!” O what was it that made your Saviour ſo heavy, but the dead weight of the elect's ſins, with the law's heavy curſes annexed to them? Oh, your ſouls were exceeding guilty, which made his ſoul exceeding heavy. Behold and ſee your ſorrowful Redeemer falling into a fearful agony, and, while in it, falling down ſometimes on his knees, and ſometimes on his face, praying once, praying again, and praying the third time, until he is quite overwhelmed with wrath and covered with his own blood! Behold the ſorrowful Man with the great drops of blood ſtanding above his garment for your ſins and bedewing the ground! See Jehovah now acting againſt him, as an inexorable Judge, running on him as a giant, and making him the butt of his envenom'd arrows!—Behold him in this agony making his moan to his diſciples, who could make no help to him; for neither they nor the angels in heaven durſt touch his load, nor taſte his cup: Yea, he got not ſo much as ſympathy from his diſciples, they fell aſleep when he was at the worſt, and left him in his agony to ſtruggle and tread out the wine-preſs alone! O be not idle ſpectators of your Saviour's agony, but let your ſouls be exceedingly affected with Chriſt's ſoul-ſuffering for your ſouls ſins.

Behold the man Chriſt betrayed and ſold for a little money, apprehended and bound with cords like a thief, and bound faſt, as Judas bade, yea, ſo faſt, (as ſome ſay) that the blood burſt out of his tender hands! O can your heart or eyes hold to ſee thoſe hands that made the heavens, wrung together and bruiſed with hard cords! To ſee him bound as a priſoner that came to ſet the priſoners free! But had not the cords of your Redeemer's love held him faſter than the cords of his enemies, though they had been cables or chains, they could not have kept him; but his love to you made him a willing priſoner! Behold the Man blindfolded, mocked, buffeted and abuſed for you! Behold him ſtript naked and ſcourged! Behold him that clothes the lillies of the field, that made coats of ſkin to clothe our firſt parents, now ſtript and uncloathed himſelf! He is ſtript naked, that you might not be found naked at God's bar! He is ſtript of his robes, that he might provide a robe of righteouſneſs to cover your nakedneſs!—Behold the Man ſcourged by Pilate, and that above meaſure, thinking thereby to ſave his life; but as the Jews were not ſatiſfied therewith, ſo neither was infinite juſtice ſatiſfied; ſo that his life muſt go, and the Man Chriſt is willing it ſhould: Willingly did he give his back to the ſmiters, that you might be freed from the everlaſting laſhes of God's wrath in hell! Behold every part of his bleſſed body torn and wounded by ſcourgings, becauſe every part of you was wounded by ſin; and his ſtripes were the only cure for your wounds.

Behold the Man with a platted crown of thorns on his bleſſed head, with the ſharp points turned inward, and theſe beat into his head with a ſtaff, till all his head is but as one wound, from whence a new ſhower of blood ran down his neck for you! You may be ready to cry, Fy on the Jews, or fy on the ſoldiers that uſed our Saviour ſo; but rather cry, Fy on your ſins that did worſe to him, theſe platted the crown of thorns and crucified him too. Behold the Lamb of God now willingly caught in the thickets, like the ram, to be ſacrificed in your room, when you were bound like Iſaac for that end. Behold him willing to wear a crown of pain and ignominy, that you might wear a crown of glory and renown: Willing to be diſgraced and affronted, that you might be honoured and exalted: Willing to let a Barabbas, the vileſt malefactor in all Jeruſalem, be preferred before him, that you might be preferred to a room among God's children.——Behold the Man, after all theſe ſufferings, put to bear the heavy croſs on his ſore wounded ſhoulders, a heavy load indeed with the elect's ſins and law's curſes faſtened to it; yet he bears without complaint till his ſtrength is ſpent, and he is ready to faint under the burden, ſo that another muſt help! Oh! it was not the weight of the tree that made him faint, he had a greater burden to bear than ten thouſand worlds, even the infinite wrath of God due to the elect's ſins? O can you behold this ſight with dry eyes!

Behold the Man brought to Golgotha, nailed to the tree, lifted up, and drinking out the bitter dregs of the cup of wrath thereon, till at length he yielded himſelf priſoner to death, by bowing his head, giving death his orders to execute his commiſſion, and carry him off the ſtage! Behold and wonder at the ſight, the Lord of life, death's taken priſoner!——O man, can'ſt thou ſtand and ſee the Lamb of God ſlain in thy room, and for thy ſins, and not be affected! Write that man a beaſt, a ſtone, a lump of earth, that can be ſenſeleſs ſtupid and unconcerned at ſuch a ſight! O bluſh and be aſhamed, O man, at thy ſtupidity, when the dead earth and rocks about Jeruſalem quaked and rent at the ſufferings you now behold repreſented in the ſacrament. O curſed ſin (which many make light of) that could not be expiated by any other ſacrifice, than that of our Immanuel, the Lamb of God, the Man Chriſt Jeſus? O behold the Man, and tremble at ſin, the accurſed thing that murdered the Son of God, the Man that is God's Fellow, the Man that is infinitely preferable to a million of world's full of men and angels too. O that men would always look on ſin in the glaſs of the agonies and ſufferings of the Man Chriſt, that they might be filled with horror at it, as at hell itſelf! Nay, in ſeveral reſpects ſin is a greater evil than hell.

Let every communicant, every Chriſtian come and behold the glorious Son of God, with the greateſt love and admiration, who for our ſakes was willing to become a Man, and God's Lamb to be ſacrificed for the ſins of men. O let his name Jeſus be always to you as precious ointment poured forth, and let the remembrance of his love inflame your ſouls with a vehement indignation againſt ſin, and a burning affection to the Lamb of God, the Man Chriſt, that was willing to ſtruggle in bloody agonies, and bleed to death on the curſed tree to deliver you from lying in hell for ever! O what can we render to him for his free love, amazing and unſpeakable love! O that we could ſpend our whole lives in admiring his love, and contemplating his beauty, and were thereby made meet in ſome meaſure for the excerciſe of the redeemed above. Amen.

ADVICE XIV.

From Job xxxvii. 14. Stand ſtill and conſider the wondrous works of God.

THE works of God, being wondrous, do well deſerve our moſt ſerious conſideration; but ſo wavering are our minds, we cannot conſider them aright, unleſs we ſtand ſtill and compoſe ourſelves for that end. This advice doth Elihu give to Job in the text, and Moſes gives to the children of Iſrael, Exod. xiv. 13.—All God's works are wondrous and highly worthy of our obſervation, as his works of creation and providence; and more eſpecially his works of redemption and of grace, as they are made known to us in the goſpel-diſpenſation, and particularly in the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper.—Here God calls you to ſtand ſtill, and conſider his wonderous works of redeeming wiſdom and mercy, in ſaving fallen ſinners.—The work of creation is indeed moſt wonderful and ſtupenduous; but his work of redemption is far more coſtly and ſurprizing: The one coſt him but a word of his power, but the other coſt him the death of his Son: The one is but the work of his fingers, Pſal. viii. 3. the other is the work of his arm, Luke i. 51. Much of the divine wiſdom and power is diſplayed in making us men, but much more in making us ſaints; by the one we have but a ſhort mortal life, but by the other an eternal and immortal life. God's works of redemption and of grace will be the admiration of ſaints and angels to all eternity, Rev. v. 12.—xv. 3.

Come then, and behold theſe works of the Lord, as they are ſet forth before you in the word and ſacrament! Come and ſee God from all eternity paſſing by angels, and pitching his love upon poor ruined ſinners of Adam's family, and contriving their redemption by the incarnation and death of his dear Son, while he paſſed by the angels that fell.——Come and ſee the glorious Son of God undertaking, in the council of peace, to become Surety to pay our debt, and ſatisfy juſtice for the injury our ſins did to God's glory!—Behold and conſider the device of infinite wiſdom for reconciling juſtice and mercy about guilty men, and ſatisfying the demands of them both, by puniſhing ſin ſeverely, and yet pardoning the perſons guilty!—Stand ſtill and ſee the wondrous work of making the Word fleſh to dwell among us; of the Creator's leaving his throne of glory to lodge in a virgin's womb, and a beaſt's manger; of the Ancient of days becoming a child of a day old, learning to ſpeak and go, and ſubjecting himſelf to his own law in the room of rebel-ſinners!——Behold God's wondrous work in ſetting up a court and throne of grace among the priſoners of juſtice, and cauſing grace ſit as a queen on the throne, with a ſcepter of mercy in her hand, and thence to iſſue forth proclamations of grace to poor, wretched, blind, miſerable and naked ſinners; proclaiming pardon to the condemned, liberty to the captives, and life to the dead; yea, ſee grace laying ſiege to the hearts of rebels, ſummoning them by the goſpel-trumpet to ſurrender, and uſing the moſt prevailing arguments with them to do it, taken from the mediation, ſufferings, blood, righteouſneſs and ſatisfaction of the Son of God.

Behold and conſider the wondrous work of God in furniſhing and fitting the Mediator for our miſerable circumſtances, joining the divine and human natures in one perſon for our relief! Obſerve how well he ſuits our exigences; he is Man, that he might die for us; and God, that he might overcome death! Man, that he might combat the devil; and God, that he might vanquiſh him! Man, that he might take on our guilt and puniſhment; and God, that he might ſupport under it! Man, that he might offer a ſacrifice for us; and God, to make it infinitely meritorious! Man, that he might ſympathize with us in trouble; and God, that he might deliver us! a wondrous work indeed! —Again, obſerve the Mediator's fulneſs, how exactly it ſuits our miſeries and wants! In our wonderful Immanuel, there is life for our deadneſs, light for our darkneſs, beauty for our deformity, ſtrength for our weakneſs, health for our ſickneſs, balm for our wounds, raiment for our nakedneſs, riches for our poverty, merit for our guiltineſs, righteouſneſs for our juſtification, a fountain for our pollution, grace for our ſanctification, bread for our hunger, water for our thirſt, and deep mercies for our deep miſeries! a wonderful work, to make one depth ſo exactly to anſwer another depth! This is the doing of the Lord, and wondrous in our eyes.

Stand ſtill, and ſee God's wondrous works, in ſending our Immanuel, the Prince of the kings of the earth, to go up and down the wilderneſs ſeeking after the loſt ſheep, calling and inviting them in the moſt tender manner to come unto him for life and ſalvation, willingly ſubmitting to be buffeted by ſatan, contradicted by ſinners, to ſuffer all manner of indignities, a curſed death, and the wrath of God, and all that he might be a ſacrifice to ſatisfy juſtice for our ſins: And after he had ſubmitted to death and the grave for a time, he conquered them and roſe again; and gave commiſſion to his ambaſſadors to go thro' all the earth, and call periſhing ſinners to come unto him, and offer them ſalvation in his name; and having done ſo, he aſcended into heaven to interceed for them. Now, it is incumbent upon all communicants to remember theſe amazing works of God, at his holy table, with wonder, thankfulneſs and praiſe.

Come here, and ſee the fountain of the great depths of infinite love broken up, and the ſtreams of the water of life running freely therefrom to the ſons of men. —Come, ſee Jacob's ladder ſet up, that reaches from earth to heaven, and God the Father at the top of it, calling you to climb to heaven by the ſteps of it, viz. Chriſt's wounds, offices and promiſes!—Come, ſee the manna coming down in plentiful ſhowers, and falling about your tents, and every man invited to gather.— Come, ſee the Rock broach'd in the wilderneſs, to ſupply the neceſſities of your ſouls; ſee the Rock ſmitten by the rod of Moſes and bearing the curſes of the law for you!——Come, ſee the City of refuge opened for poor manſlayers, that ſinners, who have ſlain their ſouls by ſin, may flee to it for ſhelter. O then flee for your lives, and do not linger by the way!—Come, ſee God bringing his righteouſneſs near you who are guilty criminals, and bidding you put it on for your ſafety in judgment, it is a robe that will fit every one of you.— Come, ſee the fruits and leaves of the Tree of life ſhaken and ſcattered among ſtarving wounded ſouls: Gather and feed on the fruits of his purchaſe for your nouriſhment; apply the leaves of his promiſes for your healing.——Come, ſee the Well of ſalvation opened, bring the chain and bucket of faith and draw water. The great medicine well is here, come with all your diſeaſes and ailements to it, come with your hard hearts, blind eyes, weak hands, feeble knees, lame feet and cold affections to get them healed.—Come, ſee Chriſt's teſtament opened, and every man allowed to put in for a ſhare of the legacies therein contained: This you are to do by believing, claiming, laying hold and embracing the promiſes!—Come, ſee ſtraying prodigals returning to their Father's houſe, and ſee the Father embracing them, and the whole family rejoicing at their return: See their filthy rags taken off, and the white robe of the Son of God put on them, and the fatted calf killed for them.——Come, ſee the King of glory entering in at the everlaſting gates of mens ſouls, dethroning ſin and ſelf, taking poſſeſſion of their hearts, and ſetting up his throne and kingdom in them.—Come, ſee King Solomon both crown'd and married in one day!

An aſtoniſhing match concluded between the Prince of life and the heir of hell! All the daughters of Zion are called forth to behold this ſight, Cant. iv. 11 —All theſe are great and wondrous works of God to be ſeen in the word and ſacrament, which all communicants ought to ſtand ſtill and conſider.

Conſider theſe marvellous works ſo as to be ſuitably affected with them, make them the ſubject of your meditation; entertain high and admiring thoughts of God, and of his infinite love and wiſdom manifeſted in them. Give firm credit to the record and teſtimony God hath given us of theſe wondrous works, and glorify the great Author of them with your hearts, tongues and lives. Embrace the goſpel-offer, and be afraid of offending that God who has humbled himſelf ſo low for our ſakes, and has wrought ſuch great and wondrous works for us. Be careful to ſerve him and pleaſe him in all things, and abhor ſin his grand enemy.

ADVICE XV.

From Rev. xxii. 2. In the midſt of the ſtreet was the tree of life.——

IT was a ſad day to mankind, when God baniſhed Adam from the earthly paradiſe, and from the tree of life that grew therein, and alſo ſhut the entry to it! But behold God, in his free mercy, is now opening an entry and inviting Adam's baniſhed poſterity back again to a better paradiſe, where there are purer delights, and neither ſin nor ſatan can enter; and where there is a Tree of life, Jeſus Chriſt, infinitely preferable to that in Adam's paradiſe. This Tree of life far excels that in its leaves, ſhadow, fruit, and virtues; it animates, yea, reſtores, and preſerves life for ever, neither is there any flaming ſword to hinder our acceſs to it. Adam's tree endured but a ſhort time; but ours laſts for ever: Other trees fade and wither; but Jeſus Chriſt is the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever. O come then, ſit down under the ſhadow of this Tree, eat of its fruit and live for ever. Though the Tree be now planted in the heavenly paradiſe, yet its branches, ſhadow and fruit extend to every believer on earth, as well as to the ſaints above. Thouſands of communicants at the lower table have ſat down under his ſhadow with great delight, and found his fruit ſweet to their taſte. Chriſt is a Tree that bears fruit at all times, every month and even in the ſharpeſt winter months of ſickneſs and death.

There are ſome very uſeful trees in the world, that afford all neceſſaries to men, ſuch as meat, drink, phyſic and clothing. Behold, God hath provided ſuch a tree for us. Jeſus Chriſt affords us all theſe. 1. Meat: He tells us, That his fleſh is meat indeed; that is, his fleſh, wounded and dying, yields ſtrengthening food for the ſoul, in reſpect of its fruits and effects. It is food well prepared; the Holy Trinity ſpent a whole eternity in preparing it. It is meat well ſeaſoned; it is ſeaſoned with the love of God, ſauced with the blood of Chriſt, and ſpiced with the graces of the Spirit.——2. Drink: Chriſt's blood is alſo drink indeed to the ſoul, in reſpect of its comfortable effects; ſuch as, pardon, peace, light, life, ſtrength, &c. Theſe ſtreams from the Rock are moſt refreſhing, cordial and ſavoury drink; ſavoury to God, ſavoury to angels, and moſt ſavoury to every ſoul that hath taſted it. It is a ſweet cup that is to be put into your hand, if you have faith; but it is poiſonous to an unworthy communicant that wants faith: But, if you be worthy, the drink will poiſon ſin, quicken grace, and refreſh the ſoul. Fear not, O believer, to take a good draught, faith will make the cup medicinal and reſtorative to thy ſoul, and it will only kill and deſtroy thy luſts.——3. Phyſic: The leaves of this Tree are for the healing of the nations: Chriſt hath many healing promiſes, which, when applied by faith, are moſt uſeful to purge out ſin and corruption, and to heal all the ſoul's wounds and diſeaſes.——4. This Tree affords clothing alſo. Poor fallen Adam, when naked, went to the fig tree for its leaves to cover him; but, O let his poſterity go to the Tree of life, where they ſhall get infinitely better clothing, even Chriſt's perfect righteouſneſs, which is ſpotleſs and law-biding, Behold a rich robe, ſet with the pearls and diamonds of heaven.—A large robe, ſo broad as to cover a whole elect world. It alſo covers all the ſpots and infirmities of believers; ſo that not one of them is to be ſeen. This robe is as broad as the law, which we are told is exceeding broad. And it is juſt as beautiful as broad; for it makes every elect ſoul amiable and acceptable to God —Never then was there ſuch a Tree, either in the earthly or heavenly paradiſe, as our glorious Tree of life, Jeſus Chriſt. O hungry ſouls, here is meat! O thirſty ſouls, here is drink! O diſeaſed ſouls, here is medicine! O naked ſouls, here is clothing! O come then to this Tree of life, and you have all things neceſſary for you.

O communicants, you are called to take a view of this bleſſed Tree, as it was hewen, mangled, and cut down by the ax of juſtice, when he died upon the croſs for you. Even in this his mangled condition, he is a moſt beautiful and engaging ſight to the eye of faith! O believer, behold your princely Jeſus lifted up on a bloody croſs, on the top of mount Calvary, for all nations to ſee him, and gather to him for food and healing. Since that mount was firſt created, it never produced ſuch a Tree, or ſuch precious fruit, as the Lord of glory hanging on the tree of the croſs, that was planted there ſome hours: Chriſt's hanging on it changed its nature from a curſed to a bleſſed tree, a Tree of life and ſalvation. This Tree of life made mount Calvary a ſweet and lovely paradiſe that day (notwithſtanding of all the malefactors bones that lay ſcattered upon it) and the fruit growing on it that day hath enriched both heaven and earth, and will fill heaven with eternal ſongs of praiſe.

You are likewiſe called, at this time, to draw near a crucified Chriſt, the Tree of life, that is always loaden with fruit: Come as near as poſſible you can win, ſhake the Tree by faith, and gather as much fruit as you can; eat, and lay up for after times; yea, gather, and lay up for eternity.—The fruits of this tree are durable and laſting, plentiful and enriching, ſweet and ſatisfying, manifold and various, Rev. xxii. twelve manner of fruits every month, which is an hundred and forty four crops in the year. Likewiſe they are moſt ſuitable to the wants and neceſſities of your ſouls. What can be more ſuitable to the guilty than pardon? to the dead than life? to the hungry than bread? to the thirſty than drink? to the wounded than balm? to the blind than eye-ſalve? to the naked than clothing? to the impotent than ſtrength? to the weary than reſt?

to the captive than liberty? to the diſturbed than peace? to the bewildered than light? to the warrior than victory? All theſe, and innumerable more, are the ſweet and ſuitable fruits of the Tree of life.

O then, give all diligence to ſecure and clear up your intereſt in this bleſſed Tree of life and its fruits, which are now offered to you freely without money or price. Abandon and reject the ſour and unſavoury fruits of ſin, the world, and your own righteouſneſs; and embrace the Tree of life in the arms of faith, and all its fruits are yours. Come ſit down under his ſhadow, at his table, and believingly receive and feed on theſe delicious fruits. O how delightful and refreſhing is the ſhadow and ſhelter of Chriſt's righteouſneſs to the ſoul that hath been ſcorched with a ſenſe of divine diſpleaſure for ſin? This ſhadow ſkreens and protects him from the heat of God's wrath, from the curſes of a fiery law, and from the ſlaviſh fears of death, and wrath-like diſpenſations.——Then let every weary and ſcorched ſoul come at Chriſt's call, and ſit down under his ſhadow: Give firm credit to the goſpel report concerning Chriſt's ſuretyſhip, his ſufficient righteouſneſs, and free offers: Acquieſce heartily in this bleſſed contrivance of ſhelter and ſafety, and put all your truſt and confidence in his righteouſneſs alone; and abide contentedly under its ſhadow without wandering from it, or going from tree to tree, as many do, ſeeking reſt or ſhelter. Surely all who leave Chriſt, and wander after the ſhadow of creature comforts, or their own doings, for relief, will diſquiet themſelves in vain; for there is no reſt or ſhelter anywhere, but under the ſhadow of the Tree of life. Here only you will find protection and proviſion: This made the ſpouſe ſay, Cant. ii. 3. I ſat down under his ſhadow with great delight, and his fruit was ſweet to my taſte.

Let all theſe, who have experienced the ſafety and ſweetneſs of Chriſt's ſhadow and fruit, bleſs God that gave them counſel, and drew them to this happineſs. See that you abide cloſe under this ſhadow and make it your continual reſort. Chriſt ſpeaks to you, as David to Abiathar, when he fled to him from Saul's cruelty. Abide thou with me, fear not, for he that ſeeketh my life, ſeeketh thy life, but with me thou ſhalt be in ſafeguard.——Likewiſe pity and pray for them who ſlight the Tree of life, and are going through all the trees of the wood for reſt and ſatisfaction, but cannot find it. O commend this bleſſed Tree to them, and invite them to come and ſit down under the ſhadow of it, where they will find all things. Say to them as Philip to Nathaniel, Come and ſee.—Be alſo looking out, and longing for the full enjoyment of the Tree of life in the paradiſe above, where you ſhall eternally ſing among the branches of it, meet with all your friends, and eat the fruits with a far better appetite and reliſh than ever any did here below.

ADVICE XVI.

From Iſa. xxxii. 2. A man ſhall be a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempeſt.

WHatever ſtorms or tempeſts believers are expoſed to here, Chriſt is an excellent ſhelter and hiding-place from them. Before Adam's fall, that ſin entered into the world, all was calm and ſerene; but ſince that, the world is become a weary wilderneſs, full of tempeſts; and aſſoon as one is laid, another is ready to blow. There are ſtorms of outward afflictions, ſickneſs, loſſes, and diſappointments, and many wrath-like diſpenſations of providence; there are ſtorms of temptations from ſatan, challenges from conſcience, thunderings from mount Sinai, deſertions from God, reproaches and perſecutions from the world: And yet all theſe ſtorms here, are but like drops before the ſhower, if compared with the terrible ſtorm of wrath to come, which is abiding the ungodly and unbelieving. But glory to infinite wiſdom and free love, for finding out a proper Hiding-place for loſt ſinners amidſt theſe ſtorms, to which we are called to turn, Zech. ix. 12. Turn ye to the ſtrong-hold, ye priſoners of hope. The Man Chriſt is an excellent Strong hold and Hiding place againſt all ſtorms whatſoever; in him there is ſufficient room and accomodation for us, his wounds are wide, his mercy large, his merits infinite, his offers free, his calls moſt gracious and extenſive, Iſa. xlv. 22. Look to me, and be ye ſaved, all the ends of the earth. The acceſs is declared free, and the way patent, to all who turn to the Strong-hold for ſhelter, and never was any excluded that turned to it.

A crucified Jeſus, O communicants, repreſented to you in the ſacrament, is the Strong-hold and Hiding-place, to which your are called to turn by faith for ſhelter and ſafety, from the ſword of juſtice. In him there are excellent clefts for ſhelter, Cant. ii. 14. and which you ought to be well acquainted with. There are the clefts of his wounds and merits, which all Chriſt's doves flee to when ſtorms ariſe. There is alſo the cleft of his power, the cleft of his wiſdom, the cleft of his love, and the cleft of his faithfulneſs; many a ſtorm have they eſcaped in theſe clefts.——In this Hiding place there are alſo chambers of ſafety, to which you may retire when the tempeſts blow, Iſa. xxvi. 20. There are the chambers of Chriſt's offices and ſweet relations, which he hath aſſumed for the ſafety and comfort of believers; in each of theſe many of them have found ſhelter when ſtorms have blown. There is alſo the pleaſant chamber of his covenant, with the cloſets of its promiſes which afford ſweet retiring places in tempeſtuous times. O ſtudy to be acquainted with them. David was well acquainted with the well-ordered covenant and its promiſes, and had his recourſe thereto in troublous times, and particularly when he was threatened with the ſtorm of death, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Although my houſe be not ſo with God, yet he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, ordered in all things and ſure; this is all my ſalvation. And he pleads the promiſes of this covenant for his ſafety, Pſal. cxix. 49. Remember the word to thy ſervant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope. Come then by the exerciſe of faith, and ſhut yourſelves up in theſe ſweet chambers at the Lord's table, and take complacency in viewing and walking through them.

Chriſt crucified is a Covert and Hiding-place to belivers, and to every thing that belongs to them: He is even a Covert to their bodies in time of danger, ſo was he to his diſciples when the ſtorm was breaking upon himſelf John xviii. 8. If ye ſeek me, let theſe go their way. But more eſpecially he is a Covert to their ſouls, theſe he accounts precious as his jewels; he hides them in his wounds, and keeps them by his power, through faith unto ſalvation. He is alſo a Covert to their graces, and keeps them in life when ready to die, and ſaves them from being overwhelmed in the day of tempeſt. What had become of David and of Peter's grace, under violent ſtorms of temptation, if he had not been a Covert to them. Many a time hath he preſerved the ſmoking flax and the bruiſed reed, under the moſt dangerous ſtorms ——Likewiſe Chriſt is a Covert to their evidences and marks of grace; he preſerves them, and keeps them legible, after many blots which ſin and ſatan do caſt upon them: He hath the bleſſed art of recovering and clearing up their evidences, when they are frequently given up for loſt in times of backſliding.

Let all conſider how miſerable they are who have no intereſt in this Hiding-place; you, that are out of Chriſt, have no covert from the tempeſt, you can neither have ſafety nor comfort in times of trouble. Nay, when any ſtorm blows from without againſt you, a guilty conſcience will be ready to raiſe the ſtorm within; and alſo ſhew you a more terrible ſtorm gathering againſt you, even the wrath that is to come; wrath ſtill coming, but never all come; a ſtorm that will ſtill be blowing, but never will blow over.——O what will become of you, if death come upon you in this ſhelterleſs ſtate, while out of Chriſt the only hiding place! to be ſure then hell will follow the pale horſe. To whom then will ye flee for help or ſhelter? The rocks or hills will not be a hiding-place to you, if Chriſt do not hide you: No creature will ſkreen or pity you, if Chriſt do it not: All the creatures will take part with their Creator againſt you, and inſtead of hiding you, they will be ready to divulge and accuſe you to the purſuer, the juſtice of God.——If you cry to the heavens, O cannot the vaſt expanded heavens afford me a hiding-place from the tempeſt? No, will they ſay, there is no refuge, no entrance here for the ſlighters of Chriſt, we will open only to rain fire and brimſtone, and furious ſtorms upon their heads.——If you look to the air, and ſay, Is there no hiding place through the vaſt regions of the air for me? No, the air is tranſparent, and will diſcover the criminal, and will raiſe a whirlwind of wrath to blow you into hell.——If you cry to the ſea, Is there no hiding place in all the depths of the ſpacious ſea to ſhelter me from the Lamb's wrath? No, the ſea will give up her dead to be judged, and will rage furiouſly againſt you.——If you look to the earth, Is there no cave nor pit in all the earth to hide me from the dreadful ſtorm? No, the earth inſtead of hiding you, will open its mouth and let you go quick down to hell, for ſlighting the wounds of Chriſt, that were opened to ſhelter you.

O let every ſinner then flee now, while it is time, to theſe bleſſed wounds of Jeſus for ſafety; "Be of good comfort, O ſinner, riſe, he calleth thee;" riſe and come, for there is yet room; forſake all falſe ſhelters and lying refuges. Abſolute mercy, a blameleſs walk, convictions, reſolutions, prayers, tears, ordinances, miniſters, will not be a hiding-place to you, if Chriſt be neglected. Nothing can ſatisfy juſtice, nor ſkreen from wrath, but the wounds and blood of the Redeemer; therefore ſee to make theſe only your covert and hiding-place.

It concerns all to try if they have got into this hiding-place, and if they be among Chriſt's hidden ones; ſo believers are called, Pſal. lxxxiii. 3. If you be among theſe hidden ones, you will have a hidden life, and be acquainted with a life of ſecret prayer and correſpondence with heaven, and a life of faith and leaning upon the Son of God;—you will have hidden food, meat the world knows not of, the hid manna of communion with God.—You will have hidden clothing, and be acquaint with putting off your own rags, and putting on the hidden garment of Chriſt's righteouſneſs.—You will have hidden ſtrength, and be acquaint with borrowing ſtrength from Chriſt both for work and warfare.——You will live upon hidden ſupports in dark and calamitous times, and draw comfort from the promiſes, and make theſe the ground of your hope.—If you be in Chriſt as your hiding place, you will be among Chriſt's poor and needy ones, for it is to ſuch he is a refuge, Iſa. xxv. 4. Do you ſee your own emptineſs, ill deſervings, and inſufficiency, and depend upon free mercy for every crumb? Are you ſtill begging at a throne of grace, and inclining to exalt free grace? ſaying, Not unto us, but unto Chriſt be the glory; he is all our ſalvation and all our deſire. Happy are they who can lay claim to theſe marks.

ADVICE XVII.

From 1 Kings xix. 9. The Lord ſaid unto him, What doſt thou here, Elijah?

IT is the concern of every man, to be always in caſe to give account to God of his errand and deſign in every piece of work he is employed in; and ſo ought communicants at the Lord's table; when God or his miniſters aſk them, as the Lord did Elijah, What doſt thou here, communicant? What is your buſineſs and errand at this table?—Can you ſay, I have many errands here; I come upon my Saviour's call, to celebrate the memorial of his dying love, that his name may be remembred to all generations? And worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain to be admired, adored, and praiſed for ever.—I come alſo to ſubſcribe and ſeal a marriage-contract with him in the moſt ſolemn manner, before all the Perſons of the glorious Trinity, before the elect angels, and before all the congregation. Seeing Chriſt doth once more call me to it, after many a broken tryſt, and hath put on his marriage-robes, his dyed garments, to win and engage my heart, I come to join hands with him before God, angels, and men, and take them all witneſſes to the bargain. Surely this is a good errand: O that the long ſpoken of match may now hold.

Can you ſay, I am come to a rich and liberal Saviour, to ſupply my needs out of his fulneſs. I come on a good day, when he uſes to deal bountifully to the poor and needy, and to ſay to them, as the king to Eſther, What is thy petition? and what is thy requeſt?—Well, is thy petition ready? Doſt thou come with the publican's petition, God be merciful to me a ſinner? Or with David's petition, Lord, be merciful to me; heal my ſoul, for I have ſinned againſt thee? Or with that petition, "Purge me with hyſſop, and I ſhall be clean; waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter than the ſnow?" Or with that, "Let my ſoul live, and it ſhall praiſe thee?" Or, do you come with the ſpouſe's petitions and requeſts, "Draw me, and we will run after thee. Awake, O north-wind; and come, thou ſouth; blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out?" Surely theſe petitions are agreeable to your Redeemer; ſee that you inſiſt upon them, and preſs for an anſwer.

Study to have a lively feeling at this time of all your wants. Would you have them all ſupplied at once? Then come and embrace a crucified Jeſus in the arms of faith, and he will fully anſwer them all. Would you have all your five ſenſes ſatisfied at once? Behold Chriſt invites you to come to him to get it done.——Would you have the ſenſe of ſeeing ſatisfied? Then he ſays to you, " Look to me, and be ye ſaved.—— " Behold me, behold me! Behold king Solomon " with the crown on his head!" Would you have the ſenſe of hearing ſatisfied? Then, ſaith he " Incline " thine ear; hearken to me; give ear to my voice."—Would you have the ſenſe of taſting ſatisfied? He ſaith, O taſte and ſee that God is good.——Would you have the ſenſe of touching ſatisfied? He ſaith, Reach hither thy hand, thruſt it into my ſide; feel the wounds made by the ſpear and the nails.——Would you have the ſenſe of ſmelling ſatisfied? Come then to Chriſt, whoſe name is as ointment poured forth; and whoſe garments ſmell of aloes, myrrh, and caſſia.——Come here and get all your ſpiritual ſenſes ſatisfied at Chriſt's full feaſt.

Object. But I am afraid I am not among theſe invited gueſts that Chriſt will make welcome. Anſw. Have you any of the ſcripture-characters of theſe that Chriſt invites? Are you among his friends? Do you wiſh well to his cauſe and intereſt? Then Chriſt ſaith to you, Eat, O friends, Cant. v. 1. Is your heart open to Chriſt's offers, and willing to accept him in all his offices? Then he ſaith to ſuch, he will come and ſup with them, Rev. iii. 20.—Doth your heart love him? Then he ſaith, He will manifeſt himſelf to ſuch, John xiv. 21.—Are you poor and needy? Then he ſaith, The needy ſhall not be forgotten, Pſal. ix. 18.—Do you ſee yourſelf a loſt ſinner? Then he ſaith, He is come to ſeek and call ſuch, Luke xix. 10. Mat. ix. 13.—Do you feel ſin to be a heavy burden? Then he bids the heavy laden come to him, Mat. ix. 28.——Are you ſick, and much diſtreſſed? Then Chriſt chuſes to entertain and converſe with ſuch, Matth. ix. 12.——Do you hunger and thirſt for Chriſt? He ſaith, He fills the hungry with good things, Luke i. 53.—Are you ſenſible of backſlidings? He invites ſuch to come to him, Jer. iii. 14. Are you deſirous to put on the wedding garment of imputed righteouſneſs? Then, to be ſure, you ſhall neither be excluded, nor neglected.—Do you earneſtly ſeek for his holy Spirit? He aſſures you he is more willing to give the Spirit to them that aſk it, than loving parents are to give bread to their hungry children. What is mens compaſſion to their children in compariſon of Chriſt to his? Well then, you may reſt on Chriſt's word; for he is not more free in making promiſes, than faithful in making them good. He is a God that keeps covenant to a thouſand generations. Venture then upon his word, and come to his table with hope and expectation to get all your wants ſupplied.

Let me again aſk you, as God did Elijah, What doſt thou here, communicant! Can you ſay, that you are come to get a heart-affecting ſight of the blood and wounds of the glorious Redeemer, ſo as you may love Chriſt, and hate ſin more than ever! That is a good errand, and what God will ſurely approve. Come then, draw near, as it were, to the foot of the croſs, and take a narrow and cloſe view of his wounds, and of the blood that ſtreams from them. Obſerve how faſt the blood runs down from his hands to the ground, faſter than ever tears ran down from your eyes for ſin, that cauſed the ſhedding of his blood! Chriſt is not ſparing of his blood for you, however ſparing you be of your tears for him.——Draw yet nearer, and lay your ear to his wounds, eſpecially his five big wounds in his hands, feet, and ſide; which, like ſo many mouths, are wide opened to ſpeak to believing communicants. Liſten and hear what they ſay; What is the language of the two wounds in his hands? " Come to me, and caſt your " guilty ſoul into my bleeding out-ſtretched arms," and I'll ſave you from the ſword of juſtice.—Lay your ear to the two wounds in his feet, and hear what they ſay, " Run to me, and caſt yourſelf down at my feet," and I'll protect you from the avenger of blood.——Hearken to the deep wound in his ſide, ſaying, " Flee " to me, O trembling dove, and I'll ſhelter thee in this " cleft of the Rock." Thou haſt now free acceſs to the Ark, behold the window opened in the ſide of it; look in at it, and ſee my heart burning with love: Yea, " thruſt in thy hand to my ſide (unbelieving Thomas) " and feel my bleeding heart, how warm it is to you, " and be no more faithleſs, but believing."

O communicant, can you come to the foot of Chriſt's croſs, and ſee his wounds, and hear ſuch language, and your heart not be affected with love to Chriſt, and hatred to ſin? Can you behold Chriſt thus cruelly uſed, nailed to the tree, bleeding and dying in your room! Can you ſee the heavens turning black, the ſun drawing in its head, the earth quaking, and the rocks rending at the ſufferings of the Son of God, and your heart not quake for ſin, that awakened the ſword of juſtice againſt him as our Surety.——O what cauſe have you to be aſhamed of the hardneſs and unconcernedneſs of your heart at ſuch a ſight, and to cry to God that the heart of ſtone may be changed into an heart of fleſh, and that the fire of Chriſt's love may deſcend, and kindle ſuch a flame in your ſoul, as may melt your frozen affections, and conſume the ſtubble of your luſts and corruptions. Of old the Lord uſed to anſwer his peoples prayers and ſacrifices by fire from heaven: Pray that he may anſwer your's in like manner, by kindling a holy fire in your ſoul, as he did in the hearts of the two diſciples going to Emmaus; even a twofold fire, to wit, a fire of love to Chriſt, and a fire of indignation againſt ſin. O love the Lord Jeſus as your treaſure and portion; let your thoughts be mainly upon him, and your ſouls breathing after him. Be much concerned for his intereſt and cauſe, and for the ſpreading of his kingdom and glory in the world. And be looking out, and longing for the full and perfect enjoyment of him.—Likewiſe keep up a ſtrong averſion to ſin, and to what is oppoſite to Chriſt, and injurious to his intereſt and kingdom; look always upon ſin as the grand enemy and murderer of Chriſt; and therefore do not ſpare it.

ADVICE XVIII.

From John v. 6. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

THIS miraculous healing pool of Betheſda, at which the impotent man had lien thirty-eight years, was a type of the Meſſiah, and the fountain of his blood opened and ſet forth in goſpel-ordinances, for healing all our ſpiritual diſeaſes. And Chriſt's method of healing this man teaches us, that if we would be healed, we muſt be willing to wait at the pool of ordinances, till the Spirit come to ſtir the waters, apply the blood, and effect the cure. And, in the mean time, we muſt be ſenſible of our diſeaſe, and look up to Chriſt, our great Phyſician, with earneſt deſires for healing. This is imported in Chriſt's queſtion, Wilt thou be made whole?

O communicants, you are diſeaſed by ſin, and the plagues of your hearts; theſe have blaſted the primitive beauty of the ſoul, and brought on it a ghaſtly deformity, with much pain and weakneſs. Your diſeaſes are manifold: Atheiſtical thoughts, miſbelief, and ignorance of God's truths, are woful plagues; hardneſs of heart, and earthly-mindedneſs, formality, and heart-wanderings in duty, truſting to your own righteouſneſs, ingratitude, and backſlidings from God; theſe are diſeaſes you ought all to be ſenſible of. God would have every man to know the plague of his own heart, 1 Kings viii. 38. in order to his being made whole. Theſe are the ſick that Chriſt is ready to come to heal, Matth. ix. 12. Chriſt firſt makes men ſick and ſenſible before he makes them whole. Have you then any acquaintance with this healthful, preparatory ſickneſs? Have you been made ſenſible of the dangerous nature of your diſeaſe, and thoughtful and ſollicitous about the iſſue of it? Have you been made to groan and moan under the burden of your diſeaſe, ſaying, "I am troubled and bowed down greatly, I go mourning all the day long?" Have you ſeen there is no healing in yourſelves, or in your convictions, prayers, tears or reformations? and that it is only in Chriſt, who hath an infinite fulneſs of merit and Spirit to ſuit your deſperate malady? Are you willing to ſubmit to the Phyſician's preſcriptions for healing? Be the pill or potion never ſo bitter, you will ſwallow it: Is it your cry, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" Theſe are tokens of a right preparatory ſickneſs. May the holy Spirit work them in you.

The great meritorious means of your healing is the blood of Jeſus Chriſt, which is ſet before you in the ſacrament, for you to look to and apply by faith. As the Iſraelites were made ſenſible of their ſtings before they looked to the brazen ſerpent for healing; ſo muſt ye in order to your prizing of Chriſt, and looking to his blood for healing your ſpiritual plagues. Now the fountain is open, and the healing ſtreams run freely on both ſides of the table: Come then, with a feeling of your diſeaſes, and bathe in them for curing your hard hearts, your blind eyes, your weak hands, your feeble knees, your lame feet, and cold affections.——O impotent man, are you lying at the ſide of the pool while the waters are ſtirring? Have you no ſtrength to move foreward, and is there none to put you in! O then look up to Chriſt, that healed the impotent man after many years waiting; look to him by faith, as he calls you, Iſa. xlv. 22. Look unto me, and be ye ſaved, all all the ends of the earth. As I offer myſelf to every diſeaſed ſoul in particular, as well as to all in general; ſo let every ſoul embrace me as his Saviour, and apply my blood to his particular diſeaſes. Faith is a healing grace, not only its touches, but its very looks are healing; hence Chriſt ſaid to ſeverals who where healed, "Thy faith hath made thee whole." O ſee then if you have got this healing faith.

Queſt. How may I know if my faith be of this kind?

Anſw. A healing faith will make the ſoul heartily approve the goſpel method of ſalvation, embrace God's teſtimony, and cloſe with his goſpel offer in all reſpects. And it hath in it, an appropriating truſt and confidence in the merit and virtue of Chriſt's blood, offered to the ſinner in particular for his pardon and healing; which makes him reſt upon Chriſt as his Saviour, and venture his ſoul and ſalvation upon his merits and promiſe. In this healing faith of a diſeaſed ſinner, there is a particular acceptance of, and confidence in a crucified Chriſt, correſponding to that free goſpel-offer which he makes of himſelf to the diſtreſſed ſoul.——This faith brings him to a fixed reſolution to ly at the Phyſician's door, and depend upon him alone for healing. And it makes him caſt open all the doors and rooms of his ſoul to receive and entertain his Phyſician. Now, O poor impotent ſoul, if there be ſuch a faith as this wrought in thee, then thy faith in Chriſt makes thee whole. The healing balm is applied, the cure begun, and ſhall ſhortly be perfected. Be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee; Jeſus Chriſt maketh thee whole.

It concerns you alſo, to try if the happy fruits and effects of this healing faith appear in you, whereby you may conclude, that the ſtrength of your diſeaſe is broken, by virtue of the blood of Chriſt; and that you have got it applied for curing your heart-atheiſm, hardneſs, unbelief, pride, carnality, and particularly your weakneſs of hands, and feebleneſs of knees: So that, though formerly they were ſo weak and feeble, that you could not lift up the one, nor bow down the other in prayer with any fervency and livelineſs; yet now it is otherwiſe: Then this is a good token the ſtrength of the diſeaſe is broken, Chriſt has taken you into his hoſpital, and has you under cure, by the daily application of his blood and Spirit, and you are on the way of recovery.—Can you ſay further, that your drought is greatly abated, your thirſt after ſin and the world; and that your appetite for ſoul food, communion with Chriſt in ordinances, is happily increaſed? Can you bear the light better than before? Do you love ſearching-ſermons? All theſe are good ſigns.——Have you a high eſteem of your Phyſician, and do you entertain him kindly when he viſits you? Have you recovered more ſtrength and willingneſs to ſerve him in the way of commanded duties? And have you a holy fear and jealouſy of every thing that might bring on a relapſe into your old diſtempers? Then there is good hope, through grace, that your faith is a healing faith, the work of healing is begun, and ſo far carried on. Chriſt is our Rock, and his work is perfect.

O then ſtudy to be thankful to your great Phyſician, ſaying, "What ſhall I render to the Lord for all his benefits towards me? Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities, healeth all thy diſeaſes, and redeemeth thy ſoul from deſtruction; who reneweth thy youth like the eagles, maketh thee run and not weary, walk and not faint.—Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again to a lively hope, by the reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt from the dead, to an inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in heaven for us." Then the cure ſhall be fully perfected, and we ſhall dwell always beſide our Phyſician, and enjoy perfect and uninterrupted health for ever and ever.——Expreſs your thankfulneſs while you are here, by being witneſſes for Chriſt, ſhining as lights before others, commending Chriſt and his ways to them, hating all ſin, abſtaining from it; reproving ſin in others, and teſtifying againſt it. Be meek and lowly in your carriage; deal uprightly with all men; love all that bear Chriſt's image; be zealous for family religion, for ſanctifying the ſabbath, and attending God's ordinances. Pray earneſtly for the coming of Chriſt's kingdom upon the earth, and do all you can to promote it.

Watch and pray againſt backſlidings and relapſes into old diſtempers, and for that end be humble and ſelf diffident, be denied to your own ſtrength and conduct, and be always jealous of your corrupt and deceitful hearts. Live by faith upon the Son of God, looking to him both for righteouſneſs and ſtrength. And becauſe you are invironed with enemies, put on the whole armour of God, that you may be able to ſtand againſt the wiles of the devil. It is not the armour of your own reſolutions, it is the armour of God, even the graces of his Spirit. It is not ſome graces or parts of that armour, it is the whole armour, all the Chriſtian graces. It is not enough to have the armour in the houſe, or grace in the habit; no, it muſt be put on, daily worn, and exerciſed. God hath provided different pieces of armour for you, the ſword of the Spirit, the ſhield of faith, the helmet of hope, the breaſtplate of righteouſneſs; but there is nothing for the back, for God diſowns runaways, Heb. x. 38. If any man draw back, &c.

ADVICE XIX.

From Exod. xii. 14. And this day ſhall be unto you for a memorial.

AS the paſſover-feaſt was a memorial both of the deliverance from Egypt, and the redemption by Chriſt; ſo a communion-ſabbath is a memorial of ſundry remarkable things, and ought to be held as a moſt memorable day by every believer; as it brings to our remembrance the greateſt events and bleſſings.

1. A communion-ſabbath is a lively memorial of Chriſt's death, for the ſacrament adminiſtered that day by breaking of bread and pouring out of wine, is a viſible repreſentation of Chriſt's death, by the breaking of Chriſt's body, and pouring forth his blood on the croſs; an event which God will have remembered to the end of the world, and through all eternity. Why? becauſe by it God's perfections are highly glorified, and the elect world redeemed from hell. Chriſt did inſtitute the ordinance to be a ſtanding monument of his death while the world ſtands, 1 Cor. xi. 26. As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do ſhew the Lord's death till he come. And a monument of the wonderful love of God in giving his Son, and of the Son in giving himſelf to be a ſacrifice for our ſins, who were utterly unworthy of his love. By this memorial God would teach us the ineſtimable value of Chriſt's death, as the greateſt obligation that ever he put upon the world; and that we ought to declare our gratitude to God for the favour in the moſt open and public manner; and rely upon Chriſt's death and ſacrifice as the foundation of all our hopes of pardon and ſalvation.——The death of Jeſus Chriſt is the moſt worthy ſubject of the diſcourſe and praiſe both of the redeemed on earth, and the glorified in heaven, according to Rev. i. 5.——v. 9, 12. Hence it was, that Moſes and Elias when they came from heaven to mount Tabor to wait upon their Lord when transfigured, they made choice of Chriſt's death for the ſubject of their converſation, Luke ix. 31. and good reaſon, for Chriſt's death was the ſpring and cauſe of all their glory in heaven; neither Moſes nor Elias had ſhined there, if it had not been for Chriſt's death.

2. A communion-ſabbath is a ſpecial memorial to us of Chriſt's reſurrection from the grave, which was on the firſt day of the week, and hence called the Lord's day, it being the moſt honourable day to our Lord Redeemer and the moſt joyful day to all the redeemed; as it gave a clear proof of the perfection of Chriſt's ſacrifice he offered to divine juſtice, and that our Surety's ſatisfaction was accepted for our complete juſtification and abſolution. Hereby it appeared that the elect's debt was diſcharged, their redemption finiſhed, and their Cautioner liberate from priſon. This day Chriſt was declared to be the Son of God with power. As his death did ſhew him to be truly man, ſo his reſurrection did manifeſt him to be truly God and the great Redeemer of the world.—This was the day of Chriſt's victory and triumph, in which he ſolemnly appeared to be the Captain of our ſalvation, and obtained a glorious victory over all his and the churches enemies. This day he triumphed over the grave, death and hell, and over ſin, ſatan and wicked men. Now death was unſtinged, the grave loſt its purchaſe, the ſerpent's head was bruiſed, the powers of hell vanquiſhed, and they were all ſwallowed up in victory.——Likewiſe Chriſt by his reſurrection, as the Head of the church, gave to all the members of his body a ſure pledge and earneſt of their reſurrection from the grave at the laſt day, to immortality and eternal life. And on this day he reſted from all his works of ſuffering and redemption, and rejoiced in the review of them with infinite delight and complacency. Now a communion-ſabbath is a bright memorial of this glorious day, which is to be had in everlaſting remembrance. O believer, remember it with thankfulneſs and joy.

3. This day is a memorial of your ſpiritual reſurrection and new birth, as it declares your reception into God's family, and ſeals your title to the privileges of his children, that you are born heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt of the heavenly inheritance. And though the Lord's ſupper be not a converting ordinance in its own nature; yet the preaching of a crucified Chriſt this day, has been the means of converting many thouſands, and, in many others, of beginning the pangs and forerunners of the new birth, to wit, ſaving convictions of ſin, and enquiries after Chriſt, and ſalvation through him, which have ended in their converſion. O pray that it may be ſuch a day to you and many others.

4. This day is a memorial of your marriage day; becauſe on it you enter into or renew your marriage-covenant with Chriſt the Bridegroom of the church. Miniſters, by the goſpel-offers, court your ſouls to Chriſt, ſaying as theſe did to Rebekah, Gen. xxiv. 58. Will you go with the Man Chriſt? On the communion-day, you ſolemnly give your anſwer, as ſhe did, We will go; and at the Lord's table you ſeal your engagement to him. Likewiſe this day is a memorial of the conſummation of your marriage with Chriſt at the great day, when he will come to receive home his eſpouſed bride, and conduct her to the King's palace with joy and triumph. O prepare and long for that day.

5. The communion-ſabbath is a memorial of your crucifying ſin which was the cauſe of your Redeemer's death. At this ordinance you draw virtue, from the death of Chriſt, to kill ſin and mortify ſtrong luſts. Many wreſtling believers have been enabled, at this occaſion, to give a death's wound to theſe luſts and idols they had been long ſtruggling againſt before. Reſolve then, in Chriſt's ſtrength, that ſin ſhall not out-live this day; it is moſt juſt to revenge the death of Chriſt upon it.

6. A communion-ſabbath is a memorial of Chriſt's conqueſt and coronation: For on this day Chriſt frequently receives the fruit and reward of the travail of his ſoul and his bitter agonies, by overcoming hearts, depoſing ſatan from his throne, and delivering ſouls from his thraldom, and tranſlating them into his own kingdom. And, at this occaſion, all worthy communicants do, as it were, put a crown of glory and honour upon Chriſt's head, by renouncing ſin, ſatan, and all that had exerciſed dominion over them before, and giving their full and hearty conſent that Chriſt alone ſhall reign over them for ever. Chriſt is ſo delighted with this, that he eſteems it as his coronation-day, Cant. iii. 11. O come then and yield your hearts to Chriſt, and pray that the communion-day may be a day of his coronation and conqueſt, when ſinners ſhall give their free and willing conſent to the dethroning of ſatan, and enthroning of King Jeſus; come under Chriſt's ſceptre and government, and abandon all his enemies; for he hath beſt right to the throne, and the juſteſt title to reign over you.

7. A communion-ſabbath is a lively memorial and emblem of the everlaſting ſabbath above, and the heavenly feaſt there that ſhall never end, which Chriſt hath purchaſed and promiſed to his people. Why? becauſe on a communion-ſabbath here, there is an aſſembling of God's people to give thanks for redeeming love, and to feed upon Chriſt and his purchaſe, with ſatisfaction and ſongs of praiſe. In like manner, in the heavenly ſabbath, there will be a great gathering of all the ſaints through all the world, to admire and praiſe God for redeeming goodneſs, and to ſit down and feaſt with Chriſt for ever, upon the benefits of his purchaſe. O how great is the plenty, variety, the fulneſs of proviſion and ſatisfaction which is at the upper-table! there they feed upon eternal redemption from hell and wrath, perfect freedom from ſin and ſatan, and from all afflictions and complaints: They feed upon the glorious preſence of God in human nature, the conſtant ſhinings of his face, and intimations of his love; the bright diſcoveries of the works of God in creation and providence, and eſpecially in the redemption of men by Chriſt. And, in this feſtival, they have perfect ſatisfaction, joined with eternal ſongs of praiſe. But, O how far will the communion-ſabbath above excel theſe we have here below! Here we are oft put to mix our praiſes with mourning and tears, becauſe of ſin prevailing, or the Spirit withdrawing. Here Judaſes, and unworthy gueſts thruſt in among the diſciples; but at the higher-table there is no ſuch mixture, all is pure and holy, and there is nought to allay their joy.——Here our communion-ſabbaths are ſoon over, and have nights, week-days, and trials to ſucceed them; but the communion-ſabbath above, the feaſt, muſic, and aſſembly are everlaſting, without interruption or uneaſineſs of any ſort.—O then improve theſe ſhort ſabbaths, as memorials and means to prepare you for this everlaſting ſabbath; and in all ordinances here, keep your eye upon the heavenly feſtival.

ADVICE XX.

From Jer. iii. 19. How ſhall I put thee among the children? Thou ſhalt call me my Father.——

THOUGH there be great mountains of difficulties in the way of ſinners ſalvation, yet God, in his free mercy, hath found out an expedient to get over them; even by making choice of God as our God and Father in Chriſt.—That you may admire his grace the more, take a view of the difficulties that ly in the way. God might ſay, How ſhall I put thee among the children of my family, who are the offspring of apoſtate and rebellious parents, who ungratefully departed from God without any provocation, ſold themſelves to the devil to do his drudgery, and rebelled againſt a moſt gracious God, and loving Father? And how ſhall I put you, that have ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adam, among my children? How ſhall I be reconciled to ſuch treacherous dealers?—Again he might ſay, How ſhall I put you among my children, who are condemned rebels in the hands of my infinite juſtice, and whom I am engaged by my truth to deſtroy, having ſaid, The ſoul that ſinneth ſhall die. Here is a burning mountain of juſtice in the way of your ſalvation; how ſhall mercy get over it to help you?——How ſhall I put you among my children, whoſe hearts are full of enmity againſt me, and have all your days been plotting with the devil, and aſſiſting him to fight againſt me, and pull the crown off my head?——How ſhall I put you among my children, who are ſo deformed, polluted and lothſome creatures, as black as hell can make you, who have all your days been wallowing in the mire, and drenched in the puddle of ſin?—How ſhall I put you among my children, who have been all your days ſatan's vaſſals, drudging at his work, grinding in his priſon, and ſerving divers luſts and pleaſures?—How ſhall I put you among my children, who are impotent and lame, cannot run my errands, nor move one ſtep in my ſervice, nor do any thing to pleaſe or glorify me?——How ſhall I put you among my children, who hate my children, and my image in them, and have preferred the devil's children to mine?—How ſhall I put you among my children, that hate my childrens bread, and chuſe rather to feed on huſks with the ſwine?—How ſhall I put you among my children, that never liked my childrens work, never loved prayer, praiſe, nor any ſpiritual employment?—How ſhall I put you among my children, who are ſinners in Zion, have ſitten many years under goſpel-offers and calls to come to Chriſt, and have ſlighted them all, and bolted the door againſt my dear Son, and quenched the motions of my Spirit?—How ſhall I put you among my children, who have been ſo impenitent and hard-hearted all your days, as never to drop one tear for any of all the black and heinous ſins you have committed aaginſt me?—How ſhall I put you among my children, who have never kept one word to me, but have broke all your baptiſmal engagements, and gone over to the devil's camp, and harboured my enemies? O how is it that God can come over theſe mountains, to put ſuch as you among the children, and allow you to ſit down at the childrens table and eat of their bread? How is this conſiſtent with the honour and holineſs of God?

Bleſſed be God who hath found out a way for his mercy to come over all theſe mountains, by providing a Mediator and Surety to ſatisfy juſtice for our ſins, and proclaiming a new covenant, that whoſoever accepts of the Mediator, and makes choice of God as his God and Father in him, ſhall be taken into God's family, and be numbered among his children, notwithſtanding of all you have done to provoke him to caſt you off. Thou ſhalt call me my Father. Wonderful condeſcenſion, that he ſhould allow ſuch prodigals and runaways at all to ſpeak to him, and far more that he ſhould put words in their mouths, and ſuch kindly words, as my Father! Amazing goodneſs!

If you would make this addreſs aright, and take hold of his covenant, ſo as you may be taken in among the children of God, and allowed to come to his table and eat of their bread; you muſt be truly grieved for your long rebelling againſt your heavenly Father, and ſlighting his offers of mercy and pardon through Chriſt; you muſt be deeply humbled before him, and fall in with the goſpel-method of acceſs to him by a Mediator; you muſt quit all dependence on your own righteouſneſs, and break with all your Father's enemies; you muſt make a free and hearty choice of God, as your God and Father in Chriſt, reſting wholly upon Chriſt's mediation and righteouſneſs for acceptance with God;—you muſt make a ſurrender of yourſelves, and all you have to him, and engage in Chriſt's ſtrength to ſerve him, as obedient children, deſirous to pleaſe your Father in all things.

O come then, enter into covenant with God, and make choice of him as your Father in Chriſt; this is the only expedient for removing the difficulties in the way of your ſalvation, and for taking you into God's family, and numbering you among his children; unleſs you fall in with it, you can have no right to the childrens bread, you'll be unworthy communicants, and eat and drink judgment to yourſelves. O then prevent it, by entering into covenant with God, that you may be taken in among the children.—O young perſons, let me put the matter home to you, as Joſhua did to the Iſraelites, Chuſe you this day whom you will ſerve? Chuſe you whom you will take for your Father, whether God or the devil! Both are courting your hearts; which of them will you yield to? Is there any ſo fooliſh as to halt betwixt two opinions in this caſe? Is there any ſo mad as to ſtand in doubt whether to dwell with Chriſt or the devil for ever?—Now Michael and his angels, and the dragon and his angels, are ſtruggling for your hearts; a cunning devil is holding, and a dying Saviour is drawing; now caſt the balance, and ſhew which of them you incline to: The eyes of the holy Trinity are on you, the eyes of angels and men are on you, to ſee what the iſſue will be. O then be wiſe and come preſently, and make a ſurrender of your hearts to God in Chriſt. There is no muſick ſo melodious in God's ears, as the voice of young perſons weeping and covenanting with God. The ſeaſons of youth is the male in your flock, it belongs to God, let him have it, they are curſed who deny it to him, and reſerve the blind and lame to God, ſuch as the dregs of old age, or ſickneſs, Mal. i. 7.

O communicants, ſee always to bring Chriſt alongſt with you in your covenanting with God; never think of covenanting with him but by ſacrifice; bring the ſacrifice of Chriſt's death to atone for the breach of the firſt covenant, and bring his Suretyſhip to anſwer for your faithfulneſs in the ſecond, otherwiſe you can never call God your Father, nor be taken in among his children.——Remember you are all engaged in this covenant by your parents undertaking for you in baptiſm; but aſſoon as you are capable, God will have you to renew it perſonally and explicitely, and to come ſenſible of your breaking this covenant, in running away from Chriſt's colours, and in going over to the devil's camp; and deeply ſenſible of your folly in delaying and ſtanding out ſo long againſt Chriſt's gracious calls and free offers. O come, as penitent prodigals and mourning backſliders, with your faces Zion-ward, weeping as ye go, willing to enter into God's covenant, and give yourſelves away unto the Lord, who is your rightful owner. Since Chriſt comes to you at this occaſion, as in ſtreams of blood, it is ſurely proper that you meet him with ſtreams of tears for ſin, that cauſed his blood to be poured forth as water; and that you come preſently to an open rupture with all his enemies, and particularly with your unbelief, your pride, your paſſion, your hypocriſy, and other ſins that have pierced him. Break with them all, and come to him with the appropriating acts of faith, ſaying, My Father, my Lord, and my God.

ADVICE XXI.

From Luke v. 26. They glorified God, ſaying, We have ſeen ſtrange things to-day.

THeſe, who have been attending ordinances, ought to recollect what they have been ſeeing, doing and hearing, and to be ſuitably affected therewith. Self-examination is needful after communicating, as well as before it. Had you the eyes of faith open to ſee and obſerve the goings of our God and King in his ſanctuary; you may then ſay on the evening of a communion-ſabbath, We have ſeen ſtrange and marvellous things to-day. You have ſeen the bloody tragedy of Chriſt's ſufferings repreſented and reacted; Chriſt with garments dipt in blood fighting a bloody battle for us; in which the glory of the divine attributes are wonderfully diſplayed: Behold the free love and mercy of God, who was highly offended with us, yet contriving our redemption, and giving the Son of his love to die for us, who were his enemies; and for this end creating a new thing in the earth, the incarnation of an infinite Perſon, making a woman, a virgin, to be mother of him that created her! God incarnate is a world's wonder, Jer. xxxi. 22.——A ſtrange thing! The Son of God conſents thus to humble himſelf and die for condemned criminals; rather than he would ſee elect ſinners plunged into the bottomleſs gulf of eternal miſery, in his love and pity he would put himſelf into it to keep them out!—Here infinite wiſdom diſplayed in finding out a way to ſatisfy juſtice in puniſhing ſin ſeverely, and at the ſame time to gratify mercy in pardoning the ſinner freely! A ſtrange device! Juſtice and mercy are reconciled; and kiſs one another in man's redemption by Chriſt's death, the demands of both are anſwered, and the glory of both equally diſcovered.—Here is ſeen the ſeverity of juſtice and fierceneſs of God's wrath againſt ſin, in not ſparing his innocent Son when he became our Surety, nor abating him one farthing of the debt! Nay, he awaked the ſword of juſtice againſt him, and poured out the vials of his wrath upon him, which kindled a fire in his ſoul, made him ſweat and fall to the ground; and there he that made the heavens lay grovelling in the anguiſh of his Spirit, and ſweating clods of blood! O how heavy was the burden of guilt that preſſed his ſoul at this time!

You have ſeen a ſtrange thing, blood ſtreaming forth of marvellous virtue, that can ſoften hearts, though harder than a ſtone; that can heal all the wounds given you by the old ſerpent; that can waſh away the deepeſt ſtains of guilt, and make creatures black as hell, whiter than ſnow! And though many thouſands have been cleanſed by it, yet the ſtream is nowiſe defiled; but ſtill is pure and clear as cryſtal!——You have ſeen the amazing humiliation of the Son of God for vile worms! a ſtrange thing! He was made a worm, a clod of duſt; yea, made ſin for us! ſtrange! that he who thunders in the heavens, ſhould work with a carpenter in his trade! That the great Judge of all the world, ſhould be brought to the bar, accuſed as a malefactor, condemned and crucified betwixt two thieves, that ſuch criminals as you might have a room among the bleſſed! You have ſeen the Lord of Life deprived of life, to purchaſe life for you! ſpotleſs Holineſs made ſin, and eternal Bleſſedneſs made a curſe to redeem you from ſin, and the curſe due to it! A ſtrange thing! for the holy One of God to make ſuch an exchange with you, to take the curſe to give you the bleſſing! to take ſhame, to give you glory! to take death, to give you life! to take your ſins, to give you his righteouſneſs! A ſtrange thing! to ſee the righteouſneſs of one Man, a robe large enough and ſufficient to cover many thouſands, ſo as not one ſpot of guilt can be ſeen in them by the eye of infinite juſtice!—A ſtrange thing! to ſee Chriſt willing to have his ſide opened, to ſatisfy doubting ſouls of the reality of his love, that you might look into his heart, and ſee it panting with love to you, and hear him ſaying, as to Thomas, Be no more faithleſs, but believing! Strange! to ſee him bowing his head on the croſs, to whiſper comfort into your ear, ſaying, Now it is finiſhed; I have drunk the brook in the way, even the whole river of God's wrath, ſo that there is not one drop left for you; every believer's debt is paid!—A ſtrange thing! to behold the Father pleaſed to ſee the bruiſes, agonies, and ſufferings of his dear Son, that his enemies might be eternally freed from them!

A ſtrange thing! to ſee death conquering death; the death of Chriſt conquering all his and our enemies! If any had ſeen Chriſt entering the liſts with death and hell, law and juſtice, he might have ſtood amazed, and ſaid, O what will come of this Champion that is engaged with ſuch ſtrong enemies? But ſtay a little, and you ſhall ſee him lead captivity captive, triumphing over them all, and fetch all he came for, out of the hand of the devil! When Chriſt was brought to the croſs, one might have thought that devils, wicked men, and death, were triumphing over him, but the word ſaith, that on the croſs he ſpoiled principalities and powers; and made a ſhew of them openly, triumphing over them in it. A ſtrange myſtery! while enemies were ſcoffing and inſulting him, Chriſt is triumphing over them! A glorious conqueſt Chriſt's was, for he not only ſubdued his enemies, but conquered them ſo far as to make them uſeful and ſerviceable to him and his people! Let us admire the conqueſt and the Conqueror, though he was deſpiſed by men; yet, like David, he gloriouſly ſubdued Goliath, that defied the armies of the God of Iſrael: He cruſhed the head of the old ſerpent that had bruiſed his heel, and enſlaved his elect; and he put all his other enemies to flight!

A ſtrange ſight! you have ſeen to-day God coming over the greateſt mountains of difficulties, to pardon and ſave ſinners! taking rebels to be his children and favourites; and exalting them above angels that never ſinned? You have ſeen the King of glory courting poor ſlaves, black Ethiopians, and inviting them with outſtretched arms to come and match with him, and ſealing the marriage-covenant with his blood! You have ſeen him make a rich feaſt to them, and welcome them to feed on a crucified Chriſt, and all his purchaſe! Behold the heavenly Pelican, that feeds his young ones with his blood! How amazing is the ſight, that God ſhould not only feaſt, but ſeal a marriage covenant with you, whoſe deſcent is baſe, whoſe perſon is ugly, whoſe portion is nothing but diſeaſes and miſery? O what ſtrong ſights have you ſeen to-day! you have ſeen the love of Chriſt, the worth of ſouls, the price of pardon, an emblem of the higher table, to which many of your friends and acquaintances are gone, where the feaſt will never end!

You have ſeen, to-day, a ſtrange act of mercy to guilty and ill-deſerving creatures, who have ate and drunk before the Lord, and yet on them he hath not laid his hand; he hath made no breach upon any, as on Uzzah, Nadab, Abihu, or the men of Bethſhemeſh! He hath not ſtruck any dead with the bread in their mouths, or cup in their hands; nor ſent any from the table to hell, though you muſt acknowledge you deſerved rather to have had a cup of wrath put in your hand, than a cup of bleſſing!—A ſtrange ſight! that goſpel-offers are yet continued to theſe who have abuſed many ſacraments and ſermons! that Chriſt ſhould be ſtretching out the ſceptre of grace, and offering pardon and mercy to theſe who have crucified him afreſh, and trampled his blood under foot.

Have you ſeen evidences of gracious changes wrought on hearts and wills by the word, ſecure ſouls awakened, blind eyes opened, proud creatures humbled, careleſs ſinners made to cry, Away with the world, and give me Chriſt: None but Chriſt; I count all things but loſs and dung in compariſon of Chriſt and his righteouſneſs. Theſe are ſtrange ſights, with which you ſhould be much affected, ſo as to hate ſin, love Chriſt, bleſs God, and glorify him with your hearts, tongues and lives. It is the end of all God's works that we ſhould glorify him.——Oh! the beſt have reaſon to lament that they are ſo little affected with the marvellous things ſet before them in the word and ſacrament! Surely when you compare the rock whence you are hewn, and that on which God ſets you! and when you conſider the low ſtoop Chriſt has made to purchaſe ſuch clods of earth and ſins with his blood, you have cauſe to be amazed at his love, and confounded at your own ingratitude, in being ſo little affected with his marvellous loving kindneſs, or melted for ſin that was the cauſe of all his ſufferings! O let the ſtrange and wonderful tokens of Chriſt's love you have been ſeeing and ſharing of in the ſacrament, engage you to more thankfulneſs in heart and life. Have you been waſhing your robes white in the blood of the Lamb? be careful to keep them clean, and do not defile them again in the mire of ſin; remember your vows, and keep your face ſtill towards your Father's houſe, which is a pure and undefiled dwelling; you cannot take filthy hands or feet thither, for no unclean thing enters there, Pſal. xciii. 5. "Holi-" neſs becometh thine houſe, O Lord, for ever."

ADVICE XXII.

From Luke vi. 21. Bleſſed are ye that hunger now, for ye ſhall be filled.

IN ſcripture, hunger and thirſt when applied to ſpiritual things, imports the ſame thing, to wit, a ſtrong deſire after ſpiritual and heavenly good things; which deſire implies ſpiritual life, a feeling ſenſe of want, and a longing for food to the ſoul together with the uſe of all proper means to obtain it. Now the main object of this hunger or thirſt is Jeſus Chriſt, or God in Chriſt, Pſal. xlii. 1, 2.—lxiii. 1.—Now there are many things in Chriſt which the hungry ſoul doth deſire; as 1. Chriſt's blood, as the ſoul's ranſom and cleanſing fountain.—2. Chriſt's Spirit, as the ſoul's quickener, comforter and guide.—3. Chriſt's righteouſneſs, as the ſoul's clothing and protection.—4. Chriſt's word as the ſoul's daily food and cordials.—5. Chriſt's ſupper, as the ſoul's feaſt and pledge of heaven.—6. Chriſt's graces, as the ſoul's riches and ornaments.—7. Chriſt's way, or holineſs in heart and life, as the ſoul's path to heaven.—8. Chriſt's day, as the ſoul's weekly market-day for getting in proviſions neceſſary for working, journeying, fighting, &c.—9. Chriſt's manſions above, as the ſoul's dwelling-place for eternal communion with God and his ſaints.—Now if ye would be truly bleſſed, ye muſt hunger and thirſt for theſe things, firmly believing that in theſe your true happineſs doth ly, and not in the world or ſenſual things.

Again, ſee that your hunger be of the right kind, that it be inſatiable, ſo that nothing can put it off or ſatisfy it but Chriſt; the truly hungry ſoul will not be pleaſed with the beſt duties, ordinances, miniſters, ſermons, ſacraments, or any thing without Chriſt.—The hungry ſoul will adventure on the greateſt difficulties for Chriſt, he will part with any thing for him: All the treaſures, honours, muſic, or comforts of life cannot ſatisfy him, none but Chriſt the ſoul's food. True hunger will put him upon the uſe of all means, and make him content to take Chriſt upon any terms, and put a blank in his hand, and ſay, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do! I'll ſubſcribe to any thing, only give me Chriſt, give me food to my ſtarving ſoul.

Such hungry ſouls are bleſſed, becauſe he hath promiſed to ſatisfy and fill them. It is God that creates the appetite, and excites the hunger, and therefore he will ſatisfy it. The hungry are the moſt earneſt and importunate beggars at the throne of grace; and ſuch he has promiſed to hear, Luke ii. 9. The hungry will wait at God's door for an alms, and he promiſes that theſe who wait for him ſhall not be aſhamed, Iſa. xlix. 23. The proud, the rich, the full and ſelf-righteous will go away, if the door be not preſently opened, but the hungry will aſk, ſeek, knock, and knock again, and wait till God think fit to open, and grant an alms. Theſe God is bound by his word to ſatisfy. He is their Father, and hath the bowels of a Father to pity his children. He hears the ravens and young lions when they cry, and feeds them, and will he not hear his own children, and fill their hungry ſouls? Yes, he hath promiſed it.

Queſt. But what is that fill he promiſes to the hungry? Anſ. He fills them with divine diſcoveries, as with the knowledge of God's greatneſs and majeſty, ſo as to make them ſenſible of their own nothingneſs, and with the knowledge of God's goodneſs and free love to ſinners in Chriſt, ſo as to make them fall into raptures of admiration, and cry who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity? Micah. vii. 18.—He fills them with a diſcovery of the excellency of the goſpel-remedy for periſhing ſouls, ſo as to make them ſay it is a device every way worthy of God, Chriſt's mediatory offices, his covenant, his righteouſneſs, his blood, his purchaſe and fulneſs, do nobly anſwer all our ſouls wants and neceſſities; they deliver us from ſin and miſery, and they bring us grace and glory.——He fills his hungry people with goſpel-promiſes, by letting them ſee their name in them, and giving them faith to take hold of them and apply them. Many a ſweet fill do they get from ſuch promiſes as theſe, Jer. xxxii. 40. Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 28. Jer. iii. 22. 1 John ii. 1. Rom. xvi. 20. Heb. xiii. 5.—He fills them with the intimations of the pardon of their ſins, and with peace and joy in believing, Rom. xv. 13. ſo as to baniſh their doubts and fears. What a ſweet fill doth Chriſt's voice give them, ſuch, as that in Matth. ix. 2. Luke xxiv. 36, 38. John xiv. 27. Rom. viii. 1.—He fills them with reſolution and ſtrength to conquer ſin, perform duties, reſiſt temptations, and bear afflictions; when he ſpeaks to them as to Paul, 2 Cor. xii. 9. or as in Iſa. xli. 10. and xliii. 2.—He fills them by giving them ſweet returns of prayer, aſſurance of his love, and of his gracious preſence with them.—He fills them by making over Chriſt's fulneſs and purchaſe to them, and by giving them Piſgah-views of the promiſed land, and will at laſt fill them with glory.

It is only the hungry that ſhall be filled, the needy, the humble and ſelf-denied, for the rich are ſent empty away, Luke i. 53. the rich, that is theſe who are filled with a conceit of their own ſtrength and ſufficiency, their gifts and performances, and go about to eſtabliſh a righteouſneſs of their own, and ſee not their need of Chriſt; theſe ſhall go empty away, for they do not prize Chriſt, nor are willing to come up to his terms. They go away empty of Chriſt and his riches; but alas, they go away, filled with pride and ſelf-conceit, filled with love to ſin, love to the world, and love to their own righteouſneſs. Oh this is a miſerable fill.

O hungry ſouls, bleſs God that gives you this appetite, when others are rich and full in their own conceit, labour to preſerve this appetite and wait about God's houſe and table, where ſoul-food is to be had; and bleſs him even for the ſmalleſt crumbs, as when he gives you a greater hatred of ſin, a higher eſteem of Chriſt, a greater deſire after heart-holineſs, a reſtleſſneſs without Chriſt, a willingneſs to part with all for Chriſt, or ſtronger reſolutions to cleave to Chriſt and duty. Theſe crumbs are worthy of thanks, though ye be not filled with joy and peace in believing. Wait on the Lord, and wait for him in every ordinance and duty of his appointment, believing him to be faithful who hath ſaid, They ſhall not be aſhamed who wait for me.

Object. Some may ſay, We have waited long, and have not got a crumb. Anſ. Some eminent ſaints have been put to cry, How long wilt thou forget me, Lord, ſhall it be for ever? Pſal. xiii. But they muſt wait in the uſe of means until God's time come, and adore the ſovereignty of God in his dealings with them. His people have reſigned themſelves to the care and wiſdom of God, who knows what is beſt for them; believing there is a time coming when God will make up all their loſſes. O believers, there is a fill remaining for you above, that will ſoon make you forget all your days of ſcarcity here below.

ADVICE XXIII.

From Pſal. cvii. 2. Let the redeemed of the Lord ſay ſo.—

WHAT is it ſuch perſons ſhould ſay? Let them both ſay and ſing of God's goodneſs and mercy to them; for (of all men) the redeemed of the Lord have moſt reaſon to be thankful for Chriſt's diſtinguiſhing mercy in freeing them from the law's curſes and ſatan's power, from the guilt, dominion, and puniſhment of ſin; from the ſting of death, and the wrath to come. Believers are redeemed both from ſin and hell.

Q. How may I know if I be among theſe happy ones, the redeemed of the Lord? A. Take theſe marks.—Did you ever ſee your ſlavery and bondage by nature, ſo that no leſs than an infinite price and power could ranſom and liberate you?——Was you ſo convinced and humbled with the ſight of your miſery, as to be content of freedom from it on any terms?—Have you ventured your ſoul on Chriſt's merit and mercy, conform to goſpel-offers, being well pleaſed with the frame of the new-covenant, and the ſelf-denying way of ſaving ſouls by Chriſt's imputed righteouſneſs?—Are you content with Chriſt to be your King and Ruler, as well as your Prieſt and Saviour?—Have you given up yourſelf to the Lord to live for him, deſirous that his love may always conſtrain you to do his will? O then, you may conclude you are among the redeemed of the Lord, and that his bleſſed body was broke, and his blood ſhed to ranſom you.

Peculiar reaſons have you to extol his goodneſs and mercy above others. Why? He hath opened your eyes to ſee the beauty of your Redeemer, and the ways of holineſs, when others remain in blindneſs!——He hath opened your ears to hear the joyful ſound, and fall in with it, when others are deaf to it!—He hath looſed your tongues to pray and praiſe, when others are dumb, and tongue tied!—He hath opened your hearts to entertain Chriſt crucified, when others ſhut him out!—He hath brought you to a feeling of the evil and burden of ſin, when others are without feeling!—He hath given you appetites for ſpiritual food, when others reliſh nothing but things earthly!—He hath given you the promiſe and hopes of complete redemption from ſin and miſery above, when others live without Chriſt, and without hope! Let the redeemed of the Lord then ſing and praiſe him above all others.

O believing communicants, redeemed of the Lord, give him thanks, and expreſs your thankfulneſs by your thoughts and actions, as well as your words; namely, by your high eſteem of your Redeemer, and of his blood and righteouſneſs that purchaſed all for you.—By avoiding every thing that diſhonours him, and flying from the ſins that are common and faſhionable where you live.——By commending your Redeemer to theſe who know him not.——By ſtanding up as witneſſes for him, and for his truths and ways in the midſt of a Chriſt deſpiſing generation.——By ſtrictly obſerving the Lord's day, as being a weekly memorial of redeeming love.——By longing for the enlarging of Chriſt's kingdom, and rejoicing at the news of it: And by putting honour on all the friends and lovers of the Redeemer.

Laſtly, Shew your thankfulneſs, by ſinging pſalms, hymns, and ſpiritual ſongs in praiſe of redeeming love, and of the Redeemer's perſon, offices and ſufferings; a ſubject that can never be exhauſted. Sing praiſes to the great God, that humbled himſelf to leave his high throne, and come down to dwell in fleſh, and die for us; and to riſe again, and aſcend to heaven, to take poſſeſſion of the inheritance, and make accommodations for us there. On this account the Spirit calls us four times to ſing praiſes in one breath, Pſal. xlvii. 6. "God is gone up with a ſhout; ſing praiſes to God, "ſing praiſes; ſing praiſes unto our King, ſing praiſes." This ſinging is moſt acceptable to God, and profitable to ourſelves. As God makes it the eternal work of heaven, ſo he would have us frequently employed in it on earth. But Oh! how do we fail here! Reformed churches abroad do far exceed us in the frequency of this duty, as they do in the variety and ſweetneſs of their tunes.

What is ſinging, but a kind of reading with meditation and deliberation, in order to give the more free vent to the thoughts and affections to breathe and aſcend heavenwards. The wiſe God inſtitutes ſinging in his praiſe, becauſe the melody of the voice helps to affect the heart, and raiſe the thoughts; for he knoweth our frame. And indeed, it is only when the heart correſponds with the voice, that muſic is pleaſant to God: To this purpoſe one ſaith well;

> Sweet melody the hymn affords,
> When with the lines the heart accords.

O let the redeemed ſing praiſe, and give thanks to God for his unſpeakable Gift, both now, and for evermore. Amen.

I ſhall add no more Sacramental Advices in the preceeding method, but ſhall ſhut up all with a cluſter of ſhort Scripture Directions, proper, not only for communicants, but for all Chriſtians travelling heavenward.

A SHORT

CHRISTIAN DIRECTORY,

CONSISTING OF

Forty SCRIPTURE DIRECTIONS, proper for all Chriſtians intending Heaven.

IT ought to be the great concern of all baptized perſons to renew their baptiſmal covenant betimes, and, by a private tranſaction with God, to take the baptiſmal engagements upon themſelves, and thereby become Chriſtians by their own perſonal conſent and ſurrender, as well as by their parents dedication; and afterwards go and ſeal this tranſaction publicly, by partaking of the Lord's ſupper. Concerning this, I have given directions in The young communicant's catechiſm. ——Only I would intreat all my readers, for Chriſt's ſake and their own ſouls ſake, to beware of going about this work in a ſuperficial and formal manner, and of reſting upon lip-labour, and the external part of duty.—O never be eaſy until you inwardly and heartily cloſe with Chriſt, according to the gracious goſpel-offer which God makes unto you. Take no reſt till you get your ſouls united to Chriſt by a true faith, and ſavingly renewed and changed from nature to grace, by the efficacious working of the holy Spirit in regeneration. And as you are to cloſe with Chriſt by faith in your firſt converſion; ſo you muſt ſtudy to live all your days a life of faith on the Son of God, always making uſe of him, and leaning on him for righteouſneſs and ſtrength. I ſhall ſay no more by way of preface, but proceed to branch forth the Chriſtian's work and exerciſe in this world, in the following Scripture-precepts and directions.

Direction I. Let never the world come in God's room. Beware of the love of the world; often think upon that awakening word, 1 John ii. 15. "Love not the "world, neither the things that are in the world; if "any man love the world, the love of the Father is not "in him." Oh, this is the ruining ſin of multitudes, their love to, and complacency in, the things of the world. Nay, the moſt part of men are damned for loving the world too much, and loving God too little. ——Remember the faſter grips ye take of the world, the looſer are your grips of Chriſt; and the more ye get of the world, ye have the greater account to make to him that gives it, and has made you ſteward of it; therefore uſe your money and goods for his ſervice and honour: You muſt anſwer for your riches, but your riches cannot anſwer for you.——Alſo, remember if ye ſet your hearts on the world, it will be all that you will get; to have a competent portion of things earthly is a mercy, but to have earthly things for our portion is a dreadful miſery. Wherefore, while your hand is in this world, let your heart be in heaven. Let the buſineſs of your ſoul be the buſineſs of your life.

Direct. II. Keep up the ſame opinion now of the things of the world, that you will have when you come to die. You ſee what a low price men ſet upon the riches, pomp and glory of the world when they are dying: Had you the ſame thoughts of theſe things now, I am ſure you would not venture the loſs of your ſouls, the loſs of God's favour, the loſs of a good conſcience, and the loſs of eternal glory, for a whole world; far leſs for a ſmall trifle of it, as many now do. Think much upon that text, Matth. xvi. 26.

Direct. III. Be not ſtrangers to yourſelves, but often commune with your own hearts; as directed Pſal. iv. 4. When others are cenſuring and backbiting their neighbours, be you ſearching and cenſuring yourſelves. Self-examination is a moſt neceſſary duty. Examine yourſelves after every ordinance, what good you have got by it, what entertainment you gave your Saviour: Aſk how were your hearts affected by ſuch a word, &c. Commune with your hearts about your title to heaven: Judge of your eternal ſtate by your ſpiritual ſtate, and judge of your ſpiritual ſtate by the delightful and cuſtomary actions of your lives. Judge of it by your hatred of ſin, and love to Chriſt, and by the conſcience you make of ſecret prayer, and reading God's word. In communing with your hearts, among other things, aſk yourſelves, What are likelieſt to be your death-bed thoughts and wiſhes? Will they not be ſuch as theſe? O that I had loved Chriſt more, and the world leſs! O that I had improven goſpel-opportunities better! O that I had accepted Chriſt's calls and offers more readily! O that I had ſpent more time in prayer and ſearching the ſcriptures! O that I had been more ſpiritual and fervent in every duty!—Aſk yourſelves, what are theſe ſins or practices which will be moſt frightful to look back on, when ye ſee yourſelves juſt within a ſtep of God's tribunal? Study always to keep up death-bed thoughts of things.——Commune with your hearts about theſe things upon your bed, and alſo before you go to bed. Let conſcience bring in the accounts of every day before you ly down; mourn over the ſins of every day, and apply the blood of Chriſt for waſhing them away. Thus keep ſhort reckonings with God and conſcience, that you may not have old ſcores to clear when you come to a death-bed. Likewiſe at theſe communings, let every man aſk himſelf, What is my preſent ſtate and condition? Would I be willing to ly down and die in the frame and diſpoſition I am in juſt now? And I know not but I may be as near death this moment, as if my friends were looking on me ſtruggling with the pangs of death on my bed.

Direct. IV. Begin early in the ſervice of God, and give him the days of youth, Eccleſ. xii. 1. Theſe who are young cannot begin their ſervice to God too ſoon; God deſires it, to ſhew God's delight in early piety. We ſee the Scripture commends young ones for it; it is recorded with honour, that the child Samuel miniſtered to the Lord, 1 Sam. ii. 18. Joſiah is commended for his tender heart for God in his tender years, 2 Kings xxii. 19. Chriſt was well-pleaſed with the hoſannahs of the children that attended him, Matth. xxi. 15, 16.

When Solomon in his youth ſought God for wiſdom, it is ſaid, The ſpeech pleaſed the Lord, 1 Kings iii. 10. So Timothy is commended for his early piety, 2 Tim. iii. 15. And God ſays to Iſrael, I remember the kindneſs of thy youth, Jer. ii. 2. And he recommends to every one to begin ſoon, Eccleſ. xii. 1. The young diſciple was moſt beloved, and leaned on Chriſt's boſom.——Now is the proper time, O young people, for making your acquaintance with God, and for laying a good foundation for the time to come. Repentance is eaſieſt in younger years; ſin is then leſs rooted, ſatan's grips leſs faſtened, goſpel-offers not ſo ſlighted, the Spirit is not ſo much quenched, the conſcience not ſo hardened; the heart is then more eaſily melted and broke. God ſeeks the male of the flock, the beſt of your time, O then let him have it. If you forget God when young, it is juſt with God to forget and neglect you when old.

Direct. V. Shun the company that ſhuns God, and keep the company that God keeps, Pſal. cxix. 63. 115. Prov. xiii. 20. Look on the ſociety of the carnal or profane as infectious; but reckon ſerious praying perſons the excellent ones of the earth: Such will ſerve to quicken you when dead, and warm you when cold. Make the livelieſt of God's people your greateſt intimates; and ſee that their love and likeneſs to Chriſt be the great motive of your love to them, more than their love or likeneſs to you. It is not true Chriſtian love, but party love, to love only theſe who are of your ſentiments in all things. Yea, though they ſhould differ from you in ſome things, if you ſee God's image on them, and that they have fellowſhip with the Head, you ought to love them, and have fellowſhip with them: Keep up the communion of ſaints, for it is one of the articles of our creed. Chriſtian conference and ſocial prayer have been bleſſed of God to preſerve the life of religion in many places, therefore let theſe who fear the Lord ſpeak often one to another, Mal. iii. 16.

Direct. VI. Put a high value upon precious time, and loſe none of it by ſloth, Eph. v. 16. Eſteem time as theſe do who are at the point of death; and always remember that it is impoſſible to call time again. Look upon the loſs of time as a greater loſs than the loſs of your money, or any worldly thing; and therefore ſhun time waſting games, unprofitable diverſions, and idle talking.——Eſpecially value the moſt precious part of your time, ſuch as the morning of youth, the morning of every day, and particularly the precious time of the Lord's day. Look on the Lord's day as a tryſt-day with heaven; loſe not any part of it, but carefully improve it for God and the good of ſouls, both your own and others. It is want of thought, not want of work, that makes any ſay, they have time to ſpare.

Direct. VII. Allow a little time every day to think upon eternity. Conſider the import of theſe words, everlaſting puniſhment, and life eternal, Matth. xxv. 46. O eternity, eternity, that is never nearer an end, but always, as it were, but beginning! One ſerious thought of eternity is enough to ſtrike a careleſs ſoul to the heart. Why? he ſtands every hour at the door of eternity, and if he ſtep in while out of Chriſt, he is eternally undone; eternally in deſpair.—O! the ſwift river time is carrying every one of us into an ocean of eternity, an ocean that hath neither bank nor bottom, and what each of us muſt ſoon launch forth into. What an awful thought is this! every one of us is within a ſtep of being eternally bleſſed, or eternally curſed! eternally ſaved, or eternally damned! O if every one would believe and conſider this, and be wiſe, ſo as to pray as for eternity, repent as for eternity, hear as for eternity, live as for eternity, obey and do every thing as for eternity.

Direct. VIII. Throughout your whole life be mindful of the chief buſineſs of life, Phil. ii. 12. Now the buſineſs of life is to make it ſure that Chriſt is your life; it is to think much on the end of your life, and provide for it; it is to lay hold on eternal life, and keep ſtill ſight of it: So that 'when Chriſt who is your life ſhall 'appear, ye may alſo appear with him in glory,' Col. iii. 4. Let not religion be your diverſion, but your buſineſs; mind it as the one thing needful; give all diligence to make your calling and election ſure. Make ſure your calling, and thus you make ſure your election. If you would make ſure your calling, make it ſure that you are united to Chriſt by faith, and that Chriſt is the life of your ſouls. Do not reſt in convictions, nor in tears, prayers, or duties, nor in any thing ſhort of Chriſt. Preſs both for an intereſt in Chriſt, and for the aſſurance of it. Aſſurance is attainable, and actually attained by many; and it is moſt neceſſary for chearful obedience, for bearing the croſs, rejoicing in the Lord, giving thanks for redeeming love, and for performing many other duties of Chriſtianity.

Direct. IX. Let the rational ſoul govern, and the body be ſubſervient to it, 1 Cor. ix. 27. Alas, many on the contrary make their ſouls drudges to their bodies, and employ their noble faculties, wholly in deviſing how to pleaſe the fleſh. Ah, what fools are they who mind nothing but their bodies! Why? They are the greateſt enemies to their bodies, for by ſo doing they forfeit the eternal happineſs of their bodies, as well as of their ſouls. Whereas theſe who prefer their ſouls, and mind them chiefly, they conſult the happineſs of their bodies as well as of their ſouls; for the body is never ſo well as in heaven; when faſhioned like Chriſt's glorious body, then it is in perfect and eternal health.

Direct. X. Study both to live and die in the exerciſe of repentance and godly mourning for ſin, Matth. v. 4. Some may think repentance a melancholly word, but it is one of the ſweeteſt words in all the book of God: It is a goſpel duty, for the law or covenant of works admitted of no repentance; it is the effect of God's free love in and through Chriſt, to open the door of repentance to fallen ſinners; it coſt Chriſt his blood to obtain it for us, and it is his free gift to us, Acts v. 31. Surely it is good news to hear that our Sovereign bids poor condemned criminals, that were brought to the place of execution, repent, and throw themſelves down at his feet, and they ſhall get pardon. It was the ſum both of John's and Chriſt's preaching, Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand. It was the ſaying of a godly miniſter, 'That if he were to die in the pulpit, 'he would wiſh to die preaching repentance; and if 'out of the pulpit, he would wiſh to die practiſing re'pentance.' Auguſtine ſaith, 'Repentance is the fitteſt 'diſpoſition both for dying Chriſtians and miniſters;' and it is written of himſelf, that he died with tears in his eyes, weeping for ſin. This is a duty never out of ſeaſon; therefore ſtudy daily to keep up a tender and mourning frame, maintain contrition of heart and abhorrence of ſin, and for that end take every day a turn upon mount Calvary. Many think it a ſad thing to be repenting on earth, but it is a far ſadder thing to be repenting in hell. Seek repentance from God for Chriſt's ſake; ſay with Ephraim, Jer. xxxi. 18. Turn thou me and I ſhall be turned, for thou art the Lord my God.

Direct. XI. While you mind the neceſſary ſtudy of holineſs or inherent righteouſneſs, let it never take the place of imputed righteouſneſs, Rom. x. 3. Pſal. lxxi. 16. Inherent righteouſneſs indeed is to be loved, but imputed righteouſneſs only is to be truſted; for though inherent righteouſneſs or holineſs be a neceſſary qualification for heaven and ſalvation, and our evidence for it; yet it is imputed righteouſneſs only that is the foundation of it, and our title to it. Let Chriſt's name be dear to you, The Lord our Righteouſneſs.

Direct. XII. Employ Chriſt as your Surety in all caſes, and in every ſtrait go to him for relief, Pſal. cxix. 122. Iſa. xxxviii. 14. Study therefore to be well acquainted with your Surety, and live near him.—When the law demands payment of debt, and threatens you with priſon, look to Chriſt, and cry, "Lord be Surety "for me, Lord undertake for me."—When you are called to perform duties, bear affliction, reſiſt temptation, ſtruggle with corruptions, engage with enemies, &c. look ſtill to Chriſt to be your Surety, and to undertake for you; plead with him to make out that promiſe to you, Deut. xxxiii. 23. As thy days, ſo ſhall thy ſtrength be.

Direct. XIII. As you expect to live with Chriſt in heaven, ſtudy to live to Chriſt on earth, 2 Cor. v. 15. Philip. i. 21. If you would live to Chriſt here, then you muſt make Chriſt's honour and glory your ultimate end in all your deſigns and actions; and make your moſt valuable intereſts ſubſervient to his intereſt and glory. Study an univerſal conformity to Chriſt's holy laws and precepts, and make it your great buſineſs to approve yourſelves to Chriſt in all things: Chuſe the things that pleaſe him, and carefully avoid every thing that is diſpleaſing to him, Pſal. cxix. 30. Iſa. lvi. 4.

Direct. XIV. Cleave faſt to Chriſt, and the way of holineſs, whatever it may coſt you, Acts xi. 23. 2 Tim. iii. 12. Think not the worſe of Chriſt and his ways that they are perſecuted or reproached, and that few do own them. Chriſt foretold this, and ſaith, His way is a narrow way that few walk in. Join with the little flock to whom the kingdom is promiſed, which will abundantly compenſate all your ſufferings for Chriſt. Never follow a multitude to do evil, but cleave to Chriſt however few join you.

Direct. XV. Seek the approbation of God above that of men, 2 Cor. x. 18. What is the applauſe of worms to the ſmiles of the God of heaven? What would it avail us to have poor men like ourſelves to commend us, when the great God that made us doth comdemn us? No matter though men cenſure or condemn our actions, if God approve and commend them. "It is a very "ſmall thing to be judged of man's judgment, but he "that judgeth us is the Lord," 1 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

Direct. XVI. Be much employed in admiring God's redeeming love, and Chriſt's ſuretyſhip for us, 1 John iii. 1, 16. This is the employment of the redeemed to all eternity, Rev. v. 9. And all who go to heaven muſt be acquaint with their work while here, Rev. i. 5. O what matter of eternal wonder and praiſe is there in God's giving his dear Son to be our Surety and ſacrifice, and in the Son's voluntary undertaking it!

Direct. XVII. Delight much in thinking and ſpeaking of Chriſt, and particularly of his death and ſufferings for us, Luke ix. 31. Rev. v. 9, 12. Oh, did he wade thro' a ſea of wrath, a ſea of blood, a ſea of ſorrows and ſufferings, to bring redemption to us? And will we ever forget him? The great God takes great pleaſure in the work of our redemption, and is well pleaſed with our Redeemer who undertook it. God repented that he made man, but never repented his redeeming man. Now, what God delights in, we ſhould delight in, eſpecially ſince we reap the benefit.—We ſee, from Luke ix. Rev. v. that the ſubject of Chriſt's death is matter of diſcourſe and praiſe to the glorified ſociety above. When Moſes and Elias came from heaven to mount Tabor to wait upon their tranſfigured Lord, they choſe Chriſt's death for the ſubject of their converſation: Why? Chriſt's death was the ſpring and cauſe of all their glory in heaven; neither Moſes nor Elias had ſhined there, had it not been for Chriſt's death. And ſhall not we, here below, delight in thinking, ſpeaking and ſinging of this noble ſubject, which is the ground of all happineſs we either have, or hope for?

Direct. XVIII. Treat objections raiſed againſt your cloſing with Chriſt, as ſuggeſtions of the enemy, that is ſeeking the ruin of your ſouls. Reject them, as Chriſt did Peter's counſel, Matth. xvi. 23. Get thee behind me, ſatan. As ſatan would have hindered Chriſt's dying for us; ſo he would hinder us from relying on Chriſt's death. Oh, (ſaith one) I am unworthy of any ſhare in Chriſt's death. Anſw. If you will have nothing but what you are worthy of, you muſt have nothing but hell. What was Abraham, Paul, Magdalene, the thief on the croſs, the idolatrous Corinthians worthy of, before the Lord called them! Whatever be your unworthineſs, are you willing to apply Chriſt's blood? Then ſee what Chriſt ſaith to you, Rev. xxii. 17. "Whoſoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."—O but, (ſaith another) my ſins are heinous. Anſw. Canſt thou be more guilty, than Chriſt is gracious?—Doth he not promiſe to waſh away ſins that are like ſcarlet and crimſon, Iſa. i. 18. and tells us, 1 John i. 7. "That his blood cleanſeth us from all ſin?" O bleſs him for that word all—— Do not then believe ſatan, who would tempt thee to think that God hath caſt thee off; but, in ſpite of all he can ſay, ſtill believe God's faithful word, that there is mercy enough in God, merit enough in Chriſt, power enough in the Spirit, and room enough in the goſpel-offers and promiſes to you. Believe that word, Lam. iii. 25. The Lord is good to them that wait for him, to the ſoul that ſeeketh him. Say to thy ſoul, "Can this "word of God fail? Has God made thee willing to "wait and ſeek for him, and is he not willing to be "found of thee? O my ſoul, doſt thou not ſee an "infinite perfection in Chriſt's righteouſneſs, in Chriſt's "blood and merits!" We may ſee an end of all earthly perfection, but we can ſee no end of Chriſt's perfection, which is infinite.

Direct. XIX. Study much theſe great goſpel-leſſons of denying yourſelves, and exalting God's free grace, Mat. xvi. 24. 1 Cor. i. 31. The deſign of the goſpel is to caſt down ſelf, and all idols, that God alone may be exalted; it is to make ſelf nothing, and God all, in point of wiſdom, ſtrength, righteouſneſs and glory; it is to take man wholly off himſelf, and caſt him on Chriſt for the whole of his ſalvation. It is a good ſign of a ſaving change upon the heart, when a man is thus humbled, and caſt into the goſpel mould, when ſelf-loving is turned into ſelf-loathing, ſelf-admiring into ſelf-abhorring, ſelf-excuſing into ſelf-accuſing, and ſelf ſeeking into ſelf-denying.

Direct. XX. Draw all your ſtrength for work and warfare from Chriſt, and preſent all your duties to God in Chriſt's name, Iſa. xlv. 24. Col. iii. 17. Chriſt himſelf tells us, that without him we can do nothing, John xv. 5. that is, nothing aright, or nothing that is acceptable to God. All our duties, if acceptable, muſt be done in Chriſt's ſtrength, and covered with his righteouſneſs. The apoſtle owns that "of himſelf he could "not ſo much as think a good thought, 2 Cor. iii. 5. "but he could do all things through Chriſt that ſtrengthened him," Philip. iv. 13. And hence he exhorts us to be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, Eph. vi. 10. Let us think, before we go to duty, from whence our ſtrength for it muſt come, and ſtudy to fetch it in by faith, and believing ejaculations; and when we are aſſiſted, let us aſcribe the glory to Jeſus.——Be aſſured of this alſo, that your moſt coſtly ſacrifices are unſavoury, if they be not perfumed with the fragrant incenſe of Chriſt's merits and interceſſion; and that your faireſt righteouſneſs is but as filthy rags in God's ſight, if Chriſt's righteouſneſs do not cover it. Let it therefore be your conſtant language, In the Lord Jeſus have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength, Iſa. xlv. 24.

Direct. XXI. In all the actions of your life, ſet the Lord ſtill before you, Pſal. xvi. 8.—xxv. 15. Acknowledge him in all your undertakings, and by faith and prayer commit your way to him, look to him for direction and ſucceſs, and depend on him as the Father of your mercies, the ſum of your bliſs, the ſtrength of your life, the ſtaff of your bread, the breath of your noſtrils, and the length of your days. Set the Lord always before you as your almighty Creator, your loving Redeemer, your rightful Owner, your careful Preſerver, your all-ſufficient Portion, your holy Pattern, your obſerving Witneſs, and your awful Judge. Undertake and perform all your actions under a ſenſe of God's all-ſeeing eye, and of your being accountable to him for all you do.

Direct. XXII. Whether ye eat, or drink, or whatſoever ye do, do all to the glory of God, 1 Cor. x. 31. We eat and drink to God's glory, when we do it for the end that our bodies may be fitted to ſerve our ſouls in honouring and ſerving God; and when we receive theſe mercies with thankſulneſs from the hand of God, and depend upon God's bleſſing to make them nouriſhing to us; and when we remember we are but ſtewards of what we poſſeſs, and are accountable to God the Proprietor how we improve theſe earthly bleſſings to his honour and ſervice.——You muſt alſo apply the buſineſs of your callings to God's glory, and this you do, when you depend on God to bleſs you in it, and to proſper the work of your hands, and to arm you againſt all the ſins, ſnares and temptations, which your buſineſs may give occaſion to. You ought alſo to pay and receive viſits, and attend company with an eye to God's glory, by bleſſing God for giving you friends and earthly accommodations, and looking to God for wiſdom to behave yourſelves ſo, as ye may do no harm to theſe ye converſe with, nor get any harm from them: But, on the contrary, may be helped to do them good, and get benefit from them.——You are alſo to undertake journies for God's glory, to look to him for protection by the way, and for direction, through-bearing, and ſucceſs.

Direct. XXIII. Spend as much time as poſſible in ſecret prayer and converſe with God, 1 Theſſ. v. 17. And that ye may do this with delight, endeavour to keep your hearts always in a ſerious praying frame, with an abiding impreſſion of God upon your ſpirits. There is a great difference betwixt a ſerious fit, and a ſerious frame. Ahab, Saul, Felix, and others, had their ſerious fits, but religious perſons only keep their ſouls in a ſerious frame, and ſtudy to be in the fear of the Lord all the day long, as God enjoins, Prov. xxiii. 17. Prayer, that is acceptable to God, muſt be performed with faith, delight and livelineſs, and not with deadneſs and wearineſs, as if it were a taſk or burden. A life without prayer, or a prayer without life, are both hateful to the God of our life. He is the living God whom we worſhip, and hath no pleaſure in dead performances. But they who delight themſelves in duty, ſhall have the deſires of their hearts granted them, Pſal. xxxvii. 4. Surely they who ſpend their days in faith and prayer, ſhall end their days in peace and comfort.

Direct. XXIV. Make conſcience of family religion, as well as of cloſet-duties, Joſhua xxiv. 15. 2 Sam. vi. 20. Neglect not family-prayer nor praiſes, reading the word, catechiſing children and ſervants, ſanctifying the ſabbath, exhorting to duty, reproving and curbing ſin. Religion and reformation muſt begin in families, if we would wiſh it to be national and univerſal. God is the author and founder of families, and therefore ſhould have homage from families as ſuch, by the morning and evening ſacrifice of prayer and praiſe. Go to him to bleſs family-mercies, ſupply family-wants, ſanctify family-trials, and redreſs family-grievances.——Early train up children in the way they ſhould go, pray much for them, and for God's bleſſing on the means of their education.

Direct. XXV. Begin and end every day with God, Pſal. v. 3.——iv. 8. Let prayer be the key to open the heart to God in the morning, and lock it againſt all his enemies at night. Let no Chriſtian ſay, he cannot pray; for prayer is as neceſſary to him as breath, Lam. iii. 56. Let none ſay, they have not time for it; better take time from ſleep, than want time for prayer. Think it not enough to ſay your prayers, but mind you muſt pray your prayers, pray with ſincerity and fervour. Think with yourſelf, this morning may be my laſt morning, or this night my laſt night; for certainly that morning cometh of which you will never ſee the night, or that night of which you will never ſee the morning. Let the concluſion of every day put you in mind of the concluſion of all your days, by the long night of death, that will put an end to all your work, and bring you to count and reckon with your great Maſter about your work. O to ly down every night reconciled with him! O that we could ly down and leave our hearts with Chriſt, and compoſe our ſpirits ſo, as if we were not to awake till the heavens are no more.

Direct. XXVI. Seeing none knoweth what a day may bring forth, ſpend every day as if it were to be your laſt, Prov. xxvii. 1. Look on yourſelves as ſtanding every day at the door of eternity, and hundreds of diſeaſes and accidents ready to open the door to let you in. No doubt you have ſometimes apprehended yourſelves nearer death than you think yourſelves juſt now; yet it is certain that death was never ſo near you, nor judgment never ſo near you as they are at preſent. We, who ſtand every hour at the door of eternity, ſhould ſpend our precious hours with the greateſt frugality, ſeeing the work we have in hand is ſoul-work, and work on which eternity depends; and the time we have to work it in, is very ſhort, and cannot be recalled. This ſhort life being only a paſſage to eternity, it ſhould be ſpent as a continual preparation for eternity. Surely theſe who have immortal ſouls ſo near eternity, have other work to do than trifle away time in tippling, idle talking, gaming, and ſuch diverſions.

Direct. XXVII. Sojourn in this world as travellers, keeping ſo looſe from the world, as to be able to pack up and be gone from it upon ſhort warning, 1 Pet. i. 17. 1 Cor. vii. 19. 31. We have no continuing city nor certain abode here; therefore let us always be ready to ariſe and depart. And if we would be right travellers towards Zion above, we muſt have Chriſt in our hearts, heaven in our eye, and the world under our feet.—We muſt take God's Spirit for our guide, God's word for our rule, God's glory for our end, God's fear for our guard, God's people for our companions, God's praiſe for our recreation, and God's promiſes for our cordials. We muſt make religion our buſineſs, prayer our delight, holineſs our way, and heaven our home. ——O Zion's travellers diſtinguiſh yourſelves from the men that dwell upon the earth. Let Chriſt always be precious to you, the word ſweet, ſin bitter, the world a wilderneſs, and death welcome.——Let Chriſt's will be your will, Chriſt's diſhonour your affliction, Chriſt's cauſe your concern, Chriſt's ſucceſs your joy, Chriſt's day your delight, Chriſt's croſs your glory, Chriſt's ſufferings your meditation, Chriſt's wounds your refuge, Chriſt's blood your balm, Chriſt's righteouſneſs your cloathing, and Chriſt's preſence your heaven.——While travelling here, let your hearts burn with love to Chriſt, love to think of Chriſt, love to hear of Chriſt, love to read of Chriſt, love to ſpeak of Chriſt, love to ſpeak for Chriſt, love to ſpeak to Chriſt.

Direct. XXVIII. Keep up a lively ſenſe of ſacramental vows and engagements, and walk anſwerably thereto, Pſal. lvi. 12. 13. You are under a ſacramental oath to be true and faithful ſoldiers to the Captain of your ſalvation, ſee that you fight his battles againſt his and your enemies, the devil, the world, and the fleſh. Remember what your Captain has done and ſuffered for you, let his love, as well as your oath, conſtrain you to abide by his ſtandard. Never go over to his enemies camp, nor keep correſpondence with them.—Your glorious Captain gives you choice feaſts at his table to ſtrengthen and encourage you both for work and warfare; walk on in ſtrength of theſe ſpiritual meals and grow ſtronger in grace, and more lively in all ſpiritual duties, pray more fervently, hear more attentively, meditate more frequently, partake more believingly, keep ſabbaths more delightfully, and walk worthy of the Lord unto all well pleaſing. Your ſpiritual meals are deſigned for your nouriſhment, ſtrength, and growth. Therefore grow in grace. O believers, if you would lay up a treaſure of glory for yourſelves hereafter, lay up a treaſure of grace in your hearts juſt now, increaſe faith, love, heart-purity and humility. Whoever is rich in grace now, will be rich in glory hereafter: For what is grace but glory begun, and what is glory but grace perfected? Who then would not love grace, ſeeing it is begun glory, and a certain pledge of complete glory?

Direct. XXIX. Improve the talents God gives you for his ſervice and glory, Luke xix. 13. Remember you were not made for yourſelves only, but for ſociety and the benefit of others; therefore employ your gifts, your ſubſtance, and whatever God has beſtowed, for the good of others; teach the ignorant, relieve the poor, ſtrengthen the weak, comfort theſe that are caſt down, tell them your experiences, commend Chriſt as a choice Maſter and a lovely Saviour, and invite them to come taſte and ſee that he is good; pity theſe who are ſtrangers to him, and pray for them. Be uſeful to others while you live, which will make your memory ſavoury when you die; many, alas, are ſo unprofitable in their lives, that when they come to die, neighbours ſcarce think their life worth a prayer, or their death worth a tear; but public ſpirited and uſeful perſons are much lamented. Let every one in their ſtations be active, and occupy their talents for God. Be aſſured, the more you do for God in this world, the more God will do for you in the world to come. If the ſaints were capable of grief in heaven, it would be for their doing ſo little for God on earth.

Direct. XXX. Let all believers be thankful to God for his diſtinguiſhing favours and mercies to them, Pſal. cxvi. 8 12. A life of praiſe doth highly become the proofs of God's love to you. Fall down humbly before God, and aſcribe all to his free undeſerved grace! For who is it that maketh thee to differ from another? What haſt thou, but what thou haſt received in a way of free gift? O wonder at his free love, that has diſtinguiſhed you from others! has done that for you that he has not done for thouſands, for myriads, for millions! nor for theſe who ſit in the ſame aſſembly, or dwell in the ſame houſe with you! O bleſs God who ſent his dear Son to ranſom you, and bring you out of priſon, when others are left in bondage! Who ſent his holy Spirit to open your eyes, when others are left blind; to open your ears, when others are left deaf; to open your hearts, when others are left ſhut; to open your mouths to praiſe free diſtinguiſhing love, when others are left dumb. Employ your tongues then to commend his love, and ſing his praiſe.

Direct. XXXI. Since God diſtinguiſhes you from others, in his mercies to you, ſee that you diſtinguiſh yourſelves from others, in your ſervice to him, Matth. v. 47. Are you Chriſtians indeed? You are under ſtronger obligations to live and act for Chriſt, than others: Why? You have both your new name and your new nature from Chriſt, which others have not; you are more nearly related to Chriſt than others; you are engaged to act for him, by more frequent and ſolemn vows than others; you have greater mercies beſtowed on you than others; others have but common-mercies, but you have covenant-mercies, mercies that accompany ſalvation.—You have ſpiritual life within you, and divine influences which others want; not only the world, but Chriſt himſelf expects more from you than others; all which are powerful engagements on you, to do more for God than others.——You know more of the things of God than others; you talk more of them, you profeſs more, you promiſe and engage to do more than others; yea, God has done unſpeakably more for you than others, and he may juſtly expect more from you than others; and put that queſtion to you, What do ye for me, more than others? Matth. v. 47.

Queſt. Wherein ſhould believers diſtinguiſh themſelves, and do more for God than others? Anſw. You ſhould be witneſſes for God, and teſtify againſt what is diſhonouring to him, by abſtaining from all known ſin, and from theſe ſins which are common and faſhionable and little thought of by others.——By reproving ſin in others, and endeavouring to pluck them out of the fire.——By keeping up family-religion even in the midſt of buſineſs, and baniſhing all known vice from your dwellings, even minc'd oaths, raſh uſing of God's name, idle walking or talking on the Lord's day, backbitings, evil wiſhes, revengeful actions, unneceſſary drinking or tippling, lottery-games or paſtimes of bad report, &c.—Be zealous for ſabbath-holineſs. Be meek and lowly in your carriage; commend Chriſt to others; ſpeak for the honour of religion before theſe who diſregard it; ſhew ſpecial regard to thoſe who are ſtamped with God's image, tho' mean or deſpiſed; be ready to forgive wrongs, and render good for evil; deal honeſtly and juſtly with all men; be ſober and temperate in eating, drinking, ſleep, apparel, &c. Guard againſt pride, paſſion, haſty and unguarded words, put great reſpect upon God's word and ordinances; be concerned for the enlarging of Chriſt's kingdom; never venture upon any known ſin for the ſake of worldly gain; make conſcience of relative and ſtational duties, as to be good huſbands, good wives, good parents, good children, good maſters, good ſervants, good neighbours, &c. In ſuch things as theſe, you are to do more for God than others.

Direct. XXXII. Be not content with a fair profeſſion of religion, or with a form of godlineſs, and a name to live among men, Tit. i. 16. 2 Tim. iii. 5. But endeavour to know and feel the power of godlineſs in your hearts, and to have your practice in all reſpects correſponding to your profeſſion. If your practice be not anſwerable to what you profeſs, you ſin againſt great light, you diſcredit religion, and tempt men to think it all hypocriſy. If a man live and die a mere profeſſor, it had been better for him, he had lived and died a mere heathen.

Direct. XXXIII. Keep always a watch on the door of your lips, Pſal. cxli. 3. ſeeing the tongue hath a world of iniquity in it, James iii. 6. Keep it as with a bridle, Pſal. xxxix. 1. and beg the Lord's help to keep it, and that he himſelf may ſet a watch upon your mouths, as the pſalmiſt prays, Pſalm cxli. as knowing that no watchfulneſs or reſolution of our own is ſufficient for the governing of our tongues, without God's ſpecial grace, without this the moſt wake-rife watchman watcheth in vain. Earneſtly ſeek for Chriſt's ſake God's ſpecial grace to govern this unruly member, that it may not be ſuffered to utter words which may tend to the diſhonour of God, or to the hurt of men. Study to govern your tongues by uſing God's name with reverence, ſpeaking always what is truth and what is ſeaſonable, uſeful and edifying, guarding carefully againſt lying, evil-ſpeaking, paſſionate, proud, and ſelf-exalting words, and againſt all raſh cenſures: You have need of great caution in ſpeaking, and to take heed either how ye commend yourſelves, or condemn others.

Direct. XXXIV. Walk cheerfully and contentedly in every condition, Acts viii. 39. Phil. iv. 11. Such a walk as this doth bring great credit to religion and the ſervice of our Redeemer. What tho' a believer be fed with the bread and water of affliction the moſt of his life, he hath other bread and another cup to ſweeten both; the forgiveneſs of ſin is a reviving cordial in every caſe. Have no will of your own diſtinct from God's will, but be reſigned to God's diſpoſing will in every thing, and let God's will and choice be always yours. If you cannot bring your condition to your mind, then you muſt labour to bring your mind to your condition, believing that the will of your heavenly Father is always beſt for you. Still remember that he hath engaged himſelf to be with you in all ſtates and conditions, and to order all things for your advantage: Be ſure then he cannot deny himſelf, all his words are oaths for their certainty, and all his promiſes are the ſure mercies of David. Be content in every caſe; for ſince Chriſt is yours, all things are yours. Well then, let your covenanted God chuſe out your lot for you; for you may truſt that it ſhall be done with more wiſdom, and with more affection, than you can chuſe for yourſelf.

Direct. XXXV. If ye would manifeſt yourſelves to be truly religious both before God and man, keep always the firſt and ſecond table of the law joined together, and make conſcience of both, Matth. xxii. 37, &c. Love both God and your neighbour, be juſt and upright in all your dealings with men, acting always under a ſenſe of the all-ſeeing eye of your heavenly Father, who enjoins you to do the ſame to others, as ye would have them doing to you. Let a moral man try his religion by the duties of the firſt table of the law, and a profeſſor his by the duties of the ſecond table of the law. See that ye love God above all things, and prefer his worſhip and ſervice to every thing. Love God for himſelf, and love men principally for what is God-like in them.

Direct. XXXVI. Carefully guard againſt apoſtaſy and backſliding from God and his ways, Heb. x. 38, 39. Be always jealous of your deceitful and treacherous hearts, knowing that they are bent to backſliding. A holy fear of departing from God, is a good means to keep us from departing from God. Therefore endeavour to preſerve always a watchful and tender frame of heart, and be afraid of falling away, according to that word, Heb. iv. 1. If ye would preſerve yourſelves from total apoſtaſy, riſe ſpeedily after every fall by ſound repentance, and recourſe to the blood of Chriſt. Lie not one day in any ſin, but riſe out of the puddle immediately, and get to the cleanſing Fountain, and renew your covenant with God, and beg more ſtrength, and faith to derive continual ſupplies from Chriſt your Head. Be often calling your ſouls to account, and aſking your hearts, What is become of the good frames, the melting ſenſe of ſin, the hungering deſires, the delightful taſtes, the heavenly longings, the warm affections to Chriſt, that they ſometimes had. When ye attain to theſe, or any of them, ſee that ye commit them to Chriſt's keeping, ſaying, with the pſalmiſt, Lord, be ſurety for thy ſervant for good. Laſtly, Conſider the dreadful caſe of an apoſtate as deſcribed by our Lord and his apoſtle, Matth xii. 43, 44. 2 Pet. ii. 20, 21. That man's caſe becomes far more miſerable than it was at firſt. What a ſad caſe is it for a ſoul to fall back into hell, after it had climbed near the gates of heaven? None fall ſo deeply into hell as theſe, who fall backward into it.

Direct. XXXVII. Be watchful againſt all ſin, and particularly your darling or conſtitutional ſin, the ſin that moſt eaſily beſets you, Pſal. xviii. 23. Heb. xii. 1. Our adverſary the devil well knows this ſin, and on what ſide we may be attacked with the greateſt ſucceſs; and to be ſure he will bring his ſtrongeſt temptations thither, and employ his moſt ſubtile wiles and devices that way to enſnare us. It were happy for us if we were ſtill watching againſt him, and could ſay with the apoſtle, We are not ignorant of his devices. You are likewiſe to watch againſt all ſin whatſomever, ſins of omiſſion as well as of commiſſion. Groſs out-breakings make conſcience to ſtart at their appearance, but it is not ſo alarmed with the neglect of duties. But if conſcience be awakened, ſins of omiſſion will lie heavy as well as ſins of commiſſion. Some eminent Chriſtians who have lived the moſt circumſpect lives, when they have come to die and reflect on their bypaſt time, have been put to cry, Lord, in ſpecial forgive my ſins of omiſſion. Venture not to live in any frame, courſe or practice that you would not adventure to die in, ſeeing you know not but your next ſtep may be into the grave. Guard againſt all theſe ſins and evils now in the time of your health, that may put thorns in your pillow when ſickneſs and the harbingers of death approach, ſuch as "miſpending of precious time, neglect of prayer, or reading of the Scriptures, formality and luke-warmneſs in religion, earthly-mindedneſs, unthankfulneſs for mercies, and miſcarrying after them. Neglect of improving Chriſt, quenching the Spirit, neglect of convictions, breaking of vows, falling from your firſt love, returning to old ſins you had mourned over, ſinning againſt light, and after afflictions," &c.

Direct. XXXVIII. Be heartily concerned for the coming and enlarging of Chriſt's kingdom in the world, Matth. vi. 10. Pſal. lxxii. 19. Bewail it that his flock is ſo little, his ſubjects ſo few, when ſatan's are ſo numerous. Bewail the unſucceſsfulneſs of the goſpel, the reſtraint of the Spirit, the diviſions among Chriſtians, and the many hinderances of the progreſs of Chriſtianity. Lament the wrongs and diſhonours done to God by others; cry and wreſtle for the outpouring of the Spirit, both at home and abroad; pray for the revival of God's work in theſe lands, amidſt theſe declining years; and in enquiring after public news have a view to this, be concerned for the intereſt and welfare of Chriſt's kingdom through the world, for the accompliſhment of God's promiſes concerning the deſtruction of Antichriſt, Babylon's downfall, the inbringing of the Jews, and the ſubduing of the nations. And when you hear of any appearance of God's ariſing to countenance his word, and conquer ſinners to himſelf, whether at home or abroad, rejoice at the news, reckon them good tidings of great joy, and bleſs the Lord for them with all your hearts. It is moſt pleaſing and acceptable to God, to ſee his people heartily concerned for the proſperity of Jeruſalem.

Direct. XXXIX. Be buſy laying up a ſtock for a ſick-bed or death-bed, when all the comforts of life will be taſteleſs to you, 1 Tim. vi. 19. Lay up a ſtock of faith and patience, a ſtock of evidences or divine love, and of your intereſt in Chriſt; a ſtock of divine promiſes and experiences of God's loving-kindneſs, which may be ſupporting to you in the day of ſharp trials. When mariners go to ſea, they victual the ſhip, and provide for a ſtorm. And ought not we to forſee the ſtorms of affliction, of ſickneſs and death, and provide and lay up for them? It will be ſad, if, when the Bridegroom is come, we have our oil then to buy, when the market is over. Now is the time for providing oil; now is the market of grace; now is the acceptable time; now is the day of ſalvation.

Direct. XL. Be looking and longing for the eternal ſupper of the Lamb, Philip i. 23. Rev. xix. 9. Hungry ſouls who have taſted the love of Jeſus, long for the Lamb's ſupper below, that they may enjoy communion with him here, and this makes them cry, When ſhall the opportunity return? When ſhall I come and appear before God? When ſhall I again ſee his power and glory in the ſanctuary? When ſhall I again taſte his love and goodneſs in the ſacrament? And yet theſe are but ſmall foretaſtes of the Lamb's ſupper above. What is our drinking of the fruit of the vine here, to our drinking it new with Chriſt in his Father's kingdom?—Therefore look out, and long for the time when the day ſhall break, and the ſhadows flee away, and the marriage of the Lamb ſhall be triumphantly ſolemnized and completed with the church his eſpouſed bride, whom he will then lead into the King's palace, where their tranſient glances ſhall be changed into immediate viſion, and their ſhort taſtes into everlaſting feaſting and fulneſs. O bleſſed are they for ever who are called to the marriage ſupper of the Lamb: Theſe are the true ſayings of God. I believe, Lord help my unbelief. Amen.

Unto the foreſaid Directory, I ſhall ſubjoin a variety of Scripture ſongs, for the uſe and benefit of Zions travellers; and theſe I deſign as a ſupplement to my goſpel-hymns, publiſhed ſome months ago; and which addition I underſtand will be agreeable to the deſires of not a few.

As to the duty and advantage of praiſing God by ſinging ſuch hymns and ſpiritual ſongs, according to the Apoſtle's repeated inſtructions, I ſhall add nothing to what I have ſaid thereanent, in my preface to the foreſaid Goſpel-hymns, but refer my reader thereto.

SCRIPTURE-SONGS
FOR ZION's TRAVELLERS, IN THEIR WAY TO HEAVEN.

SONG I.

The PRIMITIVE COMMUNICANTS.

1 CHRIST's friends at firſt oft broke his bread,
Inſpir'd with love divine,
They drank the Spirit of their Head,
As well's the ſacred wine.
2 They ſhew'd his death with heart and ſoul,
And feaſted on his love;
His blood and wounds they did extol,
And ſung like ſaints above.
3 Lord grant us part of that love-flame,
Which in their hearts abode;
That made them witneſs for the Lamb,
And ſuffer for their God.
4 Warm ſhow'rs from heav'n ſend down on us,
That frozen hearts may yield,
And turn us from a wilderneſs
Into a fruitful field.
5 Thy people, Lord, lament for thee,
And ſore thy abſence mourn;
They long thy face again to ſee;
To goſpel-feaſts return.
6 Come to thy table, with us ſit,
Our grudges all remove,
Unite our hearts, and make us fit
To keep the feaſt of love.
7 Cauſe ſtreams of living waters flow
In channels of thy grace;
And let the north and ſouth wind blow,
Out ſtraitnings to releaſe.
8 Thy Spirit's temple make our hearts,
And with us ſtill abide;
Make his convictions pierce like darts,
Let us no more backſlide.
9 Thy hidings are a bitter cup,
Like flowers we fade and mourn,
We droop, we grieve, and can't look up,
Till thou our Sun return.
10 Lord charge not on us former guilt,
Let all thine anger ceaſe;
Look to the blood on Calv'ry ſpilt,
And bid us go in peace.

SONG II.

The HOLY SPIRIT fits us for a HOLY TABLE.

1 O Father of our dying Lord,
Hear thy Son's ſpeaking blood,
Fulfil to us his gracious word;
Send down the heavenly flood.
2 Thy Spirit grant, for when he pray'd,
To glorify thy Son;
His promis'd influences ſhed,
That wonders may be done.
3 Glad we'll his death commemorate,
Ay till he come again;
Bleſs both the word and ſacrament,
Take thy great power and reign.
4 Chriſt's table now ſtands furniſhed
With bleſſings of beſt kinds;
Pardon and Peace bought with his blood,
Choice food for troubled minds.
5 Give faith to feed and view his love,
His ſtripes and wounds each one,
How he was jeer'd that's fear'd above,
Blaſphem'd and ſpit upon.
6 In's hands and feet we ſee the nails
Piercing his tender veins;
For us each wound the bluſhing ground,
With blood infinite ſtains.
7 Black clouds for us o'erwhelm'd his ſoul,
Sore was his agonie;
When he cry'd My God, my God, why
Haſt thou forſaken me?
8 Thy matchleſs love we'll praiſe aloud,
Our ſouls it doth conſtrain,
To love and live to thee our God,
Who for our ſins waſt ſlain.
9 May I no more to prayer be dragg'd,
To ſerve thee let me run.
May I in duties keep my courſe,
Like to the riſing ſun.
10 Unto the Lamb that once was ſlain,
Be praiſe and glory giv'n,
By all that dwell upon the earth,
And all the hoſts of heav'n.

SONG III.

CHRIST's SACRIFICE, the only Foundation of our TRUST.

SO great's the guilt of fallen man,
None could his pardon buy;
Great muſt it be, when God himſelf
Muſt for his creature die!
2 Slain beaſts for ſin could not atone,
Such off'rings all were vain,
Had not the Father giv'n his Son
For ſinners to be ſlain.
3 Had the whole church been offer'd up,
As one burnt ſacrifice;

Our ſmalleſt debt this could not pay,
Creatures could not ſuffice.
4 But mercy, in this hopleſs caſe,
A ſacrifice prepares;
A Lamb of all-ſufficient worth,
Which diſſipates our fears.
5 This Sacrifice more precious
Than all created things,
To us eternal happineſs
In ſoul and body brings.
6 This is the ſure Foundation-ſtone,
Which God in Zion lays,
For men to build their hopes upon,
He's bleſt that on it ſtays.
7 Tho' earth's foundations be remov'd,
This Rock ſtill ſtandeth faſt,
By ſtorms unmov'd, on this alone
My anchor I will caſt.
8 The Lamb, our Rock, for us did die,
For us roſe from the dead,
For us he did aſcend on high,
For us his blood doth plead.
9 O bleeding Lamb, ſhew me my name
Writ in thy book of life;
Then I will long to be with thee,
Out of this land of ſtrife.
10 To worſhip with the heav'nly hoſt,
JEHOVAH one in three,
The Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt,
To all eternitie.

SONG IV.

The DISTRESSED SOUL looking to the LAMB for Pity.

1 COME ſee my caſe, O bleeding Lamb,
In mercy take me as I am,
Quite naked, and put cloathing on
A ſtranger, and make me a ſon.
2 Burden'd with guilt, and give me eaſe,
A bond-man, and my ſoul releaſe,
A vile, not fit to join thy ſaints;
A creature all made up of wants.
3 By nature I have nothing good,
All muſt be bought me by thy blood;
But ſince thy wounds are open'd wide,
I'll hope in Jeſus crucify'd.
4 Thy blood mens ſoreſt plagues doth cure,
Thy wounds their backward hearts allure,
Thy blood ſtrange changes works in men,
For wondrous works the Lamb was ſlain!
5 Thy Bible doth thy pity ſhew,
I reſt on thy words ſweet and true,
Souls come to me, and no more doubt,
For him that comes I'll not caſt out.
6 Renew my ſoul, plant grace this day,
Give me a heart to mourn and pray,
O kill in me this rebel ſin,
Reſtore thy image me within.
7 For theſe things I to thee do come;
Caſt me not out, ſince there is room,
Make good thy words, and hear my cries,
For on thy truth my ſoul relies.
8 O deareſt Lamb, didſt thou not bleed,
To purchaſe every thing we need?
Doth not thy blood ſtill run to heal
Diſtreſſed ſouls, their plagues who feel?
9 We feel our ſores, Lord, heal us ſoon,
And in us let thy will be done.
Praiſe Father, Son and holy Ghoſt,
One God in Chriſt, that ſaves the loſt.

SONG V.

A call to wonder at CHRIST'S SUFFERINGS, from LOVE to us.

1 BEhold Chriſt in a bloody ſweat,
Which all his garments ſtains!
See four wide wounds in's hands and feet,
When big nails pierc'd his veins!
2 Behold his ſoul oppreſſed ſore,
And in the greateſt pain!
How heavy was the wrath he bore,
Of which he did complain?
3 Yet, Lord, whilſt our ſins fill'd to thee
This bitter wrathful cup;
A bleſſed feaſt thou mad'ſt, that we Might at thy table ſup!
4 O friends of Chriſt draw near his throne,
To him thank off'rings bring,
For in his temple ev'ry one
Should of his glory ſing.
5 Let men him love; and ſin abhor,
Which caus'd him grief and pain,
Let all the angels ſtill adore
The Lamb for ſinners ſlain!
6 With warm affection, let us bleſs
Our great high Prieſt above,
And ev'ry day admire and praiſe
The wonders of his love!
7 From love he left his throne on high,
Lodg'd in a virgin's womb!
Love brought him to the croſs to die,
Love laid him in a tomb!
8 Love rais'd him up, and took him back,
To heaven to make us room!
From thence return he'll for our ſake,
In love to bring us home!
9 From love he wearies not to plead,
And ſhew his bleeding hands,
Since he hath juſtice ſatisfy'd,
Our freedom he demands.
10 Thy blood hath done all things for me,
I'll glory in thy croſs;
My beſt things I'll give up for thee,
I count them all but loſs.

SONG VI.

From 2 Sam. xxiii. 3.——7. Being a PROPHECY
CHRIST, and king DAVID'S SWAN SONG in the view of death.

1 A Ruler juſt o'er men ſhall riſe
In God's fear rule ſhall he,
As morning light ſprings from the ſkies,
So welcome ſhall he be.
2 Like riſing ſun he ſcatters all
The black ſhades of the night,
No clouds this morning darken ſhall,
refreſhing is its light.

3 He ſhall the frozen earth ſolace,
Like ſun ſhine after rain,
Whoſe warming beams revive the graſs,
And make all ſpring again.
4 I'm griev'd, all prove not good and juſt,
Who from my loins do ſpring;
But glad to ſee he ſprings from me,
That's Zion's bleſſed King.
5 A King that ſaves us from our foes,
In hearts rules by his might;
With his juſt laws let all men cloſe,
Obey him, it's his right.
6 Although my houſe be not with God
Such as it ought to be;
Yet he hath thro' Meſſia's blood,
A cov'nant made with me.
7 A covenant which life doth bring,
and evermore endure,
Well ordered in ev'ry thing,
With promiſes moſt ſure:
8 My heart's deſire is towards it,
'Tis my ſalvation,
Altho' he doth not come as yet
For to redreſs what's wrong.
9 But Belial's ſons who are his foes,
God ſmite them will in ire,
He'll them conſume who him oppoſe,
Like thorns burnt up with fire.

SONG VII.

The Saints TRIUMPH over death. From Job xix. 25. &c. 1 Cor. xv. 43, 53. Philip. iii. 21. Ezek. xvi. 14.

1 THough on me heavy trials come,
And death's ſtroke on me fall,
My faith and hope ſhall not ſuccumb,
But triumph o'er them all.
2 I know that my Redeemer lives,
Who pleads my cauſe with God,
To ſave each ſoul who him believes,
He comes to ſhed his blood,
3 Then for a while, he'll go away,
But will return again,
And on the earth, at latter day,
Stand with a glorious train.
4 Though in the grave my body fall,
And worms do it conſume.
Even ſkin and fleſh, blood, bones and all,
Yet death I'll overcome.
5 My Lord will raiſe me from the duſt,
He'll clothe my bones with fleſh,
I'll ſee my God whom now I truſt,
Which will my ſoul refreſh.
6 That fleſh which all conſumed was,
The very ſame ſhall riſe;
Yea, I will ſee Chriſt's lovely face,
With thoſe my very eyes.
7 Though for a time my duſt be loath'd,
Moſt beautiful I'll be,
My mortal body ſhall be cloth'd
With immortality.
8 Like Chriſt's own body will I ſhine,
With raiment white as light.
His comelineſs is ever mine:
This ev'ry ſaint makes bright.

SONG VIII.

CHRIST's ETERNAL LOVE to Mankind: From Prov. viii. 27. to the end.

1 WHen the creation was begun
By God's almighty hand,
Then, I, his own eternal Son,
Concurr'd in the command.
2 I joined to his counſels wiſe,
loſt mankind to redeem;
I was my Father's chief delight,
And I rejoic'd in him.
3 And in the earth when it for man
Was fram'd with divine art;
With pleaſure I foreſaw the church,
Its habitable part.
4 Before the light was made to ſhine,
My heart was ſet on man;
My thoughts, from all eternity,
On his ſalvation ran.
5 The foreſight of mens miſery,
Made me engage for them
To be their help; for my delights
Were with the ſons of men.
6 O children, then to me give ear;
They're bleſt my ways that chuſe:
Be wiſe and my inſtruction hear,
They're fools who it refuſe.
7 Bleſt is the man that hears my word,
And doth attend my gates;
Who watchfully looks for the Lord,
And at his door-poſts waits.
8 Bleſt is the man that findeth me,
With me he'll live above,
And have, through all eternity,
God's favour and his love.
9 But his own ſoul he doth injure,
Who ſlights my offers free;
And theſe who hate my precepts pure,
Court death eternallie.

SONG IX.

From Solomon's Song, chap. i. Being a Dialogue betwixt CHRIST and his SPOUSE.

SPOUSE.

1 LIke ſweeteſt ointment ſmells thy name,
Dear JESUS, unto me.
Hence virgin ſouls ſend out a flame
Of holy love to thee.
2 O draw me, and we'll run to thee;
Bleſt King, thou didſt me bring
Into thy chamber, hence will we
In thee rejoice and ſing.
3 More than the taſte of richeſt wine,
Thy love think on we will;
Moſt coſtly was thy love-deſign;
The upright love thee ſtill.
4 Tell me, good Shepherd, whom I love,
Where thy dear ſheep are fed;
Shew me the paths wherein they move,
And where they find a ſhade
5 Leave me not in a wand'ring courſe,
Like thoſe who loſe their way:

With flocks of thy competitors
Let me not go aſtray.

CHRIST.

6 Art thou bewild'red, my fair one,
And canſt not find thy reſt ?
Come follow my direction,
I'll ſhew thee what is beſt.
7 In footſteps of my flock go on,
The ſhepherds tents keep nigh ;
Thy kids and young ones bring along,
So thou ſhalt meet with me.

SPOUSE.

8 While at his table ſits the King,
My ſpikenard ſmelleth ſweet :
My graces languiſhing do ſpring,
With this Sun's quick'ning heat.
9 Dear Jeſus, as a bunch of myrrh,
Shall in thy boſom ly.
To lodge with me he'll not demur,
While nightly ſhades do ſtay.

SONG X.

From Song. ii. 1. to 9.

CHRIST.

1 I Am the Roſe of Sharon's field,
The Lily of the vale ;
I ſweetneſs and delight do yield,
When earthly glories fail.
2 As lilies ſhine amidſt the thorns,
So doth my love the bride ;
The daughters want what her adorns,
Though they live her beſide.

SPOUSE.

3 As th' apple tree doth far excel
The foreſt's barren growth ;
So my Love outſhines mortals all,
Though in their blooming youth.
4 Under his ſhade, with great delight,
I ſat down for to reſt :
I found ſolace, his heav'nly fruit
Was ſweet unto my taſte.
5 He brought me to his houſe of wine
My faintings to allay ;
The banner of his love divine
O'er me he did diſplay.
6 Bring ſtrength'ning flagons unto me,
With cordials from above ;
Fetch me ſweet apples from the tree,
For I am ſick of love.
7 When thus my fainting ſoul did cry
For grace me to uphold,
My tender hearted Lord drew nigh,
His arms me did infold.
8 All things without me and within,
I charge to ſtand in aw,
To wake or grieve my Love with ſin,
Leſt he from me withdraw.
9 Tho' griev'd, he doth return to me,
For lo ! his voice I hear,
O'er hills of guilt him leap I ſee,
My mourning ſoul to chear.
10 He haſtes to me like hart or roe,
Our dark walls he makes light ;
Thro' latteſſes himſelf doth ſhow,
With comelineſs moſt bright.

SONG XI.

From Song ii. 10 to the end.

CHRIST.

1 RIſe up, ſaid Chriſt, my faireſt one,
Come thou away to me ;
The winter-ſtorms of wrath are gone,
I bore them all for thee.
2 From barren ground the flow'rs do ſpring,
Men hear the turtle's voice ;
The drooping birds begin to ſing,
And ſad hearts to rejoice.
3 Young figs and grapes do now appear,
And yield a ſweet perfume ;
The heav'nly vine faint hearts doth cheer,
Riſe up, my love, and come.
4 My dove that lodgeſt in the rock,
In clefts of my deep wounds ;
And doſt to me in ſecret look
When in thee grief abounds :
5 Lift up thy face and voice to me ;
Theſe pleaſe mine eye and ear ;
Thy graces all I love to ſee,
Thy voice of pray'r to hear.
6 Take us the foxes, whoſe deſigns
Are vineyards to annoy,
The little foxes, which the vines
And tender grapes deſtroy

SPOUSE.

7 My Love is mine, my ſoul's delight,
And I am alſo his ;
Among his ſaints, theſe lilies white,
His place of feeding is :
8 There he abides till break of day,
When ſhadows all ſhall flee ;
Till then, come like a hart or roe,
O'er Bether hills to me.

SONG XII.

From Song iii. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 11.

SPOUSE.

1 ALL's dark when Jeſus hides his face,
Night ſhades fall me upon ;
Deſertion is a weary caſe,
When Chriſt my Love is gone.
2 On my bed I my loſs did mind,
I ſought him thus alone ;
My drowſy ſearch him did not find,
Vain was my ſlothful moan.
3 I'll riſe and round the city go,
Thro' ſtreets, broad-ways, and lanes ;
This way I ſought my Love, but lo !
Succeſsleſs were my pains.
4 The city watchmen found me out.
Their doctrine touch'd my caſe :
Ah, where's he ! Can you ſolve my doubt ?
None of them brought me eaſe.
5 When means and duties prov'd ſo weak,
Beyond them all I paſt :
When I ſome ſteps from them did make,
I found my Love at laſt.
6 I him embrac'd, and held him faſt,
Till once I got him brought
Into my mother's dwellings waſte,

To ſtrengthen what he wrought.
7 Since he's come in, I do you charge,
Who Salem's daughters are,
By roes and hinds which run at large,
Our joys you do not mar.
8 Let ſin or earth no motion make,
For to diſturb his reſt;
Let none preſume my love to wake,
Until it pleaſe him beſt.
9 O, Zion's daughters, all go forth,
Behold king Solomon,
Ev'n Chriſt our King, of higher worth,
Wearing his glorious crown;
10 Wherewith his mother crown'd his head,
On his eſpouſal day,
That day on which his heart was glad,
Him love and praiſe for ay.

SONG XIII.

From Song iv. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 16.

Chriſt.

1 Thou art all fair when in thy dreſs,
My love, thou'rt fair to me;
When clothed with my righteouſneſs,
No ſpot is ſeen in thee.
2 My ſpouſe, come off from Lebanon,
And mounts of vanitie:
Let all the world's deceits alone,
And come alongſt with me.
3 By faith look from Amana's top,
Shenir and Hermon fair;
From dens of prey, behold with hope
The land beyond compare.
4 My ſpouſe, thou doſt my love enhance,
And draw'ſt my heart to thee,
With thy neck chains, and with a glance
of thy believing eye.
5 Thy love to me more grateful is,
Than wine of any kind;
Thy graces more than fragrant ſpice
Acceptance with me find.
6 Thy lips drop ſweet; and from thy tongue
Do milk and honey flow:
Thy garments ſmell as Lebanon,
Which on thee I beſtow.
7 A garden fair, incloſ'd by grace,
My ſpouſe thou art to me;
I chus'd thee from the wilderneſs,
With fine ſprings furniſh'd thee.

Spouſe.

8 If I thy garden be, O Lord,
Cauſe heaven's wind awake,
Sweet quick'ning gales to me afford,
My graces lively make.
9 Sharp northern blaſts ſend to convince,
And cauſe the ſouth wind blow;
With breathings warm aſſiſt my mints,
and make my ſpices flow.
10 Then let my Love his preſence ſweet
Unto his garden grant,
That he may eat his pleaſant fruit,
Which he himſelf did plant.

SONG XIV.

From Song v. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Chriſt.

1 My ſpouſe, to anſwer thee I'm come
Into my garden fair;
My myrrh and ſpice of ſweet perfume,
With pleaſure I do ſhare.
2 On honey, wine, and milk I feaſt;
All friends, come eat with me,
And drink my wine of heav'nly taſte,
Yea, drink abundantlie.

Spouſe.

3 While Chriſt invites, my ſoul prevails;
Yet ſomething wakes in me,
To hearken to Chriſt's knocks and calls,
His voice ſpeaks preſſinglie.

Chriſt.

4 Open to me, my Father's child;
Open to me, my love;
Open to me, my undefil'd;
Open to me my dove.
5 From love I'm ſtanding at thy door,
Thy heart caſt open ſoon;
A midnight ſhow'r of wrath I bore,
To ſave thee when undone.

Spouſe.

6 I am undreſs'd, and reſt is ſweet,
From bed I cannot riſe;
How ſhall I now defile my feet?
Thus ſloth did me entice.
7 By the key-hole, my well-belov'd
His hand of pow'r put in;
So that my bowels all were mov'd,
For being ungrate to him.
8 When I rouz'd up, obey'd his knock,
My hands dropt pleaſantly
With oil of myrrh, left on the lock;
Which made the bolt to fly.
9 To my belov'd I open'd faſt,
Who to my grief was gone:
I fainted, when his ſpeeches paſt
I mournfully thought on.
10 I ſought him then with carefulneſs;
But found he could not be:
I call'd on him in this diſtreſs,
He did not anſwer me.
11 The watchmen who do go their rounds,
And keep the city wall,
Abus'd me, and did give me wounds,
And tore away my vail.

SONG XV.

A Dialogue betwixt the Spouſe and Daughters of Jeruſalem, from Song v. 8. to the end.

Spouſe.

1 O Salem's race, if you him find,
I charge you tell my caſe;
I'm ſick of love, ſore pain'd in mind,
He only can me eaſe.

Daughters.

2 O faireſt one, we fain would know
The object of thy love;

What charms he hath, that thou doſt ſo
Prize him all men above.

SPOUSE.

3 My love is white and ruddy too,
The chief of thouſands ten;
His innocence and ſuff'rings do
Him beautify to men.
4 His bleſſed head doth far excel
The gold that is moſt fine,
His locks are black and curled well,
They raven like do ſhine.
5 His eyes are like the eyes of doves,
When they in flocks are met
Near water-ſtreams, which they do love,
Milk-waſh'd and fitly ſet.
6 His cheeks are like the ſweeteſt flow'rs,
And beds where ſpices grow;
His lips like lilies are, from whence
Sweet-ſmelling myrrh doth flow.
7 As rings of gold with beryl ſet,
So do his hands appear;
His belly bright as ivory
O'erlaid with ſapphires clear.
8 His legs like marble pillars are,
Which on gold ſockets went,
Like Lebanon his face is fair,
As cedars excellent.
9 His mouth that makes ſweet promiſes,
To ev'ry ſaint is ſweet:
Yea, he all over lovely is,
View him from head to feet.
10 O daughters of Jeruſalem,
This is my Love and Friend,
For whom none can deviſe a name,
Or proper emblems find.

SONG XVI.

The DIALOGUE continued. Song vi.

DAUGHTERS.

1 O faireſt bride, we fain would know,
Where's thy beloved gone?
Tell us that we with thee may go,
To ſeek this matchleſs one.

SPOUSE.

2 My love is gone to heav'n above,
Yet doth he condeſcend
To come into his garden here,
And beds of ſpice attend.
3 In meetings of his ſaints he's found,
Theſe gardens of delight,
He's there to bring them rich ſupplies,
And gather lilies white.
4 To my beloved I belong,
And my belov'd to me;
To feed among the lilly flow'rs,
great pleaſure taketh he.

CHRIST.

5 O who is ſhe that looketh forth,
Like to the morning light?
When it darts out to chaſe away
The darkneſs of the night.
6 Fair as the moon, clear as the ſun,
With dazzling beams array'd;
Yet like an army terrible,
With banners all diſplay'd §.
7 She comes up from the wilderneſs,
She walks and always leans
On her beloved; for her heart
From all things elſe ſhe weans.

§ Chap. vi. 10.

SONG XVII.

CHRIST's ſufferings for us. From Iſa. liii.

1 WHO hath believ'd the faithful word,
Which we to men declare?
Who feels the arm of God the Lord
Diſplayed and made bare?
2 Meſſiah, like a weak plant grows,
A root from ground that's dry,
No outward beauty he aſſumes,
To draw the carnal eye.
3 Rejected and deſpiſ'd is he,
Thro' ſinners unbelief;
A man of ſorrows all his days,
And well acquaint with grief.
4 We hid our faces when he came,
To take our wrathful lot,
Deſpis'd he was and put to ſhame,
And we eſteem'd him not.
5 Of griefs and ſorrows all his time,
For us he bore the load;
But ah, we judg'd that for his crime,
He ſmitten was of God.
6 But he for our tranſgreſſions
Was wounded and abus'd,
His ſoul for our iniquities
Moſt grievouſly was bruis'd.
7 On him was laid our chaſtiſement,
By which our peace he ſeal'd;
Sharp bloody ſtripes he underwent,
Whereby our wounds are heal'd.
8 All we like ſheep from God have ſtray'd,
And did our own ways chuſe;
And theſe our ſins God on him laid,
Which love would not refuſe.
9 Oppreſs'd and wrong'd our Surety ſtood,
Accuſed of untruth;
To ſlaughter went he as a Lamb,
And open'd not his mouth.
10 Before the ſhearers, like a ſheep,
He dumb and ſilent lyes;
He meekly goes thro' waters deep,
Without repining cries.
11 His ſoul in trav'ling anguiſh lies,
His pains were multiply'd;
But when the bleſſed fruit he ſees
He was well ſatisfy'd.

SONG XVIII.

A THANKSGIVING for REDEEMING LOVE: From Rom. v. and Heb. xiii.

1 WHen we were deſtitute of ſtrength,
Ourſelves to help and ſave;
For the ungodly Chriſt at length,
His life a ranſom gave.
2 Scarce any for a righteous man
Will dare his life to ſtake;
And for a good man it were much

Such an exchange to make.
3 But God his matchleſs love commends,
When his moſt glorious Son
Dy'd for us while unrighteous,
Vile ſinners and undone.
4 Since by his blood Chriſt us from ſin
Doth juſtify and free,
Then ſurely from the wrath to come,
We ever ſafe ſhall be.
5 If Chriſt for enemies to God
Did die to end the ſtrife;
Much more when reconciled thus,
He'll ſave us by his life.
6 Yea more than ſo, we joy in God,
Thro' Jeſus Chriſt our Lord;
The great atonement we receive,
And ſo obey his word.
7 Now he that's Lord of quick and dead,
The God of love and peace,
That from the grave brought Chriſt our Head,
And him to life did raiſe;
8 Who, as the Shepherd great and good,
His life for us did grant,
And did eſtabliſh with his blood,
Th' eternal covenant;
9 May he in us his work fulfill,
Till he us perfect make,
Still ſtrengthning us to do his will
For our Redeemer's ſake;
10 And work in us what his word ſays,
Is pleaſing him before;
Through Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be praiſe,
And glory evermore.

SONG XIX.

MATCHLESS LOVE in the GIFT of CHRIST: From John iii. 14. to 17.

1 O Wondrous divine love to men!
When wrath 'gainſt us did ſwell,
God took our nature, bore our guilt,
To ſave our ſouls from hell.
2 As Moſes in the wilderneſs,
Did lift high on a pole
A brazen ſerpent, for ſtung men
To view and be made whole;
3 So Jeſus Chriſt the Antitype,
Was lifted up on high
Upon the croſs, that wounded ſouls
Might look and healed be.
4 And there, he ſays, who'er believes
In him unfeignedly,
Shall never periſh in their ſins,
But live eternally.
5 God lov'd the world ſo, as to give
His Son to dwell in clay,
And die, that all who in him truſt,
Might live with God for ay.
6 Good news! that Chriſt there twice declares,
All who in him believe
Are ſafe from hell, and ever ſhall,
With God in heaven live;
7 And that his Son God did not ſend
A loſt world to condemn;
But by his blood he did intend
To ſave condemned men.
8 Believers all with Chriſt live ſhall,
And ne'er condemned be;
The broken law he ſatisfy'd,
Them for to juſtify.
9 But vengeance juſt for ever lies
On all the rebel race,
Who God's eternal Son diſpiſe,
And ſcorn his offer'd grace.
10 Obey Chriſt's call who ſaves the loſt,
Serve God that's One in Three;
To Father, Son and holy Ghoſt,
Give praiſe eternally.

SONG XX.

GOD's LOVE in CHRIST unalterable: From Rom. viii. 31. to the end.

1 GOD's love in Chriſt tranſcends our thoughts,
In ſaving men from woe;
If God's for us, and ſtands our friend,
Who then can be our foe?
2 Since God for us ſpar'd not his Son,
But gave him up to die;
His leſſer gifts he'll not refuſe,
Nor ought that's good deny.
3 Who ſhall God's elect ones arraign,
Whom God hath juſtify'd?
Or who ſhall dare thoſe to condemn,
For whom this Surety dy'd?
4 Chriſt dy'd for us; yea, in his love,
He roſe up for our ſake,
And doth at God's right hand for us
Still interceſſion make.
5 Who from Chriſt's love ſhall us divide?
Shall trouble or diſtreſs?
Shall perſecution or the ſword,
Famine or nakedneſs?
6 Nay, o'er all theſe we triumph ſhall,
With the celeſtial pow'rs;
Thro' Jeſus Chriſt's victorious love,
We're more than conquerors.
6 I am perſuaded, death, nor life,
Nor principalities;
Nor finite pow'rs, nor preſent things,
Nor yet futurities:
8 No height, no depth, no creature ſhall
Diſſolve the twiſted cord
Of mutual love 'twixt God and us,
In Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.
9 Unchangeable is love divine,
Time makes it not decay;
For theſe whom once the Lord doth love,
He them doth love for ay.
10 From love, great mercies us thou giv'ſt,
But one we'll ſing of ſtill;
Eternal thanks to God for Chriſt,
His Gift unſpeakable.

SONG XXI.

THANKSGIVING for GOD's free love in and through CHRIST, from Eph. i. 3. &c. Eph. iii. 18. &c.

1 BLeſt be Chriſt's God, and Father dear,
For all our heavenly fare;

In Chriſt he hath enriched us,
With ſp'ritual bleſſings rare.
2 In love he choſe us in his Son,
Before the world he made,
To make us blameleſs holy men,
Like Chriſt our holy Head.
3 Predeſtinate us of his grace,
By Jeſus Chriſt did he,
To be adopted children all,
In his own family;
4 That all the praiſe might ſtill redound
To glorious grace alone;
The Lord hath us accepted made,
In his beloved Son:
5 In whom, thro' his moſt precious blood,
We have redemption free,
Even full remiſſion of our ſins,
That rich grace all might ſee.
6 In wiſdom God makes grace to us
Flow out abundantly,
That grace may be our laſting ſong,
To all eternity.
7 May we be graſping with the ſaints,
Chriſt's love to comprehend,
Whoſe breadth and length, and depth and height
Do boundleſly extend;
8 And preſs to know that wondrous love
Which knowledge all exceeds,
That from his fulneſs we may have
Supply to all our needs.
9 Now unto God who can do more,
Than we can aſk or think,
According to his mighty power,
That took us from hell's brink.
10 All glory in the church by Chriſt,
To him be rend'red then,
Thro' ages all for evermore;
Let all men ſay Amen.

SONG XXII.

Our HOPE is in CHRIST'S RIGHTEOUSNESS, and in being with him: From Phil. iii. 7. &c. 2 Cor. v. 1. &c.

1 THeſe things I heretofore thought gain,
And of them made my boaſt,
For Chriſt that doth me juſtify,
I gave them up for loſt.
2 Yea, doubtleſs, 'tis my fixt reſolve,
To count all things but loſs,
That I the excellence may know,
Of Jeſus and his croſs.
3 All worldly things for him I've loſt,
I them as dung eſteem,
That I may Chriſt my treaſure win,
And ſafe be found in him.
4 My righteouſneſs as rags I quit,
I plead what Chriſt hath done;
This righteouſneſs which God ordains,
By faith I take alone.
5 May I know Jeſus in that power,
Which rais'd him from the grave,
That with him in his ſufferings,
I fellowſhip may have;
6 And being conform'd to his death,
By dying unto ſin;
A reſurrection bleſt from death,
I may obtain thro' him.
7 Yea, now we know if this clay houſe
Diſſolv'd were of the field,
An heavenly houſe we have on high,
Which God himſelf doth build.
8 With ſtrong deſires we therefore groan,
That to us it were giv'n,
To know that bleſs, and be new cloth'd
With our pure houſe in heav'n.
9 We walk by faith and not by ſight,
And hence we often ſay,
Content we would the body leave,
And dwell with Chriſt for ay.
10 Faith's views of Chriſt prompt us to ſeek,
And make it ſtill our care,
That whether here or with our Lord,
Of his love we may ſhare.

SONG XXIII.

A THANKSGIVING for the FRUITS of CHRIST'S RESURRECTION: From 1 Pet. i. 3, 4 &c.

1 FOR ever bleſſed be the God,
And Father of our Lord,
Whoſe mercy doth to us abound,
According to his word:
2 Who hath begotten us again
Unto a lively hope,
By Chriſt his riſing from the dead,
Of faith the bleſſed prop.
3 For by it we are well ſecur'd
Of an inheritance,
That's not corrupted nor defil'd,
Nor fades by any chance;
4 Which is for us in heav'n reſerv'd,
And we are kept for it,
By the almighty power of God,
Thro' faith, till we be fit
5 For that ſalvation glorious,
To be reveal'd at laſt,
Of which we wait to be poſſeſt,
When time and days are paſt.
6 In this bleſt hope we do rejoice,
Tho' for a time we need,
Here to be kept in heavineſs,
Thro' trials multiplied.
7 Our faith more precious than gold,
By fire is tried here,
That unto praiſe it may be found,
When Jeſus doth appear.
8 This Jeſus, though unſeen, we love,
In him believing ſtill;
Which yields us joy unſpeakable,
That is of glory full.
9 When Jeſus comes, we ſhall receive
The bleſt end of our faith;
Ev'n the ſalvation of our ſouls,
Procur'd us by his death.

SONG XXIV.

The SON of GOD manifeſted: From 1 John iii. 1, 2, &c.

1 BEhold how matchleſs is that love!
The Father hath beſtow'd

On men, that we ſhould be adopt,
And call'd the ſons of God!
2 His image he makes us to bear,
As ſons of heav'nly birth;
This dignity exalts us far
Above the kings on earth.
3 Tho' now the world us doth not know,
As Chriſt it never knew;
Yet God doth own us as his ſons,
We're chang'd and born anew.
4 And what we ſhall hereafter be,
It doth not yet appear;
But this we know, when Chriſt ſhall come,
We ſhall his likeneſs bear:
5 For we ſhall ſee him as he is,
And like him ſhine full bright:
We then come near our glorious Sun,
From whom we have our light.
6 As Chriſt is holy, ſo muſt we,
All who hope for that hour;
Themſelves will alſo purifie,
As he the Lord is pure.
7 Let's here, as ſtrangers, follow peace,
And walk with one accord;
And always ſtudy holineſs,
As we would ſee the Lord.
8 No eye hath ſeen, no ear hath heard,
No heart can things above
Conceive, which Jeſus hath prepar'd
For them who do him love.

SONG XXV.

The glorious TRINITY adored, and CHRIST's LOVE extolled: From Rev. i. 4, 5, &c. Rev. iv. 8, &c.

1 MAY we have grace and peace from God,
The glorious One in Three,
Who us created and redeem'd,
And us doth ſanctifie:
2 Ev'n from the Father who ſtill was,
Who is, and ſtill ſhall be,
And from the ſev'nfold working Sp'rit,
Before his throne on high;
3 From Jeſus Chriſt the witneſs true,
And firſt-born from the dead,
Who of all earthly kings and powers
Is Prince and ruling Head;
4 To this great Lord, that ſo lov'd men,
Such lothſome men as we,
As waſh us in his precious blood,
Our ſouls from ſin to free.
5 To him, who made us kings and prieſts,
To God his Father high;
Be glory and dominion,
Through all eternity.
6 Behold he comes with flying clouds,
Him every eye ſhall ſee,
And unbelievers who him pierc'd,
Shall wail moſt bitterlie.
7 But let believers lift their heads
With joy, to ſee and hear,
For then complete redemption
To them is very near.
8 The hoſts above their homage pay,
And crowns caſt to the ground,
They never ceaſe by night nor day,
Theſe praiſes to reſound;
9 "O holy, holy, holy Lord,
Almighty God alone,
"Who ever was, and alſo is,
And ever is to come!
10 All glory, pow'r, and honour ſtill,
Thou'rt worthy to receive;
All things were made to pleaſe thy will,
And by thy pleaſure live.
11 Moſt worthy Lamb, art thou, they ſing,
To be adored thus;
Let with thy praiſe heav'n's manſions ring,
For thou waſt ſlain for us.

SONG XXVI.

The LAMB that was ſlain eternally exalted: From Rev. v.

1 THE heavenly hoſts and elders join,
To bow before the Lamb,
With golden harps and ſweeteſt tunes,
They trumpet forth his fame.
2 They cry, "O Father, who ſhall look "Into thy ſecret will?
"Worthy the Lamb to take the book,
"And open ev'ry ſeal.
3 "Thou'rt fit God's myſt'ries to reveal,
"For thou waſt ſlain for us,
"And thy blood purchas'd us to God,
"Which thou ſhed'ſt on the croſs.
4 "From ev'ry nation, kindred, tongue,
"Thy precious blood us bought;
"Well thou deſerv'ſt our praiſing ſongs,
"Who us ſalvation brought.
5 "Unto the Lamb that once was ſlain,
"Be endleſs praiſes giv'n,
"By all that dwell upon the earth,
"And all the hoſts of heav'n.
6 "Thou haſt us ranſom'd with thy blood,
"And ſet us pris'ners free;
"Thou mak'ſt us kings and prieſts to God
And we ſhall reign with thee."
7 Let's join while here, our chearful ſongs,
With hoſts around the throne,
Ten thouſand thouſands are their tongues,
Yet all agres in one.
8 "Worthy the Lamb that dy'd, they cry,
"To be exalted thus,
"Worthy the Lamb, let us reply,
"For he was ſlain for us.
9 "The Lamb is worthy to receive "Strength, wiſdom, riches, might,
"Eternal honours we aſcribe
"To him, for 'tis his right.
10 "Let heav'n and earth unite in one
"To praiſe the glorious name,
"Of him that ſits upon the throne,
"And to adore the Lamb.

SONG XXVII.

A View of the SAINTS and MARTYRS in Heaven: From Rev. vii.

1 LET's view by faith the ſaints above,
Redeem'd from ſin by Jeſu's love,

Their various tribes, their ſweet employ,
In raptures of eternal joy.
2 The patriarchs, with Jacob's race,
Rais'd up to heav'n by God's free grace,
With ſongs they praiſe their father's God,
Who led them home the heav'nly road.
3 Next, ſee a num'rous multitude,
Redeem'd from hell by Jeſu's blood,
From ev'ry nation, kindred, tongue,
Who ſing an everlaſting ſong.
4 In white robes cloth'd they all do ſtand,
With palms of triumph in their hand:
" Salvation to God on the throne,
" They cry, and to the Lamb his Son."
5 Next theſe, come angels, and fall down,
Humbly adoring Three in One;
" They cry, Amen, give glory, pow'r,
" And thanks to God for evermore.
6 But whence come theſe in white who ſhine
All cloth'd with righteouſneſs divine?
Theſe come from ſuff'rings great to God,
Their robes they waſh'd in the Lamb's blood.
7 The martyrs trials now are o'er,
They ſee God's face for evermore;
The Lamb makes ſure their heav'nly bleſs;
They've ſaid, He's ours, and we are his.
8 No more the heat ſhall them torment
Of ſcorching ſun they've no complaint;
The Lamb, who ſhines amidſt the throne,
Shall be their everlaſting Sun.
9 To Father, Son and holy Ghoſt,
One God, who ſaved us when loſt,
Be everlaſting glory giv'n,
By all on earth, and all in heaven.

SONG XXVIII.

CHRIST's Victory and BABYLON's Downfall: From Rev. xvii. and Rev. xv. &c.

1 BEhold, an angel doth deſcend
With power and glory great,
To earth he comes for a good end,
Bleſt tidings to relate?
2 " Great Babylon that did enthral
" The kingdoms of the earth,
" The time is come for her to fall,
" Which calls for holy mirth.
3 " Let heav'ns be glad, with all the ſaints,
" Let prophets all rejoice;
" God doth avenge your long complaints;
" With praiſe lift up your voice.
4 " A milſtone's caſt by Gabriel,
" And in the ſea is drown'd;
" Thus terribly ſhall Babel fall,
" And never more be found."
5 Upon the ſea of glaſs they ſtand,
The beaſt who overcome,
With harps of God into their hand,
To celebrate her doom.
6 Theſe conquerors do meet in throngs,
And to Jehovah's name,
They pleaſantly unite the ſongs
Of Moſes and the Lamb.
7 By Moſes hand, the enemie
Did ſink deep in the flood;
So drown'd our ſins are in the ſea
Of Jeſu's precious blood.
8 The conquerors with fluent tongues,
Chriſt's honour will proclaim,
In ſweeter notes than Moſes' ſongs,
They'll tune thoſe of the Lamb.
9 All nations ſhall to thee bow down,
And worſhip rev'rently,
When once thy judgments are made known,
Againſt thine enemy.
10 The hoſts of God with one conſent,
Shall hallelujahs ſing;
When the Lord God omnipotent,
Takes his great pow'r to reign.
11 At length will end the devil's reign,
Over the ſons of men;
Let heav'n and earth rejoice and ſing,
With all that dwell in them.

SONG XXIX.

The GOOD NEWS of the RANSOM of CHRIST's BLOOD.

1 GReat pity God ſhews,
To Gentiles and Jews;
He ſent them his goſpel, to bring them good news.
Good news to the loſt,
With racking fears toſs'd,
That found is a Ranſom in which they may boaſt.
2 A Ranſom of blood,
That runs like a flood,
Their ſins off to carry, who God's law withſtood.
News! that Chriſt was ſo kind,
When hell's pow'rs combin'd,
To rout them, he freely his dear life reſign'd.
3 Blood ſtream'd from his ſide,
T' atone for our pride;
Sin was the tormentor that him crucify'd.
When we have him view'd,
With his blood imbru'd,
May we by this proſpect get all ſin ſubdu'd!
4 What ſight do we ſee?
Chriſt ſtretch'd on the tree,
For rebels as we are moſt willing to die!
Pains dreadful he felt,
O let our hearts melt
For ſin that did pierce him, when he bore our guilt.
5 Since for ſins of men,
God's dear Lamb was ſlain,
Hard muſt the man's heart be, that yet feels no pain
When the ſun did faint,
And hardeſt rocks rent,
Shall we be ſo ſtubborn, as never relent!
6 Our glorious Head,
Our victim was made,
To heal us when wounded, his blood all he ſhed.
In our place he ſtood,
And pour'd out his blood,
Yea, gives us free acceſs to that healing flood.
7 Chriſt's feaſt we'll attend,
And his love commend,
We'll think on his ſuff'rings, till our hearts do rend
His wounds I'll not view,
Like a harden'd Jew,
But when ſet before me, my grief I'll renew.

SONG XXX.

The news of CHRIST's PIERC'D FEET: From Iſa. lii. 7.

1 HOW beautiful upon the mount!
Were Chriſt's feet pierc'd on our account,
Where he was crucify'd!
His feet tho' nailed to the tree,
Swift tidings bring to you and me,
God's wrath is pacify'd.
2 Tidings that Chriſt has purchas'd peace,
With treaſures full of needful grace,
To ſupply all our wants.
Good news! that he hath purchas'd room,
For ev'ry needy ſoul to come,
To ſit and feaſt with ſaints.
3 Were men at God's bar ſtrictly try'd,
None living could be juſtify'd,
All would be guilty found.
From juſtice throne we ſinners fly,
To Chriſt our bleeding Prieſt on high,
Where mercy doth abound.
4 In Chriſt's the proper mercy ſeat,
Where we with God may humbly treat,
In him God's ſatisfy'd.
His blood hath juſtice reconcil'd,
Its flaming ſword hath quit the field,
Juſtice is on our ſide.
5 Now God his friendlyneſs to prove,
Invites us to a feaſt of love,
A rich and coſtly feaſt:
To partake of the rareſt food.
Pardon and peace thro' his Son's blood,
Which angels ne'er did taſte.
6 Lord, ſin the murderer here ſtands,
That pierc'd thy heart, thy feet and hands;
For which I mourn and grieve.
Lord, give a ſtrong courageous faith,
To doom each darling luſt to death,
Sin ſhall no longer live.
7 This foe my Saviour betray'd,
It bound and hawl'd him to be try'd,
And rais'd the furious cry,
To crucify the Lord our Head:
But, good news! he roſe from the dead,
And pleads for us on high.

SONG XXXI.

The LAMB's BATTLE and VICTORY.

1 THE Lamb fought for me,
My foes vanquiſh'd he;
The lion he conquer'd, when nail'd to the tree.
The Lamb when he fought,
Great victory brought;
Our freedom from bondage to Satan he wrought,
2 The Lamb for us dy'd,
He was crucify'd;
Yet, when at the loweſt, hell's pow'rs he defy'd.
He lay in the grave,
Our loſt ſouls to ſave;
Yet roſe as our Champion, moſt valiant and brave.
3 He fought and he fell,
Yet overcame hell;
He conquer'd and triumph'd, for ſuch as rebel.
He roſe for our ſake;
And did the earth ſhake,
The devils and keepers to tremble did make.
4 The rocks they did rend;
Him angels attend,
He taught his diſciples, till he did aſcend.
He went up in might,
With chariots of light;
A cloud him received, out of his friends ſight.
5 Above he did land,
Sits on God's right hand,
Our high Prieſt and Sov'reign, all things to command.
There he pleads on high,
Loud doth his blood cry,
For pardon to ſinners, who to him do fly.
6 The Lamb's Judge of all,
The dead he will call,
All muſt ſtand before him, be they great or ſmall,
His mercy is great,
His blood paid our debt,
He will then abſolve us, when judgment is ſet.
7 Of Chriſt that did die,
But now reigns on high,
Our ſongs with ſweet muſic, we'll ſpread thro' the ſky.
With both hearts and tongues,
We'll ſing the Lamb's ſongs,
Let ev'ry ſoul join us that to him belongs.

SONG XXXII.

CHRIST's SUFFERINGS and his LOVE to BELIEVING SOULS.

1 WHen Jeſus pour'd out blood and tears,
A ſinking load of wrath he bears,
God's Juſtice to appeaſe.
A bloody robe for us he wore,
His ſoul in pain did travel ſore,
And all to bring us eaſe.
2 The plowers his dear back did plow,
Their ſcourges here long furrows drew,
In which his blood did run.
They him expos'd to all diſgrace,
They ſpat upon his bleſſed face,
His love this did not ſhun.
3 He bore our curſe and puniſhment,
Shed blood till every drop was ſpent,
To ranſom us from wrath.
Who can his love enough commend?
That ſaves all criminals condemn'd,
Who look to him by faith?
4 From ſin and wrath thou doſt relieve,
The chief of ſinners, who believe,
Thy wounds do them incloſe:
Their ſouls in theſe thy people hide,
And there they conſtantly abide,
Safe from their deadly foes.
5 A ſkreen from wrath, I know of none,
But Jeſu's righteouſneſs alone;
Which covers all our ſin.
Strict trial this can well endure.
For it is infinitely pure,
No flaw is found therein.
6 Thou, when on earth the ſick didſt heal,
And to the hungry bread didſt deal,
Our ſouls when ſtarving feed:

More precious they are than clay;
Lord Jeſus, pity ſouls this day,
And ſatisfy our need.
7 Believers are by thee belov'd;
A kingdom, ne'er to be remov'd,
Shall unto them be giv'n.
Rich crowns on them thou wilt beſtow,
No matter what they want below,
They'll be made up in heav'n.

SONG XXXIII.

CHRIST's GREAT SUFFERINGS bring GREAT BENEFIT to us.

1 THE Lamb ſilent ſtood,
While men ſhed his blood!
Himſelf he gave freely, to be our ſouls food.
Crown'd he was with thorn,
Us'd with ſpite and ſcorn,
Yet patiently bore it, to ſave the forlorn,
2 Expoſed he ſtands,
With nail'd feet and hands,
Deep pierced, long bleeding, to pay law's demands,
No man's tongue can tell,
What grief him befell,
In ſaving loſt ſinners from ſinking to hell.
3 He was doom'd to die,
On mount Calvary,
Sore preſs'd he did utter his laſt bitter cry.
Our guilt which he bore,
Squeez'd blood from each pore,
Great was his ſoul's torture, that made him to roar.
4 His wounds bring us peace,
His pains give us eaſe
From ſin's pow'r and bondage they do us releaſe.
Chriſt ſtraying ſouls ſought,
Their pardon he bought,
From ſatan's vile ſlav'ry their freedom he wrought.
5 Lord, thy love's divine,
It doth kindle mine,
O let it cauſe in me all graces to ſhine.
Dead ſouls to revive,
When they life derive,
From thy wounds the fountain, that makes men alive.
6 I'm ſinful and vile,
My heart's full of guile,
It will be free mercy, if on me thou ſmile.
Lord, do not deſpiſe,
My ſoul's feeble cries,
Receive a loſt ſinner, that to thy blood flies.
7 This blood ſaves from hell,
And fears doth diſpel,
The thunders of Sinai, the Lamb's blood doth quell
I plead thy free grace,
One ſmile of thy face,
Or word to be ſpoken, would fill me with peace.

A LECTURE on 1 Cor. xi. 17. to the end, concerning the inſtitution of the LORD's SUPPER.

Verſe 17. Now in this that I declare unto you, I praiſe you not, that you come together, not for the better, but for the worſe.
18. For firſt of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear that there be diviſions among you; and I partly believe it.
19. For there muſt be alſo hereſies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifeſt among you.

IN this paſſage the apoſtle takes occaſion to reprove the great diſorders and abuſes crept in among them in adminiſtrating and partaking of the Lord's ſupper; which (as the ancients tell us) was commonly adminiſtrate with a love feaſt annexed to it, which gave occaſion to the ſcandalous diſorders here reprehended.

Verſe 17. We have the manner of his introducing the charge, Now in this that I declare unto you, I praiſe you not, &c. Which ſhews his willingneſs to commend them ſo far as he could. But ſuch ſcandalous diſorders as they are guilty of in ſo ſacred an inſtitution, he could not paſs without a ſharp reproof. Why? They inverted the very end and deſign of the ordinance, which was intended to make them better, or to promote their ſpiritual intereſts, but it really made them worſe. Wherefore he ſays, they come together not for the better but for the worſe.

Obſerve. 1. That Chriſt's ordinances if they do not make us better, the are apt to make us worſe.—If they do us no good, they may do us harm; if they do not melt and mend, they will harden; and that corruptions will be confirmed in us, if the proper means do not work a cure of them. 2. It concerns us all to enquire into the ſucceſs of ordinances and ſolemn meetings. O it is ſad, if our meetings tend to the increaſe of our ſin, inſtead of the increaſe of our grace. Let us earneſtly deprecate this.

Verſe 18. For firſt of all, when ye come together in the church, I hear there be diviſions among you, &c. They fell into diviſions, ſects, parties, and factions, in their celebrating of this ordinance; they fell a quarreling one with another about meats and drinks in the love feaſts, or about the order of their down-ſitting, or the time when they ſhould begin, or did not ſtay till they all came up. The whole church did not join together, but they eat it ſeparately; there was alſo uncharitableneſs, alienations of affections, diſcord and contentions among them, which very much marred their edification and ſucceſs of the goſpel.

Queſt. Seeing ſchiſms are mentioned here, what is meant thereby? Who are guilty of ſchiſm, and who are ſchiſmaticks? Anſw. In ſcripture the word is variouſly taken: 1. It is taken for a difference in opinions and ſentiments about ſome points, when there is no heat of contention, or breach of communion. Such a diviſion or ſchiſm was among the Phariſees, about Chriſt's curing the blind man, John x. 16. it is ſaid, 'there was a diviſion among them,' originally ſchiſma. And ſuch ſchiſms may be among orthodox divines about leſſer points, and yet managed without giving offence. 2. The general ſenſe of the word is, a dividing and breaking off from the communion of the church in public ordinances, without cauſe, like theſe, Heb. x. 25. Not forſaking the aſſembling of ourſelves together, as the manner of ſome is. And in this ſenſe the ancients take ſchiſm as diſtinguiſhed from hereſy. Auguſtine ſaith, Schiſmaticos facit non diverſa fides, ſed communionis diſrupta ſocietas. 3. In this place, and commonly in other places of ſcripture, as 1 Cor. i. 10. 1 Cor. iii. 4. 1 Cor. xii. 25. the word ſchiſma is taken for uncharitable, contentious and diviſive practices among the profeſſors of the goſpel, without breaking off from the communion of the church; when people are chargeable with uncharitable contentions and diſcords, and alienation of affections from their brethren; for here they came together, and yet were ſchiſmaticks.

Obſerve, There may be ſchiſm, where there is no ſeparation of communion. Perſons may attend ordinances together, and ſit together at the Lord's table, and be yet ſchiſmaticks in ſcripture ſenſe, by reaſon of their uncharitable contentions, and alienation of affections: Whereas Chriſtians may ſeparate from one anothers communion, and yet be charitable towards one another; and this is not ſo much ſchiſm in ſcripture ſenſe, as to be uncharitable and contentious.

The apoſtle had had a report of the diviſions, which he did the more eaſily believe; becauſe he knew there behoved not only to be diviſions but hereſies alſo, that is, falſe doctrines, more dangerous than ſchiſms; for hereſies are corrupt opinions which ſtrike at the foundamentals of Chriſtianity and all ſound religion. Hereſy, according to the modern ſenſe of the word, is an error in the foundamentals of religion maintained with obſtinacy; though we cannot ſay the word neceſſarily imports ſuch a ſtrong ſenſe in this place, hereſy and ſchiſm ſometimes being ſynonymous terms.

Obſerv. 1. We have no cauſe to wonder that there ſhould be breaches of Chriſtian love in the church, when we know ſuch offences will come as ſhall make ſhipwreck of faith and a good conſcience.

Queſt. How ſays the apoſtle, Hereſies muſt come? What neceſſity is there for them? Anſw. There is no neceſſity of force upon any man to broach them, any further than his own corruption, pride, vain glory, envy or contentious ſpirit, or ſatan's temptation promotes him to it. But the event is certain, becauſe of God's decree permitting them, who by his wiſdom orders them for wiſe ends, that they who are approved, may be made manifeſt, by their conſtant adhering to the truth againſt all the temptations of ſeducers.

Obſerv. 2. A time of temptation and ſeduction is a time of trial and diſcovery, who are ſincere and conſtant adherers to the truths and ways of God, and who not.

Obſerv. 3. It is a pleaſure to God to ſee the faith and conſtancy of his upright ones diſcovered to the world.

Obſerv. 4. The wiſdom of God can make the errors and wickedneſs of others a foil to the piety and integrity of the ſaints.

Verſe 20. When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's ſupper.

21. For in eating every one taketh before other his own ſupper; and one is hungry, and another is drunken.

The Heathens uſed to eat and drink plentifully at their feaſts upon their ſacrifices; and this profane cuſtom was creeping in among the wealthier Corinthians. Many think the apoſtle was pointing here at their Agamai, or love-feaſts, that in theſe times either preceded or followed the Lord's ſupper; and they are called love-feaſts, becauſe they were deſigned to manifeſt their love to their fellow Chriſtians both poor and rich, and the poor carried away what was left at them: And alſo they had them to repreſent our Lord's laſt ſupper, in which he eat the paſchal lamb before he inſtituted that ordinance now called the Lord's ſupper. Theſe love feaſts were founded on no command of Chriſt, but came in by cuſtom, and by the Jews who became Chriſtians. Theſe would needs have an appendix or appurtenance of the Lord's ſupper; and in imitation of Chriſt's eating the paſchal lamb before the Lord's ſupper, would have a feaſt or ſupper of their own to precede the Lord's ſupper; and having provided it at home, would needs bring it to the place where the church met. To this feaſt all the poor were invited at the charges of the rich as an expreſſion of their perfect love and charity one towards another. But in this church great abuſes crept in, in this practice; the poor Chriſtians were neglected and deſpiſed. The rich did either not invite them, or did not wait for them: But the rich haſted to eat what they had brought with them, and ſome of them eat and drank to exceſs, ſo that one was hungry, another was drunken. The apoſtle inveighs againſt this practice, as turning a feaſt of charity into a debauch, and as that which made them incapable to partake of the Lord's ſupper. This was a ſcandalous irregularity, a profaning a ſacred inſtitution, and corrupting a divine ordinance to the laſt degree. What ſhould have been a bond of mutual amity and affection, was made an inſtrument of diſcord and diſunion.

Obſerv. 1. Duties not done as they ought, are not done at all in Chriſt's account.—Or a careleſs eating and drinking the Lord's ſupper is as good as none, yea worſe than no eating. So prayers may be made, yet not made; ſacraments received, yet not received. Alms given, yet not given, becauſe not done in the manner and form required by God.

Obſerv. 2. A ſincere ſoul muſt and will look not only to the matter of the duty, but alſo to the manner of performing it.

Obſerv. 3. It is an heinous evil for Chriſtians to treat their fellow Chriſtians with contempt and inſolence, eſpecially at the Lord's table. For the rich to deſpiſe the poor, this is a great evil.

Obſerv. 4. That even in the apoſtolical and primitive times, great diſorders and irregularities had crept into the church; and that there is no church without ſpot in this imperfect ſtate.

Obſerv. 5. That the apoſtle, notwithſtanding of theſe, doth not direct the one part of the Corinthians to ſeparate from the other; but he only reproves and rectifies their abuſes. He doth not ſay, withdraw from ſuch perſons, for they will pollute the ordinance to you. No, if they be polluted, it is to themſelves, and not to others. He eats and drinks damnation to himſelf. Every man ſhall bear his own burden. Wherefore, ſays he, Let a man examine himſelf, not his neighbour. The apoſtle doth not encourage ſeparation upon that ground, that there were ſcandalous perſons admitted in Corinth, even ſome drunk about the time of partaking, which might be the occaſion of their divided way of communicating. But he reproves their divided communicating, and charges them to come together to the Lord's ſupper, and tarry for one another. He indeed ſharply reproves their ſcandalous practice, and tells them that it was moſt hazardful to themſelves to communicate unworthily, but ſpeaks of no danger to others. He commands them to examine themſelves, and ſo to eat, but not to examine their fellow communicants which certainly he had done, if their joining with them had made them partakers of their ſin and danger.

Verſe 22. What, have ye not houſes to eat and to drink in? or deſpiſe ye the church of God, and ſhame them that have not? What ſhall I ſay to you? ſhall I praiſe you in this? I praiſe you not.

The apoſtle here doth condemn both the abuſes of thoſe feaſts, and alſo their keeping them in the place where the church met. Some underſtand the church, of the houſe wherein the church met, and call their feaſting there a profaning or unhallowing the place ſet apart for divine worſhip. Others underſtand it of the people or poor members there met. Why do ye deſpiſe them? by excluding them from your company, becauſe of their poverty; and ſo ye put them to ſhame, whom God has adopted, and admitted into his family. This feaſt was originally deſigned for the poor's relief, and ye exclude them from it.

Obſ. 1. The deſpiſing of the poor members of the church, is a deſpiſing of the church itſelf, yea, Chriſt the Head of the church, as he that pincheth the little toe, paineth the whole body, and the head too.

Obſ. 2. With what lenity and mildneſs the apoſtle reproves theſe great diſorders, Shall I praiſe you? It was the firſt time he had told them of their faults, in hopes of amendment, and therefore doth it gently; and ſome think this gentle way of reproof had the due effect, becauſe no fault is taxed in the ſecond epiſtle that was reproved in the firſt.

Verſe 23. For I have received of the Lord that which I alſo delivered unto you, that the Lord Jeſus, the ſame night in which he was betrayed took bread.

24. And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and ſaid take, eat; this is my body, which is broken for you: This do in remembrance of me.

25. After the ſame manner alſo he took the cup, when he had ſupped, ſaying, this cup is the New Teſtament in my blood; this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do ſhew the Lord's death till he come.

After reproving their diſorders he reduces them to the primitive inſtitution, and tells them, how he came by the knowledge of it, ſeeing he was not among the apoſtles at the firſt inſtitution. It was by revelation from Chriſt; and what he had received of the Lord, he communicated to them without varying from the truth in the leaſt, without adding or diminiſhing. As if he had ſaid, "As for theſe love feaſts preceding the Lord's ſupper, "I received nothing from the Lord; you have borrowed "them from Jews or Heathens: But all that I received "from the Lord concerning the Lord's ſupper, I here "ſet before you" And indeed he gives a more particular account of the inſtitution than we meet with elſewhere.

1. We have the Author of it, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Obſ. It is an act of Chriſt's royal power and authority, as King and Head of the church, to inſtitute ſacraments. The church hath no power to appoint ſuch, but only to execute and adminiſter what Chriſt appoints: And as it is Chriſt's ordinance, we ſhould have a ſpecial regard to it, and not profane or neglect it.

2. We have the time of the inſtitution, The ſame night in which he was betrayed; when he was entering on his ſoul ſufferings in the garden, and going next day to the croſs; a night much to be remembered, being the laſt night before Chriſt's death: The night wherein he began his bitter agonies, and ſwate the bloody ſweat for us; a night, wherein he ſaw heaven, earth and hell, even juſtice, men and devils, drawn up in a battle array againſt him. A wondrous inſtance of his love, in ſpending ſo much of that little time he had in the world (when he ſeemed to have more need to mind himſelf) in ſettling an ordinance for the confirmation and conſolation of his people, to the end of the world. Whatever come of himſelf his people muſt not be forgot.—Obſerve from the time of the inſtitution, the night before his ſuffering, that it is very neceſſary when ſufferings are approaching, to have recourſe to the Lord's table, which affords both an antidote againſt fear, and a reſtorative and cordial to faith. Wherefore Chriſt for our example, communicated with his diſciples the night before he ſuffered.

3. We have the ſacramental elements, or the memorative, ſignificative and inſtructive ſigns, bread and wine.

4. The things ſignified thereby, the body and blood of Chriſt, his body broke and blood ſhed, together with all the benefits which flow from his death and ſacrifice.

Obſerv. 1. There is no tranſubſtantiation as the Papiſts abſurdly imagine. Why? Paul calls that which is eaten bread, five times over in this paſſage, and even after what the papiſts call conſecration. A plain argument that the apoſtle knew nothing of their monſtrous doctrine, which makes the bread by the words of conſecration to be changed into the ſubſtance of Chriſt's body, only the accidents of bread remaining; which affronts and deſtroys the nature of a ſacrament, and gives the lie to our ſenſes. It is called his body, becauſe it was a ſign and repreſentation of it, not his real body to be ſure; for then it would follow that Chriſt eat his own body while alive, and that his diſciples did the ſame; yea that they devoured that body over night which hung upon the croſs next morning, with a thouſand ſuch like abſurdities. But whether the Papiſts will or not, they muſt admit of a figurative expreſſion in this paſſage; for when Chriſt ſays, This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood, they muſt mean that which was in the cup, and not the veſſel that held it: and this is the ordinary ſacramental dialect, concerning circumciſion and the paſſover. Circumciſion is called God's covenant, Gen. xvii. 18. i. e. the ſign of it. Alſo the lamb is called the paſſover, Exod xii. 11. i. e. the ſign of it. It is true the Heathens laid it to the charge of the primitive Chriſtians, that they ate human fleſh; but falſly, as appears by the apology made for the primitive Chriſtians, by Tertullian and others: which apology had been falſe, had they daily eaten the fleſh of Chriſt in the ſacrament. It hath been always reckoned a moſt deteſtable thing to eat human fleſh, and much more is it to eat the God we worſhip, and devour him whom we pretend to adore.

Obſ. 2. That both bread and cup are uſed together, which ſhews the unwarrantable uſurpation of the Papiſts in depriving the laity of the cup. It is directly contrary to Chriſt's inſtitution; for our Saviour, (as it were) forſeeing the Papiſts encroachment in this matter, is more expreſs in his injunction concerning the cup, than the bread, in theſe words, Matth. xxvi. 27. Drink ye all of it; and their obedience is recorded of the cup, and not of the bread, Mark xvi. 27. And they all drank of it. Now, why is Chriſt ſo expreſs in this? Surely it was, becauſe he foreſaw in the after ages this ordinance would be diſmembered, by the prohibition of the cup to the laity, and that by the Popiſh councils and canons, with an expreſs non obſtante to the command of Chriſt.

5. We have the ſacramental actions, both on the miniſter's and peoples part.

For the firſt, our Lord took the bread, he bleſſed it, he brake it, he gave it to his diſciples. 1. The taking of bread ſignifies God's chuſing, ſetting apart, and appointing Chriſt to be a Surety and ſacrifice, and laying on him the ſins of his people. 2. The bleſſing ſignifies his qualifying and furniſhing Chriſt with all gifts and graces needful for the diſcharge of his mediatory offices, and for anſwering his people's exigencies. 3. The breaking ſignifies all Chriſt's breakings, bruſings and woundings, both in ſoul and body, which were for our ſins in order to ſatisfy divine juſtice, and procure ſalvation for us. 4. The giving ſignifies his offering, giving, and actually beſtowing Chriſt and all his benefits on us. There is no promiſe reſerved, no bleſſings excepted or kept back; all is theirs.

2*dly*, The actions on the communicants part are to take, to eat and drink in remembrance of Chriſt.

Queſt. What is meant by taking this bread? Anſ. It is the accepting of Chriſt as he is offered to us; a receiving the atonement, approving of it, conſenting to it, coming up to the terms on which the benefit is propoſed to us. It is an accepting of Chriſt's grace and ſubmitting to his government. Believing on Chriſt is expreſſed by taking or receiving of him. Well then, when we are bid take this bread, we are bid take Chriſt, and all the benefits of his purchaſe; and that ſincerely and honeſtly, without diſſimulation, intirely, fully, and without exception; with cloſs and particular application, ſaying, My Lord, and my God; with thankfulneſs and praiſe for ſuch a glorious Surety, ſuch a rich purchaſe, ſuch a free covenant, and ſuch ſuitable promiſes; with humility and ſelf-denial, renouncing all confidence in our own preparations or qualificatians of any ſort, ſaying, In the Lord only have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength: and with full aſſurance of faith looking on the bread, as the Lord's ſeal and pledge of our intereſt in, and title to the bleſſings of the covenant; and as a token from Chriſt that his body was broken for us; believing that Chriſt and all the bleſſings of the covenant are herewith given to us, as really as Chriſt gives the bread into our hands.

Queſt. What is meant by eating this bread? Anſ. It ſignifies our feeding by faith upon Chriſt and his benefits, which is done by our believing the report concerning Chriſt and his purchaſe, and making a particular application of Chriſt and his benefits unto our ſouls and their various neceſſities and exigencies. And particularly this eating ſignifies, 1. Our union with Chriſt. 2. Our ſatisfaction and complacency in him. 3. Our receiving ſtrength and increaſe of grace from Chriſt. 4. Our taking infeſtment and poſſeſſion of Chriſt and his purchaſe as our inheritance, receiving this outward ſign as a pledge of the whole.

As to the words concerning the cup, This cup is the New Teſtament in my blood, ſhed for many, for the remiſſion of ſins; it is a figurative ſpeech, ſignifying that the wine in the cup, as repreſenting the ſhedding of Chriſt's blood, is a ſign and ſeal of Chriſt's teſtament or covenant of grace, confirmed by his blood.—From which we may obſerve, 1. That every worthy communicant doth here get a copy of Chriſt's teſtament put into his hands with all the legacies and bleſſings it contains, ſuch as pardon of ſin, peace with God, wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, redemption, grace and glory. Which teſtament if we take hold of, and acquieſce in the method of ſalvation contained in it, and can prove our relation to the Teſtator by faith and regeneration we are children and heirs, and have an intereſt therein.——Obſ. 2. What it was that purchaſed the New Teſtament to us, even Chriſt's blood; there is never a line we read or hear of the New Teſtament, but we ſhould mind the blood of Chriſt. Had it not been for the blood of Chriſt, we had never had the New Teſtament written, and had it not been for the New Teſtament, we had never known the meaning of Chriſt's blood ſhed.

6. We have the end of the inſtitution, 1. To keep up the remembrance of Chriſt. Chriſt knew how apt our baſe hearts would be to forget him amidſt a throng of ſenſible objects as we here converſe with; and how much our forgetfulneſs of Chriſt would be to our prejudice and diſadvantage; and therefore he appoints this ordinance, to bring Chriſt, his death and love to our believing, affectionate and thankful remembrance. 2. To ſhew forth his death, i. e. to declare, publiſh and proclaim it. It is not barely in remembrance of Chriſt, of what he hath done and ſuffered, but alſo to celebrate, publiſh and proclaim, his gracious condeſcenſion, his love and favour to loſt ſinners. We declare his death to be our life, and the ſpring of all our comforts and hopes. We glory in this atonement and ſacrifice, and ſpread it before God as our only ranſom. We ſet it in the view of our faith for our quickening and comfort. We own it before the world, as the only ground of our hope; and that we are diſciples of a crucified Chriſt, who truſt in him alone for ſalvation and acceptance, with God.

7. We have a mandate or charge given for the celebration of this ordinance, and for doing it frequently. Our Lord's command is twice repeated for ſecurity, This do; this do ye. It was our Lord's will that we ſhould celebrate the memorial of his death and paſſion. It is the will of our ſovereign Lord and Lawgiver, the expreſs command of a Saviour, yea, of a dying Saviour.—A command of love; and it is ſuch a command, as if we duly obſerve it, will be a bleſſed means to enable us to obſerve all the commands of God the better. It is ſuch a command, as whoſoever lives in the wilful neglect of it, cannot be called a Chriſtian, but will be treated by Chriſt at the great day as an enemy, and deſpiſer of his dying love. Wherefore it is our duty not only to communicate and partake of this ordinance, but we muſt do it often. We cannot maintain bodily health and ſtrength without frequent meals, ſo neither can we maintain ſoul health and ſtrength without this ſpiritual diet frequently taken and received. The ancient churches celebrated this ordinance every Lord's day. Let us be thankful that we have this ſpiritual meal more frequently rendered to us than formerly. O for ſharpened appetites for our food?

8. We have the perpetuity of the ordinance. It is to be celebrated till the Lord come the ſecond time, without ſin, for the ſalvation of them that believe, and to judge the world.——Obſer. 1. That the Lord's ſupper is not a temporary, but a ſtanding and perpetual ordinance.—2. That there is no need of ſacraments in heaven; for Chriſt is there bodily preſent—Faith is then changed into viſion, and hope into fruition. Here we hold communion with him by ſigns and ſymbols: but above, we will ſee him as he is, and enjoy him perfectly. The day then will break, and all the ſhadows will flee away.

Verſe 27. Wherefore, whoſoever ſhall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28. But let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himſelf, not diſcerning the Lord's body.

The apoſtle having declared the original inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper; he comes now to inſtruct the Corinthians in the right uſe of it, and to beware of profaning and abuſing this ordinance, as they had done.

Obſer. 1. The ſin which he warns them of, viz. Eating and drinking unworthily. Queſt. What is this? Anſ. It is not a weak faith, or weakneſs in knowledge, or want of perfect holineſs, or freedom from ſin, that will denominate a perſon an unworthy receiver; for this ordinance was not inſtituted for angels, but for men who are imperfect and ſinful: But it is to come ignorant, without due preparation, without faith, without repentance, ſelf examination; without reſolution againſt ſin, and without reconciliation to God, or to our neighbour.

Obſer. 2. The guilt and heinouſneſs of this ſin; they are guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, i. e. It is an acceſſion to the guilt of ſhedding the innocent blood of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.—It is an implicit approbation of the Jews act in crucifying Chriſt.—It is a trampling Chriſt's blood under our feet.——It is a crucifying Chriſt afreſh, and harbouring the traitors and enemies of Chriſt in our boſom.

Obſer. 3. The danger of it, eating and drinking damnation to ourſelves; i. e. They provoke God to inflict ſore judgments on them, temporal and ſpiritual judgments here, and eternal judgments hereafter.—The meaning is not, that this ſin is unpardonable, but that it deſerves damnation, and will bring it on, without repentance, and flying to the blood of Chriſt for cleanſing. Every ſin is in its own nature damning, and therefore ſuch a heinous ſin, as profaning this holy ordinance, muſt ſurely be ſo. But timorous and fearful believers ſhould not be diſcouraged from attending this holy ordinance by the ſound of this word, as if they bound upon themſelves the ſentence of damnation, by coming to the Lord's table unprepared. For hearing and praying unworthily incurs damnation, as well as communicating unworthily. But this ſin, as well as others, leaves room for forgiveneſs upon repentance.

Obſer. 4. That unworthy receivers of the Lord's ſupper do contract great guilt, and incur great danger to themſelves. And therefore they ſhould be much concerned to guard againſt this heinous and dangerous ſin; and cry with the Pſalmiſt, Lord deliver us from blood guiltineſs.

Obſer. 5. It is only judgment to himſelf, it is not to another that receives with him. For if a wicked man's preſence at the ſacrament ſhould pollute the ordinance to a worthy receiver; then Chriſt and his eleven apoſtles were defiled by the company of Judas at the paſſover, at which he certainly was, and, as many think, at the Lord's ſupper alſo. Which is abſurd.

We have in verſe 26th, the duty required for preventing the ſin and danger of unworthy communicating, and that is the great and neceſſary duty of ſelf-examination.——It is a metaphor taken from goldſmiths, who try the truth of their gold by the touchſtone, the purity of their gold by the fire, and the weight of it by the ſcale. We have here, 1. The perſon examining, Let a man examine. 2. The perſon examined, it is himſelf; he is to call himſelf to the bar of conſcience, and put queſtions to himſelf, 1. Concerning his ſtate, whether he has a right to come or not. 2. His ſins and ſhortcomings. 3. His wants and neceſſities. 4. His ends and deſigns; whether it be to obey the charge of his dying Saviour, to ſhew forth his death, renew and ſeal his covenant with God, get nearneſs and communion with him, nouriſhment to his ſoul, and ſupply to his wants. And, 5. Concerning his graces and qualifications, particularly as to knowledge, faith, repentance, fear, love, thankfulneſs, holy deſires, and new obedience.

Obſer. 1. It is not enough that a miniſter examine us before partaking. We muſt examine ourſelves, for we only can try our own hearts and thoughts, which a miniſter cannot.

Obſer. 2. Our main concern before partaking is about ourſelves.—It is not about examining others, but about examining ourſelves that we are to be employed. It is not what he or ſhe is that is to communicate with us; but what I am myſelf.

Obſer. 3. It ſhould therefore be our ſingular care before communicating, to examine ourſelves, and commune with our own hearts, as to our right to, and fitneſs for the Lord's table.

We have in verſe 29th, the true cauſe of unworthy communicating, Not diſcerning the Lord's body; i. e. not making a diſtinction between this bread and common bread; betwixt the Lord's body and the body of a mere man;—no prizing nor eſteeming the body of a crucified Jeſus, as the meritorious ground of our juſtification.

Verſe 30. For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep.

Some were puniſhed with ſickneſs and weakneſs, and ſome with death, for their irreverence in approaching to the Lord's table.

Obſer. 1. That careleſs and irreverent partaking brings on temporal judgments, as well as ſpiritual and eternal.

Obſer. 2. That God may puniſh his own people with temporal judgments: For ſeverals of theſe ſo puniſhed, were in a ſtate of favour with God, as appears from the word ſleep, the death of the wicked being hardly called ſleep in any place of ſcripture; and from verſe 32. they were chaſtened of the Lord, that they might not be condemned with the world. Now, divine chaſtening is a ſign of divine love.

Obſer. 3. That the holineſs of an ordinance, or the habitual holineſs of a perſon will not exempt him from God's diſpleaſure and the infliction of temporal judgments here in this life, if he do not by actual preparations ſanctify the name of God in the duty and ordinances of his worſhip.

Obſer. 4. That God puniſhes his people now to prevent their eternal woe.

Verſe 31. For if we would judge ourſelves, we ſhould not be judged.

If we would examine, try, cenſure and ſentence ourſelves, and ſo come to the Lord's table, we would eſcape the caſtigatory puniſhment, and condemnatory ſentence of God.——Obſer. 1. That as it is our duty often to examine and judge ourſelves, ſo ſelf-judging will preſerve us from the condemnation and judgment of God. 2. That theſe who through weakneſs of underſtanding are not capable to examine themſelves, are by no means fit to partake of this ordinance.

Verſe 32. But when we are judged, we are chaſtened of the Lord, that we ſhould not be condemned with the world.

The nature of theſe judgments, or afflictive evils, which do befal the children of God in this life, they are chaſtenings, we are chaſtened of the Lord. To be chaſtened has a double aſpect, firſt upon our privilege, it denotes our relation, as children to God our Father. Chaſtenings are a part of his childrens portion; yet in that we are chaſtened, it taxes us with weakneſs; we are fooliſh and unruly, and therefore ſo long as we are here, muſt always go with a rod at our back. Chriſt who was alſo a Son, was chaſtened. The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him; but his were judiciary chaſtiſements, not as a child, but as an enemy, a malefactor, in our ſtead. Obſerve, The merciful deſign of God in chaſtening his children, is to prevent their condemnation. When therefore at any time we are under chaſtiſement, let us juſtify God, and condemn ourſelves, ſeeing his chaſtiſements are deſigned to prevent our condemnation.

Verſes 33. 34. Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another. And if any man hunger, let him eat at home: that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the reſt will I ſet in order when I come.

The apoſtle cloſes all with a caution to beware of the irregularities they had been guilty of, and to rectify them that they come not together to condemnation.——Obſ. 1. That our holy duties through our own abuſe may prove matter of condemnation. Chriſtians may keep ſabbaths, hear ſermons, perform prayers, attend ſacraments, and only aggravate their guilt, and bring on a heavier doom on themſelves.—Obſ. 2. We have great need to ſee that we come to God in due order.

Laſtly, He tells them, that as to the other points of church order, he would determine them, when he came among them: The reſt will I ſet in order when I come. Such unchriſtian diſorders may ariſe in the church, as will require the preſence and coming of an apoſtle to correct and reform them.

A PREPARATION SERMON before the SACRAMENT.

Joſhua iii. 5. Sanctify yourſelves, for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you.

IN this chapter we have the hiſtory of Iſrael's paſſing through Jordan to Canaan; and a very memorable hiſtory it is; for long after they are bid to remember what God did for them between Shittim and Gilgal, Micah. vi. 5. that they may know the righteouſneſs of the Lord. Shittim was the place where they decamped, and Gilgal where they next pitched. See Joſhua iii. 1. compared with Joſhua iv. 19. He orders them to march up to the river ſide, where they came and lodged, though they were unprovided of means to paſs in the ordinary way. Though they had neither boats nor bridges, yet they go foreward in faith, truſting God's power and promiſe. It was told them, Joſhua i. 11. that they ſhould paſs it. We muſt go in the way of our duty, though we foreſee difficulties, truſting God to help us through them when we come to them.—The people are directed to follow the ark, verſe 3. when borne by the prieſts and Levites, to teach us cloſly to attend ordinances, if we would have the marks of God's favour and ſpecial preſence.

In the text we have two things, 1. A command. 2. Reaſons given for it.

As to the firſt, Sanctify yourſelves. The word ſanctify has divers acceptations in ſcripture. Sometimes it is applied to God, we are commanded to ſanctify the Lord, i. e. to think and ſpeak reverently of him, or humbly to worſhip him. At other times we are commanded to ſanctify ourſelves, and then it imports ſeveral things; 1. Our ſeparating or ſetting ourſelves apart to ſome holy uſe. 2. Our cleanſing ourſelves from all ceremonial pollution. 3. Our preparing ourſelves for ſome ſolemn or ſacred action, by the uſe of ſome ſacred rites, or ceremonies, ſuch as legal waſhing, &c. 4. Our putting ourſelves in a ſuitable frame for attending on God's worſhip. 5. Our purifying ourſelves inwardly from ſin, and adorning ourſelves with holineſs. I might cite ſcripture for all the ſignifications of the word, as Exod. xix. 22. Joſh. vii. 13. 1 Chron. xv. 12. 2 Chron. v. 11. xxix. 5. xxx. 3. &c. I ſhall take it here as comprehending ſomething of all theſe ſenſes, eſpecially the people's preparing themſelves to attend the ark, and the diſcovering of God's power, glory, and goodneſs, with a ſuitable ſorrow and awful frame of ſpirit, befitting ſuch a great occaſion.

II. We have the reaſons for it, For to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you. See how magnificently he ſpeaks of God's works, he calls them wonders; and indeed theſe were ſo, the dividing of the waters of Jordan, and making them to ſtand upon a heap, and then to run back, turning fluids into ſolids, and cauſe the Iſraelites to walk through the rapid river upon ſolid dry ground. All theſe were great wonders of God's power and goodneſs towards Iſrael. Now, ſays Joſhua, ſince God is about to give you ſuch uncommon inſtances of his power and favour, ſanctify yourſelves, compoſe your minds by meditation, prayer, and abſtractedneſs from the world, that ye may be in caſe for a careful and religious obſervation of his wonderful works, and to receive the diſcovery of his glory, and the communications of his goodneſs, and ſo ye may give God all the glory, and take to yourſelves the comfort of his wonderous works and gracious appearances.

Doctrine. When God is about to make wonderful diſcoveries of his glory and goodneſs to his people, then they ſhould make ſolemn preparation for obſerving and receiving of the ſame. For confirmation thereof, ſee Exod. xix. 10. 11. And the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Go unto the people, and ſanctify them to day and to-morrow, and let them waſh their cloaths; and be ready againſt the third day: for the third day the Lord will come down in the ſight of all the people, upon mount Sinai. Or, 2dly, When God ſets tryſt with a people, they ſhould prepare themſelves to attend him, 1 Sam. xvi. 4. 5. And Samuel did that which the Lord ſpake, and came to Bethlehem; and the elders of the town trembled at his coming, and ſaid, comeſt thou peaceably? And he ſaid peaceably: I am come to ſacrifice unto the Lord; ſanctify yourſelves, and come with me to the ſacrifice.

Method I. When it is that the Lord makes ſuch wonderful diſcoveries of himſelf to his people.

II. Wherein the preparation for waiting on this wonder working God doth ly.

III. The properties of this preparation.

IV. The neceſſity of it.

V. And laſtly, I ſhall make application.

1. As to the firſt head, When it is that the Lord makes glorious and wondrous diſcoveries of himſelf to a people. 1. When, notwithſtanding of grievous ſins and provocations, he averts threatened and impending judgments, and comes to them in a way of mercy; as when he threatens famine and ſcarcity, he ſends fruitful ſeaſons and plenty of bread; when he threatens the noiſome peſtilence, he removes it and ſends health: when he threatens a bloody ſword, he ſheaths it up, and ſends peace and ſafety.

2. When he is pleaſed to quell the church's enemies and perſecutors to deliver his people from their oppreſſions, and give them the freedom of their aſſemblies, and of obſerving God's inſtitutions in purity.

3. When he pours out a ſpirit of reformation on all ranks and degrees, ſo that people generally turn to the Lord, prize ordinances, prayer, family worſhip, and appear againſt vice.

4. When God pours out his Spirit on the aſſemblies of his people, ſo that the preaching of the goſpel is attended with life, power and ſucceſs, to the melting of hearts, and converting ſouls.

5. When he diſcovers a Redeemer to a loſt ſinking ſoul; when a poor ſelf-condemned ſinner, that was at his wit's end, gets a ſight of the poſſibility of ſalvation through the ſatisfaction of Chriſt.

6. When he ſets forth Chriſt crucified before our eyes in the ſacrament; when he diſplays therein the wiſdom, juſtice, love and goodneſs of God to ſinners in a moſt lively manner.

7. When he returns and makes his people's ſky break after a long night of deſertion; when he makes light to ariſe and ſhine to them that were in darkneſs, and opens the door of his preſence-chamber.

8. When he gives them the victory over ſatan's temptations and aſſaults after long ſufferings and conflicts, and ſpeaks to them as to Paul, 2 Cor. xii. 9. My grace is ſufficient for thee; for my ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſs.

9. When he meets with them in ordinances, looſes their bonds, frees them from their ſtraitenings in duty, and enlarges their hearts in prayer, and enables them to pour forth their complaints and requeſts before the Lord.

10. When he comes with a return to their prayers; particularly, 1. By lifting on them the light of his countenance; or, 2. By giving them a view of their covenant relation to God; a well grounded hope of heaven; and new ſtrength to grapple with ſin, perform duties, and bear trials.

11. When he comes and gives a glorious diſcovery of his greatneſs and majeſty, ſo as to fill them with awful fear and reverence of God, and makes them cry, Lord what is man that thou art mindful of him? O the unſpeakable diſtance that is between God and us! God is glorious, and the creature is nothing.

12. When he comes and gives the ſoul a glorious diſcovery of the holineſs and purity of God, in his nature, his law and his works, as he did to Job, making him cry, Behold I am vile: and to Iſaiah, Wo is me, for I am undone, becauſe I am a man of unclean lips.

13. When he gives a glorious diſcovery of the goodneſs and mercy of God, particularly in theſe inſtances. 1. The glorious contrivance of our redemption, by ſending Chriſt to ſave us. 2. In pardoning guilty ſinners ſo many crimes, and making them cry, as Micah vii. 18. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and paſſeth by the tranſgreſſion of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, becauſe he delighteth in mercy. 3. In taking rebellious traitors and enemies to God, to be children of God, and favourites of heaven. 4. In exalting them above angels that never ſinned, and providing glorious manſions for them.

14. When he comes in the ordinances, and quickens the dead and languiſhing graces of his people; as, 1. When he melts their hard hearts into the exerciſe of repentance and mourning for ſin. 2. When he comes and actuates their faith, enables the weak ſinner to go out to Chriſt, caſt his ſoul and lay his burden on him, and wholly to look to him, and lean on him for pardon and ſalvation. 3. When he comes and makes their hearts burn with love to himſelf, and to precious Chriſt the Mediator, while he talks to them and opens up the ſcriptures. 4. When he draws out the deſires and pantings of the ſoul towards himſelf. 5. When he quickens the ſpirit of prayer, and elevates the heart for praiſe, and enables the ſoul for every duty.

II. As to the ſecond head, Wherein this preparation and ſanctifying of the heart for waiting on God in ordinances, doth ly. Firſt, It ſuppoſes, 1. That we are naturally unfit and unprepared for approaching to God. 2. It ſuppoſes a work of God's grace and Spirit on the heart: he only fits the ſoul for ſpiritual things. 'It is God that worketh in us both to will and to do of ‘ his good pleaſure. The preparation of the heart in ‘ man, and the anſwer of the tongue is from the Lord,’ Prov. xvi. 1.

Secondly, It directly imports theſe things; 1. The ſoul's being in a gracious ſtate, tranſlated from nature to grace by the Spirit of God, and that the ſoul is reconciled to God by the blood of Chriſt, and a work of ſanctification begun; without this we cannot be accepted.

2. It lies in bringing our hearts with us, and engaging all the powers and faculties of our ſouls to attend God in duty, Pſal. lxxxvi. 11. Unite my heart to fear thy name; and, Pſal. cxix. 10. With my whole heart have I ſought thee.

3. It lies in our having right thoughts and uptakings of that gracious God whom we approach to; 1. That we believe that God is, and is a Rewarder of them that diligently ſeek him. 2. That he is incomprehenſibly great and glorious, fills the heavens and the earth with his preſence, and that great fear and reverence is due to him. 3. That he is glorious in holineſs, and of of purer eyes than that he can behold iniquity. 4 That he is ſpotleſs in juſtice, and will by no means clear the guilty. 5. That he is omnipotent in power, for protecting his people, and deſtroying his enemies. 6 That he is matchleſs in clemency and mercy, eaſy to be intreated, and ready to forgive through Chriſt. 7. That he is faithful, and keeps covenant for ever.

4. It lies in having humble and low thoughts of ourſelves, as unworthy to approach God, or receive any token of his favour. The ſoul that is ſanctified and prepared for approaching to God, hath a deep ſenſe of former ſins and miſcarriages, wonders at God's patience, that the earth has not opened its mouth to ſwallow it up ere now.

5. It lies in cleanſing and purifying ourſelves, by ſearching for and throwing out all theſe ſins and evils that unfit us for converſe with God. If we would have God to accept us, we muſt regard no iniquity in our hearts: particularly, 1. We muſt caſt out pride and ſelf-conceit. If we have a good opinion of ourſelves, our duties and performances, God will not accept us, we muſt count all but loſs and dung for Chriſt. 2. Worldlineſs, and thoughts about earthly things. 3. Unbelief and doubtings concerning the truths of God. 4. Malice and revenge. 5. Vain and wandering thoughts, and ſeek to have our hearts fixed, Pſ. lvi.

6. It lies in our retiredneſs and abſtractedneſs from the world and earthly thoughts. In the temple, for as much fleſh as was uſed there for the ſacrifice, not one fly was ſeen ſtirring; which teacheth us to drive away the flies of worldly thoughts in God's preſence, that they do not ſpoil nor corrupt the ſacrifice, as that grievous ſwarm of flies did every thing in the land of Egypt, Exod. viii. 24. Do as Abraham, when he went to approach God and do ſacrifice on mount Moriah, Gen. xxii. 4, 5. When he ſaw the place afar off, he ſaid to his young men, abide you here with the aſs, and I and the lad will go yonder and worſhip. He knew that if they had gone along with him, they would ſo diſtract him with their clamour, that he could not offer ſacrifice with that freedom and tranquillity of ſpirit requiſite.

7. It lies in examining the principles from which you act, and ends to which you move in duty. The principles muſt be faith and love; the belief of God's command, and the love of Chriſt, muſt conſtrain you to duty. Your ends muſt be to glorify God and enjoy him; not as the Phariſees to be ſeen of men; not legal ends, to get a reward. Selfiſh and legal ends are as a dead fly to ſpoil the ointment and make duties unſavoury to God. O for right principles, pure and ſpiritual ends!

8. It conſiſts in labouring to get the heart in a ſuitable frame for converſe with God; as, 1. In a humble and ſelf-denied frame. 2. In a ſpiritual and heavenly frame, 3. In a fixed and ſtayed frame, calling in all ſtraying and wandering thoughts, breathing out that prayer, Pſalm lxxxvi. 11. 4. In a loving and affectionate frame; for God is love, and love is the cement between God and the ſoul in duty. 5. In a cautious and watching frame; guarding always againſt every thing that may creep in, to indiſpoſe you for communion with God and marr your acceſs to him. 6. In an active and lively frame; all the ſpices ſhould flow out, all the graces ſhould be in exerciſe.

9. It lies in wakening our ſouls, which are naturally dull and drowſy, to activity and livlineſs in duty, as David, Pſalm lvii. 8. Awake up my glory, awake pſaltery and harp: I myſelf will awake early. Pſalm ciii. 1. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul; and all that is within me bleſs his holy name. Be ſtirred up all that is within me; there muſt be a ſtirring up our ſouls to take hold of God, Iſa. lxiv. 7. Put forth your ſpiritual ſtrength to the utmoſt; pray with the moſt fervent importunity; praiſe with ſpiritual elevation of heart; love God with the moſt ſublime affections, and do all in ſome proportion to the greatneſs of that God with whom you have to do, as Pſal. cl. 2. Praiſe him according to his excellent greatneſs.

10. It lies in our earneſt prayers to God to ſanctiſy us; for we muſt put it back on him, and pray for the ſanctifying influences of his Spirit, for the ſubduing of ſin, quickening grace and perfecting holineſs in the fear of God.

III. As to the third head, The properties of this preparation; 1. It muſt be timeous preparation. The Jews took time to prepare for approaching God in the paſſover, they had the Lamb four days before in their houſes, tied to their bed poſts, that hearing conſtantly its bleating, they might look back to Egypt, and remember the ſorrows and bondage they endured there, and be thankful for their redemption; and eſpecially for their deliverance from the deſtroying angel that night he paſſed over their houſes, which were ſprinkled with the blood of the lamb; and that they might look forward to the Meſſiah, and remember the bitter agonies and ſufferings he was to endure for their ſins.

2. Inward preparation. It muſt ly mainly in the heart; a grave decent carriage is needful indeed, but God looks to more than the outward appearance, even to the heart.

3. Conſcientious preparation, doing all as in the ſight of God, before whom all things are naked and bare. Study to have ſingle ends and aims, to glorify God, and obey our Lord and Saviour's call.

4. Diligent preparation, not dealing with a ſlack hand, but applying your ſouls with the greateſt activity to the work in hand, believing that your ſalvation depends on it.

5 Humble and ſelf denied preparation, truſting in nothing in yourſelves but in Chriſt: depending on God that he would fit and prepare your hearts, and accept graciouſly for Chriſt's ſake.

6. Univerſal preparation, be mindful of all the parts of it, eſpecially of examining yourſelves with reſpect to your ſtate, your ſins, your wants, your knowledge, faith, repentance, love and new obedience.

IV. As to the fourth head. The neceſſity of this preparation. 1. Becauſe of the falſeneſs, ſluggiſhneſs and deceitfulneſs of our hearts; they love to wander from God, and are bent to backſlide in duty, as the wiſe man ſays, Eccleſ. x. 10. "If the iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then muſt he put to more ſtrength." Labour to heat the iron, ſeeing a blunt iron, if hot, will pierce more eaſily than a ſharper, if cold. Warm your hearts with the love and ſufferings of Chriſt.

2. Becauſe it is the heart God mainly ſeeks in duty, Prov. xxiii. 26. My ſon give me thine heart; he ſays as Joſeph concerning Benjamin, Except your brother be with you, I will not ſee your face. If the heart be not brought to him, there can be no acceptance.

3. Becauſe God is well pleaſed with them that do ſo, as with Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. xix. 3. Nevertheleſs there are good things found in thee, that thou haſt taken away the groves out of the land, and haſt prepared thine heart to ſeek God. And he is highly diſpleaſed with thoſe that do it not, as with Rehoboam, 2 Chron. xii. 14. And he did evil, becauſe he prepared not his heart to ſeek God.

4. Becauſe God, whom we approach to, is an infinitely holy and pure Spirit, and will be worſhipped in ſpirit and in truth.

IMPROVEMENT.

Inference I. See hence the cauſe why ſo few get diſcoveries of God's glory, and wonders of mercy, in the ordinance, but meet with an hiding God, they do not ſanctify themſelves and prepare their hearts in a ſuitable manner.

1. Uſe of reproof to ſeverals; 1. To theſe who approach God under the power of wandering and roving thoughts, their minds are not fixed, ſanctified and prepared. 2. To theſe whoſe minds are going after their covetouſneſs, when their bodies only are preſented before God. 3. To theſe who are hypocritical and formal in their approaches to God. 4. To thoſe whoſe hearts are dull and drowſy in God's ſervice.

III. Uſe of trial. It concerns you upon this occaſion to examine if your hearts be ſanctified and prepared for approaching God to-morrow. It is highly neceſſary now to examine your ſouls, Let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat. I fear there are many unſanctified and unprepared hearts among us. And in order to aſſiſt you therein, I ſhall give ſome remarks, both negatively and poſitively.

I. Negatively, marks of unſanctified hearts. 1. The ignorant heart that knows not Chriſt, nor has any uptaking of the way of ſalvation through his righteouſneſs. Such are unprepared, and incapable of gracious communion with God. See how the promiſe runs, Jer. xxiv. 7. "I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the Lord, and they ſhall be my people, and I will be their God; for they ſhall return unto me with their whole heart." 2. The unbelieving heart is unprepared. 3. The impenitent heart. 4. The heart that harbours Chriſt's enemy. 5. The heart that hath no love to Chriſt. 6. No love to the friends of Chriſt. 7. No hungering and thirſting after Chriſt and his righteouſneſs. 8. That hath ſlight thoughts of his ordinances. 9. Indifference about the ſucceſs of the ordinances. 10. That reſiſts the motions of the Spirit. 11. The heart that is drowſy, and at no pains to waken itſelf. 12. That is a ſtranger to itſelf, and to ſelf-examination. Such hearts are unſanctified and unprepared for approaching to God to-morrow.

II. Poſitive marks of hearts in ſome meaſure ſanctified and prepared. 1. Hearts ſenſible of their depravity and ſinfulneſs. 2. That are ſenſible of their need of Chriſt. 3. Hearts filled with revenge againſt ſin. 4. That are humble and lowly. 5. Hearts troubled for heart plagues and ſins. 6. Hearts that conſent to the well ordered covenant in all its articles. 7. Hearts that aim at communion and fellowſhip with God in every duty. 8. Hearts that hold on in cloſe purſuit after Chriſt, notwithſtanding diſcouragements and diſappointments, as Mary Magdalene, who would not leave the ſepulchre, when others left it. 9. Hearts that are unſatisfied with the beſt means and ordinances, if God be not found in them. 10. Hearts that are applying themſelves to every duty, in Chriſt's ſtrength, ſaying, Without Chriſt I can do nothing. 11. Hearts that are troubled when they drive heavily in duty, and are weary of their remiſſneſs. 12. Hearts tender of the peace of God, afraid of ſin, and grieving the Spirit. 13. Hearts concerned about the ſucceſs of this ordinance, both with reſpect to themſelves and others. 14. Hearts concerned for want of ſufficient preparation, praying with Hezekiah, for pardon and acceptance, though not cleanſed according to the purification of the ſanctuary, 2 Chron. xxx. 18, 19.

IV. Uſe of exhortation. O communicants, ſanctify yourſelves againſt to-morrow, that the Lord may come down and do wonders among you, wonders of mercy for your ſouls.

Motive I. Conſider that the near approach you are to make to God at his table to-morrow, is the neareſt approach you can poſſibly make on this ſide of death. Conſider what preparation God required of the Iſraelites for receiving the fiery law at mount Sinai, Exod. xix. 10, 11. "God commanded them to ſanctify themſelves, waſh their cloaths, and be ready againſt the third day, for upon that day the Lord would come down upon mount Sinai, in ſight of all the people." What awful fear and trembling do you imagine was there among them, when God came down in a thick cloud, when the trumpet began to ſound, and the thunder to crack, the mountain to ſmoke, and the earth to tremble under the weight of the great God deſcending on it.—Well, you ſhould be under the ſame awe of God in this ſolemn ordinance as they were. It is true, he comes not down with ſuch terror, to give a fiery law as on mount Sinai, but to deliver the goſpel of peace from mount Zion. But mind, it is the ſame God that ſpeaks, hath the ſame majeſty, the ſame authority; and therefore you ſhould prepare as carefully, and be as humble before him, as the Iſraelites were. Were God to come down among you to-morrow in terrible majeſty, ſhould a thick cloud fill this houſe, and lightning break out, and ſhould you hear the thunder of his voice, I am the Lord, thou ſhalt have no other gods before me, certainly ſuch a dreadful glory would make your hearts tremble within you, Well then, God is come down as really among you as among the Iſraelites, hear him with the ſame reverence, and be as intent upon adoration as they were. Let not his gracious and familiar way of condeſcending to deal with you, tempt you to come with leſs preparation and reverence.

II. Conſider the nature of that God you are to approach to. 1. A great and mighty God, Pſal. lxxxix. 7, 8. God is greatly to be feared in the aſſembly of the ſaints, and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him. O Lord, God of hoſts, who is a ſtrong Lord like unto thee, or to thy faithfulneſs round about thee? Would we feaſt with a great King with filthy hands and garments? Joſeph prepared himſelf, by ſhaving himſelf and changing his raiment, before he went in to Pharaoh; and wilt thou not prepare thyſelf, by putting thyſelf in the holieſt dreſs and humbleſt poſture, when thou art to go to the King of heaven and earth? 2. He is a jealous and omniſcient God, moſt jealous of his honour, and will come in to ſee the gueſts, Matth. xxii. 11. and then he will ſpy every unprepared and unſanctified gueſt; he notices the ſtate of your ſouls, the frame of your hearts, the ends of your communicating, and your preparation before hand. O then ſanctify yourſelves, before you come to the feaſt.—3. He is a pure and holy God; he cannot hold communion with unholy perſons, he will be ſanctified in them that come nigh him, Lev. x. 3. he will be attended as a holy God, in a holy manner. Did a holy angel ſet tryſt with you at a certain place, againſt ſuch an hour, would you not prepare with all ſeriouſneſs and ſolemnity to attend him! Oh! but it is the God of angels that tryſts with you here, even the God before whom the angels adore, and cover their faces and feet with their wings, and cry, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God almighty. If the linen on the communion table, or veſſels that hold the elements were foul, ye would be ready to exclaim againſt it; and no doubt there ought to be obſerved an outward decency in this reſpect; Chriſt would have the very room in good order where he was to eat the paſſover. But O it is a ſmall crime to have a foul cloth or veſſel for outward elements in reſpect of what it is to have a foul heart, or an unprepared ſoul to entertain a holy God, and to receive the body and blood of Chriſt.

3. Conſider that God's people uſed always great preparation before the ſolemn approaching to God, Gen. xxxv. 1.—5. Where we ſee how ſolemnly Jacob prepared himſelf and his family, when by God's command he was going up to Bethel to ſacrifice unto the Lord. "They change their garments, waſh and make themſelves clean, and put away their ſtrange gods." How much more ought we to prepare, when we go not only to Bethel, God's houſe, but to God's table, by changing our garments of ſin, and putting on Chriſt's righteouſneſs by faith, and putting away and mortifying our luſts and idols of jealouſy! We ſee alſo the pſalmiſt's preparation for approaching to God, Pſal. xxvi. 6. I will waſh my hands in innocency, ſo will I compaſs thine altar, O Lord. The Jews had great preparation for the paſſover, and ſo ſhould we for the Lord's ſupper, that is come in its room. Wherefore we find the primitive Chriſtians uſed to ſit up whole nights at prayer before the Lord's ſupper, which they called vigiliæ.

4. Conſider that the matter of this ſacrament requires ſolemn preparation. Solomon directs us, when we are to eat with a ruler, to conſider what is ſet before us, Prov. xxiii. 1. There are here the ſymbols of Chriſt's body and blood, rare food! It is a great ſin to abuſe common meat and drink, or to partake of theſe without ſome ſerious thought before hand. We would have veſſels clean to hold our ordinary food; but here is ſoul food, heaven's dainties, the jewel of heaven. Chriſt's body in the ſacrament muſt be wrapt in a clean ſoul, as well as his body by Joſeph of Arimathea was wrapt in clean linen, and laid in a new tomb.

5. The duties to be performed at the Lord's table require preparation, viz. Covenanting with God, renewing our baptiſmal vow, expreſſing our love to Chriſt, feaſting on a broken Chriſt.

6. You are naturally unfit for this ordinance; naturally you have neither habitual nor actual preparation, being dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, leprous, lothſome, carnal, and earthly minded. Wherefore we muſt be quickened and purified, before we can hold communion with a holy God.

7. Becauſe communion with God would be altogether diſagreeable to an unſanctified ſoul, he would weary of it, and take no pleaſure in it.

8. Becauſe of the great advantage of this preparation, God will come to-morrow, and work wonders of mercy for ſuch as ſincerely aim at preparation. O then ſanctify yourſelves. Queſt. What are theſe wonders of mercy. Anſ. 1. He will raiſe dead ſouls out of the grave, and put life in them. 2. He will warm cold hearts, and put ſpiritual heat in them. 3. He will ſoften hard rocky hearts, and make them tender and ſenſible. 4. He will cleave the rock and make waters guſh out of it, the waters of penitential tears. 5. He will cure the paralytic trembling hand, that could hardly be ſtretched out, or grip to any thing. He will enable the weak ſoul to grip faſt to Chriſt, and ſubſcribe his name to the marriage contract. 6. He will ſtrengthen the feeble knees and lame feet, and make the ſoul to run in the way of his commandments with an enlarged heart. 7. He will kill ſtrong Goliaths and luſts, that defied the armies of the God of Iſrael. 8. He will fix a wandering heart, and fix it on God and things above. 9. He will heal a wound conſcience by the balm of Gilead. 10. He will brighten a dark cloudy mind, and reſolve all the doubts and fears of a believer. 11. He will give a ſight of the king in his beauty, a view of the ſmiles of Chriſt's lovely face. 12. He will give a ſeal of the pardon of all your ſins. 13. He will give a Piſgah-view of Canaan, a ſight of the promiſed land. 14. He will feaſt the hungry, and fill them with the dainties of heaven.——O theſe are rare wonders of grace that Chriſt will work for the prepared ſoul, O preparation is your ſeed time, receiving is your harveſt, Now, as a man ſoweth ſo ſhall he reap; he that ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reap ſparingly, and he which ſoweth bountifully, ſhall reap alſo bountifully, 2 Cor. ix. 6. It is in the duty of partaking, as in the duty of praying; the more prepared a man's heart is to pray, the greater is his return from heaven, Pſal. x. 17. Thou wilt prepare their hearts, thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear. So it may be ſaid in the caſe of receiving, thou wilt prepare the heart, thou wilt cauſe thine hand to give. When God prepares a man's heart for duty, it is a token he hath a hand prepared for mercy. Hence the Lord makes that gracious promiſe, Pſalm lxxxi. 10. Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. q. d. I will enlarge my hand, as you enlarge your heart. He ſaith, as Joſeph to his ſteward, Gen. xliv. 1. Fill the mens ſacks as much as they can carry. So as Joſeph's brethren prepared ſacks in number and largeneſs, ſo did they carry corn away; and as you have prepared hearts to the ordinance, ſo ſhall you reap benefit thereby.

9. Becauſe of the great danger in coming unprepared. If you do not ſanctify and prepare yourſelves, God will come and do wonders of judgment, wonders of wrath among you. 1. He may inflict bodily diſeaſes, as 1 Cor. xi. 30. 2. He may ſend untimely death. 3. He may ſmite with deſertion from God. 4. He may ſend darkneſs on the mind. 5. He may ſmite with deadneſs and impenitency on the heart. 6. With decaying and withering on the gifts and graces. 7. He may ſend leanneſs and barenneſs on the ſoul. 8. He may ſmite with formality and lifeleſneſs in duty. 9. With ſearedneſs on the conſcience, ſo as it ſhall challenge for no ſin. 10. He may ſend horror and terror on the conſcience, ſo as to make it a Magor-Miſſabib. 11. He may let ſatan looſe againſt you with temptations, atheiſtical and blaſphemous thoughts. 12. He may ſend you to hell from the communion-table, as Matth. xxii. 12, 13. And he ſaid unto him, friend how cameſt thou in hither not having on a wedding-garment? And he was ſpeechleſs. Then ſaid the king to the ſervants, bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and caſt him into outer darkneſs.

Queſt. How ſhall I get my heart ſanctified and prepared, ſo as I may expect the Lord will come and do wonders of grace for me to morrow. Anſ. There is a twofold preparation, habitual and actual; you muſt ſtudy both, and habitual preparation in the firſt place. Queſt. What is habitual preparation? Anſ. It hath ſeveral ingredients in it. 1. A covenant-relation to God in Chriſt. 2. A principle of ſpiritual life. 3. A ſtate of peace with God. 4. The imputation of Chriſt's righteouſneſs. 5. An univerſal change by regenerating grace. 6. The inhabitation of the Spirit. 7. A holy converſation. 8. The lamp of a profeſſion. Queſt. 2. What is actual preparation for the Lord's ſupper? Anſ. 1. Sequeſtrating ourſelves from the world. 2. Self-examination. 3. Humiliation for ſin. 4. Renewing of our perſonal covenant with God in Chriſt. 5. Reformation of what is amiſs. 6. Exciting of all the graces to a lively exerciſe. 7. Meditation on the death and ſufferings of Chriſt. 8. Earneſt prayer to God for preparation and aſſiſtance in the work——And after your outmoſt preparation, you muſt lay no ſtreſs thereon, but caſt yourſelf wholly on Chriſt for aſſiſtance, ſaying, It is only in the Lord I have righteouſneſs and ſtrength. We ought to be denied to ourſelves, and to look with David to the Lord both for aſſiſtance and acceptance, Pſalm lxxi. 16. I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord, I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of thine only. You ought to imitate king Aſa, who, though he had a great army to fight againſt the Ethiopians, yet cried to the Lord, and truſted in him alone for help, as you have it recorded, 2 Chron. xiv. 11. 'And Aſa cried unto the Lord his God, and ſaid, 'Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with 'many, or with them that have no power; help us, O 'Lord our God; for we reſt on thee, and in thy name 'go out againſt this multitude.' So let every communicant ſay, 'Lord all my ſtrength and preparations are 'nought, I have no power for celebrating this feaſt, 'help me, O Lord my God, for I reſt on thee, and in 'thy name I go to this great and weighty ordinance.' And if you come forward to-morrow in this ſelf-denied and ſanctified frame, you have ground to expect that the Lord will do wonders of grace and mercy for you.

ACTION SERMON.

From CANTICLES ii. 4. He brought me to the banqueting houſe, and his banner over me was love.

THE whole of this ſong is an allegorical deſcription of the myſterious union and communion betwixt Chriſt and his church, under the perſons of a bridegroom and bride, which is a frequent metaphor made uſe of in ſcripture. The forty fifth pſalm is an abridgment of this ſong.——In this chapter Chriſt and the church ſeems to ſtrive, who ſhall outvie each other in their commendations. Chriſt firſt commends the church, and then the church extols Chriſt. She compares him to the apple tree among the trees of the wood, verſe 3. Chriſt is a fruit bearing Tree; but the children of men are barren trees. And O but his ſhadow is refreſhing, and his fruit ſweet to a believer. But as if the ſhadow and fruits of an apple tree were too low a ſimilie to ſet forth his excellency and goodneſs, ſhe tells us of the entertainment he gives her in the banqueting houſe, in the text.

Where we have, 1. The place which the ſpouſe was brought to, the banqueting houſe, or houſe of wine, i. e. of feaſting, becauſe wine is a principal part of feaſts; by which we are to underſtand the order, or means, whereby Chriſt conveys his graces and bleſſings to believers; and there is none of all the ordinances of the goſpel that may be more fitly called the banqueting or feaſting houſe, than this of the Lord's ſupper, which is the great goſpel-feaſt wherewith Chriſt entertains his people on earth, ordinances are called his banqueting houſe, becauſe of the great plenty, variety and riches of the bleſſings he thereby communicates to his people.

2. We have the Perſon that brings her into this banqueting houſe, and that is Chriſt: He brought me; which ſhews, 1. Our want of right to theſe bleſſings, of ourſelves. All our right is in Chriſt. 2. Our impotency to come to the feaſting houſe; he muſt both give us ſtrength and preparation of ſoul, 3. The freeneſs of his grace in beſtowing theſe bleſſings on us.

3. The manner how ſhe is brought in, and that is under a banner, ſtandard or enſign. It is a military rod; banners or enſigns are uſed in camps and armies, Pſalm xx. 5. ‘ We will rejoice in thy ſalvation,’ and in ‘ the name of our God will ſet up our banners.’ Her march or entry into this feaſting houſe was joyful and triumphant, ſuch as that of people under a diſplayed banner, or colours lifted up. Colours are uſeful to draw, invite, engage, and lead people after their captain: and the lifting up and diſplaying of colours is a ſign to invite and direct theſe of ſuch a party or ſide, to come to ſuch a place, or march ſuch a way. Now, what is the device or motto of Chriſt's banner; not like thoſe of other generals, a lion, an eagle, &c. but Love. The love of a crucified Jeſus is like a banner lifted up and diſplayed in the goſpel for inviting and engaging ſinners to come to him. Love is the banner that Chriſt lifts up and diſplays this day, to engage you to come to him, and liſt yourſelves under his banner. Love is that which leads to the banqueting houſe, and furniſhes proviſion and entertainment for us there.

Obſer. I. That Chriſt has rich feaſts in the ordinances for entertaining his people's ſouls.

II. That the banner which Chriſt diſplays for drawing us to him, is love.

As to the firſt, I ſhall ſhew, 1. That Chriſt in the ordinances doth provide feaſts for his people's ſouls. 2. That the Lord's ſupper in particular is one principal feaſt that he prepares for them. 3. Why he prepares ſuch a feaſt. 4. Shall apply.

As to the firſt, it is evident, 1. From God's promiſe to his people, Pſalm xxx~~iv~~vi. 8. “ They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe; and thou ſhalt make them drink of the river of thy pleaſures.” Iſaiah xxv. 6. “ And in this Mountain ſhall the Lord of hoſts make unto all people, a feaſt of fat things, a feaſt of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.” This promiſe is concerning the goſpel times.—From Prov. ix. 2. where Wiſdom, i. e. Chriſt, is ſaid to have killed her beaſts, mingled her wine, and furniſhed her table.—And, to name no more, from Luke xiv. where the Father prepares the fatted calf for his penitent prodigal.

2. From the experience of God's people, as of David, Pſalm iv. 6. lxiii. 5. and lxv. 4. and particularly from the experience of the church in the text, God's people can ſet to their ſeal to this truth.

As to the ſecond head, that the Lord's ſupper is one principal feaſt, which the Lord prepares for his people. Wherefore is it called, the table of the Lord. 1 Cor. x. 21. It is called a feaſt on the ſacrifice of Chriſt, 1 Cor. v. 7, 8. a wedding feaſt, Mat. xxii. 4. In theſe places the Lord's ſupper is principally pointed at.—I ſhall here ſhew wherein the Lord's ſupper reſembles a feaſt; yea, it is not an ordinary feaſt, it is a rich, royal and magnificent feaſt.

1. At a feaſt there is rich and noble proviſion. So here there is more than bread and wine, even the body and blood of Chriſt, My fleſh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed, John vi. 55. What bread and wine affords to the body, viz. ſtrength, comfort, and nouriſhment, the ſame doth the body and blood of Chriſt, received by faith, yield to the ſoul——Here is ſpiritual food to the hungry ſoul, bread that ſtrengthens man's heart, and wine that cheers the fainting ſpirits. Behold here is wiſdom's gates, and wiſdom's feaſt. It is good for us to be here, good to wait at her door poſts.—Here the breaſts of conſolation are drawn forth, here we may ſuck and be ſatisfied.—Here the fountain of life, and the wells of ſalvation are opened, the ſtone rolled from the well's mouth.——Here is the hidden manna, angels food, bread from heaven, yea the fruits of the tree of life, that grows in midſt of the paradiſe of God.—Here is the water of life that ſprings from beneath the throne of God and the Lamb, clear as chryſtal; if you get but one drop of it, it ſhall be an everlaſting ſpring in your ſoul, ſo that you need not thirſt after carnal comforts and enjoyments.——Here are the grapes of Canaan, the fruits that grow in the land of promiſe; yea cluſters of theſe grapes are at this feaſt, the firſt fruits of heaven——In a word, there is at this ſpiritual feaſt for the ſoul to feed on, Chriſt crucified, and all his benefits and purchaſe: And are there not many diſhes and delicacies here?

1. Here is pardon of ſin ſealed to a believer. O is not this a rare feaſt and excellent cheer, Matth. ix. 2. Be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven thee. Here you get Chriſt's blood, which was ſhed for many, for the remiſſion of ſins. Here we claſp about a crucified Chriſt as the great propitiatory ſacrifice for our ſins, and accept of him as the Lord our righteouſneſs; and thus we receive the remiſſion of ſins. Here God ſaith to a believer, as Nathan to David, 2 Sam. xii. 13. The Lord hath put away thy ſins, thou ſhalt not die. Here we hear the voice of joy and gladneſs, which hath made many a broken bone to rejoice. Is there any thing more ſweet than pardon to a condemned man near the place of execution? And what can give more joy, than a free diſcharge to a ſinner arreſted by juſtice, and drawn to hell's door to be caſt into that priſon for debt, out of which there is no redemption.

2. We have peace and friendſhip with God; O rare diſh! not only to be freed of a burden of debt, that would have weighed us down to hell; and for which millions already have been carried thither, and are roaring under it without hope; but alſo to be received into ſpecial favour with God: For in this ſacrament a covenant of peace and friendſhip is ſealed and confirmed. O muſt it not be a ſweet cordial, for an enemy, a rebel, to be owned as a ſpecial favourite of the King of heaven, ſo that the ſoul may ſend a challenge to hell and earth, and bid defiance to men and devils, Rom. viii. 33, 34. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that juſtifieth, who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that died, yea rather, that it is riſen again, who is even at the right-hand of God, who alſo maketh interceſſion for us. And you may ſay with David, Pſalm iv. 8. I will both lay me down in peace, and ſleep: For thou, Lord, only makeſt me to dwell in ſafety. Come life, come death, I am ſafe; my conſcience is diſburdened, and I am at eaſe.

3. Adoption is another of the diſhes at this feaſt. You are not only made a friend, but a ſon and heir; and in this ſacrament you get ſeaſine and infeftment of the childrens privileges, relation and inheritance.—And here God ſaith, I will be a Father to thee; and, ſon, thou ſhalt be ever with me, and all that I have is thine. Thou ſhalt have my bleſſing and love, the ſmiles of my face, the kiſſes of my mouth, and the arms of my grace to ſupport and preſerve thee. Thou ſhalt have my Son for thy elder Brother, thy Prieſt and Advocate; my angels to be thy guards; my providence to be thy protector and manager: Thou ſhalt have manna in the wilderneſs, and water out of the rock. Thou ſhalt be my heir, and joint heir with my eternal Son and Firſt-born. Thou ſhalt have heaven for thy home, Chriſt's throne for thy ſeat, and a kingdom for thy portion; a honourable maintenance while here, and an incorruptable inheritance hereafter.

4. Another diſh is peace of conſcience. This is one of the precious legacies which Chriſt leaves in his Teſtament, which is here ſealed, John xv. 27. It is here Chriſt ſpeaks peace to his people and to his ſaints, here he breathes peace upon them, as in Luke xxiv. 36. Do doubts and fears ariſe within you, that hinders you to believe the good news, as with the diſciples; ſo there is that in this ſacrament which may check all theſe fears, Luke xxiv. 38, 39. "Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts ariſe in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet that it is I myſelf; handle me and ſee, &c." O but the prints of the nails may calm the doubting conſcience, and quiet thy fears.

5. Supplies and ſtrength to our weak and decayed graces. Here Chriſt's ſtore houſe is opened, and we may get grace for grace out of his fulneſs; here the ſmoaking flax may be kindled into a flame and the bruiſed reed find ſupport; here you may get weak faith ſtrengthened, cold love enflamed, weak deſire kindled, repentance renewed, hope made lively, the ſoul fitted and fortified for trials and ſufferings, and prepared for paſſing through the valley of the ſhadow of death; Yea, in a word, you may get all your wants ſupplied, all your grievances redreſſed, and maladies remedied. Here you may get a meal that will both ſatiſfy, and beget a ſtomach in you, that will prove life to your ſouls and poiſon to your luſts. It is here the empty ſoul is filled, the ſtarving creature fed, the poor beggar enriched, the hard heart ſoftened, the cold heart warmed, the dead ſoul quickened, the paralytick hand cured, the blind eye enlightened, the thirſty heart ſatisfied, the feeble knee ſtrengthened, the ſtraitened heart enlarged, the wandering heart fixed, the creeping deſires elevated, the cloudy ſoul brightened, and the doubting ſoul reſolved. O are not theſe gracious and bleſſed changes! Here you may get ſtrength againſt your ſtrong luſts and temptations, and furniture for every duty, ſo as you may pray with enlargement, hear with comfort, praiſe with elevation of mind, and meditate with delight.

6. Here is Chriſt's gracious preſence, and a ſight of his countenance; That is a rare delicate in this feaſt, that ſatisfies the ſoul, Pſalm xvi. ult. In thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, that was the Pſalmiſt's heaven upon earth. It is here Chriſt tryſts with his people, here he walks with them, and is held by them in the galleries; here he viſits them and holds communion with them, intimates his love, and kiſſes them with the kiſſes of his mouth. Here they ſee the King in his beauty, here the ſaints have beheld the beauty of the Lord, Pſalm xxvii. 4. O this is worth our while. O let it be our errand this day to meet with Chriſt, and ſee his bleſſed face. God's people in all ages have placed their happineſs here. Abraham rejoiced in a ſight of Chriſt, though afar off, at 1900 years diſtance. The wiſe men thought it worth their while, to undertake a long journey from the eaſt to ſee him, though but new born. Old Simeon deſires to ſee no more on earth, after he gets a ſight of him though a Child. Zaccheus ran and climbed up a tree to ſee him, though deſpiſed of men.—O now he is ſhining in glory, ſhall we not deſire a ſight of him? David deſired it as his one thing, Pſalm xxvii. though he then wanted his throne and kingdom. The ſpouſe ſeeks it as her one thing, Cant. iii. 3. Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth? O but a ſight of him would make your face to ſhine, a ſight of him in his love, in his dyed garments, trading out the wine preſs alone.

7 Another diſh is, the comfort of his Spirit, and the clearing up your intereſt in Chriſt and glory, a ſight of heaven and your names written in the book of life, ſo that all your fears may be ſcattered, objections anſwered, doubts reſolved, and likewiſe the evidences of your graces cleared up to you ſo that though you doubted before if you had faith, yet now you may be enabled to ſay with the poor man, Lord, I believe. You doubted before of your love, but now you may ſay with Peter, Lord, thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee. You doubted before of your intereſt in Chriſt, but now you can ſay with Thomas, My Lord, and my God, with Job, I know that my Redeemer liveth; and with Paul, I know in whom I have believed.

Thus I have ſhewn you ſome of the rich proviſion and noble entertainment prepared in this banquet before you: yea, you ſee it is not only rich proviſion, but there are choice rarities here, hidden manna, angels food; yea, not only choice, but plenty and variety, food adapted to our ſouls nature and faculties; food to nouriſh, ſtrengthen, delight and refreſh the ſoul. Here is food ſuitable to all the faculties, light to the mind, peace to the conſcience, ſatiſfaction to the will, and food for all the affections. Here love may ſatisfy itſelf in embracing the chief among ten thouſands. Deſire may ſatisfy itſelf in claſping the deſire of all nations. Delight may here bathe itſelf in the river of pleaſure. In a word, what can the ſoul need but is here? For Chriſt is made of God to us wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification and redemption. Here is precious blood to purge away our deep guilt; here is perfect righteouſneſs to cover our naked ſoul; here are riches, and unſearchable riches in Chriſt, righteouſneſs for our juſtification, and grace for our ſanctification; here all things are given us richly to enjoy; here hope may feed, on the great and precious promiſes.

2*dly*, At feaſts there uſed to be lavers for the gueſts to waſh in, as at the marriage feaſt in Cana of Galilee, where were ſix water pots ſet for purification, John ii. 6. Doth ſenſe of defilement ſcare you from partaking? Behold here is a fountain opened, Zech. xiii. 1. O come and waſh in it, that ye may be fit to compaſs God's altar, and ſit down at his table.

3*dly*, At banquets there uſes to be mirth and chearfulneſs; ſo here, when prodigal ſinners firſt return to their Father, he hath mirth and muſic to entertain them. See Luke xv. 24. The tidings of Chriſt's purchaſe, and the promiſes, are the beſt muſic and melody in the world: The news of what he hath done and ſuffered, ought to fill your hearts and lips with the high praiſes of God, and thankful admiration of Chriſt and redeeming love. O believers, conſider, you are not to come like mourners to a funeral, but like children to your Father's feaſt, a royal feaſt, I will bring them to my holy mountain, and make them joyful in my houſe of prayer, ſaith the Lord: So that ye may eat this bread with joy, and drink this wine with a merry heart, in hopes of God's accepting you and your ſacrifice, Eccleſ. ix. 7.

5thly, At feaſts there are ſervants to attend the gueſts; here the miniſters are ſtewards and ſervants to attend Chriſt's gueſts at this feaſt: And their work is to direct you to the table, and to give every one their portion of meat in due ſeaſon. God grant we give not the childrens bread to dogs, and them that have no right to it. We know not the heart, ye all have profeſſed yourſelves to be children, O do not mock God and his ſervants.

6thly, Here is a bleſſing craved by the Maſter of this feaſt; yea, he has commanded, and will command the bleſſings, and his ſervants are to pray for the virtue of that bleſſing to this table.

7thly, At a feaſt there is good company. O there is rare company at this feaſt. The King ſits at his table, Cant. i. 12. even the King of glory. Chriſt himſelf is there preſent, and the Father alſo; for in this feaſt we have fellowſhip with the Father and the Son, through the holy Spirit. Here the children of God, yea the glorious ſaints above ſit at this table, and ſhare with us in this feaſt. It is true, they ſit at the upper end of the table, and we at the lower end.——They have better appetites, better muſic; they feed on a naked Chriſt, we by ſigns and ſymbols; but we have all the ſame cheer. O what a great and good company is here!—We read of Belſhazzar that made a feaſt for a thouſand of his lords, Dan. v. 1. But here is a feaſt for many thouſands, yea, to all believers, Jews and Gentiles, an open free feaſt, Iſa. xxv. And we read that Ahaſuerus made a feaſt to all his princes and ſervants, which laſted one hundred and eighty days, Eſth. i. 4. But here is a feaſt which laſts to all eternity.

III. As to the third head, why he prepares ſuch a feaſt for his people? Anſ. 1. To be a ſolemn memorial of his love to ſinners, in ſuffering and dying for them; and this memorial is to be kept up through all generations till Chriſt's ſecond coming. Juſt ſo the paſſover was a commemorating feaſt to the Iſraelites of their protection and deliverance from the bondage of Egypt.

2. To diſcover his infinite riches and goodneſs to poor ſinners. So Ahaſuerus, Eſther i. 3. 4. made a feaſt to all his princes and ſervants, to ſhew them the riches of his excellent majeſty.

3. To expreſs the joy and ſatisfaction he hath in the believer's coming to him. The Father of the prodigal evidenced his joy for the return of his Son (who was dead and now alive, loſt and found) by a feaſt and muſic. O believers this is the day of the gladneſs of Chriſt's heart; glad is he to ſee his prodigals returning, and this feaſt is the welcome home.

4. To expreſs his love to believers, and that he might have opportunity of nearer communion and fellowſhip with them. At feaſts people have great freedom and familiarity with one another, mutual expreſſions of kindneſs, communicating of ſecrets, rejoicing in one another. O but many a poor ſoul has been raviſhed with Chriſt's love here, and with the wine of his conſolation; he has made rare diſcoveries of his love to them.

5. To ratify and confirm the covenant between God and us. It was uſual in the eaſtern countries to ratify contracts and covenants by eating and drinking together. So was it in the covenant made between Iſaac and Abimelech, ſee Gen. xxvi. 28, 30. And ſo it was a federal rite between Laban and Jacob, Gen. xxxi. 46. between the Iſraelites and Gibeonites, Joſhua ix. 14. between David and Abner, 2 Sam. iii. 20. Conſider then, this is a covenanting feaſt, here a ſolemn bargain between God and us is ſealed and ratified. What is the bargain? See the tenor of the covenant, Acts xvi. 31. Believe on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and thou ſhalt be ſaved. Here we engage to believe in Chriſt, and Chriſt engages to ſave us. Here God promiſes to be to us a God, and we promiſe to be to him a people.——Here God promiſes and ſeals the benefits of the covenant on his part, and we promiſe and ſeal the duties of the covenant on our part.——Here God's giving the ſigns is a ſeal on his part, and our taking them is a ſeal on ours.——Here Chriſt gives us his ſoul and body to ſave us, and we give our ſouls and bodies to ſerve him.—Here God binds himſelf to be faithful, and we bind ourſelves to be conſtant.——Yea, we here ſwear allegiance to Chriſt over his broken body and ſhed blood.

6. To be a cordial to his poor fainting ones, and for ſtrengthening the weak and feeble of his people.——Many of his people are ſore caſt down, and have dwelt long with fears and horrors; and this is relief to them, here Chriſt ſmiles, and ſpeaks peace.——Others are weak in grace, here he brings them ſupplies; here the decayed have renewed their ſtrength; here the lame have been made to leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb to ſing.

7. To fortify and encourage againſt all difficulties and trials we may meet with in Chriſt's ſervice. We are to look for reproaches and perſecutions, if we hold faſt by Chriſt. Satan and the world will not be idle, ſee Heb. x. 23. Here is a meal and cordial to hearten us for it; and ſome have met with that in this feaſt which hath made them chearfully venture on ſufferings, and reſolve never to leave Chriſt. An hour of ſealing animates the ſoul for an hour of ſuffering. If the Redeemer ſmile on us, and his love be ſhade abroad in our hearts, we can bear any thing, ſuffer any thing, looſe any thing, and not be diſcouraged. O then come, and take in proviſion againſt the evil day, for ye have a wilderneſs to go through. Elijah was excited to take a double meal, for his journey was long. So if you would have ſtrength for your journey, O here you may have it; here is food more ſubſiſting, durable, and nouriſhing than Elijah's cake and cruſe of water, of which he ate and drank, and in the ſtrength of that meal went forty days and forty nights, unto Horeb the mount of God, 1 Kings xix. 6, 8.——What bread and wine afford to the body, the ſame doth Chriſt's body and blood in the ſacrament, received by faith, afford to the ſoul, viz. ſtrengthening, comforting, nouriſhment. And who but a madman would be ſo cruel to himſelf, as to deny his faint body its ſtated meals and relief? O may it not hearten you, that whatever your ſtraits, bodily wants or neceſſities are, and however ye may be deſpiſed, you have a great King that honours you, owns you, takes you to feaſt with himſelf here, and will ſhortly call you to the marriage ſupper of the Lamb above.

8. To wean you from the vain pleaſures and comforts of the world, and from ſenſual delights; and to make you long for that glorious and full feaſt above. This is a foretaſte of it, and ſhould ſtir up a hunger for it; for this feaſt is the firſt fruits of heaven.

Improvement I. I infer what a horrid calumny it is, that is raiſed againſt the ways of Chriſt by the devil and the world, that they are ſad and melancholly, of purpoſe to fright men from them. No, you ſee Chriſt has royal feaſts for his people, the world knows little of. A believer would not give a crumb of this ſpiritual feaſt for many days of worldly feaſts.

II. Admire his condeſcenſion, that the Lord of glory ſhould make ſuch a feaſt for beggars, ſee Luke xiv. 21. Poor worms, vile ſinners, will he call us, that deſerve not a dog's crumb beneath the table, to come and ſit down with the children at the table? O what are we that he ſhould deal ſo with us, ſinners vile as the mire, and black as hell. You have far greater cauſe to wonder at this privilege than Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam. ix. 7. 'David ſaid to him, I will ſurely ſhew thee kindneſs 'for Jonathan thy father's ſake, and will reſtore thee 'all the land of Saul thy father, and thou ſhalt eat 'bread at my table continually.' Obſerve his anſwer, 'What is thy ſervant, that thou ſhouldſt look upon 'ſuch a dead dog as I am?'

III. How unexcuſable are they who ſlight this feaſt, that has coſt Chriſt ſo dear, more than ten thouſand kingdoms? He has made all things ready, and has been calling ſinners to come. Conſider how grievouſly the King took it, when he made his marriage ſupper, and thoſe that were bidden would not come, Luke xvi. 24.

IV. Exhortation. O communicants who have been preparing for this feaſt, come away to the marriage, all things are ready on Chriſt's part. Object. But how ſhall I get acceſs to the banqueting houſe? Anſw. Employ Chriſt to bring you in. It is he alone that brings his ſpouſe in. You may come to the table, and get the outward elements, but unleſs Chriſt bring you in to the banqueting houſe, ye will not be taken in. It is only Chriſt can give you appetites, and clothe you with the wedding garment; it is only he that can quicken the dead ſoul, and ſtrengthen the weak, I can do all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening me, ſaith Paul. He only can ſend the Comforter, the north and ſouth gales of the Spirit. He only can remove the burden of ſin, and take away the heart of ſtone, diſſolve doubts and ſcatter clouds. O look and long for him then to bring you in, and ſay with theſe in John xi. 56. What think ye, will he come to the feaſt? Will he bring me into the banqueting houſe; will he touch my heart and take me by the hand? Poor ſinner, I will tell you whom he will bring in. It is true, it is not every one, many come thronging to the feaſt that have no ground to expect to be taken in. But there are ſome he will bring in, and they are theſe; 1. The hungry, and thirſty ſinner that is longing for a meeting with Chriſt, ſenſible of his needs and wants, and crying, O a crumb from his hand, a drop from his wounds, a ſeal of pardon from that table elſe I die. Theſe have a promiſe to be filled. 2 The poor broken hearted humbled ſoul, that has a deep ſenſe of his own nothingneſs and unworthineſs, ſaying, I am not worthy that Chriſt ſhould come under my roof, and far leſs worthy that I ſhould come under Chriſt's roof, my ſins are ſo many and great. Is there any ſtanding afar off with the publican, afraid to come to the holy table, ſaying, God be merciful to me a ſinner, Chriſt will come to ſuch, Iſa. lvii. 15. 'He will revive 'the ſpirit of the humble, and the heart of the con'trite ones.' 3. The poor praying and wreſtling ſoul, that has been putting up many a petition, ſigh and groan for acceſs, ſaying, O that I knew where to find him! O when wilt thou come unto me, how long wilt thou hide thy face? O have ye been ſtorming heaven with your cries laſt week, laſt night, and this morning? Have ye been knocking for the opening of the door of the banqueting houſe? He will come and bring ſuch in. 4. All the friends and lovers of Chriſt will be taken in. O ſinner, art thou ſuch, ſee thy warrant and thy welcome, Cant. v. 1. O ſay ſome, I cannot be a friend to Chriſt; but I wiſh him well, and his people and intereſt. I cannot ſay I'm a true lover of Chriſt; but I find my heart glowing and warming with deſire to him, and I would give all the world I had theſe glowings kindled into a flame. Take courage, poor ſoul, Chriſt will not quench the ſmoaking flax, he will blow it up into a flame, and take thee in. 5. All ſincere covenanting ſouls, that have been yeſternight and this morning honeſtly conſenting to the bargain offered in the goſpel, content to cloſe with Chriſt as he offers himſelf, to renounce their idols and luſts, and to give Chriſt their hearts. Is there any ſoul willing to open to Chriſt; O then he will take you in, Rev. iii. 20. If any man open the door, I will come in to him, and will ſup with him, and he with me. O poor ſinners, that never opened your hearts to Chriſt, be perſuaded to open to a bountiful Lord; open your hearts to him, and he will open his banqueting houſe to you. O ſinner, haſt thou no need of Chriſt's dainties? Art thou not a poor, periſhing, ſtarving ſoul, a famiſhed prodigal, and needeſt thou not the bread of life? Chriſt is at the door with variety of bleſſings, and ready to open his banqueting houſe to you, O will ye open to him? Conſider that if ye do not accept of Chriſt, he may paſs ſuch a ſentence againſt you as in Luke xiv. 24. For I ſay unto you, that none of theſe men which were bidden ſhall taſte of my ſupper. O will it not be dreadful to ſee the ſaints ſitting at the royal feaſt in heaven, and you yourſelves ſhut out, like a company of ſtarving beggars ſtanding about the doors where the marriage ſupper is kept? They ſee the lights, and behold the rich diſhes carried up, they hear the mirth and muſic of the gueſts, but not a bit comes to their ſhare.

But as for you that are content to accept of Chriſt on his own terms, come away to the marriage ſupper, Chriſt the Maſter of this feaſt invites you, and will make you welcome. And in coming to this feaſt obſerve the following directions.

1. Come with holy awe and reverence of God, the Maſter and Maker of this feaſt. If ye were going to a prince's table, you would have ſome awe upon your ſpirits; mind the Maſter of this feaſt is a glorious, holy and jealous God that will not be mocked.

2. Come with a pure heart and clean hands, waſh your hearts in the tears of true repentance, cleanſe them of all filth, through the blood of Jeſus, which cleanſeth from all ſin, otherwiſe you will affront the Maſter of this feaſt. Should a beggar that has been wallowing in a puddle, intrude himſelf in that condition into a prince's company, ſit down at his table, and dip his beſmeared hands into the ſame diſh with him, how would he take it? O come not with filthy rags and filthy hands to this holy table, but repent of every ſin, renounce every ſin, and reſolve againſt every ſin.

3. Come with a holy fear and jealouſy over yourſelves, feared that you be not ready. Cry, Lord, let me not wrong Chriſt or my own ſoul, this day! O let me not betray the Son of God with a kiſs; O let me not murder Chriſt or my own ſoul, contract blood guiltineſs, or drink damnation. O what if I want the wedding garment when the King comes in to view the gueſts!

4. Come with a broken and bleeding heart to view the ſlain Lamb. O will not the dying groans and bleeding wounds of Chriſt move you? When you ſee him ſtretched out and nailed, will ye not cry, O behold my Saviour that was nailed for me, dying with love in his heart, and ſmiles in his face; O it was my ſins, drove in theſe nails. Remember, the ſun vailed his face in the time of Chriſt's ſufferings, fainted at the ſight, and could not look; O vail yours, retire inwardly, and take amends of ſin the cauſe of his ſufferings.

5. Have on the wedding garment, viz. Faith in a Redeemer's righteouſneſs. Come relying on him for acceptance, and look to him for ſtrength and furniture; look up to him, O dead ſoul, for life and quickening. How unſeemly will it be to ſee a company of dead corpſe ſet down to the feaſt of the living God? O be acting faith in a lively manner on Chriſt, for faith is the life of all: O come reach hither thy finger and behold Chriſt's hands, reach hither thy hand, and feel the prints of the nails, and mark of the ſpear, and cry with Thomas, My Lord and my God; here will I reſt, and here will I ſtay. In the clefts of his wounds my ſoul ſhall take ſhelter, where juſtice ſhall not reach me.

6. Come with love, for it is a love feaſt. O love Chriſt, that is both the Maſter, the Maker and matter of the feaſt. Chriſt's heart is burning and bleeding with love to you, O let yours do ſo to him. Without love ye have nothing to do here.—Come alſo with love and charity to all men, be ready to forgive every one, as ye would have God to forgive you.

7. Come with panting and thirſting deſires, to ſee and meet with Chriſt, ſaying, I care not who be here, if Chriſt be abſent. O the deſire of my ſoul is towards him and the remembrance of his name.

8. Come with expectation, depending only on Chriſt's merits, God's promiſe, and free mercy in Chriſt, greedily expecting ſomething from Chriſt this day; as the poor cripple man did from Peter and John, Acts iii. 4. 5. And Peter faſtening his eyes upon him, with John, ſaid, look on us. And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive ſomething of them. We ordinarily receive little, becauſe we expect little. O raiſe your deſires and expectations, for you come to a merciful and liberal God, that will not let the expectation of the poor periſh, Pſalm ix. 18.

9. Come reſigning yourſelves to Chriſt. Give up your hearts to Chriſt, ſaying, Lord, I have no ſacrifice to bring but my heart, O that it were a thouſand times better than it is, it ſhould be thine; Lord, accept of the poor ſacrifice.

10. Come with admiration and praiſe. O the high praiſes of God ſhould be in our mouths: wonder and praiſe God for the contrivance of our redemption, and for making choice of ſuch a Redeemer. O wonder and praiſe our Redeemer for leaving his throne of glory for a manger; yea, for a croſs and a grave, and all for the ſake of us. Say, "Lord, what am I, that thou " ſhouldſt part with thy glory, yea, with thy blood and " life for ſuch a wretch as I am? O how am I aſhamed, " that I love thee no more; my heart is cold, my tongue " is ſlow, I cannot love, I cannot praiſe. O let heaven " and earth, angels and men join and extol his free " grace and wonderous love." If ye come in ſuch a frame, you will be taken into the banqueting houſe, and his banner over you will be love. And this leads me to ſpeak a word to the banner of love.

Chriſt upon the croſs hath lifted up a banner of love, he hath declared himſelf willing to receive every ſoul that will come under his banner, and liſt himſelf to fight under his colours. As ye are profeſſing to leave the devil's ſtandard, and come to Chriſt, by taking your ſacrament, (which uſed to be a military oath among the Romans) and ſwearing allegiance to Chriſt; O mind ye are not to draw back, but to follow the Captain of your ſalvation, and fight againſt the devil, the world and the fleſh. If ye perjure yourſelves, and return to your old ways, ſaying, welcome drunken cups, bloody, oaths, lying, &c. ye will incur all the curſes of the law, and vengeance of the goſpel alſo. O ye will ſink deeper into hell than others, and ye will be made to cry, would to God I had been the ſon of a Pagan or Mahometan. Wherefore own and ſtand by the banner of Chriſt; and to encourage you to ſtedfaſtneſs, keep in mind that you have, 1. A noble General, who hath already conquered, and is ready to join you in the fight. 2. A noble cauſe; it is the Lord's battle, they are God's enemies, and enemies to your ſouls alſo. 3. You have noble weapons the ſhield of faith, ſword of the Spirit, &c. they are impenetrable and full proof. 4. Noble pay, a white ſtone, a crown and a new name, grace here, and glory hereafter. 5. Ye are ſure of victory, if ye fight valiantly, for Chriſt will fairly bring you out of the field at length.

A banner is a ſign of union; it ſignifies that all who reſort to it, are united in one company, under ſuch a captain: O then ſtudy union among yourſelves. Let the conſideration of Chriſt's love move you all to be united, and to love one another. O ſhun diviſion, diſcord, ſlandering and backbiting; we are ſoldiers of one company, and under one Captain, and if you divide, enemies will reap advantage.——Again, a banner is a ſign of protection, and love is the banner that engages Chriſt to protect his people; as long as Chriſt loves his people, he will protect and defend them. O then mind your work in evil times, flee to Chriſt's love, and abide in this love; keep your ſouls in the love of God, clear up the evidences of Chriſt's love, and ſo you may look to him for protection and through-bearing in the worſt caſe; men or devils ſhall do you no hurt, while his banner over you is love.——Laſtly, A banner diſplayed ſignifies victory: When conquerors won a city, they diſplayed their colours on the walls; O has Chriſt this day won your hearts, conquered your enemies and luſts, and diſplayed his banner thereupon. O it is love that engaged him to make ſuch a conqueſt. Be faithful to your friendly Conqueror, and let not theſe enemies and rebels get into the city again. O hold out the city, and fight valiantly under Chriſt's banner; be not cowardly, do not baſely ſurrender the fort that Chriſt has won; he has won it, let him wear it, let him poſſeſs the throne for ever. Say to Chriſt, as the men of Iſrael ſaid to Gideon, Judges viii. 22. Rule thou over us, for thou haſt delivered us out of the hand of Midian. O but Chriſt has delivered you out of the hands of ſatan; ſubmit therefore kindly to his government and laws, own him as a King as well as a Prieſt; ſurrender willingly the keys of your heart to him, and keep your heart for him.

THE BALM of GILEAD,
FOR HEALING
A DISEASED LAND.

THE PREFACE.

ALthough theſe ſermons were preached in Scotland, and have ſome reference to the caſe of that church and land under her preſent diviſions and backſlidings: yet they are compoſed in ſuch a ſtrain, as to be uſeful and applicable to any church under the like diſtempers, which, alas, is the caſe of the moſt. What remedies can be ſo effectual to cure them of theſe evils, as theſe propoſed in the following diſcourſes, to wit, the excellent Balm of Gilead, and the glorious miniſtration of the Spirit? If it were the gracious will of God to diſpoſe all the biſhops and miniſters of Britain and Ireland, to make it their buſineſs to open up and recommend theſe noble remedies to their people, it would contribute greatly to heal their maladies, and increaſe the kingdom of Chriſt in theſe lands. I can't help thinking but thoſe who are conſecrated to ſpiritual offices would be more ſuitably and profitably employed in this work, than in attending courts, and purſuing ſecular deſigns.

Seeing now the arm of the Lord is beginning to awake, and many are excited to run to and fro for increaſing goſpel-knowledge, and labour to propagate the doctrine of ſalvation thro' the imputed righteouſneſs of the ſlain Lamb of God: And ſeeing the Lord is pleaſed in ſundry parts of the world to give countenance to theſe endeavours by the outpouring of his Spirit, for awakening many ſouls to an inquiry and ſearch after true happineſs thro' the bleſſed Jeſus: It doth highly concern all goſpel miniſters and preachers to concur in helping forward the Lord's work, by proclaiming the ſaving doctrine and offers of free grace to the world, and to exert themſelves for removing out of the way all letts and hindrances of the kingdom of Chriſt, that ſo his dominion may ſpread from ſea to ſea, thro' all nations of the earth.

In the following ſermons I have made ſome inquiry into the times and ſeaſons of the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom: and becauſe this is greatly connected with the deſtruction of antichriſt, I have mentioned ſome conjectures and calculations about the time of his fall: though I think none ſhould be too bold or peremptory in fixing the preciſe time, but all ought to wait patiently until God's ſet time ſhall come. All may now perceive antichriſt viſibly riſen and diſcovered. Nay, we have ſeen him arrived at his pomp and height about 1500 years after Chriſt; ſince that time the Lord hath begun to waſte and conſume him, by the revival of religion and learning in the world. As his riſe was gradual, ſo ſhall his conſumption be. He hath now been labouring under a deadly conſumption above theſe 200 years paſt. The wound given him is deep and mortal, ſo whatever pains be taken ſometimes to heal it, all ſhall be in vain; for as Chriſt muſt increaſe, ſo antichriſt muſt decreaſe, and be quite ruined at length, as is ſhewed in the following diſcourſes. May all the lovers of Chriſt pray fervently and look out for that bleſſed and joyful time.

SERMON I.

Upon JEREM. viii. 20, 21, 22.

The harveſt is paſt, the ſummer is ended, and we are not ſaved.
For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt, I am black: Aſtoniſhment hath taken hold on me.
Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no phyſician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?

IN the preceding part of this chapter we have repreſented a great deſtruction that God was about to bring upon a ſinful people, and the conſternation the whole land ſhould be in upon the alarm thereof. The ſins of Judah were come to a great height, whereby God was provoked to let looſe the Chaldeans againſt them. The prophet was himſelf an eye-witneſs of the oppreſſion and deſolation of his country and the church of God by the Chaldean army, and he foreſaw ſtill greater judgments and calamities coming upon them, whereby both he and the ſerious people of the land were greatly affected, and put to lament their caſe before the Lord. Among other things they lament the diſappointment of their expectations of healing and deliverance from diſtreſs, ver. 15. We looked for peace, but no good came, and for a time of health, and behold trouble. They ſometimes had hopeful and promiſing ſeaſons, when they expected relief; but after all their waiting they were diſappointed; theſe likely times of healing were loſt. Hence they are put to ſay, The harveſt is paſt, the ſummer is ended, and we are not ſaved. Summer and harveſt are proper ſeaſons of action, opportunities for armies to take the field, to ſubdue enemies, and bring about deliverance for an oppreſt people: The winter that follows is not a fit ſeaſon for action. It is ſad when likely ſeaſons for ſaving a people from temporal enemies and grievances are loſt; but it is yet ſadder for them to loſe hopeful and promiſing ſeaſons for ſaving of their ſouls. The loſs of ſuch harveſt or ſummer days for our ſouls is the greateſt ground of lamentation. The prophet being deeply ſenſible of his people's loſs and calamitous condition, he is grievouſly diſtreſſed for them, ver. 21. For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt, I am black, &c. The daughter of my people is a common Hebraiſm uſed in ſcripture, and it ſignifies the body of the people of Judah, which was God's viſible church upon earth; their hurt and diſtreſs did affect the holy man in the moſt tender manner, and drew forth his ſympathy with them. Upon this account, ſaith he, I am black, I have loſt my wonted colour, my face is turned blackiſh, or I go in black as mourners do. I am aſtoniſhed and troubled the more that I ſee no appearance of relief for them in their diſtreſs, their caſe ſeems to be hopeleſs and incurable. Upon which he puts the queſtion, ver. 22. "Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no phyſician there? Why then, &c." Is there no balm for the diſtreſſed church, no phyſician for a diſeaſed land? It is generally thought the queſtion doth not import any deſpair or denial of help, but rather the contrary, as if he had ſaid, Is there no balm? Is there not a Phyſician? Yes, there is. The incurableneſs of their diſeaſe is not owing to the want of balm, or of a Phyſician in the land, but to themſelves and their unbelief. There was a ſufficient remedy in God, and in the Meſſiah for all their grievances, had they accepted and applied the ſame. Hence he adds that pertinent queſtion, Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered? q. d. What is the cauſe then, or to whom is it to be imputed, that the church or people of Judah do ſtill ly in a dying caſe? ſurely not to the balm nor to the phyſician, but to their own folly and obſtinacy.

Queſt. What is here meant by the balm of Gilead? Anſw. The land of Gilead on the other ſide Jordan was a part of the country of Iſrael, where that plant grew which afforded a moſt precious balm for healing, when it was pierced, which was a rare and valuable commodity, that other countries did traffick for with the land of Iſrael, Jer. xlvi. 11. Ezek. xxvii. 17. And we ſee in Gen. xxxvii. 25. the Iſhmaelites that bought Joſeph carried balm from Gilead into Egypt. Naturliſts ſay, this balm was a juice or oil that run from a certain low ſhrub, when its bark was cut, that grew eſpecially about Jericho in the land of Gilead, and was of great value, as having a ſovereign virtue to cleanſe foul ſores, heal deep wounds, help the eye-ſight, cure the ſtings of ſerpents, yea it was a ſort of catholicon that cured almoſt all diſeaſes. This balm we may look upon as a fit type to repreſent Chriſt's blood, which is an excellent balm and catholicon for all diſeaſes of the ſoul: For God's diſpenſations to the Iſraelites were generally deſigned as types and ſigns of ſpiritual things under the New Teſtament times, according to 1 Cor. x. 11. All theſe things happened unto them for enſamples: Orig. TUPOI, for types. And among the reſt this balm of Gilead was typical and inſtructive to the virtue of the Meſſiah's blood; for ſeeing God vouchſafed this balm to Iſrael only, and made other nations beholden to them for it, it teacheth us that the balm for healing ſouls is only in the church of God, and Chriſt is the true antitype of this balm, for in Judah's land only was Chriſt known, there they had his blood daily typified to them in the ſacrifices, and its virtue ſet forth.

Again, the Phyſician of Gilead is next mentioned, becauſe phyſicians uſe to abound where there is plenty of good medicines. The Balm and Phyſicians in Gilead are figuratively brought in here to point out the plenty of good means of health that were ſtill in Iſrael for recovering them from their languiſhing conſumption, if they had made a right uſe of them. As they had God himſelf, and the Meſſiah and his Spirit which he had promiſed to them, to look to for relief: ſo they had plenty of under means and phyſicians appointed them. They had God's law, the temple, the ordinances, the altar and ſacrifices. They had alſo the princes, the prieſts, and prophets, whoſe buſineſs it was to redreſs grievances, reform the nation, and apply to heaven for help. So that if the health of the church and nation was not reſtored, it was not for want of balm, or a phyſician; nay, God had plentifully provided excellent means and remedies for their cure: And if their diſeaſe be deadly, or their wound incurable, it muſt be owing to themſelves, and to their deſperate wilfulneſs or incorrigibleneſs in ſin, and to their refuſing to ſubmit to the Phyſician's directions and method of cure.

The words being thus opened up, give ground for the following heads of doctrine.

I. The caſe of thoſe is very lamentable, who loſe their harveſt and ſummer days of grace.

II. Every gracious ſpirit is a public ſpirit, and will lay to heart the calamitous caſe of the church or country whereof he is a member.

III. However deſperate the diſeaſes of thoſe within the church may ſeem to be, yet if they die of them, it will be owing to themſelves, ſeeing they have ſuch an able Phyſician, and excellent balm to look to for healing.

It is the laſt of theſe doctrines, I mainly intend to handle and inſiſt upon; wherefore I ſhall the more briefly touch the two firſt as introductory to it.

I. Doct. The caſe of thoſe is very lamentable who loſe their harveſt and ſummer-days of grace: or their moſt hopeful and likely ſeaſons of ſalvation.

I ſhall diſcourſe this point in the following method.

I. Mention ſome of theſe likely ſeaſons, which ſhould be carefully improved.

II. Who may be ſaid to have loſt their ſummer days.

III. Enquire into the cauſes of men's loſing theſe hopeful ſeaſons.

IV. Shew the great evil and danger of loſing them; if the time allow.

V. Make application.

I. As to the firſt, I ſhall inſtance ſome of the ſummer days or hopeful ſeaſons which we ſhould carefully improve for ſaving of our ſouls, and not ſuffer them to be loſt. Such as,

1. The ſummer days of youth. O that is a hopeful ſeaſon, when the heart is moſt tender and tractable, and eaſieſt melted into tears for ſin, and kindled into a flame of love to Chriſt who died for our ſins; God loves the firſt ripe fruits, young tears and prayers, young faith and love, and hence he makes the time of youth the uſual ſeaſon of converting and eſpouſing ſinners to himſelf. O young folks, ſuffer not theſe ſummer days to paſs away in vain; but begin in this ſeaſon to be religious, and to remember God and eternity, Eccl. xii. 1.

2. It is a promiſing ſeaſon, when perſons enjoy lively means and ordinances, whereby Chriſt crucified is evidently ſet forth before their eyes, as the only remedy for their periſhing ſouls, and they earneſtly called and preſſed to come and cloſe with him as ſuch. Behold, now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of ſalvation. O let not this ſummer-day of grace go over without cloſing with Chriſt in the offers of the goſpel.

3. It is a likely ſeaſon, when there is a noiſe and ſhaking among the dry bones, by the motions and ſtrivings of the Spirit in and with the word, as when the Spirit brings the word cloſe home to the ſoul's caſe finding and ſingling it out, as Nathan did David, ſaying, Thou art the man, thou art the child of wrath, the enemy of God, the unregenerate ſinner, againſt whom the ſword of juſtice and curſes of the law are levelled. Or when the Spirit ſo faſtens the arrows of conviction on the conſcience, as to bring the man to a reſtleſs thoughtfulneſs about the guilt of his ſins, and his eternal ſtate, and to cry, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? And to make him diſſatisfied with all his earthly comforts, and ſay, All theſe avail me nothing while I go Chriſtleſs. O this is a harveſt-day of ſalvation, every minute of it is precious, and ſhould be carefully improved for the ſoul.

4. The time of ſatan's reſtraint is a ſeaſon not to be loſt: Sometimes the devil is ſo bound up that he cannot diſturb the church by bloody perſecutions, or by errors and ſchiſms as at other times, that is a fair ſummer-day of grace, which ſhould be well improved. Tho' we can't ſay that ſatan at this time is altogether bound up, nay he is wofully let looſe in reſpect of error and diviſion; but bleſt be God, he is reſtrained with reſpect to perſecution, ſo that, my brethren, he cannot preſently drive your teachers into corners, nor put you to ſeek your ſpiritual bread with the peril of your lives, becauſe of the ſword, in the wilderneſs, as ſometimes hath been the caſe in our land. O then, do not ſin away this calm ſummer-day, but with earneſt attention and care hearken to the ſweet voice of the turtle, which is ſtill to be heard thro' all corners of the land.

5. The time when God is viſiting a land with wakening and alarming diſpenſations of providence, is a ſeaſon to be carefully improved for ſaving of the ſoul. When God doth premoniſh us that either a ſtorm is coming on the church and land in general, or that death approaches us in particular, we ſhould take warning, like Noah, while the evils are at a diſtance, be moved with fear, and provide an ark for the ſaving of our ſouls, before the flood of wrath come upon us. Nay, my friends, you have God to bleſs, that the ark is already prepared to your hand, and a window opened in the ſide of it for your entrance. May you be ſo wiſe as to take warning in time, get faith's wings, and flee into the ark Chriſt, before the flood ariſe, and before death come. You have had a long harveſt-day of grace in the land, and now have ſhrewd tokens of night approaching: You may look for the night of death, or the winter of deſolation, ſtrokes, perſecution, and darkneſs. Wherefore, as Chriſt ſaith, Work while it is day: yet a little while is the light with you, walk while you have the light, leſt darkneſs come upon you. The night cometh (ſaith he) when no man can work. Surely it draws towards eventide, and the night of death: Yea, a fearful night both of ſpiritual and temporal judgments ſeems to be drawing on; and ſhould not the remaining light or day be well employed? There are ſeveral ſigns of an approaching night.

Firſt, When the force and heat of the ſun do abate, it draws towards night; ſo when the goſpel ſun, or preaching of the word, hath little heat or effect upon ſinners cold hearts, it betokens night coming on. Secondly, When the ſhadows of the evening are ſtretched out and grow long, it is a ſign of approaching night. And oh! how long are the ſhadows ſtretched out beyond the ſubſtance! How much doth the profeſſion of religion exceed the power of it at this day? Thirdly, When the labourers go home from their work, it is a ſign the night comes on. Ah! how many of our choice and faithful labourers do we ſee going home, without others to fill their room?—Fourthly, When the evening wolves and beaſts of prey creep out of their holes, it is a token of night. And ſurely there have been evening wolves ſeen among us, who have intruded upon the vineyard, ſpoiled the vines, and miſerably ſcattered the flock of Chriſt.—Fifthly, Growing darkneſs is a forerunner of the night. Ah! how much doth darkneſs prevail among us at this time, yea ſo much, that ſeveral of the ſharpeſt-ſighted are reeling and miſtaking their way, not being able to diſcern between ſin and duty in divers caſes: Alas! many are wandering and loſing their way. Surely then it is our wiſdom and duty to improve the light that remains, in ſeeking converting grace to ourſelves, and an aſſured intereſt in precious Chriſt, before the darkneſs of the night overtake us: And alſo to pray for pity to the land, that at evening it may be light.

In the laſt place, Notwithſtanding of theſe diſmal tokens, it makes the ſeaſon ſomewhat promiſing, that we hear of Chriſt's goings as a conqueror in other parts of the world, and many bowing down at his feet. Now if the King of Zion, be riſing up to make his circuit thro' his churches, to diſplay his glorious power and grace among them; may it not raiſe our hopes, and encourage us to look out for his marching towards us, to make good that word, Zech. xiv. 7. It ſhall come to paſs that at evening time it ſhall be light; that is, when it was not expected. And, oh! what a pleaſant ſurprize would this appearance be to all the lovers of Zion!

II. The 2d head is to enquire who may be ſaid to have loſt their ſummer-days, or their likely ſeaſons of grace. Though we cannot be peremptory about any, while life remains, yet of ſome there may be ſad grounds of fear, that the text is too applicable to them, Their harveſt is paſt, their ſummer is ended, and they are not ſaved, Such as——1ſt, Thoſe who have had the Spirit long ſtriving with them, and they have reſiſted all his motions and operations, ſo that he is quite withdrawn from them. The caſe of ſuch is very hopeleſs, according to Ezek. xxiv. 13.—2dly, Thoſe who perſiſt in ſinful courſes, and harden their necks againſt all challenges and reproofs for the ſame, we ſee what is ſaid of them, Prov. xxix. 1.——3dly, Thoſe who come the length to ſin preſumptuouſly, that is, venture upon ſin againſt light, in hopes of repentance and pardon, their caſe is diſmal, according to Numb. xv. 30.——4thly, Thoſe who provoke God, by their bentneſs on ſin, to ceaſe to be a reprover to them, to ſtrike both conſcience and miniſters dumb, that they challenge them no more, Ezek. iii. 27. Hoſ. iv. 17.——5thly, Thoſe who deliberately relapſe into ſin, after rods, convictions, reſolutions, and vows, Iſa. i. 5.—6thly, Thoſe who give themſelves up to commit ſin with greedineſs, and glory in it, Eph. iv. 19. Phil. iii. 19.——7thly, Thoſe whoſe deſpiſe all goſpel offers, and mock the meſſengers who bring them, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Alas! ſuch have reaſon to fear their harveſt is paſt, &c. Their caſe is very hopeleſs, though none can ſay it is paſt the reach of ſovereign grace.

III. The 3d head is, to enquire into the cauſes of mens loſing their hopeful ſeaſons.—1ſt, It proceeds from their unbelief and doubting of the certainty of goſpel truths: This keeps many hovering ſo long between heaven and hell, death and life, Chriſt and the world, that their ſummer and harveſt days are gone before they come to a reſolution. Did men believe the certainty of wrath to come, and that they are born heirs of that wrath, they would think no motion ſwift enough in fleeing to Chriſt, and cloſing with him in order to eſcape it.

2dly, Many trifle away their ſummer days and ſeaſons of action, becauſe they look on death and eternity at many years diſtance, and that they will have time enough, before theſe expire, to mind ſalvation work. By this deluſion, ſatan cheats many out of their moſt hopeful ſeaſons. Did men look on death as within a ſtep of them, and having no more but a ſingle thread to cut, ſo that within a few days they ſhall either be ſinging with the ſaints in heaven, or roaring with the damned in hell, they would not let their ſummer days paſs ſo idly.

3dly, Promiſing ſummer-days are loſt through indulging of ſloth. Many, before they will be at ſome pains now in prayer and ſecret duties, will venture upon endleſs pains in hell hereafter. Oh! prodigious folly! What pains was Chriſt at to ſave you, and will you be at none to ſave yourſelves? Hath not God an eternity of reſt and pleaſure to recompence your ſmall toil and pains in improving your ſummer days!

4thly, Love of ſenſual delights and carnal company proves a ſnare to many. They are hereby drawn into idleneſs, games, paſtimes, tippling, fooliſh talking and jeſting, and other ſinful pleaſures; whereby their ſummer-days are trifled away and miſpent. Even theſe diverſions which are judged the moſt innocent, ought to be uſed with fear and caution, leſt they ſteal away our heart and thoughts from our chief concerns; which if they do, they are not innocent but hurtful. Oh! they are ſad diverſions that would divert us from Chriſt and heaven. It is unbecoming a Chriſtian that looks for eternal delights in another world, and pleaſures of a higher nature, to have his heart ſet upon the pitiful delights of this earth, which fly away as a dream, and leave nothing behind them, unleſs it be a ſting in the conſcience for ſpending days of grace ſo unprofitably. One hour's enjoyment of Chriſt's preſence and favour hath far more pleaſure in it, than many years of ſenſual delights.

But for ſhortening this diſcourſe, I muſt paſs ſeveral things I had in view, and proceed to

The APPLICATION.

Infer. 1ſt, Doth God in his mercy afford men hopeful ſeaſons for ſaving their ſouls, ſummer-days of youth; harveſt-days of goſpel-grace? O how lamentable muſt it be to ſee men waſting away theſe ſeaſons by delays, putting off converſion-work and cloſing with Chriſt from day to day, till both their ſummer and harveſt are paſt. When conſcience or God's Spirit preſs them, they anſwer with Felix, "Go thy way for this time, and when I have a convenient ſeaſon, I'll hear thee;" meaning nothing but to put off the preſent conviction. Oh! Sirs, the work is ſo weighty and neceſſary, you cannot make too much haſte to expede it, it is work for your immortal ſouls and work for eternity. How careful would a man be to improve a day, if his natural life dependeth upon it? If a condemned man had an hour allowed him to beg his life from his prince, would he think he might delay till ſome minutes of it were paſt! No, he would apply at the very firſt, and uſe the moſt moving words and arguments he could deviſe to obtain it, and leave nothing uneſſayed during that hour. But oh! Is there not much more at ſtake here? When the ſalvation of the precious ſoul through all eternity depends upon the improvement of the preſent ſummer-day of grace! It is your wiſdom to take the morning rather than the evening of it. The morning is fitteſt for beginning a journey; you would call him a fooliſh traveller that would ſet out only when the ſun is ſetting.

Infer. 2. How much are they to be blamed, who waſte away their precious ſeaſons of grace, in purſuing fooliſh luſts and pleaſures, who take God's time and their ſoul's ſeaſons too, to do the devil's work in. Oh, Sirs! doth God create pleaſant ſummer and harveſt-days for you to ſerve the devil his grand enemy? Wretched ingratitude! Or, do you think that God ſhould wait till the devil, the world and the fleſh have done with you, and then be content to take their leavings! Be aſhamed of ſo requitting the Lord, and dealing ſo with your Maker, O fooliſh people and unwiſe!

Infer. 3. Surely, goſpel-ſlighters, and neglecters of the ſeaſon of grace, muſt have an uncomfortable death-bed, ſeeing the mournful ditty of my text belongs to them, Our harveſt is paſt, our ſummer is ended, and we are not ſaved. Oh! how cutting muſt the review of waſted ſummer-days be to you when death calls upon you! It will be ſo far from yielding you any comfort at that time, to call to mind your carnal company and converſe, your jeſts and ſports, your games and paſtimes, your tippling and idle talking, that the very remembrance of theſe will increaſe your ſorrow.

Infer. 4. We may hence juſtly conclude goſpel-ſlighters to be men beſide themſelves, and without the free uſe of their reaſon, ſeeing they act a part below the very brutes and inſects. Theſe obſerve the proper ſeaſons in providing for winter, but ah! you neglect yours in providing for eternity. The ſtork in the heavens knows her appointed times; the turtle, the crane and the ſwallow obſerve the time of their coming, Jer. viii. 7. The ant provideth her meat in the ſummer, and gathereth her food in the harveſt, and all to lay up for winter, Prov. vi. 8. But ah! you let your ſouls ſummer and harveſt-days paſs over without minding the winter of death, or providing for them when diſlodged of the body. It muſt ſurely be the height of madneſs to trifle away the ſeaſon which is given you for ſaving your ſouls through all eternity. If ſin had not wofully bemiſted your eyes, you would have been ready to have looked upon him as a monſter or madman, that had but a few days to win or loſe his ſoul for ever, and yet would be playing theſe away at cards and dice, or trifling them away in jeſts and diverſions, tippling and idleneſs, and never once minding the ſaving of his ſoul! And yet how many of all ranks may I apply to, and ſay, Thou art the man!

Infer. 5. If goſpel ſeaſons be the ſummer and harveſt for our ſouls, it muſt be our unqueſtionable duty and intereſt to improve them with the greateſt care, by complying with the Spirit's motions, and the goſpel-offers, by cloſing with Chriſt, and 'giving all diligence 'to make our calling and election ſure;' for if the proper ſeaſon for theſe be loſt, the work cannot be done at all. You are all careful to obſerve the ſeaſons for your ſecular profits. The huſbandman his ſeaſon for plowing, ſowing and reaping; the merchant his time for attending fairs and markets; the mariner his time when the wind is fair for ſailing. And ought not you much more to be obſervant of your ſummer and harveſt ſeaſons of grace? Remember and believe it, O trifler, the time is at hand, when you will be put to cry, 'O for one of theſe ſummer-days again! O for 'one of theſe ſabbaths or communion-ſeaſons, wherein 'I had the free offers of a crucified Chriſt! O how 'would I prize it; but alas! a thouſand worlds, had 'I them to give, cannot recal one of them to me.' It was a vain wiſh of that poor woman when dying, O call time again, call time again. No, no, a ſummer-day or a harveſt-day cannot be recalled; therefore be wiſe to ſpend them with fear and care, while you enjoy them.

May the Lord bleſs goſpel ſeaſons to us. Amen.

Of a public Spirit.

SERMON II.

On Jer. viii. 21. For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt, &c.

THE doctrine which now falls to be handled, is,

Doct. II. That every gracious ſpirit is a public ſpirit, and will lay to heart the calamitous caſe of the church or country whereof he is a member.

So did Jeremiah here, and in ſeveral other parts of his writings, as in Jer. ix. 1. Jer. xiii. 17. and in his book of Lamentations: Such public-ſpirited perſons alſo were Moſes, Samuel, David, Iſaiah, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, Paul, and other ſcripture ſaints.

The method of handling this doctrine may be,

I. To enquire into the nature and evidences of a truly public ſpirit.

II. To ſhew the reaſonableneſs and neceſſity of a public ſpirit.

III. Make application.

I. As to the firſt, to wit, the nature of this public ſpirit which is in gracious perſons, eſpecially as it is evidenced by their holy zeal, and concern for the church under diſtreſs: it doth imply ſeveral things.

1ſt, A ſincere love to Chriſt, and concern for his glory, which prompts us to prefer the things of Chriſt to our own things. If we love not Chriſt the head, we cannot have a true love to his body and church, nor a concern for its welfare. It is this love that makes gracious ſouls prefer Jeruſalem above their chief joy, Pſal. cxxxvii. 6.

2dly, There is in it, a ſympathy and fellow-feeling with the church in diſtreſs, as being members of the ſame body. We ſee every living member of the body feels the injuries which are done to it, or to any of its fellow-members, and is ready to act for their relief: So the eyes and hands are ready to help the leg or foot when hurt, as feeling the ſmart of it. In like manner the members of Chriſt's body myſtical have a fellow-feeling together, and are ready to act for the relief of each other in diſtreſs.

3dly, It imports not only a deep concern and ſorrow for the church in trouble, but alſo a diſpoſition to expreſs and evidence this concern, by uſing all the means in our power to help and relieve her; ſuch as faſting, mourning and weeping for all the ſins, whether of ourſelves or others, which draw down wrath and calamities upon the church; and wreſtling with God by earneſt prayer for her relief, looking to Chriſt and his blood for pardoning and removing thoſe ſins which have raiſed the ſtorm againſt her. This did Nehemiah, Daniel, Ezra, David, Jeremiah, and others.

II. The 2*d* head, is to ſhew the reaſonableneſs and neceſſity of this public ſpirit, and zealous concern for the church in diſtreſs. Now this will appear from ſeveral grounds and conſiderations; ſuch as,

1*ſt*, The near relation to, and intereſt which Chriſt hath in his church: The church is his building, his houſhold, his peculiar treaſure, his jewels, and dear purchaſe; yea, ſhe is Chriſt's body, of which he is the Head. Now, if you have any love to Chriſt himſelf, you cannot be unconcerned for the church, which is ſo nearly related to him, when ſhe is in trouble. If you love the Head, you cannot but love the body alſo.—Again as Chriſt's relation to the church is near, ſo his love to her is proportionable; he compares his love to that of a tender mother's to her ſucking child, which ſhe cannot forget; and therefore he engraves Zion upon the palms of his hands, and hath her walls continually before him, Iſa. xlix. 15. 16. In that expreſſion, he alludes to the practice of the Jews in ſhewing their concern for Jeruſalem in ruins, during the Babyloniſh captivity: They engraved the effigies of Jeruſalem upon their rings, to keep her in perpetual remembrance: In like manner, ſaith the Lord, I have the church engraven upon the palm of my hands, ſo that I can never open my hand to beſtow a bleſſing upon any, but the church's caſe preſents to my eye. Now, if God ſo loves the church, and is concerned for her welfare, it becomes us alſo to be concerned and affected for her.

2*dly*, This affectionate concern is reaſonable and neceſſary, becauſe your intereſt. Every one of you is nearly connected with that of the church, as being members of the ſame myſtical body, who muſt ſuffer one with another; ſo that in ſeeking the public good of the church, you conſult your own private intereſt alſo; for your own proſperity is bound up in her welfare. You are like paſſengers in a ſhip, that have your perſons and all your effects along with you there; ſo that, if the ſhip be proſperous you are well, but if ſhe ſink, you loſe all. Your precious ſouls in particular muſt ſuffer when the church doth ſuffer: They cannot but be reduced to a melancholly ſituation, when the church is diſtreſt with ſpiritual judgments; ſuch as the plague of dry breaſts, and the withdrawing of the Spirit of God from ordinances. If the mother be ſickly, the ſucking child muſt languiſh.

3*dly*, To be public-ſpirited makes a man a public bleſſing, and an inſtrument of much good to others, which is a man's greateſt honour. This would make you reſemble your heavenly Father, who doth good to all, by making his ſun to riſe and his rain to fall upon them. And alſo like your Saviour, who was a public bleſſing, while on earth, for he ſtill went about doing good, Acts x. 38. And like Abraham, who was a bleſſing to the nations, Gen. xii. 2. Job was a man of a noble public ſpirit, upon which account he was had in the greateſt love and eſteem, reſpect and reverence by all ranks; when the ear heard him, or the eye ſaw him, they bleſſed him; why? becauſe (ſaith he) I delivered the poor that cried, I was eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame, &c. Job xxix. 11, 12. &c.

4*thly*, Becauſe God's glory ſuffers when the church ſuffers, for Zion is the ſeat of his glory, Pſal. lxxvi. 1. 2. It is the church that doth diſplay and ſhew it forth. God's revenue of honour and praiſe in the world would come to little, if God had not a church therein to pay him his rent: hence he calls his church the branch of my planting, the work of my hands that I may be glorified, Iſa. lx. 21. The reſt of the world embezzle their talents, but God's church and people improve theirs for God's glory. Now when theſe are ſuppreſt and ſunk, they are diſabled for ſhewing forth his glory. Nay, then the enemy is ready to inſult them, and to reproach both them and their God. Hence king Hezekiah called the time of Jeruſalem's diſtreſs, a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of blaſphemy, Iſa. xxxvii. 3.

5*thly*, Becauſe God is highly pleaſed with a public ſpirit, and with thoſe who interpoſe for his church in trouble; he repreſents himſelf in ſcripture as ſeeking carefully for theſe to put marks of honour and reſpect upon them, Jer. v. 1. Ezek. xxii. 30. Alſo we ſee what ſingular honour God put upon Moſes and Phineas upon that account, Exod. xxxii. 11, 14. Numb. xxv. 10, 11. Pſal. cvi. 23, 30, 31. Alſo he promiſes proſperity to all ſuch, and familiarity with himſelf, Pſal. cxxii. 6. Iſa. xlv. 11.

6*thly*, Becauſe on the other hand, God is much diſpleaſed with thoſe who are unconcerned about his church when in diſtreſs, yea, he denounces a wo againſt them who are at eaſe in Zion, and are not grieved for the affliction of Joſeph, Amos vi. 1, 6. And we ſee what wrath was threatened againſt Eſther, if ſhe ſhould be eaſy or ſilent when the church was in danger, Eſth. iv. 14. For if thou altogether hold thy peace at this time, then ſhall enlargement and deliverance ariſe to the Jews from another place, but thou and thy father's houſe ſhall be deſtroyed.

The APPLICATION.

Infer. 1. If God be well pleaſed with thoſe who are ſenſibly affected with the church's caſe when in diſtreſs, how flaming muſt his wrath be againſt thoſe who are the inſtruments of her diſtreſs, and inſtead of ſympathizing with her in it, do rejoice in her trouble; O that ſuch would know that they are not only the enemies of the church, but they are the enemies of God, and the very butt of his anger every day, Pſal. vii. 11. How dreadful is their caſe, who have the poiſoned arrows of God's wrath levelled againſt them!

Infer 2. If it be the character of gracious ſouls to be concerned for the church, what a bad ſign muſt it be of thoſe who mind their own things, and not the things of Jeſus Chriſt? of whom the apoſtle ſpeaks, Phil. ii. 21. And alas! how many are ther amongſt us who have their minds and affections wholly ſet upon the earth! They are warm, keen, and anxious about the concerns of their bodies and families, but cold and indifferent about the things of Chriſt and his church: They, like Gallio, care for none of theſe things, Acts xviii. 17. If their bodies or friends be in diſtreſs, they are troubled; but tho' the church of God be in affliction, it gives them no uneaſineſs; which is a ſad ſign they are not living members of Jeſus Chriſt, for if they were, they would have a feeling and ſympathy with the body.

3dly, We may take up a lamentation for the want of a public-ſpirited and generous concern for the church of God among us, which is this day in great danger and diſtreſs by errors, diviſions, and decay of piety: And yet how few are laying it to heart? Ah! whence doth this indifference proceed? Surely, from want of love to Chriſt the church's Head, or from exceſſive love to the world, and carnal pleaſures. When men ly upon beds of ivory, chant to the ſound of the viol, and drink wine in bowls, they are not grieved for the affliction of Joſeph, Amos vi. 4, 5, 6.——Again, this indifferency about Chiſt's matters, proceeds from that curſed root of ſelf-love, and ſelf-ſeeking, which is in all men by nature, tho' in the mean time ſin and Satan have blinded their eyes, that they know not their true intereſt: they know not what it is rightly to ſeek themſelves; if they ſeek the good of their bodies with the neglect of their ſouls, they think to ſeek themſelves beſt this way; but oh, if their eyes were opened, they would ſee that this ſelf-ſeeking, is nothing but ſelf-hating and ſelf-deſtroying. The rich glutton fancied he was ſeeking himſelf and his own happineſs, when he cloathed himſelf in purple and fared deliciouſly every day; but afterwards when he lifted up his eyes he ſaw his ſelf-ſeeking was really ſelf-deſtroying, for by pampering his body a little time, he damned his ſoul for ever. So that thoſe who ſerve God beſt, by ſeeking his glory and his church's good, before their worldly intereſt, do really ſeek themſelves moſt; for they hereby ſecure the happineſs of both ſoul and body through all eternity.

5thly, Let all therefore be exhorted to be public ſpirited, and ſuitably concerned for the church in diſtreſs. O lay to heart her calamity, and ſhew your concern for her relief, by mourning for ſin which brings on wrath, and praying earneſtly for deliverance from it, ſaying with David, Do good in thy good pleaſure unto Zion, build thou the walls of Jeruſalem.

Motives to it: 1ſt, From the pattern of our bleſſed Lord and Head, whoſe example we ſhould copy after in his ſympathy with, and concern for the church in trouble. His ſoul was grieved for their miſery: In all their affliction he was afflicted. When they are perſecuted he feels himſelf injured, and this ſympathy ſets him on work to interceed for them, as he did for Jeruſalem under the Babyloniſh captivity, Zech. i. 12. 'O Lord of hoſts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jeruſalem, and on the cities of Judah, againſt which thou haſt had indignation theſe threeſcore and ten years.' Let all the members then follow the example of their Head.

2. Public ſpirited perſons are the pillars of ſocieties, and bear off wrath and judgments from them. Hence we ſee the flood could not riſe to deſtroy the old world, till Noah was ſhut up in the ark; nor could the fire be rained from heaven upon Sodom, till Lot was houſed in Zoar; and both Noah and Lot were public-ſpirited men, and therefore great bleſſings and pillars to the world. O ſirs, this public-ſpirited diſpoſition would make you bleſſings to the church and to the iſland: It would make you live deſired, and die lamented: Men would reckon your lives worthy of many prayers, and your deaths of many tears. Elijah was of this diſpoſition, and we ſee how Eliſha bewailed his departure, 2 Kings ii. 12. And Eliſha ſaw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Iſrael, and the horſemen thereof; meaning that Elijah was the ſafety and ſtrength of Iſrael, by his prevalency with God; and a better defence to them than chariots and horſemen.

3dly, This diſpoſition is a good evidence both of love to God, and of love to the ſouls of men: for it is of the nature of true love to be concerned for the good of thoſe whom we love, to mourn when they ſuffer, and rejoice when they proſper. If we love God, we will lament the diſhonours which are done to him. If we love the ſouls of men, we will pray for their converſion, and bewail their ſins which bring deſtruction upon them.

4thly, It would be a good means to ſave you from the guilt of other mens ſins, and ſecure you from the wrath which they bring on. For they who ſigh and cry for all the abominations that are done in the midſt of Jeruſalem have a mark ſet upon them for their preſervation, Ezek. ix. 4. God looks upon our mourning for the ſins of others, as an entering of our diſſent againſt them, and ſo will not charge them upon us.

Queſt. How ſhall we attain to this public ſpirit and zealous concern for the church in diſtreſs?

Anſw. Take the following directions:

1. Beg for the Spirit of God that dwells, breathes and acts in all the members of Chriſt's myſtical body. He ſurely is the public Spirit that inclines all the members to take the ſame care one for another, and to ſeek the good of the whole body, Rom. viii. 14.

2*dly*, Let the grace of love abound in your hearts, love to God and to all his people; and ſee to keep this holy fire always burning. Love makes the wants and ſufferings of others to be our own, and prompts us to lay out ourſelves for them.

3*dly*, Love the ſociety of the public-ſpirited and zealous ones of the land, and particularly thoſe who ſtudy to manage their zeal with piety and prudence; for as iron ſharpens iron, ſo the converſation of ſuch may be the means of enlivening you.

4*thly*, Beware of carnal company, which oft proves a dangerous quench-coal to zeal and activity for God. Peter found this by going into the ſociety of the high-prieſt's ſervants; for tho' he got his hands warmed amonſt them, he got his heart miſerably cooled to Chriſt and his people.

Laſtly, When you attain to any meaſure of zeal and public-ſpiritedneſs, endeavour to manage it with holy wiſdom and caution, ſo as you may recommend this grace to others, and not ſtumble them at it thro' your miſmanagement. There is much need for this caution, eſpecially in reeling and dividing times; wherefore take theſe advices:

1. See that you act from a principle of true love to God, which will engage you to love all who bear his ſtamp and image.

2. See that your ends be pure and ſincere, not to gain eſteem or applauſe, or increaſe a party; but that God may be glorified, and Chriſt's kingdom advanced in the word.

3. Watch carefully that your zeal do not mix itſelf with your own paſſion and bitterneſs of ſpirit, which we are always in hazard of: The apoſtle James doth nobly caution us againſt this evil, Jam. iii. 14. to the end. A cauſe ſometimes may be good and juſt, and yet managed with too much heat and animoſity againſt our godly brethren: Job's friends were good men, and expreſſed much zeal for God and religion in their ſpeeches, but yet God was diſpleaſed with them for mixing their zeal with ſo much bitterneſs and raſh cenſures againſt his upright ſervant Job. Wherefore if conſcience oblige you at any time to oppoſe them who are godly, ſee that you do it with much calmneſs, tenderneſs and caution; and take care that your zeal do not degenerate into paſſion, bitterneſs, or hatred againſt any of them. Mind what the centurion ſaid to the chief captain, when going to ſcourge Paul, Acts xxii. 26. Take heed what thou doſt, for this man is a Roman. So ſay I, take heed what you do to any man, that is a member of Chriſt.

Object. Are we not called to contend with earneſtneſs when matters of faith are at the ſtake? according to Jude, ver. 2. Anſ. 1. All points of truth are not of equal weight and importance, and therefore not to be contended for with equal zeal and concern —2. Zeal and meekneſs are very conſiſtent, and not oppoſite; ſo that there may be zealous and earneſt contending for truth without wrath and paſſion.—3. Be perſuaded that the wrath of man never worketh the righteouſneſs of God: yea, wrath or paſſion is the worſt thing that can be brought into a religious controverſy, for as a bad cauſe is never made better, ſo a good cauſe is always made worſe by it. The glory of God doth not need ſuch rotten pillars to ſupport it, as our wrath and paſſion, or our bitter and angry words. Alas! it is the raſh uſing of the tongue that greatly inflames our differences, namely, by perſonal reflections, rigid cenſures, uncharitable conſtructions, evil ſurmiſes, aggravating the miſtakes of others, &c. This the wiſe man obſerved of old, Prov. xv. 1. 18. Suerly the tongue is an unruly member, and full of deadly poiſon. May God of his infinite mercy give us grace to govern it aright, for Jeſus Chriſt's ſake. Amen.

The Diſeaſes of Souls.

SERMON III.

On Jer. viii. 22. Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no Phyſician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?

THE words being before explained, and the doctrines raiſed, I proceed to Doct. III. viz. However deſperate the diſeaſes of thoſe within the church may ſeem to be, yet if they die of them, it will be owing to themſelves, ſeeing they have an able phyſician, and excellent balm to look to for healing.

This being the doctrine which I chiefly intended to inſiſt upon, I propoſe to do it at ſome length in the following method.

I. I will enquire into theſe dangerous diſeaſes for which there is balm in Gilead, and a phyſician there.

II. Take notice of ſome of theſe dangerous ſymptoms which make our diſeaſes appear deſperate and incurable, for which there is yet balm in Gilead.

III. Speak of the phyſician there, who hath the balm, and applies it for curing the diſeaſed.

IV. Enquire into the nature of the balm, and means which the phyſician makes uſe of for healing.

V. Touch at the phyſician's method of applying the balm, and performing the cure

VI. Make application of the whole.

I. The firſt head, is to enquire into the dangerous diſeaſes of thoſe within the church for which the balm is provided. And for the better underſtanding hereof I ſhall premiſe ſome things.

1. When I ſpeak of the church, I mean the church viſible, which includes hypocrites as well as true believers.

2. Though the ſtrength and power of the ſoul's diſeaſes be broken in believers by renewing grace, yet there is no diſeaſe in the unrenewed, but believers are in part liable to it, and have the relicks of it to groan under, while they are here below.

3. I am not to ſpeak of the diſeaſes of the body natural, which is the province of phyſicians; nor of the body politic, or civil ſociety, which is the buſineſs of politicians and ſtateſmen; though in the mean time the abounding of theſe at this day is ſo viſible to all, that we have ground to bewail and mourn over them before the Lord. Ah! the diſeaſes of our body, both civil and eccleſiaſtic, are ſo great and lamentable, that we may juſtly apply that word to ourſelves, which we have in Iſa. i. 5, 6. The whole head is ſick, and the whole heart faint: from the ſole of the foot even unto the head, there is no ſoundneſs in it, but wounds, bruiſes, and putriſying ſores. Such a caſe indeed is mournful, yet, bleſſed be God, it is not deſperate: There is balm in Gilead for the ſtate as well as the church, and we ſhould plead with the great phyſician in Iſrael to pity both, and heal their reſpective diſeaſes. Thanks be to God that he is both able and willing, and that he gives us ſuch promiſes to plead with him, as theſe following, in Iſa. i. 25, 26. "And I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy droſs, and take away thy tin: and I will reſtore thy judges as at the firſt, and thy counſellors as at the beginning; afterwards thou ſhalt be called the city of righteouſneſs," &c. ——And that in Iſa. xlix. 22, 23. "Thus ſaith the Lord God, Behold I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles, and ſet up my ſtandard to the people; and they ſhall bring thy ſons in their arms, and thy daughters ſhall be carried on their ſhoulders: and kings ſhall be thy nurſing fathers, and their queens thy nurſing mothers," &c.——And that promiſe in Iſaiah lx. 17, 18. "I will make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteouſneſs: violence ſhall no more be heard in thy land, waſting nor deſtruction within thy borders; but thou ſhalt call thy walls ſalvation, and thy gates praiſe." Now, it is ſurely the duty of all the members of both church and ſtate to plead theſe promiſes with God, and to wait his time for accompliſhing them to us. O what is there ſo hard, but the out-pouring of his Spirit can do?

4. The diſeaſes which I propoſe to ſpeak of in this place are the ſins of ſpiritual plagues and diſtempers of mens ſouls, which are very dangerous and deadly; theſe we ought all to know, with their ſymptoms and effects, that we may ſeek after the balm in Gilead, which is mercifully provided of God for our healing. God would have every man to know the plague of his own heart, 1 Kings viii. 38. This every man ſhould know and be acquainted with in the firſt place, in order to healing; though yet we are not wholly to confine our thoughts and care about thoſe diſeaſes which are private and perſonal, but ſhew our concern alſo about thoſe which are public and national; of which more afterwards.

5. Theſe ſoul diſtempers are called, in ſcripture, diſeaſes, wounds, and ſickneſs; Pſal. xxxviii. 5. and ciii. 3. and cxlvii. 3. Ezek. xxxiv. 4 Matth. ix. 12. becauſe they produce effects in the ſoul, like to thoſe which diſeaſes produce in the body: ſuch as, 1. As diſeaſes waſte the beauty of the body, and produce uncomelineſs and deformity in it, Pſal. xxxix. 11. As they make the eyes ſink and turn dull, the ſkin ſhrink up and gather blackneſs, the fleſh melt away, and bones ſtick out, and the moſt beautiful perſon to look pale and ghaſtly: So our ſins and ſpiritual diſtempers deſtroy the comelineſs of the ſoul, deprive it of its primitive beauty, the image of God; and bring upon it a moſt ghaſtly deformity, and make it reſemble both brutes and devils, the one in ſenſuality and luſt, the other in pride and malice.——2. As diſeaſes weaken the body, and make it unfit for labour; ſo ſin weakens the ſoul, and makes it unfit for ſpiritual work and exerciſes, as prayer, hearing, meditating, &c. ſo that duty becomes a burden to it.——3. As the diſeaſes deprive men of their appetite for food, and of their digeſtion; ſo ſin takes away the ſoul's appetite and digeſtion, that it hath no hunger for the bread of life, for communion with God, and the influences of his Spirit; and though the man attends ordinances, he doth not digeſt what he hears, nor is nouriſhed by it.——4. Diſeaſes occaſion pain in the body that it cannot reſt; ſo ſin brings anguiſh and torture into the ſoul. Hence David complains of his bones being vexed, and his ſoul being ſore vexed, Pſal. vi. 2, 3. Theſe things being premiſed, I ſhall mention ſome of thoſe dangerous diſeaſes of the ſoul, for which we need the balm in Gilead.

I. Atheiſm. Infidelity or miſbelief of divine truths revealed to us is a deadly diſeaſe, for it hinders the ſucceſs of the goſpel, and the ſaving of ſouls. What is it that keeps many halting ſo long between two opinions, and hovering betwixt Chriſt and the devil, but their not believing firmly the Bible to be God's word, and the goſpel tidings to be certain truth: namely, that God ſent Jeſus Chriſt, his eternal Son, into the world, to aſſume our nature, and die for ſin in our ſtead: and their not giving firm credit to the being of a God, the immortality of the ſoul, and the life to come. Tho' many will not openly queſtion any of theſe truths, yet the wavering thoughts they have about them hinder them from falling in with the goſpel method of ſalvation, which God hath eſtabliſhed. Ah! this is a deadly diſeaſe! Alſo, there is much practical Atheiſm among us: many profeſs to own God, and yet live as if they believed there was no God that made the world, and no providence that governs it: They pay God no homage nor reſpect; they put the creatures, or ſelf in God's room; they aſcribe their mercies to fortune, or to their own wiſdom or induſtry, rather than to God. A woful diſeaſe! God's children indeed are cured of prevailing Atheiſm, yet the dregs of the diſeaſe do remain, and ſometimes atheiſtical thoughts come to a great height in them, as is Aſaph, though afterwards he was heartily grieved and aſhamed for entertaining them, and calls himſelf both a fool and a beaſt for it, Pſal. lxxiii. 21, 22. And no wonder he did ſo, for Atheiſm and infidelity, tho' it abound in the church, yet there is no ſuch diſeaſe in hell, no ſuch madneſs there, for the devils believe and tremble, James ii. 19. But tho' the diſeaſe be grievous, yet Chriſt hath balm for it, and to him we muſt go both to help our unbelief, and increaſe our faith.

II. Ignorance of God and of goſpel truths is a mortal diſeaſe, and deſtroys many, even of thoſe who profeſs to know him, according to Hoſ. iv. 6. There are multitudes living in the midſt of goſpel light, who yet continue in groſs darkneſs. They are ignorant of the infinite juſtice and holy nature of God; and of the miſery of man in his fallen eſtate, of the evil of ſin, and the ranſom neceſſary for it. They are ignorant of Jeſus Chriſt and his mediatory offices, and of the nature and neceſſity of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and of faith which applies it to us. They know nothing of the Spirit's office in our redemption, nor of his work in regeneration; yea, they do not ſo much as know, if there be a Holy Ghoſt. Alas! that this diſeaſe of ignorance ſhould ſtill prevail, notwithſtanding all the means of knowledge we enjoy. I grant believers are ſpiritually illuminated, and get the ſtrength of this diſeaſe broken at their firſt converſion, yet ſtill much blindneſs doth remain with them; and frequently clouds of darkneſs do ſo overſhadow them, that they have but faint views of divine myſteries. This is a ſad diſeaſe, but yet there is balm in Gilead, and eye-ſalve in Iſrael for it; Rev. iii. 17, 18. Jer. xxiv. 7.

III. Hardneſs of heart is a ruining diſeaſe to multitudes. Oh! it is this that makes them ſit under the miniſtry of the word, and hear the moſt terrible threatenings and curſes denounced againſt their ſins, and yet be no more moved than the ſeats they ſit on, or the dead that ly under their feet: ſo hard is the ſtone in the heart, that the hammer of the word in the hand of man makes no impreſſion upon it; promiſes draw not, and threatenings drive not; mercies do not allure, and judgments do not alarm: this is a prevailing plague among the generality of goſpel hearers. And though believers at converſion have the heart of ſtone taken away, and a heart of fleſh given, yet they are much plagued with recurring hardneſs, that oft makes them complain of being little affected either with ordinances or providences; and tho' the fire burn round about them, that they lay it not to heart. This is an evil diſeaſe, yet there it balm in Iſrael, and help in the promiſes for it; Ezek. xxxvi. 26. Phil. i. 6.

IV. Earthly-mindedneſs is a woful diſeaſe; it clogs the mind and unfits the ſoul for ſpiritual work. The thoughts of the world ſhut out the thoughts of God and eternity: they tempt many poor ſouls, like Martha, to be carefully troubled about many things, even things which will not avail them at a dying hour, while the one thing neceſſary is quite neglected and forgot. Ah! what numbers are there dying of this diſeaſe? when other plagues kill their thouſands, this ſlays its ten thouſands. O what havock doth it daily make among profeſſed Chriſtians? Pharaoh's words concerning the Iſraelites may well be applied to many of them, Exod. xiv. 3. They are entangled in the land, the wilderneſs hath ſhut them in. So hot are they in purſuing the world, ſo buſied in providing for their families, in paying their debts, in making bargains, purchaſes, and in courting the favour of men, that they can find no time in their lives, nor room in their hearts for precious Chriſt, and the concerns of their ſouls. O ſinners! this diſeaſe of earthly-mindedneſs doth quite defeat the deſign of the goſpel; and marr your profiting by ſabbaths and ſermons: it turns the houſe of God into a place of merchandize, by your thoughtfulneſs in it about worldly gain and profit. What a fearful diſtemper is this, that turns a man's head and heart where his feet ſhould be! that makes him beſtow his ſoul and all its noble faculties upon a little white and yellow clay! and ſo all his days dig for droſs and dung with mattocks of gold! Nothing can cure this diſeaſe but the balm of Gilead. The prevailing power of it is indeed broken in believers at converſion, the world is then put down from the throne and chief place in the ſoul; yet afterwards it doth rally its broken forces, and ſtruggles hard to recover the throne again; and this proves very troubleſome even to the beſt. It diſtracts their thoughts, moleſts them in holy duties, and ſteals away their affections from Chriſt and heaven. This is a ſore plague, yet there is balm in Iſrael and help in God's word and promiſe for it; Cant. iv. 8. Jer. xxxii. 4. Col. iii. 1, 2.

V. Averſion to ſpiritual duties is a ſore diſeaſe, when the heart becomes backward to pay God a viſit in ſecret, and the man unwilling to go to his cloſet to converſe with his Maker. Ah! this is the caſe with many, who would rather toil their bodies a whole day, than ſpend a quarter of an hour upon their knees with God in ſecret. Their animal ſpirits are vigorous and lively in purſuing their worldly buſineſs, or even their diverſions; but they are low and faint in ſoul-work and ſpiritual exerciſes. We ſee many, they do not weary to ſpend whole days, yea, and nights too, in drinking, dancing, gaming and ſerving their luſts: but they grudge to give God ſo much as one day, or any part even of his own day. They ſay of ſabbaths and ſermons, What a wearineſs hath it? When will the ſabbath be gone? This is a prevailing diſeaſe, and how ſtrong are the dregs of it even in believers! For tho' at converſion their hearts are reconciled to God and his ways, yet at times they feel much of a recurring backwardneſs for ſpiritual work, ſo that when they would do good, evil is preſent with them. But yet there is balm for this diſeaſe, in the phyſician of Iſrael, and his gracious promiſes; Pſal. cx. 3. Iſa. xl. 31. Ezek. xxxvi. 27.

VI. Indwelling corruption, prevailing and venting itſelf various ways, is a ſad diſeaſe. Sometimes it riſes like a flood, ſwells high, and carries all before it, like the current of a tide that cannot be withſtood. So it is with thoſe in whom the ſtrength of corruption was never ſubdued by converting grace. And tho' the tide be turned with renewed perſons, yet upon ſome occaſions we find them making great complaints of the prevalency of indwelling ſin, through the power of temptation, as Paul, Rom. vii. and David, Pſal lxv. Iniquities prevail againſt me; and, Iſa. lxiv. 6. Our iniquities like the wind have taken us away. This is a moſt humbling diſeaſe; yet the phyſician of Iſrael hath provided balm for it in his word, Pſa. lxv. 3. Mic. vii. 19. Rom. vii. 24, 25.

VII. Hypocriſy and formality in God's ſervice is a woful diſeaſe. When men draw near to God with their lips only, and give him no more but bodily ſervice, which is no better than that of a ſtatue on a tomb, with eyes and hands lift up, only it wants a voice. And how unpleaſant is a voice to God without the heart and affections? He heavily complains of it, Iſa. xxix. 13. Among the unrenewed, hypocriſy is a deadly and reigning diſeaſe. And though the converted be delivered from its reigning power, yet they are ſadly diſtreſſed with its remains, and oft put to complain that they give God more of the body, than of the heart in duty; and that their prayers are little better than lip-labour. But the phyſician of Iſrael hath promiſed balm for this diſeaſe, Jer. xxxi. 33. Prov. iv. 23. 2 Cor. iv. 16.

VIII. Inconſtancy and wandering of heart in duty is a prevailing diſeaſe. Alas! for the unfixedneſs of the heart that goeth out in many vain excurſions towards the world and its trifles, and even in time of the moſt ſolemn approaches unto God! Hereby our religious performances are wofully marred, and God provoked to loath and abhor them. There is a voluntary and habitual wandering of heart, that is the reigning plague of the unregenerate: and there is an unvoluntary wandering, that is the diſeaſe of God's people, which they bemoan and lament before the Lord. But there is balm in Gilead for it in all ſhapes; Jer. xxxii. 29. Ezek. xi. 19.

IX. Backſliding from the Lord, or a ſpiritual conſumption, is the common diſeaſe of God's people. They are liable to backſlide from the power and life of godlineſs, and to loſe their former ſpirituality and livelineſs in ſerving God in their cloſets, families, and public aſſemblies: ſo that ſometimes, their religious duties are like to wither and dwindle away into a dead form, and the things that remain are ready to die, as it was with the church of Sardis, Rev. iii. 2. This decay comes upon them when known ſin or ſloth are indulged by them. Then it is that ſpiritual exerciſes become a wearineſs, and averſion grows to heart-work and ſecret duties, ſuch as prayer, reading the Bible, meditation, and communing with their own hearts: Then the graces do languiſh, the faith of divine revelation becomes weak, the truths which God reveals concerning his glorious perfections, the excellencies of Chriſt, and concerning ſin and duty, heaven and hell, make but ſmall impreſſion on the mind. The repentance is reſtrained, and the ſoul is little affected with ſin and its evil: then love turns cool to Chriſt and his image, it doth not conſtrain to duty, nor to hate and mortify ſin as before: then hope becomes faint and languid, and hath not ſuch deſirous expectations of the eternal world, and things unſeen, as to fortify the ſoul againſt the allurements of the devil, the world and the fleſh. This ſpiritual conſumption is a mournful diſeaſe, and calls us ſpeedily to apply to the phyſician of Iſrael for the balm he hath promiſed for it; Deut. xxx. 6. Hoſ. xiv. 4. 5. 6. Pſal. lxix. 32. John xiv. 16 Gal. ii. 20.

X. Diſcouragement and down-caſting of ſoul is one of God's people's diſeaſes that requires this balm. They are often caſt down by outward afflictions, and eſpecially by the prevalency of ſin and ſatan's temptations, by the hidings of God's face, the ſhutting out of their prayers, the darkening of their evidences, the revival of former guilt, and the renewing of mount Sinai's thunderings againſt them. Under theſe trials, they are apt to think that God holds them for his enemies, and writes bitter things againſt them, and hence are put to cry with the Pſalmiſt, Hath God forgotten to be gracious? Is his mercy clean gone for ever? And will he be favourable no more? This is a diſeaſe which ſadly enfeebles their hearts and weakens their hands; yet the great Phyſician of the church hath provided balm for it, Pſal. xlii. 5. &c. Iſa. xli. 10. 17. 18. and liv. 7. &c. Iſa. lvii. 16. &c. Jer. xxxi. 25. Heb. xiii. 5. 6.

XI. Ingratitude to God for mercies is a common diſeaſe. Alas! we turn unthankful both for common and ſpecial mercies, and for the unſpeakable gift of Jeſus Chriſt to Adam's fallen race: What bad requitals do we make to God for his goodneſs? There are many who make uſe of God's mercies as darts to ſhoot at heaven, and weapons to fight againſt God himſelf. The more he gives them of health and money, they turn the more profane and debauch'd; ſo that inſtead of ſerving God with his benefits, they make a ſacrifice of them to the devil, Hoſ. ii. 8. I fear ſuch will be found guilty of this evil who beſtow their time and money upon games and paſtimes, balls and aſſemblies, plays and comedies, and ſuch vanities that prove nurſeries of ſin, and ſerve greatly to debauch the minds and morals of men and women. O let us not ungratefully requite the Lord our gracious benefactor. Ah! how much of this diſeaſe doth remain even with the beſt? Even Hezekiah rendered not again, according to the benefit done unto him, 2 Chron. xxxii. 25. Great need have we all of the balm of Gilead to cure us of this plague.

XII. Truſting to our own righteouſneſs is a diſeaſe which all are liable to. The unbeliever goes about to build an imaginary tower of his own righteouſneſs, and will not ſubmit to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt the glorious Surety, who hath brought in an everlaſting and law-biding righteouſneſs for ſinners to fly to. Nay, believers who have actually fled to it, do ſtill groan under the remains of this woful diſeaſe within them. They have ſtill a hankering after ſome dependence up on their duties and performances, altho' they cannot but own that their beſt duties need the blood of Chriſt, as well as their worſt ſins; and if they be not waſhen from the ſins that cleave to them, they would damn them. O! then, what need have we all of the balm in Gilead, and the Phyſician there, for theſe deadly diſeaſes which cleave to us?

Time would fail me to mention and inſiſt upon many other grievous diſeaſes which abound among us, ſuch as pride, ſelf-conceit, and lifting up of ourſelves becauſe of ſome attainments above others; diſcontentment with our lot and condition in the world; impatience under croſſes, ſinful ſelf-love, intemperance, covetouſneſs, envy, raſh anger, malice, revenge, and many other deadly plagues. However light ſome may make of theſe diſtempers, yet there is none of them but what will prove deadly, if the balm of Gilead, and Phyſician there be not applied to for cure. But, bleſſed be the God of Iſrael, that this balm is an univerſal, medicine, a catholicon for all manner of ſoul diſeaſes, if ſinners would but ſeek to it, and ſubmit to the application of it in the Phyſician's own way. May we all be brought to ſee and feel our diſeaſes in time, that we may haſten to the great Phyſician of the church, while his balm and power are preſent to heal us. May God of his infinite mercy determine us to it for Jeſus Chriſt's ſake. Amen.

SERMON IV.

On Jerem. viii. 22. Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no phyſician there, &c.

IN the preceding ſermon I mentioned many ſoul-diſeaſes, which are more ſecret and inviſible, prevailing among us: In this I ſhall ſpeak of ſome other diſeaſes of a more public nature, which affect not only the particular members, but, in ſome reſpects, threaten the whole body of the church, and the ſeveral congregations thereof; and upon which account our poor diſeaſed church and land do greatly need the balm of Gilead, and phyſician there, at this day.

I. Hereſy and error is a diſeaſe which ſpreads like a gangrene, and doth very much threaten our church and land at this day; when doctrines are vented, and books diſperſed in favour of Deiſm, Socinianiſm, Arianiſm, Arminianiſm, and other errors: When principles are eſpouſed and ſpread, which tend to weaken divine revelation; to advance corrupt reaſon and ſelf-love as the ſpring and ſtandard of religion; to exalt our moral performances more than imputed righteouſneſs; to reproach the operations of the holy Spirit upon ſouls, with enthuſiaſm; and aſcribe our good actions more to the power of corrupt nature, than to efficacious free grace. Now, when ſuch errors as theſe, beſides many Popiſh tenets and ſuperſtitions, are propagated among us, there is ground to ſay, we have a ſick and diſeaſed land, that needs balm.

II. Schiſm and diviſion among the miniſters and members of the church is a grievous malady that we at preſent labour under. Surely it is a moſt unnatural diſtemper that cauſes the ſheep of Chriſt to bite and devour one another, and the members of Chriſt to ſeparate as aliens, yea, not only break up Chriſtian communion, but break out in uncharitable reflections, bitterneſs, wrath, clamour and evil-ſpeaking one againſt another. A ſtrange diſtemper! that puts thoſe who will delightfully worſhip God together thro' a whole eternity, in ſuch a caſe, that they cannot keep fellowſhip together here! A diſtemper, that makes men renounce communion with thoſe they once delighted in, and with whom the glorious Head doth ſtill hold communion; that takes many off from the vitals and eſſentials of religion, and employs their time in public controverſies about party opinions, the grounds of ſeparation, the characters of preachers, and things which rather tend to beget alienation of affections, and angry quarrels, than to promote ſaving knowledge, faith, love, and godly edifying. Oh! how wrath-like a judgment is that ſpirit of ſtrife and diviſion, which God hath poured out upon this land for our former miſimprovement of the goſpel and contempt of glorious Chriſt! Ah, what a flood-gate doth it open to many evils and calamities! That is a true word of the apoſtle James iii. 16. Where envying and ſtrife is, there is confuſion and every evil work. What a plague muſt that be that produces every evil work? What a ſad diſeaſe is it, that turns Chriſtian converſe into vain janglings, that hinders ſocial prayers, that mars the ſucceſs of the goſpel, weakens the intereſt of religion, propagates all kind of evil, and expoſes the church to the ſcorn and deriſion of her enemies! How applicable is that word to us, Lam. ii. 13. Thy breach is great like the ſea, who can heal thee? Surely none but he that hath the balm of Gilead.

III. Giddineſs and unſettledneſs in religion is a diſeaſe that ſadly prevails among us. Many are now reeling to and fro like drunken men, as the prophet ſpeaks, Iſa. xxiv. 20. They do not like ſober men, keep the highway in a ſtraight courſe; but, like drunkards, ſtagger and reel from one ſide of the way to another. Alas, the moſt part are reeling either to one extreme or another, and very few are going on in a ſtraight and ſteady courſe. Many are reeling towards defection from our reformation principles and attainments which our worthy anceſtors valiantly contended and ſuffered for; particularly in encouraging and drawing on the yoke of patronage upon the church without neceſſity. Yea, pleading for it as lawful and harmleſs, tho' our reformers declared it to be contrary to the word of God, and the practice of the apoſtolical and primitive church. Likewiſe in compliance with that yoke, many are voluntarily falling in with courſes for wreathing it upon the church's neck, and departing from ſeveral parts of our eſtabliſhed government and diſcipline to which they ſtand ſolemnly engaged, ſuch as our approved rules and practice with reſpect to the moderation of calls, the election and ordination of paſtors; and in conſequence thereof obtruding miniſters into congregations againſt their will, whereby the church is ſpoiled of her right of calling her own paſtors, the flock of Chriſt is ſcattered, the edification of ſouls hindered, the great ends of a goſpel-miniſtry defeated, and the work of the goſpel greatly obſtructed. Many alſo are ſwerving from our old covenant-engagements, and openly denying the lawfulneſs of national-covenanting, and the binding obligation thereof upon poſterity: and forming to themſelves ſchemes of government which would open a door to anarchy and licentiouſneſs.—Again, many are reeling towards Eraſtianiſm, and injurious infrigements upon church's intrinſic power, and upon Chriſt's immediate headſhip and ſupremacy over her, falling in with acts and practices which tend to take the keys of church power and government out of the hands of Chriſt and church officers of his apointment, and put them into the hands of the magiſtrate.—Alſo, many are reeling from the ancient uſe of creeds and confeſſions of faith, towards a boundleſs toleration of all ſorts of errors and hereſies, aſſerting that neither the church nor the magiſtrate have any power to reſtrain them. Many are reeling towards the exalting of ſelf, even putting it in the room of God, ſaying it is in the power of a man's free will and natural abilities to repent and convert himſelf, and that there is a neceſſary connexion between a man's moral ſeriouſneſs and his obtaining of ſaving grace.—Yea many are wraping towards popery and old ſuperſtitions, pleading for a middle ſtate, for prayers for the dead, and for the Euchariſt's being a proper ſacrifice for ſin: for the neceſſity of a prieſt's abſolution in order to the forgiveneſs of ſin, and of bowing to the altar, and at the name of Jeſus, of obſerving uninſtituted feſtivals, of uſing the croſs in baptiſm, kneeling at the ſacrament, the organ in praiſe, and other inventions of men in God's worſhip. Nay, many are reeling from the very fundamentals of Chriſtianity, and the doctrine of the glorious trinity, Chriſt's deity and ſatisfaction, the neceſſity of ſupernatural revelation, and of the imputation of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and the operations of the holy Spirit; and, inſtead of theſe precious doctrines, offering the ſufficiency of reaſon, or nature's light, to conduct men in the way to happineſs. And theſe Socinian and Deiſtical tenets are not a little encouraged by the preachers of a rational or natural religion; I mean thoſe dry moral preachers who are more earneſt in recommending a ſort of Pagan morality to the world, than in ſhewing the excellency and uſefulneſs of Chriſt for periſhing ſinners, and the nature and neceſſity of the work of his Spirit in applying his purchaſe, and of goſpel-holineſs to make them meet for heaven: who prefer a good ſaying, or moral precept, in ſome ancient philoſopher, to the counſels of Jeſus Chriſt, or the dictates of his apoſtles; vainly oppoſing the dim candle of man's reaſon to the ſun ſhine of goſpel light diſplayed in the holy ſcriptures. All which do ſhew how ſadly the diſtemper of giddineſs and unſettledneſs in religion prevails in our land, and how greatly we need the balm of Gilead to cure us of it. If it ſhould be aſked, what is it that makes the land reel ſo? We have the anſwer in the forecited text, Iſa. xxiv. 20. Becauſe the tranſgreſſion thereof is heavy upon it; both the tranſgreſſion of the former and preſent age. Alas, there are many old ſins little minded by us! old perjuries and treacherous dealings with God; old defections and backſliding, old perſecutions and bloodſhed. We have ground to fear that theſe old tranſgreſſions, together with thoſe of a latter date, ly ſo heavy upon the land, that it is made to reel and ſtagger with the weight of them. O when ſhall we be diſburdened of that load?

IV. Barrenneſs and unfruitfulneſs with reſpect to converſion-work and the bringing forth of children to God, is a grievous malady which the church's womb ſeems to be ſmitten with at this day. Ah! how little is the doctrine of regeneration and the new birth known and experienced among us! How rare is converſion work now, in reſpect of former times! Our ears have heard and our fathers have told us what days of the Son of man have been ſeen in our land, when the Captain of our ſalvation took to himſelf his great power and mounted his white horſe of a triumphant goſpel, and rode through the cities and congregations, with his crown on his head, his bow in his hand, and his ſword girt on his thigh, going forth conquering and to conquer. When the arm of the Lord did thus awake and put on ſtrength, how glorious were the effects! the preacher's tongue was looſed, the hearers hearts were melted; the word of the Lord did run, and the goſpel had free courſe. The enemies of the power of godlineſs were filled with confuſion and aſtoniſhment, and made to acknowledge that God was among his people of a truth. Mockers and curious perſons were catched by the word, and hundreds have been wrought upon by one ſermon, and made to date their converſion from it. The angel came down and troubled the waters, and multitudes of diſeaſed ſouls ſtept in at once, and the power of the Lord was preſent to heal them. Such pleaſant ſeaſons have been of late in ſome parts of New-England, and in others of the plantations: may the Lord continue them there, and cauſe them to ſpread through all our colonies in America. May he ſend them alſo to Britain and Ireland, and to the poor land where he hath had his dwelling in times paſt, that ſo the wilderneſs and ſolitary place may be glad for them, and the deſart may rejoice and bloſſom as the roſe, the glory of Lebanon may be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon. Then ſhould our land ſing as in the days of old.

Queſt. Oh, what may be the reaſon of the unfruitfulneſs of a preached goſpel in the land where Chriſt hath had his glorious marchings in times paſt?

Anſ. Surely we muſt juſtify the Lord, and leave our complaints upon ourſelves. A holy God is provoked to withdraw his Spirit from the aſſemblies of profeſſed Chriſtians becauſe of their formality and hypocriſy, their diviſions and contentions, their ſatisfying themſelves with bare ordinances without the God of ordinances, with communion-occaſions without communion with God. The Holy Spirit and his gracious workings are ſo far from being ſought after, that they are ſcarce credited or believed, nay, by many they are reproached with the odious names of Enthuſiaſm, whimſical notions, and melancholy imaginations. And may not God, in his righteous judgment, make ordinances a miſcarrying womb and dry breaſts to them?

Again, God by our ſins and backſlidings is provoked to call off the ſtage a godly and faithful ſet of miniſters and Chriſtians, who ſtood in the gap, and wreſtled for God's preſence and Spirit to ordinances, without ſending others to fill their room; nay, inſtead of that, to ſuffer the church to be plagued with a ſet of earthly minded preachers and ſtudents, who give ſad diſcoveries of their carnal motives and ends in purſuing after the prieſt's office, that it is more to win ſtipends than to win ſouls, to get bread to themſelves, than to get glory to God. Which ſurely is a fearful judgment and token of wrath againſt a poor ſinful land.

Likewiſe, God is provoked to leave miniſters, and deny them ſucceſs, becauſe of their defection from the uprightneſs, piety, and zeal of our godly anceſtors, from their humility and ſelf-denial, from their ſingle aims at God's glory and the ſalvation of ſouls, from their dependence upon God, in the exerciſe of faith and prayer, for his preſence and bleſſing upon their labours, and from their travelling in birth till Chriſt was formed in their people's ſouls.——And finally, No doubt, many miniſters are unſucceſsful by reaſon of the grudges and prejudices which they beget in their people's breaſts againſt themſelves, for ſwerving from reformation-principles, and concurring in violent ſettlements and intruſions upon pariſhes, whereby people are tempted to abhor the offerings of the Lord; and ignorance, error, profanation of the Lord's day, immoralities and diſorders are greatly encouraged. From whence it is too evident, that miniſters are to be blamed as well as people for the preſent barrenneſs under the means of grace. O! that both they and we were helped to ſee the cauſe, and to cry for the balm of Gilead to cure us of it.

The ſecond head. I proceed to the ſecond head, in the method I laid down, to wit, to take notice of ſome of thoſe dangerous ſymptoms which make our diſeaſes ſeem incurable and deſperate; for which there is yet balm in Gilead, and a phyſician there.

I. It is a dangerous ſymptom, when the body is univerſally diſtreſſed, and when there is a complication of diſeaſes on it, and ſome of theſe of contrary natures.——Then the patient's caſe is very hopeleſs, and the cure much deſpaired of, becauſe what is good for one diſeaſe is bad for another. Thus alas! it is with the body of Chriſt in our land. The church is ſick not in one part, but over all, as it was in the prophet's time, Iſa. i. 5, 6. There is no ſoundneſs in it, nothing but wounds and diſeaſes of divers ſorts. In ſome parts of the houſe a dangerous fire is kindled, in other parts deadly diſeaſes, as tympanies, fevers, dropſies and lethargies do prevail. One part is blown up with pride, another is in a fever of ſtrife; another part is drowned in ſenſuality, and another deadned with a lethargy and ſpirit of ſlumber. And theſe diſeaſes are of ſo contrary natures, that what is phyſic for the one, is death for the other. We may ſay with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxvi. 12. We go through fire and through water: two contrary elements, what expels the one, cheriſheth the other. Now, when our caſe is ſo deſperate, is there any remedy for us? Yes, the balm of Gilead is a medicine that ſuits the moſt complex and dangerous caſe: ſee what David ſays of it, Pſal. xxxiv. 19. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all. This he alſo found to his own ſweet experience, Pſal. xlii. 7. 8. Deep calleth unto deep, at the noiſe of thy water-ſpouts; all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me; yet the Lord will command his loving-kindneſs in the day-time, and in the night his ſong ſhall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life. David was like a ſhipwreck'd man, almoſt ſwallowed up with the ſea-billows from beneath, and at the ſame time near drown'd with ſpouts of rain from above. Not only the powers of hell and earth were againſt him, but heav'n ſeem'd angry with him too. But praiſes be to our glorious Phyſician who hath balm to anſwer the greateſt varieties and contrarieties of our diſtempers. David bleſſeth him for it, Pſal. ciii. 2. 3. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, who healeth all thy diſeaſes.

II. It is a deadly ſymptom, when the body is in a violent hot fever, attended with great inflammations. This is very much our caſe; our diſtemper is hot and violent, and our wounds much inflamed with the old ſerpent's poiſon, and the rage and paſſions of men; yet the balm of Gilead can cure the moſt deadly wounds and inflammations; it can take out of them, not only the venom of the ſerpent's ſting, and the heat of man's rage; but alſo the inflammation of God's wrath, which is worſe than either.

III. When diſeaſes are of long continuance and rooted in the body, the cure is hard, Deut. xxviii. 59. Such are our maladies, which make us ready to ſay, there is no hope. Yet the balm of Gilead can cure the oldeſt and moſt rooted diſtemper. It can heal thoſe who have been diſtreſs'd for many years, as ſoon as thoſe who has been ill but a few days. The Phyſician of Iſrael can as eaſily raiſe up his people when their bones are dry, as when juſt new dead, Ezek. xxxvii.

IV. When all about the diſeaſed look on their caſe as deſperate, we loſe hope. This is our caſe; all who view the church, look on her as ſinking; and even thoſe of the moſt faith are putting the queſtion, Can theſe dry bones live? And we are apt to ſay of ourſelves, with the poor captives, Ezek. xxxvii. 11. 'Behold our bones are dry'd, our hope is loſt, and we 'are cut off for our part.' Yet even when all give up the caſe as deſperate, the balm and phyſician in Gilead can effectuate a cure. We have an aſtoniſhing promiſe to the church in ſuch a caſe, Jer. xxx. 17. For I will reſtore health unto thee, I will heal thee of thy wounds, ſaith the Lord, becauſe they called thee an outcaſt, ſaying, this is Zion whom no man ſeeketh after. Her caſe was hopeleſs, and therefore neglected by all, but even in that caſe the balm of Gilead can 'bring 'health and cure,' Jer. xxxiii. 6.

V. A diſeaſe is the more dangerous, when its threatening ſymptoms are not obſerved, ſo as to provide timely remedies. Ah! this is very much our caſe, we obſerve not our dangerous ſymptoms, tho' the fire be kindled round about us, we lay it not to heart: the impending clouds of wrath and judgments do not alarm us, ſo as to make us, ſearch and try our ways, and 'turn again unto the Lord.' The preſent calamities we groan under, as ſcarcity and decay of trade, war and blood ſhed, loſſes and diſappointments, the grievances of church and ſtate, do not make us ſee the Lord's hand in them, nor hear his voice by them, ſo as to humble ourſelves under his mighty hand, and turn to him with mourning and ſupplication, as he calls us: But we will ſtill go on in our old courſes without relenting. Our caſe is not unlike that of God's profeſſing people of old, Iſa. lvii. 17. For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him, I hid me, and was wroth. And yet after all theſe tokens of God's anger, it is added, He went on frowardly in the way of his heart. Now, can there be any remedy for him in ſuch a caſe? Yes, the Lord ſaith, there is even balm in Gilead for ſuch a deſperate condition, and, which is moſt ſurprizing, that the Phyſician himſelf will come and apply it, as he adds in verſe 18. I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him. In theſe hopeleſs circumſtances I will ſtep in myſelf, with the balm in my hand which will heal him of his frowardneſs and perverſeneſs, when nothing elſe can. Now who could have expected ſuch a word in ſuch a deſperate-like caſe, and that there could be balm for ſuch a froward diſtemper of heart! One might have thought God would have added, 'I have ſeen his ways, and will damn him.' But inſtead of that he ſays, 'I have ſeen his ways, and 'will heal him.' Oh! the condeſcending goodneſs and mercy of God to the chief of ſinners.

VI. A diſeaſe is judged deſperate and incurable, when the patient loſes his ſenſes, or turns lethargic, that he cannot be awakened. Ah! we are become lethargic under our maladies, we have loſt our ſpiritual ſenſes in a great meaſure. Our hearing is gone, we hear not the voice of rods, nor the voice of mercies, the voice of conſcience, nor the voice of God's word, nor do we ſet about the duties they loudly call us to. Our ſight is departed from us, we ſee not the Lord's hand in his diſpenſations; when mercies come, we receive them like brutes, without ſeeing the hand that gives them, or rendering thanks to the giver. When afflictions come, and the Lord's hand is moſt viſible in them, yet we ſee it not, like thoſe, Iſa. xxvi. 11. we ſee not the Achan, the ſin which is clearly pointed at by the rod. Why? becauſe a ſpirit of ſlumber and of deep ſleep, hath fallen down upon miniſters and profeſſors, which have cloſed their eyes, according to Iſa. xxix. 10.——Our feeling is almoſt gone, we feel not the weight of ſin, nor the ſtings and upbraidings of conſcience for it, we groan not under the burden.—We ſmell not the ſweet ſavour of Chriſt's name, nor the precious ointments of his graces and comforts which draw ſouls unto him, Cant. i. 3. 4.——We taſte not the ſweetneſs that is in his promiſes, and in the fruits of the bleſſed apple-tree. Alas! ſabbaths and faſt-days, ſermons and ſacraments do not reliſh with us as in times paſt. Now theſe deadly ſymptoms of our diſeaſed church and land, when we view them, make our maladies ſeem incurable, and our caſe deſperate; yet when we look to the balm of Gilead, we ſee a remedy for them. We find the ſame ſymptoms in the caſe of Jeruſalem, which made her wounds and bruiſes ſeem incurable, yet, ſaith the Lord, Jer. xxx. 17. 'I will reſtore health unto thee, and will heal thee of thy wounds.' And Jer. xxxiii. 6. 'Behold I will bring health and cure, and reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.'—May the Lord take compaſſion upon our helpleſs and hopeleſs condition, and accompliſh theſe his gracious promiſes to our diſeaſed land, for Jeſus Chriſt's ſake. Amen.

Who is the Phyſician.

SERMON V.

On Jerem. viii. 22. Is there no Balm, &c.

HEAD III.

I Propoſed in the 3*d* place to ſpeak of the phyſician who hath this balm for us. God himſelf is our phyſician. He is Jehovah that healeth us, Exod. xv. 26. Our cure is the work of the whole Trinity, but eſpecially of Jeſus Chriſt, God incarnate, who came to the world with a commiſſion to heal ſouls. This commiſſion he opened and read at the beginning of his miniſtry, Luke iv. 18: and ſtill after owned it to be his buſineſs to heal ſouls, Mat. ix. 12, 13 In this office of a healer, he was held forth and typified of old by the brazen ſerpent that healed the ſtung Iſraelites, John iii. 14. and by the ſun of righteouſneſs that riſeth to us with healing under the wing, Mal. iv. 2. and by the tree of life, whoſe leaves were for the healing of the nations, Rev. xxii. 2.

The Lord Jeſus Chriſt being God-man, is nobly qualified to be our ſoul-phyſician; for, 1. He hath infinite knowledge and ſkill for taking up all diſeaſes, with their cauſes, and the proper remedies for them, ſo that he can never miſtake the caſe of the afflicted, nor make wrong applications for their cure. 2. He hath ſovereign authority and almighty power, whereby he can command diſeaſes to come and go at his pleaſure. 3. He hath infinite pity and readineſs to help the diſtreſſed: as he hath in him the compaſſions of a God, ſo he hath alſo the bowels of a man, which endows him with a peculiar tenderneſs of heart towards us, as being touch'd with the feeling of our infirmities; and hence he is inclined many times to come to the ſick without being ſent for, to the poor who have nothing to give him, and to be found of them who never ſought him. On this account Chriſt is repreſented by the good Samaritan that came to the wounded man that fell among thieves, and was lying by the way ſide, in a helpleſs caſe; the diſtreſſed man ſent not for him, but he came of himſelf, he pitied him and took him up, and poured wine and oil into his wounds. 4. He hath wonderful patience towards the diſtreſſed, he doth not leave them for their unthankful carriage, and the abuſes he gets from them, but bears with them all, and reſolutely goes on with his deſigned applications till the cure be perfected. He knows if he ſhould caſt them off, none elſe could take them in hand, and death would infallibly be the iſſue.

That the Lord Jeſus might convince us the more of his compaſſion and readineſs to heal diſeaſed ſouls, he readily cured men's bodies when he was on earth, and put none away that came to him. His deſign in this was to encourage us to come to him with our ſoul-maladies, and to afford us a ſtrong prop to our faith, and an argument, to plead with him, and ſay, "Lord, thou didſt ſhew compaſſion to diſeaſed bodies that muſt rot in the earth, and wilt thou not be moved with pity to precious ſouls that will live for ever? Did the diſeaſes of bodies draw out thy bowels, and ſhall not the wounds of ſouls affect thee much more? Was it not thy main errand to heal ſouls, O reject not thoſe which are laid down at thy feet."

The fourth Head. I propoſed in the 4*th* place, to enquire into the nature of the balm and means of healing which the Phyſician makes uſe of.

In the firſt place, the blood of Chriſt may juſtly be called the balm of Gilead, that heals ſouls, for it is the meritorious cauſe of our health and cure, and purchaſes all under-means of healing to us. This is evident from Iſa. liii. 5. He was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was bruiſed for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed. Our glorious Phyſician ſaw that no leſs than his blood and ſtripes, his ſuffering and dying in our room, could ſatiſfy juſtice and obtain pardon to take away the guilt and puniſhment of ſin, and procure the graces of the Spirit to remove the power and pollution of ſin, and therefore he willingly ſheds all his blood for curing us of the diſeaſes of ſin. This blood then is our healing balm. Tho' the ſcripture ſpeaks of other means of healing, which our Phyſician makes uſe of, yet we are to underſtand that all theſe are uſed in ſubſerviency to Chriſt's blood which is the bleſſed meritorious mean of our cure, the only balm that procures all the other means of healing to us; ſome of which I ſhall mention; as,

I. The Spirit of God with his ſaving operations in ſouls, is the great mean of healing, which our bleeding Saviour procured for us. He ſends the Spirit to intimate the pardon of ſin to the wounded conſcience, and thereby cures the ſoul of its fears of wrath. And for curing the power and pollution of ſin, he ſends the Spirit to heal and change the nature, to ſubdue ſin, infuſe grace, and incline the ſoul to holineſs. And to render the cure univerſal through all the faculties of the ſoul, he enlightens the underſtanding, renews the will, ſoftens the heart, ſanctifies the memory, makes the conſcience tender and lively, and ſets the affections upon right objects. Now all theſe operations of the Spirit are the purchaſe of Chriſt's blood, as is clear from Gal. iii. 13, 14. Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the law, being made a curſe for us, that we might receive the promiſe of the Spirit through faith. May the Lord fulfil that promiſe to us, for healing our ſick ſouls and our ſick land.

II. The word and ordinances of Chriſt are another mean he makes uſe of for healing our ſpiritual diſeaſes. Theſe are the leaves of the tree of life, which are for healing of the nations. As the word is a mean in the hand of Chriſt and his Spirit for breaking and wounding the hard heart, and therefore called a hammer and a ſharp ſword; ſo it is alſo a mean of healing the wounded ſoul, by bringing healing promiſes to it, and preſcribing remedies againſt ſin, according to Pſal. cvii

20, He ſent his word and healed them, and delivered them from their deſtructions. The ſacraments alſo are means of healing, as they ſeal the pardon of our ſins, and bring cordials to our fainting hearts.

III. Afflictions are means of healing, made uſe of by our phyſician. He ſends croſſes and loſſes to make us feel how bitter ſin is, to cauſe us to ſearch our wounds, to mourn over them, and reſolve againſt ſin for the future. Sanctified rods are the purchaſe of Chriſt's blood to his patients; they are his phyſic to purge away their ſins, Iſa. xxvii. 9. By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away their ſin. So that believers, inſtead of murmuring, ought to bleſs God for their afflictions, ſeeing they are Chriſt's phyſic which he hath purchaſed for them at a dear rate.

IV. Stupendous providences are ſometimes made uſe of by Chriſt as balm for his church's diſeaſes, when he doth terrible things which they looked not for, as in Iſa. lxiv. 3. Thus he healed the fears of Iſrael by opening a way for them in the red-ſea. He healed their murmurings in the wilderneſs by giving them waters out of the rock. So the Lord by ſtupendous diſpenſations and revolutions hath often brought relief and healing to his diſtreſſed church in our land, as in the years 1560, 1638, 1688, 1714, and at other times. O let us ſtill remember the years of the right hand of the moſt High.

V. Faithful miniſters are appointed as balm and means of healing to diſeaſed ſouls. The great phyſician ſends them to diſpenſe ſound and wholeſome doctrines for that end, 1 Tim. vi. 3. Tit. ii. 1. They are his apothecaries to weigh out, mix, qualify and prepare the medicines according to his preſcriptions: This the apoſtle points at by a miniſter's rightly dividing the word of truth, 2 Tim. ii. 15. and Chriſt himſelf means it by the ſteward's giving his houſhold their portion of meat in due ſeaſon, Luke xii. 24. It is happy for a diſeaſed church, when God gives them underſtanding of the times (like the men of Iſſachar) to know what Iſrael ought to do in difficult caſes. And it is as unhappy for her, when they are left to miſtake the proper means, and ſometimes to inflame her wounds inſtead of healing them. It is the Lord that muſt give miniſters underſtanding in all things, 2 Tim. ii. 7. May they be helped always to depend upon him for it.

VI. Reforming magiſtrates have been made uſe of as balm for the church's diſtempers, when the Lord ſtirs them up to reſtore her liberties, redreſs her grievances and to uſe their authority to curb error and vice, idolatry and ſuperſtition, to call ſynods to conſult about reformation, and excite miniſters to their duty. Such balm were David, Solomon, Jehoſhaphat, Joaſh, Hezekiah, Joſiah, and Nehemiah to the church of God in their times. And ſo alſo were Ahaſuerus, Cyrus, Darius, Artaxerxes, and other heathen magiſtrates, by the Lord's turning their hearts to favour his church in their dominions. And when the Lord's time of fulfilling his promiſes to her doth come, he can ſtill make ſtrangers to build up her walls, and their kings to miniſter to her: And kings to prove her nurſing fathers, and queens her nurſing mothers, according to Iſa. lx. 10. and Iſa. xlix. 32.

VII. Godly praying perſons in every ſtation are as balm to a diſeaſed land, and the pooreſt of them may help to heal it by their prayers; even as a little child may bring phyſic and preſent it to its ſick mother. O that all the children of Zion were thus employed at preſent, when there is ſuch need for it. The Lord encourages them to it, by promiſing that the prayer of faith ſhall ſave the ſick, James v. 15. and contribute to heal the whole land, 2 Chron. vii. 17. If my people who are called by my name ſhall humble themſelves, and pray, and ſeek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their ſin, and will heal their land. Wherefore as long as God is pleaſed to preſerve a praying remnant in the land, however deadly our diſeaſes be, there is hope in Iſrael concerning it; ſeeing there is ſtill good balm in the land. May poor Scotland never be without it!

The fifth head. I propoſed in the next place to enquire into the phyſician's method of applying the balm and performing the cure of the diſeaſed.

I. Our bleſſed Phyſician firſt makes ſinners ſick before he makes us whole, that is, he makes ſinners ſenſible of their diſeaſe, by convincing them of ſin and miſery, and humbling them under the view it, that ſo they may prize Chriſt and his healing balm; ſuch are ſaid to be ſick, Mat. ix. 21. Now this preparatory ſickneſs hath ſeveral things in it; as,

1ſt, A diſcovery of the dangerous nature of our diſeaſe, ſin, that it is the root of all the other plagues and miſeries which we complain of; that it draws down the wrath and curſe of God upon us and puts us in a ſtate of damnation.

2dly, A ſolicitous care and thoughtfulneſs about our diſeaſe, as being of a deadly nature; which makes us reſtleſs and inquiſitive about it, like the Jailor, to ſay, What ſhall we do to be ſaved? What ſhall we do to be healed? To get our ſins pardoned and our nature changed? Is there any balm or phyſician for us?

3dly, There is in it a diſſatisfaction with all earthly comforts and enjoyments, as helpleſs things to us under our diſeaſe. The ſick man can take no pleaſure in eating, and drinking, ſleeping or any wordly thing, while his diſeaſe continues; bring gold, ſilver, honours, pleaſures or friends to him, he anſwers like Haman, All theſe things avail me nothing, while I want Chriſt's healing balm to my ſoul, which is every hour in hazard of the ſecond death.

4thly, The ſick man groans under the burden of his diſeaſe, he hath grief and ſorrow of heart for ſin, like the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. xxxviii. 6. 18. I go mourning all the day long, I will be ſorry for my ſin. Why? It is a diſeaſe of my own bringing on, I have given the wounds to myſelf, and made my ſoul lothſome to God. O what a fool and beaſt have I been!

5thly, The ſick man is brought to deſpair of all healing and cure in his own doings or contrivances: All his former refuges and confidences are daſhed in pieces, and he joins with penitent Iſrael, Hoſ. xiv. 3. “Aſhur ſhall not ſave us, we will not ride upon horſes, neither will we ſay any more to the work of our hands, ye are our gods:” We will not any more make balm of our prayers, of our tears, or reſolutions, we muſt ſeek it from another quarter.

6thly, The ſick man ſees his abſolute need of a phyſician, and of one that is ſkilful, and hath balm of infinite virtue, even of Chriſt who is able to ſave to the uttermoſt, and can cure the deepeſt and deadlieſt wounds. It is he and he only (ſaith he) who hath an infinite fulneſs of merit and ſpirit that can ſuit my deſperate malady. None but the eternal Son of God can be my phyſician: "O that I knew where to find him!"

7thly, The diſeaſed man is brought to a willingneſs to ſubmit to the phyſician's method and preſcriptions, and to ſay with Paul, Acts ix. 6. Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Let him cut me, lance me, blood me, purge me. Let him put me to what pain he pleaſeth, let him lay me never ſo low, I'll ſubmit. Let him preſcribe a potion never ſo bitter, I'll drink it. Let Chriſt do with me what he will, if he cure my diſeaſe, all is well. I will not haggle with him for a right eye, or a right hand, or any darling ſin, or any thing dear to me in the world; no, every thing ſhall be parted with at his command.——Thus the ſinner by the great Phyſician's power and ſkill is made ſick and ſenſible, humble and willing, in order to prepare him for the healing balm.

II. Another ſtep which the Phyſician takes to cure the diſeaſed man, he by his Spirit works faith in his ſoul; that is, he powerfully perſuades and enables him to embrace Chriſt as his Saviour, and apply the balm of his blood and merits unto his wounds, for removing guilt, pardoning ſin, and reconciling God to his ſoul. Now when this is done, the danger of death is over, John v. 24. "He that believeth ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death to life." Faith is a healing grace, for it is the inſtrument which applies the healing balm of Chriſt's blood to the diſeaſed ſoul. Every touch of faith's hand brings healing, nay, every one of its looks is healing, Iſa. xiv. 22. "Look "unto me, and be ſaved." Thus a look of a ſtung Iſraelite brought healing to his wound. So Peter's look to Chriſt healed him of apoſtacy. Hence Chriſt ſaid to ſeveral diſeaſed perſons, Thy faith hath made thee whole. So here, when once faith applies Chriſt's blood, the guilt of ſin is cured, its reigning power ſubdued, and the ſtrength of the diſeaſe is broken, it will not prove mortal.

Queſt. How ſhall I know whether I have got this healing faith, faith which hath made me whole?

Anſ. See whether it hath the evidences of a healing faith? 1. Hath thy faith brought thee to a peremptory reſolution to ly at the Phyſician's door, and look to him alone for healing, ſaying, If I die, it ſhall be at Chriſt's door, for there is no other name given under heaven, nor among men, whereby I can be healed.—2. Hath thy faith made thee fall heartily in with the goſpel method of healing, and to approve it as a beautiful contrivance, and ſay, "God's covenant of grace "is well ordered in all things, and ſuitable to all my "maladies; Chriſt the Mediator of it is a noble Phy"ſician, and complete Saviour, and therefore I chuſe "him in all his offices, and accept of all his preſcriptions "for my diſeaſed ſoul: I accept of his blood to waſh "me, his righteouſneſs to cover me, his Spirit to ſanc"tify me, his word to direct me, and his laws to go"vern me."—3. See whether thy faith hath determined thee to open frankly to thy Phyſician, and entertain him in the beſt rooms of thy ſoul. When Chriſt knocked by his Spirit, did thy faith make thee willing to yield and ſurrender all thy powers and faculties to him? Didſt thou bring the keys of all the rooms of thy ſoul to Chriſt, and particularly of thy will, ſaying, "Lord, come chuſe where thou wilt lodge, where thou "wilt lie, and what thou wilt have, for all I have is "devoted to thee, and at thy command." Now, O man, if thou haſt got ſuch a faith as this, then thy faith hath made thee whole, the healing balm is applied, the cure begun, and ſhall aſſuredly be perfected at length.

III. Another ſtep of the ſoul's cure is by the renewing and ſanctifying work of the Spirit. Aſſoon as the Phyſician gives faith to apply the balm, he takes the ſoul into his hoſpital, places him among his patients, whoſe diſeaſe is broken, and who are on the way of recovery. He takes every believing ſoul under his ſpecial care, he kindly viſits and attends them, and carries on their cure by his Spirit's renewing and ſanctifying work: And this he doth by degrees, for the wounds which ſin hath given our natures are ſo deep, that, they take long time to heal; nay, it will take all our days before the cure be finiſhed. But though the cure be ſlow, it is ſure.

Queſt. By what ſteps or degrees doth the Phyſician carry on the cure in believers?

Anſ. 1ſt, By his Spirit in regeneration; he cures the mind of its blindneſs, the heart of its hardneſs, the nature of its perverſeneſs, the will of its backwardneſs, the memory of its ſlipperineſs, the conſcience of its benumbedneſs, and the affections of their diſorder; all this according to his gracious promiſe, Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27. I will take away the ſtony heart, aud give you an heart of fleſh; and I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes. It is by his Spirit within us that the cure is carried on.

3dly, He carries on the cure of his people by ſanctifying their natures, infuſing grace and holineſs into all the faculties of their ſouls, and adding new meaſures and degrees thereof from time to time. Increaſe of grace and progreſs in ſanctification is a continual healing of the diſeaſe of ſin, according to Mal. iv. 2. The Sun of righteouſneſs ſhall ariſe with healing in his wings, and ye ſhall grow up as calves in the ſtall. Healing and growing are there joined together. The more we grow in ſanctification, the more our cure doth advance. This growth indeed is often inſenſible in believers, yea ſometimes they will be ſeized with new diſtempers, and be getting new wounds, ſo that the work will ſeem to go back; yet notwithſtanding, the virtue of Gilead's balm will infallibly prevail in order to the perfecting of the ſoul's cure.

7thly, He carries on the cure in his people, by giving them new diſcoveries of Chriſt and of his fulneſs and ſuitableneſs to their needs, to draw out their faith and love to him. This was one great deſign in ſending the Spirit into the world, John xvi. 14. He ſhall glorify me, for he ſhall receive of mine and ſhew it unto you. Now how doth he glorify Chriſt, but by ſhewing them his fulneſs and excellency, and making them willing to part with all things for Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, and content to borrow all they want out of Chriſt's fulneſs, and to make Chriſt their All in juſtification, and in ſanctification, and in glorification. The more the ſoul makes uſe of Chriſt and lives near him, it is ſtill ſo much the nearer to perfect health.

8thly, The Spirit carries on the cure in his people by cauſing them to breathe after a full conformity to Chriſt and his image, that their ſanctification may be completed, and they freed of all complaints of indwelling-ſin and imperfect ſervices. Hence they are made to cry with David, Pſal. cxix. 5. O that my ways were directed to keep thy ſtatutes! And with Paul, Rom. vii. 25. O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death? The ſtronger the ſoul's breathings are of this kind, the nearer it is to perfect health and cure.

IV. The laſt and finiſhing ſtep of the diſeaſed ſoul's cure is at death; it is only then that the ſoul is made perfectly whole. Then it is that our great Phyſician by his Spirit pulls up all the roots and ſeeds of the diſeaſe, and makes the ſoul perfect in holineſs, and meet for entering into heaven, where only a ſtate of perfect health is enjoyed. It is in heaven only that ſin and miſery, diſeaſes and complaints can find no place, and all pain, ſorrow and crying ſhall paſs away. There, all Chriſt's recovered patients ſhall have perfect and uninterrupted health thro' all the ages of eternity. May we then have grace to be always looking out and longing for that happy ſtate and healthful place, where the inhabitants ſhall never ſay they are ſick, being all forgiven and healed of their ſin and iniquity! May our bleſſed Phyſician fit us for that place, by beginning, carrying on, and completing our cure from the diſeaſe of ſin, by all thoſe ways and means of healing which he hath appointed, that to his name may be aſcribed glory in the higheſt, thro' endleſs ages. Amen.

SERMON VI.

On Jerem. viii. 22. Is there no balm, &c.

I NOW proceed to the laſt thing propoſed in the method I laid down, viz.

The APPLICATION.

I. This doctrine ſerves to inform us of the amazing riches of divine love in providing a Phyſician for our diſeaſed ſouls, and ſuch a Phyſician as Jeſus Chriſt the eternal Son of God! One that hath infinitely more knowledge and ſkill than all the angels in heaven: One that hath infinite compaſſions wrapt up in human bowels: One that hath both a tender heart and a tender hand, Pſalm cxlvii. 3. One that ſuffered his ſide to be opened and his heart to be pierced, that his blood might become balm for our wounds. Behold an aſtoniſhing cure! a matchleſs Phyſician! Other phyſicians are prodigal of their patients blood, but ſparing of their own; but our glorious Phyſician ſaves his patient's blood, and pours out his own: And of it he makes an incomparable balm for our wounds.

Again, we may ſee what cauſe we have to bleſs God for his diſtinguiſhing goodneſs to Adam's diſeaſed family in general, and to our diſeaſed land in particular. The angels that ſinned, had no phyſician ſent to them, but we have a matchleſs one ſent to us the ſons of men. There are many opulent nations in the world who never heard the news of this Phyſician, and his healing balm! but they are proclaimed in all corners in Scotland. Theſe have the gold and riches of the Indies, but want the balm of Gilead, which is of infinite more value, than all they have.

II. We may improve this doctrine in an uſe of lamentation for the ſick and diſtreſſed caſe of our land, and multitudes of ſouls therein dying of their wounds, notwithſtanding the goſpel-offers of the glorious Phyſician and his excellent balm which they have in plenty. Need I to ſay any thing to inſtruct our diſtreſſed and mournful condition? Surely if the abounding of infidelity and immorality, exceſs and extravagance, error and ſchiſm, diviſions and breaches, jealouſies and animoſities, complaints and grievances; if divided minds and disjointed hearts; if reelings and ſtaggerings, if altar againſt altar, if doctrine againſt doctrine, if worſhip againſt worſhip, if poſt by poſt, and threſhold by threſhold, be ſymptoms of a diſeaſed land and church that needs the balm of Gilead; then may we conclude our caſe is bad, and our need great. Ah, now it is a ſickly time with the land, and multitudes are ſo diſtreſſed, every corner is like an hoſpital or infirmary, and few of them are cured. How many are languiſhing and dying around us, of one diſeaſe or another, either of the plague of unbelief, the ſtone of the heart, the giddineſs of the head, the gangrene of error, the falling ſickneſs of apoſtacy, the palſy of unſteadineſs, the lethargy of ſecurity, the tympany of pride, the frenzy of paſſion, the cancer of envy, the leproſy of vice, the dropſy of drunkenneſs, the fever of luſt, the running ulcer of outbreakings, inward decays, conſumption of ſpiritual ſtrength, or ſome other ſpiritual diſtemper! Ah, our diſeaſes are paſt reckoning. What numbers about us are ſeized with feebleneſs of knees and weakneſs of hands, ſo that they can neither bow down the one nor lift up the other in prayer, to their Maker, and yet never are ſenſible of their miſery, nor enquire for the balm of Gilead, or the Phyſician there.

We may take up a lamentation over the ſick and dying among us, as the prophet did over the Jews, in the verſes following my text, Jer. ix. 1. "Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the ſlain of the daughter of my people." Oh! what ſlaughter doth the plague of ſin make in houſes and families both in city and country! There is reaſon for a greater cry among us, than that in Egypt, when their firſt born were ſlain: Of which it is ſaid, Exod. xii. 30. "And there was a great cry in Egypt, for there was not a houſe where there was not one dead." But ah! Our caſe is worſe for we have many houſes, where there is not one alive, but all dead ſpiritually, and ready to die eternally. This alas! is the caſe of this poor land, notwithſtanding the ſovereign balm that abounds in it.

Queſt. Whence is it that ſo few are healed, when the balm and Phyſician are ſo near?

Anſw. The cauſe is ſurely in us: For 1*ſt*, Many are not ſenſible of their diſeaſes, nor feel their wounds: They want a principle of ſpiritual life, and have no ſenſe of pain; and hence they complain of their inward plagues or ill hearts. The dead have no feeling, no care, no fear. And therefore many ignorant people ſay, they have good hearts to God, and do thank God for it. Alas! the moſt part are dead, ſee no need of this balm, and will not apply it.

2*dly*, Many are in love with their diſeaſe, more than with the Phyſician. They may perhaps ſpeak againſt ſin, and even pray againſt it, but in their hearts they deſire not that God ſhould hear them. God may ſay to them as in Pſal. lii. 3. Thou loveſt evil more than good. And how can ſuch expect to be healed?

3*dly*, Many neglect the ſeaſon of healing, and do not ſeek after the Phyſician and his balm in due time. They ſlight Chriſt and his goſpel-offers in the days of youth and health, and never begin to enquire for him till it be too late.

4*thly*, Many will not truſt Chriſt wholly for healing, but have a ſquint eye to other phyſicians, as to their duties, prayers, tears, &c. But, my friends, either Chriſt muſt have the ſole honour of your cure, or he will not be your Phyſician.

5*thly*, Many will not ſubmit to Chriſt's preſcription for healing; they will not take the bitter potion of ſelf-ſearching, or repentance, of contrition, or godly ſorrow; nor ſwallow the pill of mortification, or ſelf-denial: and therefore they remain unhealed. O that we could lament over them, and bewail their caſe before the Lord.

III. A 3d uſe of this doctrine may be of conſolation: And ſurely the news it brings of the incomparable balm of Gilead, and the phyſician there, may afford comfort to the ſick church and land wherein we dwell, however diſtreſſed her caſe be. Tho' it is our duty to bewail it, yet we are not to mourn as thoſe who have no hope. Her wounds indeed are deep, and her breaches wide, yet her caſe is not deſperate while there is balm in Gilead, and a phyſician there. Surely the balm hath not loſt its virtue, nor the Phyſician his compaſſion towards us; nay, we ſtill have pregnant inſtances of his mercy and pity, amidſt the wrath-like diſpenſations towards Scotland, which are ſigns that our good Samaritan hath not paſſed by us on the other ſide, like the Levite, but keeps in the way where we are, and looks with pity on our wounds, willing to apply his balm to them. Yea, his bowels do ſtill yearn to us, as of old to Ephraim, and make him ſay, How ſhall I give thee up, O Scotland? How ſhall I deliver thee? My heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together.

Object. Seeing it is notorious that the Phyſician hath given up many famous churches, when their diſeaſes were deſperate; what ground have we under ſuch dangerous ſymptoms to expect he will pity us, and apply this balm for our recovery?

Anſ. We have ſtill ſeveral grounds of hope; ſuch as,

1*ſt*, Seeing the Lord hath begun to pour out his vials upon Antichriſt, we may conclude he will not ceaſe till they be all poured out; and ſeeing thereby Antichriſt hath been in a deadly conſumption theſe 200 years paſt, he muſt ſurely expire at length. And tho' ſometimes he may ſeem to recover a little, yet the Lord aſſures us, that he will at length "conſume him with the ſpirit of his mouth, and deſtroy him with the brightneſs of his coming." 2 Theſſ. ii. 8. By which he means his coming in the brightneſs of goſpel-light, attended with the down-pouring of his Spirit. Now when we hear of the Lord's cauſing his goſpel ſun-ſhine to ariſe and ſpread in any place, with the out-pouring of his bleſſed Spirit, for convincing and converting of ſouls, the Lord encourages us to look out for the coming of his kingdom, and the downfal of Antichriſt.

2*dly*, We have encouragement to hope from that prophecy in Rev. xvii. 16. which foretels that the ten horns or kingdoms which formerly ſupported Antichriſt ſhall be inſtruments of his deſtruction: it is ſaid, They ſhall hate the whore, and make her deſolate. Now the Lord hath made Britain one of thoſe ten kingdoms that hate her, and therefore he will ſtill preſerve (as formerly he hath done in the moſt perilous times) a goodly remnant that ſhall be the prevailing party there, to accompliſh that grand deſign. And ſeeing the Lord is raiſed up out of his holy habitation, and hath already begun the work, he will ſurely carry it on, finiſh it at laſt, however it be interrupted, and things appear unlikely for a time.

3*dly*, We may draw hope from the ſecond pſalm, and other ſcripture texts, in which God the Father promiſeth to give his Son the uttermoſt parts of the earth for a poſſeſſion, and that the iſles ſhall ſee his ſalvation, and wait for his law, which places do take in Scotland, a nation, (tho' remote and deſpiſed) to which the Lord hath ſhewed a diſtinguiſhing reſpect, by ſending the goſpel early to it, advancing reformation to a great pitch in it, pouring out his Spirit remarkably on it, taking it ſolemnly into covenant with himſelf, appearing often for the intereſt of religion when almoſt ſunk in it, and raiſing up deliverers for it when oppreſt by enemies. Now theſe ſignal proofs of our Redeemer's kindneſs, give us ground to hope he will not give up the land that from eternity was given him by his glorious Father, and that in time was ſo ſolemnly ſurrendered to him by our fathers, who are now at their reſt.

4*thly*, There is a mourning and praying remnant in the land, who are greatly affected with the want of God's Spirit and preſence in ordinances, who deſire to lament after the Lord, and to ſigh and cry for all the abominations found among us. And tho' the glory of the Lord be gone up from the cherub, yet it ſeems ſtill to hover and ſtand over the threſhold of the door, and many are pleading and proteſting againſt his departure: And God hath regard to the prayers and tears of a faithful remnant, Pſal. xii. 5. Pſal. cii. 13, 14.

5thly, It is a hopeful token for the land, when there is a ſtir and noiſe among the dry bones of the young generation, when theſe are awakened, and brought under convictions, and perſuaded to turn from their old cuſtoms and companions, and to look towards Chriſt and heaven. Bleſſed be God for what is to be ſeen of this in ſome places: O that it were general, and over all! This would be a pledge of God's continuing of his abode with us; for he will not forſake the work of his own hands, nor abandon the pledges of his grace. Wherefore let us earneſtly wiſh and pray to ſee more of the Spirit's work among the young in our day.

6thly, Many of God's worthies, who are now in glory, have gone off the ſtage in the belief and perſuaſion, that God would yet ariſe and have mercy on his Zion in this land, that he would ſignally build her up, and appear in his glory, yea, that there would be more glorious goſpel-days ſeen in Scotland, than they or their fathers had beheld; and we are encouraged to hope that God will not let the words of his dying ſaints fall to the ground.

7thly, The accounts we have lately got of the effuſions of God's Spirit, and the diſplays of ſovereign grace in the converſion of ſouls, through the Engliſh plantations in America, and other parts of the world, give us ground to hope that God is about to accompliſh his promiſes to his church in the latter days, when the earth ſhall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord. Now if the King of Zion hath already begun his circuit, as if he deſign'd to ride in triumph through his churches, can we think he will paſs by Scotland, where he hath a waiting and wreſtling remnant, looking out, and ready to ſtop him with their cry, and even to caſt forth a flood of tears in his way? O! will not ancient kindneſs then revive, and his heart warm to his covenanted land, where his dwelling hath been, and his goings ſeen in the times of old! O! may not poor Scotland alſo plead for a viſit, according to the multitude of his tender mercies? Indeed the diviſions of Reuben, and our long degeneracy, may occaſion great thoughts and ſearchings of heart about our caſe: yet the foregoing conſiderations may encourage us to wait and pray in hope, however dark and cloudy the day be, eſpecially ſeeing our bleſſed Phyſician hath not taken away his healing balm from us, but doth ſtill preſerve it pure in the land.

Queſt. Seeing there is balm in the land, and the Phyſician willing to apply it, why is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered? How is it that Scotland's wounds are ſo long a healing?

Anſ. I. God in his wiſdom may order it ſo, that our wounds may be more laid open, and the corruptions thereof better diſcovered for our deeper humiliation. So God kept Iſrael wandering forty years in the wilderneſs to humble them and prove them, and to know what was in their heart: Deut. viii. 2. The continuance of wounds and grievances is needful for the trial and diſcovery of many; for thereby ſuch who were under covert are made known, and the corrupt diſtinguiſhed from the ſincere: the falſeneſs and rottenneſs of many had not been made evident, if wounds had not been ſo long kept open, and grievances continued.

II. The cure may be poſtponed to take our hearts wholly off from the creatures, and to convince us of the inſufficiency of all other phyſicians beſide the Phyſician in Iſrael. We do not naturally come to God, until we ſee there is help for us no where elſe: while there is any view of relief from creatures, we go firſt to them; ſo we find when Ephraim ſaw his ſickneſs, and Judah his wound, the firſt phyſician they ſought to, were the Aſſyrians, and king Jarib, who could not heal them, Hoſ. v. 13. Upon which account we ſee the judgment is not only continued, but increaſed; for the Lord ſaith in the following verſes, that he will not tear, but go away from them; and his deſign therein is to make them turn to himſelf as their only Phyſician, which at length they are brought to, for Hoſ. vi. 1. They ſay, Come and let us return to the Lord: for he hath torn, and he will heal us, he hath ſmitten, and he will bind us up. It would be a happy effect, if our diſappointments from the creatures would humble us for our ſin and folly, and bring us off all things, to look to God himſelf only for healing.

III. Diſeaſes continue unhealed when the cauſes thereof are ſecret and undiſcovered. We ſee Iſrael continued in a diſtreſſed caſe, as long as Achan's accurſed thing lay hid in his tent. All the humiliation and prayers of Joſhua and the elders of Iſrael, Joſh. vii. could not heal them, till the accurſed thing was laid open and diſcovered. And this ſhould put us on to try and ſearch more narrowly, if there be not ſome ſecret ſin of this land undiſcovered, ſome Achan in the camp, ſome Jonah hid under deck, which makes the ſea to work, and grow more tempeſtuous; ſo that let mariners row as they will, there is no getting into the harbour of peace. Surely ſome accurſed thing is overlooked by us, ſuch as our old covenant-breaking, perſecution, bloodſhed, our contempt of the Lord Jeſus, our giving the world his room, &c. May theſe hid evils be diſcovered; which continue our ſtorm, and perpetuate our diſeaſes, ſo that there is no healing for us.

IV. Our wounds are ſo long a healing, becauſe we do not ſubmit to the Phyſician's directions; we will not abſtain from things which inflame our wounds, ſuch as the invading of the rights of Chriſt and his church; nor humble ourſelves for old and late ſins; we will not put honour upon free grace, nor make uſe of the balm of our Phyſician's blood: we decline to ſet about extraordinary faſting, humiliation and prayer, and ſay, what a wearineſs is it? We do not cry and wreſtle for the down pouring of the Spirit, that only can apply the balm, and heal our land, but look to other medicines. Many, alas! tho' they complain of their diſeaſe, are not willing to part with it, but have a ſecret liking to it. Were we once brought to ſee our diſeaſe, to value our Phyſician, to be wholly reſigned to his will, and to ſay with Paul, Lord, what wilt thou have us to do? there would be hope in Iſrael concerning us.

IV. A 4th uſe of this doctrine may be of examination. And I would exhort every one to try if they be yet healed of the diſeaſe of ſin; I mean, if they have yet come to Chriſt, and got his healing balm applied to them. For though believers are not perfectly cured in this life, yet when they come to Chriſt by faith, they ſhare of the healing virtue of his blood, and are put in the way of healing: The force of their diſeaſe is broken, and the Spirit takes them under cure. Examine yourſelves then, if the healing work be begun in you. I offer you ſome marks of it, ſee if you can apply them to yourſelves.

1. Were you ever brought the length to have ſuch a ſenſe of your ſores, and ſuch a feeling of your wounds, as to be content to give all the world for the balm of Gilead to them? Such a lively feeling where it is, is a hopeful token; whereas thoſe who are ſtill eaſy about ſin, never ſaw it ſo as to hate it, or make ſerious enquiry for the Phyſician, their wound is unhealed.

2. Is your drought abated, I mean, your thirſt after ſin and the world; are you now out of love with them? this ſaith, the ſtrength of your diſeaſe is broken. But if you be ſtill in love with the world, or any predominant ſin, or go on in ſin without remorſe, your diſeaſe continues.

3. Have you a better appetite for your food than formerly? do you reliſh the ordinances and means of communion with God more than before? it is a good ſign. But if you have no liking to theſe, your diſtemper remains.

4. Have you got a high eſteem of your Phyſician, and a heart affection to him: it is a good token: for it is natural for people to eſteem and love thoſe who have cured their diſeaſes, and ſaved their lives; ſo was it with the blind man, John ix. that was cured by Chriſt: he had a great eſteem of him, and all the reproaches caſt upon him by his enemies, could by no means alter his thoughts of him.

5. It is a good ſign if you make your Phyſician kindly welcome to your heart and houſe; if you give him the beſt entertainment you have, and guard againſt every thing that would offend him. But thoſe who ſhut their doors againſt the Phyſician, and refuſe acceſs to precious Chriſt, they are ſtill under their diſeaſe.

6. Can you abide the light better than before? Are you brought the length to love ſearching ſermons, and thoſe miniſters that would ſearch to the bottom of your wounds, in order to a more thorough cure? Are you more deſirous than ever to have ſin diſcovered? Then it is a good ſign. But if you ſhun the light, and deſire, like ſick perſons, to have the curtains drawn upon you; or if you love thoſe prophets beſt who would heal your wounds ſlightly, and only ſkin them over to you, ſaying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace; as thoſe in Jer. vi. 14. then your diſeaſe ſtill remains.

7. Do you now ſee more and more of the vanity of all other medicines beſides the balm of Gilead? If you now ſee the utter inſufficiency of the balm of your convictions, reſolutions, prayers, tears, reformations, duties, &c. to heal your wounds, it is a good token; but if you are ſtill truſting to any of theſe, you remain unhealed.

8. Have you attained to the frame of the thankful leper, who when he was healed, turned back, fell down at Chriſt's feet, glorified God, and gave him thanks? as in Luke xvii. 15, 16. Have you got humble and thankful hearts? Do you deſire with the Pſalmiſt to bleſs the Lord with your ſouls, and all that is within you to bleſs his holy name, for healing your wounds and diſeaſes: as in Pſal. ciii. 1. 3. then it is a good ſign.

9. Are you more able for labour and ſervice than formerly? Do you find more ſtrength and willingneſs to run on God's errands, fight his battles, and perform commanded duties? It is a ſign of recovery: for we ſee what is foretold concerning the happy effects of this balm of Gilead in goſpel times, Iſa. xxxiv. 5, 6. Then the eyes of the blind ſhall be opened, and the lame man ſhall leap as an hart.

10. Have you a holy jealouſy and fear of every thing that may occaſion a relapſe, and bring back the diſeaſe upon you? Do you watch againſt the temptations of ſatan, and the ſnares of evil company or any thing that might entangle you, or draw you into ſin? That is ſurely a good ſign. We ſee what Chriſt ſaid to the impotent man whom he had healed, John v. 14. Behold thou art made whole, ſin no more. As it is the duty, ſo it will be the inclination of every healed ſoul to guard againſt wounding itſelf any more. It will be the earneſt deſire of that ſoul that it may not go back to the houſe of Jonathan, and its former diſtreſſed condition again. Now if you can apply one or more of theſe marks to yourſelves, then you may conclude that Chriſt hath taken you under cure: his balm is applied to you, and the work of healing is begun. May we all feel this in ourſelves, for Jeſus Chriſt's ſake. Amen.

Exhortation to come to Chriſt for healing.

SERMON VII.

On JER. viii. 22. Is there no balm in Gilead? &c.

V. HAVING improved the doctrine in ſeveral uſes, I proceed to a 5th uſe, namely, of exhortation. And here, in the name of the Lord, I exhort and beſeech all poor diſeaſed ſouls to come to the bleſſed Phyſician Jeſus Chriſt, who hath excellent balm for healing all their wounds and diſeaſes, be they never ſo deſperate. O ſick ſouls, why are you ſo unwilling to come and be healed? If your bodies be ſick, and a famous phyſician near, there is no ſmall ſtir in riding and travelling to him for help. But though your ſouls be deadly ſick, and in immediate hazard of eternal death, and the great Healer juſt at hand; how little motion is there amongſt you towards him! How amazing is the ſtupidity of the world, which is no better than a common hoſpital! Though every man in it be like the man that fell among thieves, Luke x. 37. robbed, and deadly wounded; yet very few are groaning for this good Samaritan to come and bind up their wounds. How deſirable would it be to ſee diſeaſed ſinners come flocking to Chriſt with their ſoul maladies, like the inhabitants of Genezareth with their bodily ailments, when Chriſt landed among them, Mark vi. 55. 56. there it is ſaid, They ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds thoſe that were ſick, where they heard he was. And whitherſoever he entered into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the ſick in the ſtreets, and beſought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment, and as many as touched him were made whole. Well, did Chriſt refuſe liberty to any of theſe ſick perſons to touch him? No, they were all welcome, whatever their ſickneſs was, be it never ſo deadly or deſperate. And this our bleſſed Jeſus cauſed to be recorded here for your encouragement to come to him with your ſoul diſtreſſes. O to ſee ſuch a ſtir among you about your ſouls, as was among that people about their bodies! Where elſe can you go with them, but to Jeſus Chriſt the only Phyſician of ſouls? If you go to the other phyſicians, it will juſt befal you as it did that poor woman which had an iſſue of blood twelve years, Mark v. 26. 27. She went to many phyſicians, and ſpent all that ſhe had, and was nothing better, but grew worſe, till at laſt ſhe came to Chriſt, who cured her for nothing.

In proſecuting this exhortation, I ſhall addreſs myſelf to ſeveral ſorts of diſeaſed ſouls. I. The inſenſible and ſecure. II. The ſenſible and feeling. III. Thoſe who are in the way of healing and recovery.

I. I begin with the inſenſible, thoſe who know not their diſeaſes, nor feel their wounds, and therefore ſee no need of the balm of Gilead, or the Phyſician there. As there are multitudes killed by ignorance, ſo great numbers are undone by ſelf-flattery. Many apprehend themſelves to be ſound and whole, who in the mean time are mortally ſick and dying. Solomon ſaith there is a generation of ſuch ſelf-conceited perſons, Prov. xxx. 12. In ſuch a caſe was the church of Laodicea, Rev. iii. 17. How fooliſhly did that proud Phariſee flatter himſelf? Luke xviii. 11. 12. He thought himſelf perfectly well, ſound and whole, when his ſoul was deadly ſick, and ready to drop into hell. In like manner do many deceive themſelves. Ah! they never communed with their own hearts, never took their ſouls aſide to enquire if they be yet under the mortal diſeaſe wherewith they were born; or if they have gone to the ſoul-phyſician for his healing balm. In order to awaken ſuch ſecure thoughtleſs ſouls, conſider theſe few things:

1. While you are inſenſible of your diſeaſe, your caſe is highly dangerous and miſerable. Why? 1. You are unconverted, unſanctified, and dying in your ſins, John viii. 24. To die in your ſins is infinitely worſe than to die in a dungeon among ſerpents; for theſe curſed ſerpents, your ſins, will go to the grave with you as your companions, and to the tribunal with you as your accuſers, and to hell with you as your tormentors.——2. Your ſouls while diſeaſed, are moſt lothſome to God; for you are not only without the image and Spirit of God, but you are ſwarming with the vermin of ſin and filthy luſts.——3. You are ſlaves to the devil, drudging night and day at his work, grinding at his mill, and feeding on his huſks; he hath you in fetters, but you are inſenſible of it: Satan deals with you as the Philiſtines with Sampſon, puts out your eyes that you may not ſee your chains.——4. Your whole actions, natural, civil, and religious, are all an abomination to God. Not only your eating and drinking, buying and ſelling; but alſo your praying and communicating are abhorred, as being without faith in Jeſus Chriſt. Beſides the leproſy of ſin which overſpreads you, defiles all your beſt performances.——5. Your diſeaſe is ſtill the more dangerous, that you are not ſenſible of it; for while it is ſo, you are out of the way of healing, according to Mat. ix. 12. The whole ſee no need of the phyſician. Awake therefore, O ſecure ſoul, conſider thy caſe, and flee to the great Phyſician for help; until you ſee your miſery, you will not prize the remedy.

2*dly*, Conſider though you be moſt miſerable and diſtreſſed by ſin, yet you have the balm of Gilead freely offered to you in the goſpel, that can heal and ſave the moſt diſeaſed ſoul, Iſa. xlv. 22. Look unto me, (ſaith Chriſt) and be ye ſaved. And though ye have been ſtout-hearted againſt God, yet, ſaith he, Hearken unto me, I bring near my righteouſneſs to you, Iſa. xlvi. 12. 13. It is a pleaſure to him to bring his balm near to you, and to ſee poor ſinners willing to make uſe of it; for, ſaith he, Ezek. xviii. 32. I have no pleaſure in the death of him that dieth, wherefore turn yonrſelves, and live ye. See alſo Ezek. xxxiii. 2.

3*dly*, Conſider how long you have ſlighted this balm already; wherefore if you neglect it any longer, your day of grace may come to end, and your healing time go over; ſo that when you would be healed, the balm may be far from you. Wherefore improve your day like that people, in Capernaum, Luke iv. 40. Now when the ſun was ſetting, all they who had any ſick with divers diſeaſes, brought them unto him, and he laid his hand on every one of them, and healed them. Go you, O diſeaſed ſouls, and do likewiſe. Many of you have delayed till the ſun is at the ſetting, the ſun of the goſpel, the ſun of your life, the ſun of your health and ſtrength. O then make haſte before the ſun ſet, to bring your ſick ſouls to Chriſt to be cured: For now is the accepted time, 2 Cor. vi. 2. Now is your healing day. And if you ſhould loſe this day of your healing, to-morrow may be the day of your eternal wounding.

Queſt. But what ſhall we do to attain to a ſenſe and feeling of our wounds in order to healing?

Anſ. Take this advice:

1. Be diligent in the uſe of all outward means: read the ſcriptures, and get the knowledge of your loſt ſtate in Adam, and the way of ſalvation thro' a Surety's righteouſneſs. Attend the preaching of the word, which is the uſual mean of converſion: be not abſent from the ordinary occaſions of it, leſt you miſs that ſermon that was moſt ſuitable to your caſe, and might have been the means of ſaving your ſouls. The devil is at pains to keep you from ſome ſermons, for he may know what miniſters are preparing before-hand, and when he ſees any thing coming that is likely to touch you, he will contrive ſome temptation to keep you back from hearing it.

2. Study to affect your hearts with what you hear of your mortal diſeaſe, the ſinful natures you brought into the world, their pollution, rebellion, and enmity againſt God. Think upon the many acts of rebellion you have broke out into againſt heaven. Think alſo how near you are, while unhealed, to everlaſting burning. yea every moment on the brink of the fiery furnace, and kept out of it only by the thread of life, which may be broke by any bit of bread you eat, by ſlipping of a foot by ſtumbling of a horſe, and by hundreds of diſtempers, which like ſo many lighted candles, are ready to burn the thread, and let your diſeaſed ſouls drop into the pit for ever.

3. When God ſhoots the arrow of conviction into the conſcience, do not ſeek to ſhake it out till it reach the end for which it was ſent. Be not like thoſe who go to their callings to work it out, or to their cups to drink it out, or to their beds to ſleep it out, or to their games to divert it out. But go rather to your knees, and pray that the wound may be medicinal and ſaving, that it may be as deep as needful, and the power of the Lord may be preſent to heal you, apply to Jeſus your Phyſician, that he may take out the arrow with his own hand, and bring the balm of Gilead to the wound.

4. Apply to the holy Spirit, who is the author of ſaving convictions, and implore his gracious influences, for the dry bones ſtir not till he breathe upon them. It is the office of the Holy Ghoſt to apply Chriſt's purchaſe to you, and ſaving convictions are the firſt part of that purchaſe he makes you partake of. Plead then with him, "Lord come and do thine office, art thou not as willing to apply as Chriſt was to purchaſe? Is not the Spirit the applier as freely promiſed as Chriſt the Phyſician! Is not that a free promiſe, Ezek. xxxvi. I will put my Spirit within you? It depends upon no condition in us, only it is ſaid, ver. 37. I will be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael to do it for them. And now, Lord, I am enquiring for it as I can, O do it for me."

II. I come next to addreſs thoſe diſeaſed ſouls who are ſenſible and feeling, ſick ſinners, who are convinced of their diſtreſſed caſe by nature, and their need of the phyſician; you are the proper objects of his care, Mat. ix. 12, 13, and xviii. 11. Luke xviii. 13, 14. I exhort all ſuch to come and employ Chriſt the only Phyſician of Iſrael to heal your wounded ſouls. Delay not; for your diſeaſe is mortal; your wound is deep; the ſooner you come, the better. Loſe not the ſeaſon when Chriſt is dealing with you by his Spirit; but when the waters are ſtirred, ſee that you preſently ſtep in, that you may be made whole.

Queſt. How ſhall we improve the ſeaſon, ſo as to be cured of our diſeaſe?

Anſ. Obſerve theſe directions:

1. As you ought to be concerned about your diſeaſe, ſee that your trouble and concern be of the right kind. Be grieved for it, not only becauſe it brings ruin upon yourſelves, but mainly becauſe it unfits you for glorifying God, and enjoying communion with him. Be troubled both for the general corruption of your natures, and for the particular plagues of your own hearts; point out thoſe to your Phyſician which are moſt grievous to you, whether it be hardneſs, blindneſs, unbelief, backſliding, pride, earthly mindedneſs, &c. Every man that would have acceſs to God, muſt know the plague of his own heart, 1 King viii. 38. Chriſt would have every man to point forth his ailment to him, with the blind man, Luke xviii. 41. What wilt thou that I ſhall do unto thee? Let your anſwer be ready like his, Lord, that I may receive my ſight, Lord, that my unbelief may be removed, that my hardneſs may be cured, my backſliding healed, &c. Lay open all your ſores, and hide nothing from your Phyſician.

2dly, Come to Chriſt with a firm belief and perſuaſion of his power and ability to heal you. This is the thing he demands of every ſick ſoul, as of thoſe two blind men that followed him crying for help, Matth. ix. 28. Believe ye that I am able to do this? Believe ye that I have all fulneſs in me to anſwer all your wants, to cure all your diſeaſes, and ſuit all your caſes! O for a ſtrong faith in Chriſt's power! This doth greatly glorify him.

3dly, Plead importunately with your Phyſician for a cure; he allows you to do it, and to fill your mouths with arguments for that end.

1. Plead the ſovereign efficacy of his blood, that it is a remedy of infinite virtue, and can heal the moſt deſperate diſeaſe; ſay with the leper, Mat. viii. 2. Lord, if thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean; as if he had ſaid, Thou mayſt do with me as thou wilt, but one thing I am ſure of, thou canſt heal me: So ſay you, Lord, I am ſure thy blood can cure and cleanſe me, tho' I were as vile with ſin as the leper was with his diſeaſe, ſo that if I die in my ſins, it will not be for want of virtue in Chriſt's blood, the balm of Gilead is all-ſufficient. As the leper's argument prevailed with Chriſt to cure him, ſo a ſtrong faith and perſuaſion of the virtue of Chriſt's blood will engage him to heal you.

2. Plead the freeneſs of his balm to all diſeaſed ſouls, that the fountain of his blood runs freely to the worſt of lepers, that he ſhuts out none from it, but invites all to come; that thoſe who had the deepeſt wounds and moſt dangerous diſeaſes, have come upon the invitation, and been made whole, as Manaſſeh, the woman of Samaria, Mary Magdalene, the penitent thief, Paul, the Corinthians, &c. Say, Lord, I come with the reſt upon thy call, O do not ſhut me out.

3. Plead your inability to do any thing for your own healing, as the impotent man did with Chriſt at the pool of Betheſda, John v. 6, 7. In like manner ſay, "Lord, I have been many years at the ſide of the pool, near the healing balm, but I am impotent, and unable of myſelf to move one ſtep towards it, far leſs to apply it: no man or angel can cure my lameneſs; Lord if thou do not pity and help me, I muſt even die and periſh within view of the balm."

4. Plead with Jeſus Chriſt, that he alone is the only qualified perſon in heaven or earth to be your Phyſician. "Lord, thou haſt infinite knowledge and ſkill to diſcern my diſeaſe with its ſymptoms and cauſes, and to preſcribe the proper remedies. Thou haſt infinite compaſſions to pity me, and infinite power to relieve me when I cry for help. Yea, thou haſt human bowels and tenderneſs of heart alſo to ſympathize with me in diſtreſs. Nay, thou haſt a commiſſion from heaven to heal ſuch diſeaſed ſouls as mine, which thou didſt chearfully accept. And thou haſt come a long journey from heaven to earth to viſit the ſick, and proclaim thy commiſſion to them. Thou haſt aſſumed my nature, and taken a human body that it might be pierced to ſend forth a precious balm for my wounds; and haſt graciouſly promiſed to apply this balm to all who come to thee, Hoſ. xiv. 1. 4. John vi. 3. Rev. xxii. 17. Yea, thou haſt come to thoſe who never ſought thee for healing, Iſa. lxv. 1. Luke x. 33, 34. And ſhall not I get healing when I am earneſtly ſeeking it."

5. Plead the glory of his name and the credit of his blood, ſay, "Lord, both theſe will ſuffer if a poor wounded creature, that relies upon the faith of thy word, and the virtue of thy blood ſhould be diſappoint-

“ ed and periſh.” This was Moſes's argument with God for pity to the Iſraelites, Numb. xiv. 15, 16. The nations will ſpeak, ſaying, Becauſe the Lord was not able to bring this people into the land, which he ſware unto them, therefore he hath ſlain them in the wilderneſs. So do you plead, “ Lord, what will the devils and atheiſts ſay?” Will they not blaſpheme thy name and reproach thy blood, and ſay, becauſe thy power and blood were not able to heal theſe diſeaſed ſouls, thou letteſt them periſh.

6. Plead the mercifulneſs of his nature, with David, Pſal. xli. 4. Lord, be merciful to my ſoul, for I have ſinned againſt thee. Thou art a merciful as well as ſkilful Phyſician. O let not a ſick ſoul that depends on the mercy of thy nature and merit of thy blood for healing, go away diſappointed.

But poor ſenſible ſinners have many objections againſt themſelves.

Object. I. I know (ſaith one) Chriſt is a great Phyſician, but I am not worthy that he ſhould come under my roof to heal ſuch a one as me.

Anſ. 1. There was never one healed becauſe of his worthineſs, for it is only the unworthy that Chriſt came to heal and ſave, 1 Tim. i. 15. Rev. iii. 17, 18. Matth. ix. 12. 13.—2. The more ſenſible a ſoul is of unworthineſs and humbled for it, the more welcome he is to that Phyſician, Pſal. x. 17. Iſa. lxvi. 2. Mat. v. 3. Luke xviii. 14—3. If you come not to be healed till you be worthy, you will never come, for where can a poor worthleſs ſinner get any worthy or deſirable qualification but from Chriſt only? You muſt come to Chriſt for every thing that is valuable.—4 Seeing Chriſt doth expreſly call the moſt unworthy to come to him for healing, Rev. iii. 17, 18. 1 John iii. 23. this ſhould encourage you to do it. It was his call that encouraged the blind man to come to him, Mark x. 47. Be of good comfort, riſe, he calleth thee. Chriſt's calls and commands ſhould be obeyed by the unworthy as well as others.

Object. II. But I fear (ſaith another) I am not within Chriſt's commiſſion, and how then can I expect healing from him?

Anſ. It is high preſumption for any man to intrude into God's ſecret decrees, which no angel dare do: This ſuggeſtion then is not from God, but from the devil, to drive ſinners into diſpair, or to keep them away from Chriſt: For the Spirit of Chriſt tells us that “ ſecret things belong unto God, and the things which are revealed belong unto us,” Deut. xxix. 29. Now ſeeing it is revealed to you that Chriſt was ſent to ſave and heal the loſt and ſick, the bruiſed and broken hearted, the halt and maimed, the wretched and miſerable, the poor and blind, and calls ſuch to come to him for healing, Mat. xviii. 11. Luke iv. 18. Luke xiv. 21. Rev. iii. 17, 18. And ſeeing you cannot but own that ſome of theſe characters belong to you; this ſhould encourage you to come to Chriſt with expectation.

Object. III. But my wounds are very deep, my diſeaſe is of a deſperate nature.

Anſ. All diſeaſes are alike to Chriſt's blood; it can as eaſily cure the greateſt as the ſmalleſt, 1 John i. 7. What diſeaſe more deadly than that of the three thouſand who imbrued their hands in Chriſt's blood, Acts ii. and yet they were all healed by it.

Object. IV. But I am ſick of many diſeaſes at once.

Anſ. The balm of Chriſt's blood can as ſoon cure many diſeaſes as one.

Object. V. But my diſeaſes are old and inveterate, and my ſores have run many years.

Anſ. Chriſt hath cured many ſuch, the thief on the croſs had an old feſtering diſeaſe, and ſo had Zaccheus, for he had wronged many, yet this mighty Phyſician cured them both. He cured many old diſtempers in mens bodies, to aſſure us of the virtue of his blood to cure old diſeaſes in our ſouls. Therefore he cured the woman's iſſue of blood that had run twelve years. He looſed a woman that Satan had kept bound eighteen years. He cured the impotent man at Betheſda that had an infirmity thirty eight years. All which is recorded for our encouragement to come to Chriſt with our old ſores.

Object. VI. I have relapſed into the ſame diſeaſe, and can I expect healing?

Anſ. Relapſes indeed are moſt dangerous, yet Chriſt doth undertake to heal thoſe who relapſe, Hoſ. xiv. 2, and he actually healed Peter, tho' he relapſed into the ſame ſin.

Object. VII. But I fear I have no right to Chriſt's blood.

Anſ. Seeing all the ends of the earth are bid to look to it for healing, and Chriſt hath appointed his goſpel to be preached, and his balm to be offered to every creature, you have a full and ſufficient warrant to come and make uſe of it.

Object. VIII. But I have long ſlighted the offers of this balm.

Anſ. The more heinous thy ſin, or deep thy wound be, thou haſt the greater need of this ſovereign medicine: And go not to make thy wound deeper by a new refuſal.

Object. IX. I have eſſayed to go and apply this balm, but find I have no ſtrength to do it.

Anſ. If you have ſincere deſires to accept and uſe it, you have ſome beginnings of faith, and therefore improve theſe deſires by making frequent eſſays to receive Chriſt and apply his blood. Believing is a duty you ſhould be oft eſſaying and aiming at, even before you find God's Spirit effectually concurring: This you do in other duties; for tho' you cannot pray or praiſe, communicate, meditate, or ſanctify the ſabbath aright without the Spirit, yet forbear you not to aim at theſe duties, even when you find not the Spirit at work; and neither ſhould you in this caſe. Tho' you have no power to believe ſavingly, yet ſtill be aiming at it, and believe as you can. The Spirit will pity your weakneſs, when you are making honeſt attempts to do his will; therefore be aiming to approve the device of redeeming love, to part with your own righteouſneſs, to ſay Amen to the well-ordered covenant, to take a crucified Chriſt for your All, and venture your all in his hand. And tho' you often fail in your attempts, yet ſtill try it again, and at length the Spirit will help you to ſtretch out faith's hand, and faſten it on Chriſt and his wounds to your comfort.

Object. X. But I am afraid Chriſt is not willing to apply his blood to heal me.

Anſ. What more evidences of willingneſs can you aſk from Chriſt? You have both the word and writ of him that is faithful and true, and his oath alſo, John vi. 37. Ezek. xxxiii. 11. And to all theſe he adds outward ſigns and ſeals which are viſible to your bodily eyes in the ſacraments, to aſſure you of his willingneſs. Alſo his frankneſs to heal all the bodies of men that came to him while on earth, is given you as a pledge of his willingneſs to cure your ſouls; for you cannot imagine he would be more compaſſionate to mens bodies than to their ſouls, ſeeing it was his great errand to ſeek and heal ſouls, and to ſhed his blood for that end. May we all have faith in that blood, for Chriſt's ſake. Amen.

Advices to thoſe who are recovering.

SERMON VIII.

On Jerem. viii. 22. Is there no balm in Gilead, &c.

III. IN proſecuting my exhortation from this doctrine, there is a third ſort I propoſed to addreſs; namely, Thoſe who are already in the way of healing and recovery, through the Phyſician's applying the balm of his blood to them for removing the guilt of ſin, and renewing of their natures, whereby the force of their diſeaſe is broken, and they in the way of recovery. To theſe I offer ſome advices.

1. Thankfully admire the generous kindneſs and free love of your Phyſician, in diſtinguiſhing you from the reſt of the world. He hath done that for you which he hath not done for thouſands, nay, for millions of your fellow-creatures, and even for many in thoſe very families and congregations where you dwell. He hath healed your natures when they were ſick unto death; he hath pardoned your ſins, when they are ſinking under guilt. O bleſs and praiſe him with David, Pſal. ciii. 1, 2, &c. Chriſt expects a tribute of praiſe from healed ſouls, and obſerves how they pay it, as in the caſe of the lepers, Luke xvii. 18. Were there not ten cleanſed (ſaith he) but where are the nine? There he counted their number, and found nine healed who returned him no thanks. And this he cenſures as baſe ingratitude to God.

2dly, Be earneſt with God for thorough and perfect healing, that the diſeaſe of ſin may be wholly ſubdued. Let the work of ſanctification be ſtill carried on; for this is a continued healing of your nature, till at laſt the cure be completed at death.

3dly, Pity your relations and neighbours who are ſtill ſick unto death, and do what you can for their cure. Eſpecially pity and pray for your children who are ſick of the plague you conveyed to them Recommend to them the balm of Gilead, and the Phyſician there. Tell them your experience of the Phyſician's ſkill and tenderneſs, and the virtue of his balm. "O "come and ſee; he hath cured me of a deep wound, "an old diſeaſe of a hard heart, of dreadful atheiſm, "unbelief, blindneſs, earthlineſs, pride, paſſion," &c.

4thly, Take proper means to preſerve health when reſtored; ſuch as, 1. Live in a good and wholeſome air, that is, in the ſociety of God's people. 2. Keep good hours, and a wholeſome diet, that is, ſtated times every day for the ſoul's refreſhment, by reading, meditation and prayer. 3. Uſe proper exerciſes, ſuch as the exerciſe of faith, prayer, hearing, communicating and Chriſtian converſe; for ſpiritual ſloth and idleneſs greatly prejudice the ſoul's health.

6thly, Let all thoſe be the objects of your ſpecial love, who have got their natures healed, and the image of God reſtored to them. Love them, though they be poor and low in the world, and even though they differ in ſeveral things from you: for if you love them only who are of your way of thinking in all things, that is liker a ſectarian, or party love, than a true Chriſtian love. For it would ſay, you love ſaints more for their likeneſs to you, than for their likeneſs and relation to Chriſt. Now the true motive of Chriſtian love is a manlikeneſs and love to Chriſt more than to you. And ſurely, all theſe being members of the ſame body, and children of the ſame family, who will ſpend a whole eternity together in admiring and praiſing the Lamb, ſhould love one another while ſojourning in the wilderneſs below. Chriſt gives this as a mark of his diſciples, and thoſe who are healed by him.

7thly, Rejoice and bleſs God, when you hear of many ſick ſouls flocking to the balm of Gilead and the Phyſician there, and when there are hopeful ſigns of their healing and recovery. Look upon theſe as the moſt refreſhing news that can be brought to your ears.

8thly, Learn patience under the diſtreſs of your bodies, ſeeing you have got healing to your ſouls. Do not murmur at it, ſeeing God ſees it needful for your ſoul's health.

Laſtly, Be concerned for the diſeaſed land wherein you live. If you have got healing to yourſelves, you ought to have public ſpirits to be affected with the caſe of a ſick land and church, eſpecially at a time, when it may be ſaid of her, as of Judah, Iſaiah i. 5, 6. "The whole head is ſick, and the whole heart is faint; from the ſole of the foot, even unto the head, there is no ſoundneſs in it, but wounds, and bruiſes, and putrifying ſores: they have not been cloſed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment." So alas, it may be ſaid of our land, The whole body politic and eccleſiaſtic is ſadly diſeaſed, our kings and princes, nobility, gentry, magiſtrates, miniſters, burgeſſes, commons, and all ranks are full of wounds and ſores.

Queſt. How is it we are to ſhew our concern for the land in ſuch diſtreſs?

Anſ. Two ways, 1. By earneſt prayer for it. 2. By uſing the means in our power to heal it.

I. Spread out the caſe of the land in prayer before the great Phyſician of Iſrael, and plead that he may look on it with an eye of compaſſion; yea, humbly expoſtulate with God about the church's caſe, like Jeremiah, Jer. xiv. 9. Haſt thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy ſoul loathed Zion? Why haſt thou ſmitten us, and there is no healing for us? Alas, no Phyſician nor balm on earth can heal us; no ordinance, ſermons, nor ſacraments can cure us. All the warnings, reproofs, and judgments in the world cannot heal our wounds. O, if Iſrael's Phyſician would come and do it himſelf! The Lord hath juſtly ſmitten us for our ſins, and is threatening to ſmite us more. Now what can we do in that caſe but look to him for pity, and plead that the hand which hath ſmitten us, may alſo heal us; for nothing will heal us till he come with the balm of Gilead, his blood and Spirit, to our wounds. This balm can heal nations and churches, as well as ſingle perſons. O then look earneſtly to that blood that quencheth the fire of wrath for us, and purchaſeth every thing that is good to us, and plead for the ſake of that blood, that God would revive his work in the land, breathe upon the dry bones and make a ſtir amongſt them, pour out a ſpirit of converſion and of reformation upon men of all ſtations, magiſtrates, miniſters, elders, parents, and teachers of youth, as well as the young generation, that they may turn to the Lord, and exert themſelves for bearing down vice, and promoting Chriſtian knowledge and piety in the land. Let all cry to God to rebuke the winds of error and diviſion, that truth may triumph, and breaches may be healed; that miniſters and people may have one heart and one mind, to ſerve the Lord with one conſent. And thus would the health of the church and nation be recovered. I might adduce many motives to preſs you to plead for repentance and healing to the whole land; I ſhall mention a few.

1. This has been the commendable practice of God's people in all ages, as of Moſes, David, Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Daniel, &c. as in Exod. xxxii. 11. 12. Pſal. li. 18. Iſa. lxii. 1. Jer. ix. 1. Dan. ix. 17. And this is what the Lord requires of every one, Pſal. cxxii. 6. Joel ii. 17.

2. Prayers put up for a ſick church or nation are moſt agreeable to God, and have a ſort of commanding power with him, Iſa. xlv. 2. He puts great honour upon ſuch prayers, and makes them means of producing marvellous effects and deliverances, as in Exod. xvii. 11, 13. and xxxii. 14. And we read of the Lord's ſeeking out ſuch wreſtlers that he may honour them, Ezek. xxii. 30. And I ſought for a man among them, that ſhould make up the hedge, and ſtand in the gap before me for the land, that I ſhould not deſtroy it. Theſe are the men that God delights to honour.

3. The conſideration of the hand you have had, by your ſins, in bringing on diſeaſes upon the church and land, ſhould excite you to wreſtle and plead for healing to her. The laws of common humanity ſhould even oblige you to this duty.

4. They who pray moſt for Zion in her diſtreſſed and wounded caſe, ſhall be the largeſt ſharers in her comforts when God brings healing to her. Theſe ſhall reap moſt plentifully of her joys when the harveſt comes, who now ſow moſt of the ſeed of tears for her in her trouble.

II. In the 2d place, I ſaid every one ſhould uſe all the means in their power for healing the church and land. God has appointed men in different ſtations and capacities, to be as under-phyſicians to bring a kind of balm to a diſeaſed land, ſuch as magiſtrates, miniſters, elders, &c. Theſe by wholeſome laws, inſtructions, and examples may contribute very much, thro' the divine bleſſing, to the healing of our diſeaſe. Nay, private Chriſtians who are in the meaneſt ſtations, if they do what is incumbent upon them, may have ſome ſhare in this bleſſed work of healing a ſick land. As ſometimes we have heard of great cures, effectuated by mean and obſcure perſons, when learned phyſicians had given over the caſe as deſperate; ſo private Chriſtians may be inſtrumental in bringing about our cure, when thoſe of greater power and ſkill look on our caſe as hopeleſs. They may be of great uſe to recommend religion to the world, by conforming their practice to its rules, and adorning their profeſſion with ſhining holineſs and Chriſtian virtues, and alſo by avoiding all diſhoneſty and injuſtice, pride and paſſion, malice and revenge, bitterneſs and evil ſpeaking, and every thing that may beget prejudice in the carnal world againſt Chriſtianity, who are too ready to impute the faults of its profeſſors to the religion itſelf. Private Chriſtians alſo may bring their healing prayers and tears, and pour them out before the Lord in behalf of the diſeaſed land. They may act faith on the blood of Chriſt, our ſovereign balm, and plead it with God, "Lord, was not this blood ſhed for the wounds of the church, as well as of particular believers! Is it not by Chriſt's ſtripes the church muſt be healed, as well as every individual member? Lord, thou haſt a tender ſympathy with every member in diſtreſs, and wilt thou not much more regard the whole body! Lord, ſhe whom thou loveſt is ſick, and nothing can ſave her life but the balm of Gilead: This, thou alone haſt, and none elſe can apply it. Make haſte unto her, O God of Zion, thou art her help and deliverer; O Lord, make no tarrying, let thy power be preſent to heal her." Thus we ſee men of all ranks may be uſeful as under-phyſicians for healing a ſick land.

Object. But, ſay ſome, the caſe of the church and land ſeems deſperate, and her wounds incurable, and what then can be done by us for her?

Anſ. However dangerous her caſe may be, yet it is not quite ſo deſperate, as to make us give over all hopes and endeavours. I ſhewed before what grounds of hope we have yet left us. And tho' the caſe were more deſperate than it is, we ought ſtill to be in the uſe of appointed means, and never diſtruſt God in any ſtrait whatſoever. We ought always to look to him, who is wiſe in heart, and mighty in ſtrength, Job ix. 4. And remember the Lord's queſtion to Abraham in a deſperate caſe, Gen. xviii. 14. Is any thing too hard for the Lord! Unbelief ſtumbleth at God's power, when it ſeeth no viſible means or inſtruments for bringing events about, not conſidering how eaſy it is for God, when he doth not find means, to create them; and when he pleaſeth, even to work without them. It is the property of true faith not to make haſte, or preſcribe to God as to means or times of working, but to wait his leiſure, and depend upon him in the greateſt extremities.

It puts honour upon God, to truſt him when our caſe ſeems moſt hopeleſs, and even to make the deſperateneſs of our caſe an argument in prayer to God, and a ground for faith to faſten upon, ſo as to plead with him the more earneſtly and confidently for help, and to ſay, 'Lord, it will be the more for thy honour and glory, to undertake the cure of our diſeaſe, when matters are come to this extremity, that all beſides are giving over our caſe as hopeleſs and deſperate.' The news of the balm of Gilead, and the Phyſician there, ſhould ſtrengthen our faith, and ſupport our hopes under the moſt deadly diſeaſe, and make us lift up our head, and look out for him. As old Jacob when he was juſt a dying, yet at the news of his ſon Joſeph's being near, he ſtrengthened himſelf and ſat up on his bed expecting him; ſo ſhould we, when ready to faint on the bed of our languiſhing caſe, endeavour to lift up our hearts at the good news of the balm and Phyſician of Iſrael, and ſay, Is not Jeſus Chriſt the great Phyſician commiſſioned by the Father to heal a poor wounded church and land! This is the time of her need and great ſtrait, and a proper ſeaſon for him to ſtep in for help. Both in ſcripture and experience we find the time of the church's extremity is God's uſual opportunity of working and appearing for her, as in the caſe of Iſaac when at the point of being ſacrificed, and alſo in the caſe of the Jews when ready to be cut off by Haman's bloody plot. When there was but an hair's breadth betwixt them and deſtruction, God ſtept in and ſaved them. It is in the mount that the Lord will be ſeen; ſo the text may be rendered, Gen. xxii. 14.

Queſt. Why doth God let the diſtreſs of his church and people come to ſuch extremity, before he interpoſe for them?

Anſ. He doth it for glorious and wiſe ends: 1. To glorify his wiſdom in finding out a remedy when we can ſee no appearance of it. The Phyſician's ſkill is beſt diſcovered in maſtering a diſtemper when it is become moſt inveterate and hopeleſs.

2. To ſhew his pity and compaſſion to his people, when their condition is moſt deſtitute. David depended upon God's pity in ſuch a caſe, Pſalm xxvii. 10. ‘When my father and mother forſake me, then the Lord will take me up.’ So when enemies think God hath forgotten his church, and men have caſt her off, and they begin to ſcoff at Zion, and call her an outcaſt, then God ſeeth meet to ſhew his pity, to take her under his care and heal her wounds, Jer. xxx. 16. 27.

3. To excite the ſpirit of prayer in his people. It was for that end the Lord ſuffered his people to be brought to great extremity at the Red Sea, Exod. xiv. 10. The children of Iſrael lift up their eyes, and behold the Egyptians marched after them, and they were ſore afraid, and cried unto the Lord. When they were in great diſtreſs they cried to the Lord, but not before. So Chriſt ſlept in the ſhip, and let the tempeſt riſe to a great height, to bring his diſciples to their knees, Mat. viii. 24. 25 They came and awoke him, ſaying, Lord ſave us, we periſh At ſuch a time their prayers are doubled, and moſt fervent, as in Pſal. cxxiii. 3. Have mercy upon us, O Lord, have mercy upon us, for we are exceedingly filled with contempt. And it is to be obſerved when ſuch a ſpirit of fervent prayer is poured out upon the church, it is a ſure preſage of her adverſaries ruin; ſo we ſee it was in Zech. xii. 9. 10. ‘I will ſeek to deſtroy all the nations that come againſt Jeruſalem; and I will pour upon the inhabitants of Jeruſalem the ſpirit of grace and of ſupplications.’ If this ſpirit were poured out upon the inhabitants of Scotland, it would be a good preſage of the Lord's appearing for her.

4. God puts off to extremity, to draw out his people's faith and dependence wholly upon himſelf. He cuts off the branches of earthly ſupports to make them claſp to the body of the tree, even to him who is the everlaſting God; and to bring them to reflect upon what he hath done for them in former extremities, and to act faith upon his power and pity, which he exerted for them in days of old. Thus did Jehoſhaphat in his great ſtrait, 2 Chron. xx. 7. 12. ‘Art thou not our God, who didſt drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people? We have no might againſt this great company that cometh againſt us, neither know we what to do, but our eyes are upon thee.’ God would have the deliverances he hath given us in former ſtraits, to draw out our faith upon him in new trials, and hence he ſays to Iſrael when under fears of the Canaanites, Deut. vii. 18. Thou ſhalt not be afraid of them, but ſhall well remember what the Lord thy God did unto Pharaoh and all Egypt.

5. To humble his people and bring down the pride of their hearts. God brought his people to great extremities in the wilderneſs, and his great deſign therein was to humble them, as he tells them, Deut. viii. 2. There is a woful root of pride in mens hearts that muſt be broken and ſubdued, before they can be meet for heaven. This root is oft breaking out in diſcontent, murmuring, quarrelling, bitterneſs, paſſion, and backwardneſs to ſubmit to God's will. Now it coſts much labour and pains to bring down ſuch proud hearts to the will of God; they muſt even be reduced to great extremities, before they be ſufficiently humbled, and brought calmly to ſubmit, without any riſing of heart againſt God. Hence it is ſaid, Pſal. cvii. 12. He brought down their heart with labour. And indeed it is a happy preſage and fore-runner of God's gracious appearing for his people, when the proud ſwellings of their hearts are quelled, and they are brought to a ſilent ſubmiſſion under his hand, Pſal. lvi. 10. Be ſtill and know that I am God, I will be exalted among the Heathen, &c.

6. To take his people off from all creature confidences and lying refuges, which they are prone to look to in ſtraits and difficulties. Great extremities drive men from truſting in the arm of fleſh, and cauſe them to flee to the arm of Jehovah with whom is everlaſting ſtrength. In ſuch caſes they are made to cry, as in Pſal. lx. 11. O God give us help from trouble, for vain is the help of man. Then it is we are beſt qualified to receive help from God, when we are brought to own the inſufficiency of creatures to relieve us and ſupply our needs. The man that had the lunatic child in ſad diſtreſs, was in a fair way of getting a cure to him from Chriſt, when he came to be humbled by his diſappointments, to have his eyes turned away from all human help, and was glad to apply to Chriſt as his laſt refuge, Matth. xvii. 14, 15. &c. There we ſee he came and humbly kneeled down before him, ſaying, Lord have mercy upon my ſon for he is lunatic and ſore vexed, &c. And I brought him to thy diſciples, and they could not cure him. As if he had ſaid, Lord, the caſe is deſperate and incurable as to human help, and therefore I muſt look to thee alone for a cure; I have now none elſe to go to but thyſelf. Well then, ſaid our Lord, ſince that is the caſe with thee, Bring him hither to me, ver. 17. and he preſently cured him. O that every one would bring their deſperate diſeaſes, in like manner, ſtraight to Chriſt, with hearts humbled by diſappointments, weaned from creature confidences and depending on Chriſt as their only Phyſician, and all ſufficient help. Were we once brought to this frame, Chriſt would in mercy ſtep in and ſay, Bring the diſeaſe hither to me. It is ſurely owing to our not coming off from ourſelves, and from all creature help, and to our not bringing our caſes to Chriſt immediately, that our diſeaſes are ſo long continued.

From all which the wiſdom of God doth manifeſtly appear in letting his church and people be brought to great extremities before he interpoſe for their help and relief. But ſeeing theſe extremities are Chriſt's opportunities for manifeſting forth his glory, we ought not to deſpair in the darkeſt caſe, but always "to look to "and wait upon him that hideth himſelf from the "houſe of Jacob." Nay, we ſhould do it, even then when we ſee every man with his hands on his loins in the utmoſt anguiſh and agony, as women in travail, like thoſe in Jer. xxx. 6, 7. where we ſee a moſt ſurprizing inſtance of God's mercy to Jacob, even then when his trouble comes to that extremity, that nothing in the world could match it; he pities him, and ſubjoins that merciful word, But he ſhall be ſaved out of it.

And it ſhould encourage us the more to look to and wait upon God in this dark day, when we hear of his mercy and goodneſs in pitying other nations and countries when in melancholy circumſtances, by granting a down-pouring of his Spirit on them for reviving his decayed work, and for convincing and converting multitudes of periſhing ſouls by the preaching of the goſpel; making them cry, What ſhall we do to be ſaved? and giving them no reſt till they cloſe with Chriſt their Surety, and become new creatures. And it is to be remarked that God has been graciouſly pleaſed to begin this work in New England, and other parts of America, at a time when they abounded with complaints of darkneſs and deadneſs, decay of religion, backſliding, woful errors and diviſions, as it is in Scotland at this day. Theſe late ſurprizing and well atteſted inſtances of God's mercy and ſovereign grace, do ſhew us how eaſy it is for God to bring his balm to a diſeaſed land, when in the moſt hopeleſs caſe; and to qualify and raiſe up inſtruments to preach his goſpel with ſuch energy and power, as to rouſe multitudes of ſecure ſouls, and make them "fly to Chriſt in clouds, and like flocks of doves to "their windows." He can take away the "ſins of a "land in one day, and make a nation to be born at "once. He can ſhew wonders to the dead, and make "the dead ariſe and praiſe him." So that none ſhould diſtruſt him in the moſt deſperate condition.

Well then, ſeeing Chriſt is a Phyſician ſo full of power and alſo full of compaſſions, whence is it that our diſeaſed land is unhealed, and multitudes are daily dying of their wounds! Surely the blame is not to be laid upon Chriſt, but upon ourſelves, and our unwillingneſs to come to him. Ah! we chuſe death, rather than healing from Chriſt. He may take up that complaint againſt us, as he did againſt the Jews in the days of his fleſh, Ye will not come to me that ye might get healing, and live: How oft would I have gathered you to be healed, but ye would not? And thus he complained of their fathers alſo, Pſ. lxxxi. My people would not hearken to my voice, Iſrael, would have none of me! Oh! my dear friends, are you to follow their curſed example, to reject your healer? or what are you reſolving to do? What think ye of Chriſt the Phyſician? Do you believe our report of him, or no? The people of other nations are giving ear and believing our report of him, and flocking to him to be healed, and why do you ſit ſtill? Are they yielding and ſubmitting to Chriſt as their Saviour and Lord? Are they putting the crown on his head, and doing him honour? Why then ſhould ye be the laſt to bring back the King to his houſe? Will ye be the laſt that will do him honour as a King, or give him employment as a Phyſician? Have ye not as much need of him, and as many wounds and diſeaſes as others? O come then alſo, take the goſpel balm, and glorify the Phyſician of Iſrael. Amen.

The Glory of the Miniſtration of the Spirit.

SERMON IX.

On 2 Cor. iii. 8. How ſhall not the miniſtration of the Spirit be rather glorious?

IN this chapter the apoſtle runs a compariſon between the Old Teſtament and the New, the law of Moſes and the goſpel of Chriſt, and ſhews the excellency of the latter above the former. He calls the Old-Teſtament diſpenſation, or law of Moſes, the miniſtration of death and condemnation; becauſe it diſcovered ſin and denounced curſes againſt it, and the law was given with thunder, lightening and much terror. Yet at the ſame time (he ſays) this diſpenſation was in ſome reſpects glorious, ver. 7. Why? It was glorious in the miniſter of it, Moſes who had a ſhining glory in his face when he brought the tables down from the mount. Glorious in regard of the glorious manifeſtation of God at the giving of the law: Glorious in reſpect of the goſpel diſcoveries which were made by the types and ſacrifices of the Old Teſtament. But then the apoſtle ſhews that the goſpel diſpenſation did far excel it in glory, and on that account calls it the miniſtration of life, becauſe it pointed out the way to life and ſalvation in a plainer manner: And the miniſtration of righteouſneſs, becauſe it diſcovered a perfect righteouſneſs for ſinners to reſt upon. Alſo he calls it in the text the miniſtration of the Spirit, becauſe of the great effuſion of the Spirit that attended the goſpel diſpenſation, eſpecially in the firſt ages. The Holy Spirit did then remarkably bear teſtimony to the word of his grace, by his inward operations upon the hearers of it. And this was it that made the miniſtration of the goſpel far more glorious than that of the law; for under the law, there was but little of the Spirit let out for the converſion of ſouls, in reſpect of what was given under the goſpel. The out-letting of the Spirit in ſuch an abundant manner, made the goſpel diſpenſation far more glorious than that of the legal; which gives ground for the following obſervation.

Doctrine, The effuſion of the Spirit with a preached goſpel makes a very glorious diſpenſation. Which I ſhall handle in the following method.

I. Premiſe ſome things concerning the nature and office of the Holy Spirit.

II. Shew when the goſpel may be ſaid to be a miniſtration of the Spirit to the hearers of it.

III. That there are ſome remarkable ſeaſons when a preached goſpel may be called the miniſtration of the Spirit in an eminent way.

IV. Enquire in what reſpects the miniſtration of the Spirit is a glorious diſpenſation.

V. Make application.

I. The firſt thing propoſed is, to premiſe ſome things concerning the nature and office of the holy Spirit. And, 1*ſt*, The word Spirit, in the Hebrew RUACH, in the Greek PNEUMA, ſignifies wind, air, or breathing. It is ſometimes uſed to point forth the nature and eſſence of God abſtractly, as in John iv. 24. God is a Spirit, and they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth. But moſt commonly it doth ſignify, as in the text, the third perſon of the holy Trinity. And ſometimes he is called the Spirit of the Father, and ſometimes the Spirit of the Son, which ſhews their oneneſs, and that he proceeds from both.

2*dly*, Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by his undertaking in the covenant of redemption, and his ſacrifice on the croſs, obtained the miniſtration of the holy Spirit to an elect-world. This great gift and bleſſing which is of ineſtimable value, is our dear Lord's purchaſe and legacy to his people, which he deſigned for to ſupply his bodily abſence from them when he went to heaven; John xvi. 7, 8. If I depart I will ſend him unto you, and when he is come, he will reprove, &c. The Spirit being Chriſt's legacy and donation, ſhould much endear the gift to us. Some would rejoice to poſſeſs a relique or any thing that belonged to our Saviour in the days of his fleſh. The Papiſts boaſt of ſome bits of the tree whereon he ſuffered, tho' Chriſt left no ſuch things for our uſe or devotion: But here is a precious relique and legacy, which Chriſt in love to his peoole left them when going away, even his holy Spirit, as his reſident, to abide with them for ever.

3*dly*, The church under the Old Teſtiment had a certain meaſure of the Spirit given her upon Chriſt's account. But the great effuſion of the Spirit was reſerved to the New Teſtament times, and given after Chriſt's aſcenſion, according to his bleſſed compact with the Father, Acts ii. 33. This promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt is called the promiſe, by way of eminency, as including all the reſt. And this effuſion was frequently foretold as the great privilege of goſpel times, Iſa. xxxv. 6, 7. and xliv. 3. Ezek. xi. 9. and xxxvi. 27. Joel ii. 28, 29. So that let men reproach the Holy Spirit with his influences and operations as they will, he was propheſied of and expected of old, as the great bleſſing under the goſpel: And mens deſpiſing him now as they do, is but a fulfilling of Chriſt's word, John xiv. 17. Yet the world cannot receive him, becauſe it neither ſeeth nor knoweth him: That is, they have no experience of his work in them. But for us not to own and avow the Spirit of God in his work and operations, is in effect to be aſhamed of Chriſt's precious promiſe and legacy which he left us, and to be guilty of the baſeſt ingratitude to our dear Redeemer.

4*thly*, The great office of the Holy Spirit in elect ſouls is to be the applier of Chriſt's purchaſe to them, which he doth by teaching them and guiding them into all truth, John xiv. 26. and xvi. 13. By convincing and reproving them of ſin, John xvi. 7. By renewing and ſanctifying their ſouls, Tit. iii. 5. 1 Pet. i. 2. By mortifying and ſubduing ſin in them, Rom. viii. 13. By helping their infirmities in prayer, and interceeding for them, Rom. viii. 26. By comforting them and witneſſing to their adoption, John xiv. 16. Rom. viii. 16. Wherefore ſeeing the Holy Ghoſt is the applier of Chriſt's purchaſe, and is promiſed by Chriſt to ſupply his abſence to us, he ought to be received and valued as the great bleſſing of the goſpel-church.

5*thly*, Chriſt hath taught us to make the giving of his Holy Spirit the chief petition and principal bleſſing we ſhould aſk of God, Luke xi. 9, 10. and ii. 12, 13. There he enjoins us to be importunate for this bleſſing, to aſk, to ſeek, to knock; and for our encouragement he promiſes, ver. 13. that our heavenly Father ſhall give the holy Spirit to them that aſk him. So the apoſtle prays for the inward operations of the Spirit to the Epheſians, as the greateſt bleſſing he can ſeek for them, Eph. iii. 16. For it is he that works faith, love, joy, peace, meekneſs and all other graces in us, Gal. v. 22.

II. The ſecond thing in the method, is to ſhew when the goſpel may be ſaid to be the miniſtration of the Spirit to the hearers of it. And it is ſo when the Holy Spirit doth concur with the preaching of the word, for making ſaving impreſſions upon mens hearts and conſciences, and gracious changes in their lives and converſations. As for inſtance,

1. When he is pleaſed to make cloſe and particular application of the reproofs and threatenings of the word to the ſinner's conſcience, ſaying as Nathan to David, Thou art the man, thou art the guilty ſinner that is threatened, curſed and condemned by the law. Thy life is unholy, thy nature is polluted, thy heart is full of plagues; yea, thy ſoul is black with ſin and hateful in the ſight of a holy God! And what wilt thou do to be ſaved?

2*dly*, When the arrows of conviction are ſo faſtened in the conſcience, that the man cannot ſhake them out; he hath got ſuch diſcoveries of ſin's evil and the ſoul's danger, that his mind cannot be eaſy: No earthly comfort or enjoyment can ſatisfy him while he is within the flood-mark of wrath. He becomes anxious and inquiſitive after the way of ſalvation, as thoſe, Acts ii. 37. and xvi. 30. His queſtions are not, What ſhall I do for health to a ſickly body? Or for bread to a pinched family? But what ſhall I do to be ſaved from the wrath that is to come?

3*dly*, The goſpel is the miniſtration of the Spirit to the hearers, when they are brought to deſpair of help and deliverance by any courſe or contrivance of their own; and are driven from all other refuges beſides Chriſt. When they are made to ſee, that no ordinance, no duties nor performances, no frames, no righteouſneſs nor attainments of their own, can ſkreen from wrath, nor yield any reſt to the ſole of their foot. When they are convinced they are in a ſhipwreck'd periſhing ſtate in the firſt Adam, and that they have no other plank of ſalvation to truſt to but Jeſus Chriſt the ſecond Adam. When they ſee themſelves ſinking upon the broken bottom of the old covenant, and that there is no way to be ſaved but to leap from it to the rock of ſalvation Chriſt, and only to truſt to and hang by the clefts of that rock.

4*thly*, The Spirit concurs, when the flinty rock is turned into a water pool, as in Pſal. cxiv. 8. that is, when the hard heart is ſoftened and melted down into ſtreams of penitential tears for ſin both original and actual, and particularly for wounding and piercing of Chriſt by ſin, and for long ſlighting him and keeping him at the door of the heart: and when the ſoul is brought to be deeply humbled for miſpent time, miſimproved ſabbaths, offers of free grace, days of health and precious opportunities of ſalvation.

9thly, When goſpel-hearers do find the ordinances bleſſed means of communion and intercourſe with God, ſo that they get ſweet diſcoveries of the beauty of Chriſt and holineſs, they are enabled to plead and feed upon the promiſes, they have peace and joy in believing, their doubts are removed, and they approach to the aſſurance of God's favour, of pardon of ſin, and future glory: They breathe after a full conformity to Chriſt and his image, that holineſs may be pefected in them, and the top ſtone put upon the work of grace. That they may have no more complaints of indwelling ſin, and imperfect ſervices. And under a ſenſe of God's love in Chriſt, they endeavour to walk tenderly and circumſpectly, to make their light ſhine before men, and to glorify God upon the earth. Then it is, and in the other caſes above mentioned, that the goſpel may be ſaid to be the miniſtration of the Spirit to the hearers of it. And ſurely ſuch a concurrence and effuſion of the Spirit with the preached word, would make it a very glorious diſpenſation. O to ſee ſuch remarkable ſeaſons of grace!

III. The third head propoſed, was to mention ſome of thoſe ſeaſons when the preaching of the goſpel hath in an eminent way been the miniſtration of the Spirit. Of which take theſe inſtances:

1ſt, In the apoſtles times, after Chriſt's aſcenſion, there was a wonderful effuſion of the Spirit with the goſpel for the firſt planting of Chriſtianity in the world, according to Chriſt's promiſe, Luke xxiv. 49. Acts i. 8. Then the goſpel was a glorious miniſtration of the Spirit, when poor illiterate men were helped to preach with ſuch powerful convincing energy, that their words pierced the conſciences, and changed the minds and lives of thouſands of their hearers at once. And though their doctrine was levelled againſt the pride and corruption of mens hearts, and tended to aboliſh the Pagan idolatry, as well as the Jewiſh ſacrifices and ceremonies; and though it was derided by the learned men of that age, and oppoſed by the civil powers with the greateſt violence; yet under all theſe diſadvantages it ſpread with amazing ſucceſs, ſo that in twenty or thirty years time, and before the apoſtles died, the goſpel made its way through Judea, Syria, Greece, Aſia, Europe and the whole vaſt Roman empire; ſo that every province in it had plenty of its profeſſors. It was the holy Spirit that directed the arrows of the word into the conſciences of men, with clear and convincing evidence of the truth thereof, and confirmed them ſo in the belief of it, that no trial nor temptation could ſhake them. It was the effuſion of the Spirit with the goſpel that gave the apoſtles and firſt preachers ſuch extraordinary reſolution, courage, and hardineſs to encounter all difficulties, to bear up under the greateſt miſeries of life, and joyfully to ſacrifice their all for Chriſt, and ſeal their doctrine with their blood.

2dly, The goſpel was a glorious miniſtration of the Spirit at our reformation from Popery above 200 years ago, whereby our reformers were aſſiſted and carried through the greateſt difficulties and oppoſition as in the apoſtles days. It was a ſmall mean that God made the riſe of his great work, to wit, Luther's appearing againſt Texellius for preaching up and ſelling his indulgences. Yet from this ſpark ſuch a fire kindled, that ſet all Europe in a flame, and enlightened many nations, that were covered with the thick darkneſs of idolatry and ſuperſtition, in the knowledge of the truth. Such was the out-pouring and efficacy of the Spirit at that time, that the goſpel made a ſwift progreſs in a ſhort ſpace by very mean inſtruments. The preachers employed were none of thoſe who were famed in the world in that age for learning, honour, power or greatneſs, but men that had lived in obſcurity, and were loaded with reproach by their adverſaries; ſuch as Luther, Zuinglius, Melancton, Bucer, Calvin, Knox, Wiſhart, &c. yet theſe mean men went forth to confront thoſe powers, which then made the earth to tremble, to wit, the Pope and his conclave (whoſe power was then moſt formidable) with the emperor of Germany, and the reſt of the kings of Europe who then gave their power to the beaſt. Theſe inſtruments had no outward encouragement at firſt, none to ſupport them, but all the world ſeemed to combine againſt them; yet in ſpite of all oppoſition the light of reformation brake up more and more; the goſpel was preached with ſuch power, that it prevailed againſt all the powers of the earth, and ſpread from city to city, ſo that in a few years many cities, ſtates and countries became ſubject to the truth, and that notwithſtanding the bloody ſword and flames of martyrdom which raged againſt thoſe who owned it. O what a miniſtration of the Spirit did at that time attend Mr George Wiſhart when he preached in this town of Dundee, and through Angus, Lothian, and ſeveral places of the weſt of Scotland! how wonderfully were the ſpirits of men then raiſed and affected with the word of God!

3dly, In the church of Scotland, not only at her reformation from Popery, but alſo frequently ſince, there have been ſolemn times of the out-pouring of the Spirit upon the land, and ſeveral places thereof, as in the year 1596, when the general aſſembly renewed the national covenant in the little kirk at Edinburgh, and ſynods and preſbyteries did the ſame after their example. Calderwood tells us how this practice was countenanced by God's Spirit, and attended with a general melting of heart and many tears.——About the year 1625, in the weſt of Scotland where the perſecution from prelates and their agents was hotteſt for non-compliance with Perth articles, &c. God was pleaſed to countenance and ſupport them with an extraordinary out letting of his Spirit. This began in the pariſh of Stewarton, and hence was called by the profane of that time, the Stewarton ſickneſs, but afterwards it ſpread through that country, and was very remarkable at Irvine under the miniſtry of Mr David Dickſon, which was accompanied with many convincing proofs of God's power, and many converſions——We have a famous inſtance of that power in the ſolemn communion that was at the kirk of Shots 20th June 1630, when there was an extraordinary down-pouring of the Spirit attending the work, and eſpecially the ſermon on the Monday 21ſt of June by Mr John Livingſton, that made a great and unuſual motion among the hearers, (who were there conveened in great numbers of divers ranks;) ſo that near 500 had a diſcernible change wrought upon them, and moſt of them proved lively Chriſtians afterwards.—Again, in the year 1638, God gave a general effuſion of the Spirit, which rouzed up all ranks from their ſecure backſlidden ſtate, and made them agree to renew the national covenant. Then the ſpirits of men were greatly raiſed and wrought upon by the word, the ordinances were lively and longed after, both perſonal and national reformation were ſeriouſly ſet about. And this for ſeveral years was followed with a large harveſt of ſouls brought in to Chriſt; many thouſands flocked to him, like doves to their windows.——Likewiſe in the late perſecuting times under K. Charles II. there were many gracious effuſions with the preaching of the goſpel in the fields.—Alſo at and after the late happy revolution, the goſpel was remarkably the miniſtration of the Spirit in many places of Scotland. Now ſurely, when we conſider the days of old, and the years of ancient times, we ſhould excite ourſelves to thankfulneſs for mercies paſt, and ſet our hope in God for mercies future; and likewiſe humble ourſelves deeply before the Lord for thoſe ſins which have long made our heavens as braſs, and withheld thoſe bleſſed ſhowers which were wont to fall upon our land.

4thly, We have very late and well-atteſted accounts of glorious effuſions of the Spirit in ſeveral parts of America, and particularly New-England; and ſome of them I have ſeen dated within theſe few months, bearing, "That their land which was formerly dry and parched, is now like a watered garden; that Chriſt is riding in triumph by a preached goſpel, and the inhabitants by thouſands are ſubmitting to him; that converts are numerous like the drops of dew from the womb of the morning. Yea, (ſay ſome letters) the work is ſo unexpreſſibly glorious, that it is impoſſible by words, to make one who is not an eye-witneſs have juſt conceptions thereof." The reverend Meſſrs. Edward, Whitefield, and Tennent have been honoured to have been very inſtrumental by their labours under God to give a beginning to this bleſſed work, which I hope will continue and ſpread to the praiſe and glory of free grace. And ſeeing God ſent one of theſe inſtruments lately to Scotland, may his labours in it be followed with the ſame bleſſed effects. Theſe ſhowers of the Spirit which are falling juſt now on ſeveral places do encourage many to hope they are forerunners of God's giving a general revival to his work, and of his bringing about the glory of the latter days, which he hath promiſed to his church, when he will make his goſpel every where a glorious miniſtration of the Spirit. Let us all cry for it, and for poor Scotland, that it may not be paſt by when other places are watered. May the Lord bleſs his word. Amen.

In what reſpects this Miniſtration is glorious.

SERMON X.

On 2 Cor. iii. 8. How ſhall not the miniſtration of the Spirit be rather glorious?

IV. IN the method I laid down for handling this ſubject, the 4th head was, To ſhew in what reſpect the miniſtration of the Spirit is a glorious diſpenſation. By the miniſtration of the Spirit, we are to underſtand his gracious influences upon the hearers of the goſpel, or his ſpecial operations and workings in their ſouls, together with the word, for their converſion and ſalvation. Now, theſe are glorious in ſeveral reſpects.

1ſt, They come from a glorious Author, namely the Holy Ghoſt, the third perſon of the glorious Trinity, eternally proceeding from the Father and the Son, and who with them is the only true God, being the ſame in nature and eſſence, and equal in power and glory.

3dly, They coſt a glorious price. However the influences and operations of the Spirit be ſlighted and reproached by men, they are the dear purchaſe of our glorious Redeemer's blood.

3dly, They are promiſed and beſtowed to ſupply the room and abſence of a glorious perſon: even the room of our Emmanuel, while the heavens do receive him, and keep him from his people's view.

4thly, The miniſtration of the Spirit is glorious, in regard it is granted to believers as the earneſt and pledge of a glorious inheritance, Eph. i. 13, 14. And alſo for qualifying and making them meet to dwell in the ſame for ever.

5thly, In regard it is neceſſary to diſplay to us the glory and excellency of the perſon and offices of Chriſt, and his infinite fulneſs: And alſo doth open our eyes to diſcern all the glorious perfections of God in him.

6thly, The Spirit's miniſtration gives a glorious luſtre to the ſouls of believers, and makes them ſhine with true beauty and ſplendor. Hence the King's daughter is ſaid to be all-glorious within, and their beauty to be as the olive-tree, &c.

7thly, The miniſtration of the Spirit with a preached goſpel makes a glorious diſpenſation; chiefly upon the account of the glorious and ſurprizing changes which it makes upon the hearts and lives of men at their converſion. How marvellous were theſe changes upon the firſt pouring out of the Spirit after our Lord's aſcenſion! Thoſe firſt fruits of his purchaſe and promiſe were indeed very glorious. Then the miniſtration of the Spirit, like a mighty current, did carry all before it, and conquered thouſands at one ſermon, yea, it made the moſt obſtinate and inveterate enemies to ſtoop before the word, tho' preached by poor deſpiſed men. This made the world to wonder, as if ſome univerſal enchantment had fallen upon men, and the more they ſought to ſuppreſs and bear it down, the more it increaſed and ſpread. It made the rich chuſe poverty, the ſenſual quit their pleaſures, thoſe who dwelt in fine houſes to betake themſelves with chearfulneſs to dens and caves of the earth; yea, and ſometimes thoſe who were violent perſecutors of Chriſtians one day, become joyful martyrs with them the next. But not only at that time, but many times ſince, the miniſtration of the Spirit with the goſpel hath produced wonderful changes on its hearers.

As 1. When thereby the dead in ſins and treſpaſſes have been raiſed from the grave of corruption, and made alive to God: Thoſe who were profane and vitious have changed the whole courſe of their lives, and turned as remarkable for good as before they were for ill. The leopard hath changed his ſpots, and the Ethiopian his colour, and ſuch who were accuſtomed to do evil, have learned to do well. And all this change hath been occaſioned by the fooliſhneſs of preaching, and ſometimes by one word in a plain goſpel-ſermon; which could not be brought about by twenty years moral diſcourſes, and the moſt ſublime ſtrains of human eloquence. And ſometimes weak gifts have been owned and bleſt, when the greateſt gifts have been unſucceſsful.

2. Hereby ſuch particular application of the word hath been made to the conſcience, as hath filled the ſecure ſoul with terror, and humbled the proud man to the duſt, and made him cry, Wo's me I am undone, I abhor myſelf in duſt and aſhes. Thoſe who before were puffed up with pride and a conceit of themſelves, have been ſoon laid low under a ſenſe of their guilt, and ill-deſervings before God. Thoſe who have been mounted upon an imaginary throne of their own righteouſneſs, and have been at great pains to prop and ſupport it, have of a ſudden come down from it, tumbled it to the ground, and ſubmitted humbly to a borrowed righteouſneſs, ſaying, Away with all my filthy rags, give me Chriſt who is the Lord our righteouſneſs: None but Chriſt.

3. It is a wonderful change to ſee mens natures quite altered; to ſee thoſe who were like ravening wolves become like meek lambs; thoſe who were formerly acted by hatred and envy, malice and revenge againſt enemies, brought to love all men, even their greateſt enemies, with a love of benevolence, to avoid revenge, to forgive them, to pray for them, and do them good when in their power. Again, to ſee covetous men that were great lovers of the world, and hugged it as their beloved idol, abandon it with diſdain, ſeek thoſe things which are above, and delight in converſe about them; to ſee them made willing to forſake all the world as loſs and dung for Chriſt and things above, is a change above the power of nature, and is an evident proof of the glorious miniſtration of the Spirit.

4. By the Spirit's miniſtration, thoſe who hated ſerious godlineſs, derided it as a fancy, mocked and reproached godly perſons; have been made to own there is a reality in religion, and to love and commend that which they hated and cried down, and to honour religious perſons as the excellent ones of the earth, and to delight more in their ſociety than ever they did in their old companions in ſin. This ſurely is the finger of God.

5. Hereby thoſe who have been violent adverſaries of the truth, have become eminent inſtruments to maintain and promote that which they once deſtroyed, and more zealous to promote and advance God's glory and kingdom in the world, than ever they were to oppoſe it. Yea, thoſe who have been very active in perſecuting the profeſſors of religion both with tongue and hand, have ſo far changed their courſe, as to join themſelves to thoſe whom they perſecuted, and voluntarily choſe to ſuffer reproach and affliction with the people of God, rather than to enjoy the pleaſures of ſin for a ſeaſon.

6. Hereby thoſe who formerly were wandering after the riches, honours, preferments and vanities of the world, and placed all their happineſs in them, and ſpent all their cares and thoughts about them; have been brought to be mainly taken up in wondering at the love of God in ſending Chriſt to the world to ſatiſfy juſtice for our ſins, and bear that wrath and curſe we ſhould have borne; and have been made to take more pleaſure in thinking and ſpeaking of Chriſt, and in ſpiritual exerciſes, than ever they had in all their worldly enjoyments; and willingly to reſign all theſe to God's diſpoſal, ſaying, If my main portion be ſecured to me, let God do with theſe external things as he pleaſeth. Theſe ſurely are glorious changes.

7. The Spirit's miniſtration appears the more glorious in this, that ſometimes theſe changes are made on thoſe who had not the benefits of good example or education, but were brought up in families where they neither ſaw nor heard any thing to the advantage of religion, but on the contrary, much to fear and diſcourage them from it; ſuch as bitter invectives againſt it, and cruel mockings and ſcoffs at thoſe who owned it: And yet in the face of all diſcouragement, danger, and perſecution, they have been brought to embrace religion, take up the croſs and follow Chriſt.

8. By the Spirit's miniſtration many weak and feeble ſouls have been wonderfully ſtrengthened and encouraged, power hath been given to the faint, and ſtrength increaſed to them who had no might. The feeble have been made like David, and all their diſcouragements and complaints removed. They who could perform no duty, bear no burden, encounter no danger; have been wonderfully ſtrengthened both for work and warfare, duty and difficulty; and fortified againſt all fears, corruptions, temptations, afflictions and perſecutions, and made to ſay with David, Pſal. xxvii. 3. Tho' an hoſt ſhould encamp againſt me, my heart ſhall not fear; tho' thouſands riſe up againſt me, I will not be diſmayed. And with Paul, Phil. iv. 13. 'I can do all things thro' 'Chriſt that ſtrengtheneth me.' Hereby thoſe who have been oppreſt with doubtings and waverings about the truths of God, have been confirmed and eſtabliſhed, and made to ſay with Nathaniel, John i. 49. Rabbi, thou art the King of Iſrael, thou art the Son of God. And with unbelieving Thomas, John xx. 28. 'My 'Lord, and my God.' And like the Iſraelites in Elijah's time, when the Lord manifeſted himſelf by fire, an uſual emblem of the Spirit, 1 Kings xviii. 39. they were made to fall on their faces, and cry out, The Lord he is God, the Lord he is God.

Laſtly, The miniſtration of the Spirit is glorious in regard of the glorious intercourſe and communion with God, which ſouls thereby attain to in the ordinances. Then he makes good that word to them, Jer. xxxi. 25. I have ſatiated every weary ſoul, and repleniſhed every ſorrowful ſoul. Then he puts more gladneſs in their hearts, than when corn, wine and oil abound. Then he makes their doubts and unbelief to vaniſh, and all their clouds and darkneſs, fears and jealouſies to flee away. Now, they attain to this bleſſed intercourſe, when he gives them ſuch diſcoveries of a crucified Jeſus, and his infinite fulneſs and ſuitableneſs to their caſe, as fills them with peace and joy in believing, and in laying the ſtreſs of their ſouls, and burden of their guilt upon him. He helps them to embrace and apply the promiſes of the covenant, and to lay claim to them as their own, and ſay, This and that promiſe is mine, and plead with David, Pſal. cxix. 49. Remember the word unto thy ſervant, upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope. And the pleading and feeding on a promiſe doth afford much inward ſweetneſs and ſatisfaction to the ſoul. He alſo affords them ſuch delight in God's work, ſuch ſtrength in performing of duty, that it is their meat and drink to do his will, and they reckon a day in his courts better than a thouſand elſewhere. So that tho' ſometimes they have come to duties with deadneſs and ſtraitenings of ſpirit, yet they have got ſuch relief, that with Hannah they have been helped to pour out their hearts to God in prayer, and have gone away with their countenance no more ſad. He gives them ſuch diſcoveries of God's love to their ſouls thro' Chriſt, as fills them with inward hope and conſolation; yea ſometimes ſuch a ſtrong aſſurance of God's favour and of the pardon of their ſins, and of the glory to be revealed, that their ſouls are made to overflow with joy. This communion and fellowſhip with God by the miniſtration of the Spirit, God's people in all ages have found, and they declared it to be the greateſt reality, when ſtepping over the threſhold of time into eternity, and they have died with the high praiſes of God in their mouths for it.

APPLICATION.

Infer. 1. See hence what thanks and praiſe we owe to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who purchaſed the miniſtration of the Spirit to us by his blood. Hence days of the Spirit's influences are called days of the Son of Man, Luke xvii. 22. All our nearneſs and intercourſe with God is by the blood of Jeſus, Eph. ii. 13. So that it is with a great ſum we obtain this freedom.

Infer. 2. See then from whence it is that goſpel-ordinances have their glory, even from the miniſtration of the Spirit. Without this, ordinances are dead and lifeleſs, and dead things have no beauty. We muſt look to the Holy Spirit then, to put life in ordinances, and make goſpel-days glorious. Alſo it is to be regreted, that ſo many look to the language and outward ornaments of ſermons, more than to the miniſtration of the Spirit for their beauty and excellency.

Infer. 3. How dreadful a crime muſt it be for any to ridicule or mock at the miniſtration of the Spirit, or to call it all fancy, whim, or enthuſiaſm! Oh, what is this but to reproach and do deſpite to the Spirit of grace! How provoking muſt it be for me to ſcoff at that which is the glory of ordinances and the glory of any land? Surely they are real objects of pity, and expoſed to great judgments, who are ſo far left and given up, as to glory in their ſhame, be aſhamed of their glory, and mock at that which is the greateſt bleſſing of heaven! O if they would ſtand in awe of this ſin, and remember that word, Iſa. xxviii. 22. Now therefore be ye not mockers, leſt your hands be made ſtrong.

II. A ſecond uſe of this doctrine may be of exhortation; and here let me exhort all the hearers of the goſpel to pray earneſtly to God that he may be pleaſed to make the goſpel the miniſtration of the Spirit to them, as it hath been to our anceſtors in this land in former days, and as it is this day in other countries. Let us cry with the church, Lam. v. 21. Renew our days as of old; And with David, Pſal. lxiii. 3. Let us ſee thy power and glory in the ſanctuary, as in former times. And with Iſaiah, Iſa. li. 9. Awake, awake, put on ſtrength, O arm of the Lord; Awake as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Let us plead with the church, Pſal. xliv. 1, 23, 26. We have heard with our ears, O God; our fathers have told us what works thou didſt in their days, in the times of old. Awake, why ſleepeſt thou? Ariſe for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies ſake. So let the people of Scotland ſay; "Lord, our fathers have told us what "glorious goſpel days they had by the miniſtration of "the Spirit, when the Captain of our ſalvation took to "him his great power, and rode in triumph in the chariot of ſalvation; his arrows were ſharp in the hearts "of his enemies, and hundreds dated their converſion "from one ſermon. Ah! we have ſinned away Chriſt "and his Spirit from the land." O if all ranks would join to pray him back again; and cry, "Ariſe, O Lord, "and have mercy upon Zion; let the time to favour "her, yea, the ſet time be now come" It is commonly obſerved when the ſet time for favouring Zion with the glorious miniſtration of the Spirit is at hand. God uſeth to pour out a ſpirit of prayer upon his people; for he loves to bring about his glorious deſigns by means of their prayers, that he may put honour upon them. I might add many motives to frequency and fervency in ſuch prayers.

As, 1. Conſider the excellency and uſefulneſs of the miniſtration of the Spirit. It would beautify the church and her aſſemblies, make her beautiful as Tirzah, comely as Jeruſalem, fair as the moon, clear as the ſun, and terrible as an army with banners. It would make both miniſters and people to ſhine, our congregations to look with another face, and ordinances to have a new luſtre —It would put life and ſtrength in the members of the church, give life to their bones, vigour to their withered graces, and ſtrengthen them to run on God's errands and fight his battles. It would enable them to trample on ſatan, and triumph over ſin, wax valiant in battle, and put to flight the armies of the aliens. It would be as wind to the ſails and oil to the wheels, and make ſouls to run the ways of God's commands without fainting or wearying. It would looſe bonds, enlarge hearts, and give freedom from ſatan's temptations, and ſtrong luſts: It would revive drooping ſouls, turn their water into wine, their ſorrow into joy, their fears into holy confidence, their doubts into godly aſſurance, their complaints into praiſes, and make them to ſing in the ways of the Lord. —It would ſatisfy their ſouls, and all their faculties, as with marrow and fatneſs, bring light to the mind, freedom to the will, ſtrength to the memory, peace to the conſcience, and life to all the graces. Yea, it would make the ſoul to grow in graces, and ripen apace for heaven. It would make profeſſors of religion grow more ſincere in duties, more fervent in prayer, more attentive in hearing, more frequent in meditation, more practical in knowledge, more edifying in converſe, more humble for defects, and more thankful for mercies.

2. Conſider the melancholy caſe of the church for want of the miniſtration of the Spirit. Her beauty is quite marred, her gold becomes dim, and her moſt fine gold is changed. Her womb is barren, her breaſts dry, and her ordinances dead and lifeleſs. Satan reigns and prevails, and precious ſouls are an eaſy prey to his teeth. And believers themſelves fall under ſad languiſhings and decays. Whereas the Spirit's miniſtration would ſoon change the face of affairs, and roll away the reproach of barrenneſs under goſpel-means, wherewith enemies are apt to upbraid us, ſaying, Where is your God? Where is the fruit of your many ſermons, faſts and prayers, and ſolemn communions? This was like a ſword in David's bones, Pſal. xliii. 10. when they ſaid unto him, Where is thy God?

3. Take a view of the largeneſs of ſatan's kingdom in the world: How great is the number of his ſubjects! And will not every loyal ſubject of Chriſt be concerned and troubled to ſee the devil poſſeſſing ſuch large territories, when their Redeemer has but a little flock? Oh! can you ſee your King's country overſpread with enemies as thick as graſhoppers, when Chriſt's army are pitched before them like two little flocks of kids, and not be affected and grieved for it? Now the only remedy for it is, to pray for the glorious miniſtration of the Spirit. This would ſoon make a mutiny and deſertion in ſatan's camp, diminiſh his followers, and increaſe the army and kingdom of our dear Jeſus. But to ſum up all:

4. A day of the miniſtration of the Spirit would bring many rare and rich bleſſings along with it, ſuch as diſcoveries of the Redeemer's glory, convictions of the evil and vileneſs of ſin, many crowns of victory and triumph to Chriſt, great additions to his friends and followers. Then goſpel-light would ſhine clear, ſaving knowledge increaſe, ignorance and error vaniſh, riches of free grace would be diſplayed, and ſatan be bound up. Then miniſters and ordinances would be lively, ſecure ſinners would be awakened, dead ſouls would live, hard hearts would be melted, ſtrong luſts ſubdued, and many ſons and daughters born to God. Such a day would heal diviſions, cement breaches, make us all of one heart and mind, and bring down heaven to earth. This would redreſs our grievances, remove our complaints, and unite Chriſt's ſcattered flock. It would make true religion and holy perſons to be in eſteem, vice to be in diſgrace, and iniquity as aſhamed to hide its face. Then ſabbaths and communions would be days of heaven. Prayer and praiſe, ſpiritual converſe, talking of Chriſt and redeeming love would be our chiefeſt delight. O then pray for ſuch a time.

Queſt. What ſhall we do that our prayers may be prevalent for the glorious miniſtration of the Spirit to the church and land?

Anſw. Take theſe directions:

1. Let us lament after a departed God, as the penitent Iſraelites did, 1 Sam. vii. 2. All Iſrael lamented after the Lord. They were ſenſible of their loſs, confeſſed they had ſinned him away, and wreſtled for his return.

2. Search out the Achan in the camp, old or late ſins, which may provoke God to withhold his Spirit from us. Mourn bitterly for it; apply to the blood of Jeſus for pardon; abhor and put it away.

3. Be thankful for the leaſt droppings of the Spirit, entertain them kindly, and plead that they may be the forerunners of a greater ſhower.

4. Uſe arguments in prayer for the miniſtration of the Spirit: Plead the multitude of dry bones, which are ſcattered up and down the valley of viſion. How general is the deadneſs both among miniſters and people! And nothing can revive them but the breath of the Lord. Cry, with the prophet, Ezek. xxxvii. 9. Come from the four winds, O Breath, and breathe upon theſe ſlain that they may live.—Plead your inability to do any ſpiritual good thing without the Spirit; Lord, we can neither pray, praiſe, mourn, believe, repent, meditate, read, hear, or communicate without the miniſtration of the Spirit; we can do nothing ſpiritually: all we do is in a natural, carnal way, which cannot be pleaſing to thee.—Plead alſo the promiſes of the new covenant, which are free and abſolute concerning the giving of the Holy Spirit; ſuch as thoſe in Iſa. xliv. 3. Ezek. xxxvi. 27. God would have us to turn theſe his promiſes into prayers, if we would ſhare in them; for he ſaith after making them, that he will be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael to do it for them, Ezek. xxxvi. 37.

Object. But, ſay ſome diſcouraged ſouls, we have ſo grieved and vexed the Holy Spirit, when dealing with us, that we fear he will return to us no more.

Anſ. 1. Many of God's people have grieved him, and yet he did not leave them finally.—2. Have you a ſenſe of guilt in this matter? Is it the grief and trouble of your heart that you have ſo grieved the Holy Spirit? Are the breathings of your ſouls after his return? then ſurely he is not wholly withdrawn; for if he were, you would be without ſenſe and feeling.—3. Remember that Chriſt ſtill invites you to come to him for every thing, and for the Spirit among the reſt. He hath purchaſed the Spirit for all that come to him; and thoſe who come to him for the Spirit, he will in no wiſe caſt out. May we all have grace to depend upon his word, and both to live and die by faith upon it, that his name may have the glory for ever. Amen.

A prophecy of the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom.

SERMON XI.

On John iii. 30. He muſt increaſe——

THeſe are the words of John Baptiſt concerning Jeſus Chriſt, upon the occaſion of his diſciples complaining of Chriſt's baptizing, which drew great multitudes to him, whereby they feared their maſter might come to be darkened or deſerted. But the humble man, inſtead of reſenting it as his diſciples did, falls a commending Chriſt and abaſing himſelf; yea, he profeſſeth the greateſt ſatisfaction in the advancement of Chriſt and his intereſt in the world, and compareth himſelf to a friend of the Bridegroom, ver. 29. that rejoiceth in the ſucceſs of the match, which he had been labouring to promote: It being honour enough for the moſt eminent miniſter of Chriſt, to be an inſtrument to recommend his glorious Maſter, and to court and make ready a bride for him.

In ver. 30. where my text is, 1. John foretels the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory, as a thing highly juſt and equitable in itſelf, and moſt agreeable and ſatisfying to him, and all other friends of the Bridegroom, He muſt increaſe; that is, his intereſt ſhall grow in the world, his name ſhall ſpread, his throne be raiſed, his crown ſhall flouriſh, his dominions be enlarged, and his ſubjects multiplied. You think he hath gained a great deal already, but that is nothing to what he will gain: And all this in conſequence of the decree of God, and the prophecies recorded concerning the Meſſiah in Pſal. ii. & lxxii, &c. ſo that there is a neceſſity for it, He muſt increaſe.

2. John foretels the conſequent of this increaſe to himſelf, I muſt decreaſe; that is, I muſt be darkened and diſappear. He is not at all diſpleaſed to ſee himſelf obſcured and outſhined by the bleſſed Meſſiah whoſe ſervant and forerunner he owned he was No, no, ſays he, Let him ſhine forth as the riſing ſun, and let me diſappear like the morning ſtar; Let his name be raiſed and mine depreſſed, I cheerfully ſubmit to it, I am content to be any thing, or to be nothing, ſo that Chriſt may be All.

Doct. The increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory in the world is abſolutely certain and neceſſary. It muſt infallibly be, for God hath ſaid it, Jer. xxiii. 5. A king ſhall reign and proſper in the earth. Pſal. lxxii. 8. He ſhall have dominion from ſea to ſea. Pſal. cxxxii. 18. Upon himſelf ſhall his crown flouriſh.

In diſcourſing from this ſubject, I ſhall,

I. Enquire what is that increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory, which we may warrantably look for?

II. What are the times and ſeaſons of this increaſe?

III. What are the reaſons, why Chriſt muſt thus increaſe?

IV. Make application.

I. As to the firſt, What is the increaſe here meant?

1. Negatively, it is not to be underſtood,

1ſt, Of any increaſe of Chriſt's eſſential glory as God; for this is impoſſible, he being infinite, and therefore the ſame yeſterday, and to-day, and for ever, without any variableneſs or ſhadow of turning.

2dly, It is not meant that Chriſt's kingdom ſhall increaſe or flouriſh in outward ſplendor and greatneſs, like one of the kingdoms of this world. No, Chriſt's kingdom being not of this world, its glory is of a ſpiritual and heavenly nature, and peculiar to itſelf alone.

3dly, Neither is it to be thought that the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom is to be conſtant or alike at all times, or without decay or diminution at any time. No, no, for ſometimes it ſeems to be brought very low, yea ſo low was it brought under the Antichriſtian apoſtacy, that it was ſcarce viſible.

2. Poſitively, the increaſe ſpoke of in the text is to be underſtood of the flouriſhing of Chriſt's mediatory kingdom, and of the ſpreading of his manifeſtative glory in the world, which doth conſiſt chiefly in theſe things:

1ſt, In the increaſe and ſpreading of goſpel-light thro' the world, ſo that the dark places of the earth ſhall be enlightened with the knowledge of Chriſt; and thoſe places which had but twilight diſcoveries of him, ſhall attain to brighter views of his excellency and uſefulneſs, and to a clearer inſight into the goſpel myſteries, and the way of ſalvation thro' Chriſt and his righteouſneſs imputed to the ſons of Adam. Then the Sun of righteouſneſs ſhall ariſe with more powerful beams of light and heat upon his churches than before, and at length with ſuch clearneſs and efficacy, as to ſcatter Antichriſtian darkneſs, error, idolatry, ſuperſtition, dead forms and ceremonies of man's invention. For how is it elſe that the man of ſin ſhall be conſumed by the Spirit of Chriſt's mouth, and deſtroyed by the brightneſs of his coming, 2 Theſſ. ii. 8. but by the outpouring of his Spirit with his word preached, and by the bright and convincing appearances of the Redeemer in the glory of goſpel light? Then is it that Chriſt ſhall increaſe, and his kingdom be enlarged, when the earth ſhall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the ſea, according to the prophecy of Habakkuk, Hab. ii. 14.

2dly, This increaſe takes in the Lord's furniſhing his church with many burning and ſhining lights, able miniſters of the New Teſtament, to be eminent inſtruments of diſplaying his glory in the world. When he is ſignally to increaſe his kingdom, he will raiſe up and qualify miniſters for the work; who ſhall be men of large hearts, fluent tongues, and public ſpirits; ſhining holineſs and piety; undaunted courage and zeal for God; inſpired with a burning love to Chriſt and the ſouls of men; inclined to prefer the good of Jeruſalem to their chiefeſt joy; and willing to run all hazards by ſea and land; to venture all that is dear to them in the world, their reputation, life, and all the comforts of it, for Jeſus Chriſt; and chearfully content to ſpend and to be ſpent for the increaſe of his kingdom and glory, and the gathering of ſouls to him. And particularly, it is a pledge and forerunner of this happy increaſe; when the Lord ſends down his Spirit upon ſtudents and expectants of the miniſtry; graciouſly touches their hearts, and works an inward change upon their ſouls; animates them with ſincere principles and ends, and gives them ſuch impreſſions of the weight of the paſtoral office and the charge of ſouls, that they will not run thereto unſent, nor have an active hand in thruſting themſelves into it, or do any thing to beget prejudices to mar their ſucceſs; but will wait patiently upon the Lord, till he ſhall open the door, and clear their call to enter into his vineyard.

3dly, It imports the increaſe of the number of Chriſt's ſubjects and followers. As the king's honour is in the multitude of his people, Prov. xiv. 28. ſo Chriſt is glorified in the multitude of his ſubjects. Thus ſhall Chriſt's kingdom and glory increaſe in the latter days, when the kingdoms of the earth ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord; then the Jews themſelves ſhall gather to Chirſt's ſtandard lifted up in the goſpel, together with the fulneſs of the Gentiles; they ſhall fly to it in clouds, like doves to their windows, according to theſe promiſes, Iſa. ii. 2. Micah iv. 1. 2. Iſa. lx. 8. Rev. ii. 15. Rom. xi. 25. 26. Pſal. cii. 15. 16. 22. Now what is it that will bring about this glorious increaſe, but the miniſtration of the Spirit with the goſpel? It is this that opens a great and effectual door, 1 Cor. xvi. 9. a door of utterance in miniſters mouths, and a door of entrance in hearers hearts. Then miniſters ſpirits ſhall be enlarged, and their tongues looſed in preaching; and hearers appetites will be ſharpened and their hearts melted in hearing. When the Lord comes with his Spirit, and gives teſtimony to the word of his grace, then the arrows of the word ſhall pierce the conſcience; the wounded ſhall cry, what ſhall we do to be ſaved? And multitudes ſhall fall under Zion's King, Pſal. xiv. 5.

4thly, Then Chriſt's kingdom doth increaſe when truth triumphs over error, and pure doctrine and worſhip prevail againſt ſuperſtition and deluſion. There are happy ſeaſons when the Lord doth magnify his power in binding up the winds of hereſy and falſe doctrine, and making pure ſcripture truths to be reliſhed and preferred to the vain opinions and falſe reaſonings of men. Then he cauſes Infidelity, Deiſm, Socinianiſm, Arianiſm, Popery, and Arminianiſm to be rejected and abhorred: And makes men willing to ſubject their own reaſon to divine revelation, and to fall in with the plain truths of the word, and the goſpel ſcheme of ſaving loſt ſinners by the righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt, and thro' his death and purchaſe only. Then he brings men to ſee their own natural impotency and inability to do any thing for their own recovery and happineſs: ſo that inſtead of aſcribing their good actions and attainments to the good uſe of their own natural powers, they are willing to acknowledge God in every thing that is good in them, and to aſcribe all to the praiſe and glory of his free grace, who for Chriſt's ſake works in them both to will and to do. O that Chriſt and his truth may thus increaſe in the world!

7thly, There is in it the increaſe of zeal and public-ſpiritedneſs for promoting true religion, and of Chriſtian courage and magnanimity in owning and avowing of Chriſt and his cauſe before the world. When Chriſtians ſhall not be aſhamed of a crucified Jeſus, or of his truths, ordinances or people, but ſhall openly profeſs him, glory in him, and whatever belongs to him; and alſo bear teſtimony againſt every thing that he hates or forbids: and when a ſpirit of reformation ſhall be poured upon all ranks and degrees of men: ſo as every one in their ſeveral ſtations and capacities ſhall do their utmoſt to ſuppreſs ſin and recommend Chriſt and his ways to all around them: then it is that Chriſt's kingdom and glory will increaſe in the world.

The ſecond head. II. I propoſed next to enquire into the times and ſeaſons of this glorious increaſe. God hath his ſet-times for Zion's increaſe and glory, which none can ſtop, Pſal. cii. 13. The apoſtolic age was the moſt remarkable ſet-time for it that ever was, when every ſermon made new conqueſts, and additions to the church, till every city and corner of the vaſt Roman empire was ſtored with Chriſtians. But beſides this, we have promiſes of a more full and ample increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom in the latter days, or towards the end of the world; of which Daniel ſpeaks in his prophecy, Dan. ii. 28, 44. and Dan. vii. 27. There he tells us, that in theſe latter days God will ſet up a great, large and flouriſhing kingdom which will break all others in pieces, and ſtand for ever. That he means the flouriſhing ſtate and glorious increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom toward the end of the world, is clear from this, that he makes the latter days he ſpeaks of, to be the days of the kings which ſhould divide the fourth monarchy or Roman empire among them. This empire was to be divided into ten kingdoms, called in the Revelation ten horns, and repreſented in Dan. ii. 41. by the ten toes of the feet of the image. Now the ſtone cut out of the mount, which is the kingdom of Chriſt, is ſaid to ſmite the image upon its feet and break them in pieces, ver. 34. which ſignifies Chriſt's conquering the Roman empire when divided into ten kings or kingdoms called ten horns, Rev. xvii. which diviſion hath happened in the latter days. And theſe horns, or kings and kingdoms, being joined together in giving their power to the beaſt or Roman Antichriſt as their head, do preſerve ſome ſhadow of the ancient Roman empire or monarchy, ſeeing Antichriſt's power is almoſt as extenſive, as the emperor's once was. Hence Antichriſt is ſometimes called the image of the beaſt, and is ſaid to exerciſe the power of the firſt beaſt, Rev. xiii. 12. 14. as being ſet up at Rome in place of the Roman empire in the weſt, and as bearing the likeneſs of the then emperor that reigned there. For at the time the ſaid empire lay dead and wounded by the ſword or invaſion of the Goths and Vandals, and in effect was not, the Pope got up and mounted the beaſt, which the emperor had rode upon before him, namely, the Roman ſtate, for that is the body of the beaſt, and ſo ſet up a new image of the old Heathen empire at Rome. The papal power may be well called its image, as being like it in largeneſs of dominion, in form of government, and in tyranny and idolatry.

When Chriſt's kingdom was firſt ſet up in the apoſtles time, the Roman empire was in its iron legs, as repreſented in Nebuchadnezzar's image, that is, it was in its greateſt ſtrength. But in the latter days, which Daniel ſpeaks of, Dan. ii. 28. 44. when Chriſt's kingdom is wonderfully increaſed, the empire is in its feet and toes, that is in ten kingdoms ſubject to the beaſt, as they are explained, Rev. xvii 12, 13, 17, 18. Now, as Daniel tells us, it is upon theſe that the ſtone ſmites, and ſo it is among them that Chriſt will make his glorious conqueſts in the latter days. For it is ſaid, Theſe kings ſhall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb ſhall overcome them, not only their power and armies, but he ſhall at length overcome their hearts, ſo that they ſhall be brought to hate the whore and make her deſolate, Rev. xvii. 14, 16. which time is yet to come.

Then it is that Chriſt's kingdom will receive a glorious increaſe, and the kingdoms of this world become his, as in Rev. ii. 15. Then the great river Euphrates will be dried up for preparing the way of the kings of the eaſt, Rev. xvi. 12. Then the blindneſs of the Jews ſhall be removed, and the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall come in, Rom. xi. 1. 25. 26. Theſe and many other famous prophecies about the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory do remain to be accompliſhed in the latter days, at leaſt in the extent; ſuch as thoſe that foretel, That every thing in Jeruſalem ſhall be holy: the people ſhall be all righteous: the ſanctuary ſhall be cleanſed, and purity be both in the worſhip and worſhippers in the temple, and no more a Canaanite in the houſe of the Lord: all nations ſhall be gathered to ſee his glory: there ſhall be no more war betwixt nations: the Jews ſhall be gathered out of all the countries where they are diſperſed, and brought to their own land: they ſhall be no more ſeparate kingdoms, &c. For which ſee Iſa. ii. 2, 3, 4. Iſa. xxvi. 2. Iſa. lii. 1. Iſa. lx. 5, 10, 12, 13, 21. Ezek. xxvi. 24, 28. Ezek. xxxv. 21. to 28. Dan. viii. 14. Zech. xiv. 21. Rev. xi. 1. &c. Now what a glorious increaſe muſt it bring to the Mediator's kingdom and glory, when all theſe prophecies and promiſes ſhall be fulfilled concerning the overthrow of Babylon and Antichriſt, the deſtruction of the Turkiſh empire, the in-bringing of the Jews, with the fulneſs of the Gentiles?

In regard the fall and deſtruction of Antichriſt, or the papal power, is the great mercy promiſed to the church in the latter days, and with which all the other bleſſings promiſed are connected; and that the ſcripture is more particular about the time of its being fulfilled, than any other; it is fit to enquire what is there ſaid about it. And firſt, let us view the forgoing ſigns and forerunners of Antichriſt's fall, and of Chriſt's coming to deliver his people from his tyranny, which point out the times as near; ſuch as,

Firſt, Previous thereto, there will be a great defection among all the churches of Chriſt. Among God's people deadneſs and formality ſhall ſo increaſe, that all the virgins ſhall ſeem to fall aſleep. Errors and falſe doctrines ſhall greatly abound, the luminaries ſhall be darkened, and the ſtars ſhall withdraw their ſhining. Many miniſters ſhall ſuck in corrupt principles about the glorious doctrines of the goſpel, particularly, that of juſtification; by which means the earth ſhall be turned into blood and ſlaughter. Yea, in theſe laſt days, there ſhall be falſe teachers, who privily ſhall bring in damnable hereſies, even denying the Lord that bought them. There ſhall be many infidels, and profane ſcoffers who ſhall make a mock of ſerious godlineſs, and the Holy Spirit's operations; and ſcoff at the goſpel revelation, and the way of ſaving ſinners by Chriſt and his righteouſneſs imputed to us. Alſo they will deride the promiſes of his coming to deſtroy Antichriſt, to deliver his people, and to judge the world, ſaying, Where is the promiſe of his coming? for all things continue as they were from the beginning. Of theſe things the apoſtle Peter ſpeaks in the 2*d* and 3*d* chapters of his 2*d* epiſtle. Nay, ſo general ſhall the defection and infidelity of the world at that time be, that our Lord himſelf tells us, that when he cometh, he ſhall ſcarce find faith upon the earth, Luke xviii. 8. that is, he will find few that have the firm belief of the goſpel-truths, and few that have faith concerning Chriſt's coming. So great have been the reelings of the world, ſo long the delays of Chriſt's coming, and ſo frequent their miſtakes who have prefixed times for it, that there will remain but little faith in any about his glorious appearance for his church, when behold he is juſt at the door. As Atheiſts, Deiſts and adverſaries of the truth have been much hardned in their infidelity, by the miſtakes of thoſe who have been too particular and peremptory in timing future events: ſo the godly themſelves may be ſadly ſhaken, and tempted to deſpair of Chriſt's coming, when he ſo long paſſetht heir reckoning. Therefore, ſaid he, When the Son of man cometh, ſhall he find faith on the earth? But glory to his name, He is faithful and true, and will come at the appointed time, and the unbelief of man ſhall not make the promiſe of God of none effect.

2*dly*, There ſhall be great troubles in the world, and very great fear and diſtreſs in the church, before help ariſe to her, Dan. xii. 1. Daniel is certified, that when Chriſt is to ſtand up for the church, "there ſhall be "a time of trouble, ſuch as never was, ſince there was "a nation, even to that ſame time, and at that time thy "people ſhall be delivered." So in Mat. xxiv. and Luke xxi. Chriſt ſaith, that before his coming, there ſhall be ſtrange ſigns in the heavens, and in the earth, earthquakes, wars, and rumours of wars, the ruſhing of nations one againſt another, and ſuch univerſal diſtreſs, that mens hearts will be failing them for fear; and even then ſhall deliverance be at hand.

3dly, Chriſt will appear when his church's enemies are moſt confident and ſecure, and particularly when the Romiſh harlot is lifted up with pride by her ſucceſs in this or that kingdom, and begins to ſay, "I ſit as a queen and ſhall ſee no ſorrow." But then it is that her plagues ſhall come as in one day, Rev. xvii. 7, 8. How confident was that cruel perſecutor Diocleſian, of his ſucceſs againſt the church when he erected pillars with that inſcription, Deleta Superſtitione Chriſtiana? Then he thought he had got Chriſtianity extirpated, and the church ruined; when behold her glorious deliverance under Conſtantine the Great was juſt at hand.

4thly, Before Antichriſt's fall, one of the ten kingdoms which ſupported the beaſt ſhall undergo a marvellous revolution, Rev. xi. 13. "The ſame hour there "was a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the "city fell." By which tenth part, is to be underſtood one of the ten kingdoms into which the great city Romiſh Babylon was divided: this many take to be the kingdom of France, it being the tenth and laſt of the kingdoms as to the time of its riſe, and that which gave Rome the denomination of the beaſt with ten horns, and alſo it being the only one of the ten that was never conquered ſince its riſe. However unlikely this and other propheſied events may appear at the time, yet the almighty hand of the only wiſe God can ſoon bring them about when leaſt expected. Tho' the church ſhould be wrapt about with the blackeſt clouds and thickeſt darkneſs for a time, that will be no ſtop to God's great deſigns. As a little before the break of day is the darkeſt time of all the night; ſo uſually it is a dark hour before the day-break of the church's deliverance. Let us not then be ſhaken in our minds, whatever ſtorm blow, but firmly believe the word of a true and faithful God, That all his promiſes to his church ſhall be exactly accompliſhed, That he will riſe in due time and ſcatter all his enemies; and that the ſet time to favour Zion will certainly come. May we then be helped to look to heaven, and cry for a ſteady, fixed and perſevering faith, that we may never be ſhaken, nor carried away by the prevailing torrent of infidelity, but may ſtill be eſtabliſhed upon the firm rock of truth for Chriſt's ſake! Amen.

Of the Increaſe of Chriſt's Kingdom.

SERMON XII.

On John iii. 30. He muſt increaſe.——

IN the preceding diſcourſe, I was ſpeaking of the times and ſeaſons of the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory; and ſeeing this increaſe in the latter days is very much connected with Antichriſt's fall, I was enquiring a little into the time of that fall, and mentioning ſome fore-runners of it. But to get a more certain view of it, it is fit to enquire into the ſcripture account of the time and length of Antichriſt's reign; which, according to Rev. xi. 2, 3. and xii. 6, 14. and xiii. 5. doth amount to 1260 years, as is generally agreed to. Now if we could hit upon the time when theſe years began, we ſhould certainly know when his reign would end. But God, for our trial and exerciſe, hath left us much in the dark when to begin them. Thus alſo dealt God with his people in ancient times; for tho' he told them their bondage in Egypt would be 400 years, their captivity in Babylon would be 70 years; and from the commandment to rebuild the temple to the Meſſiah's death, there would be 70 weeks of years, or 490 years: yet ſtill the preciſe time when to begin theſe computations was much queſtioned among them. So that they never were perfectly certain about the exact times of the church's deliverance, until the glorious events happened; and then every one ſaw clearly when they ſhould have dated the beginning of theſe predicted years. Now the ſame is the caſe with reſpect to Antichriſt's reign and downfall. Tho' now we be not certain when to begin the 1260 years, which is the duration of Antichriſt's reign; yet, after the event of his fall, the time of its commencement will be ſo plain, that after ages will be apt to wonder that we fell into ſuch miſtakes about it. Some in their calculations have begun Antichriſt's reign too early: others again perhaps begin it too late. Some of which I ſhall mention, with the grounds of their opinion.

I. Becauſe Antichriſt is called the beaſt with ten horns, Rev. xiii. 1. and the ten horns or kings receive their power one hour with the beaſt, and give their power and kingdom to the beaſt, Rev. xvii. 12, 13, 17. Many therefore did begin Antichriſt's reign, as ſoon as the Roman empire was broken and divided into ten different kingdoms; to wit, when the tenth or laſt horn appeared, which was the kingdom of the Franks, now called the French, under Childericus their king, in the year of our Lord 456; to which if we add 1260 years, the time of Antichriſt's reign, the end of it was to have been in the year 1716, and accordingly many did expect it that year: But the event hath ſhewed that they began Antichriſt's reign too ſoon. And indeed the ſcripture doth not ſay that his reign (tho' contemporary with the ten horns) ſhould begin as ſoon as the laſt of them appeared; and in the year 456, Antichriſt was ſcarce diſcernible in the church. But yet, in the year 1716, Antichriſt got a ſevere blow, when the Lord bro[illegible] his intereſt in Britain, by defeating the rebellion there in his favour, and ſecuring the Proteſtant ſucceſſion to the crown in the houſe of Hanover.

II. Others did begin Antichriſt's reign 20 years after, viz. in the year 476; becauſe till then ſome ſhadow of the old Roman empire remained. For it was not intirely diſſolved, nor did the ten horns appear formally in its room, till the depoſition of Auguſtulus, who was the laſt of the Roman emperors that reigned over both eaſt and weſt. Now he was depoſed in the year 476, after which time the very name of the Roman empire in the weſt, became extinct. Thoſe of this way of thinking did alſo ſtrengthen their opinion from that text, in 2 Theſſ. ii. 7. 8. He who now letteth, will let, until he be taken out of the way. And then ſhall that wicked one be revealed; that is, Antichriſt, who then was working under ground, would not formally appear until the removal of the Roman emperor, whoſe power in the weſt did greatly hinder the papal tyranny and grandeur. Now, according to this opinion Antichriſt's reign ſhould have ended in the year 1736, but the event alſo hath diſcovered they began it too ſoon. For tho' the biſhops of Rome, upon the fall of the empire, made great progreſs in their projected uſurpation, yet Antichriſt was not formally revealed ſo ſoon as 476. Neither doth the ſcripture ſay that he would be immediately revealed, and begin his reign upon the removing of the Roman emperor. But tho' the Lord did not overturn Antichriſt in the year 1736, as ſome expected, yet I hope he hath taken a remarkable ſtep toward it, and for the increaſe of his own kingdom, in or obout that year, by raiſing up eminent inſtruments for ſpreading his glorious goſpel thro' the world, ſuch as the Moravian brethren, and Oxford methodiſts; and particularly by ſending forth the Rev. Mr Whiteſield, that very year to preach the everlaſting goſpel with wonderful ſucceſs. And now both he and others whom God hath excited, have, ſince that time, made a noble progreſs in this work, both in Europe and America, by preaching in the demonſtration of the Spirit, and with power, the doctrine of free grace, of original ſin, of regeneration by the holy Spirit, and of juſtification by Chriſt's righteouſneſs alone; which doctrines had been ſadly buried before. And I verily believe, that it is by the effuſion of the Spirit with the goſpel and the bright convincing appearances of Chriſt, and free grace in the glory of goſpel light, that Antichriſt will be conſumed and deſtroyed; and Chriſt's kingdom increaſed and enlarged.

III. Some there are who are very late in beginning Antichriſt's reign, not before the biſhops of Rome turned groſly idolatrous, and ſet up for the worſhip of images, and for excommunicating and depoſing the emperors of Conſtantinople, their civil rulers, becauſe they oppoſed them in their idolatry. This was firſt attempted by Pope Conſtantine againſt the emperor Philippicus in the year 713; and afterwards practiſed with greater boldneſs and ſucceſs by Pope Greogry II. againſt the emperor Leo in the year 726. According to this opinion, Antichriſt's reign will not end before the year 1973.

IV. But the moſt probable time for commencing Antichriſt's reign ſeems to be when Boniface III. got himſelf declared univerſal biſhop and head of the church, and aſſumed the title of Pope, which was in the year 606. And in this uſurped ſupre[illegible]acy he was then owned and ſubmitted to by the ten horns or kings who gave their power to him. Then it was the Pope became Chriſt's declared oppoſite by uſurping his peculiar office and titles, and ſo appeared formally to be Antichriſt. Now if we add to 606, the time of Antichriſt's reign, 1260 years, his dominion will not end till the year 1866, which is 124 years hence. Tho' none now living will ſee this, yet we may comfort ourſelves as once a godly man did, I have had a longing deſire, ſaid he, to ſee or hear of the fall of Antichriſt: but I check myſelf, I ſhall go to heaven, and there the news of it ſhall quickly arrive, for both angels and ſaints will rejoice at it, Rev. xviii. 20. Why, that will be the happy time of the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory. May God haſten it for Chriſt's ſake,

The third head. III. I propoſe next to give ſome reaſons why Chriſt muſt increaſe as above;

1ſt, Becauſe of the decree and promiſe of God which cannot fail. He hath promiſed this not only to the church, Jer. xxiii. 5. but alſo to Chriſt himſelf, Pſal. ii. 8. and cx. 1, 2. And ſurely he will not alter the thing that is gone out of his lips, he will not lie unto David, Pſal. lxxxix. 34, 35.

2dly, Becauſe it is for the ſake of the kingdom of Chriſt, and its increaſe, that God hath made the world, and hath given the adminiſtration of the kingdom of providence to Chriſt himſelf in order to ſecure the accompliſhment of all the glorious promiſes made to him, the reins of government are put in his own hand, Mat. xxviii. 18. Eph. i. 22. And to be ſure the great Mediator will ſee to his own intereſt.

3dly, Becauſe Chriſt is the darling of heaven, dearly beloved of God for undertaking the redemption of a loſt world, a work whereby God is highly glorified. In this tranſaction he chearfully complied with the divine will, became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs, and therefore his name muſt be exalted above every name, and every knee muſt bow before him, Phil. ii. 8, 9, 10.

APPLICATION.

I. Uſe may be of information.

1. We here ſee what encouragement we have to pray as we are taught, Thy kingdom come, and that it may be increaſed and enlarged; ſeeing we pray for what God hath decreed, promiſed and foretold, and muſt certainly come to paſs.

2. It muſt then be great folly to oppoſe the flouriſhing of Chriſt's kingdom, they who do it have a ſtrong party to fight againſt, even the omnipotent God, who hath ſaid of Chriſt and his kingdom, He muſt increaſe.

II. Uſe may be of reproof and warning to all who would hinder the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory in the world; ſuch as,

1. Thoſe who perſecute and oppreſs his people.

2. Thoſe who promote the violent ſettlement of miniſters contrary to the will of congregations, and thereby put a ſtop to the converſion and edification of ſouls.

3. Thoſe who promote infidelity, error, or any doctrine in the church, contrary to the ſimplicity and purity of the goſpel, and the ſcripture-ſcheme of ſalvation by Chriſt and his ſurety-righteouſneſs, whereby free grace is exalted and ſelf debaſed.

4. Thoſe who refuſe to ſubject themſelves to the laws of his kingdom, and will rather obey their own paſſions and luſts, ſaying in their hearts, We will not have this man to reign over us; if Chriſt be a King, let him be a King without a kingdom, ſubjects, or laws; if we could, he ſhould have none. O ſinners, take heed what ye are doing; you directly oppoſe the will of that God, who ſaith, He muſt increaſe.

III. Uſe of lamentation. We may here take occaſion to bewail the ſtate of Chriſt's kingdom in divers places, in which it once flouriſhed and increaſed, but now, alas! decreaſeth, as in France, Germany, Poland, Bohemia, Hungary, Piedmont, and other foreign parts, and likewiſe in Britain and Ireland, and particularly in our mother church of Scotland! Oh! what a dreadful flood of infidelity, atheiſm, irreligion, damnable hereſies, looſeneſs of principle and of practice, contempt of God and religion, ſcoffings at the truths of God and ſerious godlineſs hath broke out in this age, and ſwelled to a greater height than at any time ſince our bleſſed reformation. Our holy Chriſtian religion, in its firm foundations and infallible proofs, hath been openly attacked and ridiculed by profeſſed infidels and pretenders to reaſon amongſt us, and that notwithſtanding the ſtrong obligations they ly under by their baptiſm and education to adhere to it. And many pretended friends have been undermining and deſtroying it, by promoting opinions and practices inconſiſtent with its purity and intereſt. Yea, all ranks of us, whether magiſtrates, miniſters, nobility, gentry, citizens and commons, are ſadly chargeable with the prevailing defections and declenſions of the age. Alas, we have left our firſt love, and have wofully degenerated from our anceſtors piety, zeal, and ſolemn engagements to the Lord! How lamentable is our neglect of family-worſhip, ſecret prayer, ſabbath-ſanctification, and goſpel-holineſs! As alſo our loſing our former livelineſs and ſpiriuality in God's worſhip and ſervice, and letting our devotion dwindle away into a dead formality, and mere bodily ſervice! And, finally, how ſtrong is the propenſity of the preſent generation to vanity, lightneſs, plays, comedies, romances, idle diverſions, contempt of ordinances, lying, cheating, perjury, and all ſorts of immoral practices.

Upon account whereof God is provoked to forſake his ordinances, and ſmite our church with ſore judgments, ſuch as a ſpirit of diviſion, a miſcarrying womb, and dry breaſts, impenitency and hardneſs of heart, ſuſpending the Spirit's influences, ſo as hearts are not melted by the word. The angel deſcends not to trouble the waters, and the diſeaſed ſtep not in to be healed as in former days. Our hearts do not burn while Chriſt is talking with us; the times of refreſhing come not from the preſence of the Lord. And, alas! we who are in the miniſtry want not reaſon to fear that we have a hand in bringing on the judgments, by our undertaking the miniſtry for carnal ends, and without experimental knowledge of the Spirit's work in regeneration; helping in lax men to the miniſtry, and diſcouraging the more ſerious; little reading and ſtudying the ſcriptures, want of zeal and concern for the converſion and edification of ſouls: Seeking ourſelves in our public apperances, more than the glory of our bleſſed Maſter, not looking to him for furniture, and depending on his preſence and Spirit for ſucceſs: Not labouring more earneſtly, and preaching more rouzingly for awakening and convincing of ſouls: laying ſtumbling-blocks before hearers, by ſinful ſtrifes, untender walking, and wrong ſteps, whereby they are tempted to abhor the offerings of the Lord, not acting as faithful ſtewards, by rightly dividing the word of truth, and ſpeaking to the different caſes of the converted and unconverted, ſaints and ſinners; and not making it the great end of our ſermons to convince loſt ſinners of their miſery, to exalt a crucified Chriſt as their only remedy, and to lead poor ſouls to him. O that all ranks were brought to acknowledge their guilt, and to lament the hand they have had in ſtopping the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom!

IV. Uſe may be of conſolation to all the friends of Chriſt. Tho' you have cauſe of fear and trembling, becauſe of the melancholy view you have of the church's caſe at preſent, her groans and grievances, defections, and backſlidings, and the power and ſucceſs of enemies; yet rejoice in the tidings my text brings, Chriſt muſt increaſe. The church ſhall ariſe and ſhine, her light ſhall come, and the glory of the Lord ſhall riſe upon her. It ſhall not be in the power of all her enemies, tho' hell and Rome be joined with them, to hinder this increaſe. Antichriſt muſt fall: He hath been in a deadly conſumption theſe 200 years, and will expire at length. Whatever be the oppoſition, Chriſt muſt overcome, triumph, and increaſe at laſt. His church will certainly outlive all her enemies. And tho' ſometimes ſhe may decreaſe in ſome places, yet we ſhould mind that Chriſt's kingdom is like the ſea, what it loſeth in one place it gaineth in another. If it loſe in Europe, and gain in America, Chriſt loſeth nothing. And tho' his church in our land be brought low, yet her Head and King lives, and many of his worthies have lived and died in the faith of it, that he would not leave her, but return and revive his work in her with a powerful arm, and ſpreading glory.

V. Uſe, of exhortation. And here I exhort and obteſt all ranks, high and low, to do what they can in their ſtations, by their prayers and endeavours, for the coming and increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom, as Chriſt directs, Mat. vi. 10. O how concerned was David this way! Pſal. xxv. 22. and li. 18. And ſo were Aſaph, Iſaiah, Daniel, Nehemiah, Paul, &c. Pſal. lxxx. 14. Iſa. lxii. 1. Dan. ix. 16. &c. Neh. ii. 3. Rom. x. 1. Conſider alſo the woes and judgments denounced againſt thoſe who are unconcerned for the intereſt of Chriſt's kingdom, Amos vi. 1. 6. Eſther iv. 14. Likewiſe take a view of the bleſſings which would attend the increaſe of it. The Redeemer's glory would be magnified, the church would become a fruitful mother of many children, and many ſons and daughters would be born to God. Then light would ſpread, knowledge be increaſed, ignorance vaniſh, error be abhorred, ſatan reſtrained, vice forſaken, virtue eſteemed, love and peace cultivated. Then the lives of Chriſtians would ſhine, ſabbaths would be days of heaven, ſermons and ſacraments would be longed for, the friends of Chriſt valued as the excellent ones of the earth, and all wiſdom's ways would be pleaſant and delightful. And what happy times would theſe be?

Queſt. What are theſe means and endeavours we ſhould uſe for the increaſe of Chriſt's kingdom and glory in the world, according to our ſeveral ſtations and capacities?

Anſ. 1. Let magiſtrates contribute to this noble end, both by their authority and example, diſcountenancing the immoral and vicious, and putting reſpect upon the virtuous and godly. Let them with zeal and impartiality execute our good laws for ſupreſſing open vice, ſuch as drunkenneſs, uncleanneſs, profaning of the Lord's name, and of the Lord's day, &c. Let them in their own lives be patterns to others in juſtice, ſobriety, family religion, and attending upon public ordinances: and no doubt their good examples would have great influence upon thoſe around them.

2dly, Let miniſters eſpecially lay out themſelves for this increaſe, by making it the great ſcope and end of their ſermons to awaken ſecure ſinners, and lead them to Chriſt; by diligent catechizing of them, and dealing particularly with young perſons in private about their ſouls, and taking great pains with them at their firſt admiſſion to the Lord's table. Let them be careful to keep back the ignorant and ungodly from that holy ordinance; and depend on the miniſtration of the Spirit for all the ſucceſs of their endeavours. Let them beware of licenſing or ordaining any to ſacred functions, who are not of good report for true piety and ſoundneſs; and of impoſing paſtors upon congregations without their conſent or good liking. Let them preach to their flocks by their good lives, as well as their lips; and in all things behave as true friends of the Bridegroom, deſiring (like John Baptiſt) that their bleſſed Maſter may increaſe, tho' they ſhould decreaſe; that his name may be great, tho' theirs ſhould ſink to nothing.

5thly, Let parents and heads of families do what they can to ſet up and increaſe Chriſt's kingdom in their families, by maintaining the worſhip of God in them; ſanctifying the ſabbath in all their dwellings; catechizing and inſtructing children and ſervants, and requiring an account of the ſermons they hear; reproving and curbing ſin whenever it appears; and earneſtly recommending Chriſt and the new birth, prayer, reading of the Bible, and holy living to all within their gates; and eſpecially to children when their hearts are young and tender, for theſe are the hope and ſeed of the next generation. Let us follow the example of the Jews in Nehemiah's time, who repaired the walls of Jeruſalem, every one againſt their own houſes, Neh. iii. 10, &c. If every one would ſweep before their own door, it would ſoon make a clean ſtreet. And if all, whether in public or private ſtations, would diligently apply themſelves to that part of reformation-work that lies neareſt to them, and within their reach, there would ſoon be a happy change among us.

6thly, Let thoſe whom God hath bleſſed with worldly ſubſtance, employ part of it for the increaſe and enlargement of Chriſt's kingdom, by ſupporting charity ſchools, and encouraging miniſters, preachers and catechiſts to travel in dark places of the world, both at home and abroad, for propagating Chriſtian knowledge, and bringing precious ſouls to Jeſus Chriſt: ſurely, there is no better uſe that money can be put to; many of our fellow Chriſtians have done worthily this way before us, and the good effects thereof are notorious; which ſhould excite others to the like acts of charity and beneficence, which have ſuch an evident tendency to ſave periſhing ſouls, and increaſe our dear Redeemer's kingdom and glory.

Object. But (ſay ſome) we are poor and in low ſtations, what can we do for Chriſt's kingdom?

Anſ. There are ſeveral things incumbent on you for this noble end, be what you will.

1ſt, Let every man, whatever his ſtation be, receive the goſpel revelation with a firm unſhaken faith, as the very truth of God, and the way of bringing men to eternal life, which God himſelf hath deviſed. Abhor the impious cavils of infidels againſt it, and receive goſpel-truths with warm love and affection. Love and bleſs God, who in his infinite love and wiſdom contrived this ſcheme of ſalvation, and Jeſus Chriſt that executed it, by ſhedding his blood on the croſs. Let each one by faith put his finger in the print of the nails, and cry with Thomas, He is my Lord, and my God.

3dly, Let every one be ſearching diligently into the time prefixed for the church's being in ſackcloth, viz. the 1260 years. And when (like Daniel) we underſtand by books that the time of finiſhing them is near, let us with him, Dan. ix. 2, 3. ſet our faces unto the Lord God, to ſeek by prayer and ſupplications, with faſting, that he may remove all hindrances, and haſten the time of the church's liberty and increaſe. If you can do no more for it, pour out earneſt prayers to God for fulfilling his promiſes of the downfal of Antichriſt and Mahomet, the inbringing of the Jews, with the fulneſs of the Gentiles. And that he would pour out a ſpirit of mourning and repentance upon the church of Scotland, and other reformed churches, for their decays and backſlidings, put a ſtop to infidelity and error, maintain purity of doctrine and worſhip, remove the cauſes of diviſion and contention, heal breaches, and reſtore peace. And that God may grant a ſpirit of reformation, and of zeal for Chriſt's kingdom, to all men of power and influence, that they may exert themſelves for the enlargement of Chriſt's dominions, and the diminiſhing of ſatan's: and that he would ſend a large effuſion of his Holy Spirit to qualify inſtruments for ſpreading his goſpel thro' the world.

We are apt to be diſcouraged, when we ſee not likely inſtruments to carry on the Lord's work, and bring about the glorious things he hath promiſed; and to cry, By whom ſhall Jacob ariſe? Not minding that God can raiſe up children from ſtones, and inſtruments to ſerve him where they were not expected. Tho' we be oft at our wit's end, we ſhould never be at our faith's end. God can never be at a loſs to carry on his work, while he hath enough of clay and ſpirit to form inſtruments for his purpoſe. When the arm of the Lord doth once awake for his church, no impediment can ſtop him, he makes out that pleaſant word in Pſal. lxviii. 11. The Lord gave the word, great was the company of thoſe that publiſhed it. The pouring out of God's Spirit from on high doth anſwer all objections, overcome difficulties, provide ſupplies, and afford remedies in the moſt deſperate caſes.

O how deſperate like was Luther's attempt in the year 1517, when he, a poor monk, ſet himſelf againſt the torrent of idolatry and corruption that prevailed under Antichriſt at that time! It ſeemed as ridiculous, as if a man had ſet his ſhoulder to a great mountain on purpoſe to remove it. And ſo it was in the reckoning of the wiſeſt of that age; and hence, when Luther opened his deſigns to a great doctor who diſapproved of the Romiſh corruptions as well as he, he bade Luther retire to his cell, and pray, Lord have mercy on us; as if there was no remedy. Yet how wonderfully did the purity of doctrine and worſhip break forth and prevail to amazement among ſundry nations, ſo as to ſhake the foundations of Antichriſt's throne, and give him a deadly wound, under which he hath been languiſhing ever ſince! There had been ſeveral attempts for reformation made by others long before Luther, as by Wickliff, Huſs, and Jerom of Prague; but all were ineffectual, becauſe God's time of reformation was not then come. But we ſee when once that time cometh, no man is able to hinder it more than ſtop the ſun from breaking out under a cloud. It becomes then all the Lord's ſervants and people to keep in the way of duty, and wait patiently till his ſet time to favour Zion doth come.

How patiently did Joſhua and the prieſts wait for the downfal of Jericho! Amidſt the inſults of enemies they continued in their dutiful obedience to God, encompaſſing the city every day, and blowing with trumpets of rams horns, carrying the ark ſtill alongſt with them. This they did ſix days, once every day; and ſeven times upon the ſeventh day. All the ſix days the walls ſtood firm, not a ſtone moved, nor a pinning in it looſed; nor was there any alteration for the moſt part of the ſeventh day, until the evening, when God's ſet time was come; and then, without difficulty, all came tumbling down at one. In like manner let us perſevere with patience in the way of duty, looking to God, and blowing with the goſpel-trumpet, which by many is deſpiſed as the ſound of a ram's horn: but if we hold on carrying Chriſt (the bleſt antitype of the ark) along with us, we ſhall come off with triumph at laſt. One thing is ſure, Antichriſt muſt decreaſe, and Chriſt muſt increaſe. Jericho muſt fall, and Zion muſt be built up. And however dark and cloudy the preſent time be, we are well aſſured from Pſalm cii. 16. When the Lord ſhall build up Zion, he ſhall appear in his glory. The Lord in mercy haſten that time in Scotland, and in all parts of the earth, for Chriſt's ſake. Amen. Even ſo come Lord Jeſus. Amen and Amen.

SERMON XIII. Being a Faſt-day's Sermon before the LORD's SUPPER.

Of God's Withdrawings from his People, and their Exerciſe under them.

Jerem. xiv. 8. O the hope of Iſrael, and Saviour thereof in time of trouble; why ſhouldſt thou be as a ſtranger in the land; and as a way-faring man, that turneth aſide to tarry for a night?

THIS chapter was penned in time of a great dearth in the land of Judah, occaſioned by a grievous drought and want of rain, which fell out about the latter end of king Joſiah his reign: which calamity the prophet pathetically laments, and takes as a token of God's withdrawing his gracious preſence from them; whereupon, ver. 7. he makes a moſt humble confeſſion of ſin, in name of the church, diſclaims any thing of worth or merit in themſelves, and pleads only the glory of God's name.

The prophet's ſcope in the text and context, is to deprecate God's judgments, and particularly that terrible one, of his withdrawing his preſence from his church and people. Why (ſays he ver. 8.) ſhouldſt thou be as a ſtranger in the land? and ver. 9. Leave us not. So that he ſeems to paſs from the conſideration of the ſtroke of drought to that of God's withdrawing his preſence from them. Whence we may obſerve, that God's people dread and deprecate the withdrawing of his gracious preſence more than the removal of all their creature-comforts, or any other judgment whatſoever.

More particularly, in the text we have, 1. The gracious titles he gives to God, as the grounds on which he pleads for his gracious favour and preſence, O the hope of Iſrael! i. e. the object of Iſrael's hope, whoſe word and promiſe is the only foundation of their hope: the Saviour of Iſrael in the time of trouble, i. e. the helper and deliverer of Iſrael in former times of diſtreſs. And then from theſe grounds he doth, in the ſecond place, humbly plead and expoſtulate the matter with God in a twofold queſtion. 1. Why ſhouldſt thou be as a ſtranger in the land? i. e. Why ſhouldſt thou behave to us at this time as a ſtranger, in keeping at a diſtance from us, and inclining, as it were, to drop all acquaintance and correſpondence with us: 2. Why ſhouldſt thou be as a way-faring man, that turns aſide to tarry for a night? i. e. Why ſhouldſt thou ſeem unconcerned about our intereſt and welfare, like a traveller that comes into an inn, and never inquires into the affairs of it? Or why ſhouldſt thou pay ſuch ſhort and tranſient viſits, as if thou waſt weary of us, and ready to depart for good and all.

DOCT. That as ſometimes it pleaſeth God to withdraw himſelf, and behave as a ſtranger to his church and people: ſo there is nothing in the world that will be ſuch matter of exerciſe and trouble to the ſerious ſeekers of God, as ſuch a diſpenſation.

As this is plainly founded on the text, ſo alſo it is evident from many other places of ſcripture, and the practice of the ſaints therein recorded, Job xxiii. 3, 8, 9. Pſal. xiii. 1, 2. Pſal. xxvii. 7.

In handling this doctrine, I ſhall obſerve the following method. 1ſt, Premiſe ſome things for the better underſtanding of it. 2dly, Shew when it may be ſaid, that the Lord withdraws from, and behaves as a ſtranger to his people. 3dly, For what reaſons and grounds he uſeth to do ſo. 4thly, When it may be ſaid, that people are duly exerciſed about this melancholy diſpenſation. 5thly, Whence it is, that this diſpenſation is matter of ſuch excerciſe and trouble to the ſerious ſeekers of God. 6thly, I ſhall make ſome improvement of the whole.

I begin with the firſt, viz. To premiſe ſome things for the better underſtanding of this doctrine, and for preventing miſtakes.

1. However God doth at any time withdraw from his people, yet we muſt remember, he never takes away his loving kindneſs from them, Iſa. liv. 10.

2dly, However God may withdraw the ſenſible and comforting influences of his Spirit from his people; yet he never withdraws his Spirit from them, as to his real preſence and inhabitation for the preſervation and ſupport of their ſpiritual life, John xiv. 17.

3dly, God's withdrawings from his people are never either total or final, but only in part, and for a time, Heb xiii. 5. Iſa. liv. 7, 8. God never leaves his people altogether, but is ſtill graciouſly preſent with them one way or other; if not in reſpect of comfort, yet he is with them in reſpect of grace, if not in a way of quickening, yet ſtill in a way of ſupport; if not in enlivening their affections, yet it may be in enlightening their underſtanding; if not giving ſenſible enjoyments, yet in giving hungry deſires: ſo that the Lord is ſtill with them ſome way or other.

5thly, We ſhould diſtinguiſh betwixt God's withdrawing from his people in point of comfort, and his withdrawing in point of grace. Theſe two do not ſtill go together: for the firſt may be where the ſecond is not. A believer may be deprived of the ſhinings of God's love and favour, when yet faith may be lively, deſires ſtrong, the heart tender, and grace in a vigorous condition; but oft-times God withdraws in point of grace, as well as in point of comfort: I do not mean in reſpect of the habit of grace, for this can never be rooted out, where it is once planted; but only in reſpect of the exerciſe and ſome particular degrees of grace: Theſe may be loſt, ſo as the ſoul becomes weak, and ſometimes very feeble and languid in duty; the breath grows cold, the pulſe beats low, and the things that remain ſeem ready to die, Rev. iii. 2.

II. The ſecond thing propoſed, was to ſhew when it may be ſaid that the Lord withdraws, and behaves as a ſtranger to his people.

1. When he withholds his wonted acts of kindneſs from them; ſees them in trouble, and ſteps not in for their relief, as in former times. Of this the church complains, Iſa. lxiii. 15. Where is thy zeal and thy ſtrength? The ſounding of thy bowels, and thy mercies toward me, are they now reſtrained? He ſuffered their enemies to gather ſtrength, to riſe up and oppreſs them, and bring them very low; and did not ſeem to regard their cry, nor ſhew his mercy or power in helping them; but withdrew his hand, and behaved as a ſtranger that was not concerned about them. It was on this account that Gideon reckoned God to be withdrawn from Iſrael, when the angel of the Lord appeared to him, Judg. vi. 12. and ſaid, "The Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valour." But Gideon was ſo much taken up with the diſtreſſed caſe of the church in general, that he waves the conſideration of his own particular caſe, and ſays, ver. 13. "Oh my Lord; if the Lord be with us, why then is all this befallen us? And where be all his miracles which our fathers told us of?" q. d. If the Lord were not withdrawn, and become as a ſtranger to us, ſurely he would not have ſuffered the Midianites to oppreſs us ſo ſore and ſo long, without appearing for our help. In like manner oft-times reaſons a poor diſcouraged believer, If the Lord were not withdrawn, why ſhould my old luſts (which I once thought were both killed and buried) riſe up and trouble me? Alas! I am left to ſtruggle againſt them alone, and iniquities prevail againſt me: I ſtrive to ſtem the tide, but it grows the more: How long ſhall the enemy be exalted over me?

2dly, When the Lord threatens to remove the ſigns and ſymbols of his preſence from his people, viz. pure ordinances and ſacraments; when he lets enemies combine, and carry on their plots for this purpoſe; when our ſprings are in hazard of being ſtopt or poiſoned, and we put to ſeek our ſpiritual bread with the peril of our lives, becauſe of the ſword of the wilderneſs, Lam. v. 9. This hath been the lot of God's people in this land; now indeed we get our bread at an eaſier rate, but alas! we do not prize it, nor grow by it. May not God be provoked then to withdraw it, or ſend us to the wilderneſs to again ſeek it.

3dly, When tho' the Lord continues pure ordinances and ſacraments with his people, yet denies the wonted bleſſing and benefit thereof to them, yea blaſts them; according to that ſad word, Mal. ii. 2. If ye will not hear and lay it to heart, I will even curſe your bleſſings; yea I have curſed them already. This we fear is the caſe of many; they have the word and ſacraments in purity and plenty, but do not find them bleſt; God's Spirit doth not concur with them, and their ſouls do not thrive under them. Surely the Lord behaves as a ſtranger to our aſſemblies, when miniſters are ſtraitened in preaching, and people are ſtraitened in hearing; when we that are ſent to you, feel much coldneſs on our own hearts, and have a number of cold hearts to deal with, and a live-coal is not brought from the altar to kindle the fire.

5thly, The Lord behaves as a ſtranger to his people, when he truſts them with dumb and ſilent rods; trials whereof they underſtand not the language, and whereby they reap no benefit. This was the caſe of God's people, Iſa. lvii. 17. For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him: I hid me and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. Tho' God's rod ſhould have let him to ſee his ſin, and lay to heart the cauſe of the controverſy, yet he took no notice of it, but went on in his former courſe: Many, though God's hand be lifted up, they will not ſee. They are not bettered by his diſpenſations.

6thly, When the Lord denies acceſs to his people in duty, and breaks off his wonted correſpondence with them: They come to God's ordinary tryſting places with his people, ordinances both public and private, but he is not there; they ſeek him, but ſtill they miſs him, ſo as they are put to cry with that holy man, Job xxiii. 3. O that I knew where I might find him. O that I knew the place, the duty, the ſermon, the ſacrament, where I might find him; there I would go and ſeek him; I try prayer, (ſaith the poor ſoul) but that brings me not to him; for when I cry out and ſhout, he ſhutteth out my prayer, as Lam. iii. 8. Alas! I get not acceſs to God as formerly, he carries now to me as an alien; for when I come and knock, I find nothing but a ſhut door and a ſilent God. In a word, the Lord withdraws, and behaves as a ſtranger to his people, when he withholds the manifeſtations of his countenance, the operations of his Spirit, and the ſpecial communications of light and life, which he uſeth to allow to them that love him.

III. The next thing was to enquire into the grounds and reaſons, why the Lord deals ſo with his people. I grant, the Lord may thus withdraw from them out of his abſolute ſovereignty; but commonly he doth it for the correction of ſin, Iſa. lix. 2. As, 1ſt, When they are guilty of groſs ſins and ſcandalous outbreakings, ſuch as caſt a reproach upon religion, and the good ways of the Lord, Iſa. i. 13, 14. This is plain in David's caſe, ſee 2 Sam. xii. 14. compared with Pſal. li. 11.

2dly, When they turn earthly-minded and prefer the delights of ſenſe to precious Chriſt, then he withdraws, Iſa. lvii. 17. They that have a ſtrong reliſh for the fleſh pots of Egypt, are not fit to taſte the hidden manna. When the Gadarenes came that length as to prefer their ſwine to Chriſt's preſence, he turned his back, and departed from their coaſts, Matth. viii. 28.

3dly, When we turn ſlothful and formal in duty, and do not ſtir up ourſelves to ſeek God's face, then he withdraws, as is plain from Iſa. lxiv. 7. Cant. iii. 1. If you put God off with bodily exerciſe, he will put you off with empty ordinances and dry breaſts: If you ſerve him not with your ſpirits, he will deprive you of his Spirit. Wherefore, if you would have the Lord be with you, ye muſt ſhake off ſloth, Ariſe and be doing: according to 1 Chron. xxii. 16.

4thly, When we neglect or ſlight the Mediator; by whom we have acceſs and nearneſs to God, we provoke the Lord to withdraw and turn a ſtranger to us. And this we do, 1ſt, When we do not look to Chriſt for ſtrength to perform duty, but truſt to our own ſtrength for doing it. 2dly, When we make a ſaviour of our duties, and put them in Chriſt's room: And this we are prone to, eſpecially when we attain to any freedom or enlargement in duty. All is well now, think we, God is well pleaſed, this will render us acceptable to him, and atone for former guilt; and thus the glorious Mediator is forgot, and the idol ſelf is exalted in his place; which is moſt diſpleaſing to God.

6thly, When we ſin under, and after great afflictions or trials appointed to reclaim us, God is provoked to leave us, Iſa. lvii. 17. Has not God ſmitten ſome of you, and brought you into the furnace, ſo that ye melted under his hand? But when in pity he delivered you again, ye ſoon forgot his dealings, and turned to your old ways. Is it any wonder that he frown and behave as a ſtranger to you?

7thly, God is provoked to leave us, when we do not entertain the motions and kindly touches of his Spirit on our hearts; the ſpouſe neglected theſe, ſo that her beloved withdrew, turned a ſtranger to her, and it coſt her much travel and ſorrow ere ſhe got his countenance again, Cant. v. 2. 3. 6. 7.

8thly, When we grow hardened and impenitent under provocations, ſo as we have neither a due ſenſe of our own ſins, nor of the ſins of the land we live in, Hoſ. v. 15. I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offences, and ſeek my face. Ah! was there ever more guilt lying on a land, and leſs feeling of it, than amongſt us at this day?

IV. The fourth thing, was to ſhew when it may be ſaid that people are rightly exerciſed under ſuch a diſpenſation, as this of the Lord's withdrawing, and behaving as a ſtranger to them.

1ſt, We may be ſaid to be rightly exerciſed under it, when we are truly ſenſible of our loſs, and of our ſins as the procuring cauſe thereof; and hence are brought heartily to mourn and lament after the Lord, as the prophet doth in the text and context, and as Iſrael did in the days of Samuel, 1 Sam. vii. 2.

2dly, When we place all our comfort and happineſs in the favour and preſence of God, and are unſatiſfied with all other comforts without this, count all worldly things but loſs and dung; look on ſun, moon, health, wealth, honours, pleaſures, houſes, relations, yea, life and breath, as moſt empty and comfortleſs things without God, ſo did the prophet in the text, when he addreſſes himſelf with this title, O the hope of Iſrael! q. d. All our hope is in thee, and we are poor, miſerable and hopeleſs creatures without thee, and ſo did the Pſalmiſt, when he ſaith, Pſalm lxxiii. 25. Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none upon earth that I deſire beſides thee.

3dly, When we are at pains to engage our whole hearts, and all the powers and faculties of our ſouls, to ſeek after a withdrawing God; 'With my whole heart 'have I ſought thee,' ſaith David, Pſal. cxix. 10.

And becauſe our hearts are deceitful and ready to ſtart aſide from this work, we ſhould be laying ties and engagements on them to be ſincere and fervent about this work, for God takes ſpecial notice of ſuch who do ſo; Jer. xxx. 21. Who is this that engageth his heart to approach unto me?

4thly, When we diligently lay hold on all opportunities, and uſe all appointed means for finding an abſent God; like the ſpouſe that ſought her beloved about all the city, both in the ſtreets and broad-ways, Cant. iii. 2. In all duties and ordinances, both private and public, our ſouls ſhould follow hard after him, and purſue him cloſely, (as it were) from one ordinance to another, Pſal. lxiii. 8.

5thly, When we wreſtle with him in prayer for his gracious return to us, and fill our mouths with arguments in pleading with him, as the prophet doth in the text and context; 1. He pleads the glory of his name, Do it for thy name's ſake. 2. He pleads their hopeleſs and helpleſs caſe without him, who was the fountain of all help and comfort; O the hope of Iſrael and Saviour thereof. 3. He pleads the former experiences they had of his kindneſs to them in their helpleſs condition; O Saviour of Iſrael in the time of trouble. 4. He pleads his power; it was very eaſy for him to relieve them, whatever ſtraits they were in; Why ſhouldſt thou be as a man aſtonied, as a mighty man that cannot ſave? 5. He pleads the outward ſymbols and pledges of his preſence he had given them, his temple, his ark, and oracles: Thou, O Lord, art in the midſt of us. 6. He pleads the covenant relation they ſtood in to him; We are called by thy name. Upon all which accounts, we beſeech thee leave us not.

7thly, When we are unſatisfied with the beſt means and ordinances, unleſs we find God in them; David was not content with his enjoying the tabernacle, the ark, ſacrifices, the paſſover, and others of God's pure ordinances: but in moſt of all, his heart and fleſh cried out for the living God, Pſal. lxxxiv. 2. Hypocrites, if they have the outward means, are well ſatisfied; for God's preſence and abſence is all one to them: but ſincere believers will not be put off ſo, if God be not in the ordinances, nothing can pleaſe them, not the moſt powerful ſermons, tho' an angel were to preach them; nor the moſt lively communions, tho' a glorified apoſtle ſhould come and diſpenſe them. The abſence of God is ſuch a great want to them, that nothing in heaven or earth can fill up, but himſelf.

V. The fifth thing is to ſhew, whence it is that the Lord's withdrawing and behaving as a ſtranger to his people, is ſuch a matter of exerciſe and trouble to them.

I. Becauſe of the incomparable ſweetneſs and advantage they enjoy in his gracious preſence, while they have it; for this is the ſum and compend of all bleſſings, and hath all good things wrapt up in it. The divine preſence brings light and life, health and ſtrength, peace and comfort, yea, complete ſatisfaction to the precious ſoul that doth enjoy it; no wonder then, that the people of God ſhould be ſo much concerned for the want of it; for then they may cry out with Micah, and with juſt ground too, They have taken away my gods, and what have I more? Judg. xviii 24.

II. Becauſe of the effects and conſequents of God's withdrawings from the ſoul; which being very ſad and melancholy, are matter of great exerciſe and trouble to God's people: as for inſtance, 1. There follows uſually on it, a great darkneſs upon the ſpirit; as when the ſun goes down, darkneſs covers the face of the earth; ſo when God withdraws, thick clouds do vail the face of the underſtanding, and the whole ſoul; ſo that the poor diſconſolate ſoul is bewildered, knows not his way, nor what courſe to take, but is made to complain, as in Lam. iii. 2. He hath brought me into darkneſs, and not into light. Alas! ſaith he, I know not where I am, nor how it is with me; I know not God's mind nor will towards me; I ſee not any comfortable ſign, neither know I the time how long; I meet with many dark providences, dark ordinances, dark communions, all is dark to me.

2dly, Not only darkneſs, but much deadneſs and ſtupidity alſo ſeizes upon the deſerted ſoul. Why are our ſpirits ſo dead in prayer, in hearing, and ſo dead in communicating? Is it not becauſe the Lord is withdrawn? What theſe two ſiſters ſaid to Chriſt, John xi. Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died; may be well ſaid by ſuch a poor ſoul, Lord, if thou hadſt been here preſent in ſuch a duty, in ſuch a ſermon or communion, my heart had not been ſo dead; for why, as Moſes ſaith, Deut. xxx. 20. He is thy life; ſo when our life withdraws, we are dead, and all things are dead to us.

3dly, There follows alſo an unſpiritedneſs and diſability for duty: the ſoul hath neither heart nor hand for prayer, for reading, hearing, communicating, meditation, ſelf-examination, or any duty. Deſerted Heman ſaith, I am as a man that hath no ſtrength, Pſal. lxxxviii, 4. David's complaint is much the ſame, Pſal. xl. 12. Mine iniquities have taken hold on me, I am not able to look up. His ſpiritual ſtrength was ſo waſted, that he was ſcarce able either to ſpeak or look to God. Now, what is the cauſe of all our weakneſs and incapacity for duty? Oh! the Lord is withdrawn. It is a true word our Saviour ſaith, John xv. 5. Without me ye can do nothing. It were happy for us, that we were moſt ſenſible of this truth, for we are moſt apt to truſt to our own ſtrength, and think ſtill we can do well enough for ourſelves: like Samſon when he had ſinned away both his God and his ſtrength, yet he went forth to ſhake himſelf as at other times, but wiſt not that the Lord had departed from him. So many are inſenſible of the Lord's departure, they go to communions, and think to ſhake themſelves as at other times, but, oh! there is a benumbedneſs and weakneſs that has ſeized on their ſpirits, they cannot now lift up their ſouls at his table.

4thly, There uſually follows, on God's withdrawing, great witheredneſs and barenneſs on the ſouls of his people, their leaf fades, their fruit drops, and they quickly turn like the mountains of Gilboa, on which there is neither dew nor rain, John xv. 6. If a man a- bide not in me, he is caſt forth as a branch, and is withered. It is his gracious preſence only that can make us fat and flouriſhing in the courts of our God.

5thly, We become expoſed and liable to manifold dangers and enemies; for when God withdraws, our defence withdraws too. Hence Moſes comforts Iſrael againſt their enemies, Num xiv. 9. Ye need not fear them, (ſaith he) for their defence is departed from them, the Lord is with us. The Lord's preſence is his people's defence againſt all the aſſaults of their enemies, whether from within on from without, againſt the power of their luſts, the policy of the devil, and cruelty of the wicked: but if their fence be removed, they are expoſed to them all.

6thly, Another effect, which is matter of ſad exerciſe, is, great trouble and anxiety of mind for former unkindneſs and ingratitude to God. Hence the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. lxxvii. 3. I remembered God, and was troubled. Formerly he had remembered God, and was comforted; his meditation of him was ſweet, but now it was far otherwiſe: Oh! ſays he, I now remember my unkindneſs to him that was ſo good to me; my conſcience upbraids me for my unſuitable carriage: Is this thy kindneſs to thy friend? Where are all thy former purpoſes and reſolutions? Thy promiſes and vows made at ſacraments? Are they all come to this? Oh! thou haſt ſinned thy God and friend away from thee! It was the thoughts hereof that brake Peter's heart, and made him weep ſo bitterly.

7thly, There follows on it very melancholy and unwelcome thoughts of death and judgment. When God is preſent with the believer, he can ſay as in Pſal. xxiii. 4. Tho' I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me. But O! it is melancholy to think of going through that valley without him, and of appearing before him while he frowns, and behaves as a ſtranger or enemy to us.

8thly, Sometimes there follows a revived ſenſe of wrath, old wounds begin to open and bleed afreſh; the deſerted ſoul is driven back to the foot of mount Sinai, and begins to hear its thunders and curſes renewed, tho' he once thought they had been all ſilenced by the blood of Chriſt. Thus it was with Heman, Pſal. lxxxviii. 7. Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, &c.

Laſtly, The fears of utter rejection is another conſequent that oft proves matter of ſad exerciſe to the deſerted ſoul. Alas! I fear my cauſe ſhall never be better, that my ſky ſhall never break, nor my clouds diſſipate; that I ſhall never recover God's preſence again, but be baniſhed eternally from it; ſo with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxvii. 9, 10. Has God forgotten to be gracious? Hath he in anger ſhut up his tender mercies? And Pſal. cxix. 8. O forſake me not utterly.

APPLICATION.

Uſe I. Of Information. 1. Hence we may be informed, that there are but few true ſeekers of God among us, ſeeing there are few to whom God's withdrawing is matter of much exerciſe or trouble; few mourning on this account, like the prophet, and crying, Why art thou ſuch a ſtranger to my ſoul? Many are troubled for other trifling loſſes, but few that can ſay with David, Pſal. xxx. 7. Thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled.

2dly, We may ſee the miſery of thoſe who are far from God now, and are like to be deprived of his preſence for ever, Pſal. lxxiii. 27. Unrenewed perſons deſire not God's preſence here, but ſay to him, Depart from us, John xxi. 14. and alas! their choice is their judgment, and ſhall be ſo for ever; for the Judge's ſentence againſt them will be, Depart from me, &c. If the Epheſians ſorrowed moſt of all for that parting word of Paul to them, Ye ſhall ſee my face no more, Acts xx. 38. how much more will ſuch a word from Chriſt's mouth at the laſt day be piercing and heart-breaking to the ungodly for ever?

3dly, How ſad muſt the caſe of thoſe be, from whom God withdraws, not to return again? The Spirit of God comes, and ſtrives for a time with many; but, when reſiſted and grieved, he goes away; and when once he goes away from an unconverted ſoul, he ſeldom returns to ſtrive any more. When the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, he came not again, but an evil ſpirit in his place, 1 Sam. xvi. 14.

4thly, Believers ſhould not conclude that God has caſt them off becauſe he is a ſtranger to them for a time; for this hath been the lot of the deareſt of God's children, yea even of his own beloved Son himſelf, when in this world.

Uſe II. Of reproof. 1. To thoſe who are ſo great ſtrangers to religion, and the ſtate of their own ſouls, that they know not what God's preſence or abſence is; and ſo indifferent are many about this matter, they never enquired to this day, whether God be a ſtranger or a friend to their ſouls.

2dly, To believers, towards whom God may be behaving as a ſtranger, and yet they are inſenſible of it. They are become ſo unwatchful, and ſo much charmed with the delights of ſenſe, and their ſpiritual ſenſes ſo dull, that they are fallen into Samſon's condition, Judges xvi. 20. He wiſt not that the Lord had departed from him,

3dly, To theſe who, tho' they be ſenſible of the Lord's withdrawings, yet are not duly affected therewith: It is no matter of ſerious ſoul-exerciſe to them, as it was to Jeremiah in the text, and to Job, Job xxiii. 3, 8, 9. and to the Iſraelites, 1 Sam. vii. 2. Who lamented after the Lord.

4thly, To theſe who are ſo far from being ſuitably exerciſed and affected with the Lord's withdrawings from them, that they are ſtill ſinning him farther away; by their formality in duty, untenderneſs of walk, ſlighting of the Spirit's motions, and venturing on ſins againſt light. O believer! is this thy kindneſs to thy friend? Doſt thou thus requite the Lord? We do not marvel to ſee perſecutors, and haters of God, driving him away, or to ſee Chriſt receiving wounds from his enemies: but O! it is ſad that precious Chriſt ſhould get ſuch wounds in the houſe of his friends.

Uſe III. Of exhortation to two ſorts of perſons. 1ſt, To theſe who are ſtrangers to God, and know nothing of his preſence. 2dly, To theſe who have known it, but he is become a ſtranger to them.

As to the firſt ſort, I exhort you in the name of the Lord, to bethink yourſelves, and conſider your miſery in this ſtate; for lo, they that are far from God ſhall periſh. It is the character of thoſe who are in a loſt ſtate, to be without God in the world. Now, your miſery, while ſuch, is inexpreſſible. 1ſt, You are utterly unfit to come to the Lord's table; for what communion can there be betwixt light and darkneſs? Or, betwixt thoſe that have hitherto been ſtrangers and enemies to one another. Remember, it is only a feaſt for friends: ſtrangers to God are debarred. 2dly, Your ſtate is moſt uncomfortable; the ſun hath never riſen upon you; God's face hath never ſhined; it is ſtill dark night with you, and you ſit in the region and ſhadow of death. 3dly, You are under the dominion of ſatan, the prince and ruler of darkneſs. 4thly, You are under the heavy clouds of God's wrath and indignation. 5thly, You ſit conſtantly on the very border of hell. 6thly, O ſinner! conſider what a day of darkneſs and gloomineſs, a day of clouds and thick darkneſs, a dying hour will prove to thee. When thy ſoul is ſtepping forth into another world, how ready will it be to ſhrink back, and ſay, How ſhall I appear before that God, who has always been a ſtranger to me, and with whom I never had the leaſt acquaintance! Can I look for any thing but a frowning Judge, and a fearful ſentence? O ſtrangers, come and acquaint yourſelves with God now, accept of his offers of mercy, and be at peace with him through Chriſt; and thereby ſhall good come unto you.

Exhort. II. To thoſe who have had acquaintance with God, but he is become a ſtranger to them. O poor ſoul, be ſuitably weighted and affected with this diſpenſation; let it be matter of exerciſe to thee upon a faſt-day before the communion: it will be a heartleſs and fruitleſs communion, if God continue as a ſtranger to thee; therefore be not eaſy under his withdrawings.

Conſid. 1ſt, Your ſouls grievances can never be removed while God keeps at a diſtance from you; but they will ſtill be growing greater: as for inſtance, While he is a ſtranger, you cannot have light for your darkneſs, but darkneſs will be increaſing; you cannot have life for your deadneſs, but you will ſtill be growing deader in ſpiritual things: you cannot have appetite for your food, but you will always be turning the more indifferent about it: you cannot have protection from your enemies, but you will ſtill be brought the more under their power. Things will ſtill be growing worſe, the longer God is a ſtranger to thy ſoul.

2dly, Ordinances can neither be pleaſant nor profitable to thee, while God is a ſtranger to thy ſoul; you cannot ſee any beauty in them, while God is abſent; for without the Lord's preſence, ordinances are dead, and a dead thing can have no beauty. It is his preſence, that puts a luſtre on ordinances, and makes them ſhine, ſo as to confirm the friends of the goſpel, and make enemies aſhamed of their oppoſition. It is his preſence that puts life in communions, and life in communicants, and cauſes them to prefer a day in God's courts, to a thouſand elſewhere. It is his preſence that makes ordinances fruitful, and his people's ſouls to thrive under them. O! why have you ſuch lean ſouls and barren hearts under ordinances! It is, becauſe the Lord is a ſtranger to them. Would you have your food bleſt, goſpel-ſeaſons fruitful, and your ſouls under the influence thereof, like watered gardens? Then ſeek the Lord's preſence, 1 Cor. iii. 17. It is not he that planteth, nor he that wateneth, but God that gives the increaſe.

Queſt. Seeing God is ſetting a ſolemn tryſt with us at this occaſion, and it highly concerneth us to make ready to meet with him; How ſhall we be exerciſed on this faſt-day, ſo as to get diſtance removed, and breaches made up, that God may not be a ſtranger to us on the feaſt-day?

Anſw. I ſhall give you ſome advices, and draw to a cloſe.

1ſt, Make no harſh conſtructions of God's dealings with your ſouls, whatever they be, but juſtify him; leave your complaints upon yourſelves, and blame your ſins, that ſeparate betwixt you and your God, Iſa. lix. 2. We have a challenge from God that may ſoon ſilence all our murmurings, Jer. ii. 17. "Haſt thou not procured this to thyſelf, in that thou haſt forſaken the Lord thy God?"

3dly, Search diligently for the cauſe of the Lord's eſtrangement from you, as the Pſalmiſt did, Pſal. lxxvii. 6. I communed with mine own heart, my ſpirit made diligent ſearch. O! where is the idol? What is the ſin that hath been the Achan in the camp, and provoked God to turn his back? And aſſoon as you find it out, ſee that you caſt out the accurſed thing. Let not thine eye pity, neither do thou ſpare it; for it has taken thy Lord away from thee. If thou canſt not find it, then go humbly to God, and cry with Job, Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me, Job. x. 2. 'Lord, what is the evil, the ſin or luſt which thou rebukeſt, and for which thou pleadeſt the controverſy? Have I quenched thy Spirit? Have I neglected duty? Was I formal in communicating, or unthankful for former intimations of thy love?' Lord, what I ſee not teach thou me; make me to know my tranſgreſſions, and my ſin.

4thly, Seek to be deeply humbled for every evil and ſin that you are convinced of; and particularly, for the heinous aggravations of them, ſay, 'Oh Lord! I am guilty in thy ſight; I have ſinned againſt more light, more mercies, more vows, and more proofs of thy loving kindneſs, than others: I have gratified ſatan, hardened the wicked, reproached religion, and diſhonoured God more by my ſins, than others do; ſo that thou mayſt juſtly frown on me, and make the ſolemn day, which will be a day of feaſting, rejoicing and gladneſs to thy children, a day of darkneſs, gloomineſs, and diſtreſs to me.'

5thly, Plead by faith the Redeemer's blood, for removing the eſtrangement, and bringing thy ſoul nigh to God; for nothing elſe can do it, according to Eph. ii. 13. ſay, 'Lord, tho' I deſerve not to taſte of thy ſupper, but to meet with a frown, inſtead of a ſmile, a breach, inſtead of a bleſſing, a cup of wrath, inſtead of the cup of the New Teſtament; yet behold the blood of my Surety, and be merciful to me. Lord! I have broke all thy commands; but has not my Surety fulfilled them all? I have indeed affronted thy juſtice; but has not my Surety ſatisfied it? I have deſerved thy wrath; but he has endured it. Remem-

'ber not what I have done againſt thee, but what he hath done and ſuffered for me, and let me be accepted in him who is thy beloved Son.'

6thly, While God carries as a ſtranger to thee, be not thou a ſtranger to the throne of grace, but continue inſtant in prayer for the return of his gracious preſence; plead the great need you have of it, and the helpleſs caſe you are in without it. Beg, however he deal with you now, that he may not be a ſtranger to you on the feaſt-day. Say, 'Lord, if thy preſence go not with me, carry me not hence. What will a communion feaſt avail me, without communion with thyſelf in it? I go not there for bread and wine, but I go to ſee Jeſus: and what wilt thou give me, if I go from thy table Chriſtleſs? O let Chriſt appear and be made known to me in the breaking of bread. Let me enjoy thy lightſome and reviving company in this ſtate of pilgrimage and trouble. Deſcend into my heart by the influences of thy grace, and quickenings of thy Spirit, and let me aſcend unto thee, by the breathings of faith, love and deſire. Lord, grant the requeſt of an importunate petitioner, and come over the mountains of my guilt. Lord, ſtand not at a diſtance behind the wall, but ſhew thyſelf thro' the lettice of thy ordinance, and let me ſee the goings of my God and my King in the ſanctuary. Oh! let me not go away empty from an inexhauſtible treaſure, cold from the ſun, dry from the fountain, hungry, ſad and comfortleſs from a feaſt of love. But O! let me meet with my Saviour there, ſee his face, and hear his voice; and let me come from his table with my pardon ſealed, my corruptions ſubdued, my graces quickened, my heart enlarged, and my ſoul refreſhed and encouraged to run the ways of thy commandments, and ſo inſeparably united to thee, that no temptation may be ever able to diſſolve the union.'

Object. O! ſaith ſome poor ſoul, I fear all my endeavours will be in vain; for I have communicated unworthily before: I have ſhed the blood of Chriſt, and ſinned againſt light; ſo that I doubt and fear that my day of grace is paſt, and I am caſt out of God's ſight.

Anſ. However dark your caſe be, yet ſurely it is no darker than Jonah's was in the whale's belly; who, tho' he never read or heard of any in ſuch diſtreſs: yet when he is concluding, I am caſt out of thy ſight, he aims at a believing look to God in Chriſt, Yet will I look again toward thy holy temple, Jon. ii. 4. Mind alſo Abraham's caſe, tho' he was an hundred years old, and his body as good as dead, yet he believed in God that raiſed the dead; yea, he believed, and hoped againſt hope. Lord help us to imitate him. Amen.

SERMON XIV.

A Preparation Sermon before the Lord's Supper.

The happineſs of being in Covenant with God.

Pſalm cxliv. 15.—Happy is that people whoſe God is the Lord.

THere is nothing in the world that is ſo much talked of, and leſs underſtood, than the buſineſs of a happy life. All the world is in queſt of happineſs, ſome expecting to find it in this, and ſome in the other thing. The worldling looks for it in riches, the philoſopher in knowledge, the ambitious man in honours, and the voluptuous man in pleaſures. But how miſerably are they miſtaken! they ſeek happineſs from the wrong airth; from things that can never ſuit the wants, nor ſatisfy the vaſt deſires of the immortal ſoul. True Chriſtians are the only wiſe men in the world, for they ſeek happineſs where indeed it is to be found, viz. in the enjoyment of God who is the centre of bliſs. And they who attain to this, muſt ſurely be the happy men, for the Spirit of God declares them ſo in my text: Happy is that people whoſe God is the Lord.

In this pſalm, the royal Pſalmiſt doth bleſs and magnify the Lord for the ſignal favours and mercies he had received from him; and from his former gracious experiences, he is encouraged to addreſs God for future mercies, both to himſelf and his kingdom: particularly, he prays for deliverance from public enemies, and the manifold calamities of war; for the eſtabliſhing of peace and tranquillity, and for the proſperity of the nation; for the flouriſhing of their families and children, and for the increaſe of their flocks and cattle: and, in a word, that his people might abound in peace and plenty. Then he pauſes, and makes a reflection upon the nation's proſperous circumſtances, which he had prayed for; Happy is the people, that is in ſuch a caſe; happy they, who have ſuch temporal proſperity and abundance, who have no want in their families, nor complaining in their ſtreets. This is the judgment of the fleſh, and the opinion of moſt men. But the Pſalmiſt preſently corrects himſelf, and retracts his former judgment, and prefers the judgment of faith, to that of ſenſe: yea, rather, Happy is the people, whoſe God is the Lord. As if he had ſaid, "The former eſtate is indeed very deſirable for a nation or people; but Iſrael or the people of God, their true happineſs doth not conſiſt in theſe things that are common to others with them: but only in this peculiar privilege, that the great JEHOVAH, who is the Lord of heaven and earth, is their God by covenant and ſpecial relation. That this God is their God, and they have a ſpecial intereſt in his love and favour, according to the tenor of the covenant of grace. Whatever portion ſuch have in the world's good things, ſurely they are happy; and let others have what they will, if they want this covenant-relation, they are certainly unhappy and miſerable; which they can never be that have it, want what they will; ſeeing the having an intereſt in God as ours, makes up the want of all other things; for all bleſſedneſs and happineſs is included here. Bleſſed and happy is that people whoſe God is the Lord."

DOCT. That it is the greateſt happineſs we can poſſibly attain unto, to be in covenant with God, and to have God for our God.

David was ſtill of this opinion through the whole courſe of his life, Pſal. xvi. 5, 6 Pſal. xxiii. 1, 2. And he ſees no cauſe to alter it at his death; for among his laſt words, he declares, that this ſweet covenant-relation was all his ſalvation, and all his deſire, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5.

The method I propoſe for handling this ſubject, ſhall be, 1ſt, To enquire when it may be ſaid, that a perſon or people are in covenant with God, and have a ſpecial intereſt in him as theirs.

2dly, What is imported in this great privilege, to have God for our God.

3dly, How this privilege appears to be the top of our happineſs.

4thly, Make improvement of the whole.

I begin with the firſt, When it may be ſaid, that a perſon or people are in covenant with God, &c.

And for clearing this point the more, I ſhall, firſt, Conſider it negatively, and ſhew what it is not; and, ſecondly, poſitively, wherein it doth really conſiſt.

I. Negatively, To ſtand in a covenant-relation to God, is not to be underſtood here, 1ſt, Of our being under the bond and engagement of the covenant of works. Though it is moſt certain, that all Adam's poſterity, by virtue hereof, are engaged to God, to perform perfect obedience, and fulfil the whole law; yea, and by breaking it, are obliged to pay the penalty thereof, bear God's curſe, underly death, and ſatisfy God's infinite juſtice; and ſo all of us are naturally in covenant with God in this reſpect. But oh! we have no happineſs, no comfort by being ſo; ſeeing we have broke the covenant of works, and incurred the penalty thereof; for though we ſtill ſtand under engagements to God, by it; yet he is looſed from all obligation to us, to make us happy: yea, by our breaking it, he is under engagement to deſtroy us. Oh! we cannot, by this covenant, plead any intereſt in God as our God, or Father: no, we can only look on him as our Law-giver, our Judge, our Puniſher and Enemy. That is all the relation that God ſtands in now to us, by virtue of the covenant of works.

2dly, There is more requiſite to make up this covenant relation to God, than that bleſſed covenant of redemption, which God entered into from eternity with his Son Jeſus Chriſt, as our head and repreſentative, for ſaving the elect. That glorious tranſaction is indeed the foundation and riſe of our covenant relation to God; but doth not formally conſtitute and make it up. For an elect perſon cannot be ſaid to be in covenant with God from eternity, unleſs by God's appointment and deſignation: he is never formally in it, till he believe, and thereby ratify and approve what Chriſt did from eternity, engage for him, and perſonally conſent to take God for his God in and thro' Jeſus Chriſt the Mediator. So that you ſee the covenant of redemption will not ſave you, nor inſtate you in covenant with God, if ye can ſay no more; there muſt be ſomething done in and by you, to intitle you to that covenant of redemption, and to infeſt and poſſeſs you of the privileges and bleſſings therein promiſed to Chriſt our Head; and this is only done by the ſubſequent ratification of that covenant and treaty, made with the elect in time by the preaching of the goſpel, which is called the covenant of grace.

3dly, There is more in this covenant-relation to God, which makes us happy; than our being viſibly and externally in covenant with God by an outward profeſſion of Chriſtianity, and ſubjection to goſpel ordinances: for thus, every church that hath the word and ſacraments, is in covenant with God. Hence the Lord ſays to the church of the Jews, Ezek. xvi. 8. I entered into covenant with thee, and thou becameſt mine. They were viſibly and externally in covenant with God, by their ſubjection to his ordinances and inſtitutions. They all did partake of the ſeal of his covenant, viz. circumciſion: and hence, when a viſible church makes defection from God, he threatens to come and avenge the quarrel of his covenant, Lev. xxvi. 25. All the members of a viſible church are federally in covenant with God by their profeſſion of Chriſt, and being baptized in his name, but ſuch an external covenant-relation to God, will not make us happy: therefore, let us beware of reſting on it; and let us ſeek earneſtly to be really and internally in covenant with God.

5thly, There is more in this, than the drawing up the form of a perſonal covenant with God, profeſſing to conſent thereto, and ſubſcribing it with the hand. For all this may be done in ſuch a manner, as will not entitle us to God as our God in a ſaving way. This work, tho' good in itſelf, and profitable to many; yet it may be performed by ſome in ſuch an hypocritical, formal or legal manner, as doth make it an abomination to an holy God, that looks for truth in the inward parts.

But II. Poſitively, we come to be in covenant with God in a ſaving way, when we are taken within the bond of the covenant of grace, and do conſent ſincerely to the gracious terms of it; for it is only by virtue of our coming into this covenant, that we have ground to claim this happineſs of having God for our God. Now for us to come into the bond of this covenant of grace, is by faith to 'take hold of God's covenant,' as it is called, Iſa. lvi. 4. And this we do, when we are throughly convinced of our ſin, miſery, and undone ſtate under a covenant of works, and do hence betake ourſelves to the new covenant, or gracious method of ſalvation propoſed to us in the goſpel, thro' Jeſus Chriſt and his righteouſneſs; and do cordially acquieſce in, and approve of this noble contrivance, and accept of Jeſus Chriſt as our only Mediator, Surety and Peace-maker with God: and in him do ſincerly make choice of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, to be our God and portion; and alſo give ourſelves ſoul and body to be the Lord's, engaging in the ſtrength of our great Surety, to abandon ſin, live for God, and walk with him in newneſs of life, as becomes his covenanted people. Now, when our ſouls are helped and determined by the Spirit of grace, to do all this heartily and ſincerely, then do we enter among that happy people whoſe God is the Lord.

II. The ſecond thing in the method, is to enquire into the import of this great privilege, to have God for our God. I will be your God, is the greateſt promiſe and ſubſtance of the covenant of grace, being the great thing ſtipulated on God's part therein, Jer. xxxi. 33. and indeed it is the ſum and compend of all his other promiſes. And imports theſe things, 1ſt, Reconciliation and friendſhip with God, I will be your God, i. e. I will be no longer an angry judge, but a gracious reconciled God to you; my juſtice is appeaſed, wrath pacified, fury is not in me, I have found a ranſom in Chriſt; he is the propitiation for your ſins.

2dly, A near relation betwixt God and us, yea, nearer than any relation among creatures. 'I will be 'your God,' implies, I will ſtand you inſtead of all relations. 1. I will be a Father in Chriſt to you, adopt you for my children, take you into my family, I will pity and provide for you, I will bequeath to you a rich inheritance, you are heirs of God, and coheirs with my eternal Son.—2. I will be a huſband to you, your Maker is your huſband, Iſa. liv. 5. I will marry you to myſelf, I will love you, cloath you, enrich you, and provide a noble dowry for you.——3. I will be your king, I will take you for my ſubjects, I will govern you, protect and defend you from all your enemies. Yea, I will be your phyſician, your ſhepherd, your guide, and inſtead of all relations to you.

3dly, I will be your God, imports a right and title to God, and all that is in him; intimate communion with him, and a communication of all good things from him. Nay, there is ſtill more in this expreſſion than can be unfolded by words; there is more in it, than, I will be father, friend, huſband, benefactor, &c. to you: More in it, than I will give you heaven and everlaſting life, or all the bleſſings of heaven and earth, time and eternity: no, I will give you more, I will give you myſelf, a JEHOVAH, a whole Deity, i. e. all that is in me, all I am, all I have, all I can do is thine. O the magnificent bounty of God! for when he had no greater, no better thing to beſtow on his people, he beſtows himſelf on them.

You may ſay, how can this be? An infinite God, ſo great, ſo glorious, we are not capable of receiving, comprehending, or enjoying him. Anſ. So far as you are capable to receive and enjoy him, he is yours; all that is in him, is given to you for your benefit.

1ſt, All he is perſonally, i. e. the three Perſons of the glorious Trinity are yours, God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. 1. God the Father is yours to love you, to elect you, and contrive redemption for you, John xvi. 27. The Father himſelf loveth you. 2. God the Son is yours, to be a ranſom for you, to ſatisfy juſtice for you; yours to be born for you, to live, to die for you, to riſe again for you, to aſcend into heaven for you, to ſit at God's right hand for you, &c. All this is plain from Iſa. ix. 6. Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is gven. And Cant. ii. 16. My beloved is mine. 3. The Holy Ghoſt is yours, to apply this redemption to you, to change your hearts, to teach you, ſanctify you, work in you, dwell in you, to conduct and guide you to glory, 1 Cor. iii. 16. Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and the Spirit of God dwelleth in you. So you ſee, O believer, whatever God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt is, and can do for your ſalvation and happineſs, they are yours, and made over to you in the covenant of grace.

2dly, All he is eſſentially, his infinite eſſence is yours, i. e. all his glorious attributes and perfections. 1. My mercy is yours, O believer, to pardon your ſins and deliver you from guilt, to ſympathize with, and comfort you in all your trials and afflictions. 2. My wiſdom is yours to provide for you, to counſel and direct you, and to turn all things about for your good. 3. My omnipotence is yours, to guard and protect you from all your enemies, to ſupport and preſerve you to ſalvation. 4. My goodneſs is yours to enrich you, beſtow grace and glory, and all good things on you. 5. My omniſcience is your overſeer, to watch over and warn you againſt approaching dangers. 6. My holineſs is your fountain of grace, to ſanctify and make you holy. 7. My omnipreſence is your companion, to attend and ſolace you in all places and conditions. 8. My juſtice is your rewarder, to beſtow heaven on you; and alſo your avenger to puniſh theſe that wrong you. 9. My all-ſufficiency is your inheritance, for giving you complete and perfect happineſs. My unchangeableneſs is the rock of your ſecurity. My faithfulneſs your pledge and ſurety, for the accompliſhment of all my promiſes to you: and my eternity is the date of your happineſs. So, that O believer, you ſee, all God's eſſential perfections are made over to thee in the covenant of grace, and therein thou haſt an unſearchable treaſure. In God's attributes there is a ſuitable remedy for all theſe maladies and miſeries which ſin has brought on you: his wiſdom cures your ignorance, his grace your guilt, his power your weakneſs, his mercy your miſery, his goodneſs your evil, his faithfulneſs your inconſtancy, his holineſs your impurity, his riches your poverty, and his fulneſs your wants.

Laſtly, I will be your God, imports, that all that God hath ſhall be made over to you, 1 Cor. iii. 21. All things are yours. All mine are thine. As for inſtance, 1ſt, All my promiſes are yours: the promiſes both of this life, and that which is to come; my promiſes of pardon, my promiſes of healing, my promiſes of ſanctification, my promiſes of quickening and ſtrength, my promiſes of through-bearing and comfort in trouble, my promiſes of grace and glory; they are your inheritance.

2dly, My gifts and graces are yours, faith, love, hope, fear, humility, patience, and all the fulneſs that is in Chriſt is yours; all theſe graces are yours as armour to defend you, jewels to enrich you, and cordials to refreſh you, while you ſojourn in the wilderneſs.

3dly, My creatures are yours. My creatures on earth are yours to ſerve and ſuſtain you, my angels in heaven are yours to guard and encamp about you. The earth is your walking and ſojourning place, the heavens your country and inheritance. In a word, O believer! my ordinances and ſacraments are yours, to ſtrengthen and feed you; my providence is yours, to make all things work for your good; my rod is yours; my people is yours; my kingdom is yours; nay, my eternal Son

Chriſt is yours; all he has done and ſuffered, even his whole purchaſe is yours: both things preſent and to come, life and death, this world and heaven, all are yours, 1 Cor. iii. 22. Behold as when there was a covenant made between Jehoſhaphat and the king of Iſrael, Jehoſhaphat promiſed Ahab whatever he had or could do, 1 Kings xxii. 4. I am, ſays he, as thou art, my people as thy people, my horſes as thy horſes; ſo in the covenant of grace, whatever God hath or can do, is made over to you. But what do I ſpeak? For no created mind can conceive, nor the tongues of men and angels, ſhew forth the full import of this word, 'I will be your God.'

III. The third thing propoſed was, to ſhew, how this privilege of having God for our God, in covenant, appears to be the top of our happineſs. And this doth evidently appear from theſe things.

I. From the vaſtneſs of the portion, which believers have in a covenanted God, as above deſcribed. There is more comprehended here, than eye hath ſeen, ear hath heard, or the heart of man can conceive. In this covenant of grace you have all that is good, all that is great, and all that can make you happy. You have covenant preſence, covenant proviſion, covenant conduct, covenant protection, covenant ſupport, and covenant ſtrength for all duties, trials and performances in this world: And you have eternal glory covenanted to you for the world to come. Now, can any thing be ſo ſatisfying to the renewed mind, as, to review this vaſt portion! It is pleaſant for a man to view his temporal intereſts, to walk about his buildings, plantings, gardens, flocks, fields, &c. But what are theſe to this portion of the believer? It was a raviſhing proſpect that Moſes got of Canaan from mount Nebo: How pleaſant was it to view the lovely hills, the fruitful vallies, the winding rivers, the beautiful gardens, and flouriſhing trees, in that incomparable land! But all that was nothing to the believer's covenanted inheritance. View the covenant, and ſee who can number the promiſes and bleſſings contained in it; time would fail to mention them: Read the ſcriptures from the beginning to the end, and behold a dazling and glorious ſight! As the heavens are beſpangled with ſtars in a winter night, ſo is God's word and covenant with ſhining promiſes. We may allude to that paſſage in God's covenanting with Abraham, Gen. xv. 5. God brought him forth abroad, and ſaid, Look now toward heaven, and tell the ſtars, if thou be able to number them; ſo ſhall thy ſeed be. Look, O believer, to the firmament of the covenant, and tell the ſtars of the promiſes, if thou be able to number or weigh them; ſo ſhall alſo the bleſſings and benefits be, which thou haſt to inherit.

II. To be in covenant with God, muſt be the top of our happineſs, if we conſider the ſuitableneſs of the promiſes, and bleſſings of his covenant to all our wants and exigencies. All that we ſtand in need of, and all we can deſire is fully provided for here. O believers, what want ye? What fear ye? What are ye troubled with? Here it may be ſuitably anſwered and remedied. Is ſin and guilt your trouble? In this covenant there is pardon and redemption. Are your ſins great? Here's the Redeemer's blood that cleanſeth from all ſin. Are ye condemned by the law's ſentence? Here's a ſufficient righteouſneſs for your juſtification and acquittance. Are you poor? Here's fine gold. Are you blind? Here's eye-ſalve. Are you naked? Here's white raiment. Are you ſtarving? Here's the manna and the fatted calf. Are you diſeaſed? Here's the balm of Gilead. Are you chained priſoners? Here's deliverance for the captives. Are you drown'd in debt? Here's an all-ſufficient Surety. Are you dead? Here's the reſurrection and the life. Is pollution and filthineſs your trouble? Here's a deep and open fountain that runs continually. Art thou weak and unable for duty? Here is covenanted grace and ſtrength, which ſhall be ſufficient for thee. This covenant contains all neceſſary and ſuitable ſupplies for thy wants; ſo that if God be your God, according to the tenor of the covenant of grace, your needs ſhall be richly ſupplied, according to that promiſe, Phil. iv. 19. My God ſhall ſupply all your needs, according to his riches in glory by Chriſt Jeſus.

III. This covenant-relation to God is our greateſt happineſs, in regard it doth take the terror out of every thing that is terrible to the believer.

1ſt, This covenant-relation removes all terror from our thoughts of God's holineſs and juſtice. The wicked cannot think of a juſt and holy God without horror, and therefore, they baniſh the thoughts of God out of their minds; hence it is ſaid, Pſal. x. 4. God is not in all their thoughts: For as many thoughts as are in their hearts, God is in none of them. But believers may have pleaſant and delightful thoughts of God, as their reconciled Father in Chriſt: his holineſs is a fountain of grace to them, and his juſtice the ſecurity of their happineſs. The covenant relation takes all terror out of juſtice, though the moſt terrible attribute of God unto a ſinner, and makes it, that before was an enemy, become a friend, and enter into a ſtrict alliance with the believer. Before it ſtood as a flaming ſword at the door of paradiſe to keep them out: But now it ſtands as an advocate pleading for their entrance. 1 John i. 9. He is faithful and juſt to forgive us our ſins. O believer, thy happineſs is certain; for juſtice is come over to thy ſide, and pleads for thy pardon, becauſe the debt is paid, and for the crown of glory, ſeeing the price is laid down.

2dly, This covenant-relation takes all terror out of afflictions: Why? It alters the very nature of them to believers, and makes them become good and medicinal to them, Pſal. cxix. 71. Iſa. xxvii. 9. Yea, they are changed into covenanted mercies, Pſal. lxxxix. 32. Pſal. cxix. 75. Chriſt hath ſhed his blood to purchaſe ſanctified croſſes to his people. So believers, whatever trials you meet with, though they be ſharp and ſmarting, you may make ſuch a reflection as this, The Lord ſees I want this, otherwiſe I ſhould not be exerciſed with it: My covenanted God knows that this, and no leſs than this is needful for me.

3dly, It takes the terror out of the alarming judgments of God, that come on the wicked and ungodly. When God riſes to take vengeance on his enemies, and puniſh ſinful nations with his deſolating plagues, you may ſay, Theſe are the mighty acts of my God and king: Theſe things diſplay my Father's power and glory: but in midſt of all, his children are ſafe.

4thly, It will take the terror out of death: for tho' death ſtrip you of other comforts, it cannot diſſolve your covenant-relation to God. You may ſing that ſwan-ſong, Pſal. xlviii. 14. For this God is our God for ever and ever, and he will be our guide even unto death. It is this that gives a believer peace in his latter end: it made David to triumph in the view of approaching death. 2 Sam. xxii. 5. Death muſt ſurely be the king of terrors to an unbeliever; why? It is terrible to think, "I am going to appear before that God I do not know, I have no intereſt in, nor acquaintance with: How can I expect help from him now, whom I never loved, nor ſought unto before?" But a covenanted ſoul may ſay, "I will not fear, for I know whither I am going, the place I know, and the way I know, and the God of that land I know. Why ſhould I be unwilling to go to my covenanted God and friend, with whom I have had ſweet converſe, whoſe preſence I earneſtly have longed for? Is not death my Father's ſervant, ſent to bring me home to my Father's houſe, where I will be put in full poſſeſſion of all the bleſſings of the covenant? Surely then the day of my death will be better to me than the day of my birth."

5thly, This covenant-relation takes the terror out of the great judgment day. Why? O believer, it is the day of your covenanted Redeemer's coming to take you home to dwell eternally with him. Doth not a chaſte wife long for the return of her huſband? And will not a believing ſoul, betrothed to Chriſt, long for the glorious bridegroom's return to conſummate the happy marriage? Let others tremble at his coming, and cry to the 'rocks to hide them from the face of the Lamb;' but ſurely you have cauſe to 'lift up your head with joy, for the day of your redemption draweth nigh.'

IV. This covenant-relation to God is our greateſt happineſs; for it doth exceedingly ſweeten every thing that is comfortable.

1ſt, It ſweetens the thoughts of Chriſt to a believer. When the word brings the news of his glory to your ears, or the ſacrament ſets him forth as crucified before your eyes, your hearts may preſently warm to him, and cry with Thomas, My Lord and my God! and with Paul, "It is the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me:" and with the ſpouſe, My beloved is mine, and I am his, "All he did and ſuffered was for me; his bloody ſweat, his painful wounds. his dying groans were for me. He thought on me, when he was on the croſs: my name is this day on his breaſtplate: he ſtill thinks on me, and pleads for me, as his covenanted ſpouſe. I know my Redeemer liveth; and becauſe he lives, I ſhall live alſo." Good ground have ye to ſay with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. civ. 34 "My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet; I will be glad in the Lord."

2dly, It will make goſpel ordinances very ſweet: As for inſtance, (1.) Prayer may be ſweet to a covenanted ſoul: Is it not ſweet to come into God's preſence, and call him our Father, and ſpeak to him as ſuch? "Father, grant me this and the other good thing which I want." An uncovenanted ſoul comes before God as his judge: But, O! it is comfortable to draw nigh to him as our reconciled God and Father in Chriſt, and with a holy confidence ſpread our wants before him. (2.) It will make the word ſweet; a covenanted ſoul may read, and hear it as a love-letter come from his friend and huſband, and may ſweetly apply the promiſe of it to himſelf, and ſay. This is mine; this was God's gracious unchangeable purpoſe to me in Chriſt; And O but that would make the word as a lovely ſong in our ears! (3.) It will make the Lord's ſupper ſweet. O covenanted ſouls, you can come to this holy table, as to a precious feaſt provided for you; you can come as God's friends and invited gueſts, and expect a kindly welcome from him: It is to you he ſaith, Eat, O friends, drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved, Cant. v. 1. This is your Father's table covered for you; many preſume thither who have no right; but you have no ground to queſtion your right, nor doubt your welcome: A communion-day may be a pleaſant day to you, and you may rejoice at the intimation and approach of it, and look on it as a foretaſte of heaven, and a pledge of your eternal communion with God.

3dly, This covenant-relation will ſweeten your thoughts of God's works, both of creation and providence. When you walk thro' the fields, you may ſay, I walk on my Father's footſtool, which he hath given me to ſojourn upon while I am here below. When you view the ſtructure of the heavens, you may ſay, Behold my Father's palace, where he dwells, and where I will dwell with him ere long: If the floor and pavement of it be ſo glorious, what muſt its roof, walls, gates and furniture be? Yet it is my home and dwelling place, prepared by Chriſt my forerunner. When you conſider the diſpenſations of providence and God's various dealings towards you, you may ſay, How great pains is he at with me to promote my welfare, and prepare me for heaven? Tho' diſpenſations be ſometimes myſterious now, yet how wiſe and beautiful will the whole ſcheme of providence concerning me appear in the iſſue?

4thly, It will ſweeten all your outward mercies: Why? you may receive them as love tokens from heaven, and pledges of God's fatherly good will to you in Chriſt. Art thou raiſed from a ſick-bed, or delivered from any trouble? you may ſay of it as Hezekiah did, Iſa. xxxviii. 17. Thou haſt in love to my ſoul, delivered it from the pit of corruption. Again, every meal of meat, or morſel of bread thou eateſt, may be doubly ſweet to you; for it is the fruit of Chriſt's purchaſe; it is dipt in his blood, and comes thro' the covenant-channel to thy hand: Thou mayſt ſpy covenant-love in every common mercy; thou enjoyeſt it not as a creature, but as an heir: Thy Father ſends it from his own table to thee, as an earneſt of greater and better things laid up for thee hereafter. That word belongs to thee, which we have in Eccl. ix. 7. Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works.

Laſtly, This covenant relation to God is our greateſt happineſs in regard of the ſure and indiſſoluble nature of it, Iſa. liv. 10 Mutable creatures alter their purpoſes, and break their leagues and covenants which they made; but God will never break his covenant of grace with his people. A covenant with a nation may be diſſolved, as with the people of the Jews, becauſe it is not built on the eternal purpoſe of God, to put his fear in their hearts; but it hath a reſpect to their obedience. But his covenant with the elect is indiſſoluble, ſeeing it depends on God's eternal purpoſe, to make them perſevere in his ways. The covenant of grace doth not run thus, I will be their God, if they will be my people: but I will be their God and they ſhall be my people. He puts a condition indeed in this covenant of grace; but he has reſolved and decreed from eternity, to work that condition in their hearts, Jer. xxxii. 40. I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. There we ſee, that God is on both ſides in this covenant, he engages not only for his own part, but for ours, that we ſhall fear him, and ſhall not depart from him. How happy then are believers who are in covenant with God! They are a happy people; and nothing can deprive them of their happineſs. Adultery may diſſolve the marriage covenant among men, but not ſo here; for God ſaith to his covenanted people, "Thou haſt played the harlot with many lovers, yet return again unto me: Turn ye backſliding children, ſaith the Lord; for I am married unto you," Jer. iii. 1.—14. Again, death cannot diſſolve this covenant-relation, as it doth among men; but brings us the nearer to our covenanted God; ſo that a covenanted ſoul, when he finds death begin to aſſault his clay-tabernacle, he may even rejoice, and ſing with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxiii. 26. My fleſh and my heart faileth, but God is the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever. What tho' my eye and heart-ſtrings be ready to break, and the lamp of my life be like a candle burnt to the ſocket, and near the going out; yet ſtill God is my God, and portion for ever. Thus Olevian, a dying ſaint, comforted himſelf, "My hearing is gone, my ſmelling is gone, and my ſight is going: my ſpeech and feeling are almoſt gone; but the loving kindneſs of God is ſtill the ſame, and will never depart from me."

APPLICATION.

Uſe I. Of Information. We may hence ſee, 1ſt, How far miſtaken the world is about a believer's lot; they many times reckon them poor and deſpicable, and the off-ſcouring of all things; but certainly they are, of all perſons in the world, the wiſeſt; for they make the wiſeſt choice, and the beſt bargain: Nay, they are the richeſt too, for all things are theirs; tho' they oft ſeem to the world to have nothing, 2 Cor. vi. 10.

2dly, We may hence infer, that believers have no ground to envy the worldling of his portion, but rather to pity him; for he hath no more than what is ſeen by all, and that but for a ſhort time, Pſal. xvii. 14. Luke vi. 24. A carnal man may ſay, This houſe, this eſtate, this money is mine; but a Chriſtian can ſay, This God is mine. And a covenanted God is more than ten thouſand kingdoms.

Uſe II. Of Terror, to thoſe that are out of the bond of this covenant: For if the people be ſo happy, whoſe God is the Lord, how unhappy and miſerable muſt they be, whoſe God is not the Lord: Nay, your caſe is unſpeakably ſad and diſmal; and O! that God would ſend a wakening word to all ſuch, and ſound an alarm in your ears this day."

1ſt, You have neither art nor part in the God of Iſrael, Eph. ii. 12. He ſtands in no relation to you, but that of Creator, and ſo ſtands he to the devils: But what comfort can they draw from that? for "he that made them, will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them, will ſhew them no favour.

2dly, You are under a covenant of works, and under its fearful curſe and ſentence for the breach thereof. It is terrible to be under ſentence of death by an earthly judge, and to be looking every hour to be taken forth to the ſcaffold: But your caſe is far worſe; you are doomed to eternal death, and you may be looking every moment to be led forth to execution. When you awake in the morning, you may ſay, Shall this be the day of my execution? ſhall I be taken to the ſcaffold of divine vengeance before night? Every head-ach or ſick-heart, every pain or ſtich in back or breaſt, may put you to ſay, Is this the meſſenger that the Judge is to ſend to bring me forth? Sad is your caſe, O uncovenanted ſoul, you may ſleep and wake in continual fear; for you are ſtill tottering on the brink of hell, and ridge of deſtruction. O! tremble then to ly down another night in this condition. In the name of God, I obteſt you to awake from ſleep and find no reſt for the ſole of your foot, till, like Noah's dove, ye come into the ark of the covenant.

Uſe III. Of Examination. O communicants, try if ye be within this covanant; remember, if you be not, you have no right to the ſeals of it; no right to ſit down at the Lord's table. Let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat: And examine yourſelves by theſe marks.

1ſt, Know you any thing of a change of your ſtate? Can you ſay? 'Once I was a bond ſlave to ſatan, and ' an enemy of God: once I loved ſin, and hated holi' neſs: but now God has opened my eyes, and hum' bled my heart for ſin, and made me caſt down the ' weapons of my rebellion at his feet: once I was at ' peace without Chriſt the Mediator; but now I ſee ' nothing but fire and wrath out of him: once I thought ' little of ſin; but now I ſee it to be the moſt black ' and bloody thing in the world:' Then this is a good ſign.

2dly, If you be in covenant with God you will certainly love God with your hearts, and love the Mediator who brought you into the covenant. Can you ſay then with Peter, Lord thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee? Lord, tho' I cannot hear, pray, praiſe, or communicate as I ought, yet thou knoweſt I love thee; yea, I love thee above all things. And tho' all the riches, honours, and pleaſures of the world were in my offer or poſſeſſion, and Chriſt would ſay, You muſt either part with theſe, or part with me; my heart would anſwer, Lord abide thou with me, and let them all be gone.

3dly, Theſe that are in covenant with God, have certainly made choice of God, as their God, and portion. Can you ſay you have done this, O doubting communicant? Tho' you cannot ſay, that God hath choſen you, yet doth your heart truly chuſe him? And are you reſolved never to be ſatisfied without him? And whatever offers be made to you, yet you will be put off with nothing beſides God. Then this may give you comfort.

4thly, Can you ſay you have made a reſignation of yourſelves, and of all you have to God, and you reſolve to renew it again this night in ſecret, and to-morrow before men and angels? Then it is a token for good. It may be doubting ſoul, thou art fear'd to ſay, Lord, thou art my God; but canſt thou venture to ſay, 'Lord, I am thine, I reſolve to be thine, and ' thine only; I will not be mine own, I will not be the 'devil's, I will not be the world's, I will not be my 'luſt's; Lord, I am reſolved to be none's but thine.' Well, let this comfort you when other marks cannot. For if once you come the length to ſay, Lord, I am thine, you may ſay in the next place, Lord, thou art mine; for the relation is always reciprocal: And this is the reaſoning of the ſpouſe, Cant. vi. 3. I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine.

5thly, Are you mightily pleaſed with the contrivement and deſign of this covenant, which is to debaſe ſelf, and exalt free grace? And would you deſire heaven, tho' it were for no more, but to ſtand eternal monuments of free grace, and join your note with the redeemed, eternally to cry, 'Not unto us, not unto 'us, but to thee be the glory?'

And, Laſtly, Are you inclined to perform covenant-duties conſcientiouſly, and that in a covenant way, relying on covenant-ſtrength, and from a principle of love and gratitude to your covenanted God, and with an eye to glorify his name: Then fear not to come forward to take the ſeal of the covenant, for you belong to it.

Uſe IV. Of Exhortation. And this I ſhall direct to all that hear the goſpel, eſpecially communicants. O come take hold of God's covenant, and enter yourſelves within the bond of it; and then come and take God's ſeal to the bargain. I here, in my great Lord and Maſter's name, make offer of God's covenant to all of you, be what you will, goſpel-ſlighters, rebels againſt God, graceleſs and profane ſinners, carnal and earthly minded ſouls, hypocrites, formaliſts, backſliders, weary and heavy laden ſinners, doubting and diſcouraged ſouls; I exhort and beſeech you all to come and take hold of God's covenant, make choice of God for your God and portion, and Jeſus Chriſt for your Mediator and Peace-maker with God, and reſign yourſelves freely to God in Chriſt. O ſinners, the covenant is free, the call is preſſing, the offer is great, the bargain excellent.

This is the moſt honourable and advantageous bargain that ever you made; the deſign of my whole ſermon has been to recommend it, and perſuade you to cloſe with it: God knows how your hearts ſtand inclined. But I would have you all to remember that our time is ſhort, and the hour is coming, when we that are miniſters muſt leave this work of beſeeching, preſſing and arguing with you, and go to him that ſent us, with a faithful account of the iſſue of our meſſage. And O how ſad and unpleaſant will the account be that we muſt give of theſe of you whom we leave unperſuaded to take hold of God's covenant. It will be a melancholy thing, and matter of grief, to accuſe any of you to the Father; but we muſt do it, if you will not prevent it by your hearkening and obeying. If you do it not in time, as God is in heaven, you will eternally repent it; I do here warn you of your danger, and call heaven and earth to record againſt you that I am free of your blood. O young people! what ſay ye to it? Will ye take hold of the covenant? Your baptiſm will not profit you, unleſs now when ye are of age ye ratify your parents deed, renew your baptiſmal engagements, and perſonally join yourſelves unto the Lord in a perpetual covenant. If ye approach to the Lord's table without doing it, you will be unworthy communicants, you will be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, you will but mock God and deceive your own ſouls. I have not time to anſwer objections againſt covenanting with God; I ſhall only ſpeak to one queſtion, and then conclude.

Queſt. But you may ſay, what would you have us doing, in order to our being brought into God's covenant? We would gladly be among the number of that happy people, whoſe God is the Lord, and who are in covenant with him; but we know not how to get into it.

Anſ. Surely the ſoul is not wholly paſſive in this tranſaction, but muſt be active in it. Something is to be done on our part, when we enter into covenant with God; and therefore we are called to join ourſelves unto the Lord in a perpetual covenant, Jer. l. 5. I do not mean, that we can do any thing to enter ourſelves into covenant with God in our own ſtrength; no, it is God by his Spirit that worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleaſure. The duty is ours, but the work is the Spirit's. It is the Spirit that courts the heart, and prevails with the ſoul to give its conſent to this bleſſed bargain. But, in the mean time, let us be minting at our duty as we can, looking for the Spirit's concurrence. And there are four things to be done by us, in order to our being in covenant with God, and God help every communicant to aim ſincerely at them this night. 1. Renunciation. 2. Acceptation. 3. Dedication. 4. Solemn engagement.

1ſt, You muſt heartily renounce and break league with all the Lord's enemies and rivals, Hoſ. xiv. 8. and particularly renounce, (1.) Satan's government; tho' formerly you was led captive by him at his will, yet now ſolemnly renounce all ſubjection to him, and hearken no more to his ſuggeſtions and temptations, let God alone have the throne. (2.) Renounce the world, be no more a ſlave to it as you have been; ſet your heart no longer on its profits and pleaſures, as your portion and inheritance; but make God your treaſure. (3.) Renounce the fleſh; however its luſts have been beloved by you, let them reign no more in you; but condemn them to be crucified as the murderers of Chriſt. (4.) Renounce your own righteouſneſs in point of juſtification and acceptance with God, and ſolemnly diſclaim all truſt and confidence in your own duties and performances.

2dly, Acceptation. Heartily aim at to make choice, and accept of God in Chriſt, as your ſoul's portion and inheritance, Pſal. lxxiii. 25. But obſerve, how God is to be choſen, only in and through Chriſt the Mediator; for 'out of Chriſt he is a conſuming fire;' therefore accept of precious Chriſt as your guide and way to the Father, and of his ſatisfaction and merits, as the ranſom for delivering you from wrath. Accept of the Holy Ghoſt as your ſanctifier, quickener and comforter; and heartily acquieſce in the covenant of grace, and goſpel method of ſalvation thro' Chriſt, as well ordered in all things.

3dly, Dedication. As God gives himſelf wholly to you, ſo do you dedicate and give up yourſelves, and all that you have, wholly and unreſervedly to God, 2 Chron. xxx. 8. Give up your ſouls with all their powers and faculties; your bodies with all their ſenſes and members; and all your enjoyments temporal and ſpiritual, to be employed for God and his honour, and to be entirely diſpoſed of for his ſervice and glory.

4thly, Solemn engagement. You muſt reſolve and engage, in the ſtrength of Chriſt our Surety, to live wholly to your covenanted God, and walk with him in newneſs of life, perform every duty he commands, ſuffer patiently what he inflicts, watch againſt every ſin he forbids, and manfully fight againſt his enemies. Thus be aiming at your duty, and lay yourſelves in the Spirit's way, and who knows but God will pity and help you, honeſtly to take hold of his covenant, and alſo himſelf ſay Amen to the bargain. The Lord bleſs his word. Amen.

SERMON XV.

A Preparation Sermon before the communion.

The right Improvement of the day of grace.

Heb. iii. 7, 8. Wherefore, as the Holy Ghoſt ſaith, to day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts as in the provocation, &c.

IN this chapter, the apoſtle doth diſplay ſomething of the Mediator's glory and excellency; he ſhews, that he is far preferable to Moſes, as much as the builder of the houſe is greater than the houſe; and that he alone is the eternal Son of God, the great prophet and teacher of his church. And having laid down ſeveral propoſitions to this purpoſe, he comes to draw an inference from them in the words of my text, Wherefore, &c. As if he had ſaid, ſeeing Chriſt, is the chief apoſtle and prophet of his church, a teacher ſent from God to intruct the world; it is therefore our indiſpenſible duty to hear his voice, comply with his counſels, and that without delay; and this exhortation the apoſtle ſtrengthens with that of David, Pſal. xcv. 7.

In the words we have, 1ſt, The illative particle, Wherefore, which denotes the deduction of the enſuing exhortation from the preceding diſcourſe. 2dly, We have the authority which the apoſtle cites for his exhortation, even that of the Holy Ghoſt, who of old ſpake by David, Pſal. xcv. and now ſpeaketh by him in the text. 3dly, In the exhortation, we have a duty required of us, viz. hearing of Chriſt's voice, Hear his voice; not the voice of a meer man, not the voice of an apoſtle or angel, but of the eternal Son of God, that glorious ambaſſador of heaven, who was ſent to the world for advancing a treaty of peace; his voice we are to hear, his inſtructions and calls we are to comply with. 4thly, We have the circumſtance of time, and ſpecial ſeaſon when this duty is to be done, and that is preſently, today, or in this ſolemn day of grace. 5thly, We have, in the following verſe, a cautionary direction to all that ſit under the goſpel, to beware of hardening their hearts, or ſtoping their ears againſt Chriſt's calls, as the obſtinate and hard hearted Jews did in the wilderneſs.

DOCT. I. That the conſideration of the authority of the Holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in the ſcripture, ſhould mightily enforce upon us the duties their exhorted. We ſhould conſider whoſe authority we deſpiſe, when we ſlight the offers, calls, and duties preſſed in the goſpel, even that of the Holy Ghoſt; and it is a fearful thing to ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

DOCT. II That the voice which we are called to hear in and by the goſpel, is Chriſt's voice; it is not the voice of a man like ourſelves, but the voice of the Son of God, and therefore ſhould be awfully regarded. But the doctrine which I intend to handle at this time, ſhall be drawn chiefly from the ſeaſon of preſſing this duty.

DOCT. III. That all who ſit under the goſpel, ſhould be careful to improve the ſeaſons of grace, and opportunities of hearing Chriſt's voice, which God allows them.

In handling this doctrine, I ſhall ſhew,

I. What is implied in hearing of Chriſt's voice in the goſpel.

II. That there are ſome ſpecial ſeaſons for hearing of Chriſt's voice, and what theſe are.

III. How we ought to improve theſe ſeaſons.

IV. Reaſons why we ſhould carefully improve them.

V. I ſhall apply the whole.

I. As to the Firſt, What is imported in hearing of Chriſt's voice in the goſpel. I ſhall not inſiſt on what is preſuppoſed in it, viz. That our ears are naturally ſtopped againſt Chriſt; and it is only a work of his power on the ſoul that can open them; but ſhew what it directly implies.

1ſt, This hearing doth import, our believing the word to be Chriſt's voice, and not the voice of man. As long as we regard what we hear, only as the voice of a miniſter, or man like ourſelves, it will never humble us, nor prevail with our ſtubborn hearts; but when we begin to take it up as the voice of God, or Chriſt ſpeaking to us from heaven, then the ſoul doth hearken, conſider, and obey. Till Samuel knew that it was the Lord's voice ſpeaking to him, 1 Sam. i. he ſtill took the wrong courſe: he went to Eli, when he ſhould have hearkned to God.

2dly, A cloſe and ſerious attention of the mind to what we hear. The ſoul that hears Chriſt's voice ſtops his career in pruſuing ſin and the world which always makes a buzzing noiſe about his ears; and applies his ear to hear what Chriſt ſaith; turns attentive to, and ſerious about the things of eternity.

3dly, The application of what Chriſt ſaith unto us in particular: As if Chriſt ſpoke to us by name and firname, and ſaid to us, as Nathan did to David, "Thou art the man." We commonly neglect what Chriſt ſaith by his word, by putting it by ourſelves to others; but we hear him aright, when we bring what he ſaith cloſe home to our own hearts and conſciences, and ſay, "It "is to me this word is directed; it is me that Chriſt in"tends, it is I that the law condemns, and that juſtice "threatens. I am the guilty ſinner that have ſhut out "Chriſt, and preferred my luſts to him, and yet he "now pities me, and calls me to open to him."

4thly, A thorough conviction of the neceſſity and advantage of yielding to Chriſt's calls; O! ſaith the ſoul, long hath my Saviour knocked, ſaying, "Open to me, riſe and come away," and yet I have ſit ſtill, and given him a deaf ear; but now I ſee I am loſt, undone and condemned in my preſent caſe; if death knock before I open to Chriſt, I can look for nothing but the bottomleſs pit to open and ſwallow me up for ever. But if I open to Chriſt, I am happy, and out of the reach of wrath for ever.

5thly, It imports, the ſoul's cordial complying with Chriſt's calls, and conſenting to receive and embrace him as he is offered in the goſpel; that is to ſay, as a prophet to teach us, a prieſt to atone for us, and a king to rule us. The man that hears Chriſt's voice, goes in heartily with the goſpel-method of ſalvation, acquieſces in that noble contrivance of grace, is well content to be juſtified by Chriſt's righteouſneſs, to be taught at Chriſt's ſchool and governed by his laws.

II. The ſecond thing to be diſcourſed is, That there are ſome ſpecial ſeaſons for hearing Chriſt's voice, that ſhould be carefully improven; and what theſe are. There are ſome advantageous opportune ſeaſons of grace, wherein God is ready to receive and entertain us, which are called in ſcripture an accepted time, and day of ſalvation, 2 Cor. vi. 2. an accepted time, i. e. a time well pleaſing to God. A day of ſalvation, i. e. a day wherein the improvers of it may get ſalvation begun in pardoning and ſanctifying grace; and eternal ſalvation completed in heaven, made ſure to them. Now ſuch times and ſeaſons ſhould be carefully managed, that they be not loſt, as alas they are to many. I ſhall mention ſome of theſe ſeaſons.

I. The preſent time, when you have the goſpel ordinances, and health and ſtrength to attend them: That is a ſeaſon carefully to be improven; and hence the Spirit of God ſaith ſo frequently, yea, no leſs than three times in this 3d chapter of the epiſtle to the Hebrews, To-day, to-day, to day, God cries to you, To-day hear my voice; but ſatan ſays to you, To morrow is time enough. But ſurely, God's ſeaſon is the beſt. O ſinner! to-day thou art in health, to-morrow thou mayeſt be in ſickneſs: To day thou art living, to-morrow thou mayeſt be dying: To-day thou art on earth, to-morrow thou mayeſt be in hell: To-day Chriſt is ſmiling and inviting you to come unto him, but to morrow he may be frowning, and ſentencing you to depart from him, never to return again. And ſhould not the preſent time, then, when you enjoy ordinances, and health to attend them, be duly improven?

II. The time of youth is a ſpecial ſeaſon of grace, Eccl. xii. 1. Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth; O young folk, this is an accepted time, and a day of ſalvation: It is a moſt advantageous opportunity for hearkening to Chriſt's voice; for, 1ſt, Now the heart is ſooner affected and melted for ſin, than afterwards; for old age turns ſtiff and inflexible. The branches of a young tree will bow, and train up any way, but when old they will not ply. 2dly, Now you have not ſuch ſins to burden the conſcience, harden the heart, and hinder you from coming to Chriſt, as you will have afterwards. 3dly, Now your minds and thoughts are more free of cares and anxieties about the world, than they will be afterwards: and ſo more fit for cloſing and tranſacting with Chriſt in the goſpel. 4thly, It is a ſeaſon that God eſpecially regards. Under the law, he required the firſt fruits as his portion, and would have all the ſacrifices that were offered to him, to be young, and in their ſtrength, Exod. xxiii. 19. Lev. ii. 14. And ſtill he loves the ſeaſon of youth, and remembers the kindneſs of youth long afterwards, Eccl. xii. 1. Jer. ii. 2, 3. The mourning, praying and praiſing of young folk, is the moſt melodious muſic in God's ears: Wherefore, let the precious ſeaſon of youth be diligently improven. Are there not ſome young communicants here? O! improve this day of ſalvation, a time of youth is the moſt uſual ſeaſon of converſion, and acquaintance with Chriſt. If you look through the land, among the people of God, you will perhaps find ſcarce one of a hundred, but will date his coverſion, and firſt cloſing with Chriſt from the time of youth. If a tree do not bud or bloſſom, when young, it is a ſign that it is barren, and will not bear at all afterwards. O then! now in the days of youth lay a ſure foundation ſtone; take heed to your firſt communicating; ſtrive for heart-ſincerity in hearing Chriſt's voice, cloſing with the goſpel-offer, and covenanting with God.

III. A ſeaſon when people enjoy plenty and purity of goſpel ordinances with peace and ſafety, ought carefully to be improven. And now you have ſuch a ſeaſon, you have plenty of miniſters, plenty of ſermons, ſacraments, ſolemn calls, free offers, faithful warnings, earneſt intreaties, and powerful perſuaſions, and none to make you afraid. It is propheſied of the goſpel times, Pſal. lxviii. 11. That the Lord ſhall give the word, and great ſhall be the company of them that publiſh it. Now you have many faithful labourers; in every pariſh you have ſuch as publiſh the word, and preach the glad tidings of reconciliation: Many a time have you Chriſt crucified ſet forth before your eyes in the Lord's ſupper; and again, the Lord is to give you in this place a new occaſion for it. Theſe are precious ſeaſons, which our fathers ſometimes would have prized at a high rate; when they were put to ſeek their ſpiritual bread with the peril of their lives, becauſe of the ſword in the wilderneſs. The Lord hath made his arm bare in behalf of the goſpel: He hath diſabled its enemies, ſettled the ark in its place, and ſtill continues plenty of pure ordinances, maugre all the contrivances and attempts of enemies for their oppreſſion. O! for hearts to value and improve ſuch precious opportunities.

IV. A time when God gives a people providential warnings, to awaken and excite them to attend his word and ordinances, is a ſeaſon to be improven. God hath oft threatened us with a bloody ſword; and now he is threatening us with the approaching of the peſtilence; that waſting ſtroke that lays heaps upon heaps, makes death to ride in triumph thro' the ſtreets. Many warnings of approaching judgments have we formerly miſimproven; and therefore, God may come upon us unawares, and ſurprize us with his judgments without warning. Well, while God is taking pains on us, and giving us warning at a diſtance, let us improve the ſeaſon by hearkening to Chriſt's voice in the goſpel. Let us be moved with fear, (like Noah) and provide an ark for the ſaving of our ſouls, before the flood of wrath approach. Nay, bleſſed be God, the ark is prepared to our hand, and there is a window opened in the ſide thereof for our enterance: let us take the wings of faith, and fly thither without delay.

V. A time when the inward workings of the Spirit on the conſcience, concur with the external diſpenſation of the word and ſacraments, is a ſpecial ſeaſon to be improven. It is then, that a great and effectual door is opened both to miniſters and people. Paul had this door opened to him at Epheſus, amongſt many adverſaries, 1 Cor. xvi. 9. Oh if it were ſo with us, we needed not fear all that adverſaries can do againſt the goſpel. But we have it to regret, that tho' God hath outwardly reſtrained adverſaries, yet a great and effectual door is not opened to us: Still the door is ſtrait both for miniſters and people: God's Spirit is greatly reſtrained in our day. If it be aſked, When is it that a wide or effectual door is opened? Anſ. It is only when the Spirit of God is poured out in a plentiful way, both on miniſters and people. When God's Spirit was thus poured out after Chriſt's aſcenſion, then both the graces and the gifts of the Spirit were communicated in a plentiful meaſure. Then miniſters had great light of knowledge and underſtanding, as well as the heat of zeal and love. It was eaſy for them to ſtudy and preach, they had clear uptakings of the matters of God, and a great readineſs and liberty of expreſſion. Their hearts were enlarged, their minds enlightened, their memories were ſtrengthened, and they had a door of utterance opened, i. e. a great facility in declaring of their minds; they were no way ſtraitened for proper matter or fit words; their hearts indited godly things, and their tongues were as the pen a of ready writer. Thus it is ſtill, when the Spirit of God is remarkably poured out: then the preaching of the goſpel is both pleaſant and powerful; miniſters are warmed, and peoples hearts are melted; miniſters mouths are opened, and peoples appetites enlarged. There is ſuch a thing as the Spirit of God his ſtriving with the hearts and conſciences of hearers, in and by the word, Gen. vi. 3. And when he thus ſtrives, it makes an effectual door, and a ſpecial ſeaſon of ſalvation. When the Spirit moves the waters of the ſanctuary, people ſhould not neglect then to ſtep in, and be healed. Take heed you do not ſlight the ſtrivings of God's Spirit with you in any meaſure, leſt you provoke God to paſs ſuch a dreadful ſentence againſt you, as that Gen. vi. 3. "My ſpirit ſhall no longer ſtrive with you." And if you loſe the precious ſeaſon of the Spirit's ſtriving, you perhaps will never recover it again.

Queſt. When is it that the Spirit of God ſtrives with ſinners, in and by the goſpel?

Anſ. 1*ſt*, When he opens the eyes, and gives the man a diſcovery of his ſinful and miſerable ſtate by nature, and of the evil, hainouſneſs and danger of his ſins; and ſo rivets and faſtens conviction on the heart and conſcience, that the arrows of the threatenings do ſtick, and the man is brought to thoughtfulneſs and anxiety about his future ſtate; and hence is made to cry, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? O! that is a ſeaſon which ought to be carefully improven.

2*dly*, The Spirit ſtrives, by making a man wholly diſſatisfied with his preſent ſtate, and all his earthly enjoyments, as long as he is in the dark about his ſoul's ſalvation. Tho' he may be in outward proſperity, he ſays, All theſe things avail me nothing, while I am ready to be ſwallowed up by the wrath of God for ſin; ſurely there is no living, no abiding in this ſtate I am in. I am ſhut up in the priſon of unbelief, and the houſe is all on fire about my ears, I muſt break priſon, and make my eſcape, otherwiſe I am undone for ever.

3*dly*, By making the man deſpair of help and deliverance by any thing in himſelf. Oh, ſaith he, I am a poor, miſerable, helpleſs creature! Neither my doing, nor ſuffering, can free me from wrath. I know no courſe, no contrivance of my own that can relieve me. My relief muſt certainly come from another airth; for I can never work it for myſelf.

4*thly*, By humbling the man to the duſt for ſin, particularly for miſpending time, neglecting prayer, miſimproving ſermons, profaning ſabbaths and ſacraments, &c. O! ſays he, is there any creature more vile than I? Surely there is no toad more loathſome, no carrion more offenſive, no puddle more unclean than my ſoul before God. Can ever the arms of mercy open to embrace ſuch a monſter of ſin as I have been? This is a choice ſeaſon, which ſhould be well improven.

5*thly*, By giving ſome light into the underſtanding, concerning the remedy provided for loſt ſinners. The ſoul begins, by the word, to diſcover ſomething of the fulneſs and ability of Chriſt, as a Saviour, ſo that it is made to think there is hope in Iſrael concerning this matter: My caſe, ſays the ſinner, is not ſo bad as the devils, for whom no remedy was ever provided.

6*thly*, By working ſome purpoſes and inclinations in the will toward the offered remedy; ſo that the ſoul makes its aims at Chriſt: Yea, is content to take any courſe for an intereſt in him. And therefore ſays oft with Paul, Acts ix. 6. Lord what wilt thou have me to do? What method ſhall I take to be found in Chriſt, not having my own righteouſneſs?

7*thly*, By determining the ſoul to a conſcientious and diligent uſe of the means, for getting Chriſt, and ſalvation through him.

8*thly*, By making a ſtir and commotion among the affections, and exciting earneſt and paſſionate deſires after Chriſt and ſalvation thro' him: So that the ſoul is made to ſay, O that I knew where I might find him! O! when wilt thou come unto me? I will ſpare no pains to get a meeting with him, I will ſeek him thro' the ſtreets and broad ways, and all the lanes of the city, crying, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth?

Now when the Spirit ſtrives with any of you, in any meaſure, it is a precious ſeaſon of grace, that ſhould be carefully obſerved and improven.

III. The third thing in my general method is to ſhew, how theſe ſeaſons of grace ought to be improven by us.

1*ſt*, By highily valuing and admiring the diſtinguiſhing goodneſs of God, in affording us ſuch days of grace and ſalvation. He deals not ſo with other nations, Jews, Pagans, Mahometans, and Papiſts, have not the goſpel light, and offers of grace which you have. Be thankful to God, eſpecially you that have more ſpecial and remarkable ſeaſons beyond others: You that have health and ſtrength, and youth on your ſide; you that have the Spirit of God ſtriving with you in the ordinances, your eyes opened, hearts melted, conſciences awakened, affections moved; O bleſs God for his diſtinguiſhing mercies.

2*dly*, By believing firmly what Chriſt ſaith to you by the word, and attending carefully to it. Why? It is the word of the living God, more true, certain, and immovable than the foundations of the earth: Nay, heaven and earth both will ſooner paſs away, than one jot or one title of his word fall to the ground. Let your ears then be ſtopped againſt all the calls and ſolicitations of ſin, ſatan, and the world; and open only to precious Chriſt, ſaying with the Pſalmiſt, I will hear what God the Lord will ſpeak.

3*dly*, By applying cloſely to yourſelves what Chriſt ſaith, and meditating on it afterwards. When you hear any ſin threatened you are guilty of, or any duty preſſed that you neglect; bring that word cloſe home to your hearts, and ſay, This word is to me, let me not forget it. O let it abide with me when I go home, when I eat and drink, when I ly down and riſe up, when I go out and come in. Still think, you hear Chriſt's word ſounding in your ears, and that you hear him crying, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, ariſe from the dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee light. Open the door of thy heart, and let me in. Riſe up, my love, my fair one, and come away. Why do you weary my patience, and let me ſtand ſo long neglected, till my head is wet with the dew, and my locks with the drops of the night?

4thly, By labouring to give kindly entertainment to the word, and the motions of Chriſt's Spirit on thy ſoul, preſently ſtriking in with conviction, ſubmitting to reproofs, and harkening to his counſels, ſaying with Samuel, Speak, Lord, for thy ſervant heareth. Say not to the Spirit's motions and ſtrivings with thee, as Felix did to Paul, Go thy way for this time, and when I have a convenient ſeaſon, I will call for thee. No, no, but forthwith give ear, yield and comply with the Spirit's ſtrivings, and Chriſt's voice: Be content immediately to have thy ſores launced, and thy wounds ſearched to the bottom; and when conviction and ſoul trouble for ſin is begun, go not to ſtifle or quench it, or ſeek haſtily to pluck God's arrows out of thy conſcience; but cheriſh and entertain the work of God's Spirit, by meditating on thy ſin, conſidering thy loſt eſtate by nature, thy inſufficiency to help thyſelf, together with the excellency and ſuitableneſs of the remedy which God has provided.

5thly, By frequent and fervent application to the throne of grace, begging for Chriſt's ſake, that God may both begin and finiſh his work in the ſoul. Acknowledge that you are able of yourſelves to do nothing, and that it is by his grace only you can be ſaved; and when he begins by conviction be thankful to him, and intreat, that theſe ſparks kindled by the breath of God, may not be ſmothered, but blown up into a flame: And ſtill remember that the work is God's, though it be your duty to be caſting on fuel by prayer and meditation; yet the ſparks that kindle the fire come from God's altar; the breath that blows it comes from heaven. Pray therefore, that the fire may come down, even a live-coal from the altar, and that heaven's wind may blow on thy ſoul. Cry with the ſpouſe, Awake, O north-wind, and come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out. Let the north-winds of the law come, and convince, and awaken; and the ſouth winds of the goſpel come, and refreſh, and comfort. Be earneſt, O convinced ſinner, in deprecating God's taking away his Spirit from you; make it a part of your daily prayer, to cry with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. li. 11. Lord, take not thy holy Spirit from me. Lord forbid the new creature be ſtifled in the womb. O do thou quicken and preſerve it. Let theſe convictions terminate in my converſion here, and ſalvation hereafter. Lord! thou art a rock, thy work is perfect; haſt thou begun, and wilt thou not alſo make an end? O! ſuffer not theſe tender fruits to be nipped in the bud, or blaſted in the bloſſom, either by ſatan's froſt-winds, or the world's chilling blaſts: But, O! preſerve them to maturity, to the praiſe and glory of thy grace.

IV. The next thing is, the reaſons of the doctrine; why we ſhould ſo carefully improve our ſeaſons of grace.

1ſt, Becauſe God looks for it, and expects it at our hand. When God plants trees in his vineyard, waters and takes pains on them, he looks for fruit from them, Luke xiii. We ſee what the Lord ſays of Judah, Iſa. v. 1, 2. My well beloved (i. e. Chriſt) hath a vineyard (i. e. the church of the Jews) in a very fruitful hill: (i. e. a good ſoil, furniſhed with all poſſible means to make it fruitful:) And he fenced it, (i. e. protected it by his providence, from the incurſion of enemies) he gathered out the ſtones thereof, (i. e. removed out of it whatever was noxious or hurtful, perhaps the idol gods, put theſe out of the land) he planted it with the choiceſt vine: (i. e. with pure ordinances, and inſtitutions of worſhip, good government and diſcipline:) He built a tower in the midſt of it, (i. e. for its defence, viz. the ſtrong city of Jeruſalem in midſt of the land which was built as a city compact together, whither the tribes went up for worſhip) Alſo he made a wine-preſs therein; (i. e. the temple and altar continually running with the blood of the ſacrifices.) Now after all it is ſaid, He looked that it ſhould bring forth grapes, which doth not import that God was uncertain of the event; but denotes what is juſt and equal, and what in ſuch caſes ought to be. Surely a vineyard, ſo attended and furniſhed, ought to bring forth fruit, anſwerable to all the acts of God's care and grace towards it.

And to bring the matter home to our caſe, God hath been at ſpecial care to plant a vineyard in this land: We have a good ſoil, well fenced, the ſtones gathered out, idolatry and ſuperſtition removed, a choice vine planted, pure ordinances ſet up, enemies diſabled that laid it waſte. God has built towers, and made wine-preſſes to us, viz. the ſacraments, and eſpecially the Lord's ſupper, where the blood of Chriſt, our great ſacrifice, doth run plentifully to us, for pardon, healing, and waſhing. Now, doth not God look for grapes? Is it not juſt that we ſhould bring forth fruit, anſwerable to all theſe privileges? Alas! for the moſt part, there is nothing but wild grapes with us; little ſuitable fruit of our ſolemn communion-days. You may ſee, what is the reſult of fruſtrating the divine expectations, Iſa. v. 5, 6. Nothing but blaſting, withering, ruin and deſolation.

2dly, Becauſe of the ſhortneſs and uncertainty of the ſeaſon of grace: None can tell how long it will laſt. You cannot promiſe it will continue as long as your lives, (tho' even theſe be moſt uncertain.) No; your ſpecial ſeaſon and day of grace may end this very day, or at this communion-occaſion, tho' you ſhould happen to live many years after this. It is likely, God is ſaying to ſome hearing me, To day hearken to my voice, repent, and cloſe with Chriſt my Son, or be henceforth hardened and undone for ever. O ſinner, this night thy day of grace may ceaſe; God may this day cauſe ſome of your hearts to warm by the word, others to tremble, others to mourn, others to purpoſe and reſolve. Well, if you do not lay hold on, and improve this ſeaſon, and hearken to Chriſt's voice, you may never get the like occaſion again; nay, even tho' you ſhould wiſh for it, Chriſt ſaith, Luke xvii. 22. The time ſhall come, when you ſhall deſire to ſee one of the days of the Son of man, and ſhall not ſee it. This may be one of the days of the Son of man to you; for now Chriſt is offering himſelf, and preſſing ſalvation on you, and ſtriving by his Spirit (I hope) with ſome of you. Well, if you neglect to open your hearts to Chriſt this day, God may ſet a ſeal on them to-morrow, that they ſhall never be opened. You may afterwards deſire another of ſuch days as this; you may wiſh for one of the offers of that Saviour, for one drop of that blood you ſlighted, for one knock of his Spirit at the door of your heart, which formerly you neglected; for one of his motions or ſtrivings with you; and yet it never be granted. With ſome the day of grace is longer, with others ſhorter; with ſome it ends in childhood, with others it ends in youth; and with ſome few it laſts to old age: But, O ſinner! thou haſt no reaſon to expect the continuance of it a moment after this day.

3dly, Becauſe if you do not improve your day of grace, you loſe your ſouls. You may compare the text with verſe 11. of the chapter; becauſe they hardened their hearts, and would not hear his voice, in their day of grace, it is ſubjoined, I ſware in my wrath, they ſhall not enter into my reſt. We ſee the ſad caſe Jeruſalem was in when they loſt their day of grace, Luke xix. 41, 42. When he was near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, ſaying, If thou hadſt known, even thou at leaſt in this thy day the things which belong unto thy peace: but now they are hid from thine eyes. Here it is ſaid, Chriſt wept, (orig. Ecclauſe) it denotes a weeping with lamentation. He wept bitterly, to let you all know what a ſad and deplorable thing it is, for a people, city or perſon to loſe their day of grace. The words he ſpeaks are uttered in a weeping ſtrain. Abrupt expreſſions come now and then from his mouth; he drops now a word, and then a tear; he would ſpeak, but his weeping ſtops his voice, If thou hadſt known, even thou. Thou is reduplicate, or twice expreſt, Thou even thou. As if he had ſaid, Thou ancient city, the city of David, thou ſeat of the temple, and of the ſacrifices: "O if thou hadſt known." Then he adds, "at leaſt in this thy day." They had enjoyed many leſſer days of grace, when they had faithful prophets dealing with them; theſe they perſecuted and deſpiſed, and ſo loſt theſe days: But theſe were but leſſer days, which did not finally determine the ſtate of that city; for they were to have another day, which is here called, this their day, i. e. the day wherein the Son of God was to come among them, and preach the goſpel to them, "three years and an half:" That was a ſpecial day of grace, and the day that determined their ſtate; for ſince they did not improve it, the things of their peace were hid from their eyes. God would deal no more with them, but left them to deſtruction. O ſinner! O communicants! ſo will it fare with you, if you let your day of grace go over: Night will come on, wherein none can work, you will ſtumble in the dark, and fall headlong into the pit for ever.

4thly, Becauſe God keeps a ſtrict account of every hour and minute of your day of grace, that you trifle away; for he reckons it very precious, whatever you think of it. When God lights the candle of the goſpel, he expects you ſhould work by it; and he will not ſuffer this precious candle to burn without obſervation; nay, he counts every hour and minute it burns, and every hour and minute his Spirit ſtrives, and will make you reckon for them at laſt. God takes not ſuch ſtrict notice of times of darkneſs and ignorance; for it is ſaid, he winks at ſinners living under them, Acts xvii. 30. i. e. He doth not ſo narrowly mark their diligence; but when he ſends times of light, and of his Spirit's ſtriving with ſinners, he will not wink at one hour or minute, but exactly ſet down every ſermon you hear, every communion you ſee, every call, every intreaty, every threatning, every reproof, every conviction and warning you get, whether by ordinances or providences, whether by conſcience or by his Spirit. And, O! what a dreadful libel will theſe make up againſt you at the great day, if you neglect your day of grace.

V. The APPLICATION.

Uſe I. For information. We may hence ſee, that it is not the bare enjoyment of the goſpel, and communion ſeaſons that will make us happy, but the right improvement of the day of grace, which we enjoy therein.

Uſe II. For lamentation. We may hence take occaſion to bewail the ſad caſe of many that neglect and loſe the day of their merciful viſitation. It is ſaid, Jer. viii. 7. "The ſtork knoweth her appointed times, the turtle, the crane and the ſwallow obſerve the time of their coming," &c. And we are bid go learn of the ant, Prov. vi. 6. "that provides her meat in ſummer, and gathers her food in harveſt," while the weather is good and dry, and food may be had. So that we ſee the brutes and ſilly inſects obſerve their ſeaſons. But, alas! many men neglect and forget theirs; they let their ſummer and harveſt-days paſs, without making any proviſion for eternity. Oh! how many among us may take up that ſad lamentation, Jer. viii. 20. "Our harveſt is paſt, our ſummer is ended, and we are not ſaved!" O that we could weep over many, as Chriſt did over Jeruſalem, for loſing their day of grace!

Queſt. Who are theſe that thus loſe their day of grace?

Anſ. It is hard to be very particular on this head; I ſhall only give ſome general characters of ſuch perſons.

1ſt, Theſe who have ſat many years under pure and powerful ordinances, and were never affected thereby; but ſtill remain dead and hardened under the moſt awakening calls and plaineſt reproofs. Theſe ſeem to be given over to ruin, Prov. xxix. 1. "He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, ſhall be ſuddenly deſtroyed, and that without remedy."

2dly, Theſe who have had many ſecret motions and operations of the Spirit on their ſouls, to no effect; many purpoſes and reſolutions to good, and all evaniſhed; many of the Spirit's ſtrivings, and all reſiſted: Theſe are likely to be given over, Ezek. xxiv. 13. "Becauſe I have purged thee, and thou waſt not purged, thou ſhalt not be purged from thy filthineſs any more, till I have cauſed my fury to reſt upon thee." When God's Spirit offered to cleanſe that people from their ſin, they, like Lot's wife, ſtill hankered after it, and would not part therewith.

3dly, Theſe who have greatly grieved the Spirit of God, by venturing on ſin againſt the light of their conſciences, and the Spirit's motions, and ſo are turned wilful and reſolute in ſinning; ſuch have the ſymptoms of rejection, Hoſ. iv. 17. "Ephraim is joined to idols, let him alone."

4thly, Theſe who are ſo forward and bent upon a ſinful courſe, that they can endure no reproof or controul therein, but hate them in their hearts, who ſeek to reclaim them: Theſe have the ſymptoms of ruin upon them, Prov. xv. 10. Amos v. 10.

5thly, When perſons are ſo far hardned in ſin, that God ceaſeth to be a reprover to them, and ſtrikes their conſciences ſo dumb and ſenſeleſs, that they do not accuſe nor challenge them: It it a ſad ſign of up giving, Ezek. iii. 26. Hoſ. iv. 17.

6thly, When repentance is hid from people's eyes, ſo that they are not affected with the view of their ſins, when they are laid before them; no diſpenſation of providence, no token of God's anger, neither judgments nor mercies, rods nor threatenings; nay the flames of hell flaſhed in the ſinner's face, do not breed any remorſe in their conſciences nor relenting in their hearts for ſin: When people arrive at this height, it is a ſad ſign that they are given up to wrath, Iſa. xlii. 25. Jer. v. 3.

III. Next uſe ſhall be of examination. O try, if ye have improven your day of grace, ſo as to hearken to Chriſt's voice, and comply with his gracious offers, O communicants, it is highly your intereſt to know this, that you may come with chearfulneſs, and feaſt with your Redeemer at his table. Now try it by theſe marks.

1ſt, Had you never the experience of Chriſt's Spirit's work in opening your ear, and inclining your heart to cloſe with his offers in the goſpel? Do you experimentally know the heinouſneſs and multitude of your ſins? Do you know ſomething of the terribleneſs of God's wrath due to you for theſe ſins? Have you ſeen your ſoul's need of Chriſt, as a man purſued for his life ſeeth his need of a city of refuge? Have you ſeen yourſelves loſt and dead men, if you get not into Chriſt? Have you felt ardent deſires after Chriſt, and been made to ſay, Give us Chriſt, or elſe we die? Have you been content to take this lovely Saviour on any terms, to part with all for this pearl of price, and to count all but loſs and dung, to be found in him.

2dly, Can you ſay, that Chriſt's word and ordinances where you firſt heard his voice ſpeaking to you, are ſtill precious and lovely to you for his ſake? And hence you are made ſometimes to cry out with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxxiv. 1, 2. How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hoſts! My heart and fleſh crieth out for the living God. Sweet ſermons, ſweet communion-days, lovely occaſions, when the bridegroom's voice is to be heard.

3dly, Are you fill'd with low thoughts of yourſelves, and all your own doings and performances, and with high thoughts of Chriſt and his righteouſneſs! And do you turn out all Chriſt's rivals out of your hearts, and undervalue the world and all things in it beſides him, who is the chiefeſt among ten thouſands, and fairer than the ſons of men.

4thly, Do you find a great alteration, and gracious change on your ſouls, ſince the time you heard his voice? Doth Chriſt ſit as a refiner with you, changing both heart and life to the better? Are old things paſt away, old luſts, old thoughts, old deſires, old cuſtoms, old ways? And are all things with you become new? You that formerly ſet light by Chriſt and his voice, and admired the world and its flattering-pleaſures, and ſaid of Chriſt, What is thy beloved more than another beloved? Do you now value him, ſeek nearneſs to him in duties, enquire for him in ordinances, yea, meditate on him in the night watches, and when ye awake do you find your hearts with him? And is ſin that diſpleaſeth him your greateſt terror? Then ſurely you are among that bleſt company that have heard your Redeemer's voice in your day of grace, and you may come with joy to his table.

IV. Uſe of exhortation. And here I exhort you all, in the name of Chriſt, to improve your ſeaſon of grace. To-day, while it is called to-day O hear his voice; and to-morrow when he invites, O come unto his table. Hearers of the goſpel, This is now the accepted time, this is the day of ſalvation. What do you reſolve to do? Chriſt is now come to cry and lift up his voice to this whole congregation, to try you once more if you will hear his voice, before your day of grace end. Well, his voice is to you all, I know none of you excluded, if you do not exclude yourſelves.

1ſt, O carnal earthly minded ſoul, that has been a drudge to the world, and a ſtranger to Chriſt all thy days, his voice is to you this day: O come hear his voice, and cloſe a bargain with him, it will be the beſt bargain ever you made.

2dly, O profane ſinner, drunkard, ſwearer, liar, ſabbath-breaker, whoremonger, ſinner as black as hell, hearken to Chriſt's voice this day, and come and be ſaved from thy ſins: Why will you ſtop your ears, and chuſe to die in your ſins?

3dly, O hard hearted ſinner, that never waſt affected all thy life for the ſinfulneſs and miſery of thy natural eſtate, that never had a ſore heart for offending God, that never mourned for one ſin, Chriſt's voice is this day to thee, Iſa. xlvi. 12. Hearken unto me, ye ſtout hearted, that are far from righteouſneſs.

4thly, O prayerleſs ſinner, that never bowed a knee in ſecret, to cry for pardon of ſin, and an intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt, to ſave thee from the wrath to come, lend your ear this day, and hearken to Chriſt's ſweet voice, while he calls, Seek the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near, Iſa. lv. 6.

5thly, Condemned rebels in the hands of juſtice, ſentenced to die, and ready to be taken out to execution: O hear Chriſt's voice this day, and your ſouls ſhall live.

7thly, Obſtinate ſinner, that could never hitherto, either by the word or the rod, by miniſters or providences, be prevailed upon to leave one of all thy ſins, O be perſuaded to hear Chriſt's voice this day, and no longer harden thy heart.

8thly, O goſpel ſlighter, that has many a day refuſed Chriſt's offers, ſpurned againſt his bowels, trampled on his blood, crucified him at the communion table: O come, hearken this day to his voice, and he will let you ſee, that though your caſe be ſad, yet it is not deſperate; for he hath found a ranſom.

9thly, Hypocrites and formaliſts, that have had a maſk of religion, but have all your days been diſſembling and dealing deceitfully with God; come deal ingenuouſly and ſincerely with him for once, and hearken to his voice, give him your hearts, as well as your outward man.

10thly, Backſliders and covenant breakers, who have broke many a vow, ſlighted many an engagement, and ſinned againſt many a reſolution; O hear Chriſt's voice this day, when he calls to you, Turn ye backſliding children, come to me, and I will heal your backſlidings, and love you freely.

11thly, Poor plagued diſeaſed ſouls, who are groaning under many heart-plagues, and ſoul diſtreſſes, ſuch as atheiſm, pride, hardneſs, formality, &c. come hearken to Chriſt's voice, and he will be your Phyſician.

13thly, Purſued ſhelterleſs ſinners, who are afraid of the avenger of blood, hearken to Chriſt's voice, and fly to the city of refuge. Many motives and arguments might I uſe with you, to hear the voice of lovely Jeſus, while he calls to day.

I. Conſider how earneſt Chriſt is to perſuade you to hear his voice; he ſtands at your doors, and knocks both by his word and Spirit; yea he waits and knocks after many repulſes and afronts, and promiſes that all former ſlights and refuſals ſhall be forgiven, if ye will yet hearken and cloſe with him. How oft doth he repeat his intreaties, Luke xiii. 34. How oft would I have gathered you! Yea, he weeps for ſinners obſtinacy, Luke xix. 41. Strange! Doth he gain any thing by your hearkening to his voice? What means this earneſtneſs? It is all, O ſinners, on your account. For (1.) He knows better than any the worth of your ſouls, and that a world cannot redeem them when loſt. (2.) He knows well the miſerable ſtate of your ſouls without him; it is moſt ſad and deplorable at preſent, and will be much more ſo thro' endleſs eternity: For if you hear not Chriſt's voice, you will die in your ſins and be tormented in them for ever. (3.) Chriſt is ſo earneſt, becauſe he knows the difficulty of winning ſouls. He knows ſatan has great power and intereſt with ſouls, to blind, harden, and delude them, and that it is not eaſy to undeceive them, and pull them out of his grips; and therefore he deals and ſtrives ſo earneſtly with ſouls to gain them.

II. Take a ſerious view of the ſtate of your ſouls: While you ſtop your ears againſt Chriſt's charming voice; it is inexpreſſibly miſerable. For, 1ſt, Your ſouls are deſtitute of all that is good, Eph. ii. 12. You are as poor and wretched creatures as ever God made; you are without life, without grace, without peace, without pardon, without comfort, without righteouſneſs, without ranſom, without the favour of God, without the image of God, without the Spirit of God, and without all happineſs. 2dly, Your ſouls are in the poſſeſſion of Satan, where Chriſt is ſhut out, the devil is let in; and where he dwells there he hath an abſolute dominion: he uſes all the faculties of the ſoul as his tools and inſtruments, Eph. ii. 2. Oh! would not any man reckon it an unſpeakable miſery, to be in a houſe ſhut up with the devil? 3dly, Where Chriſt is ſhut out, the plague of ſin doth rage, and its peſtilential marks do daily appear; what madneſs is it then to refuſe to hearken to the voice of this bleſſed cleanſer? 4thly, The fire of God's wrath is kindled there, where Chriſt is refuſed; and what diſtraction is it to ſhut out Chriſt, whoſe blood only can quench this fire? 5thly, If you do not hearken to Chriſt, you have no way to prevent eternal deſtruction; for there is no advocate, no ſurety to interpoſe for you, if he be refuſed. Surely, the thoughts of appearing before an angry God after death muſt be terrible to a Chriſtleſs ſoul; For who can dwell with devouring fire? Who can abide with everlaſting burnings? I have read of a certain king of Hungary who was a Chriſtian; and being on a time marvellous ſad and heavy, his brother, who was a briſk and gallant man, would needs know what ailed him. 'Oh brother, (ſaith he) I have been a great ſinner againſt God, and I know not how I ſhall appear before him, when he comes to judgment.' His brother anſwered, Theſe are but melancholy thoughts, and ſo made light of them, as courtiers uſe to do. The king replied nothing at that time; but the cuſtom of that country was, (the government thereof being abſolute) that if the executioner ſounded a trumpet before any man's door, the man was preſently to be led to execution. The king in the dead time of the night, ſent his executioner, and cauſed him ſound his trumpet before his brother's door, who hearing and ſeeing the meſſenger of death, ran quickly and ſprang in trembling into his brother's preſence, falls down on his knees, and beſeeches the king to let him know wherein he had offended him. 'O brother (anſwered the king) you never offended me, but loved me: And (ſaid he) is the ſight of an earthly executioner ſo terrible to thee; and ſhall not I, who am ſo great a ſinner, fear much more to be brought to the judgment-ſeat of an angry God?' What ſoul can think on this without terror, that hath not hearkened to Chriſt's voice in the goſpel?

III. If you do not hearken to Chriſt's voice in the goſpel, it had been better for you never to have heard the goſpel at all; for your guilt is dreadfully aggravated hereby, and your miſery will be the greater, both here and hereafter. We may gather this from Rev. vi. where after the white horſe, (i. e. Chriſt with the goſpel neglected) comes the red horſe of war, the black horſe of famine, and the pale horſe of peſtilence. Neglecting to hear Chriſt in the goſpel uſhers in all outward miſeries like a flood, Jer. vi. 8. Be thou inſtructed, O Jeruſalem, leſt my ſoul depart from thee, leſt I make thee deſolate, a land not inhabited. Then again, how ſad will your caſe be at a tribunal, and through all eternity? The devils, the Turks, the Heathens, and your own conſciences, will bitterly upbraid you in hell, for refuſing to hear Chriſt's voice in the goſpel.

IV. Chriſt will not hear your cries in the time of miſery, if you neglect his voice in the time of mercy, Prov. i. 24. 25. 26. Now Chriſt's voice is ſweet, and full of mercy, but remember, O goſpel ſlighters, the time is at hand, when you will hear Chriſt ſpeaking in another tone; no more open to me, and hearken to my voice, poor ſoul: but depart from me, ye curſed, into everlaſting fire, &c.

V. This may be the laſt ſeaſon you will hear Chriſt's voice ſpeaking to you; this may be the laſt communion, and the laſt call that Chriſt intends to give you. This may be the laſt day of grace, and the laſt time that his Spirit will ſtrive with you. If you ſtop your ear, or harden your heart this day, there may follow an eternal dead ſilence, and God's Spirit never ſtrive any more with you, and ſo your day of grace is loſt, and your ſoul loſt for ever. O young folk, what ſay ye to it? A ſeaſon of youth is an accepted time, and a day of ſalvation: for the Lord's ſake do not looſe it. You have now plenty of ſermons, ſacraments, and goſpel-offers; you have Chriſt crucified ſet before your eyes to affect your hearts, and bring you to a compliance with his calls. You have alſo loud warnings this day from God's providence, and (I hope) ſome of you the inward workings of God's Spirit on your conſciences, concurring with theſe outward means. Well then, give kindly entertainment to Chriſt's voice in this ſeaſon of grace; while he yet ſtands beſeeching you, come hearken to his voice, and accept of him as your Surety; enter into covenant with him this night, and come to his table, and ſeal it to-morrow. O ſinner, turn your back on the devil, leave your ſins, and ſtop your courſe, and come and be reconciled to God thro' this peace maker, who is ſtanding waiting to be employed. Well, what anſwer ſhall I carry back to my Maſter, that ſent me to deal with you for this end? Shall I go and complain? 'Lord, they are a company of obſtinate ſinners thou ſenteſt me to; I entreated them to hearken to thy voice, and leave their ſins; but there was no concern, no fear, no ſenſe of ſin among them. Had I been to preach to beaſts, ſtocks or ſtones, they would have been as much moved as they. Alas! I have ſpent my ſtrength in vain, my voice and lungs for nought; I thought thy ſweet entreaties and charming voice would have melted their hearts, but neither comforts nor terrors had any effect.'

Or ſhall I have ground to ſay? 'Lord, I have offered ſinners a Redeemer, and entreated them to cloſe with him. Though they ſtood long out againſt thy threatenings, yet when they heard thy entreaties, their hearts began to relent, ſome began to ſigh, others to weep, others to long after Chriſt; and I hope they are gone home to make a perſonal covenant with him this night, and ſincerely deſign to return and ſeal it to-morrow.' God grant this may be the event. Amen.

SERMON XVI.

A Sermon after the Communion.

The Believer's Dignity in being an Heir of God.

Gal. iv. 7. Wherefore thou art no more a ſervant, but a ſon: and if a ſon, then an heir of God through Chriſt.

IN this chapter the apoſtle doth hold forth the happy ſtate of believing Gentiles under New Teſtament times; that it is ever preferable to that of the believing Jews under the Old Teſtament. The Jewiſh church he compares to a child in minority, that is under tutors and governors, and is acquainted only with the firſt rudiments of religion; and likewiſe to the ſtate of a ſervant, that is ſtill kept under ſubjection and bondage: for that church was always in a ſervile condition, having been under the heavy yoke of a great many ceremonial rites and obſervances. But our bleſſed Lord Jeſus, by his coming into the world, hath broke off that yoke from his people's necks, and hath brought them under a more ſpiritual and agreeable diſpenſation; yea, he hath ſent forth his Spirit into their hearts. Upon which account the apoſtle concludes them to be happy, yea, even children of God, Wherefore thou art no more a ſervant, &c.

In the text we have the happy ſtate of the believing Galatians briefly repreſented. 1*ſt*, Negatively, Thou art no more a ſervant; i. e. no more in a ſtate of ſervile ſubjection to the law, and to the Moſaic rites and obſervations. 2*dly*, Poſitively, Thou art a ſon! i. e. thou haſt attained to a more excellent ſtate of liberty, like to that of ſons who have come to ripe age. He means not that believers under the Old Teſtament had not that privilege of being children of God; no, believers then were really ſons, but kept in ſuch a ſtate, and trained up under ſuch harſh diſcipline, that they ſeemed more like ſervants than ſons. But (ſaith he) to you believers under the New Teſtament the diſcipline is changed, and you have attained to more honourable ſon-like treatment. 3*dly*, We have an inference from this privilege of ſon-ſhip, And if a ſon, then an heir of God through Chriſt. Among men only the eldeſt ſon is heir, but all God's children are heirs.

In which we have two things, 1*ſt*, The high dignity and preferment of God's children; they are heirs of God, i. e. they have a free right and title to eternal life, and all the gifts and bleſſings of God; yea, to the infinite God himſelf, who is the believer's chief good and portion. 2*dly*, The way of obtaining this dignity and happineſs, through Chriſt, and the merit of his blood: He is God's eternal Son, and heir of all things, and being our Surety, he, by his obedience and ſufferings, hath purchaſed a title to believers, to be God's ſons by adoption, and joint heirs with him of the heavenly inheritance; He is our elder brother, and is not aſhamed to call us brethren. The inheritance is his by nature, but ours by grace.

From the words thus explained, obſerve,

I. That the privileges of believers under the New Teſtament, do exceed theſe who lived under the Old. The legal ſtate was more ſervile, but the goſpel ſtate is more filial.

II. That tho' God hath one Son only by eternal generation, viz. our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; yet he hath many ſons by grace and adoption, viz. believers.

III. That theſe who have the Spirit of God dwelling in their hearts, and exciting them to prayer, have a good evidence of their ſon-ſhip, and filial relation to God. This is clear, from the connection of this verſe with the preceding.

IV. The doctrine that I am to inſiſt on at this time, is, That it is the great honour and privilege of all true believers, to be the children and heirs of God through Jeſus Chriſt.

This is confirmed from that parallel text, Rom. viii. 16, 17.

The method for handling this ſubject, ſhall be, (1.) To enquire in what ſenſe believers are the children of God. (2.) In what reſpect they are called heirs. (3.) What is the heritage they are intitled to. (4.) How it is they attain to this privilege. (5.) To ſhew the wonderful free grace of God, in granting ſuch a glorious privilege to believers, as to be his children and heirs. (6.) Make improvement of the whole.

I. As to the firſt, In what ſenſe believers are the children of God.

1*ſt*, Negatively, It is not to be meant here, that they are his children only, (1.) In reſpect of creation, for ſo all men are God's children, Mal. ii. 10. Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Had believers no further intereſt in God than this, they ſhould have but little comfort; for in this ſenſe God is alſo Father to the devils and wicked men, for he made them; but he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will ſhew them no favour. Nor (2.) Is it to be meant, that they are his children only by providence; for ſo he is to all, Deut. xxxii. 6. Is he not thy Father that bought thee? i e. hath redeemed thee from ſlavery, and conferred great bleſſings on thee. Nor (3.) Is it to be underſtood of their being his children by profeſſion, or external covenant-engagements; for ſo all the members of the viſible church are, Iſa. i. 2.

2*dly*, Poſitively, Believers are the children of God, by way of ſpecial grace, and that in theſe ſeveral reſpects, (1.) In reſpect of election, God has choſen and predeſtinate them from eternity to be his children and heirs, upon whom he will entail the kingdom of heaven, Eph. i. 5. Jam. ii. 5. (2.) In reſpect of regeneration, he dignifies them with a new birth working a gracious change upon them, infuſing in them a ſupernatural principle of holineſs, whereby they become like their heavenly Father, and ſo they are ſaid to be begotten and born of God, Jam. i. 18. 1 John iii. 9. (3.) They are his children by adoption; which is an act of God's free grace, whereby he aſſumes thoſe into the number of his children, who were not ſo naturally, but were ſtrangers and aliens; Yea, he takes theſe who were enemies, and of the family of hell, into the family of heaven; and graciouſly entitles them to all the advantages, dignities and privileges of children. As for inſtance, He educates, brings them up, and makes proviſion for them, as for ſons, Iſa. xlvi. 3. Matth. vi. 32. Pſal. lxxxiv. 11. 2*dly*, He allows them a ſhare in his fatherly love and compaſſion, together with the protection and attendance of ſons, Jer. xxxi. 20. Heb. i. 14. 3*dly*, He frees them from a ſervile ſtate, or any baſe and drudgery work, and endues them with a free ſpirit, Rom. viii. 15. 4*thly*, They have the chaſtiſement of ſons, which is moſt needful, Deut. viii. 5. Heb. xii. 6, 7, 8. 5*thly*, He allows them free acceſs to, and a filial confidence with him in prayer; hence in the verſe preceding my text, the apoſtle ſaith, Becauſe ye are ſons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts crying, Abba, Father. And laſtly, He entitles them to the inheritance of ſons, as in the text, If ſons then heirs of God. And this leads to,

II. The ſecond head, viz. In what reſpect believers are called heirs. And for the better illuſtration hereof, I ſhall ſhew wherein temporal and ſpiritual heirs do agree, and wherein they differ.

I. They agree, and reſemble one another in theſe things:

1*ſt*, He that is an heir of an eſtate, hath his title freely conveyed to him: he pays not for it, becauſe he has it by birth. So believers, who are ſpiritual heirs, have the title to their inheritance freely; and as they have nothing to pay for it, ſo it is given to them without money, and without price. And tho' they have not a title to it by their natural birth, yet by their new birth, they become the ſons of God, and heirs of heaven.

2*dly*, They who are rightful heirs of an eſtate, have the ſureſt title of any other, becauſe it is built upon nature: A father may frown upon his ſon and heir for his fault, but doth not eaſily diſinherit him; nor will he turn him out of doors as he doth a ſervant for his offence. So believers who are God's adopted children and heirs, have a moſt ſure title to the heavenly inheritance. Tho' God may chaſtiſe them, yet he will not diſinherit them; Pſal. lxxxix. 32, 33, 34. I will viſit their tranſgreſſions with the rod;——Nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs I will not take utterly from him.—My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Our title to the inheritance by the ſecond covenant, is far ſurer than Adam's was by the firſt: for when he offended, God treated him as a ſervant, and turned him out of doors: But the believer who is become a child and heir by Jeſus Chriſt, is better ſecured by the ſecond covenant; for he hath not only God's word, God's writ, and God's oath to confirm it, but he hath the Mediator's blood ſealing his charter, and an earneſt of the inheritance already given him, viz. God's Spirit put into his heart, 2 Cor. i. 22. So that his right and title is indefeaſible, and can never be altered.

3*dly*, An heir's title to an inheritance is reckoned more honourable than his, who obtains it another way. So the believer's title is moſt honourable, being made heirs of God, and co-heirs with his own Son Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. viii. 17. Chriſt alone is the natural Son, and hath the primary right to the inheritance, but believers by adoption, are aſſigned to a ſhare, and made co-heirs with him. So that Chriſt and believers do, as it were, divide heaven betwixt them; they have the ſame Father, dwell in the ſame houſe, ſit at the ſame table, reign on the ſame throne, partake of the ſame glory. O! What honour is this, which is put on worms of the earth? John xvii. 22,—24. John xx. 17. Rev. iii. 21. Chriſt indeed being our elder brother, his inheritance is double, and his power and glory is far greater than the glorified ſaints and angels, inſomuch as he hath, by inheritance, obtained a more excellent name than they, Heb. i. 4. Eph. i. 22.

4*thly*, An heir, during his minority, hath not the actual poſſeſſion of his inheritance, as being incapable to manage it, and therefore hath tutors and curators appointed him; ſo a believer though an heir of heaven, hath not the poſſeſſion of the inheritance, while here. This life is the time of his minority, and Jeſus Chriſt and the Holy Spirit are his tutors and curators, until he arrive at ripe age, and the years of his majority, when he will be fully meet for the inheritance of the ſaints in light; and then he enters upon the immediate poſſeſſion of all that is promiſed to him.

5*thly*, An heir of an eſtate, though he want the poſſeſſion for a time, yet he hath a preſent maintenance allowed him out of it, ſuitable to his ſtation and circumſtances; ſo believers, during their minority in this world, have a ſufficient maintenance granted them, out of that great inheritance promiſed to, and provided for them. As for temporal things, they have a competency ſecured to them while here: Their bread ſhall be given them, and their water ſhall be ſure. And for ſpiritual things, they ſhall have as much grace, ſtrength, comfort and joy, as will bear their charges, until the time appointed come, when they ſhall enter upon the full poſſeſſion of all.

6thly, An heir of a good eſtate may be ſomewhat ſtraitened in his circumſtances for a time, becauſe of burdens on the eſtate, or ſome neceſſary reſtrictions laid upon him; yet he comforts himſelf with the hopes of a plentiful eſtate at length: So the heirs of promiſe may be under many ſtraits and difficulties while here, under burdens of corruption, fears of wrath, and hidings of God's face. They oft complain of little grace, weak faith, languiſhing deſires, and of faint diſcoveries of God and Chriſt, and the inviſible things of the other world: Yet nevertheleſs they ſhould not murmur, but encourage themſelves in the faithful promiſe, and ſure right they have obtained in Chriſt; and be thankful, if as much be allowed them out of the inheritance, as will bear their charges to heaven, where they ſhall be ſupplied to the full, forget all their ſtraits, and remember their poverty no more.

7thly, An heir, whatever his preſent ſtraits and circumſtances be, is a reſpectful and honourable perſon; and they who know what he is born to, and what his expectations are, do put reſpect upon him: ſo believers, however mean and ſtraitened they be, during their minority in this world, are very honourable perſons, the excellent ones in the earth, and, in many reſpects, more exeellent than their neighbours; they are heirs of a great inheritance, and upon this account, ſhould be honoured by theſe among whom they live; for though they make no great outward appearance at preſent, yet, in a little, they ſhall be crowned with glory and honour.

II. Temporal and ſpiritual heirs do differ in theſe things:

1ſt, Temporal heirs, however rich they be, are only heirs of a corruptible ſpot of earth; but believers are heirs of an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in heaven for them. And what is earth to heaven?

2dly, Many heirs, here on earth, never come to the actual poſſeſſion of their eſtates; for they may be ſquandered away, or loſt by the ill management of their parents or tutors; or they may be taken from them by oppreſſion or violence; and oftentimes death comes and ſnatches away the young heirs before they attain to ripe age; ſo that they never win to the poſſeſſion. But heaven's heirs will all certainly get poſſeſſion of their inheritance; their tutors will not loſe nor miſmanage it to them; no enemy can ſeize it by violence; nor thief break through and ſteal. And death will be ſo far from depriving them of the poſſeſſion of their inheritance, that it brings them to the immediate and full fruition thereof, through a glorious eternity.

4thly, When a temporal heir comes to the poſſeſſion, he can enjoy the inheritance but a ſhort while; for death ſoon comes and diſpoſſes him. But the ſpiritual heir, when he gets poſſeſſion of his inheritance, becomes immortal, and is for ever out of the reach of death.

III. The third head in the method was, to ſhew what the heritage is, which God's children and heirs are entitled to; ſurely it is the greateſt and largeſt that ever was; All things are yours, 1 Cor. iii. 21. More particularly, 1ſt, The earth, is their inheritance, Matth. v. 5. tho' commonly they poſſeſs little of it, yet they have a covenant right to make uſe of the good creatures, and the outward ſupport and refreſhments of life. The men of this world, though they have a general providential right to ſuch things of the earth as they poſſeſs, yet they have no covenant-title thereto, as believers have: Their enjoyments come not to them from God as a loving Father, or as a God in covenant with them, to promote their ſouls good: They have not the comfortable and ſanctified enjoyment of the creature; no, this comes only to us in Chriſt, and is a part of the believer's portion. By the fall, Adam and his poſterity were diſinherited, they loſt their covenant right over the creatures, with the ſanctified uſe thereof. But in Chriſt, who is the heir of all things, the title is renewed to believers, and they become heirs of the world: and whatever part of it falls to their ſhare, they may look on it as a bleſſing of the covenant, a legacy from Chriſt, a part of his purchaſe, ſanctified for their uſe, and deſigned for their good.

3dly, In the text they are called heirs of God; God himſelf is their inheritance, as this is more than to ſay, they are heirs of both heaven and earth. I will be your God, is the moſt comprehenſive promiſe in the whole Bible, it imports an intereſt in all the bleſſings and promiſes of the new-covenant, in all the purchaſe and fulneſs of Chriſt, in all the gifts and graces of the holy Spirit, and in all the divine attributes and perfections. When the Lord ſaith to the heirs of ſalvation, I will be your God; how great is the inheritance he bequeaths to them! It is more than if he made over to them a thouſand heavens, or ten thouſand worlds; for, ſaith he, I give you the omnipotent Jehovah, I make over myſelf unto you, in all my eſſential perfections; my omnipotency ſhall be your guard, my omniſciency your overſeer, my omnipreſence your companion, my bounty your ſtore, my wiſdom your counſellor, my juſtice your rewarder, my holineſs your fountain of grace, my unchangeableneſs the rock of your ſecurity, my all-ſufficiency your inheritance, and my eternity the date of your happineſs. Surely, O believer, the lines are fallen to you in pleaſant places, and you have got a goodly heritage.

IV. The fourth head was, to enquire how believers attain to this high privilege, of being children and heirs of God. 1ſt, It is not from any worth or merit in them, but from the free love and goodneſs of God, that hath predeſtinate them to the adoption of children, and choſen them heirs of the kingdom. 2dly, It is by the mediation of Jeſus Chriſt, who, as their Surety, interpoſes for them, when under ſentence of death; purchaſed the inheritance for them by his merits, and left it to them in legacy by his teſtament, which he ſealed and confirmed with his own blood. 3dly, By the application of the Holy Ghoſt, who is the executor of Chriſt's teſtament, and who comes and infefts believers in the bequeathed inheritance, by renewing their ſouls, working faith in them and diſpoſing them to cloſe with the Redeemer; planting all gracious habits in them, and thereby giving them the earneſt and firſt fruits of the inheritance.

V. The fifth thing was, to ſhew the wonderful grace of God in granting ſuch a glorious privilege to poor believers. If we ſeriouſly conſider the grace of God in adopting us to be his children and heirs, we may well cry out with the apoſtle, 1 John iii. 1. Behold! What manner of love is this the Father hath beſtowed on us, that we ſhould be called the ſons of God? The wonderfulneſs of this grace appears in theſe things:

1ſt, That he adopts us to be his ſons and heirs, when he needed us not. Men adopt ſons becauſe they are childleſs, and need ſome to propagate their families, keep up their name, and perpetuate their memories: But the eternal Father adopts children and heirs, tho' he hath a natural and eternal Son of his own, who is the brightneſs of his glory, and his ſoul's delight; and altho' he could have been infinitely happy without us, and needed no acceſſion to his glory. We ſtood in need of a Father, but he ſtood not in need of ſons.

2dly, That he chuſes theſe to be his ſons and heirs, who have nothing to recommend them to him, but are utterly unworthy of this dignity and privilege. Men uſually adopt theſe who are of their kindred, or who are their friends and favourites; but God ſhews this favour to rebels, enemies, traitors, ſatan's ſlaves, and hell's heirs. Men adopt theſe in whom they ſee, or at leaſt fancy ſomething of worth: Mordecai adopted Eſther becauſe ſhe was fair: But God adopts theſe who are naturally moſt vile and unworthy, yea, deſpicable as worms, lothſome as carcaſſes, deformed as monſters, black as Ethiopians, and diſeaſed as lepers. Having nothing to engage his love, but every thing to provoke his loathing of us.

3dly, That he ſhould be at ſuch charge and coſt in adopting us. Men are at no pains about it, but to draw up a writ, and ſign or ſeal it, and then all is done; but infinite wiſdom and power muſt be ſet on work to make us ſons and heirs; an eternity muſt be ſpent in contriving the method: the eternal Son of God muſt die to bring it about, and the charter of our adoption muſt be ſealed with his moſt precious blood. Never was it heard, that any man let his only ſon ſuffer and die, to adopt an enemy; but this the great God hath done, which is the wonder of the redeemed, the wonder of angels, and will be the wonder of eternity.

4thly, That he exalts theſe whom he adopts to ſuch high dignity and honour; for God to have pardoned his enemies, and delivered them from going to hell, had been much; for him to have taken his enemies, and made them his friends and favourites, had been more: But for God to take his mortal enemies into his boſom, and make them his ſons and heirs; yea beautify them with his image, value them as his jewels, entitle them to his kingdom, and make them co-heirs with his own beloved Son, is ſuch a prodigy of love, as ſurpaſſeth all finite comprehenſion. To have advanced one of the bleſſed cherubims or ſeraphims, ſo high, had been a ſtupendous act of grace: But to take a lump of polluted duſt, a curſed ſinner, a wretch as black as hell could make him, and raiſe him ſo high, yea above the brighteſt cherub in glory, is eternally an aſtoniſhing wonder of free love.

APPLICATION.

I. Uſe of information. This doctrine informs us of theſe things:

1ſt, Of the wonderful love and goodneſs of God, to poor elect ſinners in Chriſt: he takes enemies into his family, yea puts them among his children: and not only doth he confer the honour of ſon-ſhip on them, but alſo puts the nature of ſons in them; for they are ſons by regeneration, as well as by adoption; both theſe are joined together, as is clear from John i. 12, 13. To them that believe he gave power to become the ſons of God, who were born not of the will of man, but of God.

2dly, That believers are of more noble and illuſtrious deſcent than any others: they are ſons of the moſt high God. Some talk of their progenitors, and value themſelves on their high extract: So the Jews vaunted that they were Abraham's ſeed, John viii. 33. But ſurely it is an infinitely greater privilege to be among the ſons of God. David thought it no ſmall honour to be ſon-in-law to the king of Iſrael, 1 Sam. xviii. 18. And ſhall any among us reckon it a ſmall thing to be a ſon to the King of heaven.

3dly, That God is an infinitely rich and bountiful Father, who makes all his children heirs, and that of a great and ſplendid inheritance: Tho' his family be numerous, yet there is not one of them left unprovided; for he brings many ſons to glory, Heb. ii. 10.

II. Uſe of examination. Let us all try what right or claim we have to this honour and privilege, of being the ſons and heirs of God.

I. Try, O communicants, if ye have the marks and characters of God's children. 1ſt, Have you cordially made choice of God as your Father in Chriſt, and dedicated yourſelves to him at this time, in a perpetual covenant, Jer. iii. 19. How ſhall I put thee among the children! &c. Thou ſhalt call me my Father. 2dly, Have ye received the Mediator by a true and lively faith; for it is hereby we become children, John i. 2. To as many as received him, he gave power to become the ſons of God. Gal. iii. 26. Ye are all the children of God by faith in Chriſt Jeſus. We can be adopted only by virtue of his right, who is the elder brother, and heir of all things. 3dly, Are you like your Father, have you his image upon you, holineſs? 4thly, Do you ſincerely love Chriſt, your elder Brother and Redeemer? John viii. 42. Jeſus ſaid unto them, if God were your Father, ye would love me. 5thly, Do ye love and eſteem all the children of the family, as the excellent of the earth? Pſal. xvi. 2. 6thly, Are ye heartily concerned for the intereſt and welfare of your mother, the church? Pſal. cxxxvii. 6. 7thly, Are ye troubled for offending your Father? 2 Chron. xxxiv. 27. 8thly, Are you deſirous of your Father's preſence and company? Pſal. xxvi. 8. 9thly, Have ye childrens appetites for your ſpiritual food? Pſal. lxxxiv. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 2.

II. Try if you have the ſpirit and diſpoſition of heirs. 1ſt, Is it your main care to make ſure your birthright, and title to the inheritance? Many of God's children have not the aſſurance hereof, but they all labour after it, and are reſtleſs without it, Matth. vi. 33. 2dly, If you be heirs, you will highly value your birthright, and not be willing to part with it for a trifle: you will not (like profane Eſau, Heb. xi. 16) ſell it for ſenſual pleaſures, and gratifications of the fleſh: Nay, your hearts will riſe againſt ſatan's ſolicitations to break with your Father, and ſell your birthright, and ſay with Naboth to Ahab, 1 Kings xxi. 3. The Lord forbid it me, that I ſhould give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee. God forbid, that I ſhould part with my portion in Chriſt for worldly gain, carnal ſatisfactions, or any earthly delight whatſoever.

3dly, Your hearts and thoughts will be much ſet upon your heritage above, for it is your treaſure, and where your treaſure is, there will your heart be alſo, Mat. vi. 21. What do ye moſt think of, when ye are alone? Nebuchadnezzar, when he is alone, thinks on his large territories, Dan. iv. 29 30. Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the houſe of the kingdom? &c. So if you be heirs of heaven, your hearts will be running much thither.

4thly, In the time of your difficulties and ſtraits, you will be drawing your comfort and encouragement from the large and goodly heritage, you are entitled to; and likewiſe you will be looking and waiting when it will fall into your hands; yea you will be ſending meſſengers and ſpies to the land of promiſe to ſurvey it, and bring you good tidings from thence, for your ſupport, while in the wilderneſs: You will be feaſting and entertaining yourſelves with the thoughts of your rich inheritance, and portion in Chriſt, and groaning within yourſelves, "When ſhall I be with my Father and elder Brother above! When ſhall my pilgrimage be finiſhed, and the time of my minority expire, that I may enter upon the poſſeſſion." Rom viii. 23. We who have the firſt fruits of the Spirit groan within ourſelves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our bodies.

Laſtly, All theſe who are heirs of heaven do get the ſeal and earneſt of the inheritance put in their hearts, viz. the Spirit of God, 2 Cor. i. 22 Eph. i. 13 14. After that ye believed, ye were ſealed with that holy Spirit of promiſe, which is the earneſt of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchaſed poſſeſſion. As an earneſt penny ſecures our right to a bargain, and is alſo a part of it; ſo the ſanctifying Spirit, or grace of God in the heart, is a pledge and earneſt of the glorious inheritance above. O communicants! have ye got this earneſt in your ſouls? Are ye beginning to reap the firſt fruits of the inheritance? Surely it will be matter of rejoicing to find it.

Queſt. How ſhall I know if I have got the Spirit in my heart, as the ſeal and firſt-fruits of the inheritance?

Anſw. By his actings and operations in your ſouls. 1ſt, Wherever he is, he is an illuminating Spirit, that lets you ſee the evil of ſin, and the excellency of Chriſt. 2dly, A humbling Spirit, that brings the ſoul to ly in the duſt, and abhor itſelf for its abominations. 3dly, A Spirit of prayer, that inclines the ſoul to come to its father, for the ſupply of wants, Gal. iv 6. 4thly, A ſin ſubduing Spirit, that helps to weaken and mortify indwelling corruption, Rom. viii. 13. 5thly, A ſoul-ſanctifying Spirit, that infuſes, increaſes, quickens, and actuates grace in the heart, Eph. iv. 23. 24. Now, wherever theſe gracious actings and operations of the Spirit are to be found, you may conclude you have got a ſeal of your heirſhip, the earneſt and firſt-fruits of the inheritance, as a pledge of your being ſhortly put in poſſeſſion of all.

III. Uſe of exhortation, to two ſorts, 1ſt, Theſe who are aliens and foreigners. 2dly, Theſe who are children, and heirs of God.

I. I ſhall ſpeak to theſe who are aliens, have no intereſt in God's family, nor the childrens privileges; and yet many ſuch have been preſuming to eat of the childrens bread, to which they have no right. I intreat you to awake from your ſecurity and conſider the miſery of your ſtate. O! that God would ſound an alarm in your ears.

1ſt, If you be not God's children, you are dogs; and yet you have been preſuming to meddle with the childrens bread, which is horrid ſacrilege.

2dly, You are children of the devil, and of the family of hell; nay, you are Satan's bond ſlaves. There is no medium; either you are God's children, or the devil's ſlaves, John viii. 44. And what have Satan's ſlaves to do with God's holy things?

3dly, O alien and foreigner! thou art a child of wrath, an heir of hell; this is thy native heritage and portion; and this ſad heritage will remain ſure to thee: when thou leaveſt thy ſubſtance to others, this ſhall go alongſt with thyſelf to another world. The wrath of God abideth on thee, both here and eternally: O ſinner! wrath is thy conſtant covering now, and the heavens are growing blacker and blacker every day above thy head. The earth is weary of thee; the pit is opening her mouth for thee; Hell is groaning for thee from beneath; and the thread of life, that is keeping thee out of it, is juſt ready to break. O! waken before it be too late.

5thly, By preſuming on the Lord's table, you have drawn a new curſe on yourſelves; for ye have been mocking God, ſhedding Chriſt's blood, murdering the bleſſed Redeemer: You have been acting Judas's part, ſaying, Hail Maſter, and betraying the Son of God with a kiſs. O! Satan's ſlaves, you have been eating Chriſt's bread, but God's curſe was on the morſel you got; and ye have drawn down new ſoul-plagues on yourſelves. You'll be ten-times more Satan's ſlaves than you were before; for to all your other ſins you have added this, of crucifying Chriſt afreſh.

Queſt. Is there any hope for ſuch children of wrath, and heirs of hell as we are? What ſhall we do to be ſaved?

Anſw. 1*ſt*, I ſay to you, as Peter to Simon Magus, Acts viii. 21. 22. Thou haſt neither part nor lot in this matter; thy heart is not right with God: repent therefore of this thy wickedneſs, and pray God for forgiveneſs. Repent and weep over a ſlain Chriſt, whom you pierced at his table, and cry, Lord deliver me from blood guiltineſs. O can you weep over a dead child, or friend? Can you weep for the loſs of world's wealth, and not weep for the loſs of your ſouls, and of your Saviour?

2*dly*, Retire into ſome ſecret place, and there meditate on your miſery, while children of Satan and heirs of wrath: Firmly believe your ſad ſtate, your ſalvation is impoſſible, while in it. There is a bill of excluſion paſt in the court of heaven, againſt all under a covenant of works, which is your caſe, Gal. iv. 30. 'The ſon of the bond-woman ſhall not be heir:' heirs of wrath muſt not be heirs of glory: there is no ſalvation under this covenant, but on a condition impoſſible, perfect obedience to the law, and ſatisfaction to divine juſtice for the wrong already done. There is no promiſe in it of pardon, no place for repentance, no accepting the will for the deed. O poor forlorn ſoul, put the queſtion to thyſelf, how ſhall I live in this caſe? How ſhall I die in it? How ſhall I appear before a juſt God in it? Surely, a ſtate of wrath is too hot a climate for my ſoul to live in.

3*dly*, Cheriſh convictions when God ſends them, go not to run away with God's arrows of conviction ſticking in your conſciences, to your employments, to work them out; to your cups, to drink them out; to your bed, to ſleep them out; to your companions, to ſport them away: No, but run with them to the great Phyſician Chriſt, that he may take them out with his own hand, and apply Gilead's balm to the wound. Alas! many deſtroy their immortal ſouls, by crucifying their convictions.

4*thly*, Preſently embrace the ſweet goſpel offers that are made to you; now is the day when the great trumpet is blown, that out-caſt periſhing ſinners may come, and accept of the goſpel-jubilee, Iſa. xxvii. 13. Now liberty is proclaimed to the captives: Now the heirs of wrath may become heirs of glory: And what way is that! even by cloſing with Chriſt in a marriage-covenant. Come marry the heir of all things, and you ſhall be freed from bondage, and heaven ſhall be your dowry. Come flee preſently out of the dominion of the law, into the dominion of grace; and there the law's curſe ſhall not reach you. Accept of Jeſus Chriſt on the terms of grace, and you ſhall have a great heritage with him, an inheritance that ſhall laſt for ever. Worldly heritages do not laſt; all your riches and honours, profits and pleaſures muſt ſhortly be buried with you, they cannot accompany you into another world: But if you accept of Chriſt as your Saviour and Surety, then the eternal God is your God, and portion for ever. O heirs of wrath, what are your hearts ſaying? Are you content with this bargain? Are you willing to leave Satan's ſlavery, and become children and heirs of the great King?

5*thly*, Remember that dreadful vengeance will ſhortly ſeize upon them that refuſe ſuch a glorious heritage: conſider what is abiding you, Pſal. xi. 6 Snares, fire, brimſtone, and an horrible tempeſt ſhall be the portion of your cup.

Exhort. II. To thoſe who are ſons and heirs of God, I ſhall ſpeak, in the firſt place, ſome things to you all in general.

1*ſt*, Has God, of his free mercy and rich grace made you his ſons and heirs, then be humble, and remember what you once were. When God found you, you were children of wrath, even as others. Free love hath picked you out from among the multitude of condmned malefactors, hath commanded your fetters to be taken off, put a pardon in your hands, and brought you forth to the glorious liberty of the children of God, and made you heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt. You had nothing in you to engage him to love you, yet he loved you, when you were moſt loathſome: What matter of wonder is here: The glorious Bridegroom courted and eſpouſed you to himſelf on the day in which you might have been led forth to execution! He took off your priſon-garment, and cloathed you with robes of righteouſneſs and garments of ſalvation? He took the chains from off your arms, the rope from about your neck, and put his own comelineſs on you, that you might be fit for the king's table! Be not proud of your gifts, graces or attainments: but remember that ye were once children of warth, even as others; all you have is borrowed. Be humble alſo, and remember your faults this day: Mind, how you have forgotten your benefactor! How unkindly you have treated him that remembered you in your low eſtate! How unſuitably you have walked! Is this your kindneſs to your friend?

2*dly*, Pity the children of wrath, and heirs of hell, that ſtill ly in chains of darkneſs. Be not unconcerned for them, ſeeing ye were once in the ſame condition with them; ye have got aſhore, but your fellows behind you are ſtill in danger of periſhing. Put on bowels of compaſſion for them, pity them, and uſe all means for their deliverance.

3*dly*, Be content with your lot in a preſent world, and be eaſy under your preſent ſtraits and difficulties, whatever they be; for you have the proſpect of a great inheritance, from whence you may take encouragements under every trial. You may be eaſy under the world's hatred, and carry chearfully amidſt all affronts and injuries, for you may expect to be envied. Favourites of princes are commonly ſlandered and abuſed. Joſeph was hated of his brethren, becauſe his father ſhewed more than ordinary kindneſs to him. "If ye were " of the world, (ſaith Chriſt) the world would love " his own; But becauſe ye are not of the world, but " I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the " world hateth you," John xvi 19. But let theſe ſolace your minds, ye are heirs of God, and dearly beloved of him.

4*thly*, Live as children of God, and heirs of the kingdom; walk worthy of your dignity, and behave ſuitably to your character. You have the angels, theſe great officers of the crown, and chief miniſters of ſtate appointed to wait on you conſtantly, while here below, and you have a glorious expectation hereafter. Shew forth then the greatneſs and nobleneſs of your ſpirits, by undervaluing mean and ſordid things. Let your ſpeech and actions hers look like the country to which you are going, that it may be ſaid of you as of Gideon's children, Judges viii. 18. Each one reſembling the children of a king. The heirs of earthly kings have been obſerved to have had generous and noble ſpirits, and have ſcorned to intermeddle with baſe and inferior matters. It is a common ſtory of Alexander the Great, That when he was a little boy, and provoked to run a race with one of his inferiors, he firſt demurred, and then flatly refuſed the challenge, ſaying, 'It did not become the ſon of a king to ſubmit to ſo mean an undertaking, and contend with one ſo far below him' The brave ſpirit of that princely youth may ſhame theſe Chriſtians who are the adopted ſons of God, and heirs to a crown that ſhall never fade; and yet oftentimes are found groveling on the earth, like the men of this world, and buſied about things very far below them. Let the heirs of heaven maintain a holy contempt of the world, and the things thereof. Let them ſet their feet on theſe things on which worldlings ſet their hearts; and reckon themſelves riches and happier in their relation to God and the kingdom above, than any graceleſs monarch that ever wore an earthly crown. Shall earthly men make ſuch a noiſe in the world, and think none comparable to them, becauſe forſooth their heap of dung is ſome bigger than their neighbours? (for ſo Paul eſteems the world) and will the children of the king of heaven, of whom the world is not worthy, Heb. xi. 38. be ſo low and mean-ſpirited, as to be amuſed and dazzled with the world's vanities: who yet have God for their portion, Chriſt for their huſband, heaven for their home, and glory for their treaſure?

6thly, Be earneſt in prayer, that God may raiſe up many young heirs to ſupply the room of thoſe that he is taking home. Let the heirs of God be never ſo much increaſed, God's children will not envy their number, but greatly rejoice therein; ſeeing the inheritance is vaſt and infinitely ſatisfying to both men and angels: and our heavenly Father is highly glorified in the multitude of his children. And, laſtly, When heirs are brought into the family, carry affectionately to them; be kind to young heirs, eſpecially, during the time of their nonage and want of experience; be for eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame, and great ſhall be your reward in heaven.

In the next place, I ſhall ſay ſomething more particularly to thoſe who were at their father's table yeſterday, of whom I preſume there have been, and are ſeveral ſorts.

I. There may be ſome (I hope) that have ground to ſay, That they came to their Father's table, and he ſmiled on them, and dealt bountifully with them. To ſuch I ſhall ſay theſe few things: 1ſt, Wonder at the Lord's kindneſs, and bleſs his name with your whole ſouls, for his diſtinguiſhing favours to you, who were by nature enemies of God, and children of Satan. 2dly, Hold faſt and improve carefully what you have got, and let not Satan rob you of it. 3dly, Sympathize with other children of the family, that have not won your length, but perhaps are under great diſcouragements; mind their caſe, and ſpeak a good word for them now, while you are favourites of heaven

II. In the next place, I ſhall ſpeak to thoſe heirs of heaven, who, notwithſtanding of their being at the table, remain full of doubts and fears, and are very apprehenſive that God has not yet put them among the children, nor given them a right to the heir's portion. Well, what is the ground of your doubting? 1. O, ſaith one, I ſcarce feel the working of the ſanctifying Spirit of God in my ſoul, which is the common earneſt or pledge of the inheritance, that God uſeth to give to his heirs while here. Anſwer. Though grace be weak in you, you muſt not deſpiſe the day of ſmall things, or ſay you have none at all: Nay, bleſs God if thou canſt ſpy any ſpark of grace in thy heart at all, and pray that God may cheriſh it. A man that gets an earneſt of a good bargain, is not much diſcouraged whether it be a greater or ſmaller piece of money, a ſixpence, or half a crown, for he thinks the leaſt piece is a ſufficient earneſt or pledge from an honeſt man of his bargain; and he is eaſy ſeeing he knows he has to do with one that is faithful, and will not go back of his word: Indeed he might be diſcouraged, if that which he got were not an earneſt penny: But there is a great difference betwixt a piece of money that is given in gratitude, and that which is given only in earneſt, as a pledge of a far greater ſum, or of a very rich bargain. O heir of heaven, remember this, the ſmall degree of grace thou haſt, is given only as an earneſt of more grace, yea, of eternal glory itſelf.

2dly, Another may be ſaying, Ah! but I want that love to God, that a child ſhould have to his father. Anſ. 1ſt, It is good thou art ſenſible of it, and that thou knoweſt thy wants. 2dly, Canſt thou ſay, it is thy greateſt grief thou haſt not more love to thy Father; yea, that thou wouldſt give a world, if thou waſt maſter of it, for more heart love to him? Then take comfort, for there is ſincerity of love to God in thy heart.

3dly, Another may ſay, I have not the ſpirit of prayer, which God uſeth to beſtow on his children; I cannot attain to theſe enlargements and fluent expreſſions that I ſee others have in prayer. Anſ. 1ſt, It may be they are old experienced Chriſtians thou converſeſt with, and they likewiſe have their ebbings and flowings as well as others; for the Spirit blows when and where he liſteth. Thou ſeeſt perhaps the one, but art unacquainted with the other. 2dly, It is thy happineſs, thou haſt to do in prayer with one that looks not ſo much to the words of the mouth, as the affections of the heart. If thou haſt a heart centering on God, and flowing out towards him in duty, God loves that better than the moſt eloquent expreſſions.

Spirit to help thy infirmities? Our bleſſed Lord Jeſus has prayed for many that could not pray for themſelves. Cry to him for the quickening influence of his Spirit, to enable you to call on his name; for he gives his Spirit to them that aſk him.

5thly, It may be ſome poor drooping ſoul is ſaying, I came to my Father's table yeſterday, but inſtead of any comfortable diſcovery, all I got was a frown: my Father frowned, and ſeemed angry with me. Anſ. 1ſt, Thou haſt reaſon to be thankful, that he took any notice of thee at all; for ſometimes God holds communion with his people by frowns and reproofs, and thereby humbles them for ſin, and draws them nearer to himſelf. 2dly, Perhaps God is correcting thee for ſome former ſins againſt light, which as yet thou haſt not mourned over: For theſe whom God takes into his family, and puts among his children, he will correct in his fatherly love, but his loving kindneſs he will not take away from them. Let all the children of God and heirs of heaven ſubmit in a humble and kindly manner, to the reproofs and corrections of their heavenly Father. And let them ſay, as Elihu to Job, under his ſharp trials, What I ſee not, teach thou me; if I have done iniquity I will do ſo no more. “Lord train me up “during my minority, as thou pleaſeſt; make uſe of “what diſcipline towards me, thou thinkeſt beſt for “me; only (if it be thy bleſſed will) make it known “to me for my comfort, that I do really belong to “thy family, and ſhall not be ſhut out of doors for “ever. And ſo my ſoul ſhall live and praiſe thy “name.” Amen.

SERMON XVII.

A Sermon after the Communion.

The fainting Believer ſtrengthened for his work.

Iſaiah xl. 29. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might, he increaſeth ſtrength.

THE prophet having concluded the preceding chapter with a prophecy of the captivity of the Jews into Babylon, though it was many years before it came; he, in this and the ſucceeding chapter, furniſhes the church and people of God with a great many precious promiſes for their ſupport and comfort, during that long captivity; which ſurely would be of great uſe to them in that cloudy and dark day.

In the latter end of this chapter, the prophet is reproving the people of God, who are now ſuppoſed to be captives at Babylon, for their unbelief and deſpondency under their affliction, in ſaying or thinking God had either caſt them off, or could not help them, verſe 27. For remedying whereof, he puts them in mind of God's power and all-ſufficiency to help in the greateſt ſtraits, verſe 28. And in the text and following verſes, he aſſures them of God's compaſſion, and readineſs to help them under all their ſinking diſcouragements. He giveth power to the faint, &c.

More particularly in the text, we may notice theſe things: 1ſt, The ſad caſe of many of God's people in captivity, They were faint and without might, i. e. They were under preſſures and burdens both outward and inward, that were ready to cruſh them, and make them faint away; they were called to ſeveral pieces both of ſervice and ſuffering, for which they had no ſtrength nor might of themſelves.—2dly, We have their mercy and privilege under this ſad caſe, viz. power and ſtrength; i. e. ſpiritual ſtrength mainly, which is graciouſly promiſed them for their encouragement, under all their faintings and trials.——3dly, The author of this privilege, The everlaſting God, the Lord Jehovah, with whom is everlaſting ſtrength, who fainteth not, neither is weary.—4thly, The way how this mercy is conveyed, it is in a way of free gift, without any worth or merit on our part; he giveth it, and he encreaſeth it; he giveth ſtrength where it is not, and he encreaſeth it where it is already given in any meaſure.

DOCTRINE. That as the Lord's people while here are liable to many fainting diſcouragements, under which they cannot ſupport themſelves, ſo the Lord is pleaſed to give them ſuitable ſtrength for all their exigencies. This is alſo confirmed from that gracious promiſe, recorded in the following chapter, Iſa. xli. 10. Fear thou not, for I am with thee: be not diſmayed, for I am thy God; I will ſtrengthen thee, yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteouſneſs. And the pſalmiſt confirms this truth by his own comfortable experience, Pſal. cxxxviii. 3. In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me, and ſtrengthenedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul.

The method I chuſe for proſecuting this doctrine, ſhall be,

1. To enquire into theſe fainting diſcouragements, which believers labour under while here.
2. Why the Lord doth let them meet with ſuch trials.
3. How it is that the Lord doth ſtrengthen his weak and fainting people.
4. What are the great ends and uſes for which the Lord gives ſuch ſtrength to his people.
5. Give ſome reaſons to prove, that the Lord will certainly give them this ſtrength.
6. Make improvement.

I. As to the firſt, viz. To inſtance ſome of theſe fainting diſcouragements that believers labour under while here, and which, in a ſpecial manner, do call for divine ſupport. And theſe are of two ſorts, viz. Either of a temporal or ſpiritual nature.

1ſt, Sometimes they meet with external afflicting providences, which are very diſcouraging: As, (1.) When they are tryſted with poverty and want, ſo that they know not how to ſubſiſt themſelves and their families; this is a great trial, and requires ſpiritual ſtrength from God to help them to carry right under it. (2.) When they are deſtitute of earthly friends, and have none to comfort or ſympathize with them in trouble; this is alſo a heavy trial that needs ſtrength from God. (3.) When they are loaded with reproaches and miſrepreſentations, and that not only from enemies, but even from friends; this hath been very ſinking to the beſt of God's people. (4.) When they are tryſted with the death and loſs of near and dear relations, pleaſant children, and helpful friends; this caſe hath been afflicting to many. (5.) When they are under bodily ſickneſs or racking pains, ſo that they have no reſt in their bones, weariſome nights are appointed for them, and they are full of toſſings till the dawning of the day. (6.) When they have a near view of meeting with death, that king of terrors, and terror of kings. (7.) When they are under the oppreſſions and perſecution of cruel enemies. Theſe are trials that the deareſt of God's children are expoſed to, and under which they would be ready to faint, if they were not ſtrengthened from above. And eſpecially theſe outward preſſures are very ſinking, and diſcouraging to them; eſpecially when they think it is their ſin that has brought them into theſe ſad circumſtances, or when their trials are of a long continuance, and it may be ſomething in them appears to be ſingular, as it was in the caſe of the Jews in Babylon. Then it is that God's people are ready to faint and ſuccumb; and ſhould look to God to ſtep in with ſuitable ſupplies of ſtrength.

2dly, Sometimes God's people are tryſted with fainting diſcouragements of a ſpiritual nature: As, (1.) When they find indwelling corruption, and heart-plagues ſtrong and prevailing, this caſe was very affecting and afflicting to David, Pſal. lxv. 3. and to Paul, Rom. vii. 24. and to the church when they cried out Iſa. lxiv. 6. Our iniquities like the wind have taken us away: q. d. The tide is ſo ſtrong we have no might to ſtem it. (2.) When the enemy is exalted over them, and ſatan doth harraſs them with blaſphemous injections, horrid atheiſtical thoughts, and violent temptations; he ſometimes tempts God's children to the greateſt of ſins, as he tempted Job to curſe God: How is the ſoul ready to faint at ſuch a time, if it get not ſtrength from God! and crieth out, How long ſhall mine enemy be exalted over me? It is like a ſword in my bones, when the enemy reproacheth me, and ſaith daily to me, where is thy God? O my rock, why haſt thou forgotten me? why go I mourning becauſe of the oppreſſion of the enemy?

3dly, When God hides his face, and they cannot get acceſs to him in any duty; ſo as they think, they are given up and left to ſtruggle with ſatan and corruption in their own ſtrength. That is a melancholy caſe to the ſoul, under which it would faint, without ſecret ſupport from God.

4thly, When they find their hearts wholly out of frame for any ſpiritual duty; by reaſon of much backwardneſs to it, wearying of it, and corruption working in them, which carries them away from God in time of duty: Such as atheiſm, unbelief, worldly-mindedneſs, heart-hardneſs, &c. Now the ſoul would faint, and wholly backſlide from God, if he did not ſecretly uphold it.

5thly, When the ſoul is brought back again, as it were, to the foot of mount Sinai, and made to hear the thunderings thereof, and the curſes of a broken law renewed: The law gets a new commiſſion to take the man into cuſtody, and put his feet into the ſtocks: So that old wounds are opened, and former guilt is revived, and God ſeems to behave to him like a ſtranger or an enemy. Thus he did to Heman, Pſal. lxxxviii. Now at ſuch a time the ſoul is ready to faint, and ſay, Is his mercy clean gone for ever? Will he be favourable no more? Hath he forgotten to be gracious? Hath he in anger ſhut up his tender mercies? But eſpecially if ſickneſs, or the meſſengers of death come and knock at the man's door, while in ſuch a caſe, O! how is he diſtreſſed with the melancholy apprehenſions of death and judgment? "Death (thinks he,) is near, and I "am moſt unready for it; judgment is approaching, "my accompts are unclear, and the Judge's face all "covered with frowns." Now the ſoul indeed would faint if God in Chriſt did not ſupport it.

6thly, As believers have many fainting diſcouragements, upon the account of their own caſe, ſo alſo upon a public account, in reſpect of the church and land wherein they live: as, 1ſt, When they ſee a ſpirit of ſlumber and deep ſleep fallen upon profeſſors, ſo that they are not moved with the judgments of God, when denounced both by his word and providence; yea, though the fire be kindled, and burning round about them, yet they lay it not to heart. 2dly When they ſee religion under a great and viſible decay among all ranks, many turning daily more careleſs and indifferent about duty, more ſlack about family worſhip and ſecret prayer, and daily more carnal and worldly in their converſation. When they ſee chriſtian-love decay, diviſions and animoſities increaſe, malice, envy, and hatred of one another prevail, and people growing more ſelfiſh, minding their own things, and careleſs about the things of Jeſus Chriſt. 3dly, When they ſee God's Spirit in a ſad meaſure withdrawn from the aſſemblies of his people; ordinances become as a ſealed book, dry breaſts, and a miſcarrying womb, ſo that Ichabod may be written on them, or God is departed; when they ſee communions lifeleſs, and not what they wont to be. Chriſt is abſent, and yet few ſenſible of the judgment, or laying it to heart, ſo as to lament after the Lord. They ſee many buſy to ſin him away, but few endeavouring to pray him back again. The ſincere ſeekers of God are often like to faint under this diſcouragement. 4thly, When they ſee many profeſſors making foul ſlips, yea, falling into ſcandalous ſins to the reproach of religon, and hardening of the wicked; and but few like to be found ſincere in their profeſſion. 5thly, When they ſee theſe that are truly godly, tender and conſcientious in their walk, public-ſpirited and concerned for the intereſt of Chriſt, removing and going off the ſtage: This is a very melancholy and ſinking diſcouragement to the few that are left behind, under which they need ſupport from God: hence it was that the pſalmiſt cries ſo earneſtly, Pſal. xii. 1. Help Lord, for the godly man ceaſeth: for the faithful fail from among the children of men.

II. The ſecond thing propoſed was, to enquire why the Lord lets his people be tryſted with ſuch fainting diſcouragements.

1ſt, To correct them for their former faults and miſcarriages; hence we read, Jer. iv. 18 when the Lord had threatened ſeveral ſad things againſt his people, he ſaith, thy ways and thy doings have procured theſe things to thee. God will have his people to ſmart for ſin; not to make any ſatisfaction for ſin, but to render ſin bitter unto them

2dly, To humble and make them low, in midſt of their great attainments and ſignal enjoyments: Believers are ſtill apt to be puffed up with theſe, if they were not kept under by humbling diſpenſations. Hence even Paul himſelf had a meſſenger of ſatan ſent to buffet him, 'leſt he ſhould be exalted above meaſure, 'through the abundance of revelations, 2 Cor. xii. 8.

3dly, To let them know the difference betwixt earth and heaven, a militant and triumphant ſtate. When things go well with us in the world, we are apt to ſay with Peter on the mount, It is good for us to be here. But when theſe go ill, God's people turn their tongue, and ſay with the pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxiii. 27. It is good for me to draw nigh to God. When we live at eaſe, we are ready to think ourſelves at home; but when trouble comes we begin to ſay, Ariſe, let us depart, this is not our reſt. It is not eaſy to wean us from the comforts of this life: and therefore God many times doth rub gall and wormwood on the breaſts of this preſent world, to imbitter its comforts, and take our hearts off it.

6thly, To cauſe his people long for heaven, and mend their pace, in the way to it, Phil. i. 23. There is a great difference betwixt our paayers in health and in ſickneſs; our repentings in proſperity and adverſity, Iſa. xxvi. 16. Hoſ. v. 15. He that in proſperity prayed with a cold heart and dry eyes, can in affliction cry aloud, and mingle his prayers with tears. Though heaven was much out of ſight and out of mind before, and he had ſcarce a thought of flitting; yet now when diſtreſs comes, he begins to ſigh with David, Pſal. lv. 6. O that I had wings like a dove; for then would I flee away, and be at reſt: I would haſten my eſcape from the windy tempeſt.

III. The next thing is to enquire, how it is that the Lord doth ſtrengthen his weak and fainting people. And here I ſhall do two things: (1.) Enquire into the nature of this ſpiritual ſtrength, the Lord doth give his people. (2.) Into the way and manner how he conveys it to them.

As to the firſt, This ſpiritual ſtrength, ſuppoſeth, that the ſoul is made alive, and raiſed out of the grave of ſin and a natural ſtate, by the quickening ſpirit of God. And that the ſoul is united to Chriſt by faith, who is the fountain and channel of all grace and ſpiritual ſtrength.

But more directly, God's ſtrengthening his people imports theſe things:

1ſt, The Lord's creating and implanting the habits of grace in the ſoul, which are the ſtrength of the ſoul: and therefore called the armour of God, and our ſhield and helmet, Eph. vi.

2dly, His increaſing of grace in the ſoul; for he not only plants theſe habits, but ſtrengthens them, and gradually perfects what he has begun. Pſal. xcii. 12. 13.

3dly, His breathing on his own work of grace in the ſoul, and thereby actuating his people's graces, and drawing them forth into a lively exerciſe: For God muſt not only plant grace and increaſe it, but alſo ſet it a-work, and bring it into action, Phil. ii. 13. It is God that worketh in you both to will and to do

4thly, The Lord's ſtrengthening of his fainting people, imports his letting out, and conveying of freſh ſupplies of grace to his people, in the time of their need. Not only doth he plant, increaſe, and actuate grace, but likewiſe he doth come in with ſeaſonable ſupplies and reinforcements to the weak and decayed graces of his people, anſwerable to their preſſures and exigencies. Grace of itſelf is but a creature, and ſubject to periſh, and would ſoon be deſtroyed by the frequent attacks made upon it, if it were not ſeaſonably reinforced with new ſupplies from its author. And thus the Lord, from time to time, feeds the believer's lamp with freſh oil; gives it more faith, more love, more hope, and more deſires; and thus he gives power to the faint, and ſtrengthens theſe things which remain when ready to die.

6thly, It lies, in the Lord's applying to the ſoul his gracious and comfortable promiſes, and thereby animating his people with ſpiritual courage, and reſolution to grapple with all their enemies and difficulties He ſhews that God is on their ſide, that his 'grace is 'ſufficient for them,' and that he 'will never leave 'them, nor forſake them,' Iſa. xli. 10. Pſal. cxviii. 6. Heb. xiii. 5. 6. 2 Cor. xii. 9.

7thly, The Lord ſtrengthens his people, by giving them an encouraging view and proſpect of a happy outgate from all their trials and diſcouragements, and of a glorious victory over all their enemies, Job xix. 25. Rom. xvi. 20. 2 Tim. iv. 7. 8.

II. I come to the ſecond thing, viz. To ſhew the way and manner how this ſpiritual ſtrength is conveyed to believers. And this you may take up in theſe following propoſitions.

1ſt, God has treaſured up in Jeſus Chriſt his Son, a fulneſs of grace and ſpiritual ſtrength for his people. As our Mediator is the purchaſer of this ſtrength, ſo he is the truſtee, to whom it is given in order to be beſtowed upon believers: This is clear, (1.) From the promiſes of God for giving ſtrength, they run in this channel, Zech. x. 12 I will ſtrengthen them in the Lord; (i. e. in Chriſt) and they ſhall walk up and down in his name, ſaith the Lord. (2.) From the precepts of God, which are in the ſame ſtrain, Eph. vi. 10. Be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. 2 Tim. ii. 1. My ſon be ſtrong in the grace that is in Jeſus Chriſt. (3.) From the practice of the ſaints, they al look for their ſtrength this way, Iſa. xlv. 24. Surely ſhall one ſay, In the Lord have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength And Paul ſaith, Phil. iv. 13. I can do all things through Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth me. So that Chriſt is our head of influence and ſtore-keeper. The ſtock of our grace and ſtrength, ſince Adam's fall and miſmanagement, is all put in Chriſt's hand; he is the great ſteward of heaven, the key of the ſtore-houſe is in his cuſtody, and on him we muſt daily depend for neceſſary ſupplies.

2*dly*, The way that Chriſt our head and treaſurer communicates his ſtrength, and gives out the neceſſary ſupplies thereof to his people, is by the miniſtration of the holy Spirit, and his gracious operations, and influences on their ſouls, John xv. 29 John xvi 14. 15. And for this effect, the Spirit of God dwells in believers, to excite and draw forth their graces to frequent acts and a lively exerciſe; and to give them theſe gracious aids and aſſiſtances, their exigencies do call for.

3*dly*, The way that the holy Spirit gives this ſtrength to believers is, in the uſe of appointed means, both public and private, Pſal. lxxxiv. 4, 5, 6, 7. Where we ſee, that theſe who would go from ſtrength to ſtrength, muſt dwell in God's houſe, and attend his ordinances. We expect not our daily food without labouring, tilling, ſowing and reaping; ſo neither can we look for ſpiritual ſtrength but in the uſe of the word, ſacraments and prayer.

IV. The fourth thing in the general method, is, To ſhew what are the great ends and uſes, for which the Lord gives this ſpiritual ſtrength to his people.

1*ſt*, He gives it to them for doing, or performing of duty; for without new ſupplies of ſtrength, we cannot act ſpiritually, nor perſevere in duty: Hence the ſpouſe cries out, Cant. i. 4. Draw me, and we will run after thee. And the pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. cxix. 32. I will run the ways of thy commandments, when thou ſhalt enlarge my heart. God's work muſt ever be done in God's ſtrength.

2*dly*, He gives it for ſuffering, and bearing of croſſes and afflictions, and we need God's ſtrength that we may do it without murmuring or fainting, Col. i. 11.

3*dly*, For fighting, we have ſtrong and dangerous enemies to conflict with, the devil, the world and indwelling ſin; and we have no ſtrength of our own to reſiſt or ſubdue them: wherefore, we muſt look to God for ſupernatural ſtrength.

V. The next thing was to give reaſons, why the Lord will certainly give ſuitable ſtrength to his people under all their exigencies.

1*ſt*, Becauſe it was purchaſed for them by their Surety Chriſt, and promiſed to them in him, Zech. x. 12.

2*dly*, Becauſe they were in the moſt ſolemn and ſerious manner recommended to the care of God by his beloved Son Jeſus Chriſt, when he was leaving the world, John xvii. 11.

3*dly*, Becauſe of their near relation to him, and his great love to them; they are the ſubjects of his kingdom, the children of his family; yea, they are as it were, the wife of his boſom; and will he not then take ſpecial care of them?

4*thly*, Becauſe they rely and depend wholly upon the Lord himſelf for this ſtrength and ſupport, Iſa. xxvi. 3. Pſal. lvii. 2.

5*thly*, Becauſe the Lord knows that his people have many ſtrong and dangerous enemies; and that they have no inherent ſtrength to hold out againſt them, having loſt that by the fall. Yea, he knows that they have a natural bentneſs to backſliding, that the ſeed of the worſt ſin is in them, and of themſelves they cannot ſtand before the leaſt ſpark of a temptation; and ſo would be infallibly undone, if he did not ſtrengthen them, Hoſ. xi. 7. Pſal. xix. 13.

APPLICATION.

Uſe I. Of Information. We may hence ſee.

1*ſt*, That worldly proſperity and carnal joy are no ſign of God's favour: For God's people are ſubject to many fainting diſcouragements here. Wicked men receive their good things in this life, but believers good things are to come.

2*dly*, We may hence be informed of the difference betwixt the two covenants, of works and of grace. Adam, by the firſt, was to do all by his own inherent ſtrength; but believers, under the ſecond, do all by borrowed ſtrength, and muſt conſtantly be beholden to God for new ſupplies. And it is well for us that it is ſo, for our ſtock is far ſurer in God's hand, than in our own. When the prodigal got his ſtock in his own hand, he preſently left his father's houſe, went into a far country, and ſquandered all away, and ſo would we if God ſhould truſt us with it. Beſides, by this gracious method believers are kept humble all their days, and put to keep up a conſtant correſpondence with a throne of grace, and give all the glory of their through-bearing to God's free grace. Bleſſed be God for the well ordered covenant.

3*dly*, We may hence ſee, how great ſecurity believers have for their through-bearing; almighty power is engaged for them; they are ſtrengthened and kept by the power of God, through faith, unto ſalvation. So that everlaſting ſtrength muſt fail before a believer can finally miſcarry.

Uſe II. Of Reproof.

1*ſt*, To thoſe who are too ſecure and confident when they attain to any ſpiritual comfort or joy, and do not remember the fainting diſcouragements God's people are ſubject to, while in this world. O communicants, have you been kindly entertained at this feaſt? Be not vain or ſecure, all things here are changeable: How ſuddenly was David's caſe altered? Pſal. xxx. One time he is mounted up in proſperity; but being too confident, he is preſently caſt down and troubled. And in Pſal. cxix. we find him at one time rejoicing in God's teſtimonies, as much as in all riches; and very ſoon after, his ſoul is cleaving to the duſt, and melting for heavineſs. Go not then to build too much on ſenſible conſolations, for theſe come and go at God's pleaſure; it is in heaven only you can have continual day without night or cloudings; but here you are to look for changes, yea, for fainting diſcouragements, therefore prepare for them by ſecuring a title to divine ſtrength.

2*dly*, To theſe believers who give too much way to fainting diſcouragements, and do not encourage themſelves in their covenanted God, and his ſtrength. I do not marvel, O communicants, though ye be caſt down, who are ſenſible of the hidings of God's face, the prevailing of heart-plagues, the buffetings of ſatan, &c. but only give not way to exceſſive diſcouragement: I call it exceſſive, when it is ready to make you give over hopes, lay aſide endeavours, indiſpoſe you for holy duties, refuſe to apply to Chriſt your all-ſufficient help, or refuſe comfort from God's promiſes of ſtrength and ſupport. Some indeed think religion lies in deſperate unbelieving thoughts, and in making of complaints; but ſurely there is no religion there, otherwiſe we muſt conclude Cain, Judas, and the damned to be godly. Religion rather lies in the actings of faith, and improving God's promiſes for ſtrengthening us in doing his will.

3*dly*, To Arminians, who maintain the doctrine of free-will, viz. That it is in the power of a man's free-will, to do that which is ſpiritually and ſavingly good, if he pleaſe to uſe his natural abilities. Oh! how little do theſe men know themſelves that talk ſo: for if it be not in the power of a man's will, when graciouſly changed and renewed, to do good, without ſuperadded ſupplies of grace and ſtrength from God, from time to time, as certainly it is not; far leſs can a natural and unregenerate perſon do it, that is dead in treſpaſſes and ſins.

4*thly*, To theſe communicants who look not intirely to God in Chriſt for ſtrength for the work and warfare, duties and difficulties before them; but lean too much to ſomething in themſelves, or ſomething they have got at this occaſion.

1. Some truſt too much to the ſtability of their own reſolutions and engagements: They have vowed and ſworn, and they hope likewiſe to perform accordingly. But do not depend upon theſe, otherwiſe they will ſoon fail you; as they did Peter after the firſt communion. The Pſalmiſt was under many reſolutions to keep cloſe to the way of duty, yet he ſays, Pſal. lxxiii. 2. My feet were almoſt gone, and my ſteps had well nigh ſlipt. And he acknowledges, it was nothing but God's mercy that held him up, Pſal. xciv. 18.

2. Others truſt too much to the ſtability of their gracious habits, without looking to God for daily renewed influences of ſtrength, for actuating and recruiting their weak graces. But, what is grace, faith, love, fear of God, repentance, hope? Of themſelves they are but vaniſhing things, and if they were not ſeaſonably ſtrengthened and ſupplied from heaven, they would ſoon die, Rev. iii. 2.

5*thly*, We may here reprove theſe who make it an excuſe for the neglect of duty, They want ſtrength. Oh! it is, becauſe they want will. For can you ſay, That though you have no ſtrength of yourſelves; yet you deſire to caſt your impotent ſouls in God's way, and aim at duty as ye can, looking to God for ſtrength, and pleading his promiſe? Could you ſay this, it were ſomething. Were you like a man rowing up the water, and ſtill beat back by the impetuous ſtream, you might have ſome ſhadow of excuſe; but when you do not make ſincere attempts, you can have none.

Queſt. How ſhall we undertake or perform duty, when we are dead, and find the influences of grace and ſtrength withdrawn?

Anſ. 1*ſt*, Whatever be our caſe or frame for duty, yet ſtill God's command is of binding force on us, and obliges us to do it.

2*dly*, No pretence of indiſpoſition can warrant our not obeying a divine command: for our deadneſs and indiſpoſition is our ſin, and one ſin can never excuſe another, Two blacks cannot make one white. So that in a dead hour, you muſt eſſay to do your duty, though you can do nothing but the very outward form.

3*dly*, You muſt aim at your duty to prevent greater evils, for if you neglect it wholly, your caſe grows ſtill worſe: Your deadneſs increaſes, your hardneſs, impenitency, darkneſs, weakneſs and indiſpoſition will ſtill grow greater.

4*thly*, By aiming at duty, you put yourſelves in God's road: And when like the blind man, you ly in Chriſt's way, you ſtand fairer for a viſit or an alms from him, than theſe who ſtay at a diſtance.

5*thly*, Duties performed, when we are indiſpoſed, may be very pleaſing to God. It muſt ſurely be acceptable to our gracious Lord and maſter, to ſee one of his weak or lamed ſervants attempt to go his errands, tho' he halt and make but ſlow progreſs in his way: Nay, this will move his tender heart to pity him, and give him ſtrength. And many a time have his ſervants got ſupplies of ſtrength on a ſudden, when they have been eſſaying duty. Their ſouls, ere they were aware, have made them like the chariots of Aminadab, Cant. vi. 12. Therefore, O diſcouraged communicant, perſiſt in aiming at thy duty, whatever be thy preſent frame. Who knows, when thou art lifting at thy heavy burden, but God will graciouſly lend thee a lift and lift it for thee.

Uſe III. Of Trial. O communicants, examine, if you have got any ſpiritual ſtrength at this ſolemn feaſt. Many a weak believer has found it a ſtrengthening meal to their fainting ſouls. Mark, if it be ſo with you. 1*ſt*, Do ye find your graces more quick and vigorous than formerly. As for inſtance, 1. Is faith more lively? Are you better pleaſed with the contrivance of grace, and method of ſalvation, than before? And are you now enabled to abandon your own righteouſneſs, and go to your Surety Chriſt; laying the burden of your ſins upon him, and leaning wholly to him for pardon and acceptance with God: And alſo looking to him as your head of influences for heart-purity and ſanctifying grace, and ſtrength to perform duty? 2. Is your repentance and grief for ſin increaſed? Do you ſee more of ſin's deformity, and abhor it as the enemy of Chriſt? And are you more afraid of piercing your Redeemer by it, and more reſolved againſt wicked company and temptations to ſin than before? 3. Is your love and deſire toward Chriſt more quickened? Are you more reſtleſs without his preſence? Would you part with your beſt enjoyments, in a world, for a ſight of his face? Are you more deſirous of heart holineſs, that you may be capable to ſerve Chriſt, and advance the intereſt of his kingdom?

2*dly*, If this ordinance hath been a ſtrengthening meal to you, then you will find more delight in duty than before, you will be inclined and enabled to pray more fervently, to hear more attentively, to praiſe more affectionately, to receive more believingly, keep the ſabbath more exactly, watch over your heart and ways more diligently: and, in a word, to be more humble and pious towards God, more juſt and righteous towards man, and more ſober and temperate towards yourſelves; yea, you will be more afraid to ſhift or neglect any known duty than you were before.

3*dly*, You will be more animated and encouraged to fight the good fight of faith, to reſiſt the devil's temptations, and the world's allurements, to ſtruggle againſt your luſts, and mortify indwelling ſin. And you will be ſetting conſcience on the watch-tower, to give warning of the enemies approach; and you will not be ſlow to take the alarm.

4*thly*, If you have got more ſtrength, you will be better reconciled to the croſs than formerly; and content with patience and ſubmiſſion to underly what troubles and afflictions the Lord thinks fit to tryſt you with for your ſoul's good; yea, and kiſs the rod when it comes, ſaying, Good is the will of the Lord concerning me.

Uſe IV. Of Exhortation. Let me hence exhort you to ſeveral duties.

3dly, Doth God give ſuitable ſtrength to his people in all exigencies? Let none abuſe this doctrine, by giving up with the uſe of the means that God has appointed; and neglecting to uſe their own endeavours. For though believers have Chriſt to lean to all their way in their journey to heaven; yet none muſt expect to be carried thither upon his ſhoulders, without ſetting down a foot. We may warrantably look to him for ſtrength for every duty; yet it is in our uſing the means that this ſtrength is conveyed.

4thly, Beware of leaning to yourſelves, and neglecting to look for this promiſed ſtrength. (1.) Lean not to your own purpoſes; for your goodneſs is like the morning dew. (2.) Lean not to your gracious habits; for theſe are but creatures, and ready to die. (3.) Lean not to your duties and performances; for they are defiled and unclean. (4.) Lean not to your frames; for they are fleeting and unconſtant. And beſides, it is highly dangerous and provoking to God, for to truſt in any of theſe; remember the fearful curſe that is pronounced againſt him that truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his arm, and whoſe heart departeth from the Lord, Jer. xxvii. 5 6. Whom then ſhall we truſt? Read Iſa xxvi. 4. Truſt ye in the Lord for ever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlaſting ſtrength.

5thly, Let all believing communicants bleſs God for this new and excellent method of ſalvation through Jeſus Chriſt. The new covenant is far better than the old. Now our ſtock is not in our own hand, but in Chriſt's, and he manages it for us; which is our great happineſs. As when God brought Iſrael out of Egypt with a high hand, he did not ſet them down on the other ſide of the Red ſea, and then bid them ſhift their way to Canaan: no, he led them on their way; yea, As a man carries his children, ſo he bare them all the way they went. So when God, in a day of his power, brings an elect ſoul out of ſpiritual Egypt, he doth not ſet him in the way with a ſtock of ſtrength in his hand, and then leave him to march through the wilderneſs alone: no, he leads and ſupports him all the way; for he knows that the whole country riſes on him in his march, and if left to go alone without ſpecial and renewed aid, he would never get to Canaan.

Queſt. But what courſe ſhall I take to get theſe ſeaſonable ſupplies of ſtrength from God, that I may be helped ſafe through the wilderneſs without fainting and upſitting?

Anſw. Take theſe directions.

1ſt, Labour to be throughly convinced of your own impotence and inſufficiency, that you may be weak in your own ſenſe and feeling; for the way to be ſtrong, is to be weak, according to the apoſtle's experience, 2 Cor. xii. 10. When I am weak, then am I ſtrong. Hence alſo it is ſaid of theſe worthies, Heb. xi. 34. Out of weakneſs they were made ſtrong, i.e. out of weakneſs felt and apprehended.

2dly, Humbly repreſent and bemoan your impotence before God, like Ephraim, Jer. xxxi. 18. I heard Ephraim bemoaning himſelf, I was as a bullock unaccuſtomed to the yoke. He felt his own impotence and averſion to what was good; and then he groans and looks up to God for power: Turn thou me, and I ſhall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God. And, in the next verſe, we ſee how readily the Lord ſtept in with pity and help to him. Thus alſo did Jehoſhaphat, and found help, 2 Chron. xx. 12. We have no might againſt this great company that cometh againſt us, neither know we what to do; but our eyes are upon thee; q. d. Tho' we be weak, yet we know thou art infinitely powerful, and full of compaſſion.

3dly, Uſe well any ſmall power you have, and it will increaſe. The right arm is more ſtrong and vigorous than the lift, becauſe it is more exerciſed: So grace, the more it is exerciſed, the more it grows, Matth xiii. 12. Prov. x. 29.

5thly, Walk tenderly and guard againſt every known ſin; for ſin lets out the ſoul's ſtrength, as bleeding lets the ſpirit out of the body.

6thly, Be often looking, in a believing way, to the Mediator Chriſt, your Treaſurer and Head of influences; and derive all your ſupplies of ſtrength from and through him alone.

7thly Carefully entertain the Spirit's motions, and fall in with them. Grieve not the ſpirit of Chriſt, which is ſent to ſtrengthen you; otherwiſe you will caſt away your ſtrength from you.

Laſtly, Acquaint yourſelves, O communicants, with the word of God, and its gracious promiſes of ſtrength; lay them up in ſtore againſt the time of need, and plead them humbly with God: For prayer, grounded on a promiſe is likely to prevail. This was David's argument under his faintings, Pſal. cxix. 28. Strengthen thou me according to thy word. And he had the experience of its prevailing with God, Pſal. cxxxviii. 3. In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me, and ſtrengthenedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul. I ſhall add no more, but conclude with the apoſtle's words, 1 Pet. v. 10. 11. The God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Chriſt Jeſus, after that ye have ſuffered a while, make you perfect, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

TREATISE
CONCERNING THE SANCTIFICATION
OF THE LORD's DAY.

THE PREFACE.

THAT wiſe king Solomon obſerves, Eccl. iii. 1. To every thing there is a ſeaſon, and a time for every purpoſe under heaven. And if there be a time and ſeaſon allowed for every thing and purpoſe, even the meaneſt things and purpoſes in the world; ſurely an infinitely wiſe God will allow a proper time and ſeaſon for the beſt things and purpoſes, and particularly for his ſolemn worſhip and ſervice, which is the moſt neceſſary and excellent purpoſe in the world. It is not enough, that we give God, from whom we have all our time, a ſhare of every day for his ſervice; no, we owe him alſo ſome whole days for his ſolemn and public worſhip: Yea, it is agreeable to the dictates of the light of nature, and of ſound reaſon, that one whole day of every week ſhould be dedicated to him for that end.

All nations through the world have had their ſeaſons and ſet times for devotion and ſacrifices. The heathens, who worſhipped dumb idols, had their feſtivals and holy-days, and particularly one day of the week, which they eſteemed more ſacred than the reſt. The Turks, who have taken up with the moſt unreaſonable deluſions and impoſtures, do ſtill retain the impreſſions of the rationality and equity of this thing, that there ſhould be a certain day of the week ſet apart for the ſolemn worſhip of God.—Indeed the light of nature, without ſome other help could not have determined men univerſally to dedicate the ſeventh day of their time to God; more than the ſixth or eighth day: But ſeeing the wiſe Creator of the world, and author of time, thought fit from the beginning, to meaſure time by days, and parcel out theſe days into ſuch remarkable periods, as weeks, or the revolution of ſeven days, to be conſtantly obſerved all the world over; it is moſt conſonant to reaſon and equity, that one day of each week ſhould be holy to the Lord.

But, beſides the light of nature, we have the light of revelation for this point; God hath expreſly appointed in his word, one day in ſeven, to be kept holy for his ſolemn worſhip; neither hath he left the particular day to mens own choice, but hath choſen it for them. And now, in the New Teſtament, he points out the firſt day of the week to be the Chriſtian Sabbath to the end of the world, as is made evident in the following treatiſe.

The Jews have their Saturday Sabbath, which they glory in, and call the Queen of the week: The Mahometants keep the Friday, as being Mahomet's birth day. The Parthians and ſome other Pagan nations obſerve Tueſday, and eſteem it above all the days of the week. But it is the diſcriminating badge of the profeſſors of Chriſtianity through all the world, to celebrate the firſt day of the week, being Chriſt's reſurrection-day, and hence called the Lord's day. Now, tho' the Jews and ſome few others plead that the ſeventh day from the creation is unalterable by virtue of the fourth command, it is ſhewed in this treatiſe, that the words of the fourth command are ſo framed, that they may be applied to any day of the week that God doth pleaſe to pitch upon for the Sabbath, whether it be the firſt or laſt of the ſeven days.—For when it is ſad, The ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; it doth not mean the ſeventh day from the creation, but any ſeventh day after ſix days labour which God pitches on; upon which account it is not called that ſeventh day, but the ſeventh day.—Neither is the ſeventh day mentioned in the firſt words of the command, which contain the ſubſtance of it; for it is ſaid only, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, not the ſeventh day.—Nor is the ſeventh day mentioned in the laſt words of the command, which contain the formal reaſon of it; for it is ſaid only, The Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day and hallowed it, not the ſeventh day.

As to the firſt day of the week our Chriſtian Sabbath; the great Lord of our time hath appropriate this day to himſelf, marked it with his ſeal, and hath put his name upon it, calling it, Rev. i. 10. Hemera Kuriake, the Lord's day; even as he calls the holy ſupper, 1 Cor. xi. 20. Diapnon Kuriakon, the Lord's ſupper; becauſe the one was his inſtitution as well as the other, and ſet apart for keeping up his memory, and ſhewing forth his glory. Wherefore no true Chriſtian or lover of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt will be indifferent about the keeping of this holy day: For as the holy obſerving of this day is an open and viſible owning of the Lord Jeſus (whoſe name it bears) for our Lord and Maſter; ſo the neglect of this day is a plain diſowning of him, and an open ſlighting of the benefits of his reſurrection. O that men would think on this, and conſider what they do, when they neglect or contemn the Lord's day!

Tho' the way of Sabbath-ſanctification be the good old way, appointed by God ever ſince he created man upon the earth; yet there is no way more hated, no duty more oppoſed by ſatan and wicked men: Which we need not be ſurpriſed at, ſeeing it is a ſpecial fence to all religion, and a great bulwark againſt the torrent of impiety that runs in the world.—And that true piety is ſo low in moſt places, and vice and immorality ſo generally prevail, is mainly to be imputed to the abounding neglect and contempt of the holy Sabbath: For common experience doth teſtify, that where the Lord's day is more ſtrictly obſerved, there Chriſtian knowledge, piety and morality do proſper moſt; and where the Sabbath is diſregarded, there all theſe do decay. The conſideration whereof ſhould excite all the lovers of God and holineſs, to uſe their utmoſt endeavours to ſupport the credit and maintain the dignity of the Sabbath againſt all its enemies.

This conſideration hath moved me to contribute my mite upon this excellent ſubject in the following treatiſe, which is partly controverſial, and partly practical; for confuting the enemies of the Sabbath, and for inſtructing all in the divine warrant for ſanctifying this holy day, and in the right manner of doing it.—There are two eſſential things in the Chriſtian religion, which all ſhould make conſcience of; ſincerely to believe its truths, and faithfully to practiſe its duties. The firſt of theſe hath great influence upon the ſecond; for, if the Chriſtian truths be not firmly believed, the Chriſtian duties will be ill performed: Now, the beſt means for promoting both the Chriſtian faith and Chriſtian practice is the ſanctification of the Lord's day.

Had it not been for the obſervation of the Sabbath, the truths of Chriſtianity had been quite razed out of the minds of the moſt part: For as the Lord's day, of itſelf is a bright and lively memorial of our redemption by Jeſus Chriſt: ſo upon this day we conſtantly have ſounded in our ears the truths of that religion which Chriſt and his apoſtles delivered unto the world, and the excellency of them inculcate upon us.—And as the obſervation of the Sabbath is a great preſervative to the truths of Chriſtianity, ſo it is alſo to the duties thereof. God hath ſet this one duty as a hedge or fence for keeping all the reſt; for, by keeping the Sabbath conſcientiouſly, the ſoul is notably diſpoſed and put in frame for ſerving God in every religious duty. The frequent recurring of this day, and the goſpel ordinances therein diſpenſed, ſerves to continue the remembrance of Chriſt and heaven among men, keep ſin and vice under conſtant rebukes, and put atheiſm and infidelity to the bluſh. Take away the obſervation of the Lord's day, then the worſhip of God would be caſt off, and atheiſm, profaneneſs and all diſorders, like a flood, would brake in upon us.

We may look upon the duty of Sabbath-ſanctification to be of no leſs conſequence to the practice of Chriſtianity, than Luther reckoned the article of juſtification to be to the doctrine of it, when he called it articulus ſtantis ſeu cadentis eccleſiæ: For, if once we make a gape in this hedge of piety, ſerious godlineſs will run out at it, and a flood of impiety and looſeneſs ruſh in upon us. It was ſurely the ſenſe of this, that determined the wiſeſt of emperors, kings, parliaments, and church councils and ſynods, to frame and publiſh ſo many excellent laws and acts for the ſtrict obſervation of the Lord's day, agreeable to the divine laws thereanent. It would be happy for churches and nations, if theſe were put in execution, and all ſorts of men brought to have a due regard to them.

But notwithſtanding of all the laws divine and human for the holy obſervation of the Lord's day, there are many in the age wherein we live, who adventure to pour contempt upon this holy day. Some there are who diſpute againſt the morality of the Sabbath, and diſown the ſtanding and perpetual obligation of the fourth command.—Others, tho' they own the obligation of the command ſo far as to forbear ſervile work, and attend pubilc worſhip on the Sabbath, yet plead for carnal diverſions and recreations after public worſhip is over.—Many would incline to the Papiſts way of celebrating the Sabbath, who after maſs and evenſong (as they call it) go preſently to piping and dancing, and then to the ale-houſe; the ſame way that the Iſraelites celebrated the feaſt of the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. 6. The people ate and drank, and roſe up to play. If this profane courſe were allowed, as of old, in times of antichriſtian darkneſs, many would then call the Sabbath a delight, and be, in ſome meaſure, reconciled to it; but, when they hear that the whole Sabbath is to be ſpent, in religious duties and exerciſes, they murmur, and ſay as theſe in Mal. i. 13. What a wearineſs is it?

It would be no grievance to many to ſee that old abomination of the book of ſports revived and authoriſed among us; I mean, that infamous declaration for liberty of ſports and recreation on the Lord's day, publiſhed by authority in the year 1633, and appointed to be read from the pulpits; the prelates conſenting to it, and perſecuting theſe miniſters who refuſed to read it. O what heinous God provoking wickedneſs was it for civil and eccleſiaſtic rulers to unite in promoting the profanation of the Sabbath by ſuch methods! As the heavy judgment of God followed them for ſuch avowed, profanation, ſo theſe in our age have reaſon to fear his judgments, who continue to be of the ſame profane diſpoſition. Oh, is it not evident that ſports and paſtimes do unfit the mind for ſpiritual ſervice, and take off mens thoughts from what is ſerious and ſolemn? Do they not put the heart out of frame for attending on God, and for holding communion with him in holy duties and ordinances? This is ſhewed more fully in the following treatiſe.

Again there are others who obſerve this day no better than the beaſts do: They only reſt from their ordinary labour, and ſpend the day in idleneſs and ſloth; which is to keep the Sabbath of an ox or aſs, not of a reaſonable creature. To ſanctify the Sabbath, it is not to keep it merely as a reſt from our common employments, or keep it as an idle day: but to keep it as a holy day, a day ſet apart for God's glory, and for promoting our ſalvation. But, alas! ſuch is the ſpiritual ſloth and idleneſs of many poor careleſs ſouls on this day, they labour as little for their ſouls on it, as they do for their bodies; they ſleep, loiter, ly at home, and ſeldom go to any worſhip at all; if they go out of doors, it is for their diverſion, to take a walk, to pay a viſit, or the like, but not to attend God's worſhip. Many, alas! will go a dozen of miles to a market for a little gain, that will not go one mile, nor a few ſteps to the church, to attend the goſpel market for enriching their ſouls. If the bell that calls them to the worſhip of God, did advertiſe them of a ſtage play, or of ſome idle paſtime, perhaps they would be found there among the firſt; but, for ſpiritual work, they have an averſion to it.

Moreover, there are many who go to church and attend ordinances this day rather to pleaſe a natural conſcience, or ſupport their reputation in the world, than to ſerve God or ſave their ſouls. Or perhaps they go becauſe it is the faſhion, or the way in which they have been brought up; but alas! leaving their hearts behind them, they preſent their bodies to God, and no more: And hence it is, that in the time of the moſt ſolemn worſhip they have their eyes either wandering after vanity, or elſe ſhut with drowſineſs, and ſleep; they find no delight in the Sabbath, taſte no ſweetneſs in ordinances, know nothing of communion with God in them: They underſtand not the pſalmiſt's language, A day in God's courts is better than a thouſand any where elſe. No, this day is to them the longeſt and moſt weariſome day of all the week; the religious exerciſes of it are irkſome and burdenſome to them. It may be ſaid of them as of Doeg the Edomite, 1 Sam. xxi. 7. He was that day detained before the Lord. They long to be releaſed from the ſervice of that day, and glad when it is over.—Alas! the minds of many are ſo ſet upon the world, that they complain in their hearts of the length of this day, as theſe Iſraelites of old, Amos viii. 5. When will the new moon be gone that we may ſell corn; and the Sabbath, that we may ſet forth wheat? They count all theſe days loſt days, that bring them in no worldly gain. Hence it was, that the Heathens (as Seneca tells us) counted the Jews a fooliſh people, becauſe they loſt a full ſeventh part of their lives, to wit by obſerving the Sabbath. But, ah! it is to be lamented, that not Heathens only, but alſo many profeſt Chriſtians, count the Sabbath a loſt day: O what baſe ingratitude is this to God, for the invaluable privilege and bleſſing of the Sabbath to the ſouls of men!

Laſtly, There are, beſides theſe mentioned, ſome prodigies of wickedneſs in the world, perſons who proſecute their lewd and profane courſes with more vigour on this holy day than upon any other; and ſo make this day of holy reſt the devil's working day, and conſume it wholly upon their luſts! O how daring an affront muſt this be to a great a holy God, to make that a day to ſerve the devil, a day to improve in vice and debauchery, which the Lord hath inſtituted to be a day for his own worſhip, and for our improvement in piety and devotion!

It is for remedying theſe woful abuſes of the Sabbath that I have written the enſuing treatiſe; and, to make it more generally uſeful to the poor, I have ſhortned this fourth edition of it, by leaving out the Help for prayer which was ſubjoined to the former, and poſſibly may be afterwards publiſhed by itſelf. I have heard of the uſefulneſs of this treatiſe to ſome who have read it: O that God would bleſs it to many more, and make it the means to preſerve and promote the love and eſteem of the Lord's day in the hearts of many!—As ſerious godlineſs never did, ſo it never will thrive nor flouriſh in the world, when or where the Lord's day is diſregarded: Long experience confirms it, that the ſin of Sabbath-breaking is a woful inlet to impiety and profaneneſs: They who once begin to make little difference betwixt the Lord's day and other days, will eaſily be brought to make little difference betwixt the Lord's names and other names, the Lord's table and other tables, the Lord's book and other books: Whereas a conſcientious regard to this holy day is a ſtrong fence to religion, being a mighty aw-band upon the ſoul againſt the commiſſion of ſin, and the neglect of duty.—The Lord's day is an unſpeakable bleſſing to a loſt world, and the ſweeteſt day that ever dawned upon it; it ought to be the delight of our ſouls, and rejoicing of our hearts. Every wiſe man, that knows the value of this day, will have a peculiar eſteem for it above all the days of the week, and will reckon every minute of it precious, and deſire that none of it be miſpent. What Chriſt ſaid to his diſciples concerning the loaves and fiſhes, he ſays to us concerning his holy day, Gather up the fragments, "Gather up the ſpare hours and minutes of it, count them as precious as the gold-ſmith doth the ſmall filings of his gold, let nothing of Sabbath-time be loſt, improve it wholly for God and your ſouls."

This treatiſe I recommend chiefly to families, becauſe the duty of ſanctifying the Sabbath doth nearly concern all families as ſuch: For all governors of families are charged, by the fourth command, to ſee that it be done in all their dwellings; and by the command, they are made reſponſible for their children, ſervants, and for all that lodge within their gates, that none of them be allowed to break the Sabbath. If any maſters of families be excited by this treatiſe to mind their proper duty, I have my reward; but let the glorious author of the Sabbath alone have the praiſe.

May all of us get grace to keep the Sabbath of our God, and chuſe the things that pleaſe him, and take hold of his covenant, that ſo we may be numbered among thoſe whom he will bring to his holy mountain and make joyful in his houſe of prayer! Amen.

GOD in his infinite goodneſs to fallen mankind, has been pleaſed to give us the Holy Bible, or canonical ſcriptures, as a perfect rule of faith and manners; containing at large the great truths, duties, and concerns of the Chriſtian religion. And theſe we have briefly compriſed in three ſuccinct compends, which are owned and received by all Chriſtians, viz. the Apoſtles creed, as it is commonly called, the Lord's prayer, and the decalogue; the firſt being the ſum of our credenda, the ſecond of our petenda, and the third of our facienda.

The Decalogue or Ten Commandments, which were ſolemnly delivered to the people of Iſrael from mount Sinai, do contain the moral law; being a fixed and perpetual rule of righteouſneſs, which God hath given to be obſerved by all mankind, in all ages and periods, to the end of the world. This is that law which the royal pſalmiſt ſo much admires and commends, and makes his chief ſubject in ſeveral pſalms, particularly xix, and cxix. which deſerves our ſpecial notice, and high eſteem in that reſpect.

The moral law, differs vaſtly in its nature from that of a poſitive law, which commands or prohibits things that before were indifferent, and only become good or evil by the virtue of the command, and otherwiſe: Such was that command to our firſt parents, concerning their eating of the tree of knowledge; ſuch were the ceremonial, and many of the judicial laws, given to the Jews: Theſe were binding only upon particular perſons, and laſted but for a time. But the moral law, contained in the Decalogue, is of univerſal and perpetual obligation to every rational creature, and can never be abrogated, nor diſpenſed with; ſeeing it is evidently founded upon, and agreeable to the dictates of the light of nature, and the principles of ſound reaſon, naturally engraven on man's heart.

This moral law God hath divided into two tables, Deut. v. 22. In the firſt table, we have the firſt four commandments, which immediately belong unto the honour of God, and inſtruct us in the duties we owe to him. In the ſecond table, we have the laſt ſix commandments, which reſpect the welfare of our neighbours, and teach us our duty towards them.

As all God's works are very beautiful in their order, ſo are the Ten Commandments, which have their place and rank aſſigned them, according to the dignity of the duties commanded, and the heinouſneſs of the ſins forbidden. As for the firſt table, the order of its commands is admirable; for the firſt command determines the right object of our worſhip, viz. the eternal and only true God. The ſecond directs to the means of worſhip, viz. that they be only theſe of God's inſtituting, and not images, or means of our deviſing. The third appoints the manner of our worſhip, that it be with awful fear and reverence; without blaſpheming or prophaning of his name. The fourth commandment ſpecifies the right time or ſeaſon to be employed in his ſolemn worſhip, viz. one day in ſeven, which is the ſubject of the enſuing treatiſe, the deſign whereof is to promote the religious obſervation of the Chriſtian Sabbath, as the beſt mean to revive religion when it falls under decay, and to maintain it in its life and power where it is.

Time is a jewel of ineſtimable worth, and upon the management of it depends the ſalvation of our immortal ſouls for ever; and therefore it can never be enough valued, nor too carefully improven. Time is a golden ſtream, continually running down by us out of one eternity into another; and yet its worth is ſeldom taken notice of until it is quite paſt away from us. How ſadly do we verify that word of Solomon? Eccl. ix. 12. Man knoweth not his time.

But of all time, Sabbath-time is the the moſt precious, and ſhould be redeemed with the greateſt care, as that upon which our ſalvation depends in a peculiar manner. It is the time in which the holy Spirit is eſpecially at work for convincing, converting and edifying the ſouls of men; it is the time ſet apart by infinite Wiſdom for the happineſs of the creature, and the glory of the Creator: And therefore it is the buſineſs of every one to enquire, how this time is to be improven aright. Now, for their encouragement and aſſiſtance in this matter, I propoſe to inſiſt chiefly upon two heads: To evince the morality of the Sabbath, and the divine appointment of the Lord's day. 2. Give directions how to ſanctify it aright.

CHAP. I.

Concerning the morality of the Sabbath, and the divine appointment of the Lord's day.

IN order to the handling of this ſubject the more clearly and methodically, I ſhall, thro' the divine aſſiſtance, propoſe and reſolve ſeveral queſtions relative to it.

Queſt. I. What is the proper ſignification and import of the name Sabbath, ſo commonly in uſe among us?

Anſwer. The name Sabbath is a Hebrew word, ſignifying reſt, the Sabbath being a day of holy reſt: And it is ſo called, becauſe God hath enjoined us to reſt this day from our earthly work and labour, that we may ſolemnly call to mind his reſting from his works, both of creation and redemption; publicly adore him therefore, ſolace our ſouls in his goodneſs, repoſe and reſt in the arms of his mercy, and meditate upon that eternal reſt which remains for the people of God in the other world.

This being the true import and meaning of the word Sabbath, we ſtill retain it, and commonly uſe it to ſignify the Lord's day, our Chiſtian Sabbath.

There are ſome indeed who are offended at the retaining of the name Sabbath, under the New Teſtament times, pretending that it is properly Jewiſh; tho' in the mean time, they are fond of the words prieſt and altar, which are much more ſo. But it is ſurely a miſtake to ſay, that the name Sabbath is Jewiſh, or peculiar to the Jews, and ſo not to be uſed by Chriſtians: For we ſee the Lord gives it that name in the moral law, which is of perpetual uſe, binding Chriſtians as much as Jews; Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. So it was not the Jews, but the great God, that gave the Sabbath its name. Nay, Chriſt our Saviour doth, in the New Teſtament, call his own day by the name of Sabbath, Matth. xxiv. 20. Pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, nor on the Sabbath day. Now, it is evident, that our Lord doth there mean the Chriſtian Sabbath, or his own day; for he is not only ſpeaking to Chriſtians, but concerning the flight of Chriſtians, which he knew was to fall out forty years after the Jewiſh Sabbath was aboliſhed, and the Lord's day come into its place. Surely he would not bid Chriſtians pray that their flight might not fall on the Jewiſh Sabbath, when he both foreſaw, and intended, that then they would reckon themſelves under no obligation to obſerve the Jewiſh Sabbath, nor under any reſtraint of fleeing or travelling on that day: (which even the Jews themſelves believed at that time, they might lawfully do in time of eminent hazard, as appears by the decree which they made relative thereto under the Haſmonians) and therefore he muſt mean the Chriſtian Sabbath, upon which he bids Chriſtians pray that their flight might not happen. Not that it was unlawful for them to flee or travel on that day in time of danger, but becauſe it would be a great addition to their trouble, if their flight ſhould happen at ſuch a time, as to deprive them of the opportunity of God's worſhip and ordinances.

It is of no weight, what is objected by ſome, that the Chriſtians, who lived in Judea among the Jews, could not be allowed by them to travel on their Sabbath, and therefore (ſay they) Chriſt bids them pray that their flight might not fall upon it.——For in the firſt place, The Jews not having the government then in their hands, they had no power of reſtraining or puniſhing of crimes. 2dly, The time which Chriſt ſpeaks of was a time of war and confuſion, occaſioned by the Roman armies invading the land, when no notice could be taken of ſuch caſes as travelling on the Sabbath. 3dly, The moſt ſuperſtitious were at that time put to flee and travel as well as the Chriſtians; which they then thought it lawful to do, as we told before. 4thly, If Chriſt had ſpoke ſo concerning the Jewiſh Sabbath, it had laid ſome foundation for Chriſtians to fall into miſtakes concerning the obligation of the Jewiſh Sabbath, and other ceremonies: which, to be ſure, our Lord would not have given them. And, if there had been any ſuch occaſion given, the Judaizing Chriſtians would certainly have improven it againſt the apoſtles; which yet we do not find. Laſtly, The learned Owen, Durham, Brown, and other writers on this ſubject, underſtand Chriſt as ſpeaking in this place of the Chriſtian Sabbath.

But granting that the name Sabbath were indeed Jewiſh and improper, (as ſome would have it) yet I am ſure it is ſtill preferable to that of Sunday, which is truly Heatheniſh, tho' commonly uſed by them in their liturgy, to the offence of many Chriſtians: For it is well known that the Heathen idolaters called this day Sunday, becauſe of their dedicating it to the created Sun, which was the chief of their planetary gods that they ordinarly worſhipped, as may be gathered alſo from 2 Kings xxiii. 5. Ezek. viii. 16. And hence, ſome of the ancient Heathens (of whom Tertullian ſpeaks) fancied that the Sun was the God of the Chriſtians, becauſe they celebrated the firſt day of the week.

I know it is objected, that ſome of the primitive apologiſts for Chriſtianity, as Juſtin Martyr and Tertullian, in their writings, call the Lord's day Sunday. But the reaſon of their ſo doing is plain; they were writing to Heathens, to whom the doctrines of Chriſtianity and inſtitution of the Lord's day were things new and ſtrange, and who would not have known what day they meant, if they had ſpoken of the Lord's day; and therefore they call it by the name they gave it, Sunday: For when we treat with others, we muſt expreſs things by the names that are common and current among them, unleſs we intend to be Barbarians to them.

But the primitive Chriſtians did not uſe to call it Sunday among themſelves, but commonly, the Lord's day; not the Sabbath, partly to diſtinguiſh it from the Jewiſh Sabbath that was ſo lately aboliſhed, and partly to wean the Jewiſh converts the more effectually from Judaiſm. But the true reaſon why ſome in this age ſeem to be offended at the word Sabbath, as being applied to the Lord's day, is, becauſe they cannot allow of any thing that would infer an obligation upon them to keep ſuch a ſtrict holy reſt upon the Chriſtian Sabbath as the Jews did upon their Sabbath: but I will have occaſion to ſpeak of this afterwards.

I need not ſtand long here, to ſhew the different ſignifications of the word Sabbath among the Jews; only in a word, beſide the ſeventh day of each week, or weekly Sabbath, (which is the moſt ordinary acceptation of the word in ſcripture) it is put alſo ſometimes to ſignify a whole week, becauſe every week had a Sabbath included in it, Lev xxiii. 15. 'Seven Sabbaths ſhall be 'complete,' i. e. weeks. The Phariſee ſaith, Luke xviii. 12. I faſt twice a week, orig. neſteuo dis tou Sabbatou. Likewiſe the word Sabbath is ſometimes put to ſignify ſeven years, Lev. xxv. 8. Thou ſhalt number unto thee ſeven Sabbaths of years, i. e. (as it is there explained) ſeven times ſeven years. Seven years was called, among the Jews, a Sabbath of years, becauſe their land reſted from culture or huſbandry every ſeventh year, in anſwer to the church's reſting every ſeventh day. Hence it is ſaid, Lev xxv. 4. The ſeventh year ſhall be a Sabbath of reſt unto the land. Beſides this, they had their great ſabbatical year, or Jubilee, which was every fiftieth year: For, according to Lev. xxv. 9 they were to reckon ſeven Sabbaths of years, or ſeven times ſeven years which is forty nine, and then to obſerve their Jubilee, or ſabbatical year. Laſtly, The other ſacred feaſts which the Jews kept monthly or annually, are alſo called Sabbaths, in regard of their reſting from labour on theſe days, as on the weekly Sabbath. Hence, Lev. xxiii. 24. the firſt day of the ſeventh month, which was their feaſt of trumpets is called a Sabbath: But the weekly Sabbath is commonly called in ſcripture, by way of eminency, the Sabbath; to diſtinguiſh it from all other Sabbaths, and give it the preference to all the other feaſts of the Jews.

Queſt. II. For what ends hath God appointed a weekly Sabbath?

Anſwer. 1ſt, God hath appointed it for manifeſting of his own glory, and particularly for diſplaying his ſovereign power and authority over all his creatures. It muſt certainly be an high acknowledgment of God's univerſal dominion and ſupremacy to have all the world, every week, in one day, lay aſide their own buſineſs, that they may jointly worſhip him in a public and ſolemn manner.

2dly, He appointed the Sabbath for the benefit of his creatures, and particularly in compaſſion to fallen man; for he ſaw man's heart would be ſo glewed to the world, ſo drencht in ſenſuality, that, were he left to himſelf, he would not allow one day in a month, nay, in a year, for divine worſhip; but would have drudged himſelf, his ſervants and beaſts, even to death, in purſuit of worldly things, without minding any thing that is better: Wherefore a merciful God hath ſtrictly commanded man to reſt one day every week from all worldly concerns, that thereby he might, in a manner, be laid under a neceſſity to mind his ſoul and the things of another world; and in the mean time, the poor toiled beaſts, as well as mens bodies, might have ſome reſt and eaſe, for their preſervation and ſupport.

But more particularly, the Sabbath is deſigned for our ſouls eternal welfare; in regard,

Firſt, The Sabbath tends highly to our inſtruction, and to the keeping up the lively impreſſions of the truths of Chriſtianity in our memories. The Sabbath recurring every week, doth ſtill of new lay before us a compendious view of theſe eſſential doctrines. The creation of the world, man's fall, Chriſt's incarnation and ſatisfaction, his death, reſurrection and victory, for completing our redemption: Beſides that glorious and eternal reſt above, provided for the people of God.

Secondly, It tends to promote holineſs, ſpirituality and heavenly mindedneſs in us; and that two ways. 1. By calling us off from temporal to ſpiritual employment. Senſual objects through the week are ready to alienate our affections from God, and wear ſpiritual things out of our minds; for recalling whereof, the Sabbath ſeaſonably returns, and preſents and entertains us with divine objects.

2. By affording us a lively emblem of heaven, and the converſation of the glorified ſaints, in celebrating that eternal Sabbath above: For, as in heaven there is no buying, ſelling, nor any worldly buſineſs, but a continual ſpeaking of God, enjoying communion with him, adoring and praiſing him for ever, without any mixture of other affairs; ſo the Lord will have an emblem or repreſentation hereof, as near as may be, given weekly to his people on earth, by the Sabbath, wherein they muſt lay aſide all worldly things, and be wholly employed in the ſervice of God, and work of heaven: And this in order both to keep them in mind of, and make them meet for, that inheritance of the ſaints in light.

Queſt. III. What is to be underſtood by the morality of the Sabbath, or fourth commandment ſo frequently ſpoke of?

Anſwer. When we call the Sabbath, or fourth commandment, moral, we mean that it is one of God's moral precepts, or a part of the moral law, i. e. the perpetual and unalterable rule given us by God, for regulating our life and manners: Alſo, by calling it moral, we diſtinguiſh it from the ceremonial law, which was binding for a time only, and abrogated by Chriſt's coming. The fourth commandment, enjoining the obſervation of the Sabbath, is not ceremonial, but moral; that is, it is not temporary, but of ſtanding and perpetual obligation, and which binds all men, in all ages to the end of the world.

But, that we may have a more diſtinct apprehenſion of the morality of the Sabbath, we muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt things that are naturally moral, and things poſitively moral.—Moral natural is, when the thing required is ſo founded upon, and authorized by, the law of nature and right reaſon, that it is fit and neceſſary to be done, though there had been no expreſs command for it; ſuch as worſhipping God, obeying parents, abſtaining from murder, &c. Moral poſitive is ſomething enjoined us, which, tho' it be agreeable to the law of nature, yet carries not ſuch a natural evidence in it, as to oblige us, without a divine revelation and expreſs command; but, being once revealed and commanded, it is perpetually binding as well as that which is moral natural. Now, the fourth command is commonly called moral poſitive, though indeed there are ſeveral things in it, which are of natural equity, and authorized by the law of nature and ſound reaſon; ſuch as, 1ſt, That there be a due part of our time ſtated and conſecrated for the ſolemn worſhip and ſervice of God, and particularly in public aſſemblies.

2dly, That this ſtated time or day ſhould be univerſal, and the ſame through all, that one man's buſineſs interfere not with another's devotions.

3dly, That this day ſhould recur in a due frequency, that it neither be ſo rare as to hinder our ſouls good, or indiſpoſe us for the duties of it; nor ſo frequent, as to deprive us of opportunity for our neceſſary ſecular employments.

4thly, That the holy duties of this day be not marred or interrupted by worldly employments or diverſions; in regard they tend naturally to draw of the mind from God and divine objects. Theſe four things, included in the fourth commandment, I reckon to be of natural equity or moral natural.

There are other things in it, which are of poſitive inſtitution, i e. binding only by a poſitive law, and expreſs revelation. Of theſe again there is ſomething, 1ſt, That is poſitive moral, i. e. of perpetual and unalterable obligation, viz. That the foreſaid ſtated time for God's ſolemn worſhip ſhould be the ſeventh part of our time or one day in ſeven. This by God's law, is become perpetually moral and unalterable: but, if God had not revealed it to us, the law or light of nature could not have determined us to it nor rendered any ſolid reaſon why the ſeventh rather than the fifth, ſixth, or eight part of our time ſhould have been ſo conſecrated to God: But the Author of nature, who beſt knows what proportion of time ſuits beſt both to mens bodies and ſpirits, and how oft it ſhould recur, ſo as to anſwer beſt the exigencies both of our preſent and future life, hath wiſely determined it to be a ſeventh part or one day in ſeven: And can any man ſay but it is a moſt rational and fair determination? Had he dealt with us ſtrictly, he might have taken the ſix days, and left us but one: But ſince he hath taken but one, and allowed us ſix, we ought to acknowledge that the Lord hath dealt graciouſly and liberally with us. Nay, had it been referred to ourſelves, could we have given leſs time than this to God, from whom we have all our time, nay, our very being, and all the good things we enjoy?

But, 2dly, There is in the fourth commandment ſomething that is poſitive ceremonial, or mutable, viz. The obſervation of the laſt day of the ſeven for the Sabbath. This indeed was enjoined at firſt, tho' not directly and principally, as any wiſe eſſential to the command for the Sabbath; but only in a ſecondary way, as a circumſtance of the command, which was to be altered when God pleaſed. It belonged not to the ſubſtance of this command, or the great deſign of the law, in what end of the week, the Sabbath ſhould be, whether the firſt or laſt of the ſeven days ſhould be conſecrate for it; ſince the ſcope of the fourth command is only, to bind us to conſecrate the ſeventh part of our time, or one day in ſeven, to the Lord: This is the morality of the command, and what is of ſacred and perpetual obligation in it. For, obſerve how the command runs, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy:—Six days ſhalt thou labour, and do all thy work; but the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord. He ſaith not, Remember the ſeventh day to keep it holy, but, Remember the Sabbath day, or holy reſt, whatever day it ſhall be appointed on.——Take the ſix days for your labour, and let God have a ſeventh every week for his ſolemn worſhip; this is the deſign of the law: For when it is ſaid, The ſeventh is the Sabbath of the Lord, it is not perciſely meant of the ſeventh in order, but the ſeventh in number; not the ſeventh day after the creation, but the day following the ſix days allowed man to labour; that day is the Lord's whatever day in the week it fall on. And tho' it be told in the end, that God reſted the ſeventh day, which indeed ſeems to be the ſeventh from the creation; yet it is ſaid, He bleſſed the Sabbath day, not the ſeventh day. So that it is plain, that, both in the beginning and end of the command, the Lord puts a remarkable difference betwixt the Sabbath or day of holy reſt, and the ſeventh day of the week, the day of his own reſt; implying that the ſcope of the command is to bind us to ſanctify one day in ſeven, whatever ſeventh the Lord pleaſes to chuſe, whether it be the firſt or laſt day of the week: and that the obſervation of the ſeventh day from the creation, is to be diſtinguiſhed from the ſtanding law of the Sabbath. For Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, is the fourth command, and would have bound us, tho' it had ſtopt there, and ſaid no more—Tho' yet I grant, that the obſervation of the ſeventh or laſt day of the week for the Sabbath, is ſo enjoined by the fourth command, that none could have altered it from that day to another, but he that is Lord of the Sabbath.

Thus you ſee in what ſenſe the fourth command is moral, and of unalterable obligation: and how it perpetually binds all Chriſtians as well as Jews, to ſanctify one day in ſeven for a weekly Sabbath unto the Lord. And now the day being changed by divine authority, from the laſt or the firſt day of the week, (of which afterwards) the ſubſtance, ſcope, or morality of the fourth command is nowiſe infringed; and it ſtill retains its authority and obligatory force as much as ever, binding Chriſtians to ſanctify the firſt day of the week, as much as it did the Jews to ſanctify the laſt: Even as a law, commanding the keeping of an anniverſary day for the ſovereign's birth doth equally apply itſelf to the birth-day of each ſucceeding prince.

Queſt. IV. How may the morality of the Sabbath, or the perpetual obligation of the fourth command, be demonſtrated againſt theſe who deny it?

Anſwer. There are many reaſons which prove that the fourth command is moral, binding us by a ſacred and perpetual law, to keep holy one day in ſeven, to the end of the world; ſuch as,

I. If the law for the Sabbath was given to man, and binding upon him in a ſtate of innocency before there was any ceremony or type of Chriſt inſtituted; (for then man did not need a Redeemer, nor any rite or type relative to him) then conſequently this command was not ceremonial, nor aboliſhed by Chriſt's coming, but is of moral and perpetual obligation: But the former is true; and therefore the latter. The conſequence of the firſt propoſition is certain, for the reaſons mentioned; and alſo from this, that the Sabbath was appointed to Adam upon a moral ground, which obliges all his poſterity, viz. That he might have freedom and opportunity for the ſolemn worſhip of God, without any diverſion from worldly things. For Adam, in his beſt eſtate being but a finite creature, could not be intenſely taken up with ſpiritual and temporal things both at once; his ordinary employment of dreſſing the garden would in ſome meaſure have diverted his mind, that he could not wholly give himſelf to devotion, and the ſolemn worſhip of his Maker: Wherefore God ſaw it fit he ſhould have a day ſet apart, wherein he might have an uninterrupted freedom for it. Now, if Adam needed a Sabbath, for the grounds above mentioned; much more do we need one, who are not only finite creatures, but corrupt alſo; and have ſo little grace and ſtrength for ſpiritual employment, and ſo many corruptions, tentations and allurements to draw our hearts from God through the week, which he had not.

Philip Limbroch and other Anti-ſabbatarians have no way to anſwer this argument, but by denying ſuch an early inſtitution of the Sabbath, and aſſerting, that it was not appointed till Moſes his time, when the ceremonies were inſtituted. But the contrary is evident from ſeveral texts.

1ſt, From Gen. ii 3. where we are told before man's fall, or any word of it, that God bleſſed the ſeventh day, and ſanctified it becauſe that in it he had reſted from all his work. Now the ſcripture notion of ſanctifying any thing, is to ſeparate and ſet it apart from common to ſacred uſes and purpoſes. And ſo it is plain from this text that God from the beginning of the world, did ſanctify and ſet apart one day in ſeven to be obſerved by all mankind, as a day of ſacred reſt, a day ſolmnly conſecrated to his worſhip and ſervice: And to lay a tie on us to obſerve it, we have God's example, of reſting this day from all his work, ſet before our eyes. And ſeeing God from the beginning of the world had a church in it, who would certainly join together in performing public worſhip and ſervice to him; they behoved to have ſet times for it, and conſequently a Sabbath: And what day ſo fit for that purpoſe, as the day which God hath ſanctified for ſacred reſt? That this was the ancient practice, may be inferred from Gen. iv. 2. 5. where we read of Cain and Abel their bringing offerings to the Lord, which was an inſtance of public worſhip. And, ver. 3. it is ſaid, In proceſs of time, they brought offerings, &c. Now, theſe words, In proceſs of time, may be as well rendered from the Hebrew, At the end of days, and ſo it is in the margin of bibles. Now, by the end of days muſt be meant the period of working days, which we call a week; and ſo it was on the ſeventh day, when ſolemn worſhip was (according to divine inſtitution) to be performed, that men brought their offerings to the Lord. That God's reſt on this day was exemplary to all mankind appears from his taking ſix ſeveral days to perform his works of creation, and the diſtinct recording of each day's work, and his reſting upon the ſeventh day. Certainly it had been as eaſy for an almighty power to have made the world in one day as in ſix. He that ſaid, Let there be light, let there be a firmament, and it was ſo, might, if he had pleaſed, aſſoon have ſaid, Let their be a world, and it had been ſo. And why did he not? Surely for our inſtruction and imitation, that we in like manner ſhould ſanctify every ſeventh day of our time after ſix days labour. And this is given as the reaſon of the fourth command, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy;—for in ſix days God made heaven and earth, &c.

The Anti-ſabbatarians are much gravelled with the forecited text, Gen. ii. 3. And to evite the force of it, contrary to all reaſon, they would alledge that the bleſſing and ſanctifying of the ſeventh day did not commence immediately from the creation, but only in the days of Moſes, when the command was given for the Sabbath, Exod. xx. and that Moſes only relates this in Gen. ii. by way of anticipation. But this opinion, is contrary both to the text and context; for it is evident to every man that ſeriouſly reads them, that Moſes relates the ſanctification of the Sabbath, as a thing done by the Lord immediately on the back of the creation, and nowiſe as a thing done or to be done by him two thouſand years thereafter: For, aſſoon as he had ſaid, that God ended his work and reſted on the ſeventh day, he adds immediately in words of the ſame tenſe, That God bleſſed the Sabbath day and ſanctified it. And if we compare this place with Exod. xx. 11. For in ſix days the Lord made heaven and earth, the ſea, and all that in them is, and reſted the ſeventh day; wherefore the Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day and hallowed it. It is manifeſt, that there he brings in God's bleſſing and ſanctifying of the Sabbath, not as an action then firſt done, but as that which God hath done long before, upon the creation of the world.

2*dly*, That this was done from the beginning, is further confirmed from Exod. xvi. 16. 22. 23. from whence commentators juſtly obſerve, That the ſanctification of the Sabbath, was a thing notour to the Iſraelites, before it was enjoined them by Moſes; otherwiſe there would be a ſtrange abruptneſs in the introducing of that matter. For, before ever there was any mention of the Sabbath, we find, ver. 22. that the Iſraelites of their own accord, gathered two days proviſion of manna on the ſixth day of the week, reckoning that the gathering of manna was a ſervile work, not proper on the Sabbath. But the rulers taking notice of this practice as done, not only without, but in appearance contrary to the orders given them, they bring the matter to Moſes, that they might know his thoughts of it. Whence it appears that the rulers doubted if the people had done right, ſeeing Moſes had commanded that every man ſhould gather it according to his eating, and lay up none till the next day, ver. 16. 19. and ſo they might apprehend, that by virtue of this order they might, lawfully gather it on the Sabbath alſo. But not being able to reconcile the ſeeming claſhing of theſe two commands, of gathering manna every day, and reſting on the ſeventh day, they come to Moſes in a ſolemn manner, for direction in this ſtraitning caſe. Accordingly, ver. 23. Moſes gives them a reſolution, and approves what the people had done, as agreeable to God's ancient law concerning the Sabbath, Gen. ii. which now was to be renewed and confirmed. To morrow is the reſt of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord. He ſaith not to-morrow ſhall be the reſt, but, to-morrow is the reſt; ſpeaking of it as a thing well known to them. Now, if Moſes had given them any previous direction about the keeping of the Sabbath, and gathering a double proviſion of manna, what was the need of all the rulers coming ſo ſolemnly to Moſes about this caſe? For, it is ſaid, ver. 22. That all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moſes. From all which it is clear, that the law for the Sabbath was extant, and the obſervation of it in uſe, before either the promulgation of the moral law at mount Sinai, or the giving of the ceremonial law, which was ſometime afterwards.

3*dly*, The firſt words of the fourth command, Remember to keep holy the Sabbath-day, plainly inſinuate the renovation of an old command, and not the enacting of a new one. It is highly probable, that the obſervation of this ancient law had been greatly neglected for many years before, while the Iſraelites were in bondage in Egypt, and obliged to ſore labour every day by their taſk-maſters, and ſo not ſuffered to keep the Sabbath as before. Hereby no doubt the impreſſions of the duty of keeping it, might be much worn off the minds of many; tho the memory of the Sabbath was not quite loſt, as appears from the peoples gathering double manna on the ſixth day of the week without direction. But, that they might guard againſt neglecting or forgetting the law for the Sabbath in time coming, the Lord renews the command with a ſolemn memento, Remember to keep holy the Sabbath-day.

4*thly*, Tho' Moſes makes not expreſs mention of the patriarchs obſerving of the Sabbath, it is no wonder; in regard he writes the hiſtory of ſome thouſands of years after the creation, in very ſmall bounds; wherein many things relating to the church in that period muſt certainly be omitted: for the account which Moſes gives of thoſe early times is only deſigned for an introduction to his hiſtory of the deliverance, erection and polity of the nation of the Jews, God's peculiar people, and the only viſible church he then had upon the earth. Nevertheleſs, we have no reaſon to call in queſtion the patriarchs obſervation of the Sabbath from the beginning of the world; but good ground to believe they did it, if we conſider the eminent piety of ſome of them, together with the long lives, by reaſon whereof it was very eaſy to hand down the inſtitution of the Sabbath, with others of God's revelations, from Adam to Abraham's days. For Adam's life reached to Methuſalem's time; Methuſalem's life reached to Shem's time; and Shem's life reached to Abraham. And, being religious men, they would not fail to teach and recommend God's ſtatutes to one another. And for Abraham the father of the faithful, we read expreſly of his commanding his children to keep theſe ſtatutes, Gen. xviii. 19. and, without doubt, he enjoin'd the keeping of the Sabbath among the reſt. And tho' it be not mentioned in ſo many words, that is no argument againſt the thing; for we read not of the church's obſerving of the Sabbath all the time of the Judges, which was near five hundred years; yet there is no ground to queſtion but they kept it all that time.

Several things might be added, which make it highly probable, that the inſtitution of the Sabbath was handed down by tradition from Adam to his poſterity, through all the world. What reaſon elſe can be given of Noah's obſerving the revolution of ſeven days while in the ark? Gen. viii. 10. 12. where we ſee him once and again waiting the fall of the waters by ſevens. He ſtill did let the ſeventh day or Sabbath be over, before he ſent out the next meſſenger: wiſely reckoning, that upon his ſuitable obſervation of the Lord's Sabbath, he might look for the more agreeable news to be brought him. What reaſon elſe can be given for the Heathens dividing of their time into weeks, and their weeks into ſeven days, and their conſtant holding the ſeptenary number as ſacred? Yea, (as Clemens Alexandrinus tells us) the ſeventh day of the week was ſtill held ſacred by the Greeks. All this certainly was conveyed to them by tradition from Adam and Noah, their forefathers; and not learned, to be ſure, from the Jews againſt whoſe cuſtoms and religion they had ſuch rooted prejudices.

II. A ſecond argument for the morality of the fourth command, may be drawn from the ſituation of it. We find this command placed in the midſt of the Decalogue or theſe moral precepts which God hath delivered to the world, as a perpetual rule of their lives. And is it any way probable, that God would place a ceremonial law, or temporary precept, in the very midſt of them? As it is certain that the moral precepts have the preference to the ceremonial in many things; ſo it is as ſure that the fourth command, or the ſacred obſervation of one day in ſeven, hath an equal ſhare with the other nine, in all the dignity and privileges of the moral law. For,

In the 1ſt place, This fourth command, as well as the reſt, was ſpoke immediately by the voice of God, in the hearing of all the people; whereas the other laws, ceremonial or judicial, were only given unto Moſes, and by him declared unto the people.

2dly, This command, as well as the reſt of the Decalogue, was written by the finger of God; nay, twice written by him in tables of ſtone: Whereby the Lord intended to teach us its fixed continuance and laſting obligation; and that by his Spirit he would have this law writ in the fleſhly tables of his people's hearts, never to be obliterated. But this was not done with the ceremonial laws, which were only delivered verbally to Moſes, and written by him from God's mouth.

3dly, This command was put and reſerved with the reſt of the moral law in the ark; whereas the law of ceremonial ordinances was placed in a book without on the ſide of the ark, and which might be ſeparated from the ark. The moral precepts were laid up within the ark of the covenant, as a ſign of their excellency and perpetuity, and of their being inſeparable from Chriſt and his covenant (of whom the ark was a famous type) therefore ſaith Chriſt, Pſal. xl. 8. Thy law is within my heart: But the ceremonial precepts being without the ark of the covenant, was a token they were ſeparable from it, and to be aboliſhed by Jeſus Chriſt, when the appointed time ſhould come. And, if the law of the Sabbath had been of this nature, to be ſure it had been placed on the ſide of the ark, with the other ceremonial laws, and not lodged within it together with the moral precepts, which were perpetual and unalterable. Moreover, if ſituation in the Decalogue, among the moral precepts, which were laid up in the ark be a good argument for the morality of the ſecond command, againſt the Papiſts, as it is improven againſt them by proteſtant divines, there can be no reaſon, why the ſame argument ſhould not be fully as concluding for the fourth command againſt the Anti-ſabbatarians.

III. A third argument for the morality of the fourth command, may be this: The reaſons and grounds of this command are in their nature, moral and perpetual, and as forcible upon Chriſtians as Jews; conſequently the command itſelf muſt be moral alſo.

The reaſons included in the fourth command are various. 1ſt, One reaſon, enforcing the ſanctification of the Sabbath is taken from the propriety of the day, 'The ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God;' it is the Lord's day, and the holy of the Lord, Iſa. lviii. 13. the day which the Lord hath reſerved for himſelf and his uſe, and therefore muſt be entirely dedicated to him; no man may incroach upon this conſecrated time, without the guilt of ſacrilege. And doth not this reaſon bind us as much as the Jews? Have we any power to alienate from God, what is his property, more than they had?

2dly, Another reaſon is taken from the equity and rationality of this precept. God is good and liberal to us, in giving us ſix days for our works: Wherefore it is highly reaſonable and juſt that we ſhould give him one day for his worſhip. It aggravated David's ſin, that he took the poor man's darling ewe lamb, when he had a whole flock of his own: As it did our firſt parents fault in pulling the fruit of one tree that God had reſerved, when he gave them all the reſt of the trees at their will; ſo it heightens our crime, if we rob God of his one day, when he gives us no leſs than ſix to ourſelves.—Moreover, it is highly reaſonable and fit, when our dying bodies have ſix days for their neceſſities and occaſions, that our immortal ſouls ſhould have one for theirs. Now, doth not the equity and juſtice of this command affect and oblige us as much as it doth the Jews?

4thly, Another reaſon is drawn from God's example, which is a rule to us: 'For in ſix days the Lord made 'heaven and earth, the ſea, and all that in them is; 'and reſted the ſeventh day.' Here we have a twofold example, both of God's reſting and working; and they are both ſet before us for our imitation. As God employed ſix days in the works of creation; ſo we are to make uſe of ſix days in the works of our lawful calling: And as he ceaſed from his works, and reſted on the ſeventh day; ſo we are bound to imitate him in that reſpect by quitting our weekly labours, and ſanctifying of the Sabbath day. Now, can there any reaſon be given, why we are not as much bound to follow God's example, in reſting one day after ſix days labour, as the Jews were?

A fifth is taken from the bleſt advantages of it; it is a bleſt day to them that keep it. And, is not God as able and willing to bleſs the Sabbath to us now, as he was of old? And, do not we need his bleſſing as much as the Jews?

Now, if theſe arguments be moral, perpetual and obligatory to us, as much as to the Jews; the command that is enforced by them muſt be ſo likewiſe.

IV. A fourth argument may be taken from the ſpecial marks of honour and reſpect that God puts on this command. It is not only engraven in tables of ſtone by the immediate finger of God, as all the reſt; but it is privileged above them, in ſeveral reſpects.

1ſt, It is placed in the firſt table of the law, and thereby preferable to thoſe of the ſecond table.

3dly, It hath a ſolemn memento prefixed to it, which the reſt have not; God uſhers it in with a remember, which is very emphatic, and is, as if he had ſaid, Keep this command always in your minds: forget what you will, forget not this. God ſpeaks, as a maſter that hath ſome ſpecial affair, among many others, to recommend to his ſervant: Among all other injunctions, he bids him particularly, Remember ſuch an affair; thereby ſhewing a ſpecial concern for it, more than the reſt.

5thly, The Lord preſſeth obedience to this command, with more reaſons and arguments than any of the reſt, which were enumerated before. And this he doth becauſe he knew the conſcientious obſerving of this command would engage us to make conſcience of all the reſt, and becauſe he foreſaw wicked men would attack it, and reaſon againſt it more than any of the reſt. Now, is it probable that God woold ſhew ſuch a conrern for a ceremonial law, that he would place it in the middle of the moral precepts, and preſs it with more reaſons and arguments than any of them?

7thly, The Lord entails many ſpecial bleſſings upon the keeping of this command, and denounces many ſad threatenings againſt the breaking of it. Read the 56th chapter of Iſaiah throughout, where the Lord not only pronounceth him bleſſed that keeps the Sabbath, but promiſes to give him a place and a name better than of ſons and daughters, to fill his heart with ſpiritual joy, to give him a ſpirit of prayer, and to hear his prayer: God will both give him ability to ſerve him, and then accept and reward his ſervice when it is done. Alſo read Iſa. lviii. 14. Jer. xvii. 24. where bleſſings, both ſpiritual and temporal, peace, wealth, plenty and proſperity, are promiſed to ſuch as keep the Sabbath. On the other hand, how terrible are the plagues he threatens againſt a land or people for breaking this command. Read Jer. xvii. 27. Ezek. xx. 21, to 26.

8thly, He hath ſeverely puniſhed ſinners for the breach of this command as if it were the ſum of his whole ſervice. He cauſed a man to be put to a cruel death for gathering ſticks on the Sabbath, Numb. xv. The offence might be thought ſmall, but God looks on the contempt of the Sabbath, as an affront to the Creator who inſtituted it, and to whoſe honour it was dedicate, and an incurſion upon the whole law, about which God appointed the Sabbath for a hedge. It was the ſlighting of the Lord's Sabbaths that cauſed Jeruſalem to be burnt with fire, Jer. xvii. ult. Many inſtances of judgments againſt Sabbath-breakers might alſo be brought from human hiſtories.

V. A fifth argument may be taken from the prophecies of the Old Teſtament. We find Iſaiah that evangelical prophet, pronouncing a bleſſing on thoſe that ſhould keep the Sabbath, even in evangelical times, Iſa. lvi. 1, 2. Thus ſaith the Lord, keep ye judgment, and do juſtice; for my ſalvation is near to come, and my righteouſneſs to be revealed. Bleſſed is the man that doth this,——that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it. That is a plain prophecy of Chriſt; yet, in his times he declares them bleſſed who ſhould keep the Sabbath: Yea, ver. 6. he puts the keeping of the Sabbath in a manner for the whole duties of the covenant. That this evangelical prophet is ſpeaking there of the New Teſtament times, there is no ground left to doubt; for he is ſpeaking of the time when the ſtranger and eunuch ſhould be joined to the Lord, and when there ſhould be no diſtinction of perſons, Jews or Gentiles, but both ſhould be alike welcome to God and his ordinances: And yet, in theſe times, there are many bleſſings promiſed to them that ſhould keep the Sabbath; which demonſtrates it to be a moral and perpetually binding duty.

VI. Chriſt himſelf plainly tells us, That he came not to deſtroy or abrogate any part of the moral-law, but to fulfil it, ſeverely threatening theſe who would ſeek to invalidate the obligation of the leaſt of theſe commands, Matth. v. 17, 18, 19. and, in confirmation hereof, he bids Chriſtians pray that their flight might not be on the Sabbath day, Matth. xxiv. 10. Now, the flight he there ſpeaks of, was to happen in Veſpaſian's time, about forty years after that all ceremonies were aboliſhed, together with the Jewiſh Sabbath, as I ſhewed before; and yet we ſee Chriſt plainly enough homologates the morality and perpetual obligation of the law for the Sabbath, under the New Teſtament: for he ſtill ſuppoſes that a Sabbath would be in being and in force, after all the ceremonies were aboliſhed; and therefore he warns his diſciples, and in them all Chriſtians to the end of the world, to make it a petition in their prayers upon any approaching calamity, to be delivered from the neceſſity of fleeing upon the day when the duties of the Sabbath ſhould be obſerved: Seeing it is no ſmall aggravation of our diſtreſs to be forced to flee and travel on God's holy day, when we ſhould be employed in attending the ſolemn ordinances of his worſhip, and enjoying communion with God therein.

VII. A ſeventh argument may be taken from the abſurdities that would follow upon the denying the morality of this command. For then, 1ſt, There would be but nine commands of the moral law, which is directly contrary to ſcripture; for we are told that there are ten in it, Deut. x. 4. And he wrote on the tables, according to the firſt writing, the ten commandments, which the Lord ſpake out of the midſt of the fire, &c.

2dly, It would open a door for atheiſm and immorality, and tend to caſt looſe the whole moral law: For if we yield that the fourth commandment is not moral, but ceremonial; why may not ſome, in the next place, riſe up and ſay, The ſecond and fifth are not moral neither? and ſo on, concerning the reſt. But the Lord having written the whole moral law in tables of ſtone, and the fourth command in midſt thereof, doth teach us thereby, that the whole of it ſhould be indelibly written in our hearts, and that the obligation of it, and of this command among the reſt, can never be extinguiſhed.

Laſtly, The univerſal church have ſtill held the commandment of the Sabbath to be moral, and of perpetual obligation, and that the ſeventh day of our time ſhould be conſecrated unto the Lord. The conſtant practice of all true Chriſtians, ſince the apoſtles times, in obſerving a weekly Sabbath, is a great confirmation of this truth; eſpecially if we conſider, that the judgment and practice of the catholic church have been ſo uniform, conſtant and uninterrupted in this matter, that we do not find ſo much as one heretick, or perſon of any ſort in ancient times, that ever preſumed to oppoſe or contradict this doctrine.

And as the foreſaid univerſal conſent evidenceth this truth or law to be of divine inſtitution, ſo it proves it to be a dictate of the law of nature and ſound reaſon, that one day of the week ſhould be dedicate to the worſhip and ſervice of God. Yea, ſo ſtrong is the light hereof, that thoſe who have apoſtatized from the true religion, and have taken up with the vileſt of ſuperſtitions, have ſtill found it neceſſary to fix upon a certain day of the week, for the performing of ſolemn worſhip; and ſo the Mahometans have choſen Friday for this end, and the Parthians obſerved Tueſday: For it is evident to every rational man, that the religious obſervation of a weekly Sabbath is the greateſt preſervative of a ſolemn profeſſion of religion in the world. Take away from amongſt men all conſcience of obſerving a ſtated day of ſacred reſt to God, for the celebration of his worſhip in aſſemblies, and all religion will quickly decay, if not come to nothing in the world. And it is to be obſerved, that, wherever religion flouriſheth in the power of it, there we find moſt conſcience made in the obſervation of the Sabbath.

Queſt. V. If the fourth commandment be moral, and perpetual; how then could the Sabbath be changed from the laſt to the firſt day of the week, as we ſee it done?

Anſwer. The preciſe day of the week for the Sabbath not being of the eſſence of the fourth commandment, but only an alterable circumſtance in it, the actual alteration thereof under the New Teſtament makes no more againſt the morality of the fourth command, than the change of the outward ordinances and means of worſhip under the goſpel, makes againſt the morality of the ſecond command. That the keeping of the preciſe ſeventh day of the week is diſtinct from the ſcope and ſubſtance of the fourth command, which is only to inſtitute one day in ſeven for the Sabbath, is pretty evident from the command itſelf, both the firſt and laſt words of it. The firſt words, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, do contain the whole ſubſtance of the command: the laſt words, Wherefore the Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day and hallowed it, do contain the formal reaſon of the command: And in neither of theſe is the ſeventh day of the week ſpoke of; which notifies to us, that the obſervation of that preciſe day is not eſſential to the moral and ſtanding law of the Sabbath, but ſeparable from it. If it be ſaid, that the command enforceth the obſervation of this day from God's example in reſting upon it; I anſwer, that a ſeventh day's reſt after ſix days labour is all the conformity which the fourth command requires of us to the example of God, i. e. any ſeventh day he pleaſeth to appoint.

Moreover, our natural reaſon argueth for what is above aſſerted: For though the Jews, who lived in the land of Paleſtine, might poſſibly have obſerved the preciſe ſeventh day from the creation; yet the joint obſervation of that preciſe time was impoſſible to all others whom the fourth command doth concern, becauſe of the difference of the climate where they live, which makes it night to many of them, when it was day to the Jews. Again, the computation of our time by weeks, conſiſting of ſeven days, each of twenty four hours length, was ſo interrupted in the times of Joſhua and Hezekiah, by the prodigious lengthening out of ſome days, that I cannot ſee how the preciſe ſeventh day could poſſibly be moral, or perpetually binding. From all which I infer, that the change of the day, by inſtituting the Lord's day, or firſt day Sabbath, in the room of the ſeventh day Sabbath doth no ways repeal or infringe the morality and ſubſtance of the fourth commandment.

Several proper queſtions may be moved upon this head.

Queſt. I. By what authority came the day for the Sab- bath to be changed? Anſw. By the ſame authority that firſt appointed the Sabbath, I mean that of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is true God, the Lord of the Sabbath, and ſovereign Head of his church.

There are indeed ſome differences among divines about this matter, ſome holding this change to have been made immediately by Chriſt himſelf; others, that it was made by the apoſtles: But both opinions come to one thing, and equally eſtabliſh the divine authority of the Lord's day; ſeeing the apoſtles were divinely inſpired, and infallibly guided by Chriſt's Spirit, in their eccleſiaſtical determinations, delivering nothing to be conſtantly obſerved in God's worſhip, but what they had the Lord's authority for, according to 1 Cor. xi. 23.

Athanaſius plainly affirms, that the change was made by the Lord himſelf; and indeed it is more than probable, that during Chriſt's forty days ſtay on earth after his reſurrection, wherein he continued inſtructing his diſciples of the things relating to the goſpel-church, and giving his commandments to his apoſtles, Acts i. 2, 3. he, among other things, appointed this change, leaving it upon his apoſtles to make promulgation of it to the world after his aſcenſion, and eſpecially at Pentecoſt, at the extraordinary effuſion of the Spirit on that day, whereby he publicly confirmed this charge.

When the ſacred penman of the book of the Acts tells us, that Chriſt continued for ſo many days ſpace after his reſurrection, to ſpeak to his apoſtles of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, i. e. the goſpel-church; he ſurely hath a ſpecial reſpect to the inſtructions he gave them concerning the ordinances and inſtitutions of the Chriſtian church: And as he inſtructed them how they ſhould change the carnal ſacrifices of beaſts into the ſpiritual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe, the ſacrament of circumciſion into that of baptiſm, and the ſacrament of the paſſover into that of the Lord's ſupper; ſo likewiſe he inſtructed them how to change the ſeventh-day Sabbath into that of the Lord's day. All the primitive fathers are very poſitive concerning the divine authority of this change. Ignatius, who lived in the firſt century, ſaith (in his Epiſt.) concerning the Lord's day, Omnis Chriſti amator dominicum celebrat diem, reginam et principem dierum omnium. Auguſtine, Serm. 151. de tempore, ſaith, Dominicum diem apoſtoli religioſa ſolemnitate habendum, ſanxerunt, quia, in eodem Redemptor noſter a mortuis reſurrexerit, quique ideo Dominicus appellatur.

Queſt. 2. If it be aſked, What was the neceſſity of this change? I anſwer it was neceſſary, 1ſt, To manifeſt Chriſt's glory and equality with the Father; for Chriſt ſaith, That men ſhall honour the Son, as they honour the Father, John v. 23. Wherefore, as they honoured the Father with a Sabbath, upon account of his reſt from creation; ſo it was fit they ſhould honour the Sun with a Sabbath, upon account of his reſt from redemption, which was a far more glorious work: And therefore, in honour of the Son, the Chriſtian Sabbath is, by the Spirit of God, called the Lord's day.

2dly, The change of the day was neceſſary to manifeſt Chriſt's headſhip over his church, and that he is the ſovereign Lord over his own houſe, worſhip and ordinances; and particularly, that he is Lord of the Sabbath, which title he had aſſumed before in Mark ii. 28. And accordingly he would have this convincingly diſplayed to the world, by ſhewing that he is able to change the day of his ſolemn worſhip.

3dly, Since he hath thought fit to appoint a new manner of his worſhip, it was meet to appoint a new time of it alſo. The Levitical ſervice and ceremonial worſhip of the Sabbath day being changed, it was proper the day of the Sabbath ſhould be changed alſo, to ſhew the more clearly the expiration of that worſhip, and to induce the Jews the more eaſily to lay it aſide, and keep Chriſtians the more from judaizing.

4thly, There were ſome things in the obſervation of the ſeventh-day Sabbath peculiar to the Iſraelites, that belonged properly to that nation, and not to others: As, 1. God deſigned it to be a ſignal or mark for diſtinguiſhing that people from the reſt of the world; therefore he calls the keeping of this day, a ſign betwixt him and the children of Iſrael, throughout their generations, Exod. xxxi. 13. 17. i. e. a ſign they were God's covenanted people, a nation that ſtood in a peculiar relation to God, above all others in the world. But, this relation coming at length to be altered, it was fit the ſign ſhould be alſo changed. 2. When God revived the inſtitution of the Sabbath to the Jewiſh nation, he enjoined them to keep it in memory of their deliverance from Egypt, as well as the creation of the world: for it is very obſervable in Deut. v. when Moſes called the Iſraelites together in a ſolemn manner, to put them in mind of the covenant God had made with them in Horeb, he repeats the Ten Commandments to them: But, in repeating of the fourth, he leaves out the argument of keeping the Sabbath, taken from God's creating of the world in ſix days, and reſting the ſeventh; and, in the room of it, puts in their miraculous deliverance from Egypt: For, in the cloſe of the fourth command, he ſays, Deut. v. 15. Remember that thou waſt a ſervant, in the land of Egypt, and the Lord thy God brought thee out thence, through a mighty hand, and by a ſtretched out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day. And hence ſome think, that it was not preciſely the ſeventh day from the creation that was appointed for the Jewiſh Sabbath, but the ſeventh day from their deliverance from Egypt.—Laſtly, This day was alſo appointed them, for to call to mind their wonderful deliverance at the Red-ſea, which ſeveral learned writers are of opinion was wrought for them on the morning of the Jewiſh Sabbath, and ſeems very probable from Exod. xii 15, 16, 17. and hence they are enjoined to reſt, and ceaſe from their labour on this day, in rememberance of their being miraculouſly reſcued on it from Egypt, and of their reſting from the cruel bondage thereof. From all which it appears, that there was ſomething in this commandment peculiar to the Jewiſh nation, and which belonged not to others. And whence I may well infer, that if the deliverance by Moſes, from Egypt and the Red-ſea, was a good reaſon for the Sabbath of the Jews, ſurely the eternal redemption by Chriſt, from ſin and hell, is a much ſtronger and better reaſon for the Sabbath of the Chriſtians.

5thly, In the command for the ſeventh-day Sabbath, there were ſome things typical and myſtical, peculiar to the Old Teſtament times, and which were to be fulfilled in the Meſſiah and goſpel-times; and therefore to be aboliſhed. 1. The ſeventh day Sabbath repreſented Chriſt, who is the only reſt, centre, and ſatisfaction of our ſouls; therefore the apoſtle tells us, Col. ii. 17. That the Sabbath was a ſhadow of things to come, but the body is of Chriſt, i. e He is the ſubſtance which this ſhadow or type repreſented.

2. It ſignified the great Sabbath of the New Teſtament, or the happy times of the goſpel, wherein the faithful were to reſt from the ſervile rites and burdenſome ceremonies of the law.

3. The ſeventh-day Sabbath being a ſhadow of things to come, typified the believer's reſt and deliverance by Jeſus Chriſt from the bondage of ſin, and being brought into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

4. The Jewiſh Sabbath, with its ceremonial and typical worſhip under the law, ſhadowed forth the Chriſtian Sabbath, with its pure and ſpiritual worſhip under the goſpel, and ſo is expired.

5. The reſt of the ſeventh day Sabbath was a type and ſhadow of Chriſt's reſting upon that day in the grave, and therefore could not be continued after his reſurrection, more than any of the other types fulfilled in Chriſt. Our Saviour, by chooſing to ly buried throughout this day in the grave, did thereby bury the Jewiſh ſeventh-day Sabbath with the reſt of their types and ſhadows Hence it is that the apoſtle Paul, Col ii. 16. 17. doth expreſsly number the Sabbath among the Old Teſtament ſhadows, that ceaſed upon their being accompliſhed in Chriſt the ſubſtance and Antitype, who came in place of all the legal ſhadows. Now, it being evident from the foreſaid text, that the Jewiſh Sabbath was abrogated by Chriſt's death and reſurrection; it is neceſſary to believe that either Chriſt, by himſelf or his apoſtles, did appoint another day in lieu thereof, for the ſolemn worſhip of God; otherwiſe the ſtate of the Chriſtian church under the New Teſtament would be far worſe than that of the Jews under the Old, which is abſurd.

6 The two ages before and after Chriſt are reckoned as two diverſe worlds, Heb. ii. 5. wherefore as when the firſt world was made by creation, there was a day ſet apart in memory thereof; ſo, when the world was renewed by redemption, it was fit there ſhould be a day kept in honour and memory of that great work: For, if the perfecting the work of the firſt creation deſerved to have a day ſet apart for celebrating the power and glory of the Author, much more doth the finiſhing the new creation, or reſtoration of the world, deſerve a day to be conſecrated for the commemorating of that, in regard the glorious attributes of God do ſhine far more brightly in this, than in the other.

Queſt. 3. If it be aſked, Why was the Sabbath changed to the firſt day of the week?

I anſwer, For many reaſons.

1. The great reaſon given for obſerving the laſt day of the week doth plead more ſtrongly now for the obſervation of the firſt day of the week. The reaſon for obſerving the ſeventh day was becauſe the Lord reſted that day from the great work he had made, viz. of creation, which ought to be remembered with thankfulneſs and praiſe. Now, when God gave the ten commandments, there was no greater work in the world than the creation; and therefore it was fit that the day of God's reſt from his greateſt work ſhould be the Sabbath, or day of reſt to the world. But, ſhould God thereafter work a greater work than creating heaven and earth; then, by parity of reaſon, and even by virtue of the fourth commandment, the day of God's reſt from that, ſhould be the Sabbath of the world Now, the work of redemption, which the Lord perfected, and reſted from on the firſt day of the week is far greater than the work of creation; it doth even eclipſe and ſwallow it up, as the temple did the tabernacle: It is far more valued and eſteemed by God the Author, and ought to be far more regarded and remembered by us on many accounts.

1ſt, In regard that in the world's redemption there is a far more glorious diſplay of the divine attributes, God's power, wiſdom, juſtice, goodneſs, &c. than in the world's creation.

2dly, It is much more for our benefit and comfort than the work of creation: we could have had no comfort in this without the other; for the whole creation groaned under the burden of ſin, and, by reaſon thereof, all the creatures were at enmity with us, Without redemption what pleaſure can we take in our creation, ſince by it we are made capable only of everlaſting miſery and deſtruction: Alas! there are no comforts in being creatures, if we be not made new creatures; and there is no doing of that, but by this new and glorious method.

3dly, In regard the ſecond creation was a work of far greater difficulty and expence than the firſt. The firſt was finiſhed by the word of his mouth, but the ſecond could not be perfected but by the blood and death of his dear Son: The firſt was finiſhed in ſix days; but it coſt the Son of God above thirty three years painful travail and ſuffering in the world, to effectuate the ſecond. In the firſt there was no oppoſition; for, ſince the world was made out of nothing, there was nothing to make reſiſtance to the Creator: But in the ſecond creation, or redemption of the world, there was a formidable oppoſition made by juſtice, men and devils. It was wonderful for the glorions fabrick of heaven and earth to be made out of nothing; but much more for the Maker of all things to be made of a woman, Jeſus Chriſt to be born of his own creature. In the firſt creation God made us like himſelf; but here the Lord makes himſelf like us. The glorious Creator is made a creature, yea, made ſin, made a curſe, to ſave man, his ſinful creature, from the curſe. We may indeed ſay, We are fearfully and wonderfully made; but much more are we fearfully and wonderfully redeemed. Creation was the work of God's fingers, Pſal. viii. 3. but redemption the work of his arm, Luke i. 51. We uſe the ſtrength of the arm, to effectuate what the fingers cannot do. So that we ſee it is a far greater work and miracle to bring us back from hell, than to bring us from nothing; to make us ſaints, than to make us men and women. Well then, if God's reſting from his work of creation on the ſeventh day, determined mankind to keep this day for a Sabbath in a thankful remembrance thereof, much more ſhould God incarnate's raiſing a new world at a far greater charge, and reſting from his labour of love on the firſt day of the week, determine us to obſerve that day for a Sabbath, in an adoring remembrance of his infinite glory and goodneſs diſplayed in this ſtupendous work.

4thly, The Lord himſelf delights and rejoices much more in the new creation, than in the old, his glory being more conſpicuous by the one than by the other; and that which is eſteemed and preferred by him, ought to be ſo by us. The Lord indeed took pleaſure in the review of his works in the firſt creation, when he at firſt reſted from the ſame: But theſe being afterwards all corrupted and deformed by ſin, his complacency therein was exceedingly diminiſhed. Hence, Gen. vi. it is ſaid, 'It repented him he had made man:' Wherefore it was proper and neceſſary to transfer the Sabbath to the day of the world's new creation or reſtoration, effected and completed by the reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt the world's Redeemer, in which day the Lord reſted from theſe his more glorious works, delighting himſelf in the review thereof with an everlaſting complacency.

Laſtly, To confirm what is ſaid, let it be obſerved, that God ſo far preferred the work of redemption to that of creation, that he changed the beginning of the year (as Dr Lightfoot remarks on Exod. xii.) from the time of the world's creation, to the time of the paſſover, and the Iſraelites deliverance from Egypt by Moſes, as being an eminent type of our redemption from ſin and hell by Jeſus Chriſt. We have reaſon to believe, that, from the creation of the world, the year began in September, at the time of the autumnal Equinox; for we find the fruits were on the trees at the creation, Gen. i. 12. But when God inſtituted the firſt paſſover, which immediately uſhered in the Iſraelites deliverance from Egypt which was in March, at the vernal Equinox; he changed the beginning of the year, and ordered it to commence from that time, Exod xii. 2. This month ſhall be unto you the beginning of months, it ſhall be the firſt month of the year to you. Now, if the beginning of the year was changed upon the account of the type, a day might well be changed upon the account of the antitype. If the month of the figurative redemption was ſo remarkable, that the month of the world's creation muſt give place to it; then ſurely the ſubſtance itſelf, when it appeared, might well be the cauſe of the change of a day, and the ſeventh day of the creation give place to the firſt day of the finiſhing of our redemption.

II. Since there was a neceſſity of changing the Sabbath from the ſeventh day of the week, as is already proven; it could be into no other day ſo fitly, as the firſt day of the week, on ſeveral accounts.

1ſt, Becauſe of its anſwering the intent of the command better than another day: For if the Sabbath had been changed into the ſecond, third, fourth, or any other day of the week than the firſt, the morality of the fourth command had been infringed: For ſo God would not have had one day, and man ſix working days together of one and the ſame week; as the command requires. But now it holds in a conſtant courſe. God hath his one day, and we our ſix together in one and the ſame week; as it was from the beginning. And, by this wiſe alteration, there was never a week without a Sabbath, and never a week had two Sabbaths. For as the week ended with the Jews Sabbath, ſo the next week began with the Chriſtian Sabbath; which could not have been, if any other ſeventh day had been choſen.

2dly, Since there behoved to be a change, it was very agreeable to reaſon to begin the week with God, and that our Creator and Benefactor ſhould be firſt ſerved, and have his portion of the week aſſigned to him in the firſt place, that his worſhip might have the preference to our labour; and alſo, that our conſecrating the firſt fruits of the week to God, might in a manner ſanctify the whole, obtain his bleſſing on the week's labour, and make all our works therein the more acceptable to him.

3dly, The firſt day of the week is the fitteſt for keeping up the memory both of the firſt and ſecond creation of the world. For it being a day of reſt always ſucceeding our ſix days labour, puts us in mind of God's finiſhing the works of creation in ſix days ſpace, and reſting the ſeventh. And eſpecially, it being the firſt day of the week, ſerves to mind us of the beginning of the world, and of its firſt creation; ſeeing it was on this day that God began his glorious work, ſaying, Let there be light. But in a ſpecial manner, this day ſerves to perpetuate the memorial of this greater bleſſing of the world's new creation or redemption by Jeſus Chriſt; ſince on it he finiſhed this work by his reſurrection. It was on this day that not only that temporal and periſhing light did firſt ſhine at the firſt creation; ——but alſo that eternal and heavenly light brake out in a meridian ſplendor, the Sun of righteouſneſs aroſe from a dark grave, and ſhined on a dark world, and brought light, life, peace, healing, and all mercies under his wings.

4thly, It is the fitteſt day for celebrating the honour and memory of all the perſons of the glorious Trinity; For tho' Jeſus Chriſt the ſecond perſon of the Trinity, be honoured by this day in a peculiar manner, upon account of his glorious reſt this day from the work of redemption; yet the Father and Holy Ghoſt are this day remarkably honoured alſo. The Father did not only begin this day to create but he was the glorious contriver of our happineſs, and ſent his Son to carry on that bleſſed work of redemption, which was this day happily completed. Alſo the Holy Ghoſt is honoured by obſerving this day, ſince he gloriouſly deſcended at Pentecoſt on this day for fitting and furniſhing the apoſtles for the work of the goſpel: and he is the bleſſed Applier of the redemption finiſhed this day by Jeſus Chriſt, and is in a more eſpecial manner at work this day, in making ſaving application of it unto elect ſouls, by the preaching of the goſpel.

III. The Sabbath is changed to the firſt day of the week, becauſe it is the moſt honourable and glorious day to Chriſt and his church, that ever dawned upon the world: The moſt honourable day to our Redeemer, and the moſt joyful to the redeemed; and therefore ought to be kept in perpetual remembrance.

Hence, by the Spirit of God, and ever ſince Chriſt's reſurrection upon this day, it is called the Lord's day, it being the moſt glorious day ever he had. It was in an eminent manner his birth-day, for in it he was born from the dead: in it God ſolemnly owned him to be his only begotten Son; hence that word in Pſal. ii. Thou art my Son this day I have begotten thee, is applied to the day of his reſurrection, Acts xiii. 13. He was this day declared to be the Son of God with power, Rom. i. 4. For, at his riſing, he made the earth to ſhake, the graves to open, the ſtones to roll away, the dead to riſe and appear, the ſoldiers to tremble and flee, and both ſaints and angels to come and attend him. And was not this a triumphant day to him? Yea, on this day he conquered the grave, death and hell, and ſhewed himſelf to be the Captain of our ſalvation, triumphing over his and our enemies. His birth and death did ſhew him to be truly man, but his reſurrection did manifeſt him to be truly God, and the great Redeemer of the world. Hereby he gave full proof, that he had compleatly finiſhed the work of our redempton, paid the elect's debt, ſatisfied divine juſtice, cancelled our bond and obtained an ample diſcharge, ſince he, as our great Cautioner, was now let out of priſon. Was not this then a joyful day, a day to be had in everlaſting remembrance? The day our Jonas came ſafe out of the whale's belly; the day our Samſon carried away the gates of Gaza. Now it was that death loſt its ſting; now the grave and hell loſt their purchaſe; now the ſerpent's head was bruiſed; now were they all ſwallowed up in victory; now it was that our glorious Redeemer reſted from all the works of ſuffering and redemption, and rejoiced in the review thereof, with infinite complacency. And ought not we, who are ſo much concerned, chearfully to reſt this day with Chriſt, in a thankful remembrance of all he hath done?

IV. This day was propheſied of long before, Pſal. cxviii. 24. This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it. The current of expoſitors underſtand this day of our Chriſtian Sabbath, and of Chriſt's reſurrection thereon; for here plainly there is a prophecy of Chriſt, and of a remarkable day whereat the world ſhould wonder, and the church rejoice. This is the day which the Lord hath made, i. e. of which God is author. He made it, not by creation only, as he made all days; but by conſecration, deſigning and appointing it for a peculiar end, even for that ſtrange and wonderful work of Chriſt's reſurrection from the grave, when he obtained his glorious victory, and our gracious deliverance from hell and deſtruction. Again, he made it, i. e. (as the word from the original may be rendered) exalted it. This is the day which the Lord hath honoured and exalted above its fellows, above the ſeventh, or any other day of the week, becauſe of the incomparable work of this day. That the day propheſied of in that place is ſome remarkable day of the Meſſiah, is very clear, if we conſider the context, and the two preceding verſes of this Pſalm; by which it plainly appears, that the day there ſpoke of is the day wherein the ſtone rejected by the builders, (i. e. Chriſt, who was rejected by the elders, ſcribes and phariſees, the pretended builders) became the head of the corner: Now what day was this, but his reſurrection-day? in which God, by raiſing him from the dead, gloriouſly exalted him above all his enemies, rolled away his reproach, made him Head of the corner, and Head of the church, by openly declaring him, to be his Son with power, and that to the terror and confuſion of all his enemies, and the joy and gladneſs of all his friends. And to put it beyond doubt, that this is the meaning of the place, ſee it particularly applied by Peter, before the Jewiſh Sanhedrim, Acts iv. 11, 12. Be it known to you, that this Jeſus Chriſt whom ye crucified, God hath raiſed from the dead: And therefore he ſubjoins, verſe 12. This is the Stone which was ſet at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Now, this being ſuch a memorable day, the pſalmiſt's direction is, that all Chriſtians ſhould rejoice and be glad in it; which indeed is a moſt proper duty on our Chriſtian Sabbath.

Again we have another prophecy concerning this day, in Iſa. xi. 10. And in that day there ſhall be a root of Jeſſe, which ſhall ſtand for an enſign of the people; to it ſhall the Gentiles ſeek, and his reſt ſhall be glorious. Now, what was that ſpecial day, wherein Chriſt was raiſed and exalted for an enſign, to invite and engage the nations to flee to him as their Redeemer? Was it not his reſurrection day, on which he was declared to the world to be the Son of God with power, Rom. i. 4. This is the day then on which his reſt was glorious. For as God the Father's reſt from the work of creation was glorious, and had great glory and honour put on it, by the world's keeping a Sabbath for about four thouſand years thereupon; ſo God the Son's reſt from the work of redemption was to have great glory and honour put upon it, by the Chriſtian world's obſerving a weekly Sabbath on it, to the end of time.

And was it not a glorious reſt which the Son of God had on the firſt day of the week, from his great and ſtupendous work, when he had laid the foundations of the new heavens and new earth, and had given the finiſhing ſtroke to the new creation; when all the ſtars ſang together, and all the ſons of God ſhouted for joy? It was on this day the Son reſted from his works, and was refreſhed, as it is ſaid of God, Exod. xxxi. 17. with reſpect to his reſting from the works of the firſt creation. Now, as God's reſt from his works on the ſeventh day, and his being refreſhed therein, was a ſufficient indication of the preciſe day of reſt which he would have obſerved by the world under the old diſpenſation of the covenant; ſo the reſt of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt from his works on the firſt day of the week, and his being refreſhed therein, is a ſufficient indciation of the preciſe day of reſt which he would have obſerved under the diſpenſation of the new covenant. And accordingly upon this indication, we immediately find the diſciples aſſembling themſelves together upon this day of their Redeemer's reſt; and no ſooner are they met, but Chriſt comes and graciouſly meets with them, ſolemnly bleſſes them, and gives them the Holy Ghoſt, John xx. 19. from which time foreward, the firſt day of the week was never without its ſolemn aſſemblies.

Moreover, we have the apoſtle to the Hebrews expreſly confirming the foreſaid prophecies concerning Chriſt's reſt upon the firſt day of the week, by telling us, that under the goſpel, there remained a reſt for the people of God, Heb. iv. 9. Now if this place be duly conſidered, and rightly underſtood, it will mightily confirm the change of the Sabbath from the laſt to the firſt day of the week. For the word, which is there rendered reſt, in the original is Sabbatiſmos, and ſhould be rendered a Sabbatiſm or Sabbath keeping; and ſo the meaning is (according to Doctor Owen, and other learned commentators) There remaineth a Sabbath-keeping for the people of God, under the New Teſtament, as well as under the old. And this (as the apoſtle ſhews in the context) behoved neceſſarily to be a new Sabbatiſm, in regard it hath a new foundation, in correſpondence to the foundation of the old Sabbatiſm mentioned verſe 4. of that chapter. For he ſpake in a certain place of the ſeventh day on this wiſe, And God ſaid reſt the ſeventh day from all his works. Well (ſaith the apoſtle) the new Sabbatiſm hath the like foundation verſe 10. For he (viz. Jeſus Chriſt) that is entered into his reſt, hath alſo ceaſed from his own works, as God did from his. Now, it was on the morning of the firſt day of the week that Chriſt entered into his mediatory reſt from his works of redemption, as God on the ſeventh day entered into his reſt from the work of creation. And as God, by his reſting on the ſeventh day, did determine that day for a ſacred ſabbatical reſt under the Old Teſtament; ſo Chriſt (who is the Lord of the Sabbath) by his entering into his reſt on the firſt day, did determine that day of the week for a ſacred Sabbatiſm under the New Teſtament. The ceaſing from his works, as God did from his mentioned ver. 10. can never properly be applied (as ſome do) to the believer, but to Chriſt's ceaſing from his works of redemption; ſeeing it is abſurd to make our ceaſing from the vile works of ſin, a parallel to God's ceaſing from his glorious works of creation. And it cannot be meant of ceaſing from the works of duty and ſervice to God; for, to all eternity, believers never ceaſe from theſe, Rev. xxii. 3.

V. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath put honour upon the firſt day of the week, and authoriſed the obſervation of it by his own example and practice, which hath the force of a law to us. It was on this day he met with the two diſciples going to Emmaus, opened the ſcriptures to them, and was made known to them in the breaking of bread, Luke xxiv. 13. Likewiſe upon the ſame day he appeared to the eleven, when gathered together and others with them, ſhewed them his pierced hands and feet, comforted them, and opened their underſtandings that they might underſtand the ſcriptures, Luke xxiv. 33, 36, 40, 45. It was on this day that Chriſt came to his diſciples, (being all conveened together except Thomas) gave them his peace, and bleſſed them, and alſo gave them their commiſſion and the holy Ghoſt, John xx. 16. 20, &c. Again, upon that day eight days, being the next firſt day of the week, when the diſciples were aſſembled together, and Thomas with them, John xx. 26. Chriſt choſe to appear unto them, and graciouſly convinced Thomas by the diſcovery of his wounds. Tho' Chriſt, after his reſurrection, met with ſeverals of his diſciples upon other days of the week, yet on the firſt day only (which is therefore expreſly recorded) did he appear to them when aſſembled together; and therefore we ſee how he left Thomas a whole week under his unbelief and doubtings, till the next Lord's day or firſt day of the week ſhould come, that he might have occaſion graciouſly to reſolve him in the aſſembly of his diſciples, for their common edification and comfort. The firſt day of the week is the only day of the week, or month, or year, that is ever mentioned by number in all the New Teſtament; and wherever it is ſpoke of, we hear of the religious obſervation of it, by the diſciples aſſembling together. And why are we told by the evangeliſts ſo expreſly, and ſo often, of Chriſt's making his viſits to his diſciples upon the firſt day of the week? but to ſhew us, that Chriſt put a peculiar honour and reſpect upon this day, and thereby gave us a plain intimation of his will, that it ſhould be obſerved in his church, as the Chriſtian Sabbath, or the weekly day of holy reſt and holy convocations. That one day in ſeven ſhould be religiouſly obſerved in this manner, was a law from the beginning, and that as old as the ſtate of innocence (as I ſhewed before.) But that, in the kingdom of the Meſſiah, the firſt day of the week ſhould be that ſolemn day; this was indication enough, that Chriſt on that day once and again met his diſciples in a religious aſſembly. And it is highly probable, that at his firſt meeting with them, he appointed them that day eight days to be together again, promiſing to meet them; for we find them more chapterly conveened that day than the former, John xx. 26 And after eight days, again his diſciples were within, and Thomas with them as it would ſeem waiting for Chriſt's coming. And many are of opinion, that he thus continued to meet with them every firſt day of the week, till his aſcenſion, ſpeaking to them the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, Acts i. 3.

Chriſt's meeting with them that day was not merely occaſional, but deſigned; as appears by the expreſs mentioning of the firſt day of the week ſo oft as he met them. For, when Chriſt met with his diſciples on any other day of the week, we are not told what day it was, whether the ſecond, third or fourth day of the week; but when he meets with them on the firſt day, the holy Ghoſt names and records that, thereby aſcribing ſomething peculiar to it above all the reſt.

VI. The obſervation of the firſt day of the week is alſo authoriſed by the divinely inſpired apoſtles of Chriſt and founders of the Chriſtian church, and that both by their example and direction.——We have them both directing and performing the duties of the Sabbath on this day, and alſo aſſerting Chriſt's propriety in it as his; all which is evident from ſcripture.

In the forecited ſcriptures, where we read of Chriſt's appearances to his diſciples, we alſo read of their aſſembling together on the firſt day of the week ſeveral times, which certainly was for the public worſhip of God, and in honour of this day. For, when they met on other days of the week, it is not told what theſe were; but, when they met on the firſt day of the week, the holy Ghoſt records that; which ſhews it to be a remarkable day in itſelf, and obſerved as ſuch by the diſciples of Chriſt, and that in a religious way.

But, beſides theſe, I ſhall adduce four other ſcriptures, that clearly demonſtrate what is above aſſerted.

The firſt is, Acts ii. 1, 2. where it is recorded, that the apoſtles and other brethren were met all together on the day of pentecoſt in one place. This meeting was for public worſhip on the firſt day of the week, according to their wonted practice. It is not in the temple with the Jews, but in a houſe in Jeruſalem by themſelves.

Queſt. How prove you that it was on the firſt day of the week? Anſw. Becauſe it is evident from ſcripture that the paſſover that year fell on the Jewiſh ſabbath; and Pentecoſt being ſtill the fiftieth day after the paſſover, it conſequently fell that year on the firſt day of the week, or the Lord's day. Pentecoſt is a Greek word, ſignifying the fiftieth called ſo becauſe of its being ſtill the fiftieth day after the paſſover, a Jewiſh feaſt, which fell ſometimes upon one day of the week, and ſometimes on another; but this year it fell on the laſt or ſeventh day of the week. Pentecoſt was another feaſt of the Jews, but kept in remembrance of God's giving the law that day on mount Sinai, being the fiftieth day after their eating the paſſover and coming out of Egypt. And conſequently, Pentecoſt falling this year upon the firſt day of the week, our Lord's reſurrection day, the apoſtles and brethren aſſembled for celebrating this day by public worſhip. Now, let us obſerve how remarkably God confirmed their keeping of the firſt day of the week, and bleſſed their meeting together upon it for worſhip: He even ſent down that extraordinary effuſion of the holy Ghoſt upon them, for fitting and furniſhing them for the extraordinary work of planting the Chriſtian church, and converting the world. This was a ſolemn approbation of the Chriſtian Sabbath, and a ſeal to its inſtitution from heaven, which did confirm all Chriſtians in the celebrating of this day for the future: And many times have they experienced the gracious effuſions of the Spirit on their public aſſemblies this day ſince that time. It is obſerved by Grotius, upon Exod. xix. 1. That it was on the firſt day of the week that the law was given in its fearful promulgation from mount Sinai. But tho' God made that in ſome reſpect a terrible day to them, yet he makes it weekly a joyful day to us, by the comfortable promulgation of the goſpel thereupon from mount Zion.

A ſecond ſcripture is, Acts xx. 7. And upon the firſt day of the week, when the diſciples came together to break bread, Paul preached to them, &c. Where it is plain that the firſt day of the week was then the ſtated time for Chriſtians their meeting together, for the preaching of the word, and celebrating of the Lord's ſupper; for this is recorded as their cuſtomary known practice. Paul had been at Troas ſeven days, and conſequently was there upon the Jewiſh Sabbath; but there is no word of any meeting among them on that day, or any other day of the week: But when the firſt day of the week comes, the church is ſolemnly conveened, and perform the work of the Sabbath on this day. Paul was ready to depart from that place, only he muſt ſtay till the firſt day of the week, that he might meet with the whole church, and preach to them before he leave them; and ſo, according to their cuſtom, they all aſſemble together, and he ſanctifies the Sabbath with them, by preaching and diſpenſing the ſacrament, and that even till midnight; for they did not ſoon weary, at that time, of the work and duties of the Lord's day.

A third ſcripture is, 1 Cor. xvi. 1. 2. Now concerning the collection for the ſaints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even ſo do ye. Upon the firſt day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in ſtore, &c. Whence it is plain, that the apoſtle injoins the church of Corinth, in conformity with other churches, to make their collections for the poor on the firſt day of the week. Now, why on the firſt day of the week, and not on the ſeventh, or any other? but for theſe reaſons: 1. They had their public meeting on this day, and ſo had more conveniency for gathering their charity on this day, than upon another. 2. The firſt day of the week was now come in place of the old Sabbath, on which day collections were made in the Jewiſh ſynagogues; for the giving of alms was always reckoned a proper duty for the Sabbath day: But now the apoſtle will have all the duties of the Sabbath transferred to the firſt day of the week, and particularly this duty of public charity, there being a peculiar fitneſs in this day for it, in regard we are called this day to commemorate Chriſt's infinite charity to our ſouls, and alſo to receive new bleſſings and expreſſions of bounty from him; and therefore ſhould be the more liberal to his poor ſaints. I hope, there is none that will ſay that the apoſtle had not Chriſt's warrant for what he appointed in this matter; for in this epiſtle he proteſts, that he delivered nothing to them, but what he had received from the Lord, and had his command for; ſee 1 Cor. xi. 23. & xiv. 43. It is as clear as light from the foreſaid teſtimony, and many others, that the primitive Chriſtians had their aſſemblies on the firſt day of the week, which they would not have had without the apoſtles direction; nor would the apoſtles have determined ſo, without knowing the mind of Chriſt.

A fourth ſcripture is, Rev. i. 10. where John ſaith of himſelf that he was in the Spirit on the Lord's day; which, to be ſure, is no other than the Chriſtian Sabbath, getting the denomination from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and his riſing from the dead thereupon, and frequent meetings with his diſciples this day; and to this day it ſtill retains this title of the Lord's day, being a day ſpecially inſtitute for the honour of our Lord, and conſecrate for his ſervice and worſhip. The apoſtle wrote this book near the end of the firſt century, and calls this day by that name which it commonly got then, and ſpeaks of it as a day univerſally notour and remarkable for the Chriſtians obſervation of it. The apoſtle, at this time, was baniſhed into the iſle of Patmos by Domitian the emperor, where probably he wanted the opportunity of the public aſſemblies on this day; yet he is employed in ſanctifying the Lord's day in a private way; he is in the Spirit, i. e. in a ſpiritual frame, and taken up in ſpiritual exerciſes, meditation and prayer (which are proper duties for the Sabbath) and the Lord rewards this his conſcientious regard to this day, with the revelation of theſe great things which were afterwards to fall out to the church to the end of the world.

Moreover, it is obſervable, that the Lord puts his name on this day; for the Holy Ghoſt calls it here the Lord's day, and that for theſe reaſons; 1 Becauſe of its deriving its inſtitution from him: So the prayer, dictate by him, is called the Lord's prayer; the ſacrament of his ſupper, inſtitute by him, is called the Lord's ſupper.

2. It is called the Lord's, becauſe of his ſpecial propriety in it: He hath ſeparated and ſet apart from common uſe, and conſecrated it wholly to his uſe and ſervice: So the ſacrament is called the Lord's table, becauſe of its being conſecrated for holy uſes, and ſo ſet apart and diſtinguiſhed from all other tables.

3. Becauſe of its being dedicate to his honour and memory, being the day in which he conquered death, got a total victory, and triumphed over all his enemies.

4. It is called the Lord's day becauſe the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, his perſon and mediation is the principal ſubject of this day.

VII. Another argument for the obſervation of the Chriſtian Sabbath may be drawn from the conſtant and uninterrupted practice of all Chriſt's churches through the world ſince the apoſtles days; they have all continued to obſerve the Lord's day for holy worſhip. All the ancient fathers and Chriſtians had the Lord's day in great eſteem, and made it a badge of their religion to obſerve it carefully, as appears from the writings of Juſtin Martyr, Tertullian, Origen, &c. Ignatius that ancient father, who lived ſo near Chriſt's times, in his epiſtles recommends the Lord's day: Let every one that loveth Chriſt (ſaith he) obſerve the firſt day of the week, the Lord's day, as the queen of all days. It is a remarkable ſaying of Auguſtine, as the virgin Mary was bleſſed above all women, ſo is the firſt day of the week bleſſed above all days.

VIII. The conſciences of men plead for the divine authority of the Lord's day. Surely it is God, who is the ſupreme Lord and Sovereign of mens conſciences, that directs this his deputy in men, to excite and preſs them ſo cloſly to the obſervation of this day, and alſo to challenge and ſmite them ſo ſharply for the neglect and profanation of it. And indeed there is no ſin that conſcience more commonly accuſes wicked men of, than the breach of the Lord's day: And hence it is, that many malefactors, at their laſt hour, when moſt ſerious, do moſt bitterly bewail it: acknowledging that their Sabbath breaking was their leading ſin, and the occaſion of all the reſt of their wicked courſes; having provoked God to leave them, and give them up to the luſts of their own hearts, and temptations of the devil. Clark, in his 2d vol. of Examples, tells us of one Thomas Savage (a young man who was executed at Ratcliff, October 28. 1668, for murdering his fellow ſervant) that whilſt he was in priſon, cried out to ſome that came to viſit him, after this manner; "Oh wretch that I was! I ſtudied "how I might ſpend the Lord's day in the devil's "work; at that time when I ſhould have been ſerving "God, I was buſieſt in ſerving ſatan. I was glad "when the Sabbath came, for then I had leiſure to "purſue my luſts and pleaſures. I ſometimes went in "to the church, but I never ſtaid the time of a whole "ſermon. I laughed at thoſe who ſpent the Sabbaths "in hearing and praying, and looked on them as the "verieſt fools in the world. O tell young men from "me, that Sabbath-breaking is a dangerous and coſtly "ſin," &c.

Turner on Providence, gives an account of one Edmund Kirk vintner, executed at Tyburn, July 11. 1648, for murdering his wife, who in his confeſſion lamented his frequent profanation of the Lord's day; "Upon which holy day, ſaith he, I committed the "heinous ſin of murdering my poor wife." Thus one ſin was puniſhed with another, Sabbath-breaking with murder, and that with the gallows. Likewiſe, he tells of another executed May 25. 1687, for theft; who in his confeſſion, ſaid, "That it was his earneſt "deſire, that all, young men eſpecially, ſhould take "care not to miſpend the Lord's day." And the author's remark is, that he doth not know that ever he obſerved any repentance in a malefactor, who did not bitterly lament his neglect of his duty to God on that day.

IX In the laſt place. The diſpenſations of divine providence may be brought in, as giving ſuffrage to the ſanctification of the Lord's day. God hath highly honoured this day, by doing many mighty works upon it: On this day he created the light, and began to make the world; on this day he gave the law from mount Sinai as Grotius obſerves. Nay, it is affirmed by an ancient council held at Conſtantinople, Counc. 6. Can. 8. "That Chriſt was born on the Lord's day, "and the ſtar ſhined to the wiſe men on it. Chriſt "fed the five thouſand with the five loaves and two "fiſhes on this day; that he was baptiſed, roſe from "the dead, and ſent down the holy Ghoſt on this "day." And ſome of the ancients have further affirmed, that whatſoever notable thing was done in the world, the Lord ordered it ſo, was done to the honour of this day. Thus God hath conſecrated the firſt day of the week, or Chriſtian Sabbath, by doing ſo many of his wonderful works upon it; to intimate to us, that it is his will we ſhould ſanctify this day, and obſerve it weekly, for publiſhing and proclaiming his worthy acts, and keeping up the memory of Chriſt's nativity, paſſion, reſurrection, &c. to the end of the world, without inſtituting days of our own for theſe ends.

Moreover there are various diſpenſations from God, both of mercy and judgment, that conclude for the obſervation of this holy day. The gracious providences, that attend the conſcientious obſervers of the Lord's day, are moſt remarkable. On theſe the Lord pours down the gracious influences of his Spirit, in his ordinances diſpenced this day; he eminently bleſſeth them with increaſe of grace, tenderneſs of conſcience, and holineſs of life; and with all his beſt bleſſings both ſpiritual and temporal. God hath now for theſe 1700 years paſt granted all his churches thro' the world many ſignal marks of his favour and preſence in obſerving the Lord's day, which they could not have expected had they been in an error in keeping it. How often hath he poured out his Spirit upon them when attending ordinances on this day, and bleſſed them with conviction, converſion, and manifeſtations of his love? Nay, the univerſal experience of Chriſtians do teſtify, that all the bleſſings and mercies, promiſed to the obſervers of the Sabbath under the Old Teſtament, are now transferred and accompliſhed to the keepers of the Chriſtian Sabbath: For, the change of the day being by divine authority, the firſt day Sabbath doth lawfully ſucceed to all the privileges, promiſes, and threatenings formerly pertaining to the ſeventh day Sabbath. We ſee what bleſſings are promiſed to the keeping of the Sabbath of old, both ſpiritual and temporal; that is a remarkable word, Jer. xvii. 24, 26. If ye hallow the Sabbath day, to do no work therein, then they ſhall come from the cities of Judah, and all other places, bringing burnt offerings, and ſacrifices, and meat-offerings, and incenſe, and bringing ſacrifices of praiſe unto the houſe of the Lord; i. e. When the Sabbath is duly obſerved then the church ſhall flouriſh, religion ſhall be promoted, and the name of God highly exalted. And do we not ſee this promiſe viſibly accompliſhed to ſuch churches and perſons as ſtrictly ſanctify the Lord's day? Among ſuch Chriſtianity doth flouriſh, knowledge is increaſed, reformation is advanced, grace is multiplied, and a conſcientious regard is had to all the other duties of religion.

Again we find temporal mercies annexed to the keeping of the Sabbath, Iſa. lviii. 13, 14. If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, i. e. If thou ceaſeſt from prophaning it, I will cauſe thee to ride on the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father; i. e. Thou ſhalt be bleſſed with outward proſperity, and many earthly enjoyments.

This is again confirmed in Jer. xvii. 24, 25. If ye diligently hearken unto me, ſaith the Lord, to hallow the Sabbath day, to do no work therein, then ſhall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes ſitting on the throne of David, riding in chariots, and this city ſhall remain for ever; i. e. The nation and city ſhall be bleſſed with all ſecular and civil advantages. Accordingly the people of God have found the hallowing of the Lord's day ſenſibly proſperous to them with reſpect to their ſecular affairs: When they have diſcharged the duties of this day with a good conſcience, it hath fared the better with them all the week after. In teſtimony whereof, I ſhall here narrate the experience of that excellent perſon, Sir Matthew Hale, lord chief juſtice of the king's bench in the reign of king Charles II. who was both an eminent lawyer, and a great divine. In his book called Contemplations moral and divine, he hath theſe words; "I have found (ſaith he) by a ſtrict and diligent obſervation, that a due obſerving the duty of the Lord's day, hath ever had joined to it a bleſſing upon the reſt of my time; and the week that hath been ſo begun, hath been bleſſed and proſperous to me: And on the other ſide, when I have been negligent of the duties of this day, the reſt of the week hath been unſucceſſful and unhappy to my ſecular employments; ſo that I could eaſily make an eſtimate of my ſucceſſes in my own ſecular employments the week following, by the manner of my paſſing this day: And this I do not write lightly or inconſiderately, but upon a long and ſound obſervation and experience." Again in another place, he ſaith, "I thank God, I ever found that, in the ſtricteſt obſervation of the times of his worſhip, I ever met with the beſt advantage to my worldly occaſions; and that, whenever my worldly occaſions encroached upon thoſe times, I ever met with diſappointment, tho' in things of the moſt probable ſucceſs: and ever let it be ſo with me. It hath been and ever ſhall be to me, a conviction beyond all argument and demonſtration whatſoever, that God expects the obſervation of his times: and that, while I find myſelf thus dealt with, God hath not given over his care of me. It would be a ſad preſage unto me, of the ſevere anger of my Maker, if my inadvertance ſhould caſt me upon a temporal undertaking upon this day, and that it ſhould proſper." Thus the learned and pious judge Hale, who ſpake from his own experience, after long and critical obſervation of divine providence.

Again, the judgments which often follow upon the violation of this day, do give teſtimony to its divine authority. How ſad are the ſpiritual ſtrokes, though little noticed, which God inflicts upon the ſlighters of his holy day, by giving them up to hardneſs of heart, ſearedneſs of conſcience, and vile affections; ſo that commonly they fall into ſcandalous out-breakings, and notorious crimes, proceeding from evil to worſe, till they at length run themſelves into ſome fatal miſchief! And, when men neglect to puniſh the profanation of this day, the Lord uſually takes the ſword into his own hand, and, by viſible temporal judgments, plagues the profaners of it. If the violation of the Jewiſh Sabbath was by a divine order, puniſhed with death, under the law, Exod. xxxi. 15. ſurely the breach of the Chriſtian Sabbath ſhall not eſcape without ſome ſignal marks of the divine vengeance, according to the ſcripture threatenings, which are levelled againſt the one as well as the other, as I ſhewed before. Let us not forget that terrible denunciation of judgment, which we have in Jer. xvii. 27. But if you will not hearken unto me, to hallow the Sabbath-day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jeruſalem, on the Sabbath day; then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it ſhall devour the palaces of Jeruſalem, and it ſhall not be quenched. The Jews (as Auguſtine obſerves) fell generally into this grievous ſin of profaning the Sabbath: For though they pretended to hallow it, by forbearing ſervile labour upon it; yet upon that day above all days, they uſed to pamper the fleſh with carnal delights, and run into the exceſſes of gluttony and drunkenneſs. Againſt theſe ſins did our Saviour warn them; but, they perſiſting, the foreſaid direful threatening was at length exactly fulfilled: For upon that very day, ſo abuſed by them, their regal city Jeruſalem, the glory and maſter-piece of the whole earth, was burnt down to the ground by the Romans. And this Hegiſippus and Dio obſerve to have been done on the Sabbath-day, in September, about forty years after Chriſt's death.

And doth not that prophetical commination concern us, as well as the Jews? And have we not cauſe to fear the accompliſhment of it for the breach of the Chriſtian Sabbath? Yes, we have found it to be true. Some impartial obſervers of God's judgments in the world have remarked, that this ſin, viz. the breach of the fourth command, by the profane neglect of God's worſhip upon the Lord's day, and the ſpending of this time in open works of impiety, hath been frequently viſited upon cities and private perſons, by conſuming fires that have happened upon this day: Of which many inſtances might be given in this ſame iſland, as well as other parts of the world. That fiery prediction againſt Jeruſalem hath been oftener than once fulfilled and executed upon the two capital cities thereof, many of whoſe inhabitants have been as guilty of profaning the day ſet apart for God's ſervice as ever the Jews were. In London this vice reigned, and there it was dreadfully puniſhed with a furious and aſtoniſhing fire in the year 1666, which laid the moſt part of that great city, with its faireſt churches and buildings, in rubbiſh, in three days ſpace: And it is remarkable, that, that dreadful fire broke forth on the Lord's day, very early in the morning, being the ſecond day of September.

Likewiſe in Edinburgh, where Sabbath breaking very much abounded, (as appears by the acts of aſſembly made againſt that ſin) the faireſt and ſtatelieſt of its buildings, in the Parliament cloſs, and about it, (to which ſcarce any in Britain were comparable) were on the fourth of February 1700 (being the Lord's day) burnt down and laid in aſhes and ruins, in the ſpace of a few hours, to the aſtoniſhment and terror of the ſorrowful inhabitants; whereof I myſelf was an eye-witneſs: And the effects of that fire are viſible to this day. Yea, ſo great was the terror and confuſion of that Lord's day, that the people of the city were in no caſe to attend any ſermon or public worſhip upon it, though there was a great number of worthy miniſters, conveened in the place, (beſide the reverend miniſters of the city) ready to have prayed with or preached to the people on that ſad occaſion; for the general aſſembly was ſitting there at the time: But the diſmal caſe of the city made this impracticable. However the Lord himſelf, by that ſilent Sabbath, did loudly preach to all the inhabitants of the city, ſetting forth to them, in a moſt awakening manner, the great ſin and danger of irreligious neglecting of God's worſhip upon the Lord's day, and profaning it, by doing their own works, and finding their own pleaſures.

I have read of the town of Stratford upon Avon, that it was twice, upon the Lord's days, almoſt conſumed with fire, chiefly for profaning the Lord's day, and contemning his word in the mouth of his faithful miniſter. The like alſo might be told of ſeveral towns in Scotland.

Dr. Beard, in his theatre of God's judgments, tells us of the town of Feverton in Devonſhire, that was often admoniſhed by her godly paſtor, that God would bring ſome heavy judgment upon the inhabitants of that place, for their profanation of the Lord's day, occaſioned chiefly by preparing of their weekly market, which they then held on the Monday. Accordingly, very ſoon after the ſaid miniſter's death, on the 3d of April, 1598. God ſent a terrible fire, which in leſs than half an hour, conſumed the whole town, except the church, the court houſe, alms-houſes, and a few poor people's dwellings; where a man might have ſeen four hundred dwelling-houſes all at once on fire, and above fifty perſons conſumed in the flames. But the remaining inhabitants not taking warning by the former judgment, but continuing in the ſame ſin, the town was again fired on the 5th of Auguſt 1612. (fourteen years after the former fire) and all conſumed, except a few poor houſes. The hiſtorian adds, that they are blind who ſee not in this the finger of God; and he prays for grace to the people of that city, when it is next built, to change their market day, and to remove all occaſions of profaning the Lord's day.

Dr. Twiſs on the Sabbath, relates a paſſage that happened in Bedford ſhire, not long before his writing that book. A match at foot ball being appointed on the Sabbath afternoon, whilſt two of the moſt forward were in the belfrey, tolling of a bell, to call the company together, there was ſuddenly heard a clap of thunder, and a flaſh of lightning was ſeen by ſome that ſat in the church porch, coming through a dark lane, which flaſhed in their faces, and much terrified them: And, paſſing through the porch into the belfrey, it tripped up his heels that was tolling the bell, and ſtruck him ſtark dead; and the other that was with him was ſo ſorely blaſted therewith, that ſhortly after he died alſo.

Mr. Clark, in his father's life, p. 128, hath a very ſtrange paſſage, to this purpoſe. Mr. Hugh Clark preaching at Oundle in Northampton ſhire, where the people were generally very ignorant, and much addicted to the profanation of the Lord's day, by Whitſon ales, Morice-dances, and ſuch paſtimes, which he much ſet himſelf againſt, endeavouring to convince them of the evil, and denouncing God's judgments againſt them in caſe of perſeverance: But they being trained up in thoſe courſes, and hardened by cuſtom, perſiſted ſtill in their wickedneſs. At laſt, on a Lord's day, the leader of the dance being a luſty young man, in the midſt of their profane paſtimes, fell down ſuddenly, and died; but they, ſoon ſhaking of their fear, returned to their vomit again. The Lord's day following, Mr. Clark took occaſion, from this ſad diſpenſation, to quote the forecited text, Jer. xvii. 27. If thou wilt not hearken unto me, to hallow the Sabbath day, then will I kindle a fire, &c. But the people kicked againſt theſe admonitions, and that ſame evening went to their ſports again; among whom was a ſmith that was a chief ring leader: But it pleaſed God, the very next day, two huſband men coming to his ſhop to ſharpen their plough ſhares, a ſpark from the red hot iron, as he was beating it upon the anvil, flew into the thatch, which both the ſmith and his neighbours ſaw, but had no power to move towards it; which preſently burnt down the ſmith's ſhop, houſe, and all his goods. This Mr. Clark preſſed upon their conſciences: but nothing would prevail till at laſt, upon a Sabbath day at night, when they were retired to their ſeveral homes, there was heard a great noiſe, and rattling of chains up and down the town, which was accompanied with ſuch a ſmell and ſtink of fire and brimſtone, that many of their guilty conſciences ſuggeſted to them, that the devil was come to fetch them away: And now, and not till now, they began to think in good earneſt of a reformation.

Mr. Clark, in his examples, tells of on Mr. Abberly a godly miniſter in Burton upon Trent, who took occaſion often to reprove and threaten Sabbath breakers, eſpecially ſuch as ſold and bought meat upon Sabbath day mornings, a practice too common in that place. Neverthleſs, there was a taylor, that dwelt in the upper end of the town, who would go through the long ſtreet (as it were in a bravado) to the other end of the town, and fetch home meat on the Lord's day morning; but as he returned with both his hands full in the midſt of the ſtreet he fell down ſtark dead. I was (ſaith Dr. Teate) an eye-witneſs, both of his fall and burial: And it pleaſed God thereby to work ſome reformation, both among the butchers and others.

Alſo he relates, from one Mr. Falconer, miniſter of Burford near Saliſbury, a fearful example of God's juſtice, about the year 1635. A profane company of young men, on the Lord's day early in the morning, went to Claringdon park, to cut down a May-pole; and having loaden the cart with it, at Milner's Bars, entering into the city of Saliſbury, one of the cart-wheels fell into a rut, which made the young tree in the cart (which they had ſtole for a May pole) to give a great ſurge on one ſide, ſo that it ſtruck one of the company ſuch a blow on the head, that beat out his brains, and he inſtantly died on the place, and lay there a fearful ſpectacle of God's wrath, both againſt that heatheniſh ſport, and wilful profaning of the Sabbath; whilſt he maketh the very thing they had choſen for their ſport and paſtime, to be the inſtrument of executing his fury. The author ſaith, that he diligently enquired after the truth of this matter, at his firſt going to Sarum; and many godly and credible perſons, who had ſeen that ſad ſpectacle in his hearing atteſted it to be ſo as above narrated.

Alſo, in the county of Devon, one Edward Ameridith, a gentleman, having been pained in his feet, and being ſomewhat recovered, one ſaid unto him, He was glad to ſee him ſo nimble, Ameridith replied, That he doubted not but to dance about the May-pole next Lord's day; but, before he moved out of that place, he was ſmitten with ſuch feebleneſs of heart, and dizzineſs in his head, that, deſiring help to carry him to an houſe, he died before the Lord's day came.

Dr. Twiſs on the Sabbath, tells, That at a place called Tidworth, on the Sabbath day, many being met together to play at foot ball in the church yard, one had his leg broke, which preſently gangrening, he forthwith died thereof. Likewiſe at Alceſter in Warwick ſhire, a luſty young woman (upon the coming forth of the declaration for ſports) went on the Sabbath-day to a green not very far off, where ſhe ſaid, ſhe would dance as long as ſhe could ſtand: But, while ſhe was dancing, God ſtruck her with ſuch a violent diſeaſe, whereof, within two or three days after, ſhe died.

Beard in his theatre, writes of a certain nobleman, that uſed to go a hunting on the Lord's day in time of ſermon, who had a child by his wife with a head like a dog, and it howl'd like a hound.

I ſhall conclude with one example more from Mr. Clark. He gives account of a godly miniſter, that one day was preaching, and earneſtly preſſing the ſanctification of the Sabbath; and, in his ſermon, he had occaſion to make mention of that man, that, by the ſpecial commandment of God, was ſtoned to death for gathering ſticks on the Sabbath day. Whereupon one in the congregation was ſo wicked as to riſe up and laugh; yea, made all the haſte he could out of the church, and went to gathering of ſticks, tho' he had no need of them: But, when the people came out from the Sermon, they found him in their way, lying ſtark dead, with the bundle of ſticks in his arms. Theſe inſtances of divine vengeance, inflicted upon the profaners of the Lord's day, may contribute very much to confirm us in the belief of the divine inſtitution of this holy day; and likewiſe may ſerve to warn all ranks and degrees of perſons, to guard againſt the contempt and violation of the Lord's day. The Lord indeed exerciſeth great long ſuffering and patience towards many notorious Sabbath-breakers, to ſhew us that there is a judgment day to come: But nevertheleſs he makes monuments of ſome, to let us know that verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth.

Many more examples might be brought, if it were needful, from all corners of the land; but I truly believe, there are few ſerious obſervers of providence, but might relate many ſad inſtances of the diſcovery of God's diſpleaſure againſt the prophanation of the Lord's day, from their own experience and obſervation.

After all, I hope, there is none that fears God, loves Chriſt, and believes the holy ſcriptures, but will ſee theſe arguments which I have adduced, to be convincing demonſtrations of the neceſſity of ſanctifying the Lord's day, and honouring it as God's Sabbath, to the end of the world.

Now, to ſum up the whole, let us lay all theſe together: The ſolid ground for the morality of the fourth command, the weighty reaſons of the change of the day, and the ſpecial marks of honour that Chriſt hath put upon this holy day; it being the day in which he firſt made the light to ſhine, the day wherein alſo the Sun of righteouſneſs aroſe, diſpelling the clouds of guilt and fear; the day he ſubdued his enemies, manifeſted himſelf to his diſciples, and taught them his will; the day he ſent the holy Ghoſt to his apoſtles; the day he hath called by his own name, and reſerved for his own uſe, and upon which he holds ſpecial communion with his people, and vouchſafes them the marks of his royal favour; the day which God highly honours by his providential diſpenſations.—And will it not then be judged an high affront to almighty God, to pour contempt on that day which he delights to honour? Surely it ought to be matter of grief to all true lovers of God, when they ſee it done. We are told, that, when one of Darius's eunuchs ſaw Alexander ſetting his feet on a rich table of his maſter's he fell a weeping; and being aſked the reaſon of it, he ſaid, It was to ſee the table of his maſter ſo highly eſteemed, now made a footſtool. And may we not weep to ſee the day that God hath honoured and bleſſed, and for which he is ſo highly concerned made a footſtool, and trampled on by ſo many profane perſons in our days? To be ſure, God will not ſit with ſuch open affronts as he gets from ſome in this matter.

Thus, I think I have demonſtrated the morality of the fourth command, and the divine inſtitution of the Lord's day for our Chriſtian Sabbath; which, by neceſſary conſequence, proves the abolition of the Jewiſh ſeventh day Sabbath. For tho' there were no other ſcripture warrant for aboliſhing the old Sabbath, (which nevertheleſs there is as I ſhewed before) yet ſeeing it is evident that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Lord of the Sabbath, hath by his reſurrection, example and authority, for ever conſecrated the firſt day of the week, for the ſolemn remembrance and celebration of the Lord's reſt from the great work of redemption, and of that unparalleled deliverance wrought by him for a loſt world, and thereby hath ſet apart the firſt day for our Sabbath; then, of courſe, the old ſeventh day muſt cede, and reſign its ſanctity to it, and be for ever abrogated. The Chriſtian Sabbath muſt neceſſarily extinguiſh the Jewiſh, ſeeing the two Sabbath days cannot ſtand in force together: For by virtue of the fourth command, there is but one day of ſeven to be obſerved for the Sabbath, one day only after ſix working days, and not two after five. And ſince it is the ancient and unrepealed inſtitution of God, that men ſhould labour ſix days of the week, and obſerve but one day for the Sabbath; then ſurely, if we ſhould labour but five days of the week and keep two for the Sabbath, we would expreſsly violate the law. So that no Chriſtians need to have the leaſt ſcruple about the abrogation of the Jewiſh Sabbath.

But tho' the ſeventh day be now diveſted of its ſanctity, hath no more claim to the Sabbath, having reſigned all its dignity and priviledges to the firſt day of the week the New Teſtament Sabbath; yet ſtill it hath the honour of uſhering it in, and of ſerving as a preparation day for it. As the Jewiſh typical worſhip uſhered in the evangelical ſpiritual worſhip; and the Jewiſh deliverances from Egypt and Babylon were preparatory to that more glorious and general one from hell and deſtruction by Jeſus Chriſt, which is this day commemorated. So the Jewiſh ſeventh day Sabbath ſerves to uſher in and prepare us for the glorious feſtival of the Chriſtian Sabbath, which is to continue while Chriſt hath a church upon earth, being the only day appointed to be kept in remembrance of him, and as ſerving to uſher in and prepare us for that far more glorious and celeſtial Sabbath above, which ſhall never have an end.

O then endeavour by all means to get and keep up a high eſteem of the Lord's day, that day which God hath exalted above all the days of the week, and above all the Jewiſh Sabbaths and feſtivals whatſomever. Of them in compariſon of the Lord's day, we may ſay in aluſion to that word, Heb. i. 11. 12. They periſh but thou remaineſt; and they all wax old like a garment, and as a veſture thou haſt folded them up, and they are changed; but thou ſhalt (maugre all the malice of men and devils) continue the ſame, and thy years ſhall not fail. Theſe were but as morning ſtars, to uſher in the ſun. Other feſtivals, in all their royalty, are not arayed like thee. All the graces triumph in thee; all the ordinances conſpire to adorn thee; the ſacred Trinity do delight in thee: the Father ruleth thee, the Son roſe upon thee, and the Spirit overſhadowed thee. Thus is it done to the day which the King of heaven delighteth to honour; And what ſhall be done to the man that delighteth to diſhonour and put contempt upon thee?

Surely, as God will not hold him guiltleſs that breaks the third command, by taking his name in vain; ſo he will not hold him guiltleſs that breaks the fourth commandment, by ſpending his day in vain. And tho' the breakers of this commandment may eſcape puniſhment from men, or may even eſcape outward judgments from God in this world; yet there is a day coming, when he will call them to account for it. Oh ſinners! the day of the Lord is like to be a dreadful day to you that deſpiſe the Lord's day.

Queſt. VI. What is that proportion of time which is to be ſequeſtrate and allowed for the Sabbath day? and when doth it begin and end?

Anſw. The fourth command requires one day in every ſeven; by which we are not to underſtand only the artificial day from ſun-riſing to ſun-ſetting or from the break of day until the darkneſs of the night come on, and think then the Sabbath is over, and that we are no longer bound to abſtain from our own works; and far leſs are we to think that the Sabbath is no longer than the time of public worſhip doth laſt, and that we are at freedom from the work and duties of the Sabbath when this is over: This ſome ſay in words, and many more in their practice.

But, conſider what abſurdities would follow hereupon: For, if no more time be allowed for the Sabbath, but the time of public worſhip; then it would follow, that God requires no private or ſecret duties from us on that day, ſince theſe will need ſome more time: But that cannot be; for, if private and ſecret duties be required of us on week days, then much more on the Sabbath day.

Again, it would follow, that ſome muſt keep longer Sabbaths, and others ſhorter; nay, the Sabbath of many ſhall not be above an hour or two of the day; for there are miniſters and people who are ſcarce ſo long at public worſhip: But the whole day is the Lord's, and not a part only. You will have your ſervants to work the whole ſix week days for you, from morning to night, and not be contented with their working an hour or two only of theſe days: So neither ſhould you yield leſs to God than you require for yourſelves. Nay, if attendance on the public worſhip were all that is requiſite this day by virtue of the command, it would follow, that a man would be looſed from the obligation of the command, if he were in a place of the world where God is not publicly worſhipped.

But all theſe things being abſurd, I do upon ſolid ground, aſſert, that the whole natural day, conſiſting of twenty four hours, is to be ſet apart for the Sabbath day; and that we ought to meaſure this day, and begin and end it, as we do other days, that is, from midnight to midnight; during which time we are to abſtain from our own works, and ſanctify the Lord's Sabbath: For the fourth command binds us to conſecrate the ſeventh part of every week to the Lord, who challengeth a ſpecial propriety in one of ſeven, and aſſerts his juſt title thereto, ſaying, The ſeventh day is the Lord's: And alſo Iſa. lvii. 13. he expreſsly calls it, My holy day. It is all holy; and therefore no part muſt be profaned or applied to common uſes. ——It is all the Lord's; and ſo it is unlawful for us to rob him of any part of it, and alienate it to our private uſe.

Object. But who is able to ſpend the whole twenty four hours in religious duties?

Anſw. I do not ſay that this is to be done without any intermiſſion; for we do not this in following our employments on other days: A due proportion of every day is to be reſerved for the natural ſupport of our bodies, and particularly for moderate eating and ſleeping, which are works of neceſſity, and muſt be allowed on the Sabbath, as well as other days; with this difference only, that, whereas they are done on other days to enable us for labour, they are to be done on the Sabbath to ſtrengthen us for holy duties; and ſo cannot properly be called our own works: Neither can the doing thereof be called a taking of God's time to our own uſe, ſince this contributes to our better ſpending of God's time, and is truly neceſſary for God's ſervice on the Sabbath. But, beſides the time requiſite for the works of neceſſity and mercy, the whole natural day, as above deſcribed, is holy unto the Lord, and ought to be employed in religious duties; and not a part of the day only: Both Sabbath morning and Sabbath night ſhould be ſpent in prayer and praiſes, as is plain from the 92d Pſalm, which is intituled, A pſalm or ſong for the Sabbath day, ver. 1. and ver. 2. we are told, that It is good to give thanks unto the Lord, and ſhew forth his loving kindneſs in the morning, and his faithfulneſs every night. But more of this afterwards when I come directly to treat of the ſanctification of the Sabbath. And, before I do this, I judge it neceſſary to anſwer ſome objections brought againſt the morality of the Sabbath, and the change of the day.

Quakers, Familiſts, and others holding that there is no difference of days, and ſo denying the divine authority of the Sabbath, I ſhall conſider what they ſay.

Some objections againſt the former doctrine anſwered.

Object. 1. Every day ought to be a Sabbath to a Chriſtian, and ſo there is no need of a ſet day.

Anſ. Tho' Chriſtians ſhould ſerve God, and walk with him every day, yet they cannot make every day a Sabbath for the public worſhip of God, ſince God calls them to other neceſſary work and buſineſs thereupon, which are inconſiſtent with the ſolemn ſpiritual employment of the Sabbath.

Object. 2. Paul, in his epiſtle to the Galatians and elſewhere, condemns the obſervation of days under the New Teſtament.

Anſw. The apoſtle ſpeaks only of the Jewiſh Sabbath and feſtivals, which were ſhadows of things to come, and aboliſhed by Chriſt's coming; but not of the Lord's day, which the apoſtle himſelf obſerved, and did particularly recommend to the Galatians their obſervation, 1 Cor. xvi. 1. 2.

Object. 3. The Sabbath was given as a type or ſign only to the Jews; therefore it muſt be aboliſhed with the reſt of their types and ceremonies.

Anſw. 1. The Sabbath is indeed ſaid to be given as a ſign betwixt God and his people, Ezek. xx. 12. But that is not confined to the people of the Jews, (except as to the ſeventh day Sabbath only, of which I ſpoke before) but to be extended to all God's people to the end of the world.

2. There is a great difference betwixt a ſign and a ceremony, which is an alterable thing. The rainbow is called a ſign, Gen. ix. God's moral precepts are called ſigns, Deut. vi. 8. Yet none will ſay that theſe are ceremonies, or alterable things.

3. Some ſigns are ceremonial and alterable; others are moral and perpetual: The Sabbath is not a ſign of the firſt, but of the latter ſort. Indeed, all the ſigns and types of the ſacrifice of the Meſſiah, and juſtification by Chriſt to come, were nailed all to the croſs with him, and abrogated; but all ſigns were not of this kind. The rainbow is given as a ſign of the world's preſervation from a deluge, and is perpetual; the Ten Commandments are given as probative ſigns of our obedience, and are perpetual, and ſo is the Sabbath. Indeed the Sabbath is of a more peculiar ſign than any of the reſt of the commands, and therefore is emphatically called a ſign ſeveral times in ſcripture.

1. It is a ſign of God's ſpecial love and favour to his people: The Sabbath is a great bleſſing and privilege to them; for which Nehemiah gives God thanks in a ſpecial manner, Neh. ix. 14 of which more afterward.

2. It is a ſign of that eternal reſt above, provided for the people of God.

3. The religious obſervation of the Sabbath is a declarative ſign of our ſanctification; therefore it is ſaid, Exod. xxxi. and Ezek. xx. that the Lord gave his people Sabbaths and ſigns, that they might know that he was the Lord that ſanctified them. So that it is plain from theſe, that the Sabbath is a ſign to us as well as to the Jews.

Object. 4. But, ſay Quakers and other ſectaries, there is no holineſs in days, one time is not better than another; and therefore the Sabbath doth not differ from other days in the week.

Anſw. I grant, one day is not holier than another in itſelf, (as one place is not more holy in its own nature than another) yet it may be holier in reſpect of its uſe. Thus the Sabbath day hath a relative holineſs in it, as it is deſigned and appropriated to God's uſe and ſervice, and therefore muſt not be alienated to uſes of our own; for this would be ſacrilege, which is a heinous crime. Hence it is, that the Lord doth expreſly call the Sabbath a holy day, Iſa. lviii. 13.

Object. 5. But (ſay they) doth God require us to be more religious and godly at one time than another?

Anſw. There are ſometimes that God requires us to give ourſelves more to religion, and to expreſs it more by outward acts of worſhip, than at other times. I grant, that we ought always to be religious, and to ſerve and worſhip God every day of the week; but God, in his wiſdom, hath thought fit to ſet apart a certain ſeaſon, wherein he requires more of the ſolemn, external and viſible exerciſes of religion, and performance of holy duties, than at other times. The reaſons of his ſo doing I mentioned before.

Some objections againſt the change of the day anſwered.

Object. 1. "The ſeventh-day Sabbath was inſtituted "in the ſtate of innocency; therefore it is to be held as "moral and unalterable."

Anſw. The inſtitution of the Sabbath, or conſecration of one day in ſeven to the Lord, may be hence concluded moral and perpetual, ſince the reaſon and ground of it is ſuch, as was ſhewed before; but it will not follow, that the determination of the preciſe day of the week is moral and unalterable alſo, ſince the Lawgiver, who appointed it, not only could, but actually hath altered it, as was ſhewed already. Every thing that God did bid or forbid our firſt parents, in a ſtate of innocency, was not moral or unalterably good or evil in itſelf, as appears from the inſtance of prohibiting to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil; this was a law merely poſitive, and alterable in itſelf. Laſtly, Though the Sabbath of the ſeventh-day was appointed in the ſtate of innocency, and probably would have continued unalterably, if the fall had not interveened, and no greater work than that of the creation had been wrought: Yet, after the fall, God made the ſeventh day Sabbath peculiar to the old œconomy or diſpenſation of the covenant, and alterable together with it, upon his accompliſhing the far more glorious work of our redemption.

Object. 2. "The Iſraelites are injoined to obſerve "the Sabbath throughout there generations, for a perpetual covenant," Exod. xxxi. 16.

Anſw. 1. This may be underſtood of the Sabbath indefinitely, and not of the ſeventh day Sabbath.

2. Granting the ſeventh day Sabbath were meant here, yet the perpetuity attributed to it is not abſolute, but periodical; denoting only a great length of time; for ſo we find it aſcribed to circumciſion, the ſhew-bread, and other things which were to be aboliſhed.

Object. 3. "There is no expreſs precept for keeping "the Chriſtian Sabbath in the New Teſtament."

Anſw. 1. The Lord doth not give expreſs command for every particular duty in his word, but hath thought it ſufficient to afford us plain ſcripture conſequences, whence we may gather it.

2. There was no need of any new expreſs precept to be left on record, ſince all the Chriſtians underſtand themſelves to be expreſly obliged by the fourth command to obſerve one day of ſeven as a Sabbath unto the Lord. And, for the particular day, the example of Chriſt, and of his apoſtles, (who delivered nothing but what they received from their Maſter, 1 Cor. xi. 23.) was ſufficient to enter the church upon the uniform obſervation thereof: And, being once begun, they could not eaſily miſtake in the continnance of it. The ſcripture indeed mentions the change of the day, and the keeping of the Chriſtian Sabbath, but briefly and by ſhort hints, becauſe it was a thing univerſally notour to the whole church.

Theſe things, concerning the morality and perpetual obligation of the law for the Sabbath, being premiſed; I come, in the next place, to the chief thing which I deſigned to handle, viz. The ſanctification of the Sabbath: And there to ſhew particularly, how this holy day ſhould be ſanctified in a due and ſuitable manner.

CHAP. II.

Concerning the ſanctification of the Sabbath.

THere is a twofold ſanctification of the Sabbath, mentioned in the fourth command, the one by God, the other by man.

As for the firſt, God hath already ſanctified it, as is recorded in the cloſe of the command; The Lord bleſſed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it. His bleſſing and hallowing the day are both of the ſame import, and ſignify theſe two things;

1. The Lord's diſtinguiſhing this day from others, and his ſetting it apart from common unto ſacred uſes and employments. He hath honoured it with his royal ſtamp, and conſecrated it for the work of heaven.

2. His pitching upon the Sabbath as the day whereon he doth remarkably bleſs and ſanctify men, by filling his ordinances with the ſpecial bleſſings and graces of his holy Spirit, and making them effectual to our ſanctification.

This is a bleſſed day, and a day of bleſſing: For as it is our duty on this day to meet together, and bleſs God; ſo it is God's promiſe this day to meet with us, and bleſs us. He will rain bleſſings upon the obſervers of his Sabbath, grant them his preſence, and make them joyful in his houſe of prayer.

As to the ſecond, the ſanctification of the Sabbath, which is required of us; this is either negative or poſitive. The firſt conſiſts in a holy reſt; the ſecond in holy exerciſes upon the Sabbath.

Before I proceed to handle theſe, I ſhall lay down ſome cautions for the right underſtanding of the fourth command, and for preventing miſtakes. Wherefore, when God doth here appoint us ſix days of the week for our labour, and one day for his worſhip, we muſt not think that it is God's meaning, 1ſt, That no part of our ſix days is to be ſpent in religious exerciſes; for, under the law, there were ſet portions of every day conſecrated to divine worſhip, in the tabernacle and temple.

Nor, 2dly, doth he mean that no whole day beſide the Sabbath may be ſet apart for imploring God's mercy in time of diſtreſs, or returning thanks to God for ſome ſpecial favour or deliverance, when the providence of God calls us to it: For we find God himſelf injoining the obſervation of other days beſide the ſeventh, Exod. xxxiv. Lev. xxiii. Numb. xxviii. and commanding ceſſation from labour on theſe days. It is not the deſign of the fourth command to lay us under a peremptory or indiſpenſible obligation of labouring in all the ſix days throughout; but only to injoin us not to labour on any other day but theſe ſix days, and to do all our works upon them, ſo as we be not hindered from ſerving God in a ſolemn manner on the ſeventh.

SECTION I.

Concerning the holy reſt requiſite on the Sabbath.

THis holy reſt upon the Sabbath conſiſts in a total abſtinence from all worldly employments and recreations; and from whatever work, buſineſs or action, that may any wiſe prove a hindrance to the worſhip and ſervice of God upon that day. This is plain, not only from the fourth command itſelf, but from many other ſcriptures, particularly Jer. xvii. 24. Iſa. lviii. 13.

I ſhall here propoſe ſome queſtions upon this ſubject to be anſwered.

Queſt. 1. Are no ſort of works lawful on the Sabbath day?

Anſw. There are three ſorts of works ordinarily excepted, as not prohibited by the fourth command, viz. the works of piety, of mercy, and of neceſſity.

2dly, Works of mercy and charity are lawful this day, yea, and neceſſary alſo; for, ſeeing the Sabbath is inſtituted as a memorial of God's great love and mercy to us, we are bound upon it to ſhew charity both to the ſouls and bodies of men, and mercy to the very beaſts alſo: So that "the feeding our bodies, our beaſts, and uſing means for the help of man or beaſt in diſtreſs, and preſerving of their lives, the viſiting the ſick, making collections for the poor," and the like, are lawful on the Sabbath day: For the Jews had allowance for theſe under the law, ſo have we now under the goſpel.

3dly, Works of neceſſity and great conveniency, which could not be foreſeen, nor provided againſt the day before, nor cannot be delayed to another day; ſuch as "fleeing from enemies, or defending ourſelves againſt them; quenching of fire, dreſſing of meat, putting on our cloaths," and the like; theſe are alſo lawful on the Sabbath. The Maccabees of old did not decline to fight on the Sabbath day, nor did the Jews long before their days: For the Jewiſh writers tell us, that the overthrow of Jericho was on the Sabbath; which alſo ſeems to be founded upon Joſh. vi. 3 4. where it is ſaid, They ſhall compaſs the city ſix days; and on the ſeventh day the walls of the city ſhall fall down, and the people ſhall aſcend up every man ſtraight before him. Only take theſe cautions concerning ſuch works: See that the neceſſity be real and not pretended, and that ye have no ſecret complacency in its falling out. Take heed that it be not a neceſſity of your own bringing, and which you might have foreſeen and prevented the week before. And, when ye are doing theſe works of neceſſity and mercy, endeavour to keep your hearts in a ſpiritual frame as much as you can, and ſtudy to do them without giving ſcandal or offence to others, and then diſpatch them as ſoon as poſſibly you can, that ye may attend the main work of the day.

Queſt. II. What are theſe works and actions then, from which we muſt reſt and abſtain upon the Sabbath?

Anſ. We muſt not only take ſpecial care this day to abſtain from all ſuch ſinful works and actions as are unlawful upon any day; but we muſt alſo reſt from all worldly buſineſs and actions, whether employments or recreations, altho' they be ſuch as are lawful on other days. But more particularly,

I. We muſt reſt from all ſorts of ſervile work or worldly employments that tend to our profit or advantage; ſuch as, making of journeys, merchandizing, or travelling to markets, carrying of burdens, fiſhing, going of mills, ploughing, ſowing, reaping, &c. and in a word, all parts of mens ordinary callings. See Nehem. xiii. 15, 16, 17. and downwards: In thoſe days ſaw I in Judah ſome treading wine preſſes on the Sabbath, and bringing in ſheaves, and lading aſſes; as alſo wine-grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jeruſalem on the Sabbath-day: And I teſtified againſt them in the day where they ſold victuals. There dwelt men of Tyre alſo therein, which brought fiſh, and all manner of ware, and ſold on the Sabbath unto the children of Judah and in Jeruſalem. Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and ſaid unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the Sabbath-day? Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath upon Iſrael by profaning the Sabbath, &c. The Jews were ſtrictly prohibited to do any work this day, even the leaſt work of any ſort; manna muſt not be gathered, nor a few ſticks to a fire; nay, the materials for the tabernacle muſt not be prepared this day, Exod. xxxi. nor any thing that might be delayed or done upon another day. This ceſſation was ſhadowed forth by that river in Judea, called the Sabbatical river, becauſe it dried up and ceaſed from running every Sabbath day: which not only Joſephus ſpeaks of, but alſo Pliny, Auguſtus Cæſar in his letter to Tiberius, and others. Let none think that ſuch a total ceſſation from ſecular buſineſs would tend to their worldly diſadvantage; for none were ever loſers in this reſpect, by laying aſide their own labours to attend God's worſhip and ſervice upon his own day. As God took care of Iſrael's ſafety, while they came up to Jeruſalem three times a year to attend the ſolemn feaſts which he had inſtituted; ſo that at theſe times none of their enemies ſhould make any attack upon them, or ſo much as deſire their cities, according to his promiſe in Exod. xxxiv. 24. So will that ſame God, by his kind and watchful providence, take care that his people ſuſtain no damage in their worldly affairs through their dutiful obſervation of this holy day. Nay, on the contrary, they have found this practice to be even profitable to them, with reſpect to their outward temporal eſtate: And there is good ground to think it will always be ſo; for, the more conſcientious any man is in ſanctifying the Sabbath-day, the greater bleſſing he may expect from God upon his labour on the ſix days: And it is not your own labour or toil, but the bleſſing of God that maketh rich, Prov. x. 22. Judge Hale, and other godly perſons have atteſted the truth of this point from their own experience, as I have ſhewed before.

The Lord, in his word, is very peremptory and particular in injoining this ceſſation from labour on the Sabbath; and becauſe he knows the eagerneſs of mens hearts upon the world, and their readineſs to encroach upon his holy day with their worldly labour, he condeſcends upon theſe ſeaſons wherein they have moſt tentation thereto, and requires them in earing time and in harveſt to reſt on the Sabbath, Exod. xxxiv. 21. Though thoſe be the times when we are moſt throng with worldly buſineſs, yet he will have us in midſt thereof punctually to obſerve the Sabbath, and prefer the pleaſure of communion with God in his ordinances to the joy of harveſt, and to expect that harveſt-work will proſper the better for our religious obſervation of the Sabbath in harveſt time. Alſo the Lord ſpecifies theſe ſeaſons, becauſe then we are under greater obligations to ſtrict keeping of the Sabbath, than at other times; becauſe, 1ſt, The bodies of ſervants and cattle are more toiled then, than at other times; and ſo have the more need of reſt.

2dly, People then have leſs time to worſhip God in their families and cloſets on week days, becauſe of the greatneſs of their labour; and therefore have need to improve the Sabbath the more diligently.

3dly, In harveſt we partake more of the fruits of God's bounty, than at other times; and therefore ſhould be the more thankful to God for his mercies, and eſpecially for Chriſt the mercy of mercies, who alone doth both purchaſe and ſweeten all our mercies to us.

Now, is it not matter of deep regret that (notwithſtanding God's ſpecial command, and our manifold obligations to the contrary) our churches in many places ſhould be thinner, and fields thronger with idle people wandering therein in time of harveſt, than at other times of the year?

Object. "When the weather is unſeaſonable and "tempeſtuous through the week, doth it not become "a work of neceſſity to ſow or reap on the Sabbath, "for preſerving of food to man and beaſt?"

Anſ. If ſome particular mens corns were in hazard of being carried away, or loſt by the inundation of a river, or the like, it were a work of neceſſity to endeavour the preſervation of them upon the Sabbath; becauſe the diſpenſation is extraordinary, the caſe not common nor general, and the damage irrecoverable in any ordinary way. But, as for ſowing, reaping, or gathering in upon the Sabbath, (whatever be pretended from the ſeaſon or weather for it) I judge it unlawful, becauſe the caſe is common and general; the hazard proceeds from the ordinary providence of God; and there is ground to expect God's ſending better weather, according to the gracious promiſe, which we ought not to diſtruſt, Gen. ix. 22. While the earth remaineth, ſeed time and harveſt ſhall not ceaſe. But if any diſtruſt God's word, and incroach upon his holy day with their labour, let them conſider that God can eaſily blaſt the works of their hands, and caſt their buſineſs farther behind than their neighbours, who believe and wait upon the Lord, I have a certain account of a rich farmer in this nation, not many years ago, who

In harveſt time (the weather having been very bad for ſome time before, and proving fair and dry on Saturday and the Lord's day) would needs cauſe his ſervants yoke his horſes, and fall to the leading of his corns upon the Sabbath evening: But it pleaſed the Lord that he ſoon got other work to do; for that very night his houſe and goods took fire, and ſo their labour was quickly ſtopt, all hands being called to be employed in quenching of the fire. Many other inſtances might be given: But I proceed.

II. We muſt reſt not only from all worldly employments on the Sabbath, but alſo from all worldly recreations, according to the word of God, and our confeſſion of faith and catechiſms. But this point being much impugned and diſputed by many, I ſhall handle it as diſtinctly and ſatisfyingly as I can.

Recreations are twofold, ſome are natural and neceſſary, ſuch as the refreſhing our bodies with meat, drink and ſleep. Theſe are recreations we cannot live or do buſineſs without upon any day, and therefore are both lawful and neceſſary upon the Sabbath; eſpecially ſince we are thereby better diſpoſed for performing the duties of the day.

But, 2*dly*, There are recreations which are voluntary and not neceſſary, freely choſen by people for their bodily pleaſure and diverſion; ſuch as ſports, paſtimes, or games, whether more public or more private, ſuch as playing at cards, dice, cheſs, tables, &c. or any ſort of carnal muſic, ſuch as whiſtling, ſinging, or playing on an inſtrument, or putting off the time with worldly converſe, jeſting, laughing, telling idle ſtories, walking and talking idly in the ſtreets, or ſeeking our pleaſure in the fields, tho' it be after public worſhip is over. Now, all ſuch recreations being our own works, and for our own pleaſure, and not ſubſervient to the duties of God's worſhip, but hinderances thereto, are unlawful on the Sabbath day, as being expreſly contrary to that reſt required in the fourth command, and to that plain word in Iſa. lviii. 13. 14. If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleaſure on my holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable, and ſhalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleaſures, nor ſpeaking thine own words:—Then ſhalt thou delight thyſelf in the Lord, and I will cauſe thee to ride upon the high places of the earth and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob, &c. Now, can there be any thing more directly levelled againſt carnal recreations idle talking, walking, &c. on the Sabbath day than this is? We muſt turn away our foot from doing our own pleaſure on it, i. e. by travelling or walking for pleaſure or recreation; nay, we muſt neither do our own ways, ſpeak our own words, nor find our own pleaſures on this day. But if people will, notwithſtanding hereof, allow themſelves in idle diverſions and looſe recreations upon the Sabbath, I ſee not how they will free themſelves of open rebellion againſt God: For God commands us to remember the Sabbath day, not to delight ourſelves by carnal recreations, but to keep it holy by divine exerciſes; and to ſpend it otherwiſe, is plainly to trample upon God's authority, and declare war againſt him.

Object. "But theſe who are for Sabbath days recreations, will tell me, that they condemn all ſuch recreations in time of public worſhip, as well as we do: For the fourth command obliges us duly to attend public worſhip on the Sabbath, and forbear all worldly employments or recreations in time thereof; but, when that is once over, we may lawfully divert and recreate ourſelves with ſuch recreations as are modeſt and decent, and not unlawful for Chriſtians on other days."

Anſ. This ſuppoſes that the Sabbath laſts no longer than the public worſhip of the day, the contrary whereof I made evident before, and ſhall evince more fully afterwards. I ſhewed that we are obliged to keep holy the whole Sabbath day, not only the time of public worſhip, or from ſun riſing to ſun ſetting, but the whole natural day, conſiſting of twenty-four hours: This being the ſeventh part of our time, and of the week, it is the Lord's, and conſecrated for his uſe and ſervice; and conſequently no part of it is to be alienated from him, or applied for our pleaſures or recreations.

I ſhall further confirm this truth by ſome more arguments.

I. If it was unlawful for God's people under the Old Teſtament to ſpend any part of the Sabbath in carnal pleaſures and recreations, it is unlawful for us alſo under the New; but the former is true: And therefore the latter. That ſuch recreations were prohibited to the Jews, I believe none will deny, that is either acquaint with their ancient rules and conſtitutions, or that reads and believes the ſcriptures, particularly the fourth command, and Iſa. lvii. 13. forecited. All that remains for me to prove is, that we are bound to abſtain from thoſe recreations upon the Sabbath, as well as the Jews; which I do thus: Whatever the Jews were obliged to upon moral reaſons and grounds, that we are bound to as much as they; but the Jews were bound to abſtain from carnal recreations on the Sabbath, upon moral grounds, which concern us as well as them. I ſhewed before that the reaſons of the fourth command are moral, and reach Chriſtians as well as Jews: I mentioned five of them, and truly every one of them levels as much againſt worldly recreations on the Sabbath day, as againſt worldly employments: I ſhall not reſume them all here, but only inſiſt a little on two of them.

1*ſt*, God's liberality in allowing us ſix days for our own uſe: This reaſon binds us as much as the Jews, to conſecrate one day to the Lord for his ſervice. God hath given as gracious diſcoveries of his bounty to us, as to them; and ſhall we be ſo ungenerous or ungrateful, as to incroach upon God's time, or rob him of any part of it, more than they? The very light of nature and principles of ſound reaſon, beſides the command of God, plead ſtrongly for this: That, ſince the Lord hath liberally given us ſix days for our uſe, we ſhould, without grudge, give him one for his ſervice; and, ſince he gives us ſix whole days, it continues morally juſt and rational that we ſhould give him his one day whole too, and that we ſhould ſpend as much of his day in holy duties as is ordinarily allowed on other days for ſervile labour, and that is the whole day, except what is allowed for neceſſary bodily refreſhments, viz. eating and ſleeping.

2*d* Ground I ſhall inſiſt on is, the Lord's propriety in the Sabbath, or in one day of ſeven. This reaſon binds us as much as it did the Jews; the Lord's right to a day in ſeven is the ſame that ever it was, otherwiſe the morality of the fourth command is not the ſame; but I have already demonſtrated the contrary. The Chriſtian Sabbath is called the Lord's day, as well as the Jewiſh Sabbath is called the holy of the Lord, Iſa. lviii. 13. to ſhew that his propriety and title is the ſame. And it is obſervable, that the Lord in that one verſe calls it twice his holy day; and it is from this that the Lord takes the principal argument, which he there uſes againſt carnal recreations on the Sabbath; "Ye ſhall not ſpeak your own words, nor find your own pleaſures on this day." Why? It is my holy day, the holy of the Lord: The ſeventh part of the week is mine unalterably, ſet apart for holy uſes, conſecrate for my holy ſervice. This argument is moral, and perpetually obliges all men, Chriſtians as much as Jews. For, if a day in ſeven be dedicated to God, certainly every part of it, yea the whole of it belongs to him; and to alienate any part of it to our own uſe or pleaſures, is ſacrilege, and a direct infringement of the morality of the fourth command. The Lord tells us, Levit. xxvii. 28. That every devoted thing is moſt holy unto the Lord. Here is a day both by God and man ſolemnly and perpetually devoted to the Lord; and accordingly the Lord, Iſa. lviii. 13. aſſerts his juſt right and title to it, and twice in one breath calls it his holy day, and, upon this account, prohibits carnal recreations upon it: And muſt it not be great preſumption for any creature, to venture deliberately to rob his Creator of his juſt property, and put that which is holy, and ſolemnly conſecrate to God, to common uſe? Remember what Solomon ſays, Prov. xx. 25. It is a ſnare to the man who devoureth that which is holy, and after vows to make inquiry: It is a ſnare, i. e. it is a moſt dangerous thing, it brings heavy guilt, even God's curſe and vengeance, upon the man that doth ſo. Thus you ſee how the morality and unalterable reaſons of the fourth command reſtrain Chriſtians from carnal recreations on the Sabbath, as much as the Jews. The ſtanding and perpetual rule, which God hath there laid down, can never be altered to the world's end: Still God hath one day, and man hath ſix; but if we take any part of God's day to our own uſe, more than the works of neceſſity and mercy require, then we have more than our ſix, and God hath leſs than his one, which is contrary to the command. Moreover, if it be in the power of man to alienate any part of this day from God, why not the whole of it? and ſo the Sabbath might come to be wholly aboliſhed, which is abſurd.

Object. 1. "The memory of Chriſt's reſurrection on the Lord's day, calls us to more joy and gladneſs upon our Sabbath than the Jews were called to upon theirs."

Anſ. This ſays nothing for carnal ſports or recreations: It is not a worldly joy but a ſpiritual joy, that we are called to this day; ſuch a joy as is expreſſed in pſalms, hymns, and ſpiritual ſongs. Again if our mercies be this day greater than thoſe the Jews had to commemorate, then we are, in gratitude obliged to a more ſtrict and holy ſanctification of the day, to the honour and glory of the God and fountain of our mercies; which, I believe, no ſerious Chriſtian will think carnal recreations very conſiſtent with.

Object. 2. "But theſe recreations are no where forbidden in the New Teſtament,"

Anſ. It is ſufficient if they be forbidden in the Old Teſtament; for the Old Teſtament, is our rule, as much as the New, in actions which are moral, or not ceremonial: And I ſee not what ſhadow of ground there is for calling abſtinence from carnal pleaſures on the Sabbath, a thing ceremonial, or leſs binding upon us than the Jews: But moreover, if we compare the 58th chapter of Iſaiah with the 56th, it will manifeſtly appear, that the Lord, in injoining his people ſtrictly to obſerve the Sabbath, and abſtain from carnal pleaſures thereon, hath a reſpect to goſpel-times after the Meſſiah's coming. Iſaiah was a moſt evangelical prophet, and ſtill had the goſpel-times in his eyes; wherefore ſome call him the evangeliſt Iſaiah: So that, in recommending Sabbath ſanctification, and calling the Sabbath God's holy day, he doth not confine himſelf to the Jewiſh Sabbath, which was ſoon to be aboliſhed; but hath an eye to the evangelical Sabbath, which was to continue to the end of the world.

Again, this is confirmed by the practice of the primitive Chriſtians: they thought it unlawful to ſpend any part of the Lord's day in unneceſſary diverſions from holy things; yea, they accounted the ſtrict ſanctification of this day the prime character of a true ſaint. Auguſtine ſaith, "It is not enough that we keep three or four hours of this day, but that we obſerve the whole day." The ancient Chriſtians did not think the work of the day was over, when the public worſhip was ended. The younger Pliny tells us, "That they uſed this day to meet before day light, and ſing their hymns to Chriſt." And Tertullian, in his apology, makes mention of their night prayers. They thought themſelves bound to begin the work of the day ſo early, becauſe Chriſt roſe this morning before break of day. They neither thought nor pleaded that they had more freedom for worldly pleaſures, or were leſs obliged to holy exerciſes this day, than the Jews upon their Sabbath.

Nay if we conſider things narrowly, it will be found that Chriſtians are under greater obligations to a ſtrict and holy ſanctification of the Sabbath under the goſpel, than the Jews were under the law, for ſeveral reaſons.

1ſt, We have not only the creation, as the Jews had, but we have alſo the redemption of mankind, which is a greater work, this day to commemorate. Now, if the Jews were obliged to celebrate the day which was inſtituted for the memory of the creation by a total abſtinence from worldly employments and recreations; much more are we bound to a ſtrict ſanctification of the day which is inſtituted for commemorating of both creation and redemption. We have far greater mercies to commemotate this day than the Jews had, viz. "the redeeming love of a crucified Jeſus and his glorious victory over death and hell;" and conſequently have greater work and employment, and ought to be the more active and buſy in doing of it; and alſo more delightful work, and therefore ſhould be the leſs inclined to weary or ſit up in it.

2dly, We have a far more pleaſant and excellent manner of worſhip to perform upon the Sabbath, than the Jews had. Their worſhip was attended with manifold rites, waſhings, and ſacrifices, which were both chargeable and toilſome to their bodies; but ours is ſpiritual pleaſant and eaſy.

3dly, The Jews had many other feſtival days to obſerve, by a ſtrict and holy reſt, beſide the Sabbath; but under the goſpel, God hath freed us from the yoke of all other feſtivals, and hath inſtitute none but the Lord's day, which, in gratitude, we ought to obſerve more ſtrictly and religiouſly than the Jews.

4thly, By baptiſm, we come under more ſtrict and ſolemn engagements to keep God's commandments, than the Jews; and alſo we have more ſpecial promiſes of his Spirit to help us in keeping of them, than the Jews had: For, in the New Teſtament times, the Spirit is poured out in a larger meaſure, than in the Old.

So that from the whole I infer, that if the Jews under the Old Teſtament were bound to keep the whole Sabbath day, and wholly to abſtain from their own pleaſures upon it, yea, count the ſervice of the Sabbath, a delight, according to Iſa. lviii. 13. tho' in itſelf it was burdenſome: Much more ought we, under the goſpel, to keep the whole Sabbath ſtrictly, and call it a delight, when the work and ſervice of it is ſo pleaſant and eaſy.

II. Another argument, which I ſhall bring againſt the foreſaid Sabbath day's recreations, ſhall be taken from the nature and greatneſs of the Sabbath day's work; and I ſhall form it thus:

If the work of the Sabbath be ſo neceſſary, weighty and various, that it requires the whole day to be ſpent therein, and challenges all our ſouls faculties to be employed thereabout; then carnal recreations are unlawful thereupon:

But the former is true; therefore, &c.

The connexion of the major propoſition is evident, for that which is weighty and neceſſary ought always to take place of that which is not ſo.

As for the minor propoſition, that the work of the Sabbath is ſo great and neceſſary, is plain, if we conſider, that the Sabbath is the great market day of heaven; upon which we ought to take in, and lay up proviſion for our ſouls for the reſt of the week, yea, for eternity itſelf. It is the uſual day of ſinners converſion and acquaintance with God: It is the day wherein we have our ſins to bewail, our needs to get ſupplied, our hard hearts to get melted, our dead affections to get raiſed, our guilty conſciences to get diſburdened, our dark minds to get enlightened, our weak graces to get ſtrengthened: We have this day God's word to teach our families, our children to inſtruct, Chriſt's love to commemorate, death and judgment to provide for, and our Redeemer to treat with about the ſaving of our ſouls. In a word, this is a day wherein we are to make viſits to God, and receive viſits for him. Now, I do appeal to every ſerious ſoul, that knows any thing of real godlineſs, if theſe things be not ſo weighty and neceſſary, as to challenge the whole of the day, and the attendance of all our powers and faculties: And if ſo, then we are bound carefully to avoid every thing that may prove an avocation or diverſion from doing them.

III. Another argument may run thus;

If the worldly circumſtances of the generality be ſuch as they can have but little time through the week for worſhipping God, minding their ſouls, and preparing for eternity; then it is their duty cloſly and diligently to employ the Lord's day for theſe ends, in which God grants them freedom for the ſame:

But the former is true; therefore, &c.

The connexion of the major propoſition is certain; for, if our whole lives be little enough for accompliſhing the great work of our ſalvation, the ſeventh day, or ſeventh part of our time, is never to be thought too much.

And for the truth of the minor propoſition, that the circumſtances of the generality are ſuch as above repreſented, I do appeal to the experience of the whole country where we live. How many poor men are there every where, tradeſmen, tenants, ſervants, workmen, &c. whoſe worldly poverty and neceſſities are ſo great and many, that they can ſcarce get ſo much ſpare time for their work and labour through the week, as is ſufficient for eating and ſleeping? They are commonly ſo toil'd through the day, that, at night, they are hardly fit for any thing but ſleep. Now, what time have theſe through the week for holy duties and religious exerciſes? what time for reading and praying and learning the principles of Chriſtianity? But ſince God is graciouſly pleaſed to give them the Sabbath, in which they may retire from the world, and employ themſelves wholly in the foreſaid religious concerns; have they not the greateſt need cloſly and diligently to ſpend and improve the whole Sabbath therein, without any kind of unneceſſary diverſion from the ſame?

Are there not many poor ſervants, whoſe maſters are ſo ſevere, that they will not allow them half an hour in a day to ſerve God, or mind their ſouls? and ſhould they not greedily lay hold on the opportunity of the Sabbath for theſe ends, and let no part of this bleſſed day paſs away idly? Now, for miniſters or others to tell ſuch, that the whole Sabbath day is too long for the foreſaid ſpiritual excerciſes, and teach them to ſpend away part of it in carnal recreations or idleneſs, in my opinion, is a moſt compendious way to promote atheiſm, ignorance and profanity amongſt them. And, doth not daily experience confirm this ſad truth? Do we not ſee, that profaning the Sabbath opens a door to all profanity? and that in theſe places where people neglect the Sabbath, or ſpend the half of the day in recreations and idleneſs, there ignorance and immorality of all ſorts abound, and family-worſhip and piety are neglected; whereas on the contrary, in theſe places where the whole Sabbath is cloſly obſerved, and recreations diſcouraged, there we ſee Chriſtian knowledge, morality, the fear of God, and family godlineſs do flouriſh and proſper? Ocular experience ſhews us, that the fourth command is a hedge about all the reſt; and the religious obſervation of the whole Sabbath day is the moſt effectual method for promoting Chriſtian knowledge and univerſal piety. People may hear a ſermon or two on a Sabbath, and yet ly ſtill in their ignorance, if they ſpend the reſt of the day in idleneſs and recreations, and neglect the private means of reading, praying, catechiſing, conference, repetition of ſermons, &c. I never expect to ſee knowledge or piety flouriſh in congregations or families, till theſe means be uſed, and pains taken, after the public worſhip is over, to inſtruct children and ſervants. O! doth not the lamentable ignorance of many poor ſouls plead aloud for the ſtrict and diligent obſervation of the whole Lord's day? Had miniſters and others a due ſenſe of the miſery and periſhing ſtate of ignorant ſouls, I am ſure they would preſs it more, and never ſet up to teach them carnal recreations on this day.

O poor men, ſervants and labourers, in the name of God, I exhort you to ſpend more of God's day in heaven's work: You have little time through the week for it; therefore God, in pity to your ſouls, looſes you this day from your weekly work, and cries to you from on high, Come up hither; lay aſide the thoughts of things below, and ſet your affections on things above. As your bodies reſt this day from labour, let your ſouls think on eternal reſt in heaven, and uſe all the appointed means for attending to it.

IV. A fourth argument I make uſe of is this;

If God prohibits worldly employments on the Sabbath, then certainly he diſcharges carnal recreations:

But the former is true; therefore, &c.

The minor propoſition is undeniable; ſo that all I have to prove is the connexion of the major propoſition, which may be eaſily done thus: The great reaſon of prohibiting worldly employments on the Sabbath is, becauſe they hinder the holy employment of the ſoul, and would interrupt the duties of the Sabbath. But if carnal recreations do hinder the duties of the Sabbath, and ſpiritual employment of the ſoul, as much as ſervile labour; then by parity of reaſon they are forbidden alſo: But ſo it is, that they do hinder as much, yea, more than ſervile labour would do. Nay, I may be bold to ſay, that a man may be more ſerious, and have his mind more exerciſed with heavenly meditations, when plowing, ſowing or threſhing, than when he is about carnal entertainments, recreations, or paſtimes; or when he is in vain promiſcuous company, jeſting, ſporting, and telling ſtories, or walking and talking idly in the ſtreets or fields. Theſe do far more diſtract the heart from God's ſervice, than ſervile labour doth: A man will find himſelf more indiſpoſed for prayer and holy duties after them, than after the works of his calling It was the ſenſe of this that made Auguſtine ſay, 'That it were better for maids to 'ſpin, or for men to plow, than for them to dance and 'ſport on the Sabbath day. Quanto melius eſt arare 'quam ſaltare in Sabbato.' Aug. in titulum Pſal. xcii. He very well knew, that carnal pleaſures are inconſiſtent with devotion, and wholly unfit the ſoul for communion with God, which is the work of the Sabbath. Hence we ſee, lovers of pleaſure, and lovers of God, are ſet in oppoſition, 2 Tim. iii. 4.

I might go on to multiply arguments to this purpoſe; but this truth is ſo clear from ſound reaſon and the word of God, and particularly from Iſa. lviii. 13. to ſuch as believe the ſcriptures, that I think it almoſt needleſs to ſay any more.

But, in regard this truth hath many adverſaries, (and no wonder tho' ſatan muſter up all his forces againſt it, ſince it levels ſo directly againſt his kingdom) I ſhall endeavour to anſwer the chief objections brought againſt it.

Particularly, there is one J. S. who calls himſelf a Preſbyter of the Epiſcopal church of Scotland, that in his pamphlets upon the Sabbath, lately publiſhed, pleads for Sabbath days recreations, both as lawful and dutiful, after the public worſhip is over; providing (as he qualifies them) there be nothing immodeſt or undecent thererein, nor too much time ſpent thereby: Tho' he neither tells how much time he allows for them, nor what are the immodeſt or undecent things which he diſallows in them; but leaves every man to his own conſtruction and choice therein.

I ſhall conſider the ſtrength of the arguments adduced by him and others for theſe recreations; and I ſhall begin with the chief one.

Object. I. 'To hinder theſe recreations after ſermon 'were to tye us, who are the diſciples of Chriſt, to as 'ſtrict a reſt, and as burdenſome an obſervation of the 'Sabbath, as the Jews were obliged to under the law, 'which were to judaize, and build that again, which 'Chriſt hath deſtroyed.'

Anſ 1. The fourth command being moral and perpetual, as hath been proven, doth oblige us to as ſtrict a reſt and ceſſation from worldly actions, as it did the Jews. I grant indeed, the Phariſees invented a great many ſuperſtitious additions to the reſt of the Sabbath, which were not of divine appointment, and would have had all to conform thereto, as if they had been divine laws. They aſſigned ſuch a preciſe ſpace for a Sabbath day's journey; they frequently would not allow the relieving of mens bodies and beaſts in diſtreſs this day: Some came this length, that tho' they allowed beaſts to be fed or watered, yet, if any of them fell into a ditch, they muſt not draw him out on this day, but feed him where he was till the Sabbath was over. Nay, I have read of Jews ſo ridiculouſly ſuperſtitious, that they would not allow themſelves to be drawn out of pits or dangerous places into which they had fallen on the Sabbath, and therefore have ſmarted with death for their folly. Some held, that it was unlawful to kill a flea, take the ſkin off an apple or do any thing of that kind on the Sabbath day: Nay, further, they taught, that it was unlawful to defend themſelves againſt their enemies this day; by which means they ſometimes became a prey to their enemies: Till Mattathias the prieſt better inſtructed them, as we are told by Joſephus, and the author of the firſt book of the Maccabees.

I ſay, theſe were nothing but human additions; for the ſame things were lawful to the Jews on the Sabbath, that are allowed to us, viz. the works of piety, neceſſity and mercy; as manifeſtly appears by the commentary which Chriſt gives upon this command, both by his words and actions. Chriſt defends his practice in healing, and his diſciples in plucking the ears of corn on the Sabbath; and ſhews, that the works of neceſſity and mercy, the relieving of men and beaſts in diſtreſs, were lawful on the Sabbath. Our bleſſed Saviour, by his reaſoning againſt the Phariſees on this ſubject intends only to reprove their ſuperſtitious additions, and to ſhew what things were lawful to the Jews on the Sabbath from the beginning, but not what things are now lawful to us under the goſpel; for he gives no more liberty for worldly things this day than what was before, ſince he came not to deſtroy the law.

2*dly* I grant indeed, that our Saviour hath freed Chriſtians under the goſpel, from the Jewiſh method of celebrating the Sabbath, by a typical ſervice and ceremonial worſhip, conſiſting of ſacrifices, waſhings, and manifold rites which were a burdenſome yoke. Now, to reintroduce abrogated ceremonies on the Sabbath, is (I confeſs) to judaize, and rebuild what Chriſt hath deſtroyed; and whoever are chargeable with this in any degree, let them ſee to it. But what man will call abſtaining from carnal recreations on the Sabbath, an abrogated Jewiſh ceremony? or compare the ſtrict ſanctification of the Lord's day, by the pleaſant evangelical ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe, to the burdenſome method of obſerving the Jewiſh Sabbath? Chriſt hath told us, that his yoke is eaſy, and his burden is light; and all his experienced diſciples will ſet their ſeal to the truth of it.

For my part, I do not ſee how a man can own the morality and unalterable obligation of the fourth command, and not grant that we are as ſtrictly tied to moral duties on the Sabbath as the Jews, and conſequently to the ſame holy reſt, and diligence in the ſervice of God upon it; ſince the change made by Chriſt's coming is only in circumſtantial or ceremonial things, viz. the day of the week, and the nature of the ſervice or ſacrifices requiſite upon it.

Object. "But, beſides the nature of the ſervice and "worſhip, there were ſeveral peculiar thing required "of the Jews upon the Sabbath, not binding upon "us: Particularly, concerning the not dreſſing of "meat, going out of the place, kindling of fire, bearing "of burdens, the nature of the puniſhment of Sab"bath breaking, double ſacrifices, &c."

Anſw. 1*ſt*, If any of the foreſaid things were typical or ceremonial, then indeed it is abrogate by Chriſt's coming, and not binding upon us: But this will nowiſe alter the caſe with reſpect to abſtaining from carnal recreations on the Sabbath, which can never be reckoned typical or ceremonial; it being what is perpetually moral, and neceſſary to the ſuitable ſanctification of this holy day, in all ages of the world.

2*dly*, Let the foreſaid inſtances be narrowly conſidered, and it will be found that there is no ſuch peculiar thing therein as is commonly imagined.

I. As to dreſſing of meat on the Sabbath, the only place whence the prohibition of it is inferred is Exod. xvi 23. concerning the preparing of manna. There are ſeveral interpreters, who think, that the dreſſing of it on the Sabbath is not here forbid; but that they are there ordered to lay up a part of it undreſſed for the Sabbath. But granting, as the moſt part of interpreters do, that the dreſſing of the manna is there diſcharged, this will not infer a diſcharge of dreſſing any kind of meat on the Sabbath: ſince there were ſome things peculiar to the manna, beyond other meat: For,

1*ſt*, There was a particular promiſe made concerning it, that was not made concerning other kinds of food, viz. That it ſhould not ſpoil nor corrupt: For, in that hot country, dreſſed meat could not eaſily be preſerved good and wholeſome over night.

2*dly*, There was much more ſervile work requiſite in preparing manna than other kinds of food; it behoved to be grinded in mills, beat in mortars, and baken in pans, Num. xi. 8. Now, ſo much ſervile labour about preparing of food was not fit upon the Sabbath, ſince it did not tend to the reſt or refreſhing of the body, but rather to the toiling of it; and likewiſe it took up many hands, and would have hindered them from ſanctifying of the day. So that there is no peculiarity in this prohibition; for, were we in their caſe, and had manna to feed on, it were not lawful for us to prepare it on the Sabbath, more than for the Jews: But it is certain that they did dreſs other meat on the Sabbath, that required not ſuch ſervile labour. Only we are taught by this prohibition, as well as the Jews, to be careful to prepare that meat, which requires much toil and pains, before the Sabbath come; and ſo to order matters about our bodily proviſions the day before, that ſervants may be as little hindered from ſanctifying the Sabbath, and the work of the day as little interrupted as poſſible.

II. As to the ſecond inſtance, the prohibition of going out of their places on the Sabbath, Exod. xvi. 29. it is plain from the context, that it is to be meant of going out to ſeek manna, it being an unneceſſary ſervile work, and therefore unlawful on the Sabbath day. For tho' the Jews were reſtrained from going through the ſtreets or fields on the Sabbath, for worldly buſineſs, recreation, or putting off the time; yet not from all walking or travelling, when either the works of piety or neceſſity, did require; for a Sabbath day's journey was allowed, Acts i. 12. The Phariſees indeed ſtinted it to two thouſand cubits, (which ſome make one mile, others two, according to the different cubits in uſe among them) in regard this was to be the diſtance of the utmoſt part of the camp of Iſrael in the wilderneſs, from the tabernacle, to which they were bound to repair for worſhip on the Sabbath day. But this was no good warrant of ſtinting the Sabbath day's journey to ſuch a preciſe ſpace; ſince it muſt be either more or leſs, according to the diſtance of peoples dwellings from the public ordinances, to attend which a perſon may go many miles, and not prophane the Sabbath. The Shunammitiſh woman, as appears from 2 Kings iv. 23. uſed to travel on the Sabbath to the prophet Eliſha, to attend public worſhip, and wait on his teaching.

III. As to the prohibition of kindling fire, Exod. xxxv. 3. If we conſider the place and context, we will find that it is only kindling of fire for ſervile work, particularly for the work of rearing up the tabernacle, that they were then about, which is there forbidden: This is the mind of Vatablus, Junius and Termellius, and the beſt commentators on the place. For God is here giving directions for making the tabernacle; and to prevent their thinking, that the nature of the work, or haſte required in doing it, would juſtify their working at it on the Sabbath, he firſt diſcharges all working on that day, verſe 2. and then more particularly, v. 3. he forbids the work of kindling fire, as that of ſmiths, founders, or any others, for preparing materials for the tabernacle. And ſo he will have that work, tho' for a ſacred uſe, give place to that which was more immediately ſacred and neceſſary, viz. the preſent ſanctification of the Sabbath. This doth not prohibite kindling of fire for the works of neceſſity or mercy, which preſently tend to the better ſanctifying of the Sabbath; ſince this, for the ſervile work of the tabernacle, would have hindered the preſent ſanctification of it; whereas kindling of fire for warming our bodies, preparing meat, or for ſhewing light, do not hinder, but tend to promote the ſanctifying of the Sabbath. Yet we ſhould take care that we do not extend our liberty this way too far, ſo as to make ſolemn feaſts on the Sabbath, which require much ſervile work, and hinder the duties of the Sabbath: For tho' we be not forbidden on the Lord's day to kindle a fire for dreſſing meat, yet we muſt beware we make not ſuch a flame as ſhall kindle the fire of Gord's wrath againſt us on that day.

IV. As to the bearing of burdens on the Sabbath, Chriſt hath given no more liberty to us this way, than to the Jews; for tho' he commanded the impotent man on the Sabbath, John v. 10. to take up his bed and walk, yet this was no carrying of a burden for any ſecular deſign, but a mean required for glorifying of God, and publiſhing the miracle.

V. As to their puniſhing of Sabbath breaking with death, Num. xv. this belonged to the judicial law, which was peculiar to the Jewiſh common-wealth, and doth not bind other nations, except ſo much of it as is of univerſal moral equity; for the peculiar circumſtances of nations require peculiar ſtatutes and puniſhments for ſome particular crimes.——But, in the next place, there appears to have been ſome ſpeciality in that Sabbath breaker's caſe; for we do not find that Sabbath breaking was always ſo puniſhed afterwards. If we read verſes 30, and 31. we ſee God threatening death to all ſuch as ſin preſumptuouſly, and with an high hand: And in the very next verſe, the Sabbath-breaker is brought in guilty; which makes it probable, that his crime was attended with the aggravation of preſumptuous ſinning.

VI. As to the double ſacrifices required on this Sabbath, two lambs in the morning, and two in the evening, Num. xxviii. 9. 10. I grant they were a heavy burden, in regard of the great expence and bodily toil the Jews were put to thereby, from which Chriſt hath happily freed us. But, excepting what was typical and ceremonial in their worſhip and ſacrifices, there is nothing here peculiar to them; for otherwiſe we are ſtill as much bound to double ſacrifices on the Sabbath as the Jews: We are bound to double our devotion, our prayers, our praiſes, &c. this day, beyond other days. Yea, as I ſhewed before, we are more called to it than the Jews; which alſo is confirmed from Ezek. xlvi. 4. 5. where, inſtead of the four lambs required on the Sabbath in Moſes's time, we ſee that in Ezekiel's temple-ſervice, which points at goſpel times, the Sabbath-offerings were to be ſix lambs and a ram; intimating not only the continuance, but the advancement of the Sabbath-ſanctification in the days of the Meſſiah, and that Chriſtians ſhould exceed the Jews in zeal and diligence in keeping of the Sabbath, and ſhould multiply duties, and offer up a greater plenty of ſpiritual ſacrifices, and be more active and intenſe about the works of the Sabbath, than they were: And good reaſon for it, ſince we have both the creation and redemption to commemorate this day, and a more excellent worſhip to perform upon it.

But I proceed to examine the reſt of J. S's arguments for Sabbath days recreations.

Object. II. "Our Saviour ſaith, that the Sabbath is "made for man and not man for the Sabbath," Mark ii. 27.

Anſ. This word makes not for his purpoſe; for Chriſt adduceth it in defence of his diſciples plucking the ears of corn on the Sabbath, for ſatisfying their hunger, which was a work of neceſſity; and not in defence of carnal diverſions and recreations.

But, that we may take up the true meaning of the place, we muſt conſider, that, if by Sabbath be underſtood the true ſanctification of the day by ſincere worſhipping and ſerving of God, then certainly man was made for it: But if Sabbath be taken, according to the Phariſees ſenſe here, for the mere external reſt of the day (as Chriſt certainly underſtands it in this place) then indeed the Sabbath was made for man; this external reſt being but a mean for the true ſanctification of the Sabbath, and deſigned for the ſpecial good of man, partly that his body might have ſome repoſe from labour, and chiefly that he might have a ſolemn opportunity to worſhip God, and hold communion with him. Now (ſays our Saviour) it were unreaſonable to think that a law, intended for a privilege and benefit to man, ſhould be improven to his hurt and ruin. The great deſign of the Sabbath pleads for works of neceſſity and mercy: For how can God be ſerved, or the ſoul profited on this day, if care be not taken for preſerving the life, and ſupporting the body, in order thereto? But how this text makes for carnal diverſions on the Sabbath, I ſee not; unleſs one ſhould ſay, that Chriſt meant when he ſaid, The Sabbath is made for man, that it is made for his corporal pleaſures: which is moſt abſurd, and directly contrary to Iſa. lviii. 13.

Object. III. "The hindering of men from Sabbath-"days recreations is an encroachment upon our Chri-"ſtian liberty."

Anſ. I would gladly know what he means by Chriſtian liberty. I take the goſpel-ſenſe of it to be this, that Chriſt hath purchaſed for believers under the goſpel, not only liberty from the dominion, guilt and puniſhment of ſin, the bondage of ſatan, and ſting of death; but alſo hath liberate them from the yoke of the ceremonial law, to which the Old Teſtament ſaints were ſubjected; and likewiſe from the curſe of the moral law; yea, and from the power and obligation of it too, as a covenant of works; ſo as they are neither to be juſtified nor condemned thereby. But that he hath obtained any liberty to us from the obligation of the moral law, as the rule of life and manners, more than the Jews had, I know no orthodox Proteſtant that will aſſert it. Now, if the fourth command be a part of the moral law, (as J. S. owns) to pretend to any freedom from the ſtrict obſervation of it, and what is truly moral in it under the goſpel, is unchriſtian licentiouſneſs, and not Chriſtian liberty. Chriſt never purchaſed a liberty to us, to be leſs religious, or leſs diligent in prayer, praiſes, and other duties, than the Jews; for this were no true liberty. Our true liberty lies in a readineſs to obey the holy will of God, our only rightful Lord; and in being in a capacity to purſue our chief good and great end; and the more we are diſabled from this, the more we are in bondage. And hence it is, that the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. cxix. 45. I will walk at liberty, for I ſeek thy precepts. But for any, under pretence of Chriſtian liberty, to walk looſely and licentiouſly, is to deſtroy the end of Chriſtian liberty, which is, That, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, we might ſerve the Lord without fear, in holineſs and righteouſneſs before him all the days of our life, Luke i. 74, 75.

Object. IV. "The reſtraining theſe recreations is "not a good politic for promoting godlineſs; for, in-

"ſtead of this, it drives people to the other extreme."

Anſ. 1*ſt*, Though it were a good politic, I am ſure it is bad divinity: For, we muſt not do evil, that good may come of it.

2*dly*, It is no new thing for mens luſts and corruptions to grow more impetuous, and be the more irritated, by the reſtraints and prohibitions of God's holy and juſt laws, Rom. vii. 8. Yet no Chriſtian ever pleaded that theſe laws ſhould be either diſpenſed with or ſlackened upon this account; but ſtill owned the fault to be in our own corrupt natures, and not in God's excellent laws. If all theſe precepts were to be diſpenſed with, that are grating to the luſts of carnal men, then few of them would be binding; for every ſpiritual duty is unpleaſant to them.

3*dly*, If inquiry be made into the ſtate of the flocks of theſe miniſters who uſe this politic, I apprehend it will be found to have but very bad ſucceſs in promoting godlineſs, or even morality, either on Sabbath or week-day. Nay, on the contrary, theſe Sabbath-day's recreations will be found a politic of hell, wherever the experiment is tried, for baniſhing piety, and promoting all ſorts of profanity. Whereas, in theſe places where they are conſcientiouſly ſuppreſſed, Sabbath-holineſs, family-worſhip, and true piety are known to be in a flouriſhing condition.

4*thly*, If magiſtrates and miniſters would cordially join hands in the execution of civil and eccleſiaſtical laws againſt Sabbath-breaking and profaneneſs, the imperious eruptions of mens luſts on the Sabbath would ſoon, through the bleſſing of God, be effectually damm'd up and reſtrained. A reſolute reſiſting of the devil is the beſt way to overcome him; whereas yielding to him in any degree in the ready way to be vanquiſh'd by him.

Object. V. "The Chriſtian Sabbath (ſaith J. S.) is "a feſtival, and conſequently ſolacing ourſelves by a "chearful and mutual converſation together in our "houſes on that day (if there be nothing immodeſt or "undecent thereon, nor too much time ſpent thereby) "is not only lawful, but dutiful alſo."

Anſ. 1*ſt*, I ſuppoſe he means the conveening of friends and neighbours to carnal feaſts and entertainments on the Sabbath, and holding good fellowſhip together, after the manner of the world: for, if he meaned any other converſation, I think he would not caution againſt the ſpending of too much time therein; for there is little need of any ſuch caution with reſpect to ſpiritual converſation: Alas, there is little time ſpent therein! J. S. had employed his pen much better, if he had recommended this ſort of converſation on the Sabbath: For that of a carnal ſort, people are apt enough to learn it without a teacher.

2*dly*, I freely own the Lord's day to be a feſtival, but it is for the ſoul, not for the body. This is the day in which Chriſtians are brought into the banquetting-houſe; but the fare is celeſtial, the dainties ſpiritual: On this day they are feaſted and filled, but it is with the fatneſs of God's houſe, and the rivers of his pleaſures: This day they are made joyful, but not with carnal joy and mirth; the pleaſures are ſpiritual, the joy is divine, I do not ſay that this day ought to be kept as a faſt day for afflicting the body; no, it is neceſſary the body ſhould be ſeaſonably refreſhed and ſupported, that it may be ſerviceable to the ſoul in the work of the day, and ſervice of God, and may call the Sabbath a delight, rejoice in God's goodneſs, and be cheerful in the celebration of the love and praiſes of our Redeemer. But to ſay, that ſet feaſts, carnal entertainments, and good fellowſhip, are proper duties on the Lord's day, is ſtrange doctrine; for then I ſee not how carnal mirth and jollity can be excluded, and ſo God's holy day ſhall be turned into a carnival, deſtructive to the bleſſed ends and deſigns of it. Modeſt and honeſt proviſion for our tables on the Lord's day, is what I do not diſcommend: But I ſay, "Set feaſts, ſumptuous entertainments, and too liberal partaking of the creatures, are not proper on this day; in regard they "are apt to indiſpoſe us for the duties of the day, by "rendering the body dull and ſluggiſh, and inclining "us to drowſineſs and ſleep;" as alſo, the preparing of them doth detain ſervants from the ordinances, and divert them both from public and private duties neceſſary for the ſanctifying of the Sabbath. It is obſervable of our bleſſed pattern Jeſus Chriſt, that though he frankly went into the houſes of Phariſees, and others, on week-days, when invited; yet, on the Sabbath day, it is only ſaid, he went into one of their houſes to eat bread, Luke xiv. 1. that is, to take ſuch moderate refreſhment as was ſuitable for that day, and the work of it; teaching us, that on this day, we ſhould, like Moſes and Jethro, with the elders of Iſrael, Exod. xviii. 12. eat bread before God, i. e. with a deep ſenſe of his all-ſeeing eye, and ſpecial caution againſt all manner of exceſs, or any thing that may indiſpoſe us for holy duties.

Moreover, obſerve what manner of converſation Chriſt had at this Sabbath day's refreſhment: He indeed ſolaced himſelf and the company with a mutual and cheerful converſation, but it was wholly ſpiritual and heavenly, concerning the feaſt provided for us in the goſpel. This was ſuitable Sabbath-day's converſation that needed not J. S's caution againſt ſpending too much time therein.

But J. S. is ſo zealous for theſe Sabbath-days recreations and entertainments, that he is not content to prove the lawfulneſs of them, but he will have them binding on us, as neceſſary duties. But I would fain know how any man will prove the dutifulneſs of them: Pray, where is the command for them? where is the advantage of them? wherein do they promote the great ends of the Sabbath, God's glory and ſouls edification? I think I have clearly proven the contrary. I ſhall only add this word; I make a ſuppoſition, that a poor ſoul is brought under a law-work, or deep convictions, like the jailor, by means of the ſermons on the Lord's day: Will any man ſay, that it would be his duty, preſently after, to go to theſe feaſts, entertainments and recreations, and thereby hinder or quench the operations of God's Spirit on his ſoul? I would rather think it his duty to retire from the world and company, to prayer and ſelf-examination, in order to entertain and cheriſh the Spirit's work on his heart.

Object. VI. "But theſe recreations and entertain-"ments will not hinder the ſanctification of the Sab-"bath, but rather help to quicken and prepare us for "our ſucceeding devotions."

Anſ. I am perſuaded that theſe who exerciſe themſelves to godlineſs, and are acquaint with the power of it, will not talk ſo; nay, they will tell, from their ſad experience, that the meeting of promiſcuous companies on the Lord's day, for carnal entertainments, vain walking, talking and ſporting, are ſo far from fitting us for after devotions or ſpiritual exerciſes, that they directly tend to deaden the heart, ſuppreſs convictions, quench any warmneſs of affections and livelineſs of frame wrought in us by the public ordinances, and ſo render us the more indiſpoſed for ſpiritual employments. Inſtead of quickening and diſpoſing our minds for returning to God's worſhip, they do the more increaſe our averſeneſs thereto. Experienced Chriſtians can tell, that private meditation, reading, or Chriſtian conference, are far better means to fit us for our evening devotions on the Lord's day, than carnal recreations.

Object. VII. 'Some intermiſſion for recreation is 'needful; for we cannot be employed in ſpiritual ex'erciſes a whole day: This would be a great toil to 'the ſpirits, eſpecially of ſuch who have been ſore toil'ed with ſervile labour through the week: Nay, the 'beſt are ready to faint and weary in the continued ex'erciſe of piety.'

Anſ. 1*ſt*, The extent of God's precepts is not to be meaſured by our ability or inability; neither can our impotency, to give obedience to God's commands, in the leaſt invalidate or weaken the authority thereof.

2*dly*, By the ſame argument, the Jews might have pleaded, that they were not bound to reſt the whole Sabbath, nor ſpend the whole day in religious exerciſes; for they were liable to the ſame infirmities that are incident to us.

3*dly*, I frankly allow what refreſhment is neceſſary for ſupporting nature, and for the better performance of the duties of the Sabbath: But, for the foreſaid carnal diverſions, they are ſo far from being neceſſary for furthering the work of the Sabbath, that they are great hindrances thereto.

4*thly*, If labouring people need recreation for their bodies, then let them have ſome time on week days for it.———If for their minds, I know no ſuch fit recreation as the joyful commemoration of the love of Chriſt, and our redemption from hell and wrath through his blood, and the chearful ſinging the praiſes of our Maker and Redeemer, which is the very work of the Sabbath. Is it not a recreation for Chriſt's ſheep to feed in his green paſtures, and to be led by him beſide the ſtill waters? to behold the waters of life, clear as cryſtal, flowing betwixt the banks of ordinances? to get a pleaſant proſpect from mount Nebo, of the promiſed land? Is it not a recreation for a condemned man, to come and hear his pardon pronounced? for a hungry man, to get pleaſant food and heavenly dainties? for a ſick man, to get all his diſeaſes healed? Muſt it not be a carnal and ſtupid heart, that will call theſe a burden or wearineſs? There are many who weary not to ſpend whole days at markets, in buying and ſelling; nay, whole days and nights in gaming and drinking: And, will you call a day ſpent in ſuch pleaſant and refreſhful work a toil, which is the higheſt privilege of a rational creature? Surely, no workman can be ſo glad of a day's eaſe from his ſore labour, as a believer ſhould be to have a day's releaſe from his worldly buſineſs, that he may freely and entirely converſe with his God and Saviour, and rejoice in his bounty and redeeming love.

5*thly*, Every Sabbath we meet with many unavoidable interruptions, which take us off from the duties of God's worſhip, tho' we go not to contrive unneceſſary diverſions and recreations for this end. There is much of every Sabbath ſpent in preparing food, dreſſing and feeding our bodies, going to the church, and returning from it, attending children, cattle, &c. O how many are our avocations and intermiſſions in ſerving our Creator and Redeemer on the Lord's day which we cannot ſhun! And, ſhall we think the reſt of the day too much for this important work, that we muſt go ſeek carnal diverſions to drive it away?

6*thly*, I grant, the beſt are ready to grow weary of duty, becauſe of the averſion of our corrupt nature to that which is good; but carnal recreations will never cure this averſion, nor overcome that wearineſs, but will certainly indulge and increaſe the ſame. The beſt way to cure wearineſs (next to the grace of God) is practice and experience in religion, and ſincere wreſtling and ſtriving againſt it. Reſiſting overcomes it; but giving way to it doth increaſe it.

7*thly*, The Lord knows the carnality and wearineſs that our hearts are naturally prone to in the work of the Sabbath; wherefore, for remedy thereof, he hath graciouſly appointed variety of exerciſes on the Sabbath day, that, when we weary of one, another may be our recreation. Are you weary of hearing? then recreate yourſelves with prayer: If of that, then recreate yourſelves with ſinging God's praiſes: If of that, then recreate yourſelves in reading God's word and other good books: If of that, then recreate yourſelves with meditations: If you weary of that, then recreate yourſelves with Chriſtian conference, repeating the ſermons, inſtructing your families, &c. If you weary of public duties, then go to private; if of theſe, go to ſecret duties. Is there not here a delightful variety of pleaſant ſpiritual employments, ſufficient to recreate ourſelves with for one day, without needing the help of any ſenſual diverſion, to put off the precious time of this bleſſed day? How think you to ſpend a whole eternity in ſpiritual exerciſes, when you weary ſo much of one day? Whatever carnal men think, I am ſure a godly ſoul will be far from counting this work a burden: Hearing and reading the ſcriptures is a far leſs burden to him, than recreations and paſtimes would be; for God's 'teſtimonies are his delight, and 'he rejoices in them more than in all riches,' Pſal. cxix. Yea, nothing in the world is ſuch a burden to him on the Sabbath, as his ill heart, his little delight in the Sabbath, and ſhortcomings in the duties thereof; and nothing ſuch a pleaſure and recreation to him, as when he can win above theſe, and get his heart lifted up in the ways of the Lord,

I am ſure, it is no unpleaſant work that God calls us to on the Sabbath; who, but a wicked man, will count it a weariſome thing to think on Chriſt, and his dying love? to hear the ſweet meſſages of free grace, and rejoice in the foreſights and foretaſtes of his everlaſting love. You know the black character of theſe who of old called Sabbath-work a burden, and ſaid, When will the Sabbath be gone? Amos viii 5. This temper ſtands in oppoſition to goſpel-holineſs: Therefore I think, J. S. and every goſpel miniſter ſhould be ſo far from indulging it, by giving way to carnal recreations and diverſions, that he ſhould do what lie in his power to reprove, diſcourage and remeid it. And if miniſters would be at pains to preach and pray with life and awakening ſeriouſneſs, and afford their people a pleaſant variety of wholeſome diſcourſe concerning Chriſt and eternity, it would be a far better way to cure their weearineſs, than to preſcribe carnal recreations on the Lord's day: For this is a cure that both ſtrengthens the diſeaſe, and is as bad as the diſeaſe.

Object. VIII. 'But walking in the fields on the 'Lord's day ſeems to be a harmleſs practice; why will 'you not allow of that?'

Anſ. Whenever the works of piety, neceſſity or mercy do require it, it is allowable; but to do it idly, for putting off the time or for worldly employments or recreations, is what the word of God condemns. It is not only lawful, but dutiful to walk abroad, if it be for attending public ordinances, viſiting the ſick or other Sabbath duties; for then it is not for finding our own pleaſure, which is diſallowed by Iſa. lviii. 13. Exod. xvi 29. And, by the ſame rule, I cannot condemn tender perſons walking abroad, or taking the air, if their health truly require it; for the Lord loves mercy rather than ſacrifice. Nor do I condemn a perſon's going to fields this day, to have opportunity (like Iſaac) in the evening for ſecret meditation and prayer, when he wants conveniency for it within doors; for a walk thus improved, may be a walk to heaven, and is very conſiſtent with walking with God. Only take theſe two cautions;

2dly, Let your walking abroad, in any of the foreſaid caſes, be ſo ordered, that it may not give ſcandal, nor inſnare others: Study to do it ſo privately, that others may not be hardened or encouraged in their looſe recreations on this day by your example: For even theſe things which are lawful, and otherwiſe neceſſary in themſelves, are not to be done when they may prove a ſcandal or temptation to others to ſin; for, in ſuch caſes, we ought to deny ourſelves of our lawful liberty.

Object. "We find two of Chriſt's diſciples travelling "to Emmaus and back again, on the Lord's day; and "Chriſt met with them, and did not reprove them for "it," Luke xxiv.

Anſ. This was the firſt Lord's day of all, and was not then fully inſtitute, or, at leaſt, made known to the diſciples; for they were not aſſured of Chriſt's reſurrection. Again, walking abroad this day, for promoting the works of piety, for declaring God's glory, or preaching the goſpel, is not unlawful: And ſuch was this walking of our Saviour, and his two diſciples, their return to Jeruſalem this day.

Now, having fully handled this point, of the negative ſanctification of the Sabbath, or the holy reſt requiſite upon it; I proceed to treat of the poſitive ſanctification of the day, and of the holy exerciſes required therein.

Concerning the poſitive ſanctification of the Sabbath, and the holy exerciſes requiſite upon it.

THE reſt of the Sabbath is not a lazy idle reſt: No; it is a holy active ſort of reſt that is required upon it. Tho' we ceaſe from works of one kind, yet we muſt be diligent in works of another kind.

What I have to ſay on this head may be ſummed up in the following directions.

1ſt, Concerning the diſpoſition and frame of the ſoul, needful for ſanctifying the Sabbath.

2dly, Concerning the holy duties requiſite upon the Sabbath.

3dly, Concerning the ſpecial order, method and manner, wherein theſe duties are to be performed.

4thly, Concerning theſe particular ſins, whereby the ſanctification of the Sabbath is hindered, or the Sabbath profaned.

DIRECTION I.

Concerning the frame of ſpirit fit for ſanctifying the Lord's day.

THE moſt ſuitable frame and diſpoſition of ſoul, which I can recommend for ſanctifying the Sabbath day, is that of John the divine, Rev. i. 10. I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day. It is a moſt comprehenſive expreſſion, and a noble pattern for our imitation; wherefore I ſhall enquire into the meaning and import of it. It is probable it may imply ſomething extraordinary with reſpect to John; he might be in ſome ſingular ſpiritual extaſy or tranſport, which ordinary Chriſtians cannot attain to: Nevertheleſs, the expreſſion imports ſomething attainable, and which ought to be endeavoured by all true Chriſtians on the Lord's day.

To be in the Spirit, may be taken either as reſpecting the Spirit of God, or our own ſpirits, or both: For certainly both the Spirit of God, and our own ſpirits, are neceſſary, and to be much employed, in the ſanctification of the Lord's day: Wherefore taking the expreſſion as including both, I conceive, to be in the Spirit of the Lord's day, imports theſe things;

1ſt, A ſpecial dependence upon God's Spirit, for conduct and aſſiſtance, in order to the right performance of the duties of the Sabbath, and exerciſe of the graces therein: For, without the Spirit's aid, we can neither pray, praiſe, hear, read, or do any thing aright.

2dly, The ſerving of God with our ſpirits, as Rom. i. 9. or worſhipping him in ſpirit, John iv. 24. and performing the duties of the Sabbath with inward ſincerity of heart. The Lord deſires truth in the inward parts. He ſaith, My ſon, give me thy heart; not, Give me thy ear, thy tongue, thy lips, thy hands, or thy knees; for theſe may be given without the heart: But the heart can never be beſtowed, without theſe as its attendants. This is ſo neceſſary in all our duties, and approaches to God, that God ſaith of it, as Joſeph did of Benjamin, Unleſs ye bring your hearts along with you, ye ſhall not ſee my face. You may obſerve Sabbaths, hear ſermons, ſing pſalms, put up prayers, &c. but all will be to no purpoſe, Iſa. i. 11. God would rather have the heart without the body, than the body without the heart. Soul prayer, when it is alone, is accepted; but wo to bodily prayer, if it be alone.

3dly, A ſolemn retiring ourſelves from the world, and abſtracting our thoughts from earthly things, that we may be fitted for more immediate approaches to God, and intimate converſe with him on his own day, wherein he uſes to deal more familiarly with his people than at other times.

4thly, A laying ourſelves open to the influences and operations of the Spirit of God, waiting for and thankfully entertaining his motions, convictions, reproofs and conſolations, when they are allowed to us in the ordinances; and carefully guarding againſt every thing that may in the leaſt grieve or offend the holy Spirit.

5thly, A more than ordinary intenſeneſs of heart and affections in the duties of God's worſhip; on Sabbath days, eſpecially, we ſhould be fervent in ſpirit, ſerving the Lord; we ſhould call in all our ſtraying thoughts and affections praying with the pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxxvi. 11. Unite my heart to fear thy name; and Pſ. lxxx. 18. Quicken us and we ſhall call upon thy name. This day we ſhould put forth our ſpiritual ſtrength to the utmoſt, perform every duty, and exert every grace, with the greateſt intenſeneſs; we ought to love God with the moſt ſublime affections, obey him with the pureſt intentions, pray to him with the moſt fervent importunity, and praiſe him with the moſt ſpiritual elevation of heart: Nay, do it in ſome ſuitable proportion to the greatneſs of that God, with whom we have to do in ſo ſolemn a manner on the Lord's day; for, Pſal. cl. 2. we muſt not only praiſe him for his mighty acts, but praiſe him according to his excellent greatneſs; we muſt worſhip him like himſelf.

6thly, A willing and chearful performance of Sabbath duties; we ought to call the Sabbath a delight, holy and honourable, and go this day with joy to draw water out of the wells of ſalvation, and be joyful in the houſe of prayer. Holy David was not ſatisfied this day with a bare approach to the altar, but he muſt go to God as his exceeding joy, Pſal. xliii. 4. And ought not believers under the goſpel more eſpecially to do this on the Lord's day, who have God in human nature to go to, and have the glorious atchievements of condeſcending and redeeming love to commemorate this day?

The Lord requires us to perform the duties of this day with a frame of mind ſuitable to the ſpirit, freedom and liberty of the goſpel, guarding againſt the ſervile frame of ſpirit which the Jews had in the obſervance of the duties of the law: For we are not come unto the mount that burned with fire, and was terrible to behold; but unto mount Zion, the city of the living God. In the ſervice of this day, we ought to keep up impreſſions of God, as moſt acceſſible, familiar to us, and dwelling in our own nature, and as one that doth not ſo much regard our outward performances, as the inward frame and ſincerity of our hearts. The Phariſees pretended to great ſtrictneſs about the outward obſervance of the Sabbath: (and hence they preſumed frequently to cenſure Chriſt and his diſciples practices on this day) but they were ſtrangers to inward ſincerity, and love to God. It is the willing mind and honeſt heart, in Sabbath performances, that God chiefly regards, not a phariſaical ſtrictneſs.

7thly, Being in the Spirit on the Lord's day implies, the having of the graces of the Spirit in a more lively exerciſe this day than ordinary: And therefore we ought this day ſolemnly to invite the north and ſouth winds of the Spirit to come and blow upon our garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out; and that, particularly in all our approaches to God, we may be poſſeſt with a holy awe and reverence of God's majeſty and greatneſs and a deep ſenſe of our own baſeneſs and naughtineſs, and have our faith acting vigorouſly upon God's goodneſs and mercy in and thro' Chriſt, our hearts melting with evangelical contrition and repentance, our love and ſpiritual deſires flaming forth in all our acts of devotion; nay, all our graces and affections ſhould be this day elevated, more than ordinary to God's ſpecial honour and glory.

8thly, A more than ordinary ſpiritual and heavenly frame of ſoul, ſuited to the work of this day. Since this day is wholly dedicate to God, and ſpiritual duties are the only work of it, our frame upon it ſhould be more heavenly and divine, than upon any other day, or when going about the duties of God's worſhip at any other time; we ſhould this day be much viewing and admiring, with thankfulneſs, the dying love of Chriſt, and the glorious work of redemption compleated this day by his reſurrection. We ſhould be living this day above the world, and within view of heaven, making this day a little emblem and prelude of the everlaſting reſt of the ſaints above.

9thly, It imports, that there is ſomething of an univerſal ſanctity and holineſs peculiarly requiſite upon this day. Now, this ſanctity muſt be univerſal, with reſpect to ourſelves, with reſpect to the day, and with reſpect to the duties of it.

1. With reſpect to ourſelves; all our thoughts, words and actions this day ſhould be God's in a ſpecial manner; all that we are, all that we have, all we can do, ſhould be wholly devoted to God's worſhip and ſervice on this day, Iſa. lviii. 13. God would not only have our hands tied from working, but alſo our tongues from talking, and our minds from thinking on worldly things this day.

2. With reſpect to the day; we ſhould ſpend the whole of it in holy duties, either public, private, or ſecret. It is not for an hour or two only that we muſt ſtudy to be ſpecially holy, but through the whole day; we ſhould count every moment of Sabbath time precious, and ſuffer none of it to be loſt that we can ſave, ſtill aiming to be doing ſomething for God and our own ſouls.

3. With reſpect to the duties of the day; we ſhould eſteem them all, and make conſcience of them all, ſince they all have a divine ſtamp upon them; reading, hearing, prayer, praiſes, communicating, meditating, conferring, catechiſing, giving alms, &c. God is to be found in every one of theſe duties, and therefore none of them is to be neglected; And, when we find him not in one of them, we muſt ſeek him in another; and, if we conſcientiouſly go the round of duties we ſhall ſurely find him whom our ſouls love, Cant. iii. 4.

Laſtly, This expreſſion of being in the Spirit on the Lord's day, imports the performing the duties of it with pure and ſpiritual ends, viz. to glorify God, and enjoy him. God is the ſole object of our worſhip, and he muſt be the principal end of it too. In our worſhip we muſt ſeek him,. Heb. xi. 6. not ourſelves. It is natural for man to worſhip God for ſelf ends; we often perform duties, not only to be ſeen and eſteemed of men, but alſo to be ſeen and valued by God for them, Iſa. lviii. 3. Wherefore have we faſted, ſay they, and thou ſeeſt not? &c. They did not perform duties to glorify God, but to obtain a reward for themſelves, and have a righteouſneſs of their own to found and plead upon. Let us ſtudy to be denied to our own duties, and guard againſt a ſelfiſh and legal ſpirit in our Sabbath days perfomances. This will be a dead fly to ſpoil the ointment, and will keep our beſt duties from being ſavoury to God. Let us ſtudy then to perform them all in newneſs of ſpirit and not in the oldneſs of the letter, Rom. vii. 6. Let us uſe them all as means for bringing God and our ſouls together, as means for obtaining communion and fellowſhip with God, and holding ſpecial intercourſe with him, which is the only way to fit us for glorifying God both here and hereafter.

DIRECTION II.

Concerning the holy duties requiſite upon the Lord's day.

THE duties neceſſary upon this day are either public, private, or ſecret.

I ſhall not meddle with the duties of public perſons as ſuch on the Sabbath, or what is ſpecially incumbent upon magiſtrates or miniſters upon this day, in their public ſtations, but ſhall inſiſt only upon theſe duties required of all Chriſtians in common.

Queſt. I. What are theſe public duties required of us upon the Lord's day?

Anſ. They are theſe which we are bound to perform in the public aſſemblies of God's people: and indeed the Sabbath is inſtitute chiefly for the ſolemn performance of the duties of God's worſhip, in the public meetings of his people: for the Lord hath a ſpecial delight therein; "he loves the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob; and wherever two or three are gathered in his name, he will be in the midſt of them." Why? It is in the aſſemblies of God's people for public worſhip, that God receiveth the higheſt praiſes from us; and hence the Pſalmiſt ſaith, "I will give thee thanks in the great congregation: I will praiſe thee among much people.—And in his temple doth every one ſpeak of his glory," Pſal. xxxv. 18. Pſal. xxix. 9. And as in public worſhip God receiveth the higheſt praiſes, ſo there it is he beſtoweth the richeſt mercies, Pſal. lxv. 4. "Bleſſed is the man whom thou chuſeſt, and cauſeſt to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts; we ſhall be ſatisfied with the goodneſs of thy houſe," &c. O what good things are contained in that word, the "goodneſs of thy houſe!" there is pardon, peace, love, grace, life, light, ſtrength, comfort, &c. Now, the public duties of the Sabbath, recorded in ſcripture, which God's people ought to meet and aſſemble that day for, are various; and particularly, they are to meet together for reading and expounding the word of God; for preaching, hearing, praying, praiſing, partaking of the ſacraments, collecting for the poor, &c. for all which we may ſee Lev. xxiii. 3. Pſal. xcii. Iſa. lxvi. 23. Luke iv. 16. Acts xiii. 14, 15, 27, 44. xv. 21. xvi. 13. xx. 7. 1 Cor. xvi. 12. But particularly,

I. Hearing the word publicly read and preached with reverence and attention, is a principal duty on the Sabbath; nay, our life depends upon it, Deut. xxxii. 46, 47. It is the great mean God hath appointed for the converſion of ſouls, Rom. x. 14, 17. Whatever men think of it, it is the powerful inſtrument of our ſalvation, Rom. i. 16. The waters of the ſanctuary run only through the channels of the word; the mines of grace are found only, in theſe climates where the goſpel-ſun ſhines. The Lord if he pleaſed, could immediately, by his Spirit, break open ſinners hearts; but he hath determined to honour his word in this work, as is plain in Lydia's caſe, Acts xvi. 9, 10, 14. Reading the word and ſermons at home is good; but hearing the word preached is the ordinary mean God hath appointed and promiſed to bleſs for converſion: And if this be ſlighted, or prove ineffectual, no other way can be contrived for it, as we are told, Luke xvi. 29, 31. So that tho' a glorified ſaint or angel ſhould come down from heaven, and preach upon the beauty of Chriſt, and glory of heaven, in the moſt lively and demonſtrative manner; yet, if a preached goſpel do not perſuade ſinners, neither would that. Or, tho' a damned ſoul ſhould come up from hell, and preach the evil of ſin, and torments of hell, in the moſt pathetic manner; yet neither would that perſuade, if the word do it not. Why, the one is God's inſtituted mean, the other not. Let us then have an high eſteem of God's ordinance, and embrace all occaſions for attending it. Be ſwift to hear, Jam. i. 19. Let none dare to count that mean weak, or deſpicable, which the wiſe God hath inſtituted to ſave ſouls, 1 Cor. i. 21. It pleaſed God, by the fooliſhneſs of preaching, to ſave them that believe. And how comes believing but by hearing? Reading good ſermons (as one ſays) is like milk cold out of the diſh, but preaching is like milk warm from the breaſt, which is far more nouriſhing to the child. Let us always then as new born babes deſire this milk, that we may both live and grow thereby, 1 Pet. ii. 2.

II. Another of the public duties of the Sabbath is public prayers with the congregation.

Prayer is a principal part of God's worſhip, and therefore is frequently put for the whole, Zech. viii. 21. 22. Acts xvi. 23. Hence God's temple of old was called the houſe of prayer. Public prayer is moſt neceſſary for averting judgments, obtaining bleſſings, and preſerving love and unity among Chriſtians; alſo it is a ſolemn owning the God whom we ſerve in the face of the world, and ſo highly glorifies God. The bountiful Lord is well pleaſed to ſee many beggars thronging at the beautiful gate of his temple waiting for an alms from his hand. And their joint prayers are moſt prevalent with him, far more than private prayers: for a petition preſented by a ſingle ſubject, is not ſo prevalent as that which is made by a whole city. Peter is caſt in priſon to be executed, Acts xii. but the church meets and prays him out of his enemies hands. The united prayers of the church are moſt powerful to procure God's bleſſing and preſence; therefore, reader, ſee that you make conſcience in joining therewith, and be not abſent from them. It is a moſt graceleſs practice in ſome, they either come not into the church till the public prayers be over, or they go out after ſermon before public prayers be made. I am ſure, ſuch can expect nothing by the ſermon but a curſe, ſince they join not with the prayers for a bleſſing upon it to themſelves or others.

III. Duty is the ſinging of pſalms, and praiſing God with the congregation. Praiſing God by ſinging is often injoined in ſcripture; yea, no leſs than four times in one verſe, Pſal. xlvii. 6. It is comely for the people of God; they are called ſinging birds Cant. ii. 10. they are ſuch as ſhould ſing all the months of the year; yea, even in the dead month of affliction: So did Paul and Silas in a priſon at midnight, when their backs were ſore with ſcourges, and their feet faſt in the ſtocks, Acts xvi. 25. But in a ſpecial manner ſinging praiſes to God is our duty in public aſſemblies, Pſal cxlix. 1. Luke xxiv. 53. And in theſe, both princes and people, young men and maidens, old men and children, are bound to act a part in this heavenly concert, Pſal. cxlviii. 11 12. 13. And, above all days, the Sabbath is moſt proper for this duty, Pſal. xcii. title, Pſal cxviii. 24. It is a day of thankſgiving and holy joy: We have God's praiſes to celebrate for the wonders of creation and redemption, we have the glorious victories of the Captain of our ſalvation to extol and magnify; and therefore the duty of ſinging praiſe this day is highly neceſſary. By this duty we not only glorify God, but we edify one another, Col. iii. 16 The melody and conjunction of many ſerious ſouls tend to raiſe and elevate the heart. Yea, it was one mean of Auguſtine's converſion; he ſays, 'He wept when he heard the pſalms ſung by the church.'

Singing is a reading with meditation, and gives free vent to the thoughts and affections, and helps to excite and actuate the graces; it is the breath or flame of love or joy; it is the eternal work of heaven, the muſic of ſaints and angels there, Rev. v. 9. 10. 11. xv. 3. And what are church-aſſemblies here, but the place of our apprenticeſhip and preparation for heaven? I know nothing in the world that more reſembles heaven, than a company of God's people harmoniouſly ſinging his praiſes with grace in their hearts, making melody to the Lord; for then the ſoul rejoiceth in divine goodneſs, meditates on divine promiſes, extols divine excellencies, and mounts up to God in acts of faith and love. Let us then make conſcience of this heavenly duty in the public aſſemblies, and perform it with heart and tongue; for were it not a rare exerciſe, God would not honour it to be the only work of heaven, to the excluſion of prayer, repentance, reading hearing, communicating, &c.

IV. Partaking of the ſacraments is another public duty of the Sabbath.

1ſt, The firſt day of the week our Chriſtian Sabbath, is the proper day of celebrating the memorial of redeeming love in the Lord's ſupper, Acts xx. 7. This was the ordinary practice of the primitive Chriſtians in ancient times: and, becauſe of their conſtant breaking of bread on this firſt day of the week, it wont to be called dies panis, Auguſt. Epiſt 118. So fired were the hearts of Chriſtians in thoſe early times with love to and zeal for their glorious Redeemer, who had ſo lately poured out his blood for their redemption, that when they aſſembled together upon the firſt day of the week, the day he had inſtituted for his honour, they could not think of parting, until, by the breaking of bread according to his example, they had celebrated the memorial of his dying love, his atoning blood, his victorious reſurrection and triumphant return; which alſo they deſigned as a pledge of their mutual love to and communion with one another. And tho' theſe firſt Chriſtians were animated with more life and love, and were habitually in a better frame for partaking of this love-feaſt, than, alas, we now are; yet we muſt own, that we are under the ſame obligations of love and gratitude to our dying Redeemer, and have the ſame need of the frequent application of his blood, and of a confirmed intereſt in his death, that they had; and conſequently ought to dedicate many more Lord's days to the celebration of this memorial feaſt of his ſupper, than now we do: Eſpecially ſeeing the partaking of this ordinance is the proper work of the Lord's day, and one ſpecial deſign of the inſtitution of this holy day.

2dly, Baptiſm is moſt proper on this day: The day is holy, and the ſacrament is holy. Children ſhould be brought to the congregation and baptized in face thereof; for, ſince baptiſm is the door to Chriſt's houſe, it is fit to be entered when the family is conveened, or the church aſſembled, that ſo the receiving of new members thereinto may be homologate by them; that the parents engagements may have the more witneſſes to them, and the children have more prayers put up for them; and alſo, that the whole congregation may be edified by this ſolemn ordinance, and excited to remember and improve their own baptiſms. Of which afterward.

As to the feaſting part of this ſolemnity, I do not think it proper on the Lord's day: This may well be delayed till the day after.

V. Making public collections for the poor, is a proper duty on this day, 1 Cor. xvi. 1, 2. This day being inſtitute to keep up the memorial of Chriſt's infinite charity to mankind, and for our meeting to receive new bleſſings and mercies from him, we are, in gratitude, bound on this occaſion to be liberal to his poor: This doth not wrong but promote our Sabbath-day's frame. Let no Chriſtian then neglect this duty, which is ſo plainly commanded by Chriſt, and has been practiſed by the Chriſtian church for near theſe two thouſand years.

Think it not enough that you give ſomething privately to the poor this day, and that this may excuſe you from any public contribution: For this would be a ſlighting of an expreſs command, and making one duty to juſtle out another; and beſides, would tend to fruſtrate Chriſt's inſtitution of deacons and church-rulers, who are appointed to receive and diſtribute the collections for the poor, according to their various neceſſities. When the apoſtle joins the Corinthians to lay by them in ſtore on the firſt day of the week, that there might be no gatherings when he came; it is plain, he chiefly means their depoſiting their charitable contributions with the church-rulers: For, if it were not ſo, there would ſtill be need of gatherings when he came.

I grant indeed, it were very proper for every man, beſides the public charity he gives on the Lord's day, likewiſe to ſet apart ſomething this day, and lay it by him in ſtore, according to his gains and incomes through the week, as a ſtock or fund, out of which he might give to pious and charitable uſes, as occaſion ſhould require; and ſo, the ſtock being prepared before-hand, you will give the more bountifully and more willingly to ſuch uſes, than otherwiſe you will find in your hearts to do. If not only rich men, but even tradeſmen, labourers and ſervants, would thus lay up every Lord's day ſome very ſmall thing by them, they might, without any ſenſible damage to themſelves, have ſomewhat to give to proper and needy objects: And I am perſuaded this would not be the way to impair, but to increaſe your means.

Queſt. II. What are the private duties required of us upon the Lord's day.

Anſ. It is not enough that we ſpend ſome part of the Lord's day in public worſhip; but ſince (as I proved before) the whole day is conſecrated to God, the reſt of it is alſo to be kept holy, and taken up in holy duties, in private and ſecret.

Domeſtic and private duties are neceſſary on this day, both for preparing us for the public ordinances, and for improving and reaping advantage by them.

Theſe duties are, family worſhip, by reading the word, ſinging the praiſes, and calling upon the name of God, family catechiſing, repetition of ſermons, chriſtian conference, &c.

I. Family worſhip is a duty incumbent on maſters of families every day, but more eſpecially upon the Lord's day. It is to be regreted, that there ſhould be any need to adduce arguments to prove this: But ſince there are ſome who call themſelves miniſters, who either deny it, or elſe have not ſo much conſcience or courage directly to aſſert it in their preachings or writings; (they neither preſs the performance of this duty, nor reprove the neglect of it in others; and, as it is generally ſaid, they do not practiſe it themſelves; whereby many are encouraged to ſlight family worſhip, and think it no neceſſary duty, to the great hinderance of the advancement of piety) I ſhall therefore prove it to be the duty of all maſters of families, eſpecially on the Lord's day; and that, in the firſt place, from the fourth commandment.

The fourth commandment is principally directed to maſters of families; becauſe families, as ſuch, are chiefly to be concerned in the keeping of it, both negatively, and poſitively. For as the command injoins every maſter of a family, with all that are within his gates, his ſon, his daughter, his man ſervant, &c. to forbear all manner of work on the Sabbath; ſo it likewiſe injoins them to remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy. Now, to keep the Sabbath holy to the Lord, without all doubt, implies the woſhipping of God: This cannot be underſtood only of worſhipping of God in the public aſſemblies, for theſe cannot be always had; yet ſtill the command for ſanctifying the Sabbath is binding on families. Again, the public worſhip takes up only a part of the Sabbath; but families are bound to ſanctify the day throughout. This cannot be duly done by the members of the family worſhipping God apart in ſecret; for families, as ſuch, are bound to do it: The command binds a maſter to do it jointly with his family, as well as it binds a miniſter to do it jointly with his congregation. Moreover, if the command did only bind a maſter of a family to worſhip God in public, and in ſecret, upon the Sabbath, then he would be no further concerned in ſanctifying the Sabbath than any other member of his family; alſo, he would ſanctify the Sabbath as much in communion with the members of other families as thoſe of his own, which were moſt abſurd. But it is plain, that the command lays it eſpecially on the maſter of the family to take care of the ſanctifying of the Sabbath in his family; which muſt be by worſhipping God, as well as by reſting from labour; otherwiſe he would do no more than is required of the beaſts: And this he can never account for, unleſs he do it in communion with his family, go before them in it, and by his example, direct and encourage them in the holy worſhip and ſervice of God upon his holy day. We have Joſhua's practice ſufficiently explaining this precept, Joſhua xxiv. 15. He ſaith not, My houſe ſhall ſerve the Lord; but I and my houſe will do it; i. e. We will jointly worſhip God, and ſanctify his Sabbath, which are the principal parts of his ſervice. This he would do, and we ought all to do, tho' there were no public worſhip in the world. And this is confirmed by Lev. xxiii. 3. which requires the Sabbath to be religiouſly obſerved in all our dwellings or private houſes, as well as in holy convocations; by every family apart, as well as by many families together.

But I ſhall demonſtrate the indiſpenſible neceſſity of this duty of family worſhip, from ſeveral other topicks.

I. The light of nature and ſound reaſon pleads for it on many accounts. 1. It teacheth that all ſocieties ſhould jointly honour thair founders. Now God is the Author and Founder of families, Pſal lxviii. 6. God ſetteth the ſolitary in families; and ought not families to worſhip him who inſtituted them, and that for this very end that they might glorify him, and ſhew forth his praiſe?

2. The light of nature teacheth maſters of families to uſe all proper means for preventing the hurt of the family, and reſcuing them from danger: And it is plain, that family prayer is a ſpecial mean for this effect. The light of nature taught the heathen mariner, with his ſhip's crew, Jonah i. 4. to uſe joint prayers to ſave them in a ſtorm: And we ſee it was the maſter of the ſhip that called them to this duty. Now, ſhall a heathen maſter of a ſhip do more in his ſociety, by nature's light, than a Chriſtian maſter of a family will do in his, who is privileged with the clear light of the goſpel?

3. The light of nature teacheth men to do all they can to promote the good of their families, to provide food and phyſic for their ſervants and childrens bodies? And doth it not teach them alſo to uſe means, to preſerve their ſouls from wrath, and further their eternal well being? And what mean more proper for this end, than family worſhip and conjunct prayer? O maſters of families, your examples herein will have happy influence upon your children and ſervants, both to excite them to pray, and teach them how to pray.

4. Nature's light directed the heathens to have their Lares and Penates, or houſhold gods, whom they worſhipped in a ſpecial manner, and to whom they offered ſacrifices for the protection and welfare of their families: So we find in ſcripture, that Laban and Micah had their Teraphim or houſhold gods. Now, tho' theſe were vain helpleſs gods, yet it ſhews they belived a neceſſity of family worſhip. Alas! heathens will riſe up in judgment againſt many who are called Chriſtians.

II. We are commanded in ſcripture to pray everywhere, and with all manner of prayer, 1 Tim. ii. 8. Eph. vi. 18. Now, if we muſt pray in all places, then ſurely in our families: if with all manner of prayer, then ſurely with family-prayer.

III. Maſters of families are bound to love God with all their hearts, and their neighbours as themſelves; and conſequently are bound to bring their families along with them to the worſhip of God. God's people are filled with ſuch love and zeal, that they frequently call the inanimate creatures to join with them in God's praiſe, Pſal. lxix. 34. Pſal. cxlviii. 2. &c. and how much more ſhould they call their neighbours and fellow-chriſtians? How oft doth David invite and exhort others to praiſe God with him? And will not maſters of families, who love God and their neighbour, invite and exhort thoſe to whom they are ſo nearly related, to join with them in the praiſe and worſhip of God.

IV. Families have many joint errands to the throne of grace, which call for joint family prayers and praiſes: They often ſin together, and therefore it is fit they confeſs and mourn together. They need many family-bleſſings, and it is fit they jointly ſeek them: They are expoſed to many family dangers, therefore they ſhould jointly deprecate them: They receive many family mercies, which call for family-thankſgivings: They work in their employments and labour together, and it is very fit they ſeek a bleſſing on them together.

V. All churches ought to worſhip God in a joint and ſolemn manner: Now, the Spirit of God frequently calls Chriſtian families churches, which honourable title they would by no means deſerve, if they had not communion together in the worſhip of God.

VI. It is plain from 1 Tim. iii. 4, 5, 12. that as miniſters are bound to rule the church, ſo maſters of families are bound to rule their families; which is not only by inſtructing them, but going before them in God's worſhip, and being their guide and mouth in prayers and praiſes. For every head of a family is a prophet, prieſt and king, in his own houſe: He is a prophet to teach and inſtruct his houſhold; a prieſt, to interceed and pray for them; and a king, to protect and govern them; and eſpecially, to maintain God's worſhip and true religion among them.

VII. It is clear from 1 Pet. iii. 7. that huſbands and wives are bound to pray together, and conſequently the whole family: For there they are dehorted from ſtrifes and contentions, becauſe of their tendency to hinder their conjunct prayers.

VIII. The examples of the ſaints in ſcripture do invincibly prove family worſhip to be our duty. We read not only of Abraham's inſtructing his houſhold, and commanding them to worſhip God by themſelves, but alſo, whereſoever he ſojourns with his houſhold, he builds an altar, and with them he calls on the name of the Lord; as is clear from Gen. xii. Gen. xiii. Gen. xxi. 33. I took notice of Joſhua's family devotion a little before. David, Pſal. ci. ſaith, He will walk in his houſe at home with a perfect heart; and we find him coming home from the public worſhip, 2 Sam. vi. 20. to bleſs his own family, which was certainly to go about family worſhip with them, and pray for God's bleſſing on them. We find Daniel about this work three times a day, Dan. vi. 10. It was openly family-prayer which he performed; for if it had been ſecret prayer, ſtrangers would not have known ſo well of it, nor would they have found him at it, as it is ſaid they did: So great a prince would have had ſervants in his outer rooms, to have ſtopt them ere they came ſo near as to hear him at his ſecret devotion. We have our great pattern Jeſus Chriſt ſinging pſalms, and praying with his family, viz. his diſciples, Mat. xxvi. 30. Luke ix. 18. John xvii. This was Cornelius's practice, Acts x. 2. it is ſaid, He feared God with all his houſe; which implies that he worſhipped God with all his houſe, for fearing of God comprehends worſhip.

Laſtly, We find Paul, Philem. ii. 3. making mention of the church in Philemon's houſe, which was his religious praying family: And then, ver. 22. he ſpeaks of their joint prayers, through which he truſted he ſhould be given to them.

Since then the duty is ſo clear, let us be concerned and zealous to promote the worſhip of God in our families. Conſider how zealous ſome are to promote a falſe or ſuperſtitious worſhip: God bids the prophet look and wonder at their diligence, Jer. vii. 17, 18. There we ſee both fathers, children, huſbands, wives, and all are taken up about it. Where, alas! is there any family ſo earneſt for the true worſhip of God.

OBJECTIONS againſt family-worſhip anſwered.

Object. 1. "We pray in ſecret, and that is ſufficient."

Anſ. 1. This is not ſufficient, as hath been proven; one duty will not ſupply the want of another: Family prayer is our duty, as well as ſecret prayer; and you ought to go the round of duties, and ſlight no known duty, if you would proſper in any duty.

2dly, Secret prayer, O man, would be your duty, although you had no family; yea, although you had no tongue nor faculty of ſpeech. O maſter of a family, why hath God bleſſed you with a family, and with the faculty of ſpeaking, but that you might be more capable to glorify him with and before others? Hath not Chriſt, in that excellent pattern of prayer, taught you to pray conjunctly, by ſaying, Our Father which art in heaven, give us this day our daily bread? Have you any charity to your neighbours, any love or pity to the ſouls of your family, and will not take them alongſt with you to the throne of grace? Did you enjoy any communion with God in ſecret, or taſte any ſweetneſs in the duty; would you not invite them to came taſte and ſee that God is good, and partake of the ſame heavenly chear with you?

Object. 2. "We have not gifts to pray before others."

Anſ. 1*ſt*, The great hearer of prayer doth not look to gifts as we do; no, he looks to the heart Say not then, becauſe you cannot pray as a miniſter, or ſuch a gifted man, that ye will not pray at all; bring a humble and broken heart to God, and he will accept of you, tho' you had but two or three words, or broken ſentences. It is not fine words, or eloquent expreſſions, that God is delighted with; it is the ſincerity of the heart.

2dly, Uſe the one talent, trade with it, and it will increaſe; do as you can, and God will teach you to do better; I never knew any that tried it ſincerely, but God helped them. Can ye not ſay with the diſciples, Lord, teach us to pray. Yea, ſay but the Lord's prayer, if ye can ſay no more, and, if ye do it ſincerely, more ſhall be given.

3dly, Make uſe of the helps which God affords you for prayer. 1. Acquaint yourſelves with the ſcriptures, frequently read the Pſalms, and particularly the xxv. li. lxxxvi. cxix. pſalms, and others, where you will find variety of fit expreſſions and petitions to be uſed in prayer. Take with you theſe words which the Holy Ghoſt teacheth, they are the moſt acceptable words. Likeways ſtudy the Ten Commands, view the large extent and meaning of them, and duties required, and ſins forbidden in each of them, and they will furniſh you with vaſt matter of confeſſion and petition. Alſo ſtudy the Lord's prayer, and the import of the ſeveral petitions thereof, for there are many petitions wrapt up in every one of them.

2. Study well the attributes and works of God, and they will afford manifold matter, both for prayer and praiſes. View the work of creation; and more eſpecially, the work of redemption, the eternal contrivance of it, the glorious Mediator, his nature, his offices, life, death, ſufferings, and infinite love; his fulneſs, graces, offers, promiſes, and well ordered covenant; and then, I am ſure, you will not be barren of ſuitable matter, and words for prayer. "A very child (as one ſaith), "when he ſees a merchant's pack opened, where there "are variety of things which he deſireth, will learn, "without book, to ſay, O father, buy this, or give "me that." So the ſoul will not want what to ſay, that ſees the treaſures and riches of Chriſt opened.

3. Study to be acquaint with yourſelves, your hearts and lives: Conſider your ſtate and circumſtances both in ſoul and body, and the providences of God towards you. Think upon the vanity and inconſtancy of all worldly things, the frailty of man, and brevity of life; and particularly, think much on the four laſt things, death, judgment, heaven and hell, and you will have abundance of matter for prayer.

Beſides all which, there are four words ye ſhould always keep in mind when you go to prayer, which would prove a laſting fountain for ſuitable matter to you, viz. your ſins, miſeries, wants, and mercies.

1ſt, Your ſins. Have you not a great multitude to confeſs, and ſeek mercy for, ſins original and actual, of omiſſion and commiſſion, of heart and life? What indwelling corruptions, and heart-plagues have ye to lament, hardneſs, deadneſs, carnality, unbelief, backſliding, hypocriſy, &c. Look into your lives, and behold what ſins ye have committed, and what duties ye have omitted, and make particular confeſſion of them.

2dly, Your miſeries. How many have ye to complain of, and beg deliverance from in prayer? Are you not born in a loſt ſtate, a child of wrath, an heir of hell, under an unſupportable burden of unpardoned guilt, moſt lothſome and polluted in God's ſight; under the tyranny of ſatan, liable to all the miſeries of this life, cares, toils, loſſes, croſſes, ſickneſs and death; yea, expoſed to the wrath of God, the curſes of the law, the ſword of juſtice, to a ſtrict and ſevere judgment-ſeat, to unquenchable fire, and everlaſting burnings, and to baniſhment from God's favour, and preſence to all eternity?

3dly, Your wants. Are ye not poor beggarly ſinners, full of wants and neceſſities? In us dwells no good thing. Do you want the bread of life, the balm of Gilead, pardon of ſin, peace with God, deliverance from wrath, a new nature, a ſoft heart? Do you want eye ſalve, white raiment, gold tried in the fire? Do ye want faith, love, repentance, victory over luſts? &c. And have ye not matter for prayer and ſupplication? Have ye not temporal wants to lay before God? Ye can tell them to your friends, and complain to them, tho' they afford you little help; ought ye not far rather go to God with them, who is both able and willing to help? Do you want health to your bodies, bread to your families, proviſion for your children, a bleſſing on your labours? Then ſeek them from God: The ravens cry to him, and he hears them, how much more will he hear you?

4thly, Your mercies. God daily loads you with his mercies, they are new to you every morning: It is of the Lord's mercies, that your houſes are not conſumed with fire, in the night, and ye buried in the ruins thereof; that ſudden death doth not ſmite your children, ſervants, cattle or relations; that you waken in ſafety every morning, and not in everlaſting flames. Doth not the Lord ſet a hedge about you, and all that you have, and preſerve you from devils, enemies and manifold dangers; give you health and ſtrength, bleſs the work of your hands, cover a table for you, and rain manna about your tents? And have you not plenty of matter for thankſgiving? Yea, he hath contrived a way to ſave you, ſent his Son to redeem you, makes preſſing offers of his ſalvation, and waits patiently for your repentance. Now, if you think on theſe mercies, can you want words in prayer to bleſs God for them? I ſay then, remember your ſins, miſeries, wants and mercies, and ye will never be ſcarce of matter for prayer.

Object. III. "We have not confidence to pray before others."

Anſ. 1ſt, Mind what Chriſt ſaith, They that are aſhamed of him before men, he will be aſhamed of them before his Father in heaven.

2dly, Many are aſhamed to pray before others, who are not aſhamed to ſin, curſe, ſwear, drink drunk, and break the Sabbath before others.

3dly, Why ſhould you be aſhamed to pray before your own family, theſe you conſtantly converſe with, and of whom you have the command? Will you have confidence to plead this frivolous excuſe, at the day of judgment?

But, laſtly, You will not plead ſuch excuſes in things relating to the body. If your children and family were ſtarving for want of bread, ye would neither want words nor confidence to make known your caſe to a rich friend; if you were mortally ſick or wounded, you would freely tell your caſe to a phyſician; if ye were drowning, ye would call aloud for help: And now, when ye and your families are ready to periſh in your ſins, will ye not make known your caſe to God, and cry with the diſciples, Lord ſave us, or elſe we periſh? The common beggars, that go from door to door, will riſe up againſt you; they think no ſhame to cry at the rich man's door, hear them who will; they want not words enough, ye need not teach them what to ſay; their pinched bowels make them both eloquent and importunate; they weary not to ſtand and cry, tho' they be but expecting a ſmall morſel: And ſhall we, whoſe needs are far greater, whoſe expectations are far higher, want words or confidence to cry and knock at God's door, ſince he declares that our importunity is nowiſe a trouble but a pleaſure to him? Are not everlaſting life, and deliverance from hell, worth the ſeeking? Shall men do more for the welfare of their dying bodies, than we for the ſalvation of our immortal ſouls?

Object. IV. 'We have not time to ſpare for family-worſhip, our labour is ſo great, and buſineſs ſo throng.'

Anſ. 1*ſt*, Is not the worſhip and ſervice of God the greateſt buſineſs you have to do in the world? All other things are trifles in reſpect of this.

2*dly*, Better want time for ſleeping, for eating, or any thing, than want time for this, which is far more neceſſary than any thing elſe.

3*dly*, God, in his providence, may ſoon caſt greater hindrances in the way of your worldly buſineſs than this, as ye ſuppoſe, would be: He may ſend fevers among children and ſervants, that will ſtop your labour much longer than a little time ſpent daily in family-worſhip would do. When ſickneſs or death comes, they will not be put off by telling that you have no time for your labour to be ſick; no, ye muſt find time to be ſick and ly on beds, tho' it were in the throng of harveſt. And muſt ye, whether ye will or no, find time to be ſick and die; and will you find no time to pray with your families, in order to prepare you and them for ſickneſs and death? And further, it is likely, that if ye prayed more in your families, your labour would be leſs ſtopt by ſickneſs and other troubles; you ſhould have fewer croſſes and perplexities in your buſineſs; and, whatever they were, you might expect they would be ſanctified. Family prayer would be a ſweet vent and eaſe to the mind, under all family cares and anxieties.

4*thly*, Family prayer will not hinder your buſineſs, tho' in the throng of harveſt. What ſtop would it be to your work, to be every morning and evening a quarter of an hour upon your knees with your family? Nay, it would further it, and procure a bleſſing on the work of your hands. And I have obſerved, that in theſe parts of the nation where huſbandmen and tradeſmen take time for family worſhip, they are in a more flouriſhing condition in worldly things than in thoſe parts where it is neglected. Remember, that all the ſucceſs of your labour depends on the ſpecial bleſſing and providence of God, and there is no way more likely to obtain this than family prayer. If God vouchſafe not his bleſſing, your labour will be labour in vain, Pſal. cxxvii. 1. 2. How ſoon may God blaſt all the labours of prayerleſs perſons?

5*thly*, Whatever you pretend from want of time on week days to excuſe you from family-worſhip; yet there is no ſhadow for this objection upon the Sabbath day, in which you have no other buſineſs but to ſerve and worſhip God. He is graciouſly pleaſed to free you this day from your labour, that ye may apply yourſelves intirely to his worſhip without diſtraction. O ye that are ſtraitened for time thro' the week for family and ſecret prayer, be buſy on the Lord's day in the performances thereof, and be thankful to God for allowing you this day for theſe exerciſes.

In the name then of the great God who hath founded families, and is the God of all the families of Iſrael; and in the name of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, in whom only the families of the earth can be bleſſed; I beſeech and obteſt all you that are maſters of families, to honour the Creator and Redeemer of the world in your families; erect him a family altar, and dedicate your houſes to be temples for the worſhip of God. Perform this duty conſcientiouſly every day, but more eſpecially upon the Lord's day; let your family ſacrifices this day be doubled. I ſhall add ſome more motives to it.

I. This is the way to procure you all ſorts of family-bleſſings. Would you have God to build your houſes, bleſs your ſubſtance, dwell in your families, and be a guard to them night and day? Would ye have your relations comfortable, your affairs ſucceſsful and your enjoyments ſweet? Then ſet up and keep up family-worſhip, make your houſes little churches.

1*ſt*, You may expect family protection. If you, by family prayer, lodge your families 'under the ſhadow of the Almighty, you need not be afraid of terrors that fly by night or by day:' for you are under the tuition of him that keeps Iſrael, who neither ſlumbers nor ſleeps. Praying families are preſerved from many more evils and miſchiefs than they are aware of; ſometimes divine providence makes a viſible diſtinction between them and others. I have read of a little town in the canton of Bern in Switzerland, conſiſting of 90 houſes, that in the year 1584, was all deſtroyed by an earthquake, except the half of one houſe, where the maſter of it, with his family, were at the time on their knees at family prayer. This is a noble pillar for ſupporting your houſes.

2*dly*, You may expect family proviſion: your bread ſhall be given you, and your water ſhall be ſure; you ſhall dwell in the land, and verily have food. God feeds the ravens that cry to him, and will he not much more feed Chriſtian families that cry, Lord, give us this day our daily bread? O poor tradeſmen, who can hardly get your credit kept and families maintained; O poor tenants, who can ſcarcely get your farms paid and children provided for, by all your ſore toil and labour; will you try family-prayer ſincerely? I dare ſay, that the Lrod, who bleſſed the houſe of Obed-edom, and all that pertained to him, becauſe of the ark of God which he lodged, will from that day forth bleſs you, proſper the work of your hands, and make your affairs more ſucceſsful: It will not hinder your labours, but procure a bleſſing on them. I ſay then, make a fair trial, and I hope in a little time you ſhall find a ſenſible change in your affairs. Some have obſerved this in their experience.

3*dly*, You will have the more comfort and ſatisfaction in your family relations; this is the way to keep up your authority among them, and to procure you more reſpect from them. If a maſter of a family exert his authority to bring thoſe under his charge to attend family worſhip, he will find them more obſervant of his other commands; children would be more obedient, and ſervants more faithful; the fear of that God, whom they daily worſhip with you, would be an awe band upon them, to do their duty to you, and act for your intereſt.

II. Family worſhip is an excellent mean to advance religion and reformation through the whole land. If every one would begin with his own family, reform it, and plant piety therein, what happy cities and pariſhes would we ſoon have? If you would recover decaying piety in the land, and baniſh curſing, ſwearing, drukenneſs, Sabbath-breaking, &c. out of the town and pariſh where you live, then begin with your own family; ſet up prayer and religion therein. Satan and vice will not dwell contentedly beſide prayer. The way to make a clean ſtreet is, for every houſe to ſweep before their own door. Religious families are excellent nurſeries to the church, and ſeminaries of piety. Do you wiſh then to ſee religion flouriſh, and reformation carried on? and do you deſire to be inſtrumental therein? then worſhip God, promote piety in your own family: Your example might influence your neighbours about you to the like; it would excite your children and ſervants to ſecret prayer; and, when they come to get families of their own, they will readily do as you do, and ſo will their children and ſervants after them: And thus you will be inſtruments of handing down religion to the riſing generation, and for turning many unto righteouſneſs. O if God would perſuade the hearts of people, both in town and country, to ſet about family worſhip, how ſoon would religion put on another face? The ſtreets and fields would not be ſo thronged with old and young on the Sabbath, people walking and diſcourſing idly, and boys playing and ſporting themſelves; the church would be better frequented, and people more attentive and devout in time of ſermon, and public-worſhip. Family-worſhip alſo is a notable help to prepare us for public worſhip and the right obſervation of the Sabbath.

But the domeſtic ſanctification of the Sabbath, enjoined by the fourth command, includes more duties than prayer, reading the word, and ſinging of pſalms in families: And ſo I come to ſpeak of others.

Maſters of families are bound to inſtruct and teach theſe under their charge, viz. their children and ſervants, in all things neceſſary to ſalvation. Yea, they are bound, not only to inſtruct them in the knowledge of the principles, but alſo to enjoin them the performance of the duties of the Chriſtian religion, and to admoniſh and reprove them for the neglect thereof. The neceſſity of this duty may be proven by many arguments.

1ſt, From the law of nature, that binds us to do what we can to promote the welfare and happineſs of our children and families, and to help them, when in miſery and diſtreſs. Children are a part of the parents wrapt up in another ſkin; and therefore parents ſhould do for them as for themſelves. 'Tis not enough that ye provide for their bodies; for the very birds and beaſts, do this, nay even 'the ſea monſters draw out the breaſt, 'and give ſuck to their young ones?' Lam. iv. 3. but you ought to provide for their ſouls, which are their better part, yea, a thouſand times more precious than their bodies. You would think it barbarous cruelty in a parent to ſuffer his child or ſervant to ſtarve for want of bodily food; O but it is far more cruel, to ſuffer their precious ſouls to pariſh and ſtarve for want of ſpiritual food, or neceſſary inſtructions.

2dly, From the clear light of God's word, that binds this on maſters of families as a duty. We ſee, the fourth command obligeth maſters to be anſwerable for their children and ſervants, touching the ſanctification of the Sabbath, and the ſervice of God on that day; which certainly imports their inſtructing them in their duty. The Lord commits their ſouls to their care, and they muſt accont for them to him. When God gives any of you a child, he charges you, as Pharaoh's daughter did Moſes his mother, Exod. ii. 9. Take this child, and nurſe it for me; and I will give thee thy wages: Or as the prophet ſaid to the king, 1 Kings xx. 39. Keep this man; if by any means he be miſſing, thy life ſhall go for his life. If this child or this ſervant periſh in his ſins or ignorance thro' your neglect, his blood will I require at your hands. Nay, we have expreſs ſcripture precepts binding you to this duty; read Deut. vi. 6. 7. Prov. xxii. 6. Eph. vi. 4. Alſo we have the examples of the ſaints, who were careful in performing this duty. God takes ſpecial notice of it in Abraham, to his everlaſting commendation, Gen. xviii. 19. I know him, that he will command his children, and his houſhold after him; and they ſhall keep the way of the Lord, &c. It was David's practice, Pſal. xxxiv. 11. Prov. iv. 3, 4. and alſo Hezekiah's, Iſa. xxxviii. 19.

3dly, You are concerned, in common juſtice, to inſtruct your children, that ye may, ſo far as lieth in you, repair the injury done them, by your conveying original corruption to them. Has God provided a cure for them in the goſpel, and will ye not do ſo much as ſhew it to them? If you had raſhly given a wound to any of their bodies, would ye not in haſte provide a cure, or ſend for a phyſician? and will ye do nothing for their ſouls, that are dying of the wounds of ſin given them by you?

5thly, It is alſo very much for your own intereſt and comfort, to inſtruct your families in the knowledge of Chriſt, and ways of religion. Ye may expect, that your children and ſervants will prove dutiful to you. Well educated children will take care of their parents in time of old age, ſickneſs or poverty: whereas theſe, that are not ſo, often neglect their parents in the foreſaid caſes, or wiſh them dead. If you conſcientiouſly inſtruct your children and ſervants, God will reward you for it, even in this life. Abraham, as we heard, made conſcience of it; and God bleſſed him with a dutiful ſon Iſaac, and a faithful ſervant, Eliezer of Damaſcus. What an unparalleled inſtance have we of Iſaac's profound obedience to his father's commands, in ſubmitting patiently to bear the wood, yea to be bound, and laid upon the altar to be ſacrificed? And, what a wiſe and faithful ſervant was the ſteward of his houſe, Eliezer, whom he truſted with all he had, and with the great concern of his ſon's marriage, which he managed with great prudence and integrity, and prayed earneſtly for the good ſucceſs of it? So that, if ye ſow the ſeeds of piety in children and ſervants, yourſelves ſhall reap the fruit thereof, even in this world.

Again, it will be very comfortable to you on a death-bed, to leave a religious praying family behind you. What tho' you leave your wife and children poor? yet if you leave them praying, God will provide for them while here, and ye ſhall ſhortly have a joyful meeting with them in heaven. Your children here will riſe up and call you bleſſed; they will praiſe you, and follow your pious example: And as you took care to hand down religion to them, ſo will they do to their children and ſervants, when they come to get families; and, when you are bleſſing God in heaven, they will be bleſſing God for you on earth. Nay, they will meet you at a judgment-ſeat with bleſſings in their mouths: Your children will bleſs God that ever they had ſuch parents; your ſervants will bleſs him that ever they had ſuch maſters, that ever they ſaw your faces, or came under your roof. It has been known, that many, at a dying hour, have bleſſed God, for determining their lot to fall into ſuch and ſuch religious families, where firſt they became acquainted with Chriſt and religion.

A third domeſtic DUTY on the Lord's day, is godly conference.

According to Iſa. lviii. 23. we ought not this day to ſpeak our own words; and conſequently we ought to ſpeak religious words, and entertain ſpiritual diſcourſe, when we are together, concerning Chriſt and heaven; or about the ſermons we have heard, telling one another what we remember thereof, and that which did moſtly edify us.

Godly conference is well pleaſing to God; he notices and records all the good words his people do ſpeak, Mal. iii. 16. When the two diſciples going to Emmaus were about this exerciſe on the Lord's day, Chriſt is ſo well-pleaſed, that he comes to them, and makes the third man; he entertains them with heavenly diſcourſe and opens their underſtandings to know the ſcriptures. We ſee, when Elijah is ſo employed with Eliſha, 2 Kings ii. 11. he is taken up and tranſported gloriouſly into heaven. This is a heavenly exerciſe, and the employment of the glorfied in heaven: It was Chriſt's work, when he was transfigured on mount Tabor, and met with Moſes and Elias: he conferred with them upon the bleſſed ſubject of his death and ſufferings. O how holy and fruitful was Chriſt always in his diſcourſe? His lips dropt as the honey comb, and his tongue was as choice ſilver. He ſpiritualized earthly things, and turned them into heavenly inſtructions; when he conferred with the woman at the well of Samaria, concerning the water of that well, John iv. he quickly drew her from ordinary water to the water of life. And, when eating bread in the Phariſee's houſe on the Sabbath day, Luke xiv. he diſcourſed of eating bread in God's kingdom, So let all the diſciples of Chriſt, on this day, imitate his example: See that your ſpeech be ſeaſoned with grace, and your lips like thoſe of the righteous that feed many. Speak much this day to the commendation of Chriſt, and invite others to acquaintance with him; and, when you ſee it for edification, communicate the experiences you have had of his love; Come here, all ye that fear God, and I will tell what he hath done for my ſoul. Pſal. lxvi. and thus one live-coal will help to kindle another.

Upon this day of holy reſt, Chriſtians ſhould be oft thinking and ſpeaking of the everlaſting reſt above, and conferring together of the way to it, and their meeting there. Do you believe you are going to that reſt, and yet never ſpeak of it? If two or three of you had entered into an agreement to go to America, and ſeek the golden mines which are there, would ye never be ſpeaking of that country, or deſirous to hear of it before your going? O Chriſtians! are ye ſhortly to be caught up together in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and ſo to be for ever with the Lord? and will you not comfort one another with theſe words? according to 1 Theſſ. iv. 17. 18. It hath likewiſe been the practice in many places, when religion comes to be in eſteem, for young perſons to meet together in the evening of the Lord's days for godly conference upon ſpiritual ſubjects or the ſermons they have heard, and for prayer and praiſes to their mutual edification. And it is always obſerved, that ſuch religious meetings on Sabbaths or week days, are ſet up in pariſhes where the goſpel begins to thrive, juſt as naturally as birds draw together in the ſpring; young converts are Chriſt's ſinging brids. Cant. ii. 12. And the ſcripture affords good ground and warrant for ſuch meetings, Mal. iii. 16 Pſal. lxvi. 16. Pſal. cxix. 63. Jer. xxiii. 35. Acts xi. 5, 12. Heb. iii. 13. Heb. x. 24. 25.

A fourth domeſtic DUTY on the Sabbath, is a holy care in maſters of families to reſtrain all profanation of the day by children and ſervants, or any within their gates.

The fourth command expreſſly requires this. Tho' you be not magiſtrates, yet God has clothed you, who are heads of families, with power and authority in your families, to ſee to the honour of this day: Uſe it then for God, as ye will be anſwerable. Let none under your charge profane this holy day, by working, ſporting or playing; or by idleneſs or neglect of the duties of the day. See that they duly attend public ordinances and family worſhip; ſuffer them not to abſent therefrom.

O maſters of families, concur frankly with the miniſter of the pariſh, to ſuppreſs the abuſes of this day: you will ſee them, and know of them, when miniſters cannot: Teſtify againſt them in your ſtations, and this will make the miniſter's work the more eaſy. O what a ſad thing is it in many places, to ſee miniſters left to fight againſt ſin alone, without having one to join with them, or once open a mouth againſt it! Hence it is, that many are turned impudent in ſinning, particularly in Sabbath breaking, and value not a miniſter's rebuke. Alas! have ye neither love to God nor your nighbours ſouls? Have ye no concern for God's glory, nor grief to ſee him diſhonoured? Have you no charity to your near relations, no love to your own children, no concern for your ſervants or neareſt neighbours, no deſire to keep them from falling into everlaſting burnings; that you will not ſpeak one word to prevent it, or warn them of their hazard?

Let none ſay, with curſed Cain, Am I my brother's keeper? For God requires you to be doing good to all in your ſtation, and to love your neighbour as yourſelf.

And the fourth command expreſsly makes you accountable for all within your gates.

Object. 'I have ſtubborn ſervants, that will not be 'reſtrained by my admonitions or reproofs.'

Anſ. 1. You ſhould be more careful in the choice of the members of your family, and particularly of your ſervants, ſince God gives you a free choice in this matter. Conſider David's care therein, Pſal. ci. 6. 7. Mine eyes ſhall be upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me; he that walketh in a perfect way, he ſhall ſerve me. He that worketh deceit, ſhall not dwell within my houſe; he that telleth lies, ſhall not tarry in my ſight. Do ye think that he, or ſhe is fit for your ſervice, that cares not for God's ſervice? Can you expect a bleſſing on the work of their hands, who are enemies to God? A godly ſervant (tho' I confeſs he is rare enough to be found) is a greater bleſſing than many think; he not only works for his maſter with his hands, but with his prayers alſo, as did godly Eliezer, Gen. xxiv. 12. and to be ſure he did his maſter Abraham as good ſervice by his prayers as by his prudence.

But, 2. If it be your lot to be concerned with ſtubborn and diſobedient ſervants, let them know that you have authority from God, to oblige them to keep the Sabbath, by attending ordinances in public and private, and to reſtrain them from profaning this day; and, if they will not be reclaimed, to expel them from your houſe: If they neglect or miſmanage your work, would ye not uſe your power and authority with them, to cauſe them help their faults? And, were you in as good earneſt for God's ſervice on the Sabbath, as for your own upon week days, I am perſuaded ye might bring your children and ſervants to ſerve God, and keep this day far better than they do.

Queſt. III. What are the duties requiſite upon the Lord's day?

Anſ. It is not enough that we worſhip God this day in conjunction with others, whether in the congregation or in families: The right ſanctification of the Sabbath includes ſecret duties alſo, ſuch as prayer, reading, meditation, &c. That religion is not true, which is all viſible to the world; for the life of religion lies in the ſecret intercourſes which are betwixt God and the ſoul, that the eyes of men do not penetrate into. Secret duties are the beſt trial of our ſincerity; the Lord, that ſeeth in ſecret, takes ſpecial notice of them, and, if duly performed, he will openly reward them. Let us therefore make conſcience of them, and that eſpecially upon God's holy day, which is entirely ſet apart for holy duties: And labour to time duties ſo this day, as one duty may not juſtle out another. As you muſt not let family duties interfere with public duties; ſo you muſt take care that ſecret duties do not interfere with family ones. But more particularly,

1ſt, Secret prayer is a duty neceſſary on the Lord's day, both for preparing us to attend the public ordinances, and for improving and reaping benefit by them afterwards. I do not mean, that this duty is to be confined to the Sabbath only: No; it is neceſſary every day, according to David's example, Pſal. lv. 17. but that is eſpecially requiſite as a part of the worſhip of this day. Prayer is ſo neceſſary, that it is put for the whole worſhip of God, Acts ii. 21. It is the character of a converted ſoul, Behold he prays, Acts ix. 11. but it is the mark of an atheiſt, that he calls not upon God, Pſal. xiv. And, in a ſpecial manner, ſecret prayer is what every carnal man hath an averſion to. The devil can allow men their church prayers, their family prayers; but, for cloſet prayers he cannot away with, eſpecially when they are frequent and conſtant, becauſe they are too much an argument of ſincerity. A hypocrite takes no delight in ſecret prayer, nor in any duty but what is ſeen of men, and will gain him a name. But reader, if thou art ſincere, thou wilt conſider that God's eye is upon thee in private, as well as in public; and therefore wilt ſeek to approve thyſelf to God in ſecret duties, as well as public. As ſecret prayer was our Saviour's conſtant practice while on earth, ſo it was his ſpecial injunction to all his followers, Mat. vi. 6. You need not fear that your ſecret prayers will be forgotten: No; God is everywhere; he has an ear to hear your ſecret groans, and an eye to ſee your ſecret tears: Yea, he has a bottle to preſerve them, ſo as a drop of them ſhall not be loſt.

In our ſecret addreſſes, which are more ſtated and ſolemn, let us carefully remember the three parts of prayer, confeſſion, petition and thankſgiving. Let us confeſs the ſins we are guilty of, cry for the mercies we want, and thank God for theſe we enjoy. Let us mind that this is not only a commanded duty, but our dignity and privilege. What a honour is it for duſt and aſhes to be allowed acceſs to the great God; for a worm to ſpeak freely to its Creator; for a poor beggar to converſe familiarly with the King of heaven? O ſinner, would not all thy neighbours envy thee, if thou wert ſo honoured by an earthly king? Be exhorted then to value and make uſe of this liberty.

2dly, Conſider at what a dear rate Chriſt hath bought this freedom for us: How much did it coſt him to erect a throne of grace, to which we may repair with confidence? And, will not we make uſe of this privilege with thankſgiving?

3dly, Conſider the profit of it: It is like the merchant ſhip, Prov. xxxi. 14. that brings our food from afar. By it we trade with heaven, and bring down Chriſt's unſearchable riches: It is a key to open the treaſure of God's mercies to us in the morning, and to lock us up under God's protection at night. By it we prevail with God, ſcreen ourſelves from wrath, and put ſatan to flight. In a word, prayer is a key to heaven, a ſhield to the ſoul, a ſacrifice to God, and a ſcourge to the devil.

4thly, It is the way to make up and preſerve acquaintance with God, which will be of great uſe to you in the time of trouble, or at the hour of death: It is no ſmall encouragement to you to addreſs one for help, with whom you have had long acquaintance and familiarity, and of whoſe kindneſs you have had frequent experience. But prayerleſs man, it will be a moſt melancholy caſe, when you are going out of the world, to be put to cry to that God you have been an utter ſtranger to all your life; or to be forced to appear before that God you never loved, or deſired to converſe with; or to be fain to challenge acquaintance with him, who will utterly diſclaim you, and ſay, Depart from me, I never knew you. But, O praying ſoul! that haſt acquaintance with God, death will have another view to thee; thou mayſt look on it, as

Jacob did on the waggons ſent to carry him to his friend Joſeph, and ſay, "Now I am going to God, whom I know; I am going to meet with that Friend, with whom I have had a long acquaintance, to whom I have paid many a viſit, and with whom I have had ſweet ſecret converſe, and whom I have longed to ſee, and who will embrace me in his arms, and welcome me to glory."

5thly, Conſider what a mercy it is, O man, that God is yet calling thee to prayer, and continuing thee in the land of prayer, when ſo many thouſands, as deſerving, are beyond prayer, and loſt for ever. O then pray now, while thou haſt time to pray, health to pray, helps to pray, and encouragement to pray. Read the gracious promiſes of life and ſalvation to you, if you do it, Pſal. lxix. 32. Rom. x. 13. Make this world a time for prayer, and the next ſhall be a ſeaſon for praiſe. Doſt thou think to be ſaved without prayer? Doſt thou expect to have thy life without begging it at God's hands? O what oil will it add to thy flames in hell, when conſcience will tell thee, If thou hadſt prayed thou hadſt not been there? Well then, now thou haſt a ſeaſon for prayer; but, remember, it will not always laſt: If thou improve it not, expect that God will turn a deaf ear to you in the day of your calamity, at a death bed, or a tribunal. Read, and tremble at that word, Prov. i. 26, 27, 28. God ſays, He will not hear you when you cry. And, if he refuſe to hear you, then, who will hear you? Angels will not, ſaints will not, neareſt relations will not, hills and mountains will not: And, what a wretched, forlorn and forſaken creature wilt thou be? There will be none to own thee then, if thou acquaint not thyſelf with God by prayer now. See the anſwer the fooliſh virgins got, when they came after the door was ſhut. Matth. xxv. See what an anſwer the rich man got, when he begged for "a drop of cold water to cool his tongue," Luke xvi. "Seek God, then, when he may be found; call on him while he is near:" Otherwiſe your late untimely cries will not be regarded.

Object. "O, ſay ſome, we have not the gift of prayer, we cannot pray."

Anſ. I have ſaid enough in anſwer to this a little before. I ſhall only add one word; Art thou a Chriſtian, O man, and canſt not pray? Thou mayſt as well ſay, thou art a ſcholar, but canſt not read; a ſoldier but canſt not fight. Prayer is as eſſential to a true Chriſtian, as breath is to the body: Why? prayer is the very breathing of the ſoul to God. So it is called, Lam. iii. 56. O man, have you nothing to ſay in prayer? then go to God, and tell him ſo; ſit down on your knees, and ſay, Here a poor ignorant creature, that cannot pray; Lord, teach me to pray. The publican made a very ſhort prayer, Luke xviii. God be merciful to me a ſinner; yet it was accepted ſince it came from a humble heart. O! if your heart be broken, your words will be accepted, altho' they be broken and few. The ſillieſt begger will find ſomething to ſay at your door, tho' he expect but a crumb; and can you find nothing to ſay at God's door, when you have a ſoul to ſave, a hell to ſhun, and Jeſus Chriſt and a kingdom in your view?

But, beſides that ſort of ſecret prayer which is more ſtated and ſolemn, there is prayer that is more ſudden and ejaculatory, when we lift up our hearts to God with ſome ſhort petitions, on any occaſion or emergency. Ejaculatory prayers are uſeful on every day, but you ſhould have them more frequent on the Sabbath-day: For, ſince on this day you muſt not think your own thoughts, or find your own pleaſures, heavenly breathings and pious ejaculations ſhould iſſue forth continually: By ſeeking pardon for ſuch a ſin, ſtrength againſt ſuch a luſt, victory over ſuch a tentation, and grace to ſpend Sabbath time ſuitably. Are you going to the church, or returning from it? Are you reading, hearing, communicating, praiſing, or about any other duty? Be frequently making uſe of this kind of prayer, particularly begin and end every duty with it; look up before for aſſiſtance, and look up after it for acceptance, and that infirmities in it, for Chriſt's ſake, may be pardoned. Theſe prayers, of all others, are the freeſt of diſtraction, they being put up and over before ever ſatan be awakened to tempt us. As for other prayers, our preparations to them, tho' only by the alteration of our poſture, give notice to ſatan what we are about to do; but ejaculatory prayers are ſo quickly darted up to God, that they will be in heaven before ſatan can ſhoot any of his darts againſt us.——They are uſed to keep up communion with God in the intervals of other duties, and for keeping the heart in the fear of God all the day long. As the prieſts under the law were not only to offer up the morning and evening ſacrifice duly, but to keep the fire burning on the altar all the day; ſo we muſt not ſatiſfy ourſelves with ſolemn and ſtated duties only, but ſhould ſtudy to keep in the fire always by holy thoughts and ejaculations. Chriſt ſaith of the ſpouſe, that her lips drop dew as an honey comb, which is either ſtill dropping, or in a continual forwardneſs to drop. Some of God's people have more devotion this way in their ſhops, than others have in their cloſets; and while walking in the ſtreets, or working in the fields, than others have when praying on their knees: They have ſtricter communion with God this way at their common tables, than others have at a communion table.

A ſecond ſecret DUTY on the Lord's day is reading of the ſcriptures, and other good books.

This is a duty neceſſary every day, but eſpecially on the Lord's day: It is the character of the bleſſed man, that his delight is in the law of the Lord, and he meditates therein both day and night, Pſal. i. This ſhould be particularly verified of us on the Sabbath. Read the word, that you may be taught what to believe of God, what duties you owe to God, and what ſins you are guilty of againſt him. Who can ſet forth the excellency and uſefulneſs of it? It is a glaſs to diſcover our ſpots, a lamp to guide us in the dark, a fire to warm our cold affections, a magazine to ſupply us with armour againſt our ſpiritual enemies. It is a phyſic-garden, wherein grow all ſorts of medicinal herbs for our ſpiritual maladies; The promiſes are as fragrant flowers and ſpices in this garden; believers take many a pleaſant walk among theſe beds of ſpices. It is an apothecary's ſhop, out of which we may have eye-ſalve for our blindneſs, ſovereign cordials in all our ſoul-diſtreſſes. David found this to his ſweet experience, Pſal. cxix. 50. This is my comfort in my affliction, for thy word hath quickned me. Here are ſuitable cordials, for all our various caſes, be it deſertion, temptation, poverty, ſickneſs, reproach, perſecution, &c. Here are the waters of the ſanctuary for cleanſing us from our pollutions: Here is the heavenly rain, for making ſoft and tender our hard hearts. The ſcriptures are both food and phyſic to our ſouls; here is meat for ſtrong men, and milk for babes. “The two teſtaments (as Auguſtine ſaith) are “the two breaſts which we muſt ſuck for ſpiritual “nouriſhment.” And there is none of God's children that will call them dry breaſts or empty ciſterns; they have often afforded them ſtrength, nouriſhment, light, life and comfort: O how highly have God's people in all ages prized God's holy word, and the liberty of reading it! It hath been ſweet as honey to their taſte. I have read of one, who being a priſoner in a dark dungeon, when light was allowed him for a ſhort time to take his meat he would take his bible, and read a portion of it, ſaying, He could eat without light, but he could not read without it. I am perſuaded there is no better way in this world for improving the faculty of ſight, and benefit of light, than by reading the word of God. So far as time can allow you upon the Sabbath, I judge it very profitable to read other good books alſo, ſuch as our Confeſſion of Faith, Vincent's Catechiſm, Vincent on the laſt Judgment, Guthrie's trial of a ſaving intereſt in Chriſt, Allan's Alarm, Baxter's Call to the Unconverted, Pearſe's preparation for Death, Fox's Time and the end of Time, Doolittle's Call to delaying Sinners, Baxter's Saints everlaſting Reſt, his Poor Man's Family-book, Gray's Sermons, Flavel's Touch-ſtone of Sincerity, his Saint indeed, Mead's Almoſt Chriſtian, the Treatiſes of Doolittle, Campbell and Henry upon the Sacrament, Rutherfoord's Letters, the Fulfilling of the Scriptures, Clark's Martyrology, Beard's Theatre of God's Judgments. Theſe and ſuch like books, next to the holy bible, I recommend to the peruſal of all private Chriſtians, as being eaſy and plain to common capacities, and ſome of the moſt generally uſeful, inſtructing, awakening, ſoul-ſearching, and heart warming pieces that I have ſeen among human writings, and which have been bleſſed to the edification of many thouſands.

A third ſecret DUTY on the Lord's day is meditation upon divine ſubjects.

This duty is proper every day, much more on the Sabbath, which is ſequeſtrate for divine employments. It is the character of the bleſſed man, that he meditates in God's law day and night, Pſal. i. 2. It is an uſeful and neceſſary duty; it excites the affections, and quickens the graces; it ſtrengthens faith, Pſal. cxix. 92. It nouriſheth hope, and inflames our love; deep muſing makes the fire to burn. Meditation is a great help to every duty, Pſal. cxix. 59. It helps to read and hear the word aright, and to know the truths thereof practically; it helps to pray, and yields matter to the tongue, Pſal. xlv. 1. It prompts us to confeſs ſin, and mourn for it, Pſal. li. 3.

Be perſuaded then to engage your hearts to this neceſſary but much neglected duty; for, tho' it be moſt uſeful and profitable, yet I know no duty more ſlighted and forgotten. The beſt of God's people have cauſe to lament this moſt bitterly before the Lord: Who can ſay with David, Pſal. cxix. 97. O how love I thy law, it is my meditaion all the day. As for the generality of the world, they have no ſenſe of the obligation of this duty upon their ſpirits; they live without thinking, and that proves their ruin. O! if ſinners would retire from company, and ſpend ſome little time now and then in ſecret thinking, it would thro' the bleſſing of God, work ſome change in them. I remember a paſſage I have read of a dying father, that on his death bed left it as a charge upon his only ſon, who was a great prodigal, That he ſhould ſpend a quarter of an hour every day in retired thinking; and, to encourage him to undertake it, he gave him liberty to chooſe any ſubject he pleaſed. The ſon thinks this an eaſy taſk, and engages to do it; and accordingly ſets himſelf to perform his promiſe: One day he thinks on his bypaſt pleaſures, another day he contrives his future delights: After a while, he begins to reaſon with himſelf what was his father's deſign in laying this taſk upon him; at length he thinks his father was a wiſe and good man, and therefore intended and hoped that among the reſt of his meditations, he would ſome time or other think of religion. When this had truly poſſeſt his thoughts, one thought and queſtion comes upon the back of another, about his bypaſt life and future ſtate, that he could not contain himſelf in ſo ſhort a confinement as a quarter of an hour, but was that night without ſleep; yea and afterwards could have no reſt, till he became ſeriouſly religious.

O careleſs ſinner, if you think it too much to ſpend a quarter of an hour every day, I would beg it of you to ſpend a quarter of an hour every Lord's day in retired thinking upon ſome ſpiritual ſubject: Who knows what it might produce? Do you ſay that this is a hard taſk? Will it not be far harder to ly in hell a whole eternity thinking on your bypaſt folly, when there is no remedy? O ſinner, will you periſh for want of thinking?

Be not ſcared at the difficulty of it; for tho' at firſt this duty ſeem hard, and corrupt nature ſhew averſion to it, yet preſs your heart to it, and afterwards you ſhall find it pleaſant: Tho' it be difficult to climb this mount of meditation, yet, when once we get up, we will be ready to ſay with Peter on the mount of transfiguration, It is good for us to be here. David found it ſo, My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet, Pſal. civ. 34. The more we meditate on God, the ſweeter we will find him: Yea, ſo ſweet did he find this duty, that he ſpent whole days in it, Pſal. cxix. 97. and, as if the day had been too little, he borrows a part of the night too, Pſal. lxiii. 6.

Object. “Alas! ſome ſay, our minds are barren of “good thoughts.”

Anſ. 1ſt, If you would accuſtom yourſelves more to the duty, you would have leſs ground of complaint this way. 2dly, When your hearts are barren, there are two ſubjects you can never exhauſt: Fix your thoughts upon any one of them, viz. God's mercies to you, and your ſins againſt him. The Pſalmiſt acknowledges them both to be innumerable, in the ſame pſalm, Pſal. xl. 5, 12.

Queſt. What ſubjects of meditation are moſt proper for the Sabbath day?

Anſ. Natural things may be ſpiritualized, and common things may afford us ground for ſpiritual inſtructions, if we had our eyes inlightned, and minds ſpiritually exerciſed. But it is fit that on the Sabbath, we chuſe theſe ſubjects of meditation that are moſt edifying, and moſt ſuitable to the great ends of the day. In general, we ought this day to think upon God, upon ourſelves, and upon eternity. But more particularly,

I. Meditate upon the goodneſs of God: Both that which is common, and manifeſted to you in his works of creation and providence, and that which is ſpecial and diſtinguiſhing, diſcovered to you above others. That this is a ſuitable ſubject for the Sabbath, is clear to any that reads the xcii. pſalm with its title.

1ſt, Think upon his common goodneſs to us, repreſented in that great looking glaſs of the creation. He hath made the world a commodious habitation for us, arched it over with the beſpangled heavens, and floored it with the ſolid earth. He hath ſet up great lights in it for our accommodation: He hath placed a tabernacle for the ſun, at a due diſtance from the earth and the upper heavens, to enlighten the ſtars above and enliven the earth below. And, that we might neither be ſtarved with cold, nor burnt up with heat, he gives us the clouds as fans to ſcreen us from the ſcorching heat, and as ciſterns to water the parched ground: He gives us the wind to purify the air, the ſea to be a pond for fiſh, the valleys to be granaries for corn, the mountains to be a treaſure of minerals, the rivers to be as veins to carry refreſhment to every part of the earth. Let us admire both the goodneſs and wiſdom of God diſplayed in his wonderful works, Pſal. civ. 24. O Lord how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all: The earth is full of thy riches. The Pſalmiſt alſo ſaith, The heavens declare the glory of God, Pſal. xix. 1. and indeed we may look up and read it in theſe ſhining capital letters of ſun, moon, and ſtars. His being is legible in their exiſtence; his wiſdom in their frame; his power in their motion; his goodneſs in their uſefulneſs, and his faithfulneſs in their continuance. The book of nature, as well as the ſcriptures, ſhews much of God to us. " This book " (as one ſaith) conſiſts of three leaves, heaven, earth, " and ſea; the creatures therein are ſo many letters " whereby we may ſpell out the attributes of God: " Some whereof are capital letters, and more legible " than others. Man is a capital letter on earth, the " ſun in the heavens, and the whale in the ſea."

Again, we ought to meditate upon his goodneſs manifeſted in his works of providence. He hath curiouſly formed us in the womb, and carefully watched over us therein. He preſerved us ſeveral months in that dark cell, without air or breath. He brought us ſafe out of it, and preſently thereafter provided two bottles to ſuſtain us, and ever ſince hath ſuccoured us in diſtreſs, reſcued us from danger, ſupplied us in wants; yea, he hath fed us at his own table, and made us live upon his coſt, Acts xvii. 28. He hath given us all the creatures for our uſe and ſervice, yea, the moſt glorious of them; the angels are our miniſtering ſpirits, the lower heavens ſerve to give us breath, the middle heavens to give us light and heat, and the higheſt heavens afford us a dwelling place. The ſun ſhines, the fire burns, the wind blows, and the water flows; nay, all the creatures are at work, both day and night, and all for the ſervice of a poor worm of ſix foot long.

If a friend give us our bread for a month or two, we think ourſelves much bound to him; but how much more beholden are we to God, who keeps an open free table for us all the days of the year, and all the years of our life, and even to us when enemies to him? Behold, theſe who have their mouths opened wide againſt God, he mercifully puts bread in their mouths. How great is God's goodneſs to us! and, how great is our ingratitude to him! I know not which of them we ſhould moſt wonder at. God gives us peace, money, health and wealth; but, inſtead of ſerving him therewith, many offer them up in a ſacrifice to the devil and baſe luſts, according to Hoſ. ii. 8. God gives ſome folk ſtrength, and they waſte it among harlots; to others money, and they waſte it in drunkenneſs and prodigality; to others power, and they waſte it in oppreſſion; to others honour, and they abuſe it to pride and vain-glory. Many make uſe of the mercies of God as darts to ſhoot againſt the heavens; they pervert and miſapply them for diſhonouring God, wounding Chriſt, and grieving the Spirit; for debauching their bodies, damning their ſouls, and daſhing both tables of the law in pieces before God's face. And yet, even while they are doing ſo, God is guarding them by his providence, and feeding them by his bounty. O that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to ſuch undeſerving and ill-deſerving creatures! We ought this day to triumph in the works of his hands, according to Pſal. xcii. 5. and cry, Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him?

2dly, Meditate this day upon God's ſpecial and diſtinguiſhing goodneſs to us beyond others, both with reſpect to ſoul and body: He hath not dealt ſo with any nation as with us. Both our national and perſonal mercies are ſingular, and ought this day to be remembered by us. Hath not God delivered many of you from death, when ſome dangerous accident, or violent ſickneſs, was threatening to break the ſlender twig of life, and to let you fall into the grave, and into hell both at once? Hath he not mercifully recovered you, and given you further ſpace and place for repentance.

Hath not God long preſerved this land from the famine, ſword and peſtilence, and ſuch deſtroying judgments as have been making havock in other nations about us, laying heaps upon heaps? He hath mercifully removed that dearth and ſcarcity wherewith we were almoſt conſumed ſome years ago, when the poor ſwooned in the ſtreets, and fainted in the high-ways for want of bread. God hath ſecured our lives, liberties and eſtates from rapine and violence, and lengthened out our peace and tranquility, when other nations have been turned into a ſeat of war and ſea of blood.

Conſider the goodneſs of God to us this day, that we are not among the Jews or Pagans on earth, that never heard the news of Chriſt; or among the damned in hell, who are beyond the reach of the offers of Chriſt. Let us alſo bleſs God, that we live not under the Old Teſtament times, but under the New; not under that darker and harſher diſpenſation of the covenant by Moſes, whoſe firſt miracle was the turning of water into blood; but under the clearer and ſweeter diſpenſation of the Meſſiah, whoſe firſt miracle was the turning of water into wine, that chears the heart of man; and hath mercifully freed us from the heavy yoke of Levitical ſacrifices and ceremonies.

Let us alſo this day thankfully remember God's goodneſs in delivering us from the yoke of Antichriſtian tyranny, popery, idolatry, and perſecution, and frequently blaſting the helliſh plots and contrivances of our enemies againſt the goſpel and proteſtant religion, and preſerving us from being invaded in our conſciences, or cut off from the wells of ſalvation, and barred from the ſprings of ordinances, and having our teachers murdered or driven into corners. Let us bleſs God, that we have the peaceable enjoyment of pure ordinances under the protection of proteſtant magiſtrates, and are allowed to ſerve God according to our conſciences, to read the bible in our own tongue, and examine the doctrines delivered to us by this rule; and that we are not under the tyranny of bloody papiſts, forced to hide or burn our bibles, to bow to ſtocks and ſtones; or baniſhed our native land.

Let us bleſs God that we live in a land of light, a valley of viſion, while others about us ſit in darkneſs, and in the region and ſhadow of death; and that he allows us ſuch rich goſpel feaſts, while others are viſited with cleanneſs of teeth, and a famine of the word of God: That every Sabbath day there is a free market of grace publicly proclaimed in our ears, whilſt others enjoy ſilent Sabbaths; yea, though we have ſlighted his goodneſs, and lothed the manna and honeycomb, his goodneſs is renewed and continued with us. What ſhall we render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards us?

II. Another ſubject of meditation upon the Lord's day is the work of man's redemption this day compleated by Chriſt's reſurrection.

This is the ſubject the angels are prying into; and ought not we much more, who are the perſons immediately concerned? Chriſt never teſtified ſuch love to them, he never forgave them one ſin, he never ſhed one drop of blood for them; and ſhall not we, for whom he poured out ſtreams of blood, and to whom he hath forgiven ten thouſand talents, be employed in prying into this myſtery?

1*ſt*, Meditate upon the ſpring of this work, God's infinite free love, that moved him to pity loſt mankind, and contrive a way to redeem him; when, in the mean time, he paſſed by a world of fallen angels, who were the elder brothers by creation, had a more natural claim to the inheritance, and might have been far more ſerviceable to their Maker than we: Yet behold, there is not one word of their redemption, no ſacrifice provided for them; there is not one devil ſpared, not one of all the thouſands of fallen angels recovered; God preſently took vengeance on them all: But O how did his bowels yearn, his heart pity and his eye ſpare poor fallen man in his miſerable condition! Indeed he drove Adam out of paradiſe, but it was a wonder he drove him not preſently out of the world into hell, where he had a little before plunged far more excellent creatures than Adam was. Chriſt took not on him the nature of angels, but he was content to clothe himſelf with the rags of human fleſh, that he might become our Saviour. O glorious incomprehenſible love!

2*dly*, Think upon the wiſe contrivance of our redemption. It would have eternally nonpluſſed the wiſdom of angels, to find out a method how to ſatisfy God's juſtice, and ſecure man's happineſs both at once, how to ſave the life of the law breaker, and yet maintain the honour of the Law maker: But here's a way to do both, here's a device for reconciling juſtice and mercy, and ſatisfying both their demands. Sin is ſeverely puniſhed, as juſtice required; and yet the ſinner is pardoned, as mercy pleaded. It would never have entered the thoughts of angels, that God would have parted with his Son and their Lord, to die a curſed death for vile worms; it would have been blaſphemy for any to have thought or ſpoken it. Tho' fallen man might have had the liberty to chuſe any way of redemption he pleaſed, he could never have propoſed this. Indeed, when he had been periſhing, he might have cried, O Son of God, have mercy on us; but who would have ſaid, O Son of God, come make thyſelf a man, come die a curſed death, come ſuffer hell's pains for me? This noble device bred only in the breaſt of the eternally wiſe God; for had he waited till men or angels had deviſed a way for our redemption, we had been miſerable to all eternity. But what do I ſpeak! the wonders of man's redemption can never be told: Here's a large ſubject for meditation and admiration, that can never be exhauſted by men or angels to all eternity. Let this work be the delight of our ſouls, eſpecially on the Lord's day. O believers, think much this day upon the love of our Redeemer; remember what he hath done and ſuffered for you; conſider how much he hath given and forgiven to you; view what he hath laid out and laid up for you; think what he hath performed and promiſed to you; and ſo you will not want matter of meditation.

III. Another ſubject of meditation on the Lord's day is our ſtate, and here we may take a view of man's fourfold ſtate. 1*ſt*, What he once was in a ſtate of innocency. 2*dly*, What he now is in a ſtate of nature. 3*dly*, What he may be in a ſtate of grace. 4*thly*, What he ſhall be in a ſtate of glory.

O ſinner, retire this day and think on your miſery. If thou be yet in a ſtate of nature, thou art without God and without Chriſt in the world, thou ſleepeſt and walkeſt in danger of hell; thou lieſt ſtill under the heavy load of unpardoned guilt, there is not one of all the numberleſs millions of your ſins forgiven, and they are heavier than ten thouſand milſtones hung about your neck; for every one of them hath the fearful curſes of the law hanging at them; and in the mean time thou lieſt on the very brink of the fiery furnace, like a man ſleeping on the top of the maſt in time of a ſtorm; there is but one ſtep betwixt thee and eternal death, nothing but a rotten threed of life keeps thee from dropping into everlaſting burnings. Thou knoweſt not, when thou riſeſt in the morning, but ere night thou mayſt make thy bed in hell; and when thou lieſt down, thou canſt not tell but thou ſhalt wake in the flames; all the men in the world, nay all the angels in heaven, cannot aſſure thee of the contrary. O what a doleful condition is this, to be always in a ſtate of damnation, not ſure to be one hour out of hell! A ſerious meditation upon your natural ſtate, O ſinner, might cauſe your heart of ſtone to tremble.

But haſt thou any happineſs while thou art on this ſide of hell? No ſurely, for your beſt worldly comforts and enjoyments are accurſed to you; Thou art curſed in the city, curſed in the field, curſed in thy baſket and thy ſtore, curſed in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy ground, Deut. xxviii. 15. Nay, every bit of bread thou eateſt, the curſe of God goes down with it. All your bleſſings turn into curſes, and your mercies into judgments; your table is a ſnare to you, the word is the ſavour of death, and the ſacraments are ſeals of condemnation to you. The beſt actions you perform are but an abomination to God; they bring the more guilt upon your head, and treaſure up the more wrath againſt you. Better you had periſhed in infancy than continue to live in a Chriſtleſs ſtate; for, the longer you live, ſtill the more miſerable you are: For every day, every night, every hour you live, you heat the furnace hotter by your new actions, which are all ſins, even the very beſt of them. O is this a ſtate to be continued in? Canſt thou ly down contentedly to ſleep another night in this condidtion? God forbid that thou live and die in this ſtate; for, if thou doſt, thou wilt riſe in the ſame condition at the laſt day. Nay, your ſtate then will be more dreadful than ever, for then thou wilt ſee above thee the judge frowning, beneath thee hell gaping, within thee conſcience gnawing, without thee the world burning; on the right hand your ſins accuſing, on the left hand the devils terrifying, the good angels keeping thee out of heaven, and the evil angels pulling thee down to hell. O poor Chriſtleſs ſoul, continue to think on this ſubject till your heart begin to melt, your eyes to weep, and your tongue to cry, O what ſhall I do to be ſaved? O that I knew where to find Chriſt! O to be found in him! I would give ten thouſand worlds to be ſure of this; it will be terrible if death or a tribunal find me before I be found in him. Is it not worth your while to ſpend ſome time upon this ſoul concerning ſubject? Hath not God given you reaſon for this very end, and will you not exerciſe it? can you think to be ſaved otherwiſe? Do you expect that God will carry you to heaven like a ſtone, or ſave you without or againſt thy will? Doth the world and your bodies deſerve to be remembred the whole day, or whole week or year throughout? and doth not God and your ſoul deſerve to be thought on one day in the week, or one hour of the day? Say not that you have no ſpare time for this work; for, if you will ſpare none of your own time for it, I beſeech you to ſpend God's time well this way. Is it not better to ſpend ſome part of the Sabbath in thinking upon your ſouls ſtate, than in thinking upon the world? Spiritual things alas! trouble you little on week-days, and why ſhould worldly things intrude upon God's day?

2dly, Think upon your happineſs, if you be in a ſtate of grace, and in Chriſt; you are delivered from ſin's guilt, from ſatan's fetters, from the law's curſes, from death's ſting, and hell's terror. Thou haſt now peace with God; juſtice itſelf is thy friend; all thy enjoyments are ſweetned by Chriſt's love; all your afflictions ſanctified by his blood. God himſelf is your God, your Father, your Friend, your Portion; yea, all things are yours.

IV. Death is a proper ſubject to be meditated upon on the Sabbath day; for in the xcii. Pſalm, wherein the exerciſes of the Sabbath are deſcribed, God calls and teaches us to conſider our latter end. Firſt, the end of the workers of iniquity, who, tho' they ſpring up as graſs, and flouriſh for a ſeaſon, ſhall yet in the end be deſtroyed for ever, v 7, 9. And again, the latter end of the godly, whoſe horn, tho' it be abaſed to the duſt for a while, yet in the end, ſhall be exalted. It is one principal work of miniſters this day, to be proclaimers of mortality, and remembrancers of death, according to, Iſa. xl. 6, 7, 8. So then it is our duty every Sabbath to have ſerious thoughts of death. Think with yourſelves, What if this be the laſt Sabbath that ever I will ſee on earth? I may be called to die, before I be called to hear another offer of Chriſt. Have I ſitten the goſpel ſummons this Sabbath, to come and embrace Chriſt, or to ſurrender my heart to him? What if I get a ſummons by death to come and appear before him before the next Sabbath? this I cannot ſit. Death is a bold meſſenger, he cannot be deforced; when he comes and takes a man by the throat, the proudeſt, ſtouteſt and ſtrongeſt in the world muſt go, whether willing or unwilling, all is one. There are many in the world, at the church, in health this Sabbath, who will be on a death bed or in eternity the next; and, why may not I be one of them?

Think ſeriouſly upon your latter end: Think what will be your caſe in a parting hour, where you will take up your lodging, whether in Abraham's boſom, or in the devil's arms? 'O what will be my thoughts, 'when I am taking my laſt look of huſband, wife, 'children and relations? What will be my cordial, 'when the world fails, when friends are weeping 'about my bed, when my ſenſes are loſing their office, my heart and eye ſtrings are breaking, and all 'turning dim and dark about me? O what if my 'ſleepy conſcience awake then, and my old buried 'ſins revive and fall on me, to tear me in pieces?' O what will Chriſtleſs ſinners do in that hour, when there is but one ſingle ſtep betwixt their departing ſouls and the [illegible] of devils? O it is fearful to die in your ſins, as it is threatened, John viii. 24. If ye believe not that I am he, ye ſhall die in your ſins. O better die in a dungeon, among toads and ſerpents, than die in your ſins; for theſe are ſerpents that never leave ſtinging, and will faſten ſo upon thee, as never to part with thee again; they will go to the grave with thee as thy companions, to a tribunal with thee as thy accuſers, and to hell with thee as thy tormentors. O it is terrible to die out of Chriſt, and without ſight of an intereſt in him; to make a leap in the dark over a bottomleſs gulf, not knowing where your feet may light; or to launch into the great ocean of eternity, without ſight of a landing place for your ſoul. O how will the poor ſoul ſhrink back into the body in ſuch a caſe, when it begins to awaken out of its dream, and look out into another world, ſaying, How ſhall I venture forth, where I ſee nothing but darkneſs and horror, or a flaming ſword ready to meet me?

Think upon the continual hazard you are in of death; its arrows are flying thick about you, and many are falling ſlain on every hand of you; and God knows but the next dart may hit thee: And what if thou be unprepared, and hell follow the pale horſe?

Think upon the ſottiſh ſtupidity of many, who, tho' they ſtand tottering day and night upon the brink both of the grave and hell, yet can ſpend whole weeks, yea months, without a ſerious thought of eternity: Yea, in the houſe of mourning, and in the ſight of the dead, they can think, talk, jeſt and laugh, and never have one grave thought or word about their latter end. Fooliſh ſinners are rightly compared to a company of blind men dancing about the mouth of a very deep pit, which they do not perceive, nor hear the groans of thoſe who fall to the bottom of it: Now and then one drops in, but ſtill the reſt continue the dance. This day a ſwearer dies, and tumbles into hell; the next a drunkard, the next a whoremonger: But ſtill their companions in ſin go on in their mad career, till they drop in too.

Think what a fearful ſurprize death is to many careleſs ſinners; it lights upon them like a falcon out of the air; they muſt flit, and they were not thinking on it; they have their lodging to ſeek, and they know not where. O it is ſad to be turned out of the clay tabernacle, and to be put to knock, and cry, Lodging, lodging for God's ſake; and yet get no other anſwer but a frown, or, Depart from me, I know you not! What cauſe have we to pray, 'Lord, Let us not have our work to do, when our day is done; our weapons to ſeek, when our enemy is at the gates; our oil to buy, when the market is ended, and the bridegroom come.'

Think alſo upon the happineſs of a dying believer, who can go forth half way and meet death, and bid it welcome, as a friend. Death ends his ſorrow, and begins his joy. It is an outlet to miſery, and an inlet to happineſs; it frees him of his greateſt grievance in the world, that is ſin. As ſin was the womb that brought forth death, ſo death is the tomb that buries ſin; thus God in his wiſdom, cauſes the daughter to deſtroy the mother; and hence it is, that death is put in the believer's inventory of goods, 1 Cor. iii. 22. Death is theirs. It is their Father's ſervant ſent to carry them home to their Father's houſe; a palace all beſpangled with light, where they ſhall ſigh no more, and, which is infinitely better, where they ſhall ſin no more for ever. They ſhall be troubled no more with an ill heart, nor a tempting devil; they ſhall complain no more of darkneſs, and diſtance from God; but ſhall ſpend a whole eternity in praiſes, doxologies, hoſannas, and hallelujahs to God and the Lamb. Think on the bleſſed change, O believer, that death will make in thy circumſtances ere long. It will tranſport thee from a cottage to a palace, from a wilderneſs to Canaan, from a ſtormy ſea to a ſafe ſhore, from a vile dunghill to a glorious city, a city whoſe walls and foundations are of precious ſtones, its ſtreets of gold, and its gates of pearl; whoſe light is the Lamb, and whoſe temple is God. Haſt thou not cauſe then to love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who has provided this city for thee, and found out a way to it; who by his death has unſting'd death, and by his blood has paved a way through its dark valley for thee to walk in, and fear no ill? O believer, fear not tho' the trance be ſomewhat dark, the paſſage is ſafe, and the end is light; the day is ſhort betwixt thee and home, 'tis but wink and ſee God.

Laſtly, Think often how holily and ſpiritually you will wiſh you had ſpent this day, when you come to a death bed, and death and eternity begin to ſtare you cloſly in the face. You will then begin to wiſh, O that I had ſpent more of my time, and eſpecially of the Lord's day in meditation and prayer! O if God would try me again, how ſerious and diligent would I be! Conſider, on the other hand, what a pleaſant death-bed the righteous will have, who have ſpent the Sabbath religiouſly! what ſatiſfaction they will have in the review thereof! and what comfort in the proſpect of an everlaſting Sabbath above, to which they are haſtening! They will be rejoicing when others about them are weeping; they will be ſmiling when their eye ſtrings are breaking, and inward ſtrength failing. They will be longing to be with Chriſt, which is beſt of all. It was a choice ſaying of one near death, 'My head is in heaven, my heart is in heaven, it is but one ſtep more and I ſhall be all in heaven.' And muſt not the latter end of ſuch be peaceable and pleaſant? Many doubtleſs with Balaam, would wiſh to die their death, however ill they like their life; many like that young man, who ſaid to his looſe companion (after they had viſited holy Ambroſe on his death bed, and ſaw how cheerfully he was triumphing over approaching death) O that I might live with thee, and die with Ambroſe! But it is vain to think to dine with ſatan and luſts in this world, and hereafter to ſup with Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven; for whatſoever a man ſoweth, that ſhall he alſo reap, Gal. vi. 7.

V. Another ſubject of meditation on the Sabbath-day, is the everlaſting reſt and employment in heaven. You are called this day to have frequent thoughts of it, ſince the Sabbath is an emblem thereof, and ſerves to keep us in mind of it. Take care then, O believer, to ſpend every Sabbath in the view of heaven, and live every Sabbath as it were to be your laſt, and behave this day as one that believes you may be in heaven before the next Lord's day celebrating an eternal Sabbath.

Let your worſhip this day below put you in mind of that more perfect worſhip above, where you ſhall ſee him whom you worſhip, and enjoy immediate communion with him. O the difference betwixt that worſhip there, and ours here, is great! There is no wearineſs there in beholding God, no wanderings nor excurſions of the heart from God, no inclinations there to drouſineſs or ſleep in worſhip, no dull or low conceptions of God, no deadneſs of heart or frame; their harps are never out of tune, their hearts are always up, and fit for the high praiſes of God. There is no note lower there than Glory to God in the higheſt; every ſaint ſings his hallelujahs on the highſt key, and all of them join harmoniouſly in the work of praiſing God with one heart and ſoul. Are congregational aſſemblies of ſaints ſo pleaſant on earth, eſpecially when they jointly and melodiouſly ſing God's praiſe? O what will it be then when they all meet above in that great general aſſembly of the church of the firſt born, together with the innumerable company of angels, and there with one heart and voice ſing God's praiſes? How raviſhing will it be, to hear that eternal muſic of the bride-chamber, that ſweet melody of the church triumphant, where there is no jarring ſtring, no diſpleaſing ſound, no diſcord between heart and tongue, no willows there to hang their harps upon, no bad news to be heard, no ſad ſight to be ſeen, no evil to be felt or fear'd to all eternity. Poor diſcouraged believers, are ye now troubled with ill hearts and vain thoughts? Are ye plagued with wandering and wearying hearts in duty? Theſe complaints ere long ſhall be taken out of your mouths; read Eph. v. 27. the church above hath neither ſpot nor wrinkle. Once the glorified ſaints faces were as black and wrinkled as yours, but now they have none: Once their hearts were as bad as yours, but now they are as fixed pillars in the temple of God, they go no more out.

Take a view this day by faith of the glorious company above, behold Chriſt upon his white throne, Paul with his crown of righteouſneſs, and all the faithful ones in Abraham's boſom: How glorioully do they ſhine in the kingdom of their Father! The ſun is a very glorious creature, but it would be uſeleſs there, it would not be ſeen for the brightneſs of the Lamb; nay, every ſaint ſhall be as glorious as that ſun. Who can tell the happineſs of the inhabitants of that place, where every head wears a royal crown, every hand a palm of victory, every eye o'erflows with joy, and every tongue with ſongs of praiſe? O believer, think with yourſelf, what a difference there is betwixt your ſtate and theirs! “ Oh, I am ſighing, they are ſinging; I am ſinning, “ they are ſerving God; I am groaning out my com“ plaints, they are trumpeting forth God's praiſe; I “ am in darkneſs, and cannot ſee God; they dwell in “ light, and ſee him face to face. O my Lord, muſt “ I ſtay behind, when they are going? Muſt I ly “ groaning and ſighing here, while they are triumph“ ing above, and dividing the ſpoil? My Lord is gone “ and left the earth, and entered into his glory; my “ brethren and friends are gone to their bleſſed reſt, “ and muſt I wander in the wilderneſs, abſent from “ home, far diſtant from my Father and my God? “ Shall I be ſatisfied in this ſtate? No, I will look after “ them with a longing eye, I'll ly knocking at the gate “ till God open to let me in; I'll ſtill pant, breathe, “ and cry, O Lord, how long! How is my pilgramage “ prolonged! How am I detain'd in this valley of tears, “ wandering in the dark, and can ſcarce get any ſight “ of Canaan! When ſhall the days of my baniſhment “ be fininiſhed, that I may get home to my country “ and friends above? O when ſhall I ſit at the foun“ tain head, and drink plentifully of the living ſtreams “ that make glad the city of God?”

O believer, rejoice in the forethoughts of that day, when thou ſhalt meet with thy Father and thy brethren, and when thou ſhalt ſee thy elder Brother on the throne ready to paſs ſentence in thy favours. O how ſweet will it be, when he is frowning and thundering againſt the wicked, to ſee him turn and ſmile on thee as thy Redeemer! O what love will be in his looks! what melody will that ſentence ſound in thy ears, Come, ye bleſſed of my Father! &c. How raviſhing a ſurpriſe, O believers, will it be to meet with your godly acquaintances, with whom ye prayed, praiſed, and converſed here! O then, may ye rejoice together and ſay, “ This voice of joy we now hear, is not like “ our old groans and complaints, nor like the oaths, “ curſes and reproaches our ears were grated with on “ earth. What is become of our hard hearts, our “ worldly unbelieving hearts? Where are all our “ luſts, corruptions, tentations and burdens now? “ What is become of a body of death, indwelling “ ſin that lay ſo long on us as a dead weight? What “ is become of the church's enemies we often com“ plained of?” O! theſe are all gone, they ſhall trouble you no more; you ſhall triumph over them, as Iſrael did on the other ſide of the Red-ſea, when they ſaw the Egyptians drowned and lying dead upon the ſhore: Theſe Egyptians, O believer, whom thou once ſaweſt to thy great vexation and trouble, thou ſhalt ſee then again no more.

I might mention many other ſubjects of meditation proper for the Sabbath; ſuch as the evil of ſin, the vanity of the world, the worth of the ſoul, the ſufferings of Chriſt, the laſt judgment, and many others, which the ſermons you hear that day will bring to your remembrance: But, fearing that I have been too tedious already upon this head, I muſt paſs them, and proceed to another private duty neceſſary on the Lord's day, which is,

IV. Self-examination.

This duty is near of kin to the former, it being a ſort of reflexive meditation, the mind turns inward and communes with itſelf, according to Pſal. iv. 4. It is abſolutely neceſſary that we ſhould take ſome time to commune with ourſelves, and aſk what we are, what we have been, and what we have done, Jer. viii. 6. And is not the Sabbath a fit time for this duty, when we retire from the noiſe of the world, and are not diſturbed with ſecular affairs? This is a moſt important duty, and nearly concerns our eternal well-being; but yet it is a duty very much neglected. Many have lived fifty or ſixty years in the world, that never ſpent one hour in communing with their own hearts: There are many going out of the world, who never yet began to enquire why they came into it, and never yet aſked the queſtion at their ſouls, Are you to flit hence, or live here for ever? Why came you hither, and where are you to lodge when you go hence? Many live in a crowd of worldly buſineſs, are hurried from one thing to another, leap out of their beds to the world in the morning, and from the world to their beds again at night, and ſo never find one minute on the week days to take their ſoul aſide; and for the Sabbath, tho' they have time for it, yet ſuch is their averſion to the work, they ſhift it all they can, and avoid meeting with themſelves; they rather converſe with any in the world, than with their own hearts. It is againſt ſelf-love and carnal eaſe for a man to turn his own accuſer and judge: Therefore many would rather drudge and toil their bodies whole days and weeks at the foreſt labour, ere they ſpent one quarter of an hour at this exerciſe; and ſo they live their whole lives ſtrangers to themſelves. We would think it ſtrange to hear of two men that converſed every day for fifty or ſixty years ſpace, and yet all this while did not know one another; and yet this is the caſe betwixt many and their ſouls; for as long as they have lived together, they are utterly unacquainted, they never turn inward to converſe with themſelves, they have no ſerious thoughts about their own ſtate or condition. It is ſaid of the rich man in the parable, Luke xvi. that in hell he lift up his eyes, as if he had never conſidered nor bethought himſelf till that time; and indeed it is the want of retired conſideration, and people's ſerious bethinking of themſelves, that is the ruin of many thouſands. O then, reſolve in God's ſtrength, that, in ſpite of the devil and your own corruption, you and your ſouls ſhall have a meeting, and live no longer aſſunder; that ye will imitate David, Pſal. cxix. 59. I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies. Seeing then you have free time for this duty on the Lord's day, take your ſouls aſide, and enquire into their ſtate; ſay, “ O my “ ſoul, where art thou? Art thou under a covenant of “ works, or a covenant of grace? Doſt thou belong to Chriſt's family or the devil's? Art thou in the narrow or broad way? Suppoſe I ſhould die this night, (for God knows if ever I ſhall ſee the morrow's light) what hope will I have in a dying hour? Where will death land me? Whether with God in heaven, or with devils in hell? Would Chriſt ſmile on me in the dark valley, or be my Advocate at God's bar? Is there any ſaving change yet wrought on my heart and life by a work of converſion? God forbid I undergo my great and final change till this happy change be wrought. Can I ſay, I am not the man that once I was; once I was blind, but now ſee?" Study and enquire into the marks of the converted and unconverted, with the greateſt ſeriouſneſs and anxiety of ſoul, and ſee which of them you can apply to yourſelf; cry, that God may open a window in your breaſt, to let you ſee into your own heart, and ſoul's ſtate; and, whatever you be deceived in, beg it of him, that he may not ſuffer you to be deceived in this momentous point, where your ſoul and your all is at the ſtake. And, if you find yourſelf in a bad ſtate, give no reſt to your eyes, nor ſlumber to your eyelids, till in God's ſtrength you reſolve on a thorow change.

Laſtly, It is incumbent on every private Chriſtian on the Lord's day, to practiſe the works of charity and mercy, both to the ſouls and bodies of men. Study to promote the edification of others by good counſels, inſtructions, admonitions and reproofs. Comfort the afflicted, ſupply thoſe that are in ſtraits, viſit the ſick and thoſe that are in miſery. Theſe are proper duties on the Sabbath, and God is highly pleaſed with them, James i. 27. If we practiſe theſe duties conſcientiouſly, we may both do good and get good; we may both give direction and comfort to the diſtreſſed, and receive inſtruction and comfort to ourſelves: Tho' we may not enquire at the dead, yet we may learn many wholeſome leſſons from the dying. And would to God that both the perſons viſiting and viſited were more ſpiritual in their converſe than ordinarily they are! for then this duty would be found very edifying and profitable. But if, when we viſit the ſick this day, we ſpend the time in worldly diſcourſe, and not for the ſpiritual advantage of the ſick, and others preſent, we profane the Sabbath, inſtead of ſanctifying it.

Do we ſee ſome oppreſſed by continual ſlumbering and ſleeping, when death is ſuppoſed to be near, ſo that they cannot think on their everlaſting ſtate? let this teach us to remember our latter end, and awake our ſouls to their work, while we are in health.

Do we ſee others troubled with ravings? let it teach us to employ our reaſon for our ſouls advantage while we have the uſe of it.

Do we ſee ſome ſadly diſcompoſed with extreme pains and agonies? let it mind us to diſpatch our work while health and eaſe remain with us.

Do we obſerve their ſight failing, tongue faltering, or hearing growing worſe? O let this teach us to make a covenant with our eyes, and turn them away from beholding vanity; to uſe our tongues for God's glory, and beware of abuſing them now, while we have the uſe of them; and to employ our ears for hearing ſpiritual inſtructions, while they are in caſe for it.

DIRECTION. III.

Concerning the ſpecial order, method and manner, wherein the duties of the Sabbath are to be performed.

THE Lord requires us, not only to take heed to the matter of our duties, but alſo to the manner of them; not only to do what is good, but to do it well. As we moſt ſeek God in due ordinances, ſo we muſt ſeek him in a due order, 1 Chron. xv. 13. Very much depends upon the circumſtances of our actions, therefore we muſt look narrowly to them.

That we may take a view of the ſanctification of the Sabbath complexly, and the order and circumſtances of the duties therein required; there are three things to be conſidered;

1. What is requiſite in order to prepare for the Sabbath, before it come.
2. What is requiſite in performing the duties of the Sabbath when it is come.
3. What is requiſite at the end of the Sabbath, or when the work thereof is over.

I. Concerning our preparation for the Sabbath.

AS to the firſt, that it is needful to prepare for the Sabbath, cannot be denied, if we conſider the word remember prefixed to the commandment, Remember the Sabbath to keep it holy. We muſt remember it before it come, ſo as to provide for it. Moſes calls the people, Exod. xvi. 23. to mind that to morrow is the reſt of the holy Sabbath.

Again, if we conſider the nature of the Sabbath-work, and our unfitneſs for it, preparation will be found very needful. We are called this day to make ſolemn and near approaches to that God who is a glorious Spirit, and to hold communion with him who is infinitely holy; and is it not very neceſſary that we who are naturally carnal, and much involved in worldly buſineſs thro' the week, ſhould endeavour to abſtract our thoughts from earthly things, that we may draw nigh to ſo great a God upon this holy day? For holy performances God requires us to make holy preparations; and therefore David ſaith, Pſal. xxvi. 6. I will waſh mine hands in innocency, ſo ſhall I compaſs thine altar, O Lord. The mariner that intendeth a voyage, he not only provides his tackling, but he is careful before he ſail, to put his ſhip off from the land, that he may catch the firſt fair wind. In like manner, O Chriſtian, if thou wouldſt lanch heavenwards upon a Lords day, be concerned to get the veſſel of thy heart put off from the earth on the evening before.

Wert thou a perſon of great quality and eſtate, and the king ſhould ſend thee word that he would dine with thee to-morrow, thou wouldſt make preparation for his entertainment the day before, by cleanſing the houſe, and putting all things in order, ſuitable to the dignity of ſo great a prince. Now, when King JESUS gives thee notice before hand, that on ſuch a day he is to ſup with thee, wilt thou not teſtify thy reſpect to ſo great a potentate, by making preparation for him? When Chriſt prepares a table for thee in the goſpel, and furniſhes it with all the dainties of heaven, pardon, peace, love, grace, and eternal life; ſhouldſt thou not empty thy ſtomach, cleanſe thy heart, adorn thy ſoul, and make ready to feaſt with thy Redeemer? At this goſpel table others ſit and feed, their ſouls are filled with marrow and fatneſs, and their mouths praiſe the Lord with joyful lips; but, alas! many have no ſtomach, they can eat little, and ſavour nothing. Their ſtomachs are foul, their hearts unclean, the world fills their thoughts; they taſte no goodneſs in hearing, in prayer, praiſes or any duty of God's worſhip: Why? They are at no pains before hand to empty their minds of the world, and prepare for this heavenly fare.

Reader, were I to counſel thee how to improve a market day, ſo as thou mightſt gain much wealth and treaſure, I doubt not but thou wouldſt hearken to me: And wilt thou not regard me, when I am to adviſe thee how to ſpend the Lord's day, the market day for thy ſoul, ſo as thou mayſt get the true treaſure, even durable riches and righteouſneſs? Lay aſide worldly cares, remember, and prepare for this market day, before it come, and beg ſkill from God how to improve it aright to the enriching of thy ſoul. Anciently there were laws obliging people to lay aſide their work at ſuch a particular hour on Saturday's afternoon, that they might remember and prepare for the Sabbath: Likewiſe it was a cuſtom in ſome places to have public divine exerciſe and worſhip on the Saturday's evening; ſo that, at the ringing of a bell for it, people gave over their work, and repaired to the church to worſhip God, and hear ſomething ſuitable and preparatory to the Sabbath. I cannot but commend this practice, as a good way to conclude and ſhut up all the labours and cares of the week, and publicly to give God thanks for proſpering the works of our hands, and alſo to confeſs and mourn for the carnality of our hearts, and our little minding of Chriſt and heaven in our weekly buſineſs, and our manifold ſhort comings in our duties both to God and man, and our forgetting and not practiſing thro' the week the ſermons we heard the preceding Sabbath: Likewiſe it is a good way to take off our hearts from the world, and to compoſe and ſpiritualize the thoughts for the work of the approaching Sabbath; and alſo to pray and wreſtle together for a bleſſing on the ſame, and for ſpecial aſſiſtance to miniſters and people in the duties of the day, that the enſuing Sabbath may be one of the beſt Sabbaths we ever had, and that it may be one of the days of heaven to our ſouls.

But more particularly, the preparation needful for the Sabbath conſiſts in thoſe things;

1ſt, In your diſpatching and ordering your labour and buſineſs through the week with ſuch prudence and foreſight that it may nowiſe hinder or diſturb you on the Sabbath day.

2dly, In leaving off your work timeouſly the night before, and going ſeaſonably to reſt, that both your ſervants and you may be in caſe to riſe early on Sabbath morning, and not to be drowſy or ſleepy thro' the day. It is a great incroachment upon the Sabbath that ſome are guilty of, they ſit up and work later on Saturday's night than any other night of the week, they ly longer on Sabbath morning than any other day, they go ſooner to bed on Sabbath night than any other night, and they riſe ſooner on Monday morning than any other day of the week. Now, what is this but a grudging God his due time, a wearying of his day, and making it as ſhort as you can, and ſeeking to win it, if poſſible, from off the Saturday's night and Monday's morning?

Under the law, the latter part of the day, preceding the Sabbath, was called the day of preparation for the Sabbath, Luke xxiii. 54. imitating that it is our duty to prepare for the Sabbath before it come, and to do it upon the day preceding. Likewiſe, we find that Nehemiah ordered the gates of Jeruſalem to be ſhut when it began to be dark before the Sabbath, Neh. xiii. 19. thereby teaching us timeouſly to give over our trafficking and worldly buſineſs on the evening before the Lord's day, and not to follow our buſineſs too late, leſt our thought be too much embaraſſed with ſecular affairs, and we thereby indiſpoſed for the religious duties of the enſuing holy day.

3dly, It would be a good way to prepare for the Lord's day, ſometimes to take your children and ſervants on the Saturday's night, when you call them together for family-worſhip, and inſtruct them concerning the end and inſtitution of the Lord's day which is approaching, and the nature of the ſervice that is requiſite upon it. The Lord commends Abraham, for 'commanding his houſhold and children after him to 'keep the way of the Lord,' Gen. xviii. 19. And he frequently directs the Iſraelites to inſtruct their children concerning the meaning of their rites and obſervations; and particularly concerning the paſſover, he ſaith, Exod. xii. 26. 27. And it ſhall come to paſs, when your children ſhall ſay unto you, What mean you by this ſervice? that ye ſhall ſay, It is the ſacrifice of the Lord's paſſover, who paſſed over the houſes of the children of Iſrael in Egypt, when he ſmote the Egyptians, &c. So in like manner, concerning the obſervation of the Lord's day, you ſhould tell your families, "The day of ſacred reſt, "now approaching, is a memorial of God's wonderful love to us, that when we were loſt and undone "by ſin, curſed by the divine law, and excluded out "of God's reſt, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt undertook a "great work for us to make up our peace, become our "ſurety, and bear the curſe and wrath due to us; and "when he had ſo done, and finiſhed his work of redemption, he, on the firſt day of the week, entered "into his reſt by his reſurrection, and thereby made "known to us that we ſhould keep this day as a day "of holy reſt to him, in remembrance of his glorious "work, and as a pledge of our celebrating an everlaſting Sabbath with him above, in admiring his love, "and ſinging his praiſe: And therefore let us make "ſuitable preparation for this ſolemn day, and the duties of it." Alas! the omiſſion of ſuch inſtructions as theſe to young perſons, doth cauſe the obſervation of this day, with many, to be built only on cuſtom and example; and hence follows the great neglect of Sabbath ſanctification, which is ſo common among us.

4thly, If you would prepare for the Sabbath, call off your thoughts timeouſly on Saturday's night, from worldly cares and buſineſs, that you may think on the great work of the approaching day; and labour to put yourſelves in as ſolemn and as ſerious a frame, as if you were to die and ſtep into eternity, and clear counts at God's tribunal, or as if you were viſibly to tryſt and meet with God, and ſolemnly treat with him concerning your ſalvation.

As godly Nehemiah took care to ſhut the gates of Jeruſalem on the evening before the Sabbath, that no burdens might be carried in on the Sabbath day; ſo ſecure you the gates of your hearts on the Saturday's evening, that no worldly thing may enter to diſturb you in the performance of the great and ſolemn duties of the Sabbath.

5thly, Look back on the by paſt week and examine your actions therein as particularly as you can, and repent for all the ſins thereof, whether omiſſion or commiſſion, and flee to the blood of Chriſt to be cleanſed from the guilt and filth of them, that ſo you may be prepared to appear before a holy God, who is of purer eyes than that he can behold iniquity. O ſeek to get all quarrels through the week removed, that you may have a reconciled God to meet with upon the Sabbath.

6thly, Study to have a deep ſenſe of your wants upon your ſpirits, that you may get ſuitable ſupplies for them upon the Sabbath. If you were going to a great market next day, you would be thinking the night before what you wanted or needed thereat: The Sabbath is the great market day for your ſouls, when you may hear Chriſt crying, as Rev. iii. 18. I counſel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayſt be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayſt be clothed, &c.

8thly, Beg earneſtly for God's help to ſanctify the Sabbath, and that God may put you in a ſpiritual frame for the work thereof, and that you may have grace to leave all your worldly cares at the bottom of the hill, while you go up into the mount to worſhip God, and return again to them. Beg that the ſins of the by gone week, and the miſimprovement of former Sabbaths, may not hinder God's preſence upon the enſuing Sabbath. Pray that miniſters may be directed to a ſuitable word for your ſouls caſe, that your hearts may be prepared, your enemies reſtrained, and God's ordinances bleſſed, ſo that it may be a good day, a day in God's courts, are better than a thouſand elſewhere.

And then having ſo ordered and diſpoſed matters, lay yourſelves down to ſleep in Chriſt's arms, and under his protection, leaving your hearts in heaven, that when you awake next morning, you may be ſtill with God. Study to ſleep, as well as eat and drink, to the glory of God. Go to bed with this deſign, that your bodies may be refreſhed, and fitted to ſerve your ſouls in the ſervice of God upon the enſuing day.

II. Concerning the duties of the Sabbath.

AS to the ſecond thing propoſed, What things are requiſite in doing the work of the Sabbath, when it is come? This is a large ſubject; I ſhall reduce all I have to ſay upon it to three heads;

1ſt What is neceſſary before the public worſhip.
2dly, What is neceſſary in time of public worſhip.
3dly, What is to be done after the public worſhip is over.

As to the firſt, take theſe directions;

I. When you awake on Sabbath morning, rejoice at the approach of this bleſſed day: As the birds chirp and ſing at the dawning of the morning's light, ſo let believers account the light of this day ſweet, as being a day of ſignal mercies, a day of communion with God, a day wherein the Spirit's dews fall upon the ſoul. As Abraham rejoiced to ſee Chriſt's day, John viii. 56. ſo ought you this morning, ſaying with the pſalmiſt, Pſal. cxviii. 24. This is the day the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it.

II. Let your ſouls be breathing forth holy meditations and ejaculations upon your very firſt awaking: Lift up your hearts in thankſgiving to God for that comfortable reſt and ſleep he hath vouchſafed to you the night paſt: for it is he that giveth his beloved ſleep; and who renews his mercies to us every morning. Likewiſe give up and dedicate yourſelves wholly to God and his ſervice this day: And, betwixt your walking and riſing, you may have ſuch meditations as theſe: ———" O if I could ſay this morning with Iſaiah, " chap. xxvi. 9. With my ſoul have I deſired thee in the " night, and with my ſpirit within me will I ſeek thee " early!——Let me this morning awake early from " ſin to righteouſneſs, 1 Cor. xv. 34. or that in Rom. " xiii. 11, 12. It is high time to awake out of ſleep. The " night is far ſpent, the day is at hand; let me caſt off " the works of darkneſs, and put on the armour of light." Or, think on your awaking out of the ſleep of death, and riſing out of the grave at the ſound of the laſt trumpet, what a ſolemn wakening that will be: Or think of God's goodneſs to thee, that thou awakeſt in life, health and ſafety this morning; ſay, " What " a mercy is it, that God has kept my houſe from " firing, and falling on my head! that he has chained " up ſatan my enemy, that he could neither hurt nor " fright me in a viſible manner! Many have lien down " this night without ſleep, and been full of toſſings to " the dawning of the day; but, bleſſed be God, I " have laid me down in peace, I have ſlept and waked " again, and my ſleep hath been refreſhing. How " would I value this mercy, if I were in ſickneſs, and " could not get ſleep!———Many have lien down " and ſlept, but never waked again in this world; " ſad, if it be in the flames of hell! But, O what ſhall " I render to the Lord, that I wake again in the land " of prayer, and of hope; and upon a Lord's day " morning, wherein I hope to hear again the joyful " ſound, and ſee his power and glory in the ſanctuary?"

If it is a ſummer morning, when the ſun may be up and ſhining when thou awakeſt, then think, " Chriſt " the light of the world roſe early this morning from " the dark grave, wherein he lay buried for my ſake. " The Sun of righteouſneſs was up this day before the " natural ſun."—O think, " This is the day wherein God ſaid, Let there be light, and it was ſo. Is " the light ſo ſweet, and is it ſo pleaſant a thing for " the eyes to behold the ſun? O how much more to " ſee Chriſt the bright Morning-ſtar this day by the " eye of faith, to ſee the Sun of righteouſneſs ſhining " in the firmament of goſpel-ordinances! Let me riſe " and prepare for this ſight; O that my eyes may be " cleared, and the mote taken out of the eye of faith, " that I may this day ſee him, in compariſon of whom " the ſun is but a dark clod of earth! O my ſoul, riſe " from the earth this day, get the moon under thy " feet, and clothe thyſelf with the Sun; draw nigh " to God in Chriſt, and ſet thy affections on things “above; thou art capable of communion with God, do not debaſe thyſelf in raking always in the dunghill of this world, in licking the duſt with the ſerpent, or feeding on huſks with the ſwine, as if thou hadſt no higher end to ſerve than the world. Why wilt thou ly among the pots, and wallow in the puddle, when cryſtal ſtreams are ſo near?”

Or think, “How happy are the angels, who are exempted from the neceſſity of ſleep! They never reſt, nor weary of God's work, but praiſe him day and night. Behold, the ſun never wearies to ſerve his Creator: How many thouſand miles has the ſun travelled ſince the laſt night I went to reſt, that he might bring the light of a new Lord's day to me a poor undeſerving creature! And, ſhall not I riſe with chearfulneſs to celebrate this day, and ſerve my God and Saviour upon it? It is a mercy the natural ſun is riſen; but a far greater that the Sun of righteouſneſs is up, and hath aſcended to his meridian, that he may the better diffuſe the influences of light and heat upon poor cold and blind ſouls, ſuch as I am: I will get up this day, and ly in his way as he paſſeth by, and cry with the blind man, Son of David, have mercy upon me.”

Laſtly, The morning ſun may mind thee of the danger of ſecure Chriſtleſs ſouls. The ſun ſhone bright on Sodom that morning it was deſtroyed: Little did they think that fair morning, that the clouds would gather on a ſudden, and drop fire on their heads; neither knoweſt thou, O Chriſtleſs ſinner, what a ſtorm of wrath may fall on thee before night: Wherefore flee preſently out of the Sodom of a natural ſtate, to the Zoar of Chriſt's righteouſneſs.

III. Riſe full as early this day as on other days, and be as ſoon at God's work this day as you are at your own work on other days: God is the beſt Maſter, his work the ſweeteſt, and his wages the greateſt. Yet alas! there are many who ly long on the morning of the Lord's day, they are loth to riſe and fall to God's work; when they riſe, they have no time for ſecret and family duties before the public worſhip: So that they are either ſlightly performed, or wholly neglected. O fooliſh ſinner! doſt thou think thy worldly buſineſs more worthy of thy early riſing, than thy ſpiritual employment? Or, wilt thou ſhew greater regard to thy worthleſs body, than to thy gracious God, and thy precious ſoul? You owe thanks to God, that you have had the bypaſt week for your own affairs, and that now you have the proſpect of another for them, and that God lets you ſee the firſt day of it; but O conſider, that your Creator and Redeemer puts in for ſome time with you: All your time is not your own, neither is it in your own hands? God alone is the Author and of Diſpoſer it. Well then, now is the time, this is the day that he requires: O let him have it wholly, ſeeing he gives you ſix times as much for yourſelves. And grudge him not the morning of his own day.——Remember that promiſe, Prov. viii. 17. They that ſeek me early ſhall find me. In the morning the ſpirits are moſt freſh and lively, and fitteſt for contemplations aad prayer. We are told, Exod. xvi. 13. that in the morning the dew and manna fell: Wouldſt thou have the dew of a bleſſing to fall on thy ſoul, and to make thee as a watered garden? then riſe early to wait for it. This was the practice of the ſaints; Job roſe early and offered his ſacrifices, Job i. 5. David prevented the dawning of the morning with his prayers, Pſal. cxix. 147. Chriſt roſe early this day before the ſun. And for what end did he riſe? Even to juſtify and ſave his people. O believers, did your Saviour riſe early this morning to juſtify you, and will you not riſe early this day to glory him? This is the great deſign of the Sabbath. And the xcii. pſalm, which is intituled, A ſong for the Sabbath day, ſaith, It is good to ſhew forth God's loving kindneſs in the morning. Timeouſneſs at God's work on this day, or diligence in it, will not prove prejudicial to health; for, ſince God hath pronounced a ſpecial bleſſing upon the Sabbath, you have ground to expect that leſs ſleep, food and refreſhment, than at other times, will be bleſſed for your ſupport in his work, and that you ſhall live in the doing thereof.

IV. When you are up, haſten to put on your clothes, and ſpend as little time this day in dreſſing yourſelf as poſſible, that you may have time for ſecret duties, and retired converſe with God. But, ſince the body muſt be clothed this day, let your thoughts be well employed in the time you are doing it: Think on ſin, that was the cauſe of your ſoul's nakedneſs, and of your body's need of apparel. Remember from whom you have your clothes, to cover, keep warm and adorn your bodies, even from God, it is his wool and his flax; therefore give thanks to him for your raiment, as well as your food. And tho' your clothes be not ſo fine as you would wiſh, yet mind, that theſe of whom the world was not worthy, wandered about in ſheeps ſkins and goats ſkins: And, if you be not ſo outwardly ſplendid as others, ſeek that decking which will make you all glorious within. When others are following vain faſhions, ſeek ye to be covered with the robes of Chriſt's righteouſneſs. And, ſince you are this day to make a ſolemn appearance before God your heavenly Father, you muſt be ſure, like Jacob, to come in the garments of your elder Brother, otherwiſe you cannot expect your Father's bleſſing. Put no confidence in your own righteouſneſs; for it is no better than rags, or a garment full of holes, the leaſt whereof is ſufficient to let in the curſe of God upon you Therefore put on the Lord Jeſus, if you would this day appear before God, and be accepted of him. Take care alſo, that your bodies this day be gravely and decently apparelled, and beware of pride and vanity this way, if ye would have God to own you; the adorning which he recommends, is not that of plaiting the hair, wearing of gold, and putting on of apparel, but the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet ſpirit, which it in the ſight of God of great price, 1 Pet. iii. 3. 4. Moſt people on the Sabbath are concerned to adorn their bodies with their beſt cloathes; but, alas! who among you is careful to attire his ſoul as he ought on this day, when he is going to meet the bleſſed Redeemer of ſouls, the King of glory?

Mind your ſouls chiefly this day, and take care, whatever you be doing about your bodies, that your hearts be employed in ſpiritual meditations. Do you comb your head? you may think how numerous your ſins are; they are more than the hairs of your head, ſo that none can reckon them, Pſal. xl. 12. And to be ſure, if you cannot reckon them, you are far leſs able to reckon for them. Do you waſh your hands? think on the neceſſity of waſhing your hands in innocency, that ſo ye may compaſs the altar of God: For theſe that would aſcend the hill of God, and ſtand in his holy place, muſt have clean hands and pure hearts. Holineſs both in heart and life is abſolutely needful, in order to our enjoying communion with God in ordinances.

V. As ſoon as poſſibly you can, retire this morning for the duties of ſecret prayer, praiſe, reading the word, meditation, and ſelf-examination. Much of the Sabbath and eſpecially the morning of it, ſhould be ſpent in praiſing and thankſgiving, upon account of God's goodneſs both common and ſpecial, manifeſted in the works of creation and redemption. It is a moſt neceſſary and proper duty, to ſhew forth God's loving-kindneſs on the Sabbath morning, Pſal. xcii. 2. Thankſgiving is the great end of the day, and of the mercies of it; the redeemed of the Lord ought this day to ſing, His mercy endureth for ever, Pſal. cvii. 2. for God ſent his Son to redeem us for this very end, that he might have from us the praiſe of the glory of his grace, Eph. i. 6. 12. 14. And if you deny him praiſe, you do what you can to diſappoint him of the deſign of this wonderful work: Many ſerious ſouls think the Sabbath ſhould be ſpent only in prayer, mourning, mortification, &c. and almoſt wholly neglect the duty of praiſe, which ought to be the principal, and wherewith God is beſt pleaſed. Remember, that praiſe is not only the end of the day, but the end of your lives; yea, the deſign of all God's works: God made man the tongue of the creation, to trumpet forth aloud what the reſt of the creation do but ſilently whiſper.

Directions in performing the foreſaid duties.

BEfore I proceed further, I ſhall give ſome ſpecial advices concerning the duties of ſecret reading, prayer, and ſelf-ſearching.

I. Of reading the word.

1ſt, As to the reading of God's word, if you would do it with profit, then, 1. Look up to God for his bleſſing upon it: When you begin, pray that he may open your eyes to ſee the wonders of it, and that he may open your ears and hearts to hear and comply with it as the voice of God.

2dly, In reading the word, quicken yourſelves to all poſſible attention. As children will rouze up themſelves at the reading of their father's will, out of expectation of ſome portion or legacy bequeathed them therein by their father; ſo ought you to rouze up yourſelves in reading of the word, in reading of the many rich and precious legacies which our Saviour hath bequeathed to you, in that laſt will and teſtament of his, ſealed by his own blood.

3dly, Read the word with holy reverence, as if Jehovah himſelf ſtood by, and ſpake theſe words unto you; for reading is a kind of holy conference with God, and therefore ought to be gone about with a holy awe and concern. I do not mean that this reverence is to be ſhown to the paper and print, but the matter contained therein; tho' even theſe, as the dead bodies of ſaints, ought not be uſed diſhonourably, as I have heard ſome graceleſs merchants do, by rolling up their ſmall wares in leaves of the bible. Is this like the practice of the ancient martyrs, who made more account of a leaf of the bible than of treaſure? And indeed the leaves of the bible, in ſome ſenſe, are the field where the treaſure is hid, and the pearl of price may be found; they are the ſwadling clothes of the holy Jeſus. And therefore, in the next place, 4thly, Have an eye to Chriſt in every thing ye read, for he is the end, ſcope, and ſubſtance of the whole bible, and every thing in it is reducible to him.

5thly, Read it with application to yourſelves, as if God ſpoke to you by name and ſirname in every line of it. Read it as if it were a letter ſent ſtraight from heaven to you, to warn you againſt ſin, and to perſuade you to faith and holineſs. Let us accept of its reproofs and admonitions with thankfulneſs, and ſay, What a mercy is it that we may read our Father's will in our mother tongue, and that God ſpeaks his mind ſo plainly to us in his word?

6thly, Mark the ſpecial paſſages of the word, either theſe that are moſt important in themſelves, or moſt applicable to you. Mark the duties injoined, and ſins forbidden, with the promiſes to the one, and threatenings againſt the other: Faſten theſe upon your memories, and hide them in your hearts; meditate on them, and pray that God may keep them in your minds, ready for uſe againſt the time of need.

II. Of ſecret prayer.

As for ſecret prayer, take theſe directions, if you would ſpeed in it.

I. See that you be new creatures, and born again, if you would pray aright. A child, while in the womb, cannot cry; ſo no more can you cry, Abba, Father, while in the womb of a natural ſtate. An unconverted man's prayers are not accounted prayers before God: The long prayers which Paul had, while a Phariſee, were not reckoned prayer at all; but, when he is a converted man, we are told then, with a Behold, that he prayed, Acts ix. 11.

II. Be frequent in this duty, for your needs are many. God hath erected the throne of grace for the time of need, Heb. iv. 16. And he hath left the more needs upon us, that he may the oftener hear from us; he loves to hear his people's voice, and great need have we to let him oft hear it; for we have many luſts to be ſubdued, many graces to be ſtrengthened, many doubts to be reſolved, and many grievances to be redreſſed: Therefore be frequent in your addreſſes to God. Frequency begets familiarity, and familiarity confidence; we go boldly to his houſe, we often viſit. Euſebius tells us of the apoſtle James, ſirnamed the Juſt, that he kneeled ſo oft and ſo long in ſecret prayer, that his knees became as callous and inſenſible as a camel's. And he tells us of the firſt Chriſtian emperor, Conſtantine the Great, that he kneeled very much in ſecret prayer: And for an example to others, that he had his image in his coins, pictures and ſtatues, repreſented in the ſame praying poſture, with his hands ſpread abroad, and his eyes lift up to heaven. King David was frequently in this exerciſe, Pſal. lv. 17. Evening, morning, and at noon, will I pray and cry aloud. And, if that be not enough, he ſays, Pſal. cxix. 164. Seven times a-day will I praiſe thee, becauſe of thy righteous judgments.

III. Affect privacy and retirement in it. Strive to let no ear hear but God's; for his ears are open to the moſt whiſpering prayers that can be put up: Not that we ſhould be aſhamed of our duty, but that we may evite miſconſtruction, and hide pride from our eyes; for, when there is a deſire that men ſhould take notice of our prayers, God takes no notice of them, unleſs it be to abhor and reject them. But if you be ſo circumſtanced, that you cannot pray without being obſerved, you cannot help it; for it is better to hazard the cenſure of others, than the neglect of prayer: Only take care there be no oſtentation in the doing of it.

IV. Pray with holy awe and reverence of God, before whom you ſiſt yourſelves. Labour for as much devotion and ſeriouſneſs in prayer, as if you were taken up and preſented before God on his royal throne, with millions of glorious angels miniſtering to him; or, as if you ſaw death and the grave on the one hand, and heaven and hell on the other; or, as if you heard the ſaints ſinging in heaven, or the damned roaring in hell. Do you not believe theſe things as well as if you ſaw them? and why are you not as ſerious as if you did ſee them?

V. Study to pray in faith, eying the power, mercy, and promiſe of God, and relying upon the mediation and righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt; for theſe who pray thus, ſhall not ſeek God in vain. This kind of prayer is like Jonathan's bow, 2 Sam. i. that never returns empty.

VI. Pray with fervency and importunity: Why? for ought you know, this may be the laſt Sabbath you may ſee, the laſt ſermon you may hear, and the laſt prayer you may put up. Pray therefore as a dying man would and ſhould do. Remember how fervent you have ſeen ſome dying perſons in prayer, and labour for the ſame frame and fervency. You ſhould ſeek this day, to have ſuch a feeling of ſpiritual wants, and to have your bowels ſo pinched with a ſenſe thereof, that, like the hungry and almoſt ſtarved beggars, you may cry aloud for the bread of life. Let your prayers be the travail of your ſouls, and not the labour of your lips. Let your hearts be ſuitably affected in all the parts of prayer; never leave confeſſion without ſome ſorrow for ſin, nor petition without ſome ſenſe of the worth of mercies, nor thankſgiving without ſome ſolace and joy in God, the Author and Fountain of all our happineſs. Let your affections correſpond with your expreſſions, and continue inſtant in prayer. You ought this day, like Samſon, Judg. xvi. to bow yourſelves with all your might in prayer, to pull down the pillars of Dagon's temple, and the ſtrong holds of ſin in your ſouls. Lift up your hearts with your hands to God in the heavens, and ſtir up yourſelves to take hold of him: Caſt yourſelves down at his feet, and ſay, as once a great man did to his prince, 'I am 'reſolved never to riſe till I obtain mercy.'

VII. Uſe arguments with God in prayer, either taken from God's power and mercy, or from your miſery and neceſſity. Doſt thou doubt, O man, if thou be converted? then ly ſobbing before God, like that leper, Mat. viii. 'Lord, if thou wilt, thou canſt make 'me clean;' q. d. Lord, thou mayſt do as thou wilt; but this I know, tho' thou ſhouldſt never help me, that thou canſt do it. Thou haſt power enough, yea, it is eaſy for thee, and will be no manner of trouble to thee, to change my heart, and give me an alms of mercy. Thou haſt mercy as well as power; I have heard a good report of thy mercy, that the King of Iſrael is a merciful King and delights not in the death of a ſinner, and that his mercy endures for ever. Lord, here a poor condemned rebel come in upon the proclamation, to accept of the King of heaven's indemnity: I lay myſelf at thy feet, content to accept of mercy upon any terms: Haſt thou not one bleſſing for me, even for poor me, O my Father? If there be not enough of merit in Chriſt to ſave me, I do not ſeek ſalvation; but in him I know there is a fulneſs of redundancy, a treaſure that cannot be emptied. And, Lord, art thou not willing as well as able? Haſt thou not opened thy ſide, that I might look in and ſee the yearning of thy bowels? yea, I have heard them many times ſounding towards loſt ſinners: Why then ſhould I go dwell with everlaſting burnings? 'What profit, 'Lord, is there in my blood? The dead cannot praiſe 'thee, they that go down to the pit cannot celebrate 'thy goodneſs.' Is it not better to make me a friend, than let me be an enemy? Is it not better that I ſhould eternally ſing thy praiſe, than live for ever blaſpheming thy name? 'Lord, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? Is there 'no balm in Gilead for a wounded ſoul?' Is there no hope for a diſtreſſed ſinner? Is there no city of refuge for a purſued criminal? Lord, I am come like a ſtarving beggar to the laſt door for relief, if thou help me not I muſt periſh at thy threſhold, I can go no further. Could we believingly make uſe of ſuch arguments as theſe, Chriſt's pitiful heart would burſt out in midſt thereof, and ſay to us as to the woman of Canaan, Matth. xv. O woman great is thy faith, be it to thee even as thou wilt.

VIII. As on Sabbath morning we ſhould addreſs God with more ſolemnity and intenſeneſs, and with greater length than ordinary; ſo alſo with ſpecial petitions for the day.——1*ſt*. Pray for yourſelves that God may give you hearts and frames to ſanctify a Sabbath to the Lord; that he may prepare your hearts for hearing, ſtrengthen and ſanctify your memories, go alongſt with you to the ſanctuary, and allow his preſence there. Before you enter upon the public work of this day, labour to get your hearts poſſeſſed effectually with theſe truths: That God muſt work his own work in you and for you, or it will never be done; and without him you can do nothing: That there is no healing virtue in the waters of the ſanctuary, unleſs the Angel of his preſence deſcend and move them: That as in the firſt creation the Spirit moved on the waters, and then the living creatures were formed; ſo the Spirit muſt move upon the waters of ordinances, before they can produce or increaſe ſpiritual life: and as he muſt move upon the ordinances, and give virtue to them, ſo he muſt move upon your ſouls in attending on them. Pray earneſtly then, that God may give you his Spirit to prepare you for hearing of his word, and to aſſiſt you in hearing; and particularly, that he may give you attention to hearken, underſtanding to conceive, wiſdom to apply, judgment to diſcern, faith to believe, memory to retain, and grace to practiſe what you ſhall hear; that ſo the word may prove unto you the ſavour of life unto life, and not the ſavour of death unto death. O pray fervently, that it may not be your condemnation to go to the ſanctuary every new Sabbath to get new bands laid upon you, to get your hearts more hardened, your affections more deadned, and your ſouls ſlain by the words of God's mouth; but that the word may be attended with ſaving power, for your conviction of ſin, and your converſion to God in Jeſus Chriſt the Mediator. Be ſo intent for Chriſt's preſence this day, that no Lord's day may ſatisfy you without the Lord of the day. O what is the beſt day that ever was, without the Ancient of days? What are the ordinances of God, without the God of ordinances? What are the aſſemblies of ſaints, without the Maſter of aſſemblies? What's a ſermon, without a Saviour? What's a communion table, without a communion with God? What's a Sabbath day, without the Lord of the Sabbath? Proteſt therefore in a humble but an importunate manner, that you will be ſatisfied with nothing this day, without his preſence; ſay with Moſes, Exod. xxxiii. 5. If thy preſence go not with me carry us not up hence. And cry to him with the church, Iſa. lxvi. 1 O that thou wouldſt this day rend the heavens! O that thou wouldſt come down, that the mountains might flow at thy preſence.

2*dly*, Pray for him that diſpenſeth the word, that God may open to him both a door of utterance, and a door of entrance; and particularly, that God may direct him to ſpeak ſomething that may be ſuitable to your caſe. It is a great loſs to yourſelves, as well as to miniſters, that you pray ſo little for them: What is the reaſon that many times miniſters are ſtraitned in delivery, do not reach your hearts nor ſpeak cloſly to your caſe? it is becauſe you pray not for them. Mind that ſad threatening, Ezek. iii. 26. where the Spirit ſaith to the prophet. I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou ſhalt be dumb, and ſhalt not be to them a reprover: for they are a rebellious houſe. O pray againſt this ſad judgment, and beg that God may looſe the miniſter's tongue and put a word in his mouth for you. Can you expect a bleſſing on your food, when you will not ſo much as ſeek it from God, by praying for him that is to break the bread of life to you?

3*dly*, Pray for the whole congregation, that the Sabbath may be a day of the Son of man, and a day of God's power unto them: Pray that Chriſt may mount the white horſe of the goſpel, gird his ſword on his thigh, and ride in triumph among them; that the arrows of his word may be ſharp, and pierce hearts. Beg that ſome may be convinced, others ſtrengthened, and others comforted: Pray that God's word preached, may not only be as a loving ſong to the hearers, as Ezek. xxxiii. but as a lively ſong to them, that many may have it to ſay as David, Pſal. cxix. 50. Thy word hath quickned me. Pray that God may this day make his word as a ſharp two edged ſword, to divide betwixt ſinners and their ſins; that he may cauſe its point prick their hearts and ſavingly wound their conſciences, and make its edge fetch blood from their luſts, yea hew them in pieces like Agag, before the Lord.——Pray that God may make his word both as a fire and a hammer to the congregation; a fire to burn up the ſtubble of their corruptions, and a hammer to break the rock of their hearts into pieces.——Pray that it may be as the key of David, both to open and ſhut many hearts on this day; a key to open hearts, ſo as they may never more be ſhut upon Chriſt when he ſtands and knocks at them; and a key to ſhut hearts, ſo that they may never open to ſin and ſatan when they knock for entrance.——Pray that the whole congregation may get grace to hear ſermons, and put up prayers this day, as if they were the laſt that ever they were to hear or put up in this world:——And that Zion's King may take to himſelf his glorious conquering power, and in his majeſty ride proſperouſly; and that he may make the arrows of his word ſharp in the hearts of his enemies, ſo that the people may fall under him.

IX. You muſt take care, that your ſecret prayers on Sabbath morning be early and ſeaſonable, that they interfere not with family worſhip, which ought this morning to be timeouſly performed before the public worſhip begin; for one duty muſt not juſtle with another, every duty is beautiful in its ſeaſon. And in family-prayer you muſt be more ſolemn and particular than at other occaſions; our ſacrifices this day ought to be doubled. O it were happy, if ſecret and family duties were our ſouls delight on this day; and if we had ſuch ſpiritual ſkill to perform them, that they might be helps, not hindrances to public ordinances.

Laſtly, Having this morning put up your fervent prayers to God, you ought to look and wait for a return of them through the day. A wiſe merchant, that ſends a ſhip to the ſea, will enquire after her. Prayer brings your food from afar, look what becomes of it. If you preſent a petition to a prince, you wait what anſwer will be returned; and are ye not much more concerned in this caſe to do it? If you look not after your prayers, it a ſign you have little ſenſe of your needs; little ſenſe of the burden and yoke of ſin; little ſenſe of the preciouſneſs of Chriſt, or the excellency of theſe mercies you have been ſeeking. You ought this day to be able to ſay, as Pſal. xxv. 5. On thee do I wait all the day. Your ſouls ſhould be ſtill panting after God and the light of his countenance, ſaying, "O that I may this day behold the beauty of "the Lord! O that I may ſee his power and glory! "O that I may taſte that he is good! O that I may "hear his voice, may bear his image, may be brought "into the chamber of preſence, and ſee him through "the latteſs of ordinances!"

If ye would have a gracious return this day, you muſt be looking above ordinances and duties to him who is the dew of Iſrael, and expect the heavenly rain from himſelf; otherwiſe your fleece will remain dry, for all that men or angels can do. Therefore plead with God that he will bleſs and concur with the means, and breathe upon your dry bones, without which the breath of men can never make them alive.

III. Of ſelf-ſearching.

As to the duty of ſelf-ſearching, it is very neceſſary on the Sabbath morning, in order to prepare your ſouls for the work of the day.

I. Enquire into your own ſtate; try whether you be in nature or grace, that, when you hear the word, you may know what belongs to you: For if you be ignorant of your condition you may apply promiſes for threatenings; conclude for heaven, when you are heirs of wrath; perſuade yourſelves of the love of God, when you are in a ſtate of enmity.

II. Enquire into your particular neceſſities, what are theſe wants you would have ſupplied by the word, theſe ſins and luſts you would have ſlain by it, what are theſe weak graces you would have ſtrengthened by it, what are theſe doubts you would have reſolved by it, and theſe heart plagues you would have cured.

III. Enquire into the frames of your hearts, and ſee if they be duly qualified and diſpoſed for attending the public ordinances.

Queſt. What ſort of hearts ought we to bring with us?

Anſ. 1ſt, Bring humble hearts. Conſider that you are pieces of mean and vile duſt venturing into the preſence of an infinitely glorious God, to hear the voice of the Lord, that is full of majeſty, and ſolemnly to converſe with him, before whom the angels vail their faces.

2dly, Bring ſoft hearts, that the word may make ſome impreſſion on them; for an arrow ſhot againſt a ſtone ſticks not but falls to the ground. Labour to get the fallow ground of your hearts plowed up, and broken, before you come to receive the ſeed of the word, according to Hoſea x. 11. If you would have the fallow ground plowed up, you muſt ſeek the Lord by fervent and heart-breaking prayer.

3dly, Bring hunger and thirſt with you to God's banqueting houſe; bring a deep ſenſe of ſoul wants and neceſſities, and longing deſires to meet with Chriſt in the ordinances: For he fills the hungry with good things, when the rich are ſent away empty. O for the hungry appetites of God's children, when we come to God's houſe! Say, "O that, like a new-born child, I may "this day deſire the ſincere milk of the word for my "nouriſhment! and, O that, like a true child of my "heavenly Father, I may love that milk beſt which "comes warm from the breaſts of public ordinances!"

IV. Search into theſe luſts and evils that hinder the ſucceſs of ordinances; caſt them out, and guard carefully againſt them. If you would have God this day to hear your prayers, and accept of your ſacrifices, you muſt regard no iniquity in your hearts you muſt throw out all boſom luſts and idols. Chriſt ſaith to you this day, as once he did to Judas in another caſe, John xviii. 8. If therefore you ſeek me, let theſe go their way: Let your pride, worldlineſs, prejudice, &c. go away; for they bar Chriſt out of the heart.

1. Throw out worldlineſs, and all thoughts about the world, that you may with your whole ſouls this day attend upon God: Say to the cares of the world, as Abraham to his ſervants, Gen. xxii. Stay ye here till I go yonder to worſhip God. Suffer not a vain thought this day to take up its lodging in your heart, according to Jer. iv. 14. It is ſaid of Bernard, that, when he came to the church door, he would ſay, Stay here, all my earthly thoughts. Nay, ſay this alſo before you come from home. Worldly hearts will hinder you from getting good of the ordinances; they will make the church like the market-place to you, full of tumult and diſtraction; they will make ſuch a noiſe and buzzing in your ears, that you cannot hear; or they will make you wander in time of hearing, as theſe, Ezek. xxxiii 31. Nay, they will make you weary of all Sabbath work, as theſe; Amos viii. 5.

2. Lay aſide ſelf-conceit, or a good opinion of yourſelves, your duties and performances; count all theſe but dung and loſs for the ſaving knowledge of Chriſt. For, if you lean upon your prayers and preparations this day as any piece of righteouſneſs before God, this will mar your acceſs to God this day, and make the ordinances prove dry breaſts to you.

3. Throw out all prejudices againſt miniſters and againſt the laws of Chriſt; and with meekneſs lay your ear and heart open to receive inſtruction, ſaying with Paul, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? and with Samuel, Speak, Lord, for thy ſervant heareth.

4. Guard againſt doubtings concerning the truths of God, and myſteries of religion: Let us captivate and ſubject reaſon to faith, and deal with it, as Joſhua did with the Gibeonites; he made them hewers of wood, and drawers of water for the ſervice of the temple: So let us make reaſon ſubject to faith, and ſervicable to religion; but nowiſe ſet it up as a ſtandard for examining its myſteries by, ſince they are above its reach.

5. Beware of erroneous principles; for theſe will mar the good of ordinances to you; while there is an error in the foundation, you cannot be built up in the moſt holy faith. Chriſt bids us be wiſe as ſerpents; and ſerpents (they ſay) whatever injury is offered to them, their great care is to preſerve their head. Let it be our great care then, not only to preſerve our hearts and hands from ſin, but our heads from error; eſpecially when there are ſo many falſe teachers going abroad, ſeeking to pervert the ſimple, by fair words and falſe ſpeeches.

6. Beware likewiſe of ſchiſm and diviſion, and guard againſt theſe who are inſtruments to divide and ſcatter Chriſt's ſheep. Do not ſtraggle from Chriſt's flock, but abide cloſe by the place where the good Shepherd feeds his flock, and makes them to reſt at noon, and do not turn aſide after the flocks of the companions, Cant. i. 7.

I refer the handling of the duties of maſters of families, as ſuch, till afterwards: Only, it ought to be their care early to call their families together to pray with them, and praiſe God; and to cauſe them riſe as early this day as others. Let not your ſervants and children waſte away this morning in ſleep and idleneſs, but call them up as early to God's work this day, as you do to your own upon other days.

How blame worthy are theſe families, and eſpecially the maſters thereof, who on week-days can riſe betimes to follow their worldly buſineſs, but on the Lord's day do ly longer in bed than ordinary, giving themſelves to carnal eaſe and reſt? Is this to keep holy the Sabbath-day, thus to ſleep and loiter, away the firſt and chiefeſt part thereof? Is this the way to accompliſh the work of the Sabbath, to promote the glory of God and carry on the work of your ſalvation? All of you have great work to do this day; therefore riſe early to it, as the Iſraelites did to the beſieging of Jericho: They had been encompaſſing the city ſix days before; but we are told, Joſh. vi. 15. That on the ſeventh day, they roſe early about the dawning of the day, and compaſſed the city ſeven times: And ſo that day they became maſters of the city. And, according to the beſt expoſitors, this ſeventh day, on which the walls of Jericho, fell down, was the Sabbath. Now, O Chriſtian, as the Iſraelites had the ſtrong walls of Jericho ſo haſt thou the ſtrong holds of ſin to batter down this day; thou haſt theſe Canaanites to conquer, which would keep thee out of the promiſed land: Therefore imitate the Iſraelites, and riſe early this morning to your work: The walls are thick, your enemies ſtrong; if you would expect then to conquer on the Sabbath day, and triumph againſt night, ſee that you begin the ſiege early.

And, if you would manage the work ſucceſsfully, you muſt ſet about and carry it on conjunctly, as well as ſeparately; by family prayer, as well as ſecret prayer: And ſee that all in the family attend family worſhip this morning. Likewiſe, as occaſion offers, exhort your children and ſervants to prepare themſelves for the public worſhip by the performance of ſecret duties, particularly reading and prayer. When you are at meat this morning, ſhew by your holy ſpeeches, that your minds are not forgetful of the work of the day. Check playing and idle talking, both in children and ſervants, and labour to engage them by your example, to ſhew a more grave and ſerious air in their countenances this morning, than upon other occaſions.

Let as many of them as can be conveniently ſpared, accompany you to the public ordinances; and ſuffer none of them to be abſent therefrom, except in caſes of neceſſity. Remember the fourth command, Thou, thy ſon, thy daughter, thy man ſervant and thy maid ſervant, and all within thy gates. Let not the dreſſing of meat for you keep ſervants from the houſe God this day; but ſee that you be able to ſay with Cornelius, (who feared the Lord with all his houſe) We are all here preſent before God.——Tho' children be young, yet bring them with you; for they are capable of getting good by the word ſooner than we are aware. The ſcripture takes ſeveral times notice of little ones in the ſolemn aſſemblies, Deut. xxix. 11. Ezra x. 1. Acts xxi. 5. If we lay our children by the pool-ſide, who knows how early the Spirit of God may help them in, and heal them? Take your families alongſt with you to the church; leave them not behind you, to come ſtraggling to the church after worſhip is begun; nor allow them to drop away before it be ended. This is very undecent and diſorderly; you would not allow them to do ſo with reſpect to your work. If you were going to the harveſt field, you would not ſuffer them to come or go when they pleaſed. No, you would oblige them all to be ready timeouſly to come forth together, and fall to their work at once, and tarry till they looſed from work together: And ſhould you not be as much concerned for God's work, as for your own; for the buſineſs of eternity, as for the affairs of time?

Concerning our going to the church.

In the next place, let me give ſome advices relating to your behaviour in going to the church, proper eſpecially for you whoſe houſes ly ſomewhat remote from it.

Having dreſſed your ſouls, as well as may be, this morning according to the foreſaid directions, go forth, watching over your hearts and ſenſes, having the lively impreſſion of God's eyes upon you, and believing that he takes ſpecial notice of all your thoughts, words and actions this day.

If you walk in company with others, take heed to your words, that they be ſavoury and ſuitable. O that people would guard againſt worldly diſcourſe in their going to the church (which very much diſcompoſeth the heart for the public worſhip) and would talk of ſpiritual ſubjects, of the deſign and work of the day, and encourage one another to it! How pleaſant would this be! This was the ancient practice of God's people, Zech. viii. 21. and we ſee how much David is taken with it, Pſal. cxxii. 1. I was glad, when they ſaid unto me, Let us go into the houſe of the Lord; q. d. It was the moſt pleaſant ſound I heard all the week thro', to hear people encouraging one another to aſſemble to God's public worſhip, in God's houſe upon God's day. This to him was the moſt pleaſant journey ever he went; he was not backward to it, he did not weary of it: nay, it was the joy and life of his ſoul; he was glad of it. How few among us are in this frame! Alas! inſtead of it, there are many in our day glad of any trifling excuſe to ſtay them at home, or take them away from the afternoon's ſermon.

If you live at ſome diſtance from the church, and be tryſted with carnal company by the way, who ſavour nothing but the world; it is beſt for thee to retire from them to thine own meditations, leſt thou be infected with their carnal and corrupt communications: For even a Peter, when he is converſing and warming his hands with the enemies of Chriſt, his heart turns ice cold and frozen to Chriſt his Maſter, till a love blink from the Sun of righteouſneſs thawed it again.

If better meditations offer not to thee by the way, I ſhall furniſh thee with ſome very ſuitable from natural things, which are objects of your ſenſes.

If it be in a winter morning thou goeſt out, when the ſun is but riſing, think, if one ſun make ſo bright a morning, what a ſhining morning will that be, when Chriſt, with all his bright angels and ſaints, ſhall break through the clouds, when there ſhall be as many ſuns as we ſee ſtars in a winter's night? O! ſhall I be one of theſe that ſhall ſhine as the ſun in the kingdom of my Father?

If it be in the ſpring time, and when a pleaſant rain is falling upon the graſs and corns, think, the Sabbath ſhould be a grow day for believers. This day God is as the dew to Iſrael. O that my ſoul may grow as the lily, and revive as the corn! O that I may grow inward in ſincerity, and outward in good works: downward in humility, and upward in heavenly mindedneſs! Let the doctrine of God's word this day drop on my ſoul, as the ſmall rain upon the tender herb, and as the ſhowers upon the graſs, that I may wax taller in grace, and ſtronger in faith and love. This day I ſhould be going from ſtrength to ſtrength, according to Pſal. lxxxiv. 7. As the bee is buſy in going from flower to flower, ſtill gathereth honey as ſhe paſſeth; ſo ſhould I this day go from duty to duty, from one ordinance to another, from praying to reading, from reading to hearing, from hearing to meditating, ſtill gathering grace and ſtrength as I go.

Doſt thou look to the heavens? Think I have my Saviour and my all there; there is the place of my everlaſting abode. Senſe tells me what the outſide of it is; yet that ſpangled roof over my head is but the pavement of that glorious palace, where I ſhall enjoy my eternal Sabbath, and my everlaſting reſt in Chriſt's boſom. O my ſoul yonder is Goſhen, the region of light; yon twinkling ſtars, ſhining moon, and flaming ſun, are but as lanterns hanging out at thy Father's houſe to light thee, while thou walkeſt in the dark-ſtreets of the earth. Little doſt thou know the glory, mirth and joy that are within: O what are worldlings joy to them! O let my affections and deſires this day mount thither, that this may be one of the days of heaven to my ſoul!

Again, think, the Lord hath ſpread out the heaven as a curtain, Pſal. civ. 2. and, notwithſtanding of its rapid motion, this curtain hath continued ſpread near theſe ſix thouſand years, and not one hole is to be ſeen in it to this day. Is not heaven then a ſafe a place for me to lay up my treaſure in, where none can break thro' and ſteal it from me? O that my portion and treaſure may be there; 'that, where my treaſure is, there my heart may be alſo!'

Doſt thou ſee the clouds? Think on the day when Chriſt will rend and break thro' them; as he went up triumphing in a cloud to heaven, in like manner he ſhall come again. Are the heavens of ſuch bright and pure matter? Think on the purity of the inhabitants thereof. There is no room, no, not a foot breadth for impure perſons in the heavenly Jeruſalem, where the gates are of pearl; no profane ſinner, no unclean thing ſhall enter there.

When thou walkeſt on the ground, think, this whole earth is but my Father's footſtool, that he hath given me to tread on: O how glorious then muſt his palace be! yet it is mine in Chriſt.—Again, this earth hangs upon nothing, Job xxvi. 27. O ſhall I be ſo fooliſh as to hang my hopes upon that which hangs on nothing?—Again, wonder at God's power and faithfulneſs, that, notwithſtanding it hangs as a ball in the air, and hath had many dreadful tempeſts upon it, and terrible earthquakes within it, yet God hath kept it from moving out of its place near theſe ſix thouſand years paſt.

Doſt thou tread upon the graſs? Think how God calls thee thereby to remember thy fading life and withering condition, every ſtep thou makeſt, Iſa. xl. 6. All fleſh is graſs, and death is coming with his ſcythe to mow down this graſs: And, tho' ſome graſs eſcape the ſcythe in ſummer, when it is freſh and green, yet the winter froſt will wither it away; ſo tho' you eſcape the ſcythe of death in the ſummer of your youth, yet the winter of old age will come and wither you.

Doſt thou paſs over a little brook or rivulet in the way? Think, O if I could ſay this day with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. xlii. 1. 2. As the heart pants after the water brooks, ſo panteth my ſoul after thee, O God; my ſoul thirſteth for God, for the living God; when ſhall I come and appear before God?

Doſt thou go up an aſcent? Think, the way to heaven is all up the hill, Pſal. xxiv. Lord, ſtrengthen me to climb it, without fainting or ſliding back. O that my ſoul this day may be aſcending to God, and God may be deſcending to me!

Doſt thou behold the ſea? Wonder at the ebbing and flowing of it, and at God's power and goodneſs, that ſets reſtraining bounds to it. How eaſily might that power, that makes it to flow 20 foot, make it flow 200 foot? and ſo it would overflow our ſea towns and adjacent coaſts; but the Lord's goodneſs commands it back again by its ebb.

Doſt thou ſee a ſhip in the ſea? Think, Chriſt's church is compared to a ſhip; this world is the ſea, through which ſhe ſails; believers are the paſſengers; God is her pilot; the angels are her rowers; faith is the helm; hope is the anchor: For a maſt, ſhe hath, in midſt of her erected the ſaving tree of the croſs; the graces are the ſails hanging thereon; the Spirit is the wind that fills them; but Chriſt alone is the bottom that carries all ſafe and ſure to the haven of eternal reſt and felicity. O let my ſoul lean upon no other bottom. Again, think how mercifully Chriſt delivered his diſciples when toſſed in a ſhip, on the ſea in a dark night.——My ſoul is a little ſhip, often ready to be overwhelmed with the waves of temptations: O then, when it is in this danger, let me awake Chriſt by my prayers.——Again, as it is ſaid of the mariner, with reſpect to his ſhip, that he ſails always within four inches of death; ſo it may be ſaid of the ſoul in relation to the body, that it lives ſtill within four inches of eternity. If theſe earthen veſſels break, then our ſouls are immediately ſet a drift into the bankleſs and bottomleſs ocean of eternity. Lord, let not my ſoul lanch out into the deep, while I am uncertain whether it ſink or ſwim.

Doth it rain upon thee while the ſun is ſhining? Think, if the ſun of God's countenance ſhine on me, I may be well content to be wet with ſome rain of affliction: This eaſily doth counterbalance any trouble whatſoever.

Art thou drawing near to the church? Then put up ſome fervent ejaculations and prayers for God's bleſſing and preſence. Say as Abraham's ſervant did, when he came to the well of water near the city, Gen. xxiv. 12. 'O Lord God, I pray thee ſend me good ſpeed this day. Let me not miſs my errand; let it be the day when ſalvation ſhall come to my heart and houſe; let it be the day of my new birth, the day when my hard heart will be broken; let it be a day to be had in everlaſting remembrance——As I am drawing nigh to thy houſe, Lord, draw nigh to my ſoul, and let me have a meeting with thee this day. As thou art to knock at the doors of my ſoul by the hammer of thy word this day, Lord, come and make patent doors for thyſelf, and command thy loving-kindneſs to break in. Lord open my eyes, that I may ſee the wonders of thy law; open my ears, that I may hear the charming voice of the Son of God; open my heart, that the King of glory may enter in; and open my lips, that my mouth may ſhew forth thy praiſe.'

Doſt thou come within ſight of the church? Let thy heart rejoice to ſee Jeruſalem a quiet habitation, and pray that God may ſtill create a cloud of defence upon every dwelling place in mount Zion, and upon all her aſſemblies; and that the mountain of the Lord's houſe may be exalted above all mountains. We ought to be much concerned for the church, and prefer Jeruſalem above our chief joy. Let us do, in a ſpiritual way, what Simon Maccabæus did in a natural, who, with three years labour, took down the top of the mount Acra in Jeruſalem, that no hill there might compete in height with the temple of God: So let us cauſe the greateſt mountain of ſecular intereſt vail to the mountain of the houſe of the Lord.

Do you ſee a poor man begging by the way? Let it awaken your gratitude and thankfulneſs, that you are not in his caſe, and he in yours; and that you are not begging from him, inſtead of his begging from you. Hearken, how importunate ſome beggars are; with what warm and feeling expreſſions do they plead? they uncover their ſores, and ſhew their maladies, and uſe all methods to move our compaſſions; when we think to put them off with excuſes or refuſals, yet they follow us, and by their importunity draw an alms from us: Then think with yourſelves, O why do not I thus with God? why am I ſo careleſs in ſeeking an alms of mercy from him? is not my need greater than any beggar's? is not the alms I am ſeeking far better? is not the fulneſs and pity of the Giver infinitely more? and ſhall I be ſo formal and lifeleſs in prayer? It was a good counſel of one, that bade people learn to pray of beggars.

As it is one of the duties of this day to make collections, and beſtow alms for the relief of the poor; ſo you ſhould take heed that you perform this duty in the right manner, that you do it not for the praiſe of men, but for the glory of God. Pray that your alms may be perfumed by the incenſe of Chriſt's merits, that they may be a ſweet ſmelling ſacrifice unto God. Would you have a bountiful alms from God this day? then give liberally to his poor. Remember Chriſt's eye is upon you, and noticeth from heaven what every one caſts into his poor this day, as well as he noticed the poor widow's caſting in her two mites into the treaſury, when he was here upon earth. Tho' you have not much to yourſelf, yet you are bound to give ſomewhat; and, if it be given in ſincerity, God will graciouſly accept of it, tho' it be but two mites. Be ſure this will never break you, nor waſte your ſubſtance, but rather increaſe it, and obtain a bleſſing thereon. I pity thoſe miſerable perſons who want not money to tipple and drink with, but yet have none to beſtow upon God's poor.

Directions concerning the public worſhip.

I Proceed to the ſecond thing propoſed, What is neceſſary to be done in time of public worſhip, and when we enter into the church.

I. Keep thy foot when thou goeſt into the houſe of God, Eccl. v. i. e. Look to you affections, which are the feet of the ſoul, by which men go to God, and walk or converſe with him. Firmly believe, and conſtantly remember, that God's eye is very much on your behaviour while you are in his houſe. Therefore in the tabernacle, which was the place of public worſhip, it was commanded, Exod. xxv. 37. Thou ſhalt make ſeven lamps, and they ſhall light the lamps that they may give light; to teach us, that nothing there could eſcape God's ſight; for in his houſe there was always light. You cannot ſin in ſecret there, for there are ſeven lamps to diſcover your miſcarriages in the Lord's houſe. And, when the temple ſucceeded the tabernacle, God ſays of it, 1 Kings ix. 3. Mine eye ſhall be there perpetually. God hath an eye, 1*ſt*, Of obſervation, Jer. xvi. 17. to notice with what ſincerity and livelineſs you offer your ſervices and performances. 2*dly*, An eye of good will, Amos ix. 4. to approve and bleſs you, if you worſhip him ſincerely and faithfully. 3*dly*, An eye of indignation, Jer. xxi. 10. to bring wrath on you, if you approach God irreverently, worſhip him careleſly, and profane his day. Now, you may be aſſured of it, that God is as jealous of his courts under the goſpel as he was under the law, and doth take ſpecial notice of his people's behaviour there; for he tells us, Where two or three are gathered in his name he is in the midſt of them, Matth. xviii. 20.

As you ought to have a lively ſenſe of God's omniſcience when you enter God's houſe, ſo you ought to have awful impreſſions of God's greatneſs, into whoſe preſence you come, and a deep ſenſe of your vileneſs and unworthineſs to appear before him: And therefore be putting up ejaculations to God for acceptance in Chriſt Jeſus. I do not mean that you ſhould ſtand up (as ſome do) to private prayer in a public way, as the Phariſees did of old in the ſynagogues, to be ſeen of men, for which our Saviour reproves them, Mat. vi. 5. 6. telling us, that ſecret prayer ſhould be performed in a ſecret manner: And far leſs ſhould this be practiſed (as ſome do) when the congregation is employed in other worſhip: for this were a confounding of worſhip, and unacceptable to him who is the God of order, and is plainly reproved by the apoſtle; 1 Cor. xiv. Alas! it is to be ſuſpected of many that do ſo, that theſe are all the prayers they uſe on Sabbath morning for preparing themſelves or their families for the public worſhip. But, if you come in before worſhip be begun, it is very proper you have your private ejaculations, and be lifting up your thoughts to heaven in a private manner; and, when you are ſet down in your ſeats, ſee if you be able to give a ſatisfying anſwer to that queſtion the Lord put to the prophet, 1 Kings xix. 13. What doſt thou here, Elijah? Can you ſay, "Lord, I have come, at thy command, " to the place where thy honour dwelleth, to the " place where thou uſeſt to tryſt with thy people, that " I might meet with thee, and get a glimpſe of thy " countenance?" Alas! it is much to be regrated, that many come to church, they cannot tell for what end, like theſe Epheſians, mentioned Acts xix. 32. The more part knew not wherefore they were come together. They come for nothing, and they ordinarly go away with nothing.

But as for you, whoſe errand is to meet with God, and get quickening to your ſouls, look to the frame of your hearts, ſet yourſelves to hear God's word, and join in his worſhip with great reverence and fear; conſider, not only miniſters (God's ambaſſadors) are preſent, but the glorious angels are preſent, nay, the God of angels himſelf is preſent; therefore ſay as Jacob did of Bethel, Gen. xxviii. 16, 17. Surely the Lord is in this place.—How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the houſe of God, and the gate of heaven. In every part of God's worſhip this day, whether ſinging, praying, hearing, partaking, ſtudy to behave as one that believes he is ſiſted in the preſence of the all-ſeeing God, as one that is working for his immortal ſoul, as one that within a few days ſhall enter the gates of death, and render an account at the bar of the great Judge of the world.

II. Study to be at the beginning of worſhip, that you may be able to ſay with Cornelius, Acts x. 33. Now we are all here preſent before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. Think not that you are in time if you win to the lecture or ſermon, though you miſs the prayers that went before; for, if you ſinfully miſs theſe, you have no ground to expect good by the whole day's preaching. ſince it is by the means of the public prayers that the word is ſanctified to you, and you are prepared for it; and what good can the word do you, if God bleſs it not to you? and how can you look for the bleſſing, if you come not to ſeek it? It is not the way to profit by one ordinance, to neglect another. To be late of coming is offenſive to God, ſtumbling to ſerious Chriſtians, and injurious to our own ſouls. Alas! upon what ſmall and frivolous excuſes do many ſtay back from the public worſhip, or linger in coming to it? A little buſineſs, a little rain, ſnow or cold will detain them from the means of ſalvation. You that cannot hear the word, or come in time to God's worſhip for a little cold now, conſider what an alteration there will be in hell; there it will be hot enough, and you ſhall not have liberty of hearing. Did the cold hinder you? there the heat ſhall puniſh you for it. Doth a little rain or ſnow keep you at home, when Chriſt is calling you to receive him? How then will you endure that horrible tempeſt, which he will rain on goſpel ſlighters, even a flood of kindled brimſtone that will never ceaſe nor quench.

III. When you firſt ſee the miniſter this day in the pulpit, think, "O how welcome ſhould I make him "that bringeth glad tidings, even the news of reconciliation to a periſhing world? Lord, how great is "thy clemency to us this day, in ſending thy ambaſſadors with an olive-branch of peace, and not a trumpet of war in their mouths?" Conſider our reiterated rebellions and provocations, it might have been expected we ſhould have had a fearful meſſage ſent us, like that of the flying angel, Rev. viii. ult. Wo, wo, wo to the inhabitants of the earth, &c. But, inſtead of this, we have the ſweet meſſage in Iſa. iv. 1. renewed, "Ho, every one that thirſteth, come to the waters, and he that hath no money, come, buy," &c. and that in ver. 7. "Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him," &c. That is a joyful ſound. "How then ſhall we eſcape, if we neglect ſo great ſalvation?"

IV. Study to be devout and reverend in the public worſhip both as to the frame of your mind, and geſture of your body. It was a good advice of one, for this end. Fix your eye on the miniſter, your ear on the word, and your heart on God. Awe your hearts into a holy reverence, by viewing the holineſs and power of that God whom ye worſhip, and revolving his titles of majeſty; ſo did the pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxxix. 6, 7, 8. Who in heaven can be compared to the Lord? &c.——God is greatly to be feared in the aſſembly of his ſaints, &c—O Lord God of hoſts, who is a ſtrong Lord like unto thee? &c. Make a covenant with your eyes, that they gaze not about in ſpying your neighbours cloaths and geſtures. A gadding eye is the ready way to make a wandering heart. The devil hath many objects to tempt and divert us; firſt men let looſe their eyes, and then away goes the heart. Make a covenant with your eyes this day, that they neither ſhut with ſleep, nor wander after vanity.—Tho' bodily ſervice without the heart profiteth little, yet the worſhip of our bodies is not to be wholly ſlighted; God hath a right to the adoration of our bodies as well as our ſouls, for Chriſt ſuffered for both, 1 Cor. vi. 20. And we find Chriſt and the ſaints in the ſcripture uſing reverent geſtures in prayer. I dare not preciſely reſtrict people to any one particular geſture in public prayer, neither deſire I to lay more ſtreſs upon geſtures than they will hear, ſince I know communion with God may be obtained in any geſture; yet I muſt own, that it is the unhappy effect of our contention about geſtures that ſome ſerious perſons, who have a devout reſpect to God and holy things, do yet ſeem more irreverent in their outward carriage, than ſome who are ſtrangers to the power of godlineſs and immoral in their converſations. I know theſe place all their religion in outward geſtures and forms, and go no further; yet this warrants none to run to the other extreme, to deſpiſe a decent or devout geſture. If weakneſs of nature require a perſon to ſit in time of public prayer, I do not quarrel it, but, when no juſt cauſe can be pleaded for it, I cannot ſay that it is a ſuitable praying poſture at public worſhip. A lazy ſluggiſh poſture in prayer tends to bring on ſleep and drowſineſs, and make us forget what we are about; whereas, when we ſtand up, and univerſally change our poſture when public prayer begins, it helps to awaken people to think upon the ſolemn addreſſes they are making to the great God. Only let us take care, that there be no vanity, ſelf-conceit, or affectation in the poſtures of our bodies at worſhip.

V. Come to hear the word with a ſincere purpoſe to obey it, and comply with the whole will of God without reſerve, be it pleaſant or harſh to nature; be ready to perform every known duty, and part with every known ſin, be it as dear as your right-hand, or right eye. It is not enough to ſay, We are all preſent to hear the ſermon; but you muſt ſay with Cornelius and his company, Acts x. We are preſent to hear all things commanded us of God. And in a ſpecial manner you muſt be ready to hear and obey his great command, of beliving on the name of his Son, which is the great end of preaching and hearing. Wherefore, when Chriſt knocks by his word at the door of your heart, be ready to open, and welcome him in with joy; ſay to him, as Laban to Abraham's ſervant, Gen. xxiv. 31. Come in thou bleſſed of the Lord; wherefore ſtandeſt thou without? Tho' alas I cannot ſay what follows, I have prepared the houſe, yet, Lord come in and prepare it for thyſelf: And tho' I be unworthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof, yet a word from thee can cleanſe and repair the houſe, yea, and prepare an upper room for thyſelf; Lord, ſpeak the word, and it ſhall be done.

VI. Give cloſe attention to the word. God looſes you this day from the world, that you may attend on the Lord without diſtraction, 1 Cor. vii. 35. Attend this day to what your Lord ſaith to you, as men who believe that every Sabbath and every ſermon, that every prayer and exhortation, every call and offer of grace, bring you a ſtep nearer heaven, or nearer hell; nearer to the manſions with Chriſt, or to a dwelling with devils; and that endleſs eternity depends upon your attention to God's word. How attentively would a condemned rebel hearken to his prince, every word being either life or death to him! Conſider, it is matter of life and death to you, yea, your life through all the ages of never ending eternity; your life depends on right hearing, Deut. xxxii. 47. And will you not take head? You would have God attentive to your words in the time of your diſtreſs, and will you not be attentive to his words in the time of your health? Could a miniſter tell you how you might acquire a good eſtate, or where you might find a rich treaſure, you would hearken to that; but, for an inheritance or treaſure in heaven, many think it not worth their while to notice: Is not this an argument of ſtrong carnality and atheiſm? O if we could imitate Chriſt's hearers, Luke xix. 48. it is ſaid, They were all very attentive to hear him; the word attentive according to the original, may be rendered, They hanged on him, or They hanged their ears at Chriſt's lips! Let us, in like manner, hang upon Chriſt in hearing of the word, even as the child doth upon the breaſt, or as the bee upon a flower.

There is nothing that ſatan aims at more, than to divert your attention in time of hearing the word. This enemy of your ſouls is buſy every day laying ſnares for you, ſeeking your ruin: But, O how active is he every Lord's day! The devil is ſtill firſt at church; the children of God never gather together, but ſatan is among them: And his great deſign is, to render this engine of the word fruitleſs, becauſe by it the ſtrong holds of his kingdom have been battered and broken down. Now, the way he finds moſt ſucceſs is, by tempting our eyes and thoughts to wander, in order to keep us from being attentive in time of hearing. O then if we would have the word to profit us, let us watch againſt ſatan's temptations and ſuggeſtions; let us guard againſt wandering, wearying, drowſineſs, or any thing that may hinder our attention. And for thoſe that can write quickly, to write down the heads of the ſermon in time of hearing, is by ſome reckoned a good mean to engage the attention, prevent drowſineſs, and help the memory afterwards; and ſome have found it very refreſhing and edifying a long time after, to be looking over what they had written. But eſpecially it is proper for young people to learn and uſe this way of writing.

VII. In a ſpecial manner, take heed to the word that ſuits your caſe, and moſt concerns your ſoul; particularly, to that word that diſcovers the ſinfulneſs and vileneſs of a poor ſoul by nature; and to that word that points out the miſery of the unbeliever, and that ſhews the weight of thoſe curſes, the terror of the wrath, and ſeverity of divine juſtice, to which he is hourly expoſed; and to that word that ſets out ſin in its black and bloody colours; to that word that ſhews your inability to help yourſelf out of your miſerable ſtate;——to that word that diſcovers your need of Chriſt, and his excellency, fitneſs and ſuitableneſs for you; and to that word that comes cloſe home to your conſcience, and tells you as Nathan did David, Thou art the man, thou art the poor loſt ſinner that is condemned, and for ever undone, without Chriſt. Take heed to that word that points out your particular ſins, your predominate luſts and idols; take with the charge, and cry out, Unclean, unclean. While hearing the word, you ought to place your ſins, and eſpecially your darling luſts, in the front of the battle (as Uriah) purpoſely to be ſlain, and ſay, "Lord, "let theſe ſmooth ſtones taken out of the brook of the "ſanctuary be thrown by ſo ſkilful and powerful a "hand, that they may ſink deep into the foreheads of "theſe uncircumciſed ones, to their utter ruin and "deſtruction." And O it were happy, if, while the word doth touch our ſins, our hearts were melted like Peter's, and moved to to go home and weep bitterly. O what reaſon have we to weep, when we hear of the boundleſs mercy which we have deſpiſed, the matchleſs miſery which we have deſerved, the infinite love which we have abuſed, and the righteous law which we have tranſgreſſed!

VIII. Mix your hearing with faith, i. e. believe, 1. That it is God who ſpeaks; the word is his, and not man's. 2. That he ſpeaks to you in particular, as if he mentioned you by name and ſirname. Put not reproofs and threatenings by yourſelves, and ſay, They belong to your neighbour, and not to you; for this is a dangerous ſtratagem of the devil againſt your ſouls. But let every man open his ear, and hear what the Spirit ſaith to him, and apply the word particularly to himſelf; for the beſt plaiſter that ever was made up can do no good unleſs it be applied. 3. Believe that what the Lord ſpeaks to you by his word, is true and certain; that his doctrine is holy, and his laws juſt: that his threatenings will be ſtrictly execute, and his promiſes faithfully accompliſhed. It is for want of faith that the word doth not profit. If but as much credit were given to the divine teſtimony and word of God, as we have to human teſtimony and the writings of men, the word would have more ſucceſs and efficacy than, alas! it hath on the moſt part.

IX. Lay up what you hear in your hearts and memories, and be at all pains to retain it; for the devil, like the fowls of the air is at hand to ſnatch away the ſeed of the word as ſoon as it lights, if we be not careful to hide it in our hearts. Therefore it is a good help in time of hearing to be often recalling and repeating the heads of what has been ſpoke in our minds; for when we hear a head but once, and think no more upon it till the ſermon be done, we are fair to loſe it.

X. Join cordially with the congregation in ſinging the praiſes of God. This is a heavenly duty, pleaſant to God, and profitable to yourſelves: therefore be conſcientious in the performing of it: Sing with underſtanding, and meditate upon what you ſing; ſing with grace in your hearts, Col. iii. 16. It is grace that ſweetens the voice in God's ear, an old heart cannot ſing a new ſong; nay, grace muſt be in a lively exerciſe when you ſing, according to Pſal. lvii. 8. you ſhould cry to your hearts and to your graces, and particularly to faith, love and delight, as in Judges v. 12. Awake, awake, Deborah, awake, awake, utter a ſong, &c. There ſhould be a great warmneſs of love and affection to God when we ſing to him, according to Iſa. v. 1. Look well then to your hearts in ſinging, mind the matter more than the muſic, the cleanneſs of the heart more than the clearneſs of the voice.

Non vox ſed votum; non muſica chordula, ſed cor;
Non clamans, ſed amans pſallit in aure Dei.

I cannot paſs ſome here, without a reproof, ſuch as theſe, 1. Who ſit dumb in the congregation, while their neighbours are praiſing God, as if the devil had tackt their tongues to the roof of their mouths: Think not this work below the greateſt of you, for it is your honour. Excuſe not yourſelves by ſaying you cannot ſing muſically; for, if you had any delight in the duty you would ſing as you can. 2. Theſe who in ſinging, notice the tune more than the matter, and mind the voice more than the making melody in their hearts to the Lord. 3. Thoſe that abſent themſelves from the ſinging of the pſalms, who either come not at the beginning of worſhip till the pſalms be over, or riſe and go out at the cloſe before the pſalms be ſung. Would you know whoſe diſciples they are who do ſo, they are not Chriſt's but Judas's; for when Chriſt ſang the hymn on the back of the communion, Mat. xxvi. 30. all the diſciples were preſent but Judas, that ſlipt out before the pſalms; and ſince he turned his back upon ſo ſweet a duty, it could not be a good errand he was going about; it was firſt to betray his Maſter, and then to hang himſelf. O then, take warning, and follow Judas's example no more.

XI. Let none go forth before pronouncing of the bleſſing. God allows none, great or ſmall, to go out before his worſhip be ended; both prince and people muſt meet and part at the ſame time, Ezek. xlvi. 10. Theſe that wilfully depart without hearing the bleſſing pronounced, and make a cuſtom of it, if they repent not, it is to be feared they muſt one day ſtay to hear that ſentence, Depart from me ye curſed. You run away from the bleſſing, but you cannot run from this curſe. Wherefore let us ſtay the bleſſing, and reverently ſtand up (as the congregation of Iſrael did, 1 Kings viii. 14.) to receive our ſhare in it, hoping and praying that it may come down upon us, as it ſurely will, if we believingly look up to him, that commands the bleſſing upon mount Zion, even life for evermore.

Concerning our behaviour betwixt ſermons.

HAVING finiſhed the work of the forenoon, you muſt take care how you diſpoſe of yourſelves betwixt ſermons.

1ſt, If the intermiſſion be ſomewhat long, and your houſes near hand, then retire to them, meditating upon what you have heard, and fixing the convictions and directions into your minds; beware of worldly thoughts or words by the way.

2dly, Aſſoon as you come home, go to ſecret prayer, and beg God's help to improve what you have heard, that it may kill ſin and quicken grace in you; and that God may ſtrengthen your weak memories to retain it, and pardon your failings in his ſervice.

3dly, Eat ſparingly betwixt ſermons, leſt it dull your ſpirits, and indiſpoſe you for the afternoon's word; and ſee that your diſcourſe in time thereof be ſuitable to the day.

4thly, If time allow, neglect not to call your families together for the worſhip of God.

5thly, If you have any time to be alone ſpend it frugally in reading, praying or meditating; let not a moment of it be loſt: Either think on what you have been hearing, or draw ſpiritual inſtructions from what you ſee. Do you ſit by the fire, and ſee the ſparks fly up? think, 'Man is born to trouble as the ſparks fly upward, 'Job v. 7. Sin hath filled my ſhort life with troubles; 'but bleſſed be God, that I am this day invited to 'come to Jeſus Chriſt, who is a remedy both for ſin 'and ſorrow.'

Doſt thou ſee a ſpider in the window weaving cunning webs to catch the ſilly fly? Think, 'Satan that 'cunning enemy is doing the like for my poor ſoul.' Seeſt thou how the ſpider hides itſelf in its hole till once the fly be intangled, and then runs to ſeize it, and drag it into its hole? 'So doth the devil ly in 'wait till once ſinners be caught into his ſnares, and 'then he lays on them, and hales them away to hell 'with him.' Again, think how painfully and curiouſly the ſpiders weave their cobwebs to catch flies, never conſidering that, before their prey be caught, both they and their webs may be ſwept down by the beſom and trode in the duſt. What is this but a lively emblem of the curious projects which ſome frame for gaining the world? What are they elſe but a taking great pains to catch a fly? And oft, before it be caught, death comes with its beſom, and ſweeps them and their fine projects down in the grave altogether; For in that day all their thoughts periſh, Pſal. cxlvi. 4.—But O how wiſe are theſe ſouls, who are laying out all their thoughts and uſing all means this day to win Chriſt! This is a project that will ſurvive death; here is gain that death cannot rob them of. Thus we ſee how every thing might learn us a ſpiritual leſſon, if we were ſpiritually minded.

6thly, If you be far from home, and have not a houſe to which you can conveniently go betwixt ſermons, then improve your time as well as you can, either in the church or church yard, by reading, meditating, private ejaculations, or ſpiritual conferences. It is very ſad to hear people in the church yard this day talking about their markets, corns, cattle, and other worldly ſubjects: Alas! the devil is as buſy ſowing his tares in the church yard as Chriſt's miniſters are in ſowing the good ſeed in the church, and hath far more increaſe than they. Is it not ſtrange that people ſhould go forth from hearing a warm ſermon, yea, a ſermon exactly adapted to their ſouls caſe, and yet have never a word of it among them more than they had been deaf or ſleeping all the time; but no ſooner is the word out of the miniſter's mouth, but preſently the world is in theirs!

Queſt. May not we aſk or hear news this day?

Anſ. Aſking, hearing or telling news this day is ſinful, if it be done to ſatisfy curioſity, to divert or put off the time; this would be a finding our own pleaſure, which is forbidden on the Lord's day. But if it be done that we may know how it fares with the church at home or abroad, and that we may get our hearts ſuitably affected with the caſe of Zion, as it was with Nehemiah, Neh. i. 2. I aſked them concerning the Jews, and concerning Jeruſalem; I ſay, in that caſe it is lawful; for thus we ſhew our concern for the kingdom of Chriſt in the world, and hereby we may be furniſhed with matter both of prayer and praiſe. Outward events and occurrences, if rightly improven, will be ſo far from unframing the ſpirit for the duties of the Sabbath, that we may reap much ſpiritual advantage from them. Let us therefore take care to make a ſpiritual improvement of the news we hear this day; for God's power, mercy and juſtice may be ſeen and admired in the occurrences of providence, as well as in the works of creation. Doſt thou hear any news that makes thee glad? let it excite thee to bleſs God for the ſweet goſpel news of Chriſt's coming to ſave loſt ſinners, which thou haſt been hearing this day. Let it put thee in mind what glad tidings it will be to a believer to hear the ſound of the laſt trumpet, and the abſolving ſentence of Chriſt his Judge.——Doſt thou hear of the raging contentions, diviſions and confuſions that ar in the world? Let it mind thee of the bleſt agreement and harmony that is among the ſaints and angels above. ——Doſt thou hear of bloody wars and rumours of wars? Remember the day is at hand, O believer, when thou ſhalt be houſed with Chriſt the Prince of peace, where there is nothing but perfect peace, union and tranquillity.

But, in caſe you ſit or walk alone betwixt ſermons in the church or church-yard, you may either think upon what you have been hearing, or meditate upon your latter end, which the graves you ſee and tread on, loudly call you to. Think how one generation comes, and another goes. Our fathers had their day upon the ſtage, and they are gone off to make room for us; now we have our day upon the ſtage, but in a little we muſt go off alſo, and give place to the ſucceeding generation. As we draw ſome upon the ſtage, theſe do thurſt us off it again, and we muſt ſhortly be laid with our fathers.——Again, think what a mortifying ſight is before our eyes; there lyes the rubbiſh of a thouſand generations. What is the whole world almoſt, but a heap of graves and dead mens bones? Much of the ground we now tread on, as well as theſe graves, was once living; ſo that we plough up and dig through our forefathers, and muſt ſhortly turn earth ourſelves to bury our poſterity. What cauſe have we then to be humble? We are made of the ſame metal with the ground we walk on; God's hands have kneaded our bodies of the ſame clay with others, and his fingers will crumble us again into the ſame duſt. Let us abhor pride, for this piece of ground will lay us all low enough in a ſhort time: As ſix foot of air doth contain us while we live, ſo ſix foot of earth here will ſuffice us when we are dead; and why ſhould we boaſt of any earthly enjoyments? What is it we value ourſelves upon? Is it our high extract? Ah! the worms have as noble an extract as we; nay, they are of an older family and riſe, for every creeping thing was made before man, Gen. i. Do you value yourſelves for your riches? remember both the poor and you ſhall ly down in the duſt together, and the worms ſhall cover you alike, Job xxi. 26. Nay the body of a beggar makes as good duſt as the body of a king; the grave duſt of the one ſmells as ſweet as the other, there it makes no obeiſance to it, nor keeps any diſtance from it.

Concerning the afternoon's worſhip.

WHEN the time for the afternoon's worſhip is come, ſee that ye return again to it in due time; think not the half of the day enough for the ſervice of God; remember the whole day is his: Your ſouls neceſſities alſo require your attending on all diets of worſhip; therefore miſs no opportunity, for you know not when you may meet with Chriſt. Thomas, by being abſent from one meeting of the diſciples, loſt a joyful ſight of Chriſt which the reſt got, and for ſome time afterwards laboured under ſad doubting and unbelief: So you that withdraw from any of the meetings of God's people in the ſanctuary, have reaſon to fear plagues upon your ſouls. You that go away unneceſſarily from the afternoon's worſhip, (as many in the country do) conſider what a ſhrewd ſign it is, that ye have got little good the forenoon, and that ye are very indifferent what become of your precious ſouls. Know you not that the loſs of one opportunity may be the loſs of your ſouls? It may be, in your abſence, the Spirit, who blows when he liſteth, did vouchafe a gale, which might have melted your frozen heart; it may be, then the word was ſpoke, that, thro' God's bleſſing, might have begun a good work on your ſoul: And when you provoke him, by neglecting ſuch an opportunity what do you know if ever he vouchſafe ſuch another gale to you all your life again?

As for your carriage during the afternoon's worſhip, I refer you to the foregoing directions; for they ſuit the afternoon, as well as the forenoon.

Only there are ſome few things more I would mind you of:

I. If there be ſick perſons who deſire the aid of your prayers; as you ought to ſympathize with them, ſo you ought alſo to remember God's goodneſs to you, that preſerves you in health, when others are toſſed on ſick beds: that allows you to ſing his praiſes, while others are groaning with pains; that gives you liberty to attend his ordinances, when others, better than you, are detained therefrom.

II. If baptiſm be adminiſtred after ſermon, then take theſe directions concerning your carriage on that occaſion. 1*ſt*, Beware of removing before it is over, as many do, for this argues both a contempt of Chriſt's ordinance, which he hath ſolemnly inſtitute for his church's good, and want of charity to the perſons to be baptized, in that you will not ſtay to pray for them, or receive them into the communion of the viſible church: As alſo, it ſheweth that you have little regard to your own ſouls in that you turn your back upon ſuch an excellent mean of edification as this is. You that are guilty this way, beware of it for the future. Conſider what an irreverent and unbecoming thing it would be, if all would do as you do: And, do you not tempt others, by your example, to go off with you?

2*dly*, Stay ſtill and pray for the members to be ingrafted as others did for you: Pray that God may give the inward grace with the outward ſeal, and apply Chriſt's blood to the ſoul, as water is applied to the body.

3*dly*, Remember your own baptiſm and ſolemn engagements, to Chriſt in infancy. Remember whoſe name you bear, whoſe livery you wear, and whoſe colours ye are ſworn to: And be humbled for your manifold pollutions, your falling ſhort of the grace of baptiſm, and walking contrary to your ſolemn vows. Examine what fruits you reap from your baptiſm, and if you have got your intereſt in pardon of ſin, ſanctifying grace, and other bleſſings, ſealed to you in that ſacrament, cleared up and ſecured: And try if ye feel the efficacy of Chriſt's blood, repreſented and applied in that ordinance, melting your hearts, cleanſing you from ſin, and quickning you to holineſs. I ſhall ſay no more in this place concerning our improving of our baptiſm, nor of the duties of parents who preſent their children to it, nor of theſe who are witneſſes; ſeeing I have handled theſe points pretty fully in my Sacramental Catechiſm, to which the reader is referred.

III. If you be called after the diſmiſſing of the congregation, and before you return home, to attend the funerals of any of your deceaſt neighbours, let your words and carriage be grave, and ſuitable to the occaſion; abhor that levity and frothineſs which many ſhew at ſuch occaſions. When you draw nigh, and ſee the open grave, think, God is cauſing the grave to open its mouth, to warn me of my latter end, and to tell me, that I muſt ly there ere long.—When you ſee the bones ſcattered about the grave's mouth, in fearful confuſion, think, My ſkull and bones will be thus lying and trampled on in a ſhort time, and will not be diſtinguiſhed from the bones of others; and what folly is it for men to be lifting up themſelves, and deſpiſing others now?—When you hear the doleful murmur that is made by the ſkulls and clods of earth ſtriking upon the coffin, think with thyſelf, that it ſounds forth theſe words, Remember thou muſt die, conſider thy latter end.—When you ſee the grave filled up, and covered with earth, and people departing from it, think, Thus will I be carried out, and left alone by all my friends; and there will be none to bear me company in this dark cell, but the worms, who will feaſt themſelves on me, without any to hinder them. O to be always humble and mindful of death!

Laſtly, Let not the impreſſions of your neighbour's funerals wear ſoon off. Some are under a little concern at the time; but no ſooner is the dead interred, and the grave filled up again, but all their ſerious thoughts evaniſh, and they return to their ſins and pleaſures as before. But ſee that your concern be laſting; go away thinking, I may be the next for whom the grave may be opened: Therefore I will wait all the days of my appointed time, till my change come.

IV. If there be any public worſhip, lecture, catechiſing, or repetition of the ſermons this evening; let all, who can, attend the ſame: For as much of the Lord's day as can be, ſhould be ſpent in the public exerciſes and meetings of God's people. I acknowledge, family duties and ſecret duties are likeways to be performed, and time muſt be alowed for them; and it is well when matters are ſo ordered, that public and private duties do not interfere on the Lord's day. But, whenever they ſeem to do it, let it be obſerved as a rule in this caſe, The private ought to give place to the public; for it is one chief end of ſetting apart this day, ſolemnly to acknowledge God, and celebrate his worſhip in the aſſemblies and meetings of Chriſtians.

Concerning our behaviour after public worſhip.

I Come to the third thing, to ſhew what is neceſſary to be done after the public worſhip is over.

I. If you be going home in company with others, then confer together upon the ſermons you have heard by the way: For, Deut. xi. 18, 19. your are commanded not only to lay up God's words in your heart, but to ſpeak of them when you walk by the way. We ſee Chriſt's hearers talk'd of the word by the way, Luke xxiv. 32. Did not our hearts burn within us while he opened to us the ſcriptures? I know this is the practice of the Chriſtians in ſome places, tho' I fear there is little of this ſort of conference among us. Inſtead of it, I fear it is the talk of many, when going home, of this and the other perſon they ſaw in the church, or ſpake with about worldly affairs.

II. If you have not occaſion for converſe, then meditate upon what you have heard through the day, Pſal. lxii. 10. God hath ſpoken once, yea twice have I heard it, ſaith the pſalmiſt. That which God ſpeaks, you ſhould go over it again in your thoughts, and chew the cud upon it. Let it continue like the ringing of bells ſounding in your ears after the bells are ceaſed. It was a good anſwer that one, coming from church, gave to another that aſked him, If the ſermon was done? "Nay, (ſays he) the congregation is diſmiſſed, "but I hope the ſermon is not done."

III. You may alſo be furniſhed with other occaſional meditations very ſuitable to the day, from the things you may ſee by the way.——Doſt thou ſee the clouds turning black, and threatening rain, which cauſe thee to mend thy pace and haſte home? Think, ſurely afflictions are mercies to God's people; they, like a black cloud, cauſe them to mend their pace, and long to be home at their Father's houſe. If our ſun ſhould always ſhine with unclouded beams, we ſhould not make ſuch haſte: Should we find too much friendſhip in our inn, and kindneſs in our pilgrimage, we would be fair to forget our Father's houſe, and our heritage above.

Doſt thou ſee the ſun declining, and haſting down to night? think, The ſun's motion is very ſwift, tho' inſenſible in the mean time: He runs many thouſand miles in an hour, and flies with incredible ſwiftneſs about the earth, carrying our time about with him; ſo we (tho' the moſt part be inſenſible of it) are flying as faſt to the grave. O then, ſhould not our ſouls be poſting as hard from ſin and wrath to Chriſt our City of refuge? Doſt thou ſee the ſun ſetting, and the darkneſs coming on? It hath a voice to thee, the day of thy life poſteth to an end, the dark night of death comes, when thou muſt ſet in the grave: O! ſee thou have not thy work to begin, when thy ſun is ſetting and thy day ended; for, when the night comes, no man can work: there is no repentance in the grave.

Is the ſky clear at the ſun-ſetting, ſo that it prognoſticates a fair morning next day? Think upon the death of an upright man, the latter end of that man is peace. O believer, the evening of thy day ſhall be ſerene, and thy ſun ſhall ſet without clouds: The morning of thy reſurrection ſhall be bright, and thy eternity for ever glorious. No wonder then, tho' Balaam wiſhed to die the death of the righteous, and to have his laſt end like his.

Is it in the winter time that you are going home, when the ſky may be full of ſtars? conſider how glorious the manſion of the ſaints muſt be, ſince that beſpangled roof is but the floor or pavement of their palace; yet that is my home, where I hope to lodge when night comes, and from which I ſhall never flit. O how many millions of bleſſed ſouls dwell therein! How lightſome is their life! And how pleaſant is their employment! Shall I ever be ſatisfied till I be there?

Is it in the ſummer or harveſt time, when you are obliged to go into the field to attend and gather your cattle? Beware of carrying an earthly mind alongſt with you, but labour to learn ſome heavenly leſſons from every thing you ſee.

Do your cattle ſtray from you? think, How ready am I to wander from Chriſt my Shepherd! Lord I have gone aſtray like a loſt ſheep: O! ſeek me, and find me again; ſuffer me not to wander as far as hell, as I will certainly do, if thou let me alone; for of myſelf I will never find the way back to thee.

Do you ſee the ſun retiring from us, and the ſummer going away? Mind how the ſummer days of grace will at length go away, and the winter of ſickneſs and old age will come on: Let me be buſy now, and imitate the bee, who gathers her meat in the ſummer, and provides for the winter before it come: Oh let me not ſin nor ſleep away my days of grace, leſt I have it to regrete, as Jer. viii. 20. My harveſt is paſt, my ſummer is ended, yet I am not ſaved.

Is it in harveſt when you ſee the corns cut down through the fields? Think how death with his ſickle will cut you down in like manner, Rom. xiv. 15.

See you a tree growing? Think how the ax of death and ſpiritual judgments is laid to the root of the barren tree, or fruitleſs profeſſor.——Again, think how night and day are like two axes hewing at the root of the tree of man's life, without reſt, when the one is up, the other is down: Every day a ſpell flies off, and every night a chip goes; and ſo, ere long, our bones will ly ſcattered about the grave's mouth, as when one cutteth wood, Pſal. cxli. 7. I ſee my neighbours as cut trees daily falling about me: I find myſelf beginning to totter and ſhake with the frequent blows I am getting: O that in the mean time I may be inclining Chriſt-wards and heaven wards! for, as the tree falls ſo will it ly. See you a worm crawling on the ground? Think upon the worm of conſcience that never dies, but gnaws the wicked to all eternity. It is my higheſt wiſdom to make conſcience my friend, for it is a friend that ſticks cloſer than a brother; it will faithfully attend us on a death bed, and at a tribunal, and adminiſter cordials to us then. But, if conſcience be thine enemy, next to God himſelf, thou wilt find it the moſt terrible enemy that ever a poor ſoul had; thou canſt neither reſiſt it, nor flee from it: It is a meſſenger thou canſt not devorce, a witneſs thou canſt not caſt, a judge thou canſt not decline, and an executioner thou canſt not withſtand: Poor Chriſtleſs ſinner it will ſerve inſtead of all theſe againſt thee. O labour to get it ſprinkled in time with Chriſt's blood, and this will pacify it.

Again, think, What is man but a worm? He is twice ſo called in one verſe, Job xxv. 26. What a poor weak helpleſs creature is a worm? it is eaſily cruſhed by the foot, and can make no reſiſtence. So weak and helpleſs is man, with reſpect to God; he is more eaſily cruſhed by the feet of his juſtice, than a worm is by ours. What madneſs then is it for a worm to rebel againſt the Creator of the world? what are the kings and princes of the earth but as ſo many worms crawling upon his footſtool? Each of us muſt ere long take up our dwelling with the worms, and ſay to them, Ye are my brethren and ſiſters.

Again, behold, as worms, when they creep into the earth, leave their ſlime behind them about the hole's mouth;——ſo believers, when they creep into the grave, leave all their ſin and corruption at the grave's mouth, and their ſouls aſcend to God, without ſpot or wrinkle.

Concerning our behaviour at home in the Sabbath evening.

ASSOON as poſſibly you can win home after ſermons, ſet about your ſecret work, and family-duties: Conſider, that tho' the ſermons be over, the Sabbath is not over. Therefore ſtudy to ſpend the reſt of the day in God's ſervice, and keep ſtill the impreſſions of what you have been hearing upon your ſpirits. And if you would do this, take theſe directions.

I. Retire preſently for ſecret prayer and ſelf examination: Pray over that you have been hearing, and beg that the Lord may keep it in the imagination of the thoughts of your hearts. This is a good way both to help your memories, and procure a bleſſing on what you have heard. Conſider whether you had any thing of God's ſpirit and preſence through the day. If God withdrew, then lament after him, and ſearch into the cauſe. If he ſhewed himſelf through the latteſs, then bleſs him for it, and go on to walk in the light of his countenance. Hath any good motion been raiſed in your hearts by the word? Pray for the preſervation of it. Hath the word been refreſhing and edifying to you? Lay it up in your hearts, and commit that to God to keep for you, which your frail memories cannot retain, pleading, that God may make it forthcoming to you againſt the time of your need. Hath the word diſcovered any particular ſin or luſt to you? then bewail and mourn for it, and beg mortifying grace to ſubdue and conquer it.—Have you been negligent in hearing? Lament it, put on new reſolutions, and cry to God for ſtrength; and forget not to employ your great Advocate Jeſus Chriſt, to apologize for your weakneſs and ſhortcomings, and to ſeparate all the defects from your performances, and offer them up in his cenſer perfumed with the incenſe of his merits. Was thy conſcience ſtupid, thy heart hard and thy mind carnal, while hearing a ſoul rouzing ſermon? Be aſhamed of it before God, and chide with thy heart, and ſay to it, "Art thou worſe than Felix a heathen? "For his heart trembled when he heard of judgment to "come, Acts xxiv. Art thou worſe than devils? "For they believe and tremble, James ii." Oh! ſhall heathens and devils be ſooner moved then my hard heart? Haſt thou reaped no benefit through the day? Let it be matter of exerciſe and lamentation to thee before the Lord. Let never bare ordinances ſatisfy thee, without communion with God therein. As Zaccheus climbed up into the ſycamore tree to ſee Jeſus and when once he had got a ſight of him there, he came down joyfully; ſo oughteſt thou to go up to the ſycamore tree of ordinances for this purpoſe, to ſee God in Chriſt; and, unleſs this ſight be granted thee, come down ſorrowfully. When men go to meet their beloved friend at a certain place, and they miſs him, how diſcontentedly do they go away? Alas! what are ordinances without God, but as a table without meat, a well without water, from which a needy ſoul muſt needs depart hungry and thirſty?

It concerns thee to call thyſelf to account for thy frame and carriage in hearing, reading, prayer, praiſe, giving alms, and every duty you have been employed in through the day. As God himſelf reviewed every day's work of his, and ſaw it was good, Gen. i. So ſhould we review every day, and, in a ſpecial manner, every Sabbath day's work and ſee if it be good or no. Let us judge ourſelves, that we may not be judged.

II. Read over theſe portions of ſcripture which you have heard opened, with the ſcriptures cited by the miniſter; think on them, and beg the illumination of God's Spirit to make you underſtand them. We ſee the eunuch was reading the ſcripture upon his return from the public worſhip, and God bleſſed it and ſent him an interpreter; and if you do ſo, you may expect the ſame. He that ſent Philip to him, will ſend his own Spirit to help you; who, when he comes, brings ſuch a divine light alongſt with him, as will make yon ſee the truths of the goſpel with another eye, and diſcover more in the word than ever you beheld in it before: So that, tho' you have read the ſame chapters and verſes about Chriſt many times over, yet then you ſhall be made to ſay, O where were my eyes till now, that I never ſaw what was contained here?

III. Labour by all means to keep up the remembrance and impreſſions of the word thou haſt been hearing on thy mind: Let it not be as a wayfaring man to tarry with thee only for a night; but let it be an inhabitant to dwell with thee all the week over. Hath the Spirit made any warm impreſſions by the word upon thy ſoul this day? O watch over them and ſtrive to preſerve and entertain them throgh the evening, and look to God for help. "Oh Lord, let me not loſe the heat of this day, in the cool of the evening. Thy word hath wrought wonderful changes upon others, O that I may likewiſe experience the ſame, and have it to ſay, I went forth proud, but am come home humble: I went out careleſs and hard-harted, but am come back thoughtful and contrite in ſpirit: I went to church a bond ſlave of ſatan, but am returned a free man of Chriſt!"

Poor ſoul, much depends upon your care end watchfulneſs over yourſelf in the evening of the Lord's day, that you loſe not theſe things wrought in you by the word through the day. There are many like theſe ſoldiers who are victorious in the day, but looſe all at night thro' their ſecurity and ſloth; they do not watch and ſtand to their arms but ſuffer the enemy to ſurprize them, to beat up their quarters, and ſpoil their tents, when they are ſecure, dreaming of no hazard. Many are like Hannibal, that knew better how to obtain a victory, than how to improve it when got. Watch then againſt the devil, the world, and your own hearts, and beware of loſing at night what you gained through the day.

I ſhall here give ſome advices, in order to the cheriſhing and improving of theſe good motions, convictions, or reſolutions, that may be begot in you by hearing of the word on the Lord's day. Theſe are ſparks kindled by the breath of God, therefore do not ſmother them, but ſtrive to blow them up into a flame by prayer and meditation.

1ſt, Beg earneſtly that God, who hath begun a good work in thee, may carry it on; that theſe convictions may terminate in thy converſion here, and thy ſalvation hereafter.—Cry, Lord, ſuffer not theſe tender fruits to be nipped in the bud, or blaſted in the bloſſom by ſatan's froſt winds, or the world's cold blaſts; but mercifully cheriſh and preſerve them to maturity, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace.

2dly, Conſider what a crying ſin it is againſt God, to neglect or ſtifle thy convictions: He will treat thee as a murderer if thou do it: It is murder to deſtroy the conception in the womb. Chriſt alſo will take it as a ſolemn affront offered to him; for convictions are the meſſengers which he ſends to prepare the way of his entry into the ſoul: And will he not heinouſly reſent it, to ſee his meſſengers killed or maltreated? O what horrid ingratitude is it to Chriſt, after he hath opened the door of our hearts half way by convictions, to have it ſhut againſt him, when he is juſt ready to enter; or, when he is half way in, to be thruſt back again, and have the door thrown in his face!

3dly, Conſider how prejudicial it is to thy own ſoul. The dying away of thy convictions threatens the life of thy ſoul. If you quench them, God may be provoked to paſs that dreadful ſentence, My ſpirit ſhall no longer ſtrive with thee: And ſo there follows a midnight ſilence, and thou art loſt for ever. O tremble for fear of God's judgments, for thy caſe is more dangerous than others: No water freezeth ſo faſt, as that which hath been once warmed; and no iron is ſo hard, as that which hath been oft heated and oft quenched. Therefore,

4thly, Preſently ſtrike in with thy convictions. Bleſs God for awaking thee, when others about thee are lying in a deep ſleep; for viſiting thee, when others are paſſed by: Be content to have thy ſore lanced, and thy wound ſearched: Suffer no other plaiſter to be applied to it but Chriſt's blood: Go not to heal the wound of thy conſcience by the works of the law, and thy own duties; for theſe will at beſt but ſkin it over for a while. Neither go to ſhift off convictions by delays, as did Felix; for this is the devil's great ſtratagem to ruin thy ſoul. It is with the heart as with melted wax; if you clap the ſeal to it when it is ſoft, it receives an impreſſion which abides; but if you delay, it ſoon cools and hardens, ſo that preſs on it as ye will, it is to no purpoſe. Let us then imitate David, who, when he was convinced of the evil of his ways, without any delay turned his feet to God's teſtimonies, Pſal. cxix. 59. Put forth thy utmoſt ſtrength, and ſtir up thyſelf to turn from ſin, and flee to Chriſt, while conſcience is ſtirring, the Spirit ſtriving, Chriſt waiting, his bowels ſounding, and his blood pleading; for the loſs of this ſeaſon may be the loſs of thy ſoul. God ſaith thrice in one chapter, Heb. iv. To day, to-day, to day, but the devil cries, To morrow, to morrow, to-morrow. Surely God is wiſeſt, and his time fitteſt. To-day is thy living day, to morrow may be thy dying day; To-day thou art on earth, to morrow thou mayſt be in hell; To-day mercy is inviting, to-morrow juſtice may be ſmiting; therefore, while thou art called to-day, hear the voice of God and conſcience, and harden not your heart.

IV. Labour to perſevere in prayer this evening; do not faint in it, but endeavour with Moſes, to hold up your hands this day till the going down of the ſun. Our frequency and importunity in this duty is no trouble, but a delight to the hearer of prayer. Chriſt ſaith oft this day to the ſpouſe, Thy voice is ſweet, cauſe me to hear it. Continue inſtant in prayer this day, wreſtling as Jacob, and ſaying, I will not let thee go till thou bleſs me. And as orators, at the cloſe of their ſpeech, uſe all their art and ſkill to move the affections of their auditors; ſo do you, at the cloſe of the Lord's day, put forth all your grace and ſpiritual ſtrength in prayer, to prevail with God for a bleſſing. Pray this evening, as if it were to be thy laſt Sabbath, thy laſt night, or thy laſt prayer; knowing that, when death comes, thou canſt pray no more: For, as death binds up the hand that it can work no more, ſo it ſtrikes dumb the tongue that it can ſpeak no more; according to Eccl. ix 10. Iſa xxxviii. 18.

V. Study to be denied to all your Sabbath prayers and performances. Beware, my friends, of ſecret truſting to them, as any piece of righteouſneſs before God; for that will ſpoil all, like the dead fly in the apothecary's ointment Say therefore this day, after you have done all, We are unprofitable ſervants. Look above all, as if you had done nothing at all, to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt to anſwer for all. See that you join nothing of your own with this perfect righteouſneſs, in the point of your juſtification and acceptance with God; for this is both diſhonourable to Chriſt, and dangerous to yourſelves: Therefore beware of it. There is a natural popery in the minds of all; we much incline to ſtand upon our own legs, and to have ſomething of our own to found upon. But is it any other thing than blaſphemy, to charge Chriſt's ſacrifice with lameneſs, or his work with deficiency? or to think with our penny to make up Chriſt's ſum, and with our polluted duties to add any perfection to the blood of Chriſt, which is infinite? Shall not we reſt content with that wherewith God hath declared himſelf well pleaſed! Let us then with Paul, count all things but dung and loſs for Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, and deſire only to be found in him.

Concerning family duties on the Sabbath night.

IN the next place, I proceed to ſpeak of family-duties requiſite this night, and how theſe are to be performed.

I. O heads of families, ſee that ye be more ſolemn, full and particular in family worſhip this evening, than at other times: It is pleaſant this night to hear univerſally the melody of God's praiſe in the tabernacles of the righteous. Lay out your family ſins, wants and mercies fully and plainly before God in family-prayer.

II. Confer about the ſermons, and repeat over what you have heard; for the Lord, Deut. xi. 18. 19. requires you not only to lay up God's words in your hearts, but alſo to ſpeak of them when you ſit in your houſes, and to teach them your children. You ought alſo to call your ſervants and children to an account, as to what they remember, and how they have profited by the ſermons. When you ſend your ſervants to the market, you examine what market they have made: Now, the public ordinances are heaven's free market for their ſouls, and will you never enquire what they have gained thereat? This way of rehearſing the ſermons is very refreſhing and advantageous, and hereby one of you would be uſeful to another; for, what one forgets, another may remember.

III. Let parents and heads of families take ſome time this evening in catechiſing and inſtructing their children and ſervants in the knowledge of the principles of religion, and of their duty towards God, their neighbours, and themſelves. We may obſerve from the iv. of Mark, and xiv. of Luke, that after our Lord had inſtructed the people as a public preacher on the Sabbath day, he afterwards did examine and teach his twelve diſciples as a private maſter of a family.

1*ſt*, Begin with children as ſoon as they are capable, and inform them, that there is ſuch a Being as God, whom they ought to honour, reverence and love above all things:——That they are his creatures, the work of his hands:——That he preſerves them, and gives them all the good things they enjoy;—and that every good thing is to be ſought from God by prayer, and thanks returned to him for the ſame.——Shew them the evil and danger of ſin, and how much God hates it:—That they have immortal ſouls:—That there is a life after death in another world, wherein men ſhall receive a great and eternal reward, or a fearful endleſs puniſhment, according as they have done or neglected their duty in this world:——And that God loves thoſe who keep his commandments and pray to him; but hates wicked men, and thoſe who do not pray If theſe principles were early inſtilled and rooted in children, they would in ſome meaſure ſtick with them all their days. Likewiſe, as they are capable, ſhew them the great degeneracy and corruption of human nature, derived to us by the fall of our firſt parents: And, ſhew them the way of our recovery from this miſerable ſtate by Jeſus Chriſt, who was ſent by God to redeem and ſave us from the bondage of ſin and ſatan, and from the damnation of hell.

2*dly*, Before they are capable to read, or get and repeat our Shorter Catechiſm, you ought to frame many ſhort queſtions and anſwers concerning the foreſaid principles, ſuch as they are able to mind, and frequently examine them upon them: And, for your help in this matter, you may conſult the little catechiſm I have publiſhed, called The Mother's Catechiſm for the young child.—But aſſoon as your children are able to repeat our Shorter Catechiſm, injoin them, and your ſervants alſo to commit it to their memories, preſcribing ſo much of it to them every week, and duly examine them upon it every Lord's day: for it contains an excellent ſcheme both of the principles of our religion which we ought to believe, and alſo of the duties thereof which we ſhould practiſe. And is it not far better to repeat this, than ballads and idle ſtories, wherewith many burden their memories?

3*dly*, As you ought to learn them to read, ſo you ſhould this day ſolemnly injoin them to read the bible and other pious books, and inquire at them what they have been reading through the day and the bygone week. And, becauſe of the natural backwardneſs that is both in young and old to holy duties, you ought to contrive the moſt wiſe and effectual methods you can think on, to engage them to delight and diligence in reading of the bible; ſuch as theſe, viz. Teach children the moſt profitable, pleaſant and affecting hiſtories and paſſages of the bible; ſuch as, the creation of man, Adam's fall, the flood, the deſtruction of Sodom, the ſacrificing of Iſaac, the ſelling of Joſeph, Pharaoh's cutting off the infants, and Moſes's preſervation; Moſes his going up to the mount, and getting the tables of the law; the paſſages concerning Samſon's killing the Philiſtines, and David's killing Goliath; the forty-two children deſtroyed by bears; the three children in the fiery furnace; Daniel in the lion's den; Jonah in the whale's belly; Herod's deſtroying the young children, and the like. Endeavour to tell them theſe paſſages as much as ye can in their own language, and this will engage them to the greater delight and attention, and cauſe them to remember them the better; alſo, you would put them to rehearſe them over again to you.

Again, cauſe them read a chapter of the bible every night, and tell you ſome of the principal things in it before they ly down; or, when you read a chapter in the family, appoint each of them ſome one verſe of it to repeat the next day.——Moreover, when they come to learn to write, it is a good way to give them paper-books, to write down what paſſages they think moſt conſiderable in the bible, or what remarkable ſayings and hiſtories they find in other books. They might well ſpend the Saturday's afternoon this way, when they have moſt leiſure.——

In the next place, it would be of good uſe, when you examine them, to teach them to prove every point of religion by ſome pregnant place of ſcripture. This would be the way to beget in them firm, ſtrong and fixed perſuaſions of the truths of Chriſtianity. Many, alas! profeſs Chriſtianity, merely becauſe it is the national religion, and they were ſo educate: They build their faith more upon the aſſertions and teachings of men, than upon the ſure foundation of God's word, and all becauſe they were not put to it when young, to acquaint themſelves with the ſcriptures, or to bring proofs from them for the truths they learned. Are not there many profeſſors of Chriſtianity, who, if they were put to it, could not give one text of ſcripture to prove ſo much as the great fundamentals of their religion? It cannot be expected that ſuch will be cloſs adherers to it in a day of trial and perſecution. A good way to mend this fault is, to get the Confeſſion of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechiſms, which are printed with the ſcripture proofs, ſet down at large, and make much uſe thereof.——Laſtly, As you ought to cauſe them attend punctually this day upon the ordinances, ſo you ought carefully this night to aſk an account of the text, and their notes of the lecture and ſermons; reprove them for careleſs hearing, encourage them when they give any tolerable good account, and promiſe them ſome reward to do better the next Sabbath.

4thly, You ought this day to learn and enjoin your children to pray, and to aſk a bleſſing, and give thanks for their meat: you may ſee ſome helps for them in the end of the Mother's Catechiſm before mentioned. Children cannot pray at firſt without help: Therefore it is fit to teach them ſome ſhort forms; and, in the firſt place, the Lord's Prayer, the great pattern of all prayer. Teach them to retire every morning and evening to pray, and to pray frequently on the Lord's day; and alſo cauſe them go and pray together by turns; this would be a good mean to engage their love to one another, and to cauſe them ſtudy to be more grave and exact in their prayers: and therefore it were fit alſo to cauſe them pray ſometimes in your own hearing.—enjoin them alſo to be fervent and ſincere in prayer, and to pray with a lively ſenſe of God's all ſeeing eye that beholds in ſecret, and with an awful regard to the judgment of the great day.—Likewiſe when they come to any capacity, tell them, That they muſt not reſtrict themſelves to their forms, but muſt make additions of their own framing; tell them, That God loves theſe words beſt that come from the heart; and, for their help therein, tell them often of their ſin and miſery by nature, and of their need of Chriſt, and his blood to waſh and ſave them; direct them frequently to ſay, Lord teach me to pray, give me thy Spirit to help me to pray. Alſo every Sabbath night enquire at them what new words and expreſſions they have got and added to their prayers, and encourage and reward them according to their diligence. O parents, neglect not to teach your poor children to pray and read: Will you teach them to work, and not teach them to pray? If you do it not, the devil will teach them to ban, lie, and play on the Lord's day. And will it not be a fearful reckoning that you will have to make ere long for their prayerleſs and periſhing ſouls? A great many children neglect prayer, not ſo much from their averſion to it, as from this, that none takes care to teach them how to do it; and hence it is, they often neglect it all their days, Whereas if they were early taught and put on the duty of prayer, the habit and cuſtom of the thing would make it turn eaſy and delightful; but, when this is neglected, they cannot afterwards be brought to it, without great reluctance and difficulty. So that you ſee, O parents, if ye improve not the ſeaſon of youth, the blood of your childrens ſouls will be laid to your door.

5thly, It is very proper on this day, aſſoon as your children are capable, to take them aſide, and ſolemnly to tell them the vows you took on at baptiſm in their name, and as ſponſers for them, and how you publicly engaged that they would be the Lord's, and renounce the world, the devil, and the fleſh: And therefore, for your own exoneration, you ſhould take them ſolemnly engaged to do and perform all theſe things which you promiſed in their name. Put them to it perſonally and explicitely to own and renew their baptiſmal covenant, to ſhew themſelves Chriſtians, not only by their parents dedication, but alſo by their own deed and voluntary conſent. Let each of them profeſs and ſay, "I chuſe "God the Father for my God and Father, I chuſe "God the Son for my Redeemer and Saviour, I chuſe "the holy Ghoſt for my Guide and Sanctifier, God's "word for my rule, God's people for my companions, "holineſs for my way, and heaven for my home."

7thly, Join fervent prayers this day with your endeavours; for prayerleſs inſtructions will not profit. Parents may plant, miniſters may water, but God only can give the increaſe. You ought to take ſome time this day to pity, mourn and pray for your children, ſervants and relations that are in the darkneſs of a natural ſtate, and under the ſlavery of ſatan. If any of them were taken by the Turks, and laid in dark dungeons, treated as ſlaves, ſcourged every day, and barbarouſly uſed; would not your bowels yearn, and your hearts bleed for them? Or, if any of your near relations were dead, would you not mourn for them? And are you not more concerned to mourn and pray for them that are ſatan's ſlaves, juſtice's priſoners, ſpiritually dead, and ſentenced to everlaſting death? Have you any love to your children, and will you not carry them this day in the arms of faith and prayer to the bleſſed Jeſus, beſeeching him to put his hands of mercy on them, and bleſs them? as in Mat. xix. 13. yea, not only pray for them but take them alongſt with you, and let them be the eye and ear witneſſes of your prayers, ſighs and tears for the converſion and ſalvation of their ſouls; and who knows but this might work upon their hearts? Let them hear you ſay to God, as Jacob, Gen. xxxiii. 5. ‘ Lord, thou haſt graciouſly given me theſe children, but, Oh! (you may add) Lord, I have given them ſin, that is their portion from me. Lord tho' I cannot give them Chriſt and grace, yet thou canſt do both; they are born to me once, O that they may be born to thee a ſecond time! Say as Abraham, Gen. xvii. O that my Iſhmael may live before thee! And Deut. xxxiii. Let my Reuben live, and not die. Let theſe who are pieces of my bowels, and are now dead in treſpaſſes and ſin, live in thy ſight; thou art the Lord of life, breathe on them, and they ſhall live.——Lord, let not theſe who are ſo dear to me fry in the flames for ever; one houſe holds us now, let one heaven hold us hereafter.—— Cry as thoſe in the goſpel, Mat. xvii. Lord have mercy on my ſon; my daughter is grievouſly vexed: Lord come and heal them, and let me ſee my children to be the work of thy hands in the midſt of thy houſe; then ſhall not my face wax pale, nor be aſhamed, but I'll ſanctify the holy One of Iſrael,’ Iſa. xxix. 22. 23.

But, in midſt of theſe ſecret and family duties neceſſary on the evening of the Lord's day, it is needful that our frail bodies be refreſhed with meat and drink; and, the work of the day being near over, you are at the more freedom to eat plentifully; yet ſtill with holy fear and caution, and a deſire ſpiritually to improve the time of eating, and to make God's glory your end, in eating and drinking, 1 Cor. x. 31.

If you be to have company or ſtrangers with you, then look to God for wiſdom to behave yourſelves in all your words and deportment, that you may neither do them harm, nor get harm from them. Say, ‘ O that my lips this night were like thoſe of the righteous which feed many!’

When you are called to ſit down to ſupper this night, think or ſay, ‘ How happy were I, if I were now called to ſit down and ſup with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven, at that higher table that ſhall never be drawn, where they enjoy an everlaſting Sabbath, that hath no night nor darkneſs to follow upon it, as this hath!’

When you ſee the table covered for you, O bleſs the Author of it, and ſay, ‘ When God remembers me let me not forget him: Oh let not my table turn a ſnare to me; let me never make a god of my belly, nor employ my chief care for the meat that periſheth.’

When the meat is brought, let us, according to our Saviour's example, look up to heaven, and pray for a bleſſing on our food, and for the ſanctified uſe of God's creatures, that we may taſte covenant-love in common mercies, and enjoy the Creator while uſing the creature. Then think, ‘ O how ſweet would theſe mercies be, if they come dipt in the blood of Chriſt, and through the channel of the everlaſting covenant to me! If I could enjoy them, not as a creature, but as an heir, and a joint heir with Chriſt, who is the Heir of all things, and hath been pleaſed to adopt believers in his right! O how ſweet, if every morſel did come from my Father's hand, and ſent from his table, as an earneſt of greater and better things laid up for me above! Lord, I am not worthy of the leaſt crumb that falls from the table of thy providence, and yet thou covereſt a full table to worthleſs me; what ſhall I render to the Lord?’

Is thy proviſion but ſmall? Then ſtudy to be content therewith: Conſider how chearfully Chriſt the Heir of all things did thank God for coarſe and mean fare, John vi. when he had but a few barley loaves and ſmall fiſhes for himſelf and his whole family. How much better provided are we, than Chriſt and his numerous family was? And ſhall we not be eaſy and thankful?

Have you a full table? Then fear leſt theſe outward things inſnare your heart; and, for preventing of it, think, ‘ O what a poor portion would theſe things be, if I get no better! O how miſerable will I be, if, when God gives me bread to the full, he ſhould ſend leanneſs to my ſoul!’ Therefore remember Luther's ſolemn proteſt to God, when a bountiful preſent was ſent him, he proteſted, That he would not be put off with common mercies.

But, if you have any clearneſs concerning your intereſt in Chriſt, the ſight of God's goodneſs to you in a full table, ſhould cauſe you rejoice in him, and ſay, ‘ All this and heaven too! O what a good Maſter do we ſerve!’

When you have eaten, and are full, ſee that ye forget not God your Maker and Benefactor, but with heart and mouth, in a ſolemn manner, give thanks to him. O believers, you have four things particularly to give thanks for; 1ſt, That God gives mercies to furniſh your table. 2dly, Health to uſe them. 3dly, Peace to meet together. 4thly, That ye have a right to them; I mean not a common, but a covenant-right, a right by virtue of Chriſt's purchaſe.

It were very agreeable, to conclude all by ſinging a pſalm of praiſe.

I do not offer to ſtint any Chriſtian family to any preciſe particular method of performing duties on the Sabbath evening, but muſt leave that to be determined by the prudence of maſters of families, according to the circumſtances of their families. Some may find it convenient to catechiſe their children and ſervants, and repeat the ſermons before ſupper, ſome after; ſo ſome may perform family-worſhip before, ſome after; others both before and after. Let every man be fully perſuaded in his own mind; only labour that no duty incumbent be omitted.

I do not ſay, that all the forenamed duties, in all their ſolemnity are indiſpenſibly neceſſary every Lord's day; for time and circumſtances may ſo ſtraiten us, that we cannot get them performed ſo fully as before directed, eſpecially as to the inſtruction of children and ſervants, and the examination of ourſelves; but what cannot be overtaken in one Sabbath, let it be done in another. I have choſen to be pretty full in this directory, becauſe it may be uſeful alſo for other days of the week.

Concerning ſecret duties at the cloſe of the day.

WHEN family duties and ſupper are over, and the condition of our weak and weary bodies begins to call for ſleep and reſt, let us endeavour to cloſe this holy day in a due and ſuitable manner. Take theſe few directions;

1. When you find ſleep beginning to aſſault you, think, " O how ſoon are we tired of doing good! O " that we could ſay, Tho' we may be ſomewhat weary " with our work, yet we are not weary of our work! " And it is our regret, that we ſhould be laid under " a neceſſity of loſing ſo much of our time in ſleeping, and ſhould ly ſo long, incapable of ſerving " either God or man. Let this make us long to be " there, where there ſhall be no need of ſleep, but " we ſhall be like the angels of God, who never ſleep " nor reſt from ſerving and beholding God."

II. Think how terrible is it for a Chriſtleſs unconverted ſinner to ly down this night with ſo many millions of unpardoned ſins on his back, to ſleep ſecurely within the flood mark of God's vengeance, and within a ſtep of hell!——O unconverted man, conſider your continual hazard; you never lay down with aſſurance to riſe again; you never ſlept one Sabbath night, with aſſurance you would ſee another Sabbath, or hear another ſermon; and how can you live at peace in ſuch a condition? Death and hell, are ever before you: it is a wonder you do not think on them by day, and dream of them by night, lie down in fear, riſe in fear, and live in fear, leſt death come before you be converted; it is a wonder you can get any ſleep in this condition. If your body want but meat, drink or clothing, yea, if you have but an aching tooth, it hinders you to ſleep; and yet wilt thou ſleep, O ſinner, when both ſoul and body are on the brink of hell, and the devil gaping and roaring for you? O then reſolve you will not give ſleep to your eyes, nor ſlumber to your eye lids, till your ſoul be in a better condition; at leaſt, till you pour our your heart, confeſs your ſins, lay down your weapons of rebellion, and bemoan your caſe before the Lord, and look up to Chriſt for pity and pardon. We ſhould not willingly venture to ſleep in that caſe we would not venture to die in. How many have been hurried into eternity in a moment! O think with yourſelf, " Death may be within a day's march of me; " to day I am ſinning, but to-morrow I may be dying. " O what if death take me doing the devil's work? " will it not ſend me to him to receive my wages?"

III. Before you lie down this night, confeſs and mourn over the ſins of the bypaſt day; lament your manifold ſhortcomings in public, in private and ſecret duties; ſay, " Alas for the mean and low conceptions " I have had of God, the great Object of worſhip, " this day! What formality and hyporiſy in my approaches to him! O how vain and wandering were " my thoughts, when they ſhould have been moſt " fixed and intent upon God! How dark and blind " was my underſtanding, when God's truths were laid " before me! How little of the evil of ſin, or beauty " of holineſs did I ſee! Lord how hard and flinty was " my heart, little affected by all the ſtrokes of the " hammer of thy word upon it? How dead and carnal " were my affections, little moved by all the rich diſplays and offers of Chriſt's love and beauty! How " ſleepy was my conſcience, little ſtartled by all the " reproofs and threatenings of thy word! How falſe " and treacherous was my memory, in letting ſlip the " ſweet counſels and comforts I heard! Oh what by-ends have I had in duty this day? How little have " I been concerned for the intereſt of Chriſt's church " and kingdom in the world! How idle and unedifying have my words been, when in company! Oh " how little have I done for God's glory, or my " neighbour's good this day!" And, having thus humbly confeſſed your ſins and ſhortcomings this day, make application to the blood of Chriſt for pardon, and to his interceſſion for acceptance with God, that ſo you may lie down this night in a reconciled ſtate with him.

IV. Commit yourſelves by fervent prayer to God's tuition and protection through the night, even to the protection of him that keeps Iſrael, who never ſlumbers nor ſleeps. You cannot ſleep in ſafety, unleſs God watch for you; for, while you are ſleeping, there are many enemies and evil ſpirits about you, ſeeking your hurt; and you have no friend then but God to look to you: You are then both inſenſible of your danger, and unable to help yourſelf. Pray then that God may ſet a hedge about you, that ſatan cannot break through; and that he may appoint his angels to pitch their tents round about you, and all you have. Pray that God himſelf may watch over you while you are ſleeping, and may keep you from being diſturbed or defiled by evil dreams or imaginations in the night. Would you have your reſt refreſhing, your ſleep ſweet, and your dreams inſtructing, and God himſelf to be your Keeper and Guard in the night? Then cloſe this day with fervent and believing prayer to God in Chriſt: He were a fooliſh governour of a city, that would betake himſelf to reſt before he ſet the watch for the city's ſafeguard.

V. Endeavour to lie down this night with thankful hearts to God; let us bleſs God for the Sabbath, and for all the mercies of it, eſpecially for the joyful ſound of the goſpel, and the news of Chriſt. But O let us not be content with hearing the joyful ſound, without knowing the ſame; with the news of Chriſt, without an intereſt in Chriſt; with Chriſt revealed to us, without Chriſt revealed in us. Let us not be like fooliſh children, that play by the light of that candle which is ſet up for their preparing for going to reſt, leſt the light be extinguiſhed, and we go at laſt to the bed of the grave in the darkneſs of ſin and ſorrow. Have you any comfortable view of your intereſt in Chriſt? or had you any thing of his Spirit or preſence this day in the ordinances? then rejoice in God, and ſay with the Pſalmiſt, Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits: Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee.

Again, bleſs God for health and peace to lie down with. “ Some are ſo diſtreſſed, they dare not lie down “ for lack of breath; others are chaſed from their “ beds and dwellings by the raging ſword or peſtilence; “ and behold, I may lie down without any to make “ me afriad.”

Further, let us bleſs the Lord that we have warm beds to lie on, and not the cold ground, with a ſtone for our pillow, as Jacob had. Many of God’s dear ſaints, of whom the world was not worthy, were put to lie in dens and caves of the earth, Heb. xi. Nay, the Son of man had not where to lay his head, while he lived in this ungrateful world. Wonder at his humiliation, and ſay, “ Had it not been for him, inſtead of a “ refreſhing bed, I might have been lying down this “ night in the flames of hell.”

VI. It is very proper this night, as well as every night to lie down with thoughts of death and eternity. Think, now I have one Sabbath leſs to live in the world; and, O that thereby I may be a Sabbath day’s journey nearer heaven, where I ſhall celebrate an eternal Sabbath, that will never draw near an end? O to be there where there is no ſleep, no night to interrupt the ſaints communion with God!—When you are putting off your cloaths, think, the time is near when you muſt put off this earthly tabernacle.—When you lay aſide your garments, think, ſo muſt I ſhortly lay aſide the garment of this body. O may I then expect immediately to be cloathed upon with glory and immortality! and, ſhall I not long for that time? This body, in its beſt ſtate, is but a priſon to a believing ſoul, and detains it from its happineſs. Plato, tho’ a heathen had ſuch clear apprehenſions of the immortality of the ſoul, that he ſaid to one that fed highly, What mean you to make your priſon ſo ſtrong? Am I a believer in Chriſt, and ſhall not I be looking long thro’ the grates of mortality, till the jaylor come and open my priſon-door, knock off the fetters of ſin, and ſet me at liberty, that I may with joy fly to my eternal reſt? Moreover, think how willing we are to put off our cloaths at night, that we may go to reſt, eſpecially when we are weary; and wiſh and ſay, O that I were in a condition to put off the body at death with as great willingneſs and ſatisfaction! and, with Paul long to be diſſolved, and to put off this clay tabernacle. Mr. Dod a holy man, ſaith, “ If parents ſhould tell chil“ dren who have played all day, that they muſt go to “ bed; they begin to cry, and ſhew reluctancy: But “ a labouring man is glad when night comes, that “ he may go to reſt. So (ſays he) to the wicked, who “ have miſ-ſpent the day of their life, death is an un“ welcome gueſt; but the godly are toſſed and wearied “ in this world, and therefore are content to go to the “ bed of the grave, where the wicked ceaſe from trou“ bling and where the weary be at reſt, Job iii. 17. “ Sin wearies them, ſatan wearies them, the wicked “ weary them, ſickneſs and croſſes weary them, and “ Chriſt’s abſence wearies them of the world, and “ no wonder they deſire to be at reſt from all theſe “ troubles.”

When you ſee yourſelf ſtript of your clothes, think, Naked came I into the world, and naked ſhall I return; I can carry nothing hence of all my earthly enjoyments. Lord, let me never chuſe my portion in theſe things I muſt leave eternally behind me. Let worldlings reflect on this: All thoſe things, for which you have toiled and laboured for many years, you muſt leave in one night, Luke xii. 20. Nothing of all your earthly treaſures can you carry alongſt with you to another world, unleſs it be the ruſt thereof, to witneſs againſt you, and eat up your ſouls as a canker to all eternity, according to James v. 1, 3. Whatever be your enjoyments here remember death ſtands as a porter at the gate of eternity, to ſee, that as you brought nothing into the world, you carry nothing out of it, 1 Tim. vi. 7. A coffin and a winding ſheet ſhall be the moſt of it. You may imagine what a broad look the poor ſoul will give then to theſe things you made your treaſure here. O (will it ſay) muſt I part for ever with all my riches? muſt I be ſet naked aſhore in eternity, having nothing to relieve me? muſt I ſuffer an everlaſting famine? Poor ſoul, the world’s treaſures do not paſs current in another world; they cannot there purchaſe you any relief, or buy ſo much as one drop of water to cool thy flaming tongue.

Let your lying down in bed, and covering you with clothes, put you in mind of your lying down in the cold grave and your being covered up with earth. Look on your bed as a tomb or ſepulchre; and every night, before you enter into it, ſeek reconciliation with God, and new diſcoveries of his love in Chriſt, as you would do if going to your grave. How ſad is it to be dying without Chriſt, and God reconciled thro’ him?—Again think or ſay, “ O that the grave “ may be a bed of reſt to me, upon the account of “ Chriſt’s lying therein!” The grave is become a bed of roſes to believers, by the Roſe of Sharon’s lying down in it. Chriſt hath hereby ſweetened and perfumed it for them. Am I a believer, and ſhall I fear to lie down in my Redeemer’s bed? O believer, thou mayſt every night ſay, with the Pſalmiſt, I will both lay me down in peace, and ſleep: for thou, bleſſed Lord, only makeſt me to dwell in ſafety, Pſal. iv. 8. When you are laid down, commune with your own heart upon your bed, and, with the pſalmiſt, remember God upon your bed, and meditate on him in the night watches: And, if you fall aſleep with ſome heavenly meditation in your thoughts, your ſleep will be more ſweet, your dreams more comfortable, and your awaking more refreſhful. And, in a ſpecial manner, let us endeavour, on the Sabbath night, that as we began this day with the delightful remembrance of Chriſt’s reſurrection, to to cloſe it with the chearful expectation of Chriſt’s ſecond coming, and our awaking and riſing from the grave to meet him. And when Chriſt is ſaying, Surely I come quickly; O that we may be in caſe this night to anſwer, Amen, even ſo, come Lord Jeſus!

Concerning our carriage after the Sabbath is over.

THUS have I finiſhed the ſecond general head in this direction, viz. What is requiſite in performing the duties of the Sabbath, when it is come?

It remains that I ſhould ſpeak a word to the third, viz. What is incumbent on us at the end of the Sabbath, or when it is paſt?

When the next day cometh, and we are again to fall to our weekly employments, we ought to retain lively impreſſions of the preceding day's work on our ſpirits, and not ſoon forget what we have ſeen and heard on the Sabbath. In the firſt place, let us repent for the ſins and ſhortcomings of the Sabbath, and beg forgiveneſs thereof from God, that we go not about our worldly employments with the guilt of the Sabbath-day's ſins upon us, leſt they bring a curſe upon the works of our hands.—Again let us pray, and endeavour to bring much of a Sabbath day's frame into the buſineſs of the week, and retain much of it through the week, that ſo we may be the fitter for the next Sabbath, yea, and in caſe to long for it: This would be a fair way to obtain a bleſſing on the labours of the week, and to proſper the works of our hands. Oh! ſhall we bring ſo much of the week with us into the Sabbath, and will we bring nothing of the Sabbath with us into the week? O let us ſtudy to be ſo in the Spirit on the Lord's day, as to walk in the Spirit all the week thereafter, mindful both of the Sabbath paſt, and of the Sabbath next enſuing; becauſe it is ſaid to us every day, Remember the Sabbath-day that ye may keep it holy. Had we more of Sabbath-days thoughts on week-days, then week-day thoughts would leſs trouble us on Sabbath-days.

DIRECTION IV.

Concerning the particular ſins, whereby the ſanctification of the Sabbath is hindered, or the Sabbath profaned.

IF we would duly ſanctify the Lord's day, we muſt conſcientiouſly guard againſt, and abſtain from, all theſe ſins which are oppoſite thereunto; whether they be ſins of omiſſion or commiſſion, ſins of the heart, of the tongue, or of the liſe.

Of ſins of omiſſion on the Lord's day.

1. I Shall begin with ſins of omiſſion, and neglect of the duties of the Sabbath. There are many, alas! that make this altogether an idle day; they conſume it away in doing nothing, and keep it no better than do the beaſts; they abſtain from the works of religion, as much as from the works of their calling, never conſidering that the Lord's day is profaned by ſloth and idleneſs, as well as by ſervile labour or immoral actions. There are many who place all their religion in negatives, like the Phariſees, Luke xviii. 11. and fooliſhly think to be juſtified by their negative holineſs. "I never wronged my neighbour, (ſay ſome) I did not mock at religion, ſwear, drink drunk, &c." But remember, a man may abſtain from evil, and yet go to hell for not doing good, Mat. iii. 10. A tree is cut down for bringing forth no fruit, as ſoon as for bringing forth bad fruit. It is as dangerous not to do things commanded, as to do things forbidden, Matth. xxiii. 23. There is a wo pronounced againſt the one, as well as the other. The ſlothful ſervant is reckoned a wicked ſervant, Mat. xxv. 26. and adjudged to utter darkneſs, as well as the moſt vitious. Wherefore beware of profaning the Lord's day by idleneſs, or neglecting of the public, private or ſecret duties above mentioned, which are requiſite on this day: And, in a ſpecial manner, beware,

Firſt, Of neglecting the hearing of the word this day, or forſaking the aſſemblies of God's people upon it. What madneſs is it to ſlight the mean of ſaving your lives, and delivering your ſouls from hell? What contempt is it of Chriſt's bowels of mercy? If a great king ſhould ſend an ambaſſador to a condemned malefactor, with offers of remiſſion; would it not highly exaſperate him, if he refuſed ſo much as to hear him? O what may God ſay to ſuch fooliſh ſinners in the day of their diſtreſs, when they cry to him? May he not ſend you to the gods you have ſerved, and tell you, "Ye would not come and hear me when I ſent moſt gracious propoſals of peace to you, neither will I hear you now?" With what torture and anguiſh will you eternally reflect on your folly? If you could now but lay your ear to hell's door, and hear ſuch goſpel-ſlighters crying out againſt their ſin, it would make your hearts tremble. Suppoſe you heard them ſay, "O if time could be recalled, what would we give to hear one goſpel ſermon from the moſt deſpiſed miniſter! How many miles would we go! Yea, we would run from ſea to ſea, to hear one encouraging ſentence from Chriſt's mouth, or his meſſengers: Nay, we would be content to ſuffer a thouſand years darkneſs for one day's goſpel light, a thouſand years burning for one day of the Son of man, many whereof I have neglected: But, oh! there is no hope, the ſeaſon is loſt, the ſentence paſt, and we are irrecoverably undone!" O how will the devils wonder at your folly, and eternally upbraid you with it?

Secondly, Beware of neglecting family duties on the Sabbath: The fourth command binds maſters of families to be careful hereof; yet, alas! how ſadly are they neglected? In many places no family prayers or praiſes, no family inſtructions, no family reading of God's word is to be found. Inſtead of delighting in the law of the Lord, which is the character of the bleſſed man, Pſal. i. 2. it is laid by as a ſealed book. The duſt, which many ſuffer their bibles to gather beſide them, will be a fearful witneſs againſt them one day. But more particularly, I ſhall ſpeak,

Of the evil of neglecting family duties.

1ſt, To deter you from the neglect of family worſhip, conſider in what a miſerable ſtate prayerleſs families are; the Spirit of God ranks them into the ſame category with the heathen that know not God, Jer. x. 25. For how ſhould the families of Chriſtians be diſtinguiſhed from thoſe of Turks and Pagans, but by the badge of family-worſhip? Without this badge, then, you are ranked in with heathens, or perſons excommunicate, that is, ſuch as are caſt out of the church into the devil's hands; for of ſuch Chriſt ſaith, Let him be to thee as a heathen.—Again, conſider what is there threatened againſt you; a black cloud continually hangs over your families, ready every moment to pour out wrath and fury upon you, not in ſmall drops, but in great ſhowers, to overwhelm you at once, from which your houſes cannot defend you, tho' their foundations were on a rock, their walls of braſs, and their doors of iron: For, while you are without family-prayer, you want a roof to keep off the ſhower of wrath, and lie night and day expoſed to this terrible threatening, Pour out thy fury upon the heathen that know thee not, and upon the families that call not on thy name. It is not ſimply anger that is threatened, but fury, wrath in the greateſt height and rage. O let prayerleſs families thro' the land tremble at this threatening! I fear, if it were preſently execute, it would make thin cities and pariſhes ſomewhere: But tho' God be patient and long ſuffering, yet, believe it, there are ſecret and inviſible curſes which light and lie upon prayerleſs families, and the works of their hands. Neglect of prayer doth uncover the roof to let God's curſes drop through upon your perſons, children, tables and all your enjoyments; for you denude yourſelves of all ſecurity and protection. Family prayer is an excellent roof to your houſes; it is like the roof that is made of Iriſh oak, which no venemous ſpider will touch, nor lodge in. Family worſhip, duly performed, diſlodges ſin and vice; nay, it diſlodges the devil alſo: And for theſe houſes that are haunted with evil ſpirits, whatever other reaſon may be given for it, no doubt this is one; God's worſhip hath not been duly performed therein. And tho' the devil doth not appear in a viſible or audible manner, yet he certainly haunts prayerleſs houſes; for he hopes for large draughts out of them. Why? ſin and wickedneſs are fair to reign there; malice, pride, deceit and intemperance will bear ſway; ſwearing, curſing, and lying will be the language of the houſe, and the children will learn it betimes. But, when prayer is introduced into a family, theſe vices are baniſhed, and ſatan removes: For either prayer will make you give over ſinning, or ſinning will make you give over praying; they cannot dwell well together. But the houſe which the unclean ſpirit finds empty of prayer, is a houſe ſwept and garniſhed for him and a black train of vices to enter and dwell in. If God's worſhip be not in the houſe, you may write, Lord, have mercy upon us, upon the door, as they uſe to do when a houſe is ſhut up with the plague. What can we expect in a prayerleſs houſe, but the plagues and curſes of God? Abraham expected no good in a prayerleſs place; therefore ſays he of Gerar, Gen. xx. 11. Surely the fear of God is not in this place; they will ſlay me, &c. What a miſerable place or houſe muſt that be, where God's fear is not? Surely it muſt be a ſink of ſin, a butt of wrath, a cage of unclean birds, and a habitation of devils.

O maſters of families, will you pity the ſouls of your families? tremble leſt their blood be found in your ſkirts. When a child or ſervant dies out of your family, it will be ſad if conſcience have it to tell you, "Here one has died out of your houſe, with whom you never prayed; you dwelt together, eat together, wrought together many years, but you never prayed together. And what if his ſoul be gone to hell thro' your neglect! What if his blood be charged on you? How will you anſwer for it? Who knows but if he had ſeen and heard you pray, your words and example might have moved him to go into a ſecret corner and pray for his own ſoul, and ſo he might have been ſinging with the ſaints in heaven, inſtead of howling with the damned in hell?"

But if the caſe be ſo melancholy when they die from you, ſurely it will be far worſe when you come to die yourſelves. You have all your days kept your families godleſs and prayerleſs; well, what accounts will you give of your ſtewardſhips, when you may be no longer ſtewards? And what anguiſh do you think will ſeize on you, when with Dives, you ſhall feel yourſelves in hell, and then begin (not before) to lift up your eyes to heaven, and ſee the godly praying ones, whom you deſpiſed, afar off, and a great gulf fixed betwixt you and them; and alſo, when you ſhall ſee theſe of your prayerleſs families, whom you ruined by your example and influence, brought down to the ſame place of torment, to increaſe your miſery, and add fewel to your flames? O maſters of prayerleſs families, think on theſe things in time.

Oh! will neither the fear of hell, nor hopes of heaven perſuade you to family prayer? I am ſure far leſs would do it, could I aſſure you that the daily performance of it would gain you an eſtate of ten thouſand merks a year: You would try it as you can, and be punctual in it too; you would no more pretend multitude of buſineſs, want of time, gifts or confidence. And are you ſo atheiſtical, as to prefer a little of the world to heaven? Or ſuppoſe there were ſtrict laws made, that, for every time you neglected prayer, you ſhould be thrown into a den of lions as Daniel was for praying; or that you ſhould loſe a finger of your hand, or but pay a hundred merks of fine; would you not pray as you can, and find time for it alſo, rather than loſe your life, finger or money? And are not the laws of God more awful and ſtrict than the laws of men? Is not hell's dungeon, or a den of devils, more terrible than a den of lions? Are not hell's torments more fearful than the loſs of a finger? Is not the wrath of the great God more dreadful than a fine? Oh, will not the fear of God prevail more with you than the fear of man? Remember Daniel's zeal of family prayer, who chuſed rather to be caſt to the lions, before he would forbear it for one day: Oh, what ſhall we ſay of theſe, who will rather venture to be an eternal prey to the roaring lion, than be at this pains for ſalvation to themſelves or their families; but you may hear in their houſes twenty oaths for one prayer!

2dly, Conſider the great ſin of neglecting family-inſtructions upon the Sabbath, which alas! is ſo common, by reaſon whereof many children and ſervants are ignorant, prayerleſs and graceleſs: Their parents and maſters do not teach them to read, nor inſtruct them concerning the principles of religion; they neither pray for them, nor direct them how to pray for themſelves. Is the knowledge of Chriſt a choice and excellent treaſure? And will you withold it from theſe whom you love, ſeeing it will not make you the poorer, but the richer, to communicate it to them? It is the commendation of Abraham, that he both made his houſhold know God's ways and commanded them to obſerve the ſame, Gen. xviii. 19. and do you ever think to land in Abraham's boſom, that will not tread in Abraham's footſteps? Have you no pity or compaſſion on them that are bone of your bone, and fleſh of your fleſh? Where is the yerning of your bowels towards their precious ſouls, that are in a ſtarving and periſhing condition for lack of knowledge? Will you be like cruel oſtriches, Job xxxix. that are hardened againſt their young ones, and leave them to be deſtroyed after they bring them forth? Will you in like manner bring forth your young ones, and then careleſly leave them to be a prey to the devil, and eternally to be torn to pieces by him? Are you indifferent about theſe that come forth of your loins, and whom you profeſs to love ſo dearly, whether they live with the bleſſed Jeſus in heaven, or with the curſed devils in hell? Remember, O parents, who neglect the education of your children God may puniſh you for it, even in this world, by their unnatural and undutiful carriage to you in old age, whereby they may bring down your gray hairs with ſorrow to the grave; and no wonder tho' they make no conſcience of their duty to you, who made no conſcience to teach them their duty to God. Remember alſo, how many children have been brought to a miſerable end in this world by the negligence and unfaithfulneſs of their parents this way; ſome going to the gibbet have bitterly reflected on their parents as the cauſe of their ruin, for giving them ſuch a bad example, and not inſtructing them in the time of their youth. But, above all, conſider how your children and ſervants may riſe up and accuſe you at the bar of God at the great day, and ſay, "Lord, there ſtands my father, there ſtands my maſter, he never taught us, prayed with us, or for us; he neglected prayer, he curſed, he lyed, he brake the Sabbath, and ſo did we after his example. It is true, we are juſtly condemned, but yet we periſh thro' their neglect, our blood is upon their heads." O parents, will it not make you ſpeechleſs, and ſting you to the heart, to hear your poor children crying out againſt you in that day, ſaying, "Had you noticed our ſouls as well as our bodies, had you been as careful to teach us the knowledge of God as of ſuch a trade, it had not been with us as it is this day; we had not now ſtood trembling in expection of that dreadful doom, which is juſt ready to be paſt upon us. Curſed be the man that begat us, and the paps that gave us ſuck; it is to you we owe our eternal ruin and miſery." O negligent parents, what horror and confuſion will then ſeize you in that great and terrible day of the Lord, to hear ſuch a charge from your children! but much more to hear God charge you with their blood, and ſay, "O unnatural wretches, behold how many precious ſouls you neglected and ruined, whoſe happineſs you were bound to procure by ſo many ties of duty and affection: They were ignorant, and you inſtructed them not; they were prayerleſs, and you taught them not; they were Chriſtleſs, and you pitied them not: Yea, you not only neglected to give them good inſtruction, but you gave them bad example; you ſwore, lyed ſpoke obſcenely, broke the Sabbath, mocked religion, &c. and lo, in theſe very practices they have followed you to hell, to be an addition to your torments there for ever."

Would you then prevent this ſad reckoning and be found with your children upon the Judge's right hand? ſee that you inſtruct them and pray for them. O fathers, would you wiſh to have your children well provided then lay up a ſtock of prayers for them, both family and ſecret prayer: This is a ſtock that would not be ſoon ſpent, nay, it will be bringing them in ſomething when you are dead and rotten. O mothers, your bodies travailed in pain at their firſt birth, let your ſouls travail in pain for their ſecond birth: Where is your motherly tenderneſs toward the fruit of your womb? Would you not be ſorry to hear them ſcreeching, or ſee them frying in hell's flames, without remedy? Then do what lies in your power, to prevent it, by inſtructing them, praying for them, and praying with them.

Thirdly, Beware of neglecting ſecret duties this day, ſuch as were afore mentioned, and particularly prayer. If thou be one, O ſinner, that reſtraineſt prayer before God this day, it is a black mark of a graceleſs heart; for a ſpirit of grace and ſupplication go ſtill together. As difficulty of breathing, and painfulneſs in ſpeaking, are ſymptoms of a ſick body; ſo averſion to prayer is a ſad ſign of a ſick ſoul: For prayer is the ſoul's breath and ſpeech to God, Lam. iii. 16.——Again, conſider the danger of living in the neglect of this duty. "If ſatan might have his wiſh againſt thee, (ſaith one) it would be this, that thou mighteſt lead a prayerleſs life; for then he is as ſure of thee as a robber is of a traveller, whom he has faſt bound, lying in a ditch, and his mouth ſtopt that he cannot cry for help" O prayerleſs ſinner, conſider ſatan has thee faſt bound, and is juſt ready to murder thee; and wilt thou not cry to God for help?——Moreover, think what a brutiſh thing it is to live prayerleſs, as alas many do; they riſe like the beaſts in the morning, they work with the beaſts all day, and ly down like beaſts at night, and never mind to look up to God, till he lay them on their backs upon a death bed, and then they begin to cry like the beaſts when the knife is at their throat. Conſider, O man, why God hath given thee a countenance erected towards heaven, and hath not made thee to creep on all four, as other creatures, with their backs to heaven, and mouths to earth; but to teach thee, that thou art made to converſe with thy Maker, and have intercourſe with heaven, and that the world's huſks are not fit food for thy ſoul. We would pity a poor man that were all bowed together, and forced to go like a beaſt upon hands and feet, with his eyes always to the earth: And is it not a more pitiful ſpectacle to ſee a ſoul that is a ſparkle of heaven, and created for communion with God, ſo crippled with ignorance and earthly mindedneſs, as ſtill to be poring and grovelling upon the earth, without looking up to God its Maker and happineſs!

Of the ſins of commiſſion on the Lord's day.

II. IN the next place, I proceed to warn you againſt ſins of commiſſion, by which the Lord's day is too commonly profaned: And theſe are either inward or outward.

I. Of inward ſins of commiſſion.

Inward ſins, or heart ſins, ſhould be carefully guarded againſt this day, as being moſt provoking to God, polluting to his worſhip, and hurtful to our ſouls. Sinful thoughts are an abomination to God every day, Prov. xv. 26. but more eſpecially this day. Thoughts are as loud in God's ears as words; and he commands evil thoughts to be forſaken, as well as evil ways, if we would have pardon, Iſa. lv. 7. Wherefore let us get renewed and ſanctified hearts, and overawe them with the thoughts of God's preſence and omniſcience: Let us imagine this day, that we hear the ſound of the laſt trumpet, and ſee the throne ſet, and God calling for an account of hearts; (for in that day he will judge hearts as well as lives) and, when any evil thought breaks in, ſay, What if God, who ſees this ſhould preſently call me to account? Let us keep a conſtant watch over our hearts this day, ſtriving to cruſh all ſinful thoughts in the bud, at their firſt riſing cry out for God's help.——Let us be ſenſible what a maſs of villany is in the heart, It is deſperately wicked, as Jeremiah ſaith; yea, our inward part is very wickedneſs, Pſal. v. 9. Hence it was that Luther profeſt, that he feared his heart more than the pope or the cardinal; And Auguſtine prayed. Libera me, Domine, a meipſo. The heart is like the Trojan horſe, out of whoſe belly proceeded armed enemies; ſo out of the heart proceed all evil words and actions, Matth. xv. 19. It is the corrupt fountain, from whence all the impure ſtreams of actual ſin do flow: Therefore we ſhould look narrowly to it.

But, beſides incident evil thoughts, we have many evil habits and plagues of heart that we ſhould guard againſt on the Sabbath, being ſuch as profane the day, and hinder the ſanctification of it: Particularly,

1*ſt*, Atheiſm, and miſbelief of God's truths. If this harbour or prevail in us, we can reap no profit by the word read or preached this day. Why do people delay or refuſe to embrace Chriſt, and leave their ſins, but becauſe they want a fixed and firm impreſſion of the truths of the goſpel upon their hearts? It is true, you will not ſay that you miſbelieve any of them, but you give no heart-aſſent to the truth of them, which is little better; you give no firm inward credit to the goſpel, and to all its aſſertions, commands, threatenings and promiſes, that they are come from God, and are moſt true, certain and infallible. Were you once firmly perſuaded of the certainty of eternal life and eternal death, you would not ſtand ſo long hovering betwixt heaven and hell. If once you had the firm impreſſions of eternal death, you would preſently flee from the wrath to come; and if you had a due ſenſe of eternal life, you would run to take hold of the hope ſet before you, Heb. vi. 18. But alas! nature is half blind, and cannot ſee afar off, 2 Pet. i. 9. To carnal hearts and eyes there ſeems to be a miſt upon eternity; they cannot ſee into another world, and they cannot believe things not ſeen. But, O if you would be happy, you muſt ſtedfaſtly believe the immortality of the ſoul, and a future life; that the Bible is the true word of God, and that the bleſſed God, ſent his eternal Son Jeſus Chriſt into the world to aſſume man's nature and die for to redeem him from ſin and hell. With abhorrence renounce all doubting or unbelieving thoughts of theſe great truths; rather doubt of your own being than of theſe; believe that what now you hear with your ears concerning a future life and judgment-ſeat, you will ſhortly ſee with your eyes: If you do it not you rub the higheſt affront on God that a creature is capable of; for you make your Creator a lyar, 1 John v. 10. This is a ſin that devils are not chargeable with, for they believe and tremble. O ſinner, what further confirmation of the truth wouldſt thou have from God, than he hath already given thee? Thou haſt his word, yea, his writ, ratified by his oath, confirmed by his miracles, and ſealed by his Son's blood, which is far more, and far ſurer than either a voice from heaven, or a meſſenger from hell, according, to 2 Pet. i. 19. Luke xvi. 31.

II. Ignorance of the truths you hear this day, greatly hinders the ſanctification of it. You cannot prize Chriſt, cloſe with him, or follow him, till ſuch time as you know him. How can ſuch hear the goſpel, or embrace Chriſt offered therein, that know not their ruined natural condition, and their remedy through Chriſt? Many they know not Chriſt's love and beauty, his ability, ſufficiency and fitneſs in his natures, offices, relations, graces, Spirit and fulneſs: They know not the deſign of his coming into the world; the manner of his throughing our redemption by his obedience and ſufferings, and the manner of applying it, and our getting an intereſt therein, and the neceſſity and nature of faith in order thereto. For as oft as many have faith in their mouths, they know not what it is; they are ignorant what it is to receive Chriſt as a Surety and Saviour, as a Prieſt and King; and therefore many goſpel ſermons and Sabbaths are entirely loſt to them.

O ſinners, conſider the danger of ignorance, it is a ſoul murdering ſin, Hoſ. iv. 6. My people are deſtroyed for lack of knowledge. Do not think your ignorance will excuſe you at a tribunal, or ſave you from hell: No, it will rather aggravate your ſin and condemnation to be found ignorant in a land where the light ſhines ſo plentifully about you. Ignorance will be ſo far from keeping off wrath from you, that God tells you it is a ſpecial procuring cauſe of wrath, and makes you more miſerable than others, according to Iſa. xxvii. 11. This is a people of no underſtanding, therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will ſhew them no favour.

Again, as ignorance is a damning ſin in itſelf, ſo it is the fruitful mother of many other ſins and luſts, according to 1 Pet. i. 14. What is the reaſon why many ſwear, lye, cheat, break the Sabbath, drink drunk, commit uncleanneſs, ſlight ordinances, neglect prayer in their families and cloſets, and go on in their ſins, without repenting or fleeing to Chriſt? It is becauſe of their ignorance: They are ignorant of God, his infinite juſtice and holy nature, the evil of ſin, and what Chriſt hath ſuffered for ſinners; they know not what regeneration, repentance and faith are, for all they ſpeak of them; and how then can they practiſe them, or cry to God for them?

Object. ‘O (ſay ſome ignorant creatures) many have ‘knowledge that make no good uſe of it; yea, they ‘are more graceleſs and profane than we.’

Anſ. All this is too true, and theſe will have a ſad account to make one day for ſinning againſt ſo much light. But this will be no help to you, for profanity kills them, and ignorance kills you; they die of one diſeaſe, and you die of another; and your diſeaſe is as ſure to kill as theirs. For you to reject knowledge, becauſe ſome who have it abuſe it and periſh; is as ridiculous as for you to ſay, becauſe many die who have both food and phyſic, and plenty of means for preſerving life, I will uſe no means for preſerving my life at all; for, whoever die, you are ſure to die: They that have both food and phyſic may die, but they that have none of them cannot live. So, whoever periſh, ignorant perſons are ſure to periſh; for they know not their remedy, they cannot make uſe of the means of life. O ignorant ſouls, you are nearer hell than others; your ſtate is darkneſs, and it borders upon utter darkneſs; ſo that you are, as it were, lodging in the next room to hell, having but a weak partition betwixt you and it, which death may break down in a moment, and let you paſs into it. When an ignorant ſinner dies, there goes not only duſt to duſt, but darkneſs to darkneſs; the darkneſs of ignorance to the darkneſs of hell: And is not this a fearful ſtate for you to continue in? What madneſs is it for you to do it, when Chriſt is daily inviting you to come to the light?

O ignorant ſinners, why ſhould you continue in your ignorance, more than theſe of your rank in other places, who can diſcourſe moſt ſenſibly of the principles of religion, and the concerns of their ſouls, and can pray to excellent purpoſe? Have you not rational ſouls as well as they? Have you not the ſame helps and advantages that they have, if you would but make uſe of them? Are you not as capable as they? You are as ſharp and knowing about worldly affairs as others: You know well enough the rent of a piece of ground, the value of corn or cattle; but, alas! know nothing of the worth of your ſouls, of Chriſt and pardon to them: You are well verſed in the art of plowing, ſowing and reaping, and know the right ſeaſons for them: but, alas! you know not your ſeaſons of mercy: You know your almanacks, the fairs and changes of the moon, you know your ſtory-books and ballads; and why might you not know your bibles as well, if you would employ the ſame parts and abilities to get ſpiritual knowledge? Have you not great plenty of the means of knowledge, if you would but attend them, and make uſe of them?

Object. ‘But I cannot read the bible, how ſhall I ‘learn knowledge?’

Anſ. You are at a very great loſs indeed, it is hard to get ignorant perſons inſtructed that cannot read: You ought to lament your loſs, and be the more in prayer for the Spirit of God to teach you, and make up that loſs; and the more deſirous to hear others read, and to wait upon the public catechiſing: And alſo, lay out yourſelves with all care yet to learn to read.

Object. ‘But I am to old to learn.’

Anſ. Are you too old to ſeek after Chriſt and ſalvation? Will your age ſave you from hell and wrath, if you die Chriſtleſs? will God ſpare old folk dying in ignorance, more than the young? Many have learned to read, who have been as old as you? were you but willing and deſirous, you would ſoon conquer all difficulties. I have heard of ſome ſervants, who have been ſo fond to learn, that they have offered to their maſters or miſtreſſes to quit part of their meat and fee, upon condition they would teach them to read: And, are not your ſouls as dear to you as theirs were to them?

Object. “It was my parents fault that did not teach “me when I was young.”

Anſ. Alas! that parents ſhould be ſo cruel to their children when young! But, wilt not thou be merciful to thyſelf, becauſe they have been cruel? Their neglect will not excuſe thine. As it was their fault that did not learn you in youth, ſo it is yours now if you remain in ignorance, and will be your eternal ruin if you continue wilfully ſo: Yea, you will thus not only bring your own blood on your head, but alſo the blood of your children and ſervants when you get families; for you will not be capable to inſtruct them yourſelves, nor will you, in all likelihood, be at pains to cauſe others do it; and ſo you will be guilty of the ſame neglect to your children, that your parents were guilty of to you.

Object. “But I am aſhamed to be learning at this “age.”

Anſ. It is indeed a ſhame for old people to be ignorant, but no ſhame to learn: Yea, though one foot were in the grave, and the other following, you ſhould ſtill be learning ſomething for your ſoul. For, what is the world's ſhame and deriſion to that woful confuſion of face that will befal the ignorant, Chriſtleſs ſinner at a day of judgment, and eſpecially ſuch as ſlight knowledge, and will not be at pains to learn? Read that fearful and thundering threatening, Prov. i. 26. 27. 28. I will laugh at your calamity, when diſtreſs and anguiſh cometh upon you; when ye call upon me, I will not anſwer; when ye ſeek me early, ye ſhall not find me. Oh! theſe words threaten againſt the ignorant, who refuſe to learn, puniſhment without pity, miſery without mercy, crying without comfort, and torment without eaſe. O what is the cauſe, ſay you, of all that ſad vengeance? See verſe 29. For that they hated knowledge, &c. As then you love your own ſouls, and would eſcape eternal damnation, as you would honour God and his Sabbath, ſee that you learn to read, ſeek inſtruction, and wait carefully upon all the means of knowledge.

III. Earthly-mindedneſs doth greatly hinder the ſanctification of the Lord's day; for, when the vanities of the world are entertained, they ſo poſſeſs the mind, that there is no room left for other thoughts: The thoughts of the world ſhut out the thoughts of God: The duſt and ſmoke of this world ſo blind the eyes of many, that they cannot diſcern the beauty of Chriſt or holineſs, tho' the brighteſt diſcoveries be made thereof this day in the ordinances: Thus, alas! ſatan defeats the whole deſign of the goſpel as to many; ſo that, though miniſters tell them from God's word of their ſoul's worth, hazard, and only refuge in Chriſt, yet they are ſo hot in purſuing the world, they do not hear or think on what is ſaid. This man hath his farm, the other his merchandize, the other his trade to look after, Luke xiv. 18. ſo that there is no time in their lives, no room in their hearts left for Chriſt. It is in vain to tell many of ſecuring a manſion or inheritance in heaven; they muſt have houſes and lands on earth. It is needleſs to tell them of providing for their ſouls; they have their families to provide for: Or to tell them of heavenly manna to their ſouls, they muſt have bread to their mouths. It is to no purpoſe to tell them of a way to get juſtice ſatisfied, or the debt of ſin paid; they muſt have their debts paid to their earthly creditors. It is in vain to preſs them to ſeek the favour and friendſhip of God; all their care is to get the countenance of this or the other man, that can do them kindneſs. And ſo, upon theſe worldly conſiderations, Chriſt the pearl of price is ſlighted, the precious ſoul rejected, and Sabbaths and ſermons are quite loſt.

Again, it is a groſs profanation of this holy day, for people to allow themſelves to think upon their trades and worldly commerce when they are in God's houſe. As Chriſt whipped buyers and ſellers out of the temple when he was on earth, ſo he will not ſuffer you to make the public aſſemblies of his people a place of merchandize, by your thoughtfulneſs about worldly gain and profit. Your buſineſs in God's houſe this day is with the great God only, and therefore you muſt attend to nothing but his work and ſervice: But, if you indulge worldly thoughts, you will provoke God, and mar all your public performances.

Be not like Martha this day, careful and troubled about many things, things that will not avail you at the dying hour, or through eternity; but imitate Mary this day, ſit at Chriſt's feet, mind the one thing neceſſary, and chuſe the good part which ſhall not be taken from you.

Moreover, conſider how dangerous this evil is to the ſalvation of your ſouls. It may be ſaid of worldlineſs, compared with other ſins, as was ſaid of Saul and David, when any one ſin kills its thouſands, this ſlays its ten thouſands: O what havock makes it in the viſible church! What Pharaoh ſaid of the Iſraelites, Exod. xiv. 3. may well be applied to many profeſſed Chriſtians, they are intangled in the land, the wilderneſs hath ſhut them in. The world, like bird lime, clogs the ſoul's wings, that it cannot mount up to heaven. Many, like Lot's wife, ſet out fairly for the Zoar of heaven; but their hearts hanker after the Sodom of this earth, which cauſeth them to look ſtill back, back, till they periſh in the way.

Again, conſider what a vain and empty thing the world is, tho' obtained. It ſuits not the nature, nor ſatisfies the deſires of the immortal ſoul: It deceives all its lovers, and in midſt of ſufficiency leaves them in ſtraits; ſo that we ought rather to pity than envy a worldling, whoſe portion is ſo ſmall, happineſs ſo ſhort, miſtake ſo great, and miſery eternal.

Think what folly it is to dig for droſs with mattocks of gold, to beſtow the precious affections of our ſouls on white and yellow clay. How monſtrous is it to ſee a man with his head and heart where his feet ſhould be! to ſee the world in the heart and on the throne, and Chriſt at the foot ſtool! to ſee the world poſſeſſing God's room both week day and Sabbath-day, and getting the ſervice which is due to him alone! How many are they, who, even on the Sabbath day, worſhip the trinity of this world, mentioned 1 John ii. 16. more than the Trinity of heaven?

IV. Forgetfulneſs of God and Chriſt is a great evil, and greatly hinders Sabbath-ſanctification. How can theſe ſanctify the Sabbath, who never mind the Author nor the end of it? And, alas! there are too many who have nothing of God in their thoughts, either Sabbath-day or week-day, Pſal. x. 4. Tho' the heart be ſtill thinking, and hundreds of thoughts paſs thro' it every hour of the day, yet God is in none of them. Strange! that every worldly trifle ſhould find room in the heart, and God can find no place in it! What is the reaſon of this? You may ſee it, Rom. i. 28. They did not like to retain God in their knowledge. Surely there is nothing in the world that we have ſo frequent mementos of, as of God: How can we look to the heavens, earth, flowers, or graſs, without minding him? A very heathen could ſay,——Præſentem refert quælibet herba Deum. Or, how can we look to our bodies, but their curious ſtructure ſhould preſently mind us of God? Yea, every time we breathe, every motion of our lungs, and beating of our pulſe ſhould be a prick or ſpur to us to mind our Preſerver; and in a ſpecial manner, on the Sabbath-day, every ordinance, every duty, every ſentence, every word ſpoken by the miniſter, ſhould mind us of God: But the matter is, the thoughts of God are burdenſome to all that live careleſs and ungodly lives; they cannot think upon him, but they mind their Judge.

But, O Chriſtian, conſider what a ſin it is to forget God, eſpecially on his own day. If we ought to ſpend every day in the fear of God, Prov. xxiii. 17. much more the Sabbath-day. What ingratitude is it to forget him this day that minded us in our low eſtate, yea, minded us when we could not mind ourſelves? The love of God in Chriſt ſhould ſwallow up all our thoughts this day. When we ſeriouſly conſider what Chriſt hath done for his people, one might think that Chriſt would never be one whole hour together out of their minds, but that they ſhould carry him up and down in their thoughts and deſires, that they ſhould lie down with thoughts of Chriſt at night, and have him like a bundle of myrrh lying all night betwixt their breaſts, that is, in their hearts; and, when they awake, they ſhould be ſtill with him: That their very dreams in the night ſhould be ſweet viſions of Chriſt, and all their words ſhould ſavour of him.

V. Averſion to duty is another heart evil, that hinders the ſanctification of the Sabbath. O how backward do we find our hearts to the duties of the Sabbath! how glad to put them by with any frivolous excuſe! how unwilling to pay God a viſit on his own day! We are ſlow to begin, and in haſte to make an end; we are heavy while the duty is a doing, and glad when it is done. Many are driven to their cloſets, as if they were going to the rack, or as if prayer were a penance rather than a privilege; they are conſtrained to it, to ſatisfy a natural conſcience. It is rather a ſervile than a ſon like performance. If conſcience, like a taſk maſter, did not laſh them to their duty, they would never perform it. Many, they would rather toil their bodies whole days and weeks at the ſoreſt labour, than ſpend one hour in ſecret upon their knees on the Lord's day. How ſad and lamentable a thing is this? Is not God's company moſt deſirable? is it not God's admirable condeſcenſion, and our higheſt honour, that ſuch poor worms as we ſhould be admitted into his preſence? Are we not naturally deſirous of acquaintance with great perſons, and why ſo backward to acquaintance with the King of heaven? Is not the Sabbath a delight to God's people? and ſhall the work of it be a drudgery to us?

Object. 'The duties requiſite on this day are ſo 'many, they coſt much difficulty and pains to perform 'them.'

Anſ. It is better to take pains, than ſuffer pains; better be bound with the cords of duty, than with the chains of darkneſs. The bonds of duty are not grievous; nay, they are our ornament and greateſt freedom, Pſal. cxix. 45. whereas ſatan and the world's ſervice is the greateſt drudgery; there is ſin in the work, and hell in the wages. Alas, that many will be at no pains for that which will bring eternal glory, but are content to be at great pains for that which will coſt eternal pains! The drunkard, thief, adulterer, run many hazards to ſerve the devil, and win damnation; they ſuffer bodily pains, want ſleep and reſt, and weary themſelves to commit iniquity. They draw iniquity with cords, and ſins as with cart ropes, Iſa. v. 18. They are yoked as it were, in the devil's plough or cart, and he makes them ſweat and draw in his ſervice. What bad work, ſad wages, and a terrible maſter have they? Who would be hired by any wages to ſerve lions and tygers? Is not the devil a roaring lion? and, will you ſerve him that will devour and tear his ſervants both ſoul and body, after they have ſerved him never ſo faithfully? Oh! ſhall the devil's ſervants out-ſtrip Chriſt's ſervants in diligence and activity? Is there any maſter like Chriſt? Is there any work or wages like his? Was there ever any of his ſervants a loſer at his hands? Will not his experienced ſervants tell us, that wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs, and that Sabbath days work is the ſweeteſt recreation? Here they have the moſt pleaſant walks, the moſt lightſome proſpects, the choiceſt company, and the ſweeteſt fellowſhip, Pſal. xxiii. 2. 3. Pſal. l. 23. There is heaven in holineſs, and gain in godlineſs; no ſuch gain or delight to be found elſewhere. Godlineſs is the moſt enriching trade in the world; God's people ſometimes gain more by it on a Sabbath day in one hour, in one ſermon, one promiſe, one prayer, one communion-table, one ſpiritual breathing, than all the rich men of the ſhire are worth, put all their eſtates together. The world will not believe this; but ſure I am, one return of prayer, one ſmile of Chriſt's face, one look of faith, one grape of Canaan, one glimpſe of the promiſed land, the head of one Goliath, the death of one luſt, the ſtrengthening of one grace which may be obtained in the duties of the Sabbath, any of theſe is an abundant recompence for all the pains we can be at in God's ſervice this day; they yield more ſweetneſs and content to the ſoul, than all the pleaſures the world can afford: The ſmalleſt gleanings of ſpiritual joy are better than a whole vintage of carnal delights.

But what is all this to that eternal weight of glory which is treaſured up in heaven, for rewarding the laborious ſervants of Chriſt? What can we do for ſo vaſt a reward? Had the Lord ſaid to us, unleſs you be content to ſpend your days in ſome howling wilderneſs, quit all worldly riches and pleaſures, pine away with poverty and want, give the fruit of your bodies, ſuffer martyrdom, or take a dip in hell, you ſhall never ſee my face in glory; ſurely there is none that knows what it is to eſcape eternal miſery, and inherit endleſs happineſs above, but would have been willing to accept of theſe conditions. How much more then, when he only requires us to accept of his Son as our Surety, and love him, part with theſe ſins that would damn us, and follow him in the pleaſant ways of holineſs; and to do all this in his grace and ſtrength, for he ſends none a warfare on their own charges? Say not then, I have no ſtrength for ſo many duties as are required upon the Sabbath. Is there not enough in Chriſt for thee? Look with an eye by faith to the power and promiſe of God in Chriſt, and every new duty will bring new ſtrength with it; they that do theſe things ſhall live in them.

VI. Hardneſs of heart hinders the ſanctification of the Sabbath. Why? hard hearted ſinners can have no delight in Sabbath work; they are not affected by the word; they cannot prize Chriſt offered in the goſpel; they are not capable of receiving the goſpel-comforts. Oh how many ſuch do every Sabbath appear before God! who can ſit and hear the moſt terrible threatenings of the word and curſes of the law denounced againſt ſin, and the ſins they are giuilty of; and yet be no more concerned than the ſeats they ſit on, or the dead that ly under their feet. Mercies or promiſes do not allure them, judgments or threatenings do not alarm them. This is a ſad caſe, and yet very common, and few ſenſible of it. Who is complaining of this plague of heart hardneſs, and laying their caſe before God, ſaying, Ah! what ſhall I do with this ſtone in my heart? A ſtone in the bladder, or kidney, is a woful pain, but the ſtone in the heart is much more dangerous and deadly; yet who is pained with that and crying to the Phyſician of ſouls to take it away, and give a heart of fleſh?

O hard hearted ſinner, conſider thy miſerable condition while thou remaineſt in a fallen ſtate under wrath. Many a ſtroke has been given thee by the hammer of the word to no purpoſe; many of the Spirit's motions haſt thou reſiſted; many a knock haſt thou deſpiſed. O tremble, leſt God give thee over, and take no more pains on thee. A heathen Felix trembled, the devils tremble for fear of God's wrath; and will thy heart be unmoved? God calls you to flee from it, miniſters call, mercies and promiſes call, judgments and threatenings call, the wounds and blood of Chriſt call; and will not thy heart be affected? The voice of the Lord is powerful, full of majeſty, breaketh the cedars, ſhaketh the wilderneſs, hath melted the hearts of thouſands; and yet cannot it break thy hard heart? Thou haſt mountains of unpardoned guilt lying on thee, and haſt thou no feeling thereof? Remember, if you be not brought to feeling now, you ſhall be brought to it ere long, to your eternal coſt and ſorrow; if the word do not waken thy heart, it is like, death will. When you begin to draw by the curtain of fleſh, and look into eternity, you will then cry, Lord, what will become of me for ever? If you do not awake, then to be ſure the firſt moment of your entry into eternity will bring you to your ſenſes; the bitings of the worm of conſcience will then make you feel; the ſtream of fire and brimſtone will melt the hardeſt heart; the hammer of juſtice will then break the heart, which the hammer of the word could not.

O then, beg of God, with the greateſt earneſtneſs, that he may give you the broken heart and a contrite ſpirit, that ſo you may have that acceptable ſacrifice to offer to him, which he never yet frowned upon, Pſal. li. 17. A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe. Auguſtine cauſed write this text over his bed when ſick. Let us cry to God for it, who alone can give it. Gravel ſtones men may remove, but heart ſtones none can remove but God: We may as eaſily remove mountains as do this; yet we muſt uſe the means: And therefore, look to him whom you have pierced, that you may mourn. Think much on the free love of Chriſt, and the bloody ſufferings your ſins did put him to. If Chriſt's love and blood will not ſoften thy heart, nothing will. Beg the Spirit of God to come and make application of the blood of Chriſt, the bleſſed Scape-goat; and then the adamantine heart will diſſolve. Cry, "Come, O Spirit of God, blow the fire of the word with thy own breath, and then it will melt hearts: Take this hammer in thy own hand, and it will break rocks. Lord, wound and heal; do the work throughly and effectually; begin it, carry it on and finiſh it: For if any of it be left for me to do it will be eternally undone, and I will be loſt for ever. Lord, complete this work, looſe my bonds, thaw my affections, and draw my heart, and take eternal glory to thee."

VII. Hypocriſy and formality in duty is oppoſite to Sabbath-ſanctification; for God requires heart-ſincerity in every piece of worſhip and duty that we perform. Yet, O how many are they who give God no more but the outward man, and the ſervice of the body! They draw nigh to God with their lips only; they pray ſo ſuperficially, as if they were unwilling that God ſhould hear them, and take away that luſt which conſcience forces them to pray againſt. They are ſo careleſs and irreverent in ſecret prayer, they would be aſhamed if any ſaw them, or overheard them. A ſtatue on a tomb, with eyes and hands lifted up, offers as good ſervice as many; only it wants a voice: And what ſignifies the voice without the affections? A parrot may be taught to repeat ſome few words of prayer, but none will call that a prayer; ſo neither will God own thy formal words of prayer. It is ſpeaking, and not praying, when the heart is wanting; he looks upon thy worſhip as no better than a ſtage-play. Many worſhip God as careleſly as if they were praying to an idol, that neither ſaw nor heard them: Nay, many heathens have worſhipped their falſe gods, Jupiter and Mars, with greater ſeriouſneſs and devotion than you do the great JEHOVAH, who made you and all the world. Why? the reaſon of all this is, all that many ſeek of religion is the name of it; and the outward form of it makes them paſs under the name of good Chriſtians among men. Tho' God ſees their hypocriſy, yet man knows it not; and that is enough to them. But, O hypocrite, conſider, the day is approaching when God will unmaſk thee before all the world. As Paul ſaid to the high prieſt, Acts xxiii. 3. ſo may I ſay to thee, God ſhall ſmite thee, thou whited wall; ſo as thy paint ſhall fall off, and thy inward rottenneſs appear to all. There will be no hiding of thyſelf among the crowd, no impoſing on an all-ſeeing God. He can eaſily diſcern a traiterous Judas under a deceitful kiſs, a ravening wolf under a ſheep's ſkin, a murdering Herod under a pretence of worſhip, a hypocritical Phariſee under a broad phylactory. He can ſpy a diſſembling devil under a Samuel's mantle, or when he would ſhroud himſelf among the ſons of God; for neither the ſophiſtry of men or devils can blind his eyes.

Again, let the hypocrite think on his folly, in loſing both his heaven here and hereafter, in drawing down upon him both the hatred of the world, and the hatred of the God of heaven. The world hates him for his ſhew of religion, and God hates him for his hypocriſy in it. Is it not lamentable folly in hypocrites to do ſomething for Chriſt, and go ſome length in the way to heaven, and yet to loſe both Chriſt and heaven for not going one ſtep further? To be like that ſcribe, Mat. xii. 34. not far from the kingdom of God, and yet never come thither? How ſad is it to periſh with heaven in view, and go to hell by the very gates of glory? The hypocrite's hope brings him to the ſhady valley, Job xviii. 14. but his candle goes out in that dark trance, and then he ſtumbles and falls for ever. It is ſad to periſh in the wilderneſs, when come to the very brink of Jordan, and in ſight of the promiſed land; to make our voyage with a pleaſant gale all the way and ſhipwreck at the very mouth of the harbour; to come within a ſtep of the gate, and die with our hands upon the threſhold.

Laſtly, Remember, as hypocriſy, if continued in, will certainly damn you; ſo it will provide a hotter hell for you than that of other ſinners, Matth. xxiv. 51. therefore be wiſe in time, and ſtudy ſincerity and uprightneſs of heart in all your dealings with God.

VIII. Wandering of heart greatly mars the performance of Sabbath duties, eſpecially hearing, praying and praiſing. Jewiſh rabbis ſay, "That tho' on the Sabbath there was much fleſh uſed for ſacrifice in the temple, yet not ſo much as one fly was ſeen ſtirring there." So neither ſhould there be a wandering thought or eye allowed, when we are about God's ſolemn worſhip this day in his houſe. What encouragement hath a huſband man to ſow upon a high way, where every man and beaſt has free paſſage? No better is the heart of a wandering hearer: We may as well caſt ſeed upon the waves of the ſea, as preach unto ſuch; for the good ſeed of the word is quite loſt upon them. Think what an affront it would be to a king, to turn your back to him, or diſcourſe with others, while he is ſpeaking to you? The motions and poſtures of your ſouls are as viſible to God, as the motions and poſtures of your bodies are to one another. Or, if a criminal were allowed to petition his prince for his life, would he break off at every ſentence, and chaſe flies through the room; you would ſay, a remiſſion were ill beſtowed upon ſuch a creature. O beware of ſuch a ridiculous behaviour before the King of heaven, when you are addreſſing him for the life of your condemned ſouls. Would you have God to hear you, when you do not hear yourſelf? Can you think he will be mindful of you, when you are not mindful of yourſelf? Think, if your prayers were written down, and all your vain thoughts interlined, what incoherent nonſenſe would they be? would you not be aſhamed to hear them all read over? would not the world cry, "Shame upon you for mocking your dread Sovereign with ſuch an impertinent addreſs?" O but thoughts are the ſame as words with God; nay, they ſpeak louder in his ears than words do in ours, Amos iv. 13. He declares unto man what is his thought. And David ſays, He tells my wanderings.

Wherefore when you enter this day into the ſanctuary, or into your cloſets, ſhut the door of your heart, ſo that worldly thoughts may not enter to trouble you. Lay ſolemn obligations and charges upon your hearts, that they wander not from God; bind the ſacrifice with cords to the altars horns; and if the birds of prey come by ſurpriſe down upon the ſacrifice, then, like Abraham, Gen. xv. 11. drive them preſently away, and ſummon every thought to attend your main buſineſs. Retract every vain thought with a ſigh, and chide with your hearts for vain excurſions; check them as Chriſt did his drowſy diſciples, What? cannot you watch with Chriſt for one hour? How then will you like to be engaged in heaven's work to all eternity, where there is no interruption?

Again, conſider the uncertainty of your time for prayer. Had a criminal but a quarter of an hour allotted him to beg his life before an earthly judge, would he ſpend it in gazing upon the court and their fine clothes, or in aſking ſome ridiculous queſtions? No, he would intreat and beg his life with all the arguments and fervency he were capable of. O ſinner, when thou kneeleſt down to beg thy ſoul's life at the hands of the Judge of quick and dead, thou knoweſt not if thou ſhalt have ſo long as a quarter of an hour for it; and wilt thou trifle it away? What if death ſurpriſe thee, and find thy heart wandering from God?

For remedies of this evil, beſides what is ſaid, ſtudy to overawe your hearts this day with a ſenſe of God's preſence and omniſcient eye. A ſervant will not ſport himſelf in his maſter's preſence, but carry gravely. Did you believe that God's eye is ſtill upon you, and notices all your thoughts, words, looks and geſtures; would you not be more circumſpect than you are? May not angels, when they ſee what gravity and decency you obſerve in preſence of a prince, and your careleſneſs and irreverence in preſence of a glorious God, conclude you no better than infidels in midſt of God's houſe? Conſider then how ſolemnly you ſet yourſelves in God's preſence, when you attend public ordinances. It was the ſenſe of this that made Bernard ſay, when he came to the church door, Stay here, all my earthly thoughts. But if they do thruſt in after you and come upon you, to divert you this day, pretending neceſſary buſineſs, as Nehemiah's enemies did to him when about the temple work, then give them ſuch a repulſe as he did, Neh. vi 3. I am doing a great work, I cannot come down; why ſhould the work ceaſe, whilſt I leave it, and come down to you? and, like him, repeat this over and over, as they repeat their ſolicitations.

Again, get love to God and his ordinances; for what we love, that we fix our minds upon, be it gain, honours or pleaſures. David found love to the word a good remedy againſt wandering thoughts in time of reading or hearing it, Pſal. cxix. 113. I hate vain thoughts, but thy law do I love. Alſo, ſtudy to accuſtom yourſelves to holy thoughts at other times; for a vain heart out of duty will be little better in duty. If your hearts be much ſet on the world at other times, your thoughts will be driving thither in time of duty, whether praying or hearing: But if they be habitually ſet upon Chriſt, then will your prayers aſcend to him like a pillar of incenſe.

Moreover, be putting up frequent ejaculations unto God, to fix your hearts, and gather your ſtraying thoughts. Pray with the pſalmiſt, Pſal. lxxxvi. 11. Unite my heart to fear thy name. Look to him that can ſtay the raging waves of the ſea, to ſtay the wandring thoughts of your heart.

Laſtly, Conſider how Jews and Heathens may put Chriſtians to the bluſh in this matter. We read of ſurpriſing inſtances of their fixed devotion in their acts of worſhip. It is a ſtrange conſtancy and fixedneſs that is ſpoken of the Jewiſh prieſts at Jeruſalem, that when the Romans broke into the city, and ruſhed into the temple ready to kill them: yet they went on with the rites of the temple, as if there had been no ſuch thing. Alſo, ſtrange was the fixedneſs of that Spartan youth, that held the cenſer to Alexander while he offered ſacrifice, who ſuffered a coal, that fell on his arm, to burn his fleſh, rather than by crying, or letting fall the cenſer, he ſhould diſturb that worſhip. May not theſe inſtances ſhame us, that have more light, for our unfixedneſs and inconſtancy in the ſervice of the Great Jehovah?

IX. Wearying of the duties of the Sabbath is another evil we muſt guard againſt this day. O how many are there like thoſe, Amos viii. 5. who ſay in their hearts, When will the Sabbath be gone? and with thoſe, Mal. i. 13. What a wearineſs is it? Many weary as much of ſermons, as if they were in the ſtocks all the while they attend them. O what would come of you, if Chriſt were as ſoon weary of calling, as you are of hearing! How many Sabbaths have you kept Chriſt ſtanding and knocking at your doors, and he is not yet weary, for all your long deafneſs to his knocks, and refuſing to open to him, but continues ſtill to knock? O let this ſhame us out of our wearying to knock at God's door. Alas! a quarter of an hour in prayer wearies many of us. Is this the requital we give to Chriſt for all his love and patience? May not he ſay, "O believer, I did not ſoon weary of my bloody ſweat " in the garden for thee; nay, I was longer on the " painful croſs, than ever thou waſt on thy knees in " prayer, or meditating on my love and ſufferings." O ſhould a believer ever weary of that ſubject? Theſe idolaters, Acts xix. 45. could cry out with a loud voice for the ſpace of two hours, and not weary in commending their idol Diana; and ſhall we weary of hearing a ſermon in commendation of Chriſt, for the ſpace of one hour? O where are theſe animal ſpirits that men have in worldly buſineſs? where is that vigour and activity that many ſhew in their bodily recreations, nay, in ſerving of their luſts? Many weary not to ſpend whole days and nights in drinking and gaming; but they grudge to give God one day for his worſhip or ſo much as one hour of his own day. You weary not to provide for your bodies and preſent things, but ſoon weary to provide for your ſouls and eternity: You weary not to beſtow time and pains to purchaſe a ſmall eſtate; but you can ſpare no time nor pains to ſeek the kingdom of heaven Many are quick enough about worldly things, but, like Dagon, they have no head to think, nor hands to act, when the ark is preſent. The Sabbath is a long and weariſome day to them. Some think both forenoon and afternoon of this day too much to be given to God; one of them may ſerve: Or they linger in coming to the church in the morning, as being glad to have a part of God's day and worſhip driven by ere they come; and not a few ſteal away before worſhip be ended; they'd rather ſpend the day any way than in God's ſervice. O ſinner, who is the loſer by this, but thy own ſoul! Doſt thou think a Sabbath long, a ſermon long, a prayer long? How long then will it be to be baniſhed from God's preſence, and lie on beds of fire thro' a whole eternity? You will weary eternally there, but it will not mend you: The doors are not open there, as the church doors now are, to let you go in and out at your pleaſure (as ſome greceleſs perſons do in time of divine worſhip) no, you will find hell's gates ſhut with invincible bolts, and mountains of braſs rolled to them; and there you muſt dwell and lie roaring, as priſoners of wrath for ever. Poor carnal wearying ſoul, canſt thou ever think of going to heaven, to worſhip and adore God for ever without intermiſſion, when ſo ſhort a time of this work wearies thee now? To be ſure, heaven would be a hell to thee in thy preſent unconverted ſtate; thou wouldſt give never ſo much to be out of it again, wert thou in it.

But, O believer, how ill doth it become thee to weary of Sabbath-work here below, that profeſſeſt to be preparing for that everlaſting Sabbath above, the work of which hath no end? Wilt thou weary to ſpend one whole Sabbath here in ſerving Chriſt, who wearies not to ſpend many whole Sabbaths and years in ſerving thee? Conſider how buſy Chriſt is this day in heaven in thy behalf: Tho' the Sabbath be a day of reſt to us from our ordinary work, yet it is none to Chriſt; he is buſy thro' the whole of it pleading and making interceſſion for thee, without fainting in this work; and wilt thou ſo ſoon tire to act for him? Doth he mind thee ſo conſtantly, and wilt thou ſo ſoon weary to think on him?

X. Sleeping or drowſineſs, in time of divine ſervice, is a profanation of the Lord's day, and hinders our profiting by the ordinances. Therefore guard againſt it. Many are watchful enough about the devil's ſervice; they can ſpend whole nights in drinking, gaming, &c. without ſleep; but cannot hold up their eyes half an hour in hearing a ſermon. Conſider what an evil cuſtom this is, you who are chargeable with it, and reform it. How ridiculous were it for a man that came to the market to buy proviſion for himſelf and his family, to fall aſleep in the market-place, and ſo miſs his errand? Do you not come on the Sabbath, which is heaven's market day, to the ordinances to get proviſion for your ſouls; and will you fall aſleep in the mean time of the market, and ſo go home empty? What do you know but, while you ſlept, that truth was delivered that might have ſaved your ſouls? Will a man fall aſleep at his food? and yet you ſleep while the bread of life is breaking to you, and the waters of life are running by you. How ſad is it, that the ſoul's mouth ſhould at this time be clothed with drowſineſs and aſleep, that it cannot receive one crumb or drop? O how would a damned ſoul prize the opportunity that you ſleep away! Remember it will not always laſt with you, the Sabbath and ſermon will quickly come that will be your laſt; and who knows but this or the next may be it? If you thought you were going ſtraight from the church to God's tribunal, would you not be more watchful in hearing? There is none can aſſure you but it may be ſo: However that be, I can aſſure you, you muſt ſhortly anſwer for every ſermon you are preſent at; God will aſk, Where are the fruits of ſo many ſermons? It will be a fearful item in your accounts, So many ſermons ſlept away: How will you anſwer for it?

Again, conſider how provoking this practice is to God. Would not a prince be diſpleaſed with a ſubject, if he ſhould fall aſleep while he is ſpeaking to him? would not a judge be angry with a criminal, if he ſhould ſleep when he were about to pronounce his ſentence? And have you not to do with the King of kings, and Judge of the world, while you are hearing the word? Is not your life at the ſtake when you are hearing it? according to that word in Deut. xxxii. 46. 47. Set your hearts unto all the words which I teſtify among you this day; for it is not a vain thing for you; becauſe it is your life. Remember what befel Eutychus when he ſlept in time of ſermon, Acts xx. it almoſt coſt him his life: God made him a monument of diſpleaſure, for a warning to all ſleepers: He got a ſad fall, but you may get a worſe; he fell to the ground, but you may fall to the loweſt hell, and there you will not get a Paul to take you up as he got. Your ſin is more aggravated than his: it was mid-night when he ſlept, but you ſleep at mid-day; Paul had preached ſeveral hours, but half an hour and leſs puts you aſleep. You have cauſe to fear, leſt God make you a monument of his wrath, or that he ſay, Sleep on, till the flames of hell awake you. It is truly a wonder how any can ſleep at the worſhip of God, either in the church or family, and not dream of hell fire in their ſleep; for their danger is greater than they are aware of; ſatan is very buſy at ſuch a time; While you ſleep, he ſucceſsfully ſows his tares, Mat. xiii. 25. your ſleeping time is a ſeed time for the devil, and a ſpring time for luſts.

If you would remeid this evil, ſtrive and wreſtle againſt it, and pray for help to do it; go timeouſly to bed on Saturday's night, and ſee that you be temperate thro' the week; for they that wake much in the alehouſe, will be fair to ſleep in the church.

XI. Prejudice at preachers, and quarrelling with them for their plainneſs and freedom in reproving ſin, mars the ſanctification of the Sabbath, and your getting good by the ordinances. Some hear miniſters, as the Phariſees heard Chriſt, with ill-will to them, and a deſign to catch advantage againſt them; they would make a man an offender for a word. Others are ſo faſt aſleep in ſin, that they cannot endure miniſters to thunder in their ears, or lighten in their eyes by plain and piercing ſermons, becauſe they diſturb their reſt. Aſa was wroth with the ſeer upon this account, and put him in priſon; ſo dealt Herod with John, and Ahab with Micaiah. Many, like Ahab, think the miniſter has a pique at them, when he reproves ſin freely: He never ſpeaks good of me, ſaith Ahab. O ſinner, this is the wrong way; for when God wounds thy ſin, and darts conviction into thy ſoul, thou ſhouldſt thank the ſpirit of God for his merciful viſiting of thee, and lay open your luſts, and ſay, 'Smite, Lord, with a deadly 'blow theſe enemies that would not have thee to rule 'over them; kill my luſts, and ſave my ſoul. Bleſt 'Phyſician, wound and heal; cauſe theſe convictions 'end in my converſion here, and ſalvation hereafter.' —An honeſt heart loves that ſermon beſt, that wounds his luſts deepeſt. He ſays to the word, or the miniſter, that ſtops his career in ſin, as David to Abigail, 1 Sam. xxv. 32, 33. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, which ſent thee this day to meet me; and bleſſed be thy advice, &c. If your eyes were opened, you would look on plain rouzing preachers as your beſt friends in the world. If you were in hazard of burning or drowning by falling into the fire or water, would you be angry with one that will pull you out, and ſave your life, tho' he ſhould wound you, or break an arm of you in the doing of it? Nay, you would think him your friend, and thank him for his kindneſs. And will you be angry with a miniſter for plucking you as a brand out of the burning, by denouncing wrath againſt ſin, and telling you your hazard in plain language?

XII. Slighting the offers of the goſpel, and Chriſt tendered to us therein, is a great profanation of the Lord's day, and directly oppoſite to the deſign of it: Yet alas! it is a moſt prevailing evil among us. Chriſt calls, but we will not hear; he offers himſelf and his purchaſe, but we will not accept; he allures us with his mercy, but we will not turn to him; he oft waters us with the dew and rain of goſpel ordinances, but little fruit follows: We are like the barren field, on which much coſt is beſtowed, but the crop is nothing anſwerable. How many Sabbaths are ſpent, and ſermons preached and no good done? At one ſermon of Peter's, there were three thouſand ſouls converted: But, alas! we fear there are three thouſand ſermons preached now, and not one ſoul brought in. Many times is the goſpel net let down in vain: O that Chriſt would come and direct it to be let down on the right ſide of the ſhip! I ſhall endeavour briefly to lay before you the great ſin and miſery of rejecting Chriſt and the goſpel offers.

2dly, It is the greateſt affront and indignity that can be offered to the majeſty of God and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. It is even called a treading under foot the Son of God, and his precious blood, Heb. x. 28. 29. which is there reckoned a greater ſin than the breach of all the ten commands; it is a ſin which neither heathens nor devils are guilty of. To tread upon the Son of God, O monſtrous guilt! who would be guilty of this? May you ſay, Am I a dog (as Hazael ſaid to the prophet) that I ſhould do this thing? Yea, every ſoul that ſlights Chriſt and his goſpel offers, doth it. How provoking muſt it be, to trample on God's moſt precious Jewel, wherein he is highly delighted and well pleaſed, Mat. iii. 17. to lothe that which is moſt ſweet unto God? What horrid ingratitude is it, to ſlight the remedy that the infinitely wiſe God hath been at ſo much pains and expences in preparing for us, and which hath coſt him more than the creating of ten thouſand worlds would have done? a work upon which his heart is ſo ſet, and wherein he hath ſo diſplayed his glorious attributes and perfections; yea a work which he prefers to all his other works: How criminal muſt it be to undervalue that? Again what a ſlight muſt it be to the divine Majeſty, to prefer the devil and luſts before him? When ſatan and luſts knock, they preſently find acceſs; yea, the leaſt whiſper they make is hearkened to: But tho' Chriſt cry aloud, and lift up his voice like a trumpet in the goſpel offers; yea, tho' he call, intreat, beſeech, and complain, he is diſregarded, and finds ſhut doors. 'What iniquity (may Chriſt ſay) do you find in me,' that the devil and luſts ſhould be preferred before me? Can they do for you what I can do? 'Do ye thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh and unwiſe?'

3dly, Refuſing Chriſt as offered in the goſpel is the great condemning ſin of the world, ſee John iii. 19. 36. Heb. iii. 19. The ruin of ſinners under the goſpel is laid at the door of this ſin, as if there were none other charged upon them: And juſtly it is ſo; for if a malefactor were offered his life upon his kneeling and accepting the king's remiſſion, if he refuſed to do this, it may well be ſaid, that his refuſal hangs him. O ſinner, no other ſin in the world, however great it be, would condemn you, if you were not guilty of this ſin of ſlighting Chriſt: But this is the ſin which binds the guilt of all your other ſins hard and faſt upon you; yea, it is the ſin that binds up the hands of omnipotency, that it cannot ſave you. Chriſt's merits, tho' infinite, cannot juſtify you, if you reject them; for the beſt medicine that ever was compounded cannot heal, unleſs it be applied.

4thly, Unbelief and ſlighting of Chriſt, tends to defeat the whole deſign of the goſpel, and to render Chriſt's whole undertaking uſeleſs: For, what is it but a ſaying on the matter, You have no need of him; and His death was to no purpoſe? May not Chriſt look with a grieved heart upon unbelieving ſinners, and ſay, 'I have gone a long journey, ſhed my precious blood, and ſuffered the pains of hell, to ſave ſinners: But theſe ſay on the matter, I might have ſtaid in heaven; I might have kept my blood in my veins; or, I died as a fool dieth: They give me no thanks for all my pains.' O ſinners, conſider what you are doing; would you go about to fruſtrate Chriſt's glorious expedition, or give him cauſe to repent of his death and bloody agony?

5thly, This ſin brings on inevitable wrath and miſery, Heb. ii. 3. As Chriſt hath cords of love, ſo he hath a rod of iron; if you break his cords, he will take his rod: If mercy manage it, it will but wound you; but, if juſtice take it, it will grind you to powder. O provoke not the Mediator to take his iron rod; for his vengeance is heavy. Tho' he be the meek Lamb of God, and be clad with prieſtly garments, yet he hath feet like braſs, as if they burned in a furnace, both heavy and hot to trample on his enemies, Lev. i. 13. 15. If you refuſe Chriſt, your miſery is as inevitable as that of the devils: For they periſh, becauſe they have no Mediator; and you periſh, becauſe you will not have a Mediator. O why will you put yourſelves in the ſame caſe with devils? Nay, your caſe, in ſome reſpects, will be worſe than theirs; for they never rejected a remedy. The moſt ſcorching corners in the fiery oven of God's wrath ſeem to be reſerved for unbelievers, Luke xii. 46. The breath of his mouth, that before invited them, will eternally blow their fire, Iſa. xxx. 33. Mercy itſelf will be incenſed, and plead againſt them at the great day. You will be more inexcuſable than the heathens: They will have ſomething to ſay for themſelves, We never had an offer of Chriſt, we never once heard of him; but what can you ſay for yourſelves, who have had ſo many thouſand offers, and ſo many knocks and calls every Sabbath to accept of Chriſt? You muſt ſurely ſtand ſpeechleſs: there remains nothing for you but a fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation which ſhall devour the adverſaries: Yea, it will be more tolerable for Sodom in that day of judgment, than it will be for you, Mat. xi. 22. 23. The ſins of Sodom were ſo monſtrous, that they made a hell upon earth. O what puniſhment muſt they have now, when the beginnings of it in this world were ſo terrible? If the puniſhment of the leaſt ſin will be intorable in that lake, O what will the puniſhment of the Sodomites horrid and unatural ſins be? Yet their caſe will be eaſy, in reſpect of them that have ſlighted the goſpel: Theſe will even gnaſh their teeth for envy of the happineſs of a damned Sodomite. Nay, O goſpel ſlighter, you will then wiſh a thouſand times you had rather been living in Sodom, when fire and brimſtone was rained from heaven on it, than have lived in Scotland, where manna was rained, and the light ſhined ſo abundantly.

So much for inward ſins.

Of outward ſins of commiſſion on the Lord's day.

II. I Come, in the next place, to caution you againſt outward ſins, whereby the Lord's day is too commonly profaned.

Firſt, Beware of the ſins of the tongue: It is a moſt eſſential part of true religion to govern the tongue aright: For, if any man ſeem to be religious (ſaith James) and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain. The tongue is a moſt unruly thing; and therefore the pſalmiſt treats it, as he would do an unreaſonable beaſt, Pſal. xxxix. 1. He keeps it in as with a bridle. God hath ſet a double hedge about this unruly member, both of the teeth and lips (to ſhew with what care we ſhould keep it) and yet how oft doth it break looſe, notwithſtanding of both? God hath alſo placed it betwixt the brain and the heart, that it might take counſel of both; and yet how oft doth it act, without adviſing with either the one or the other? God hath given us two ears and but one tongue; to teach us to hear much, and ſpeak little. Be ſwift to hear and ſlow to ſpeak, James i. 19. for he that refraineth his lips is wiſe, Prov. x. 19. often have we cauſe to repent our ſpeaking, but ſeldom our ſilence.

As we ought to watch our tongues every day, ſo eſpecially on the Lord's day; for on this day we are forbid to ſpeak our own words, Iſa. lviii. 13. not only muſt we this day abſtain from lying, ſwearing, reproaching, backbiting, &c. but alſo from all idle words, yea from all ſuch diſcourſe as is unſuitable to the work of this day, tho' it might be lawful on other days. The hearts of men may be very much known by their Sabbath day's diſcourſe; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeaketh. We gueſs by people's language what country they belong to. Is thy ſpeech vain and worldly upon the Lord's day? It is a ſhrewed ſign of a carnal unrenewed heart; Thou art a Galilean, thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee. This is God's holy day, and he will have it ſanctified by our whole man, and by our words as well as our actions: Set a watch then this day before your mouth and keep the door of your lips, and ſtrive to ſeaſon your ſpeech with grace; for you may profane the Sabbath by your words as well as by your works, and by vain words as well as by vile words. O then, what cauſe have we to lament the profanation of the Sabbath by vain and idle diſcourſes, which is ſo common among us? If Chriſt ſhould join himſelf to many this day, in their coming to and going from the church, as he did the two diſciples going to Emmaus on this day, Luke xxiv. 15, 17. and aſk, What manner of communications are theſe which you have one with another? might not this queſtion ſtrike us ſpeechleſs, and make us bluſh? Who can tell what day this is by many people's diſcourſes? Jeſts, ſtories and idle talk are as common with them this day as any other. It was Plato's propoſal, That mens ſpeeches at their meetings and tables ſhould be written. If this were practiſed on the Sabbath, would it not put many to ſhame, to read over their words before them? But tho' men do not regiſter them, yet, remember, God doth it, eſpecially on his own day, which he hath ſo much honoured. He has a book of remembrance to write down all that men ſay, as well as what they do, Mal. iii. 16. See what he ſaith, Mat. xi. 36. that ſcripture may cauſe us all tremble, and take heed to our words, while we have a day to live; I ſay unto you, that every idle word that men ſhall ſpeak they ſhall give account thereof at the day of judgment. O what long counts will many have to clear for idle words on the Sabbath, beſides on other days! And if they muſt account for idle words, how much more for ill and ſinful words, for baſe lyes, and bloody oaths? O the tongue is a world of iniquity? How ſhall we anſwer for it at God's bar, without timeous repentance, and fleeing to Chriſt for mercy? If you would have your tongues renewed and to become as choice ſilver, to ſpeak the language of Canaan on the Lord's day; then ſee to get ſanctified hearts: Cleanſe the fountain, that the ſtreams may run clear; waſh your heart from wickedneſs, and let not vain thoughts lodge within you, Jer. iv. 14. Shut out vain thoughts, as well as vile thoughts: And, if they break in upon you this day, do as the raviſh'd virgin under the law, cry out to God for help, and you ſhall not be held guilty.

Secondly, There are ſins in action, whereby the Sabbath is frequently profaned by many.

1ſt, Many incroach upon the Lord's holy day, and profane it by worldly diverſions and recreations, and by ſeeking their pleaſures in the fields, which I have handled already at ſome length: Others profane this holy day by making it a day of idleneſs, or a viſiting-day among their friends and neighbours: Others by making it a reckoning day with workmen and ſervants: And many profane it by doing unneceſſary ſervile work in and about their houſes, which might either be done on the Saturday before, or delayed till Monday thereafter; ſuch as the gathering peaſe, ſhearing of graſs, cutting and ſhearing of kail, fetching in water, ſweeping the houſe, drying of cloaths, brewing of ale, and the like. Theſe things not being works of neceſſity or mercy, but our own works, done for our worldly profit, or to indulge our carnal eaſe or pleaſure, are certainly unlawful on the Sabbath, according to Iſa. lviii. 13. Yet, alas! how is the Lord's day profaned by theſe practices in ſome places of the land? Let miniſters do and ſay what they will, ſtill many will be ſtealing a part of God's day for their ſervile work: and it cannot but be heinous and provoking in the ſight of God, being done againſt ſo much light and manifold reproofs.

Object. "Why do you exclaim ſo againſt us on this account? we do no harm to any; we thank God we are not thieves, extortioners, drunkards," &c.

Anſ. Nay, you are thieves, for you rob God, and ſteal from him that which is his proper right, for the ſeventh day is the Lord's. You would be aſhamed to be found ſtealing any of your neighbour's goods, and think you no ſhame to be found robbing God of his holy day? Is not ſacrilege the worſt kind of theft, ſtealing from God worſe than ſtealing from man, the ſins againſt the firſt table greater than the ſins againſt the ſecond table? Beſides, they that begin thus to ſteal from God, may, ere all be done, come and ſteal from men too; for falſe to God, true to no man. Many a thief at the gibbet hath confeſſed, that he began his looſe life and ſtealing with breaking of the Sabbath-day; that this was his leading ſin, and the occaſion of all the reſt.

Object. "We are not ſingular, we do but what neighbours and others about us do."

Anſ. You ought to be ſingular, and do more for God and your ſouls than others, if you would enter in at the ſtrait gate. God forbids you to follow a multitude to do evil, Exod. xxiii. 2. The commonneſs of a ſin doth not extenuate but aggravate it in the ſight of God; for, the more common it be, it hath the louder cry in his ears for vengeance. God hath common plagues for common ſins in this world, and a common hell for common ſinners in the world to come. Think not, that your aſſociation with others will anywiſe alleviate your torments in that lake below; nay, it will rather heighten them: For the more faggots are thrown into a fire, it will burn the more vehemently.

Object. "Theſe things which we do are but little trifles, ſoon done, and do not hinder God's ſervice on the Sabbath."

Anſ. 1ſt, Was not gathering a few ſticks on the Sabbath as little? yet we ſee how highly God reſented it. Think no ſin ſmall which is committed againſt an eternal God, and his holy law. There is more evil in the leaſt ſin, than all the angels in heaven, or ten thouſand worlds can expiate; and, if its guilt or puniſhment due to it were laid upon thee, it would make thee gnaſh thy teeth eternally, and curſe the day that ever thou waſt born: Nothing leſs than the death of the eternal Son of God can make atonement for the leaſt ſin. Believe it then, that leſſer ſins, if known and reſerved, will carry thee to hell as ſurely as greater ſins; for, the leſs the ſin be, the leſs tentation haſt thou to commit it, and the leſs excuſe for it. A ſmall leak in a ſhip kept open will ſink her, as well as a greater; a ſtab with a pen knife will kill a man as well as a ſword. If thou alloweſt ſatan but the ſmalleſt grip of thy ſoul, he will pull thee to hell by it, even as a butcher can drag a beaſt to the ſhambles by one foot, as well as when bound by all four: And, if ſatan get thee to hell, he doth not much care by what ſins thou goeſt thither, whether ſmall or great.

2. God hath framed all his commands in infinite wiſdom, and he beſt knows what is conſiſtent with his own worſhip, and what is moſt for his own glory. It is preſumpion in any man to ſay, that this or that piece of our work on the Sabbath will be no hinderance to the ſervice of God, ſeeing he himſelf hath ſaid, In it thou ſhalt do no manner of work: The Iſraelites muſt not gather manna this day, Exod. xvi. O might ſome have ſaid, "Why? it will not hinder God's ſervice; we gather it early in the morning, and ſo we will be at God's worſhip in time enough, and have all the reſt of the day to ſerve him: Again, we need not travel for it; it lies round about the camp, and near our very doors; it will be no great labour: And beſides we may have good thoughts in time of doing it." No you muſt not be wiſer than God; he hath ſet apart this day for his own uſe, and you muſt not cut and carve upon it.

In like manner, ſome excuſe their walking or travelling upon the Lord's day; O, ſay they, we can employ our thoughts profitably by the way. But, tho' you could do it, pray, can you undertake that your example ſhall have no ill effect upon others who are looking on you? What think you of that awful word, Matth. v. 19. Whoſoever ſhall break one of theſe leaſt commandments, and ſhall teach men ſo (that is, ſhall make others break it by what he doth or ſaith) he ſhall be called the leaſt in the kingdom of heaven?

2dly, Vanity and gaudineſs of apparel is oppoſite to the ſanctification of the Sabbath. Some dreſs up themſelves this day in ſuch vain attire, and undecent faſhions, as tend to draw the eyes of others to gaze upon them, and ſo their hearts to wander from God and his worſhip. Think what guilt you hereby draw upon yourſelves, of the ſins of others as well as your own. The practices of ſome heathens may put many profeſſed Chriſtians among us to the bluſh. Valerius Maximus tells of a heathen young man, named Sparina, who was exceeding beautiful; but obſerving that many fixed their eyes on him, and fearing the conſequences of it, he diſfigured his face, leaſt his beauty ſhould prove a ſnare to others. May not this heathen condemn ſuch, who are ſo far from diſfiguring themſelves leſt they ſhould prove a tentation to others, that they diſfigure their faces by painting and patching, to ſeem more beautiful than God has made them, without fearing whatever the conſequences of it may prove. Is not this a ſhewing a diſlike of God's workmanſhip, and a deſire to mend it? Jezebel was infamous for this art, and no ſober woman ſhould deſire to follow her faſhion. A Chriſtian ſhould be ſo far from being proud or vain of his apparel, that the ſight of his garments ſhould humble him, and keep him in mind how he came to need them: Was it not ſin that ſtript man of his glory, covered him with ſhame, and put him to ſeek clothes for to hide it? Would it not be diſtraction in a malefactor to pride himſelf in a ſtigma which he had got for a foul crime? Conſider alſo the garments you are proud of, what they are: The beaſts have the ſame naturally to cover them, and will you be proud of a beaſt's covering? It was the ſaying of a heathen to a vain gallant, 'Why art thou proud of that which a ſheep wore before thee?' Or, what tho' they be finer than wool? yet their original is no better, but rather worſe: What are velvets, ſilks and ſatins, but the excrements of a vile worm? and is that a matter to be vain of? Remember, that ere long God will cauſe thee wear another ſuit thou wilt have ſmall reaſon to be proud of; he will even clothe thee with worms and putrefaction. May not the thoughts hereof keep you humble, and teach you to come to the church gravely and decently apparelled? eſpecially ſince you come into the preſence of that God who reſiſts the proud, but gives grace to the humble.

3dly, The inſtitution of holy days is an incroachment upon the fourth command, and oppoſite to the ſanctification of the Sabbath, which is the only day now appointed to be kept holy to God. What is it, but an uſurping of Chriſt's legiſlative power, and a viliſying of the Lord's day to ſet ſaints days, or days of human inſtitution, on a level with it, by obliging people to abſtain from labour thereupon. The church hath no power to conſecrate ſuch days: nay, the apoſtles did it not: There is no word of their conſecrating a day to Stephen the proto-martyr, nor to James whom Herod killed with the ſword. Yea, it may be reckoned an idolatrous practice to conſecrate days to ſaints and angels, and keep them to their honour for publiſhing their praiſe, and commemorating their acts, ſince this is a piece of worſhip that belongs only to God.

Laſtly, Not a few in ſome parts of the country do profane this holy day, by their ſet cabals and drinking-meetings upon it, by reading profane books, and telling profane ſtories, by ſcoffing at religion and religious perſons, and by many other acts of wickedneſs. Alas! what helliſh madneſs is this, that ſome are given up to! It is even a riding poſt to hell, a dedicating God's holy day to the honour and ſervice of the devil, a hanging out a flag of defiance againſt heaven, and declaring war againſt your Maker. It is the ſaying of one, “To “keep the Sabbath in an idle manner, is to keep the “Sabbath of oxen or aſſes; to keep the Sabbath in di-“verſions and pleaſures, is to keep the Sabbath of the “golden calf. But to keep the Sabbath in drunkenneſs “and lewdneſs, is the Sabbath of ſatan, or the devil's “holy day.” O profane ſinners, what a dreadful mark of wickedneſs is it, to dedicate God's day to the devil! You cannot poſſibly offer a greater affront and indignity to the God of heaven, than to ſerve the devil in the works of darkneſs, upon that very day which is ſolemnly conſecrated to the honour and ſervice of the great God. And, can you think that a jealous God will paſs ſuch an indignity, and take no notice of it? Do ye thus provoke the Lord to jealouſy? are ye ſtronger than he? Will you fight againſt him that made heaven and earth with a word, and by a word can unhinge them again; yea, by the breath of his mouth can crumble you to duſt? What are you in his ſight, but as a handful of ſilly worms? and do you think to be able to wage war againſt the Almighty? No, no; be the combination never ſo ſtrong, the rebels never ſo ſtout, the enemies never ſo numerous, he is fully able to maſter them, and will certainly do it, Prov. xi. 21. Tho' hand join in hand, yet the wicked ſhall not be unpuniſhed. O what cauſe have we to pity and pray for ſuch heaven daring ſinners, and weep in ſecret places for their ſouls, who wilfully deſtroy themſelves, and pour contempt on their Maker; who live as if either there were no hell, or were afraid it ſhould be full ere they got thither; and who ſeem to long to be companions of devils, and damned ſpirits! The God of infinite mercy open the eyes and ſtop the career of ſuch, before they be beyond the reach of mercy.

And, before I cloſe, let me aſk the breakers of the Sabbath, What they will anſwer to the Author of the Sabbath, for deſpiſing and abuſing ſuch a rare privilege as the Sabbath is? When the Lord calls you poor ſinful creatures, who deſerve to be puniſhed eternally from his preſence, to come and enter into his reſt, and refreſh your ſouls with the views of his redeeming love, and enrich them with the treaſures of his grace ſet open before you; O what a ſin muſt it be for you to turn your back upon them, and go about to weary the Lord by your ſins, when he offers ſweet reſt to you! O believe it, ſirs, Sabbath breaking is not ſuch a light ſin as many imagine; ſurely the day is very near when you ſhall be brought to think on theſe days you now miſ-ſpend and make light of. O how will you then mourn for the loſs of theſe precious Sabbaths which God gave you to find peace and reſt to your ſouls in, when you ſhall have no reſt night nor day, but the ſmoke of your burning and torment ſhall aſcend for ever and ever! How will you mourn then to ſee Abraham's boſom afar off, and thouſands at reſt in it whom you hated, and where you might been at reſt as well as they, if you had not diſpiſed the reſt of the Sabbath here below! It is ſaid, Lam. i. 7. Jeruſalem remembered in the days of her miſeries, all her pleaſant things that ſhe had in the days of old; then the adverſaries ſaw her, and did mock at her Sabbaths. O the days of your miſeries approach. O Sabbath-breakers, when with ſad hearts ye ſhall remember the pleaſant ordinances and ſeaſons of grace you had of old; and then the devils and heathens will mock at you for the loſs of your Sabbaths! Why then ſhould you go to add to the ſins and miſeries of your eternal ſtate, the heinous guilt of abuſing ſuch a great number of precious Sabbaths as God in his mercy now affords you for the ſaving of your ſouls!

An EXHORTATION to ſanctiſy the LORD'S DAY.

I Shall conclude this ſubject with a ſerious exhortation to all ranks, ſtrictly to obſerve the Lords day. Read and conſider what hath been already ſaid, and you will find many arguments for preſſing this exhortation: Nay, this is the ſcope of all that hath been ſaid. But, that you may the more effectually be convinced of the excellency and neceſſity of this duty, I ſhall further ſubjoin theſe few motives.

I. The ſtrict obſervation of the Sabbath is the moſt effectual mean for preventing atheiſm and profaneneſs, in regard that, by the frequent recurring thereof, the remembrance of Chriſt and heaven is ſtill kept up, and ſin and vice are kept under conſtant rebukes and diſgrace. If it were not for the obſervation of the Sabbath, atheiſm and irreligion would quickly overſpread the world: And there is nothing, tends more to harden the heart, ſear the conſcience, and give looſe reins to ſcandalous ſins and outbreakings, than the profanation of the Sabbath. This (as hath been ſaid) many malefactors at gibbets have confeſſed to have been the firſt beginning of their looſe lives, and that which paved the way to their other wicked courſes, and provoking God to leave them to fall into theſe heinous crimes which brought them to ſuch fatal ends.

II. God's great goodneſs and gracious deſign in allowing you the Sabbath, lays you under ſtrong obligations to keep it conſcientiouſly: He gives it not for a penance but a privilege. It is not that he may get advantage from you, but that he may give bleſſings to you. He hath not commanded the buſineſs of the world to ceaſe every ſeventh day, becauſe he is tried with governing the ſame, or to take any eaſe to himſelf; but it is that he may give reſt to your bodies, and heavenly refreſhment to your ſouls. Would you have Chriſt and the riches of his grace? Would you have your ſouls nouriſhed, and weak graces repaired? Then keep the Sabbath, for it is God's weekly market-day; and a free market it is, wherein we may buy without money and without price, the richeſt commodities that heaven and earth can afford, even the bread and water of life for the lives of our ſouls, the wine of Chriſt's blood to chear us, the milk of his word to nouriſh us, the gold of his grace to enrich us, and his precious eye-ſlave to enlighten us, the white raiment to clothe and adorn us. Is this day ſo profitable to us, and will we not regard it? It is the ſoul's feſtival, a day of reaping and ingathering, and of laying up in ſtore for the time to come. It is God's ſtated alms-day, or public deal-day, wherein he ſcatters bleſſings and crumbs of the bread of life among needy ſouls. It is the queen of days, the dawning of glory, and day-break of heaven. It is the day for aſcending mount Tabor, to ſee Chriſt tranſigured before your eyes: and for getting to the top of Piſgah, to get a ſight of the promiſed land. O then! what horrid ingratitude muſt it be to a good God to profane this bleſſed day, and ſlight God's unſpeakable kindneſs in allowing it to us for our ſouls advantage?

III. The ſtrict obſervation of the Sabbath is an excellent mean to ſweeten both the thoughts of death and heaven to us. 1ſt, As for death a retiring from the world once a week, will prepare us to welcome our ſinful removal from it the more chearfully. But they who think it hard to leave their worldly concerns for a day to worſhip God, when they expect to return to them on the morrow; what a hard pull muſt it be for them to part with them altogether at death never more to come back to them? And this we muſt all ſhortly do, whether we will or no: But to a conſcientious keeper of the Sabbath, the parting with the world will not be ſuch a hard taſk. 2dly, It will alſo ſweeten the thoughts of heaven to us; for the work and comforts of the Sabbath below, are the foretaſtes of the employments and enjoyments of the everlaſting Sabbath above: And they who delight in the Sabbaths on earth (which are the days of heaven, and typical reſemblances of it) cannot but rejoice in the forethoughts of celebrating the eternal Sabbath above, in the immediate fruition of God's preſence, and beholding him as he is forevermore. But the thoughts of heaven can be nowiſe pleaſant to a Sabbath-breaker; yea, it would be an uneaſy priſon to him: For, if it be a penance to him to be a few days in God's worſhip now, what a puniſhment would it be to him to be engaged in this work for ever?

IV. Conſider who it is that requires you to ſanctify the Sabbath, even that good and gracious God who giveth you all things richly to enjoy; that God who giveth you your being, your breath, your health, your food, and all earthly comforts. O how bountiful is he to the ſons of men! he gives you the ſun in the heavens to ſhine upon your bodies, and the Son of his love to die for your ſouls. He allows you ſix days for your profit and pleaſure, he reſerves one for his glory and ſervice; and will you not frankly give him his one day, when he is ſo liberal to you? Say then to your vain companions, when they would tempt you to profane the Lord's day, as Joſeph to Potiphar's wife, when ſhe tempted him to ſin, Gen. xxxix. 9. My maſter hath not kept back any thing from me but thee, becauſe thou art his wife; how then can I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God? So ſay you, God the ſovereign Lord and Maſter of the world hath kept back no time from me, but one day, becauſe it was his; how then can I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God?

V. A conſcientious keeping of the Sabbath diſpoſeth the ſoul the more for the ſervice of God all the week over. If your ſoul be in a good frame on the Sabbath, it will proſper the better all the week for it: Your conſcience will be the more tender, your thoughts the more ſpiritual, and your affections the more lively. If you be in the mount with God on the Sabbath, the face of your converſation will be fair to ſhine in holineſs through the week.

VI. Our regard to the Sabbath is a trying teſt of the ſtate and frame of our ſouls, whether we be ſpiritual or carnal, love God or the world moſt. It tries alſo the conditions of our graces, whether they be waxing or waning, in a proſpering or decaying ſtate. Hence God frequently calls the Sabbath a ſign betwixt him and his people, Exod. xxxi. 17. Ezek. xx. 12. 20. And indeed our conſcientious keeping and ſanctifying of the Sabbath is a ſign to us ſeveral ways.

1ſt, It is a ſign of God's ſanctifying our hearts, and an evidence of a good work wrought in us by the holy Spirit.

2dly, It is a clear ſign to diſtinguiſh us from the unſanctified and profane people of the world.

3dly, It is a ſign of our having a conſcientious regard to all the other commands of God; and all obſerving perſons will find this ſign to hold in their daily experience. If you keep not this command of ſanctifying the Sabbath, it is a ſign you will little regard all the reſt. If you ſerve not God on his own day, you will make little conſcience of ſerving him in the following days of the week; but on the contrary, if you worſhip God ſincerely on the Sabbath, and regard this holy day, it is a token you will regard all other duties of religion. Let us obſerve theſe noticeable words of God, Jer. xvii. 24. 26. If ye hallow the Sabbath day, to do no work therein; then ſhall they come from the cities of Judah, and all other places, bringing burnt offerings, meat offerings, incenſe, and ſacrifices of praiſe unto the houſe of the Lord; that is, the church of God and true religion ſhall flouriſh, and the name of the moſt High be exalted in the world. And indeed for my part, I deſpair ever of ſeeing Chriſtianity and reformation conſiderably advanced in the world, till once the Lord's day come to be highly eſteemed, and ſtrictly obſerved: For ſtill it is to be ſeen, whereever religion flouriſheth in the power of it, there it is that moſt conſcience is made in the obſervation of the Sabbath.

O Chriſtians, would you be bleſſed indeed? then ſanctify the Lord's day, by ſincere worſhipping your Creator, who this day made light firſt to ſhine; and honouring your Redeemer, who this day roſe from the grave, and compleated the work of your redemption. As the angel ſaid to the woman that came to the ſepulchre, Mat. xxviii. 6. He is not here, he is riſen, as he ſaid; come ſee the place where the Lord lay: So ſay to every true lover of Chriſt, He is not here, he is riſen; come, abſerve the time when the Lord roſe. Obſerve it to his honour and praiſe, and he will ſurely bleſs you, and make you glad with the light of his countenance. There was never any who truly obſerved this command, but will ſay, that rare and bleſſed are the fruits which are to be reaped from this bleſſed duty.

Would ye then ſhare of theſe fruits, and pleaſe God in keeping his Sabbath? Then take the following advices; (1.) Remember to honour and glorify God, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, upon this holy day, by aſcribing to each Perſon of the bleſſed Trinity the glory of his proper work. As, 1. Aſcribe to the Father the glory of his power, wiſdom and goodneſs in creating the world for our accommodation, and contriving our recovery when we had loſt ourſelves, and, for an example to us, reſting on the Sabbath after he had reviewed his work with delight.—2. We ought to glorify the Son this day, by aſcribing to him the honour of undertaking and carrying on the work of our redemption, by his incarnation and death, and by his riſing from the dead on the third day, now ſet apart for the Lord's Sabbath.—3. We are to glorify the Holy Ghoſt, by aſcribing to him the honour of applying the purchaſed redemption to believers in his work of regeneration and ſanctification, which he began in a glorious manner by that wonderful effuſion on the church in the day of Pentecoſt, being alſo the Lord's day. In this manner we ought to glorify God, giving honour to the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt, upon this holy day, if we would keep the Sabbath acceptably to the Lord.

(2.) Let us mind the direction of the holy Ghoſt in Iſa. lviii. 13. with reſpect to the keeping of this day, to wit, to call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable, and honour him, not doing our own ways, nor finding our own pleaſure, nor ſpeaking our own words. Which direction teacheth us that the beſt way to prevent Sabbath-breaking, and to honour God on his own day, is to call the Sabbath a delight. O that we knew what this meaneth!

Queſt. "When may we be ſaid to call the Sabbath " our delight?

Anſw. 1. We call it our delight when we rejoice at the approach of the Sabbath, and make due preparation for it; and when we ſolace our ſouls, in the joyful expection of communion with God on his own day, ſaying with David, Pſal. xliii 4. Then will I go unto the altar of God, unto God my exceeding joy.——2. When we give the Sabbath an early welcome and ſtir up ourſelves to ſeek God betimes upon it; like David, Pſal. lxii. 1. O God, thou art my God, early will I ſeek thee.—3. When we are diſſatisfied, with theſe things that would hinder us from the right keeping of the Sabbath, and are grieved that we can keep Sabbaths no better——4. When we eſteem every minute of Sabbath-time to be moſt precious, and are careful that none of it be waſted away; but order matters ſo wiſely, that one duty of the Sabbath may not juſtle out another; that is, to be ſo early in our cloſet devotion, that the cloſet may not hinder family-duties: and ſo to perform theſe, that they may not incroach upon God's public worſhip.—5. When we are concerned to have all belonging to us to keep the Sabbath as well as ourſelves, and glad to ſee this holy day regarded and honoured by all about us. Then it may be ſaid, we call the Sabbath a delight.

Now, after all I have ſaid, let me come in the end, in the name of the great Lord who inſtituted the Sabbath for his own glory, and the good of men, earneſtly to exhort, beſeech and obteſt all ranks and degrees of perſons, whether they be parents or children, maſters or ſervants, magiſtrates or people, young or old, to put all honour and reſpect upon this holy day; to ſanctify it as God requires, and abſtain from all worldly employments and recreations upon it. Do not grudge your Maker his one day of ſeven, but be willing to dedicate it wholly to his worſhip and ſervice. O how do you think to ſpend a whole eternity in God's holy preſence, and in holy ſpiritual exerciſes, if you cannot bring yourſelves to ſpend one day in a week in holy work?—Again ſee that you be impartial in his ſervice; be as willing to hear what God ſaith to you from his word, as you would have God to hear what you ſay to him in prayer. Some are all for prayers, as if they were only to tell God what they would have from him; but care not for ſermons, or for hearing what God requires and expects from them: But, if you would have God to hear your prayers when you ſpeak to him, you muſt diligently hearken to his word when he ſpeaks to you. It is by hearing the word upon the Lord's day that God hath converted many thouſands to himſelf. The Sabbath is a merciful inſtitution to loſt ſinners for their ſalvation, and many have been and will for ever be thankful for it: For hereby they have been led to make proper ſtands in life, and to review their bypaſt actions, ſo as to order their courſe more wiſely for the time to come; which they had never done, if they had not been led to a religious retirement on the Lord's day.

Seeing this holy day is ſuch a bleſſing and privilege to the world, let me intreat parents, maſters, magiſtrates, and all who have power to exert it for promoting the keeping of it. You are not only to ſanctify the Sabbath yourſelves, but alſo you muſt do your utmoſt that theſe under you do it likewiſe. This you are bound to by the Lord's expreſs charge in the fourth command, where it is ſaid, Thou, thy ſon, thy daugh- ter, thy ſervants, the ſtranger within thy gates; importing, that you are to uſe your power and influence over all within your gates, to cauſe them obſerve the Sabbath, and keep them from profaning it; leſt God impute their ſins to you, as to Eli in the like caſe, for not uſing your power to reſtrain them. It is not indeed in the power of perſons in authority to make all thoſe religious who are under their juriſdiction; but it would put them in a likely way of being ſo, to keep them from ſuch things as would hinder the religion of that day, and cauſe them attend the means of inſtruction; and alſo to tell them in private of the reſt and happineſs of the world to come purchaſed by Chriſt, which the right keeping of the Sabbath leads unto. This ought to be the great care of parents with reſpect to their children in younger years. It is one of the firſt things that children are capable of, namely, to diſtinguiſh this day from others: And then they ſhould be taught to lay aſide their other days diverſions, even before they are capable of godly exerciſes; and thus they are gradually to be inured to Sabbath keeping as the beginning of wiſdom. This method took God to introduce religion into the world: It was his firſt appointment and inſtitution, to reſt on the ſeventh day, and to ſanctify it, Gen ii. 3. as if he deſigned this to be the foundation and beginning of all religion. Let all heads of families follow this great example.

Likewiſe, we ſee God requires maſters to take care that their ſervants and all within their gates keep the Sabbath: And indeed it is highly their intereſt and wiſdom to do ſo; for, if you be careful that your ſervants do their duty to God, God will take care that your ſervants do their duty to you.——In like manner, the civil magiſtrates, who are the fathers of cities and ſtates, ſhould uſe their power over all within their gates or juriſdiction, to cauſe them obſerve God's holy day. We ſee Nehemiah threatened bodily puniſhment on the men of Tyre for breaking of the Sabbath, Neh. xiii. 21. And Jeremiah, by God's appointment, calls upon the princes to ſee that the Sabbath be not profaned, and that upon their higheſt peril, Jer. xvii. 19, 25, 27. and hence it is, that our kings and parliaments have made ſo many excellent laws againſt the profanation of the Sabbath. May God put it into the hearts of theſe, who ought to be preſervers and executers of laws, to put them in execution! This would tend much to the glory of God, and to the welfare of nations, cities and families.—But, laſtly, Let me exhort all in inferior ſtations, both young and old, to obſerve the fourth command, as they regard the ſalvation of their precious and immortal ſouls in the eternal world, and the peace of their conſciences when they come to ly on a death bed, which they ſhould be looking out for every day. Let me addreſs both young and old upon this head.

I. As for you that are young, I entreat you to remember the Sabbath-day, to keep it holy. Improve this day with all care and earneſtneſs; for it is the day wherein poor ſinners uſually begin their acquaintance with God, and converſion to him: And the proper ſeaſon for this work is the time of youth; for now the heart is moſt tender and pliable, and ſooner melted for ſin, than afterwards, when you come to greater age: For, the longer you go on in ſin, the heart will turn the harder, and the conſcience more ſeared. The longer you forget God, the more eſtranged you will grow, and unwilling to return to him. The branches of a tree while young, may be bowed and trained up any way; but, when they are old they will not ply.

Again, conſider, that the ſooner you begin to ſanctify the Sabbath, and be ſerious about your ſouls, God will love you the better. See how he remembers the kindneſs of youth, Jer. ii. 2. Thus ſaith the Lord, I remember thee, the kindneſs of thy youth, the love of thine eſpouſals, when thou wenteſt after me in the wilderneſs, &c. He loves thoſe who come in at the firſt ſound of the goſpel, far more than rebels, who ſtand out till the laſt, that they can do no more. The fewer calls and invitations you reſiſt, the more kindly will you be accepted of God: He loved a young Abijah, a young Joſiah, a young Timothy; and John is called the diſciple whom Jeſus loved, John xiii. 23. becauſe he was youngeſt and earlieſt converted. See how affectionately Paul ſalutes Epenetus, by the title of his well-beloved, becauſe of his being Chriſt's firſt fruits in Achaia, Rom. xvi. 5. And if Paul loved him ſo much, to be ſure Chriſt loved him far more.

Moreover, do not think that juſtice will ſpare you, if it find you in ſin, and out of Chriſt, becauſe you are young. Preſume not upon mercy upon this account; remember that threatening, Pſal. lxviii 21. God ſhall wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy ſcalp of him that goeth on ſtill in his treſpaſſes. You have no ground to think that he will ſpare you till you be old and bald headed: No, he may even take you by the hairy ſcalp while you are in your youthful vigour and freſhneſs, and puniſh you, as he hath done many others before you.

O young folk, if you would mind your ſouls, and ſanctify the Sabbath in the days of youth, take theſe few directions:

1ſt, Look always on death as near, and within a few ſteps of you. Alas! many young folk think it as improper for them to be thinking on their graves, as to think of going to bed at noon; their ſun is high, and it is a long time to night; they look on death at forty or fifty years diſtance. O what folly is this! Do you not ſee graves of your length, and ſkulls of your ſize, in the church yard? Yea, do you not ſee twenty die young, to one that lives to old age? Let death and eternity be then the frequent ſubjects of your meditation on the Lord's day.

2dly, Think much this day upon your vileneſs and miſery by nature, that you are children of wrath, heirs of hell, enemies to God and ſtrangers to Chriſt and the covenant of grace; yea, ſervants to ſin, and bond ſlaves to the devil: For the prodigal never thought of turning to his father, till he ſaw himſelf in a loſt and undone condition.

3dly, Think much on Chriſt's fitneſs, fulneſs, and ſuitableneſs for all your wants and maladies. In him you may find a remedy for whatever troubles you. Is it guilt? here pardon. Is it great ſins? here's a Redeemer's blood that cleanſeth from all ſin. Are you condemned? here ſufficient righteouſneſs to juſtify you. Is pollution and filthineſs your fear? here a deep and open Fountain that runs continually. Are you chained priſoners? here liberty. Are you drowned in debt? here a Ranſom and Surety. Are you diſeaſed? here Balm. Are you poor? here fine gold. Are you dead?

here the Reſurrection and the Life. Are you ſtarving? here the manna and the fatted calf. Are you weak, and unable for duty? here all ſufficient grace and ſtrength. Yea, he 'is able to ſave them to the utter-'moſt, all that come to God by him:' And particularly, he ſays of little children, Suffer them to come unto me; and, him that cometh (ſaith he) I will in no wiſe caſt out.

4thly, Let children and young folk carefully attend ordinances this day in the church; lie cloſe by the pool ſide, till it pleaſe the Angel of the covenant to come and put you in. Study to remember what you hear, and give an account thereof to your parents when you come home.

6thly, Be much this day in prayer; for the prayers of young folk are very pleaſant muſic in God's ears. It would be both very pleaſant and profitable, if children of the ſame family would take ſome time this day to meet, and read and pray together; for ſo the examples, and hearing of one another, would be mutually helpful, and ſtir up them to a concern about their duty. It is the fault of parents, that do not put them on to this practice. If children did thus begin early to the ſervice of God, it would become habitual and delightful to them afterwards. But, alas! inſtead of this, many parents let their children run and play thro' the ſtreets, and in the church and church-yard, on the Sabbath, without reſtraint. But, let ſuch parents remember, that tho' children die in their iniquities, yet their blood God will require at their hand one day.

II. I ſhall cloſe with a word to aged people. You that are old men and women give ear to what I am to ſay. Conſider how many Sabbaths you have miſſpent, and mourn for it. In threeſcore years time, you have above three thouſand Sabbaths to reckon for, And if God lay judgment to the line and righteouſneſs to the plumet, you will not be able to anſwer for one of them. O humble yourſelves deeply before God, and employ Chriſt to clear your counts for you. Put on reſolutions in his ſtrength, to improve time better for the future, and particularly the Sabbaths which God may yet allow you, for ſecuring an intereſt in Chriſt, and making proviſion for long laſting eternity. Have you not great need for it? Alas! there are many old perſons who have all yet to do. Their glaſs is near run, and their ſun is at the ſetting; and yet they have their work to begin, and their journey to ſet out for, tho' they have lived threeſcore years in God's world, yet they never ſpent three hours of all that time in ſincere ſerving of God, or providing for endleſs eternity. They never communed with their hearts, thought on their ways, ſhed a tear for ſin, or fell on their knees to cry, Lord, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? What hope ſhall I have in a dying hour? Where will I take up my lodging through eternity? How many old perſons are groſly ignorant of the firſt principles of religion? Yea, many children of five or ſix years old will far outſtrip them. O what is the reaſon of all this, but the neglect and miſpending of the Sabbath day, and the contempt of the means of grace and knowledge which you might have enjoyed thereupon? Well then, what reſolve you to do for the time to come? Have you not forgotten God and Chriſt, and neglected your ſouls and heaven long enough? Or, will you do it to your dying hour? Are you content to go to the grave without Chriſt, and without hope? O what a ſad ſight is it, to ſee gray hairs and graceleſsneſs meeting together! to ſee men put to look thro' their ſpectacles, but never minding to look to their Saviour! to ſee them leaning on their ſtaves, but never thinking of relying on Chriſt for ſalvation! to ſee age forcing them to bow and bend their bodies to the earth, but yet never bowing a knee in ſecret, to beg repentance! O what a ſhame is it to live fifty or ſixty years in the world, without a fervent prayer, or penitent tear for ſin! to live without God, without Chriſt, and without faith! O what will you anſwer for the fearful abuſe of God's long-ſuffering patience! Old ſinner, better thou hadſt died when a child, or when firſt born, than to have lived ſo long, and go to hell at laſt! If thou dieſt old in age, and old in ſin, what a hot and fiery hell mayſt thou look for at laſt! O how many Sabbaths and ſermons! how many calls, counſels and exhortations have you to anſwer for. Remember, you will be called to an account for every year, month, day and hour you have lived: And, what account can you give of fifty years ſpent in ſin, ſixty years lived in a Chriſtleſs and prayerleſs ſtate, or three thouſand Sabbaths trifled away? Will you be perſuaded then to flee to Chriſt, as thy Surety and Cautioner, to clear thy counts and pay thy debts before the door be ſhut; and improve the time and Sabbaths which remain, for God's glory, and your precious ſouls advantage. And to him, who can effectually perſuade and enable you ſo to do, be praiſe for ever. Amen.

GOSPEL HYMNS, IN MEMORY OF REDEEMING LOVE,
AND OF
CHRIST's DEATH and SUFFERINGS.

HYMN I.

A THANK-OFFERING to the Bleſſed Trinity, for Redeeming Love.

1 O Holy, holy, holy Lord,
  Jehovah One in Three,
By all the hoſts above ador'd,
  We'll ever ſing to Thee.
    Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
    Hallelujah, Amen.
2 We'll ſing ſalvation to our God
  That ſits upon the throne;
Salvation alſo we'll aſcribe
  Unto the Lamb his Son;
    Hallelujah, &c.
3 And likewiſe to the Holy Ghoſt,
  Who doth with ſinners ſtrive,
And them convince of ſin and wrath,
  That ſo their ſouls may live.
    Hallelujah, &c.
4 Ye heav'nly hoſts, Jehovah praiſe:
  Them join men of all ranks;
Praiſe Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt,
  To Three in One give thanks.
    Hallelujah, &c.
5 Theſe Three at Jordan did atteſt
  God's wondrous work of love:
The Father ſpeaks, the Spirit lights
  On Jeſus like a Dove.
    Hallelujah, &c.
6 Our heav'nly Father we will praiſe,
  Who ſent Immanuel
To be our Prieſt and Sacrifice,
  To ſave from ſin and hell.
    Hallelujah, &c.
7 From love to men, thou gav'ſt thy Son
  To drink the cup of wrath:
Chriſt drank, and ſaid, I'll caſt out none
  That come to me by faith.
    Hallelujah, &c.
8 What ſhall I render to my God
  For all his gifts to me,
And for his gift unſpeakable,
  His Son for men to die?
    Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
    Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN II.

CHRIST's Love and Excellency.

1 WHat love is this! that Chriſt ſhould bear
  Man's curſe and puniſhment,
And ſhed his blood upon the croſs,
  Till ev'ry drop was ſpent!
2 Love made him come to ſave the loſt,
  Give ſight unto the blind,
To looſe the captives that are bound,
  And eaſe the grieved mind.
3 His name's The Lord our righteouſneſs:
  There's nothing to me ſounds
So ſweet as Chriſt his name and croſs,
  His love, his blood and wounds.
4 He is my life, my food, my hope,
  My refuge, and my guard,
My guide, my pattern, and my prop,
  My free aud full reward.
5 My Love, my Lamb, my Ranſomer,
  My Prieſt, my Sacrifice,
My Surety, God, my glorious All,
  My ſoul that ſatisfies.
6 Chriſt is the maſter I will ſerve,
  He ſhall have all my heart:
Away with ſatan and his luſts,
  To them I'll give no part.
7 While I go thro' the wilderneſs,
  By faith I'll lean on thee:
My way, my ſtrength, my ſtaff, and reſt,
  My Jeſus ſtill ſhall be.
8 I'll here below of Jeſus ſing,
  And humbly him adore:
Him take as Prophet, Prieſt, and King,
  And praiſe him evermore.

HYMN III.

The BLOOD of JESUS.

1 BY faith mount Calvary aſcend,
  Hear there Chriſt's piercing cries;
See there him bleeding unto death
  As our dear ſacrifice.
2 Come let us ſpread our ſins and griefs
  At the foot of his croſs:
If we in Chriſt believe, his blood
  Will purge away our droſs.

3 His blood, when ſprinkled on our ſouls,
Will our protection be;
His blood will fright our enemies,
And get us victorie.
4 His blood will mollify our hearts,
And bonds of ſin will looſe;
His blood will quench the fiery darts
Which ſatan at us throws.
5 His blood will waſh our ſcarlet ſins,
And make us white as ſnow;
His blood will warm our love to God,
And make our graces flow.
6 O Lamb, when thy blood on me drops,
It doth my pardon ſeal;
It is the balm of Gilead,
That doth my conſcience heal.
7 I daily to thy blood reſort,
In it I humbly boaſt;
It rais'd me from the dreadful pit,
When I was ſunk and loſt.
8 Of crimſon ſins thy blood removes
Their guilt and power to damn;
Wrath cannot reach me, ſince I fled
Unto my bleeding Lamb.

HYMN IV.

The Lord's TABLE.

1 A Feaſt of Love God makes below,
A ſign of that above;
To which he calls poor worms to go,
To feaſt on JESU's love.
2 Come here, admire Chriſt's love to us,
That gives his fleſh for food;
And drink to us he doth provide,
By pouring out his blood.
3 This blood doth life unto the dead,
Health to the ſick impart:
This drink revives the fainting ſoul,
and melts the frozen heart.
4 What folly is't for men to ſtarve,
Or feed on huſks like ſwine;
When Chriſt calls to a table ſpread,
To feaſt on food divine!
5 Unto Chriſt's table we will go,
There view his love and tears,
With all the ſuff'rings he endur'd
For three and thirty years.
6 In feeding we remember thee
Till thou return again;
We call to mind thy ſtripes and wounds,
Thy griefs, thy cries, and pain.
7 Our Lord was of a woman born,
A manger was his bed:
He's firſt a babe, and next a man,
Then on the tree he bled.
8 Th' eternal God became our Lamb,
For us to agonize;
Yea in our ſtead, to death he bled,
To be our ſacrifice.

HYMN V.

CHRITS's Sufferings for us.

1 OUR God would ſuffer in our place,
For our ſins to atone;
A world of guilt he underlay,
The wine-preſs trode alone.
2 He would his throne and ſervants leave,
And honours great above;
For worms a ſervant he would be:
Amazing is that love!
3 Yea, in the room of ſinful worms
My Lord the law obey'd,
And bore its curſes on the tree,
When he was crucify'd.
4 Gethſemane will tell how much
He ſwate, he bled, and cry'd;
So will mount Calv'ry, and the croſs
On which my Saviour dy'd.
5 I view his great ſoul-agony,
Which cauſed his bloody ſweat:
His pierced hands and ſide I hug,
I kiſs his bleeding feet.
6 I hear my Jeſu's melting voice
Saying, For you I dy'd;
Think on my pains and agonies
When I was crucify'd:
7 Of my love then do no more doubt,
Since out of love I dy'd:
Behold my pierced hands and feet,
And view my wounded ſide.
8 'Tis open: Look and ſee my heart,
It bleeds and beats with love;
It pants to get you freed of ſin,
To dwell with me above.

HYMN VI.

CHRIST's Wounds and Blood.

1 CHriſt's bleeding wounds did once atone
For our guilt on the tree;
And now they plead before the throne,
Us from ſin's pow'r to free.
2 Thy wounds ſtill in our hearts remain,
Thee bleeding ſtill we view;
Since thou appear'ſt above us ſlain,
Thy death is ever new.
3 Allow me, Lord, to pitch my tent
Beſide thy ſtreaming wounds;
There many have got rich ſupplies,
There joy and peace abounds.
4 Purſu'd by juſtice' flaming ſword,
To Jeſu's wounds I come
For ſhelter and a hiding-place;
O let me there find room.
5 Under thy righteouſneſs me hide,
In thy wounds make me dwell;
So there my ſoul ſhall reſt ſecure,
From all the pow'rs of hell.
6 Thy wounds are guilty mens refuge,
To them have thouſands fled;
None ever diſappointed were,
Their ſtreſs who on them laid.
7 Thy wounds do for our pardon plead,
They rocky hearts melt down:
To heav'n we ſwim upon thy blood,
And thereby get the crown.
8 No condemnation reach them ſhall
Who lodge in Jeſu's wounds;
They're ſafe from fears, and in their ears
His name moſt ſweetly ſounds,

HYMN VII.

The Wonders of GOD's free Love.

1 GReat God, enthron'd above the ſky,
How low a ſtep is this,
For worms like us to give thy life,
To buy eternal bliſs!
2 What love is this, that God ſhould die
For theſe his laws that broke!
Himſelf ſhould anſwer for our crime
In caſting off his yoke!
3 The love and ſuff'rings matchleſs were
Of Chriſt our bleeding God,
When he was bruiſed for our ſins,
And cruſh'd beneath our load.
4 More than his life he lov'd our race;
Yea, heav'n he did forſake,
To ſnatch men from the flames of hell,
And them to glory take.
5 Thy love and grace, dear Lamb of God,
Shall be my laſting theme:
I'll ever bleſs that victim ſlain
Without Jeruſalem.
6 Thy free grace, Lord, moſt wonderful,
To me it doth excel:
What coſt haſt thou beſtow'd to ſave
A brand pluckt out of hell!
7 With warm affection I will bleſs
My great high Prieſt above,
Whoſe heart is made of tenderneſs,
And bowels melt with love.
8 O may thy love conſtrain mens hearts
To love and follow thee!
We've heard thy love has melted rocks;
Let all ſuch wonders ſee.

HYMN VIII.

CHRIST's pleading above.

1 UPon mount Zion's diſtant top
A Lamb by faith we ſee:
'Tis Jeſus, for we know his voice;
He calls, Come up to me.
2 O Lamb, ſee pilgrims trav'ling here,
And our ſoul-wants ſupplie;
Keep ſpeaking to us by the way,
Till we come up to thee.
3 By faith we have thee bleeding ſeen,
Rais'd on the croſs to die;
By faith we thee now pleading hear,
When lifted up on high.
4 In higheſt heav'ns the Lamb doth reign;
Yet as our Prieſt he ſtands,
And for us pleads his ſtripes and wounds,
And ſhews his bleeding hands.
5 As newly ſlain, he ſtill preſents
His bleeding wounds to God,
Which plead his flock may ſtill hold on,
And keep the heav'nly road.
6 In this great Advocate we truſt
Who for our ſins was ſlain;
We on his pow'rful blood depend,
Which cannot plead in vain.
7 Bleſt ſouls above, now with the Lamb!
You cloſly him attend:
Take courage, for we tread their path,
To them we'll ſoon aſcend.
8 Adieu, vain world, with all thy charms;
To our dear Lamb we go,
Who pleads to keep's from ſin and harms,
From enemies below.
9 Hoſanna to king David's Son,
And to king David's Lord;
King David's root and offſpring's one
Who heav'n to men reſtor'd.

HYMN IX.

HEAVEN begun on EARTH.

1 OUR Lamb's God-man, in perſon one,
The great Immanuel:
This union ſtrange is God's device
To ſave our ſouls from hell.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 The Lamb is worthy for to reign,
Both ſaints and angels cry;
Let heav'n and earth, with all their hoſts,
Adore thy majeſty.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 With theſe to praiſe we do preſume,
As ranſom'd by thy blood:
Reign here, and in the world to come,
Thou everlaſting God.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 We praiſe thee, Son of God, whoſe pow'r
Did bring about our peace;
We praiſe thee, Son of man, whoſe blood
Redeem'd our fallen race.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 Incarnate God, our Lord, our Love.
Our Lamb, our Sacrifice!
We'll thee adore, tho' hell ſhould roar,
And worldlings thee deſpiſe.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 Worthy of glory is the Lamb,
Who was at Calv'ry ſlain:
For he gave up himſelf to death,
To ranſom fallen men.
Hellelujah, &c.
7 Be pow'r and glory ever thine,
Thy name be ſtill ador'd;
Let all the creatures thee proclaim
Their everlaſting Lord.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 Let ev'ry nation, land and tongue
Thy wondrous love confeſs:
Cauſe all men know thy charming name,
"The Lord our Righteouſneſs."
Hallelujah, &c.
9 Now, great Immanuel, to thy name
Be endleſs glory giv'n:
Our broken hymns on earth begun,
Them perfect make in heav'n.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN X.

HEAVEN's HAPPINESS.

1 'TIs heaven on earth, Chriſt's love to taſte,
And feel his pow'rful grace;

'Tis heav'n begun to dwell in love,
And ſee his glorious face.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 Lord, in my breaſt the fire doth burn
Of love which thou haſt giv'n:
Nothing on earth can quench this flame,
Nothing but Chriſt in heav'n.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 Men here would know the things below;
But I determin'd am
Chriſt crucify'd alone to know,
My ſacrificed Lamb.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 The ſweeteſt days we have on earth
Are in thy ſervice ſpent:
The comforts I enjoy in theſe
Do yield me moſt content.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 Communion Sabbaths here are ſweet;
But them we ſoon do ſpend:
In heav'n the Sabbath ſweeter is,
Which never hath an end.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 There Hallelujahs to the Lamb
No period will know:
No willows there to hang our harps,
As oft we find below.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 O happy theſe who ſhall aſcend
Where they ſtill Sabbath keep,
Where in the heav'nly work of praiſe
They ſlumber not nor ſleep!
Hallelujah, &c.
8 There to the Lamb that once was dead,
But now doth live again,
With joy and wonder do they ſing:
He's ſaints eternal gain.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN XI.

The Lord our Righteouſneſs.

1 WE from our free-will and our works
No help at all can draw;
For our free-will and nat'ral pow'rs
Are haters of God's law.
2 The ſtream which from Chriſt's pierced ſide
In blood and water flow'd,
Muſt juſtify and cleanſe our ſouls,
Ere we can live with God.
3 Lord, all my doings and my works
Can ne'er with God prevail:
Both I and they, for ſin, deſerve
To be thrown down to hell.
4 My righteouſneſs is filthy rags,
I humbly muſt confeſs:
But, Lord, I plead my Saviour's name,
'The Lord our Righteouſneſs.'
5 Tho' I could weep a flood of tears,
I'd lay no ſtreſs thereon:
Chriſt's blood muſt waſh me and my tears,
Or elſe I am undone.
6 Chriſt bears the burden of our ſins,
And of our duties too:
His blood muſt cleanſe our pray'rs and praiſe
And all that we can do.
7 Chriſt, who's our Righteouſneſs, perfumes
Our duties unto God:
Weak mints, thro' Chriſt, he doth accept;
They're ſprinkled with his blood.
8 Chriſt's works and wounds alone I truſt,
His life and death I bleſs:
I'll ever ſing his precious name,
'The Lord our Righteouſneſs.'

HYMN XII.

The Goſpel-Paſſover.

1 IN this our Goſpel-paſſover
God ſets before our eyes
The ſubſtance of the ancient types,
God's Lamb our ſacrifice.
2 Here view his body broke, and blood
Down ſtreaming from his heart,
To ſave our ſouls: and thus our Lamb
Fulfill'd the Saviour's part.
3 Here divine Wiſdom doth provide
A free ſoul-ſtrengthning feaſt;
And freely bids each hungry ſoul,
O come and be a gueſt.
4 Here things of ſenſe, but there's far more
Than hallow'd bread and wine;
Lo! there is here immortal cheer,
And ſtreams of life divine.
5 Here's for our ſouls Chriſt's body broke,
To feed and make them grow;
Here's running ſtreams of divine blood,
To make us white as ſnow.
6 Lord, grant thy preſence with thy gueſts,
Thy peace to them afford;
No muſic can delight our hearts
Like thy forgiving word.
7 Grant faith to eat the bread of life
Which God ſent down from heav'n,
And alſo faith to drink the blood
For our redemption giv'n.
8 Awake, repentance, faith and love,
Come feaſt on Chriſt, and ſing:
Rouze up, my pow'rs and graces all,
Attend this mighty King.
9 View here the wounds and dying pangs
Of our dear bleeding Lord,
Whoſe head, and ſide, and heart, were (pierc'd;
Whoſe hands and feet were bor'd.

N. B. The twelve preceding hymns are all done in common metre; the ten following hymns are compoſed in different meaſures, to ſuit ſome pleaſant tunes, which many have learned, and delight in.

HYMN XIII.

The Communion Sabbath.

1 FAther, this day we'll ſing:
From love thou gav'ſt thy Son,
To buy ſalvation to our ſouls,
When ſin had us undone.

8 F.

2 We'll bleſs thy Son, who came
To bear our guilt and ſhame,
And thy juſt law which we had broke,
Fulfilled in our name.
3 We bleſs thy Sp'rit, who guides
Men in the heav'nly road:
Come, heav'nly Dove, our Saviour's love
Shed in our hearts abroad.
4 Our crucified Lord
Was laid among the dead:
But ſoon the grave its prey reſtor'd;
He roſe for us to plead.
5 To-day, Chriſt left the dead,
And ſatan's empire fell:
'This is the day the Lord hath made,'
We'll triumph over hell.
6 We'll ſhew his death, who bled
To ſave our ſinful race,
And in the ſupper to us comes
With meſſages of grace.
7 We magnify thy love
For ſuch a taſte below,
And that thou mak'ſt to ſaints above
Far nobler bleſſings flow.
8 We'll haſte to Chriſt above;
We'll then need ſigns no more:
We'll ſee his face, and know his love;
We'll feaſt, and him adore.
9 To Father, Son, and Sp'rit,
JEHOVAH, One in Three,
Sing HALLELUJAHS; for 'tis meet
Thus God to glorifie.

HYMN XIV.

The wonders of REDEEMING LOVE.

1 DEar Father, we thee bleſs,
Thy wondrous love adore
In giving us thine only Son;
What couldſt thou give us more?
2 Behold how God commends
His love to men undone!
That he might ſpare his enemies,
He would not ſpare his Son.
3 What ſaw the Lamb in man,
That could his pity move,
To draw the rebel from hell's gates
With cords and bands of love!
4 A love that was not quench'd
By death or deepeſt wound,
Nor by deep ſtreams of wrath and blood;
By floods it was not drown'd!
5 A glorious crown he left
A thorny crown to wear!
And on his bruiſed wounded back
A heavy croſs won'd bear!
6 Mens ſins, each was a thorn,
A whip, a nail, a ſpear!
By them thy bleſſed fleſh was torn;
Let men view ſin with fear!
7 Yet garments dy'd with blood,
The thorns thy head that tare,
Endear thee more to thine, than robes
And gems which monarchs wear.
8 Our ſlain Lamb now appears
Before God's awful throne;
There offers up our praiſe and pray'rs:
He takes them from his Son.
9 Let ſaints and angels join
The dear love to proclaim
Of him that ſits upon the throne,
And of the worthy Lamb.

HYMN XV.

The LAMB ſlain.

1 HOw moving is the ſight I ſee!
My God nail'd bleeding to a tree!
Let countleſs myriads of men
With pierc'd hearts cry, the Lamb is ſlain.
2 My deareſt Lamb, thy blood was ſpilt
For ſinful man's imputed guilt:
Hard is the heart that feels no pain
For ſin, for which the Lamb is ſlain.
3 Let men thy dying love proclaim,
Which caus'd thy blood for men to ſtream:
Fix in their hearts ſtill to remain
This glorious truth, the Lamb is ſlain.
4 Our ſinking ſtate thou didſt bemoan,
Yea, all our ſins and curſe took on,
To ſave us from eternal pain:
My deareſt Lord, the Lamb is ſlain.
5 To us the goſpel ſweetly ſounds,
We flee for ſafety to thy wounds;
Yea, theſe to us do glory gain.
To open heav'n, the Lamb is ſlain.
6 Reſolv'd I'll ly before thy throne,
And ſay, I never will be gone
Till I ſhall peace with God obtain,
That peace for which the Lamb is ſlain.
7 Doth not thy blood for ſinners plead,
And for great en'mies interceed?
Still hopes of life I will maintain,
While God proclaims, The Lamb is ſlain.
8 Thy blood I will on ſin revenge;
Help me from ſin my ſoul to cleanſe:
Thy wounds from ſin ſhall ſtill reſtrain,
Since for my ſin the Lamb is ſlain.

HYMN XVI.

JESUS his Name fragrant.

1 CHRIST JESUS is the Lamb that's ſlain,
To ſave the very worſt of men:
No name like JESUS ſounds to me,
For JESUS brings ſalvation free.
2 JESUS his name doth ſinners tell,
His work's to ſave from ſin and hell:
All ſweetneſs centers in his name;
My naming it makes love to flame.
3 When ſunk are names of greateſt worth,
'His name's like ointment poured forth;'
It ſpreads a fragrant ſcent around,
And brings refreſhing with its ſound.
4 JESUS his name charms heart and ear,
Makes me content his croſs to bear:
His name doth chear my fainting ſoul,
And makes my wounded ſpirit whole.
5 His Name to me is a ſtrong tow'r,
It ſaves me from the wrathful ſhow'r:

His name with comforts doth abound
To ſouls with ſorrows almoſt drown'd,
6 Jesus his name doth ſweetly ſound,
It rings ſalvation all around;
It doth the heavy-laden keep
From ſinking downward in the deep.
7 When in our place dear Jesus ſtood
With all his garments roll'd in blood,
To faith a lovely ſight is he:
All guilty men, to Jeſus flee.
8 O Jesus, glorious is thy name;
May all the nations hear thy fame!
Moſt ſweet thy name will ever ſound
Above, where praiſes have no bound.

HYMN XVII.

The crucified Jesus.

1 CHRIST crucified ſhall be the ſong
Which will employ my heart and tongue:
This ſong ſupports men in diſtreſs,
And cheers their hearts in wilderneſs.
All ſongs but this I'll lay aſide;
My Lord, my Love is crucify'd.
2 Up Calv'ry mount I'll climb by faith,
And ſee my Saviour vanquiſh death;
I'll wond'ring ſtand, and view the blood
He ſhed when in my place he ſtood:
From love he ſtretch'd his arms and dy'd;
My Lord, my Love is crucify'd.
3 To me his bonds do freedom buy,
And bring to glorious liberty;
The cruel ſcoffs he bore from foes
To me obtain divine applauſe.
Of Chriſt I'll ſing, let men deride;
My Lord, my Love is crucify'd.
4 The ſtrokes he got on back and face
Raze out the marks of my diſgrace;
The thorny crown which he endur'd,
A crown of life for me procur'd.
Let ſtill this ſong with me abide,
My Lord, my Love is crucify'd.
5 On's back he bore the bloody tree,
Puſh'd foreward by the ſoldiery;
Pity'd by none, by all blaſphem'd,
Inſulted, hated and condemn'd:
In all he wondrous love diſplay'd;
My Lord, my Love is crucify'd.
6 His diſciples were fled and gone,
The wine-preſs he muſt tread alone:
He's pierc'd in head, in hands and feet,
Till ſtreams of blood each other meet.
Why ſhould I think of ought beſide?
My Lord, my Love is crucify'd.

HYMN XVIII.

Know Christ crucified.

1 CHRIST crucify'd is all my bliſs,
In all my ſtraits I'll him addreſs,
His wounds and blood do make me whole;
Look up, and live, each ſin-ſick ſoul;
If you would have all wants ſupply'd,
'Know Jeſus, and him cucify'd.'
2 That bloody ſweat of Chriſt's, ſo free,
Proves a choice cordial unto me;
Thoſe nails which gave him torture vaſt,
My ſeat in heaven ſhall make faſt.
Let hearts that would be fix'd and ſtay'd,
'Know Jeſus, and him crucify'd.'
3 Chriſt ſuffer'd naked, me to clothe
With righteouſneſs and glory both;
His parching thirſt, and cup of gall,
In bitter griefs me comfort ſhall.
Let ſouls that would be ſatisfy'd,
'Know Jeſus and him crucify'd.'
4 Chriſt's five wide wounds do bid me come
To lodge in them; for there is room:
His loud and agonizing cry
Heav'n's gates will open when I die.
If you would ſee them open'd wide,
'Know Jeſus, and him crucify'd.'
5 Chriſt's open'd ſide my cave ſhall be,
To which from foes my ſoul ſhall flee;
The water which from it did flow
Shall quench my thirſt while here below.
Would you in this dear refuge hide?
'Know Jeſus, and him crucify'd.'

HYMN XIX.

Gratitude for Redeeming Love.

1 IMMANUEL's fame I'll ſpread abroad,
And loudly praiſe my bleeding God;
For theſe love-wonders now I ſee,
I'll praiſe thee thro' eternitie.
Lord, make me meet with ſaints above
To ſing thy everlaſting love.
2 The Word made fleſh, the Lamb once ſlain,
Aſtoniſh angels as well's men;
This ſhews God's love in ſuch degree
As it can never fathom'd be.
Lord, make me meet with ſaints above
To ſing thy everlaſting love.
3 Why, Lord, didſt thou ſuch pain endure?
He ſaith, Thy ſinful ſoul to cure;
My crimſon blood to you doth ſay,
Your crimſon ſins I'll waſh away.
Amazing love, that God ſhould die
For man that was his enemy!
4 I plac'd myſelf in ſinners room,
Your fleſh and frailties did aſſume;
I for your debt engag'd alone,
And for your ſins dy'd to atone.
Amazing love, that God ſhould die
For man that was his enemy!
5 O Lamb of God, to men thou'rt good:
How ſhall I ſhew my gratitude?
I'll kiſs thy feet, and thee adore,
And grieve that I can do no more.
Lord fit my ſoul to live with thee,
To ſing his praiſe who dy'd for me.
6 I thank thee, Jeſus, my dear Lord,
For all the pains thou haſt endur'd:
Cauſe thou my ſoul thy love to know,
Who bled to make me white as ſnow.
Lord fit my ſoul to live with thee,
To ſing his praiſe who dy'd for me.

HYMN XX.

The FEAST of COMMEMORATION.

1 TO ſaints aſſemblies I'll repair,
And vent my heart in praiſe and pray'r:
The day Chriſt roſe, I'll him extol,
And ſhew his death with heart and ſoul.
I none deſire to know beſide
My Jeſus, and him crucify'd.
2 Chriſt crucify'd is ſtill my feaſt;
They Jeſus love, who Jeſus taſte:
I'll on his purchaſe fix mine eyes,
And feaſt on fruits of paradiſe.
I none deſire to know beſide
My Jeſus, and him crucify'd.
3 We take the bleſt ſigns in our hands,
And ſo obey our Lord's commands:
Remembring thee, we do attend;
And this we'll do till time ſhall end.
Thy death to ſhew, ſaints will take care,
Until they meet thee in the air.
4 Thy bleſt remembrance yields delight,
But far more ſweet will be thy ſight:
Hence 'tis my daily cry to Thee,
O deareſt Jeſus come to me.
I none deſire to know beſide
My Jeſus, and him crucify'd.
5 A ſight of Jeſus on the croſs
Makes all this world appear as droſs:
Lord, what are earthly things to me,
But clouds that part my ſoul and thee!
O tune my ſoul for ſongs above;
Increaſe my light, inflame my love.
6 Never did angels taſte above
Redeeming grace, and dying love.
Worthy is Chriſt our bleſſed Lamb,
That bore for men the croſs and ſhame,
On God's eternal throne to reign,
Since he for us was pierc'd and ſlain.

HYMN XXI.

Know JESUS only.

1 JOIN, ye tribes of ranſom'd men,
With hearts and tongues to ſing,
Worthy's the Lamb that was ſlain
To be our Lord and King:
Let mens wills unto him bow,
Since out of love for men he dy'd:
Only Jeſus will I know,
And Jeſus crucify'd.
2 For our ſins Chriſt's blood was ſpilt,
His ſoul did torments feel:
If we mourn not for our guilt,
Our hearts are hard as ſteel.
Lord, cauſe tears from hearts to flow:
O pity them whoſe hearts are dry'd.
Only Jeſus will I know,
And Jeſus crucify'd.
3 Sin I ſhun with all its charms,
Since it would me deſtroy:
Take me, Lord, into thy arms,
Me ſafe to heav'n convoy;
While I travel here below,
Still keep me near thy pierced ſide.
Only Jeſus will I know,
And Jeſus crucify'd.
4 Earth affords not my chief good,
In Chriſt my bliſs doth ly;
Earth's vain dreams mens hearts delude,
Its arts I do deſy:
Empty world, I thee let go,
Adieu to all thy pomp and pride.
Only Jeſus will I know,
And Jeſus crucify'd.
5 Earth I quit for reſt above,
Below there's nothing ſure:
Chriſt I make my Lord, my Love;
In him my all's ſecure.
O let faith ſtill in me grow,
All vanities I'll lay aſide.
Only Jeſus will I know.
And Jeſus crucify'd.

HYMN XXII.

A Saint chuſes not to ſtay behind Chriſt

1 IN the wine-preſs of God's wrath
My deareſt Lamb was cruſht;
There he groan'd and bled to death,
Yea, low was laid in duſt:
But he roſe, to ſhew his love;
To plead for us, to heav'n he's gone.
Since my head and heart's above,
Why ſtay I here to grone?
2 Friend of ſinners, King of ſaints,
Plead for me with thy blood;
While I'm in the land of wants,
Still ſend me heav'nly food:
My heart-plagues do thou remove,
Of them to thee I make my mone.
Since my head and heart's above,
Why ſtay I here to grone?
3 Into Jeſu's hands I fall,
By faith I thee embrace;
King of glory hear my call,
And heal me by thy grace;
Let thy Spirit in me move,
To fix my faith on Chriſt alone.
Since my head and heart's above,
Why ſtay I here to grone?
4 Lord, thou ſay'ſt, I quickly come;
Saints for thy coming pray:
While thou ſtay'ſt, I'm far from home;
Lord Jeſus, come away:
On things earthly I'll not rove,
Like Chriſt among them there is none.
Since my head and heart's above,
Why ſtay I here to grone?

HYMN XXIII.

The Fountain of CHRIST's Blood.

1 WE bleſs God for this matchleſs blood,
Which to us freely ſtreams,
And fallen men from ſin and hell
Moſt powerfully redeems.
2 Eternal thanks to God's dear Son,
Who pour'd this ſtreaming flood,
To waſh from ſin, and to enſure

Our ſouls eternal good.
3 Betheſda, Jordan, Siloam's pool,
Are vain, they do no good
For cleanſing ſouls, or purging ſins,
As doth this divine blood.
4 Come, leprous ſouls, to this new pool,
And bathe yourſelves therein:
Why ſhould you die, when God provides
This remedy for ſin?
5 Unto this open fountain bring
My ſinful ſoul, O God,
And all my ſpotted garments cleanſe
In my Redeemer's blood.
6 Upon this remedy divine
Alone my hopes are built:
This many thouſand ſouls have tried,
It purg'd away their guilt.
7 Give acceſs, Lord, unto thy blood,
And faith to waſh, till I
Be purify'd and throughly clean
From all iniquity.
8 Praiſe for the doctrine of free grace,
Which Jeſu's goſpel ſounds;
Praiſe for free love, and cleanſing blood
That flows from Jeſu's wounds.

HYMN XXIV.

CHRIST our PASSOVER Sacrificed for us.

1 LY at the foot of Jeſu's croſs,
See what the Lamb endur'd;
Contemplate there his bleeding wounds,
Which life to us procur'd.
2 Sore wounds and bruiſes, ſtripes and pain,
With fearful agony,
Did he endure to ranſom us
From endleſs miſery.
3 Jeſus our paſſover is ſlain,
And for us ſacrific'd;
The tokens of thy death remain,
Let theſe by us be priz'd,
4 A feaſt upon this ſacrifice
Thou haſt on men beſtow'd,
Where we may feed upon thy fleſh,
And drink thy precious blood.
5 Thanks to our God, who loved us,
And look'd on ſinking men,
And for us found a ſacrifice,
The Lamb for ſinners ſlain.
6 A ſacrifice that's infinite
Thy juſtice did demand,
Ere guilty men ſhould be forgiv'n,
Or they in judgment ſtand.
7 Behold how mercy interpos'd
In this nonpluſſing caſe,
And ſent the Lamb our paſſover
To bleed in ſinners place!
8 Till we aſcend to Chriſt above,
And fully ſhare thy feaſt,
We'll ſit content beneath thy croſs,
And bleſs thee for a taſte.
9 Dear Lamb, ſhine on our ſolemn days,
Thy preſence makes the feaſt:
Come fill our hearts with love, and joy
That cannot be expreſt.

HYMN XXV.

Thankſgiving to the bleſſed TRINITY.

1 EXalted Father, we thee praiſe,
And bleſs thy ſacred name:
Thou waſt, and art, and evermore
Remaineſt God the ſame.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 Father of mercies, God of love,
May thou be ſtill ador'd,
Becauſe thou freely gav'ſt thy Son,
To be our Prieſt and Lord.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 O Son of God, we thee do bleſs,
That freely undertook
To be a Ranſomer, to ſave
All who to thee do look.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 Unto the Lamb, our Saviour God,
Let praiſes ſtill increaſe;
For thro' thy precious wounds and blood
Comes all our happineſs.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 O Holy Ghoſt, we thee exalt,
Who doſt with ſinners ſtrive,
Till they be brought to cloſe with Chriſt,
And made in him alive.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 We praiſe thee, O thou promis'd Dove,
Who, as Chriſt ſaid, art come
To raiſe our dead ſouls unto life,
And ſafely guide us home.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 To purge our guilt, and buy our peace,
God ſent his Son to bleed;
His blood procur'd a treaſure full
To anſwer all our need.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 Thanks to our heav'nly Father's love,
Who gave the Lamb to men:
The Lamb we praiſe, and Spirit too,
Theſe Three in One. Amen.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN XXVI.

Give thanks to God for a crucified JESUS.

1 BLeſt be our Lamb, who undertook
Loſt ſinners to deliver:
O praiſe our King, for he is good
His mercy laſts for ever.
2 No blood, but that of him who's God,
Could take away our ſin;
No ſmaller ſacrifice than this
Could heaven for us win.
3 This made the glorious Son of God
Leave heaven for our good;
Our fleſh and frailties he aſſum'd,
To ranſom us with blood.
4 Beneath the vail of human fleſh
His Godhead he did hide;
To pay our debt, and purge our guilt,
Our ſacrifice he dy'd.

5 God's praiſe in goſpel-hymns we'll ſing,
With thankful hearts thee bleſs;
We will ſound forth thy glorious name,
'The Lord our Righteouſneſs.'
6 In ev'ry place and company
Where it may tend for good,
Chriſt crucify'd we will extol,
And tell men of his blood.
7 His wounds and merits we'll ſpeak forth,
His ſteps we will purſue;
From him we'll holy learn to be,
Meek, lowly, juſt, and true.
8 What love, what ſervice, and what praiſe,
To our God do we owe,
Who left his glorious throne above,
To die for us below!
9 Till we the vail of fleſh put off,
Accept our weaker ſongs;
And, when we reach the manſions bright,
We'll praiſe with better tongues.

HYMN XXVII.

The COMMUNION-FEAST.

1 HOW greatly ſhould the love of God
All our affections move!
He foes forgives, and next invites
Them to a feaſt of love.
2 The feaſt's prepar'd, we nothing want
But Chriſt the Lord our gueſt:
Thy preſence grant to hungry ſouls,
And we'll begin the feaſt.
3 Thy preſence would ſupply each want
On a communion day:
Communion with thyſelf us grant,
Thy grace and pow'r diſplay.
4 O make us witneſſes to ſhew
The virtue of thy blood,
That it gives peace, and makes us cry,
'My King, my Lord and God.'
5 Under thy croſs with great delight,
Lord, make us down to ſit;
For weary travellers to reſt
Let's find this ſhade moſt fit.
6 Let's here poſſeſs thy love, and wounds
In our hearts make abode:
No muſic hath ſuch charming ſounds
As theſe two words, MY GOD.
7 Pardon of ſin, and peace thro' blood,
Do make a glorious feaſt:
This food is entertainment ſweet,
Which angels ne'er did taſte.
8 Yet of this royal coſtly cheer
Poor ſinful men partake;
It was for Adam's race alone
God did this banquet make.
9 Communion ſweet is thro' the Lamb:
To him be glory giv'n
By all that dwell upon the earth,
And all the hoſts of heav'n.

HYMN XXVIII.

The free GOSPEL-CALL.

1 COme, guilty ſouls, and flee away
Like doves to Jeſu's wounds:
Your lot falls in the goſpel-day,
Wherein free grace abounds.
2 How joyful is the ſound you hear!
To you men Chriſt doth call,
Come to me with your loads of ſin,
And I will eaſe you all.
4 I do not ſay, 'Depart from me
Into eternal fire;'
But kindly bid you to my wounds,
Where troubled ſouls retire.
4 Come to the balm: behold the Lamb,
Which for your ſins was ſlain:
Come flocking to my healing blood,
Which eaſes ſouls of pain.
5 No more reſiſt my preſſing calls,
Your ſouls to me up-give:
O dying men, my voice regard,
And you ſhall ever live.
6 O rebels to my ſceptre bow,
Your weapons caſt away;
Come to me in this day of grace,
And make no more delay.
7 For, lo! the flaming ſword is drawn,
And ſhaken o'er your head:
If divine Juſtice be provok'd,
The blow will ſtrike you dead.
8 Comply then with my Spirit's work,
In your hearts give me room:
In ſtraits you'll find me ſtill a friend,
I'll bring you ſafely home.

HYMN XXIX.

Fitneſs for the GOSPEL-FEAST.

1 WILL God let worms approach to him,
Heav'ns manna for to taſte;
Yea, call a piece of duſt and ſin
To ſit at Jeſu's feaſt?
2 Come, holy, holy, holy Lord,
Who lov'd us when undone;
Come, thou united myſtic Three,
Unite us all in One.
3 Come, Prince of love and peace, with pow'r
Our grudges all remove;
Come join our hearts, and make us fit
To keep the feaſt of love.
4 Let charity our hearts poſſeſs;
O ſhed thy love abroad:
And may we Jeſus all embrace
As our own Lord and God.
5 Let Jeſu's friends with humble faith
His table compaſs round,
Partake his food, admire his blood,
That ſprings from ev'ry wound.
6 O let the flinty ſtubborn heart,
Which threat'nings cannot move,
Be broken, melted, and diſſolv'd
By Jeſu's bleeding love.
7 Let no ſin in my heart remain
To give my Lord offence:
Help me to act and live by faith,
And not by corrupt ſenſe.
8 Let worldly clogs all ſtay behind,
When I to Chriſt draw nigh;

Let faith's wings now be ſtretched out,
And to his wounds I'll fly.

HYMN XXX.

CHRIST the Bread of Life.

1 CHriſt's fleſh and blood, the rareſt food
That ever was prepar'd,
Is ſet before the needy's door;
Yet few it do regard.
2 Shall ſtarving ſouls ſlight ſuch a feaſt,
Made ready at ſuch coaſt,
And chuſe to feed on ſwiniſh luſts
Until their ſouls be loſt?
3 Here bread of life, which doth exceed
The manna of the Jews:
Our bread is Chriſt, ſubſtantial food!
Theirs but this ſubſtance ſhews.
4 Their manna came but from the clouds,
Ours comes from heavens high:
Who ate their manna now are deed,
Who eat ours live for ay.
5 'Lord, evermore give us this bread,'
Give daily now ſupply;
Give faith to eat, that we may live,
And may not faithleſs die.
6 With heav'nly manna ſent by God
Let hungry ſouls be fed,
Since richly is thy table ſtor'd
With this immortal bread.
7 For multitudes there is enough
In Jeſu's fulneſs free;
Ten thouſand thouſands all at once
This bread can ſatisfie.
8 Dear Jeſus, meet with hungry ſouls,
Let none of them complain
They waited on thee all the day,
And cry'd for bread in vain.
9 O Bread of life, we ſtarving come
To thee for to be fed:
When ſome thou fills, us paſs not by;
With ſoul-food make us glad.

HYMN XXXI.

GOD's hiding his face is grievous.

1 A Beggar, Lord, cries for an alms;
Look on me not in wrath:
Thy ſmiles are better far than life,
Thy frowns are worſe than death.
2 Dear Lord, I pray thee, now be found
Of ſouls that pant for thee;
Be not a ſtranger in our land,
When ſouls their wants do ſee.
3 When, Lord, thou hides thy face from me,
Like fading flow'rs I mourn:
I droop, I grieve, I can't look up,
Till thou again return.
4 I'll of no other croſs complain
Which thou ſhalt me lay on;
But oh! the hiding of thy face
I cannot think upon.
5 Lord, when thou ſmiles, I conquer ſin;
I then get ev'ry thought,
And all that's oppoſite to thee,
Into ſubjection brought.
6 But, when thou hides, I loſe my ſtrength;
Like Samſon when betray'd,
My locks are cut, my heart is faint,
My faith and hope are dead.
7 If clouds remain, I'll wander far
Out of the king's high-way;
If Chriſt his loſt ſheep do not ſeek,
Still farther will I ſtray.
8 Good Shepherd, ſeek and bring me home;
Thou art the ſinner's friend:
Reſtore the ſhinings of thy face,
Let me no more offend.

HYMN XXXII.

The MOURNING PENITENT.

1 WIth low abaſement I reflect
On my original;
I ſee my nature black and ſtain'd
By my firſt parents fall.
2 In ſin and guilt I was conceiv'd
Before I firſt drew breath,
And early was expos'd unto
Both firſt and ſecond death.
3 My heart and life ſin doth corrupt,
Yea, makes my heart as ſtone;
It makes me ſlight God's remedy:
My folly I bemone.
4 How awful is the thund'ring voice
From Sinai's flaming mount,
To criminals who break God's laws,
Of crimes here's your account!
5 With trembling this would fill my ſoul,
And even ſtrike me dead,
Did I not ſee on Zion mount
The Lamb for ſin that bled.
6 A ſinner I, thro' Adam's fall,
Have loſt my way to bliſs:
When God a new way doth reveal,
Forbid this way I miſs.
7 Unto this way I mourning look,
No other help I know:
If thou declineſt helping me,
O whither ſhall I go?
8 Thy word ſaith, I ſhould not deſpond,
But plead and keep in mind
The blood and bowels of the Lamb,
Who is loſt mankind's friend.

HYMN XXXIII.

The penitent ſinner's hope.

1 IN Jeſu's name a penitent
Doth at God's footſtool ly;
My ſins I do confeſs and mourn,
And for free mercy cry.
2 Chriſt bids me aſk, and ſeek, and knock,
And promiſeth I'll find:
Thus I ſeek pardon and relief;
Lord, eaſe my grieved mind.
4 Chriſt's blood and merit is alone
The ground on which I plead
With God, that I may mercy find
In this my time of need.

4 The doctrine of free grace I plead,
Which thy dear goſpel ſounds,
And tender love to penitents
That flows from Jeſu's wounds.
5 Since Chriſt our ſurety paid the debt,
That ſouls condemn'd might live;
With honour to thy juſtice now,
Great ſins thou canſt forgive.
6 Where ſhould I go with all my ſins
But to Redeeming blood?
Thouſands have try'd it, and are waſh'd;
The fountain's large and good.
7 I plead thy blood, and ancient love;
I humbly own my guilt:
Was it not for ſuch ſtraying ſheep
The Sepherd's blood was ſpilt?
8 That trembling woman in diſtreſs
To Chriſt was fear'd to come:
She touch'd his hem; he heal'd her ſoon,
And ſent her joyful home.

HYMN XXXIV.

Thankſgiving to GOD the Father.

1 PRaiſe to the Father's love, that gave
His dear and only Son
To be our prieſt and ſacrifice,
For our ſins to atone.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 Thou gav'ſt thy Son and Spirit both
To free us from all fears:
Diſſolve our hearts in thankfulneſs,
Melt down our eyes in tears.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 But drops of tears can ne'er repay
The debt of love we owe:
Our whole ſelves then we give to thee;
There's no more we can do.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 We praiſe the Son, who in our room
Was willing to be ſlain;
We praiſe the Spirit, who applies
His blood to fallen men.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 Slain beaſts for ſin could not atone:
Such off'rings had been vain,
Had not the Father giv'n his Lamb
For ſinners to be ſlain.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 This ſacrifice, more precious
Than all created things,
To men eternal happineſs
In ſoul and body brings.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 Father, thy love me overwhelms:
What love like thine ſo free,
That thou haſt not withheld thy Son,
Thine only Son, from me!
Hallelujah, &c.
8 When men rejoice in earthly things,
And ſing of things of nought,
I'll ſing of thy redeeming love,
And wonders thou haſt wrought.
Hallelujah, &c.
9 Father, to thee eternally
Our grateful ſongs we'll raiſe;
But O! eternity's too ſhort
To ſhew forth all thy praiſe.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN XXXV.

The amazing Love of CHRIST.

1 AMazing love! that made God's Son
So willingly conſent
For worms, yea, foes and rebels baſe,
To bear their puniſhment.
2 Love made him lay aſide his crown
And robes of majeſty,
And like a ſervant to come down
To bear the croſs, and die.
3 Love brought him down for worms to die,
Love laid him in a tomb;
Love brings him down a ſecond time,
To lead his people home.
4 When devils rag'd, he then engag'd
To combat all hell's pow'rs;
He them defy'd, when that he dy'd
To ſave us from hell ſhow'rs.
5 When heav'n and hell both on him fell,
Our ſouls he faſt did hold;
His life gave up, the flood to ſtop,
And bring us to his fold.
6 Love made him on the croſs to bleed,
And fall our ſacrifice;
Love made the tree him brought to duſt
Raiſe men unto the ſkies.
7 Chriſt ſuffer'd: why? he's pleas'd to ſee
Poor ſtraying ſheep brought home,
And unbelieving ſouls allur'd
Into his wounds to come.
8 Hence he declares none periſh ſhall
Who in him do believe;
Their ſins he'll pardon, and them take
To heav'n with him to live.
9 All things to me are dung and droſs
But Jeſus crucify'd;
Under the ſhadow of his croſs
I'll ſit down and abide.

HYMN XXXVI.

A HYMN to the HOLY GHOST.

1 LORD, ſend thy Spirit down to us,
Chriſt's purchaſe to apply;
He'll cauſe us ſee our fall and help,
And unto Jeſus fly.
2 Thou, who at Pentecoſt didſt ſend
Heav'n's wind to fill the place
Where thy apoſtles met for pray'r,
Grant us part of that grace;
3 That gladly we, like them, may ſound
The wondrous works of God,
And ſhew the mighty pow'r and fruits
Of Jeſu's precious blood.
4 Come, Holy Ghoſt, thou heav'nly Dove
Deſcending from above,
Renew our ſouls, and fill our hearts

With precious faith and love.
5 We are thy workmanſhip; but ſin
Hath ev'ry thing miſplac'd:
Come o'er thy handy-work again;
Thy image is defac'd.
6 Create in us all things anew,
Cauſe old things paſs away;
Our corrupt habits quite ſubdue,
Sin weaken ev'ry day.
7 Let David's houſe in us grow ſtrong,
But weak the houſe of Saul;
Let ſatan's holds and all our luſts
Before God's Spirit fall.
8 O kindly guide poor travellers
Into the paths of peace,
And bring us to our Father's houſe,
Where ſins and ſorrows ceaſe.

HYMN XXXVII.

The Balm of CHRIST's Blood.

1 CHRIST's blood that univerſal balm which thouſands long have try'd,
Doth quicken, ſoften, cleanſe and heal,
Where-e'er it is apply'd.
2 This ſov'reign blood doth purge out ſin,
And doth allay our fears;
It gives us light and ſtrength within,
And dries up hurtful tears.
3 By this blood, hell its prey hath loſt,
Juſtice is ſatisfy'd;
Now willing ſouls may be forgiv'n,
Since Jeſus bled and dy'd.
4 No blood like this was ever ſhed,
For heav'n it makes us meet;
Mens hearts it draws, and pleads their cauſe:
No voice like it's ſo ſweet.
5 Abel's ſhed blood did vengeance cry:
But Chriſt cry'd, Mercy ſhew;
Them pity, 'Father, and forgive;
'They know not what they do.'
6 What love is this, that God ſhould ſtoop
In human fleſh to dwell,
And ſhed his blood for enemies,
To keep them out of hell!
7 Great love it was for God to bleed
For rebels doom'd to death;
But more to ſuffer hell, to ſave
Them from eternal wrath.
8 O let this divine blood of thine
My hard heart overflow:
This bleſſing grant, tho' earthly gifts
Thou ſhouldſt no more beſtow.
9 In my faith's arms I take the Lamb,
As offer'd unto me:
His precious blood I do apply,
Me from all guilt to free.

HYMN XXXVIII.

Shew forth CHRIST's Death.

1 SInce our Redeemer ſaith, Do this;
This we will always do:
Till Chriſt to us return again,
Thus we his death will ſhew.
2 How ſweet and welcome to our ſouls
Is Chriſt's dear feaſt of love!
Tho' it be no more but a taſte
Of that great feaſt above.
3 Thy fleſh, Lord, is the ſweeteſt food,
Thy blood is drink divine;
Thy pucrhas'd fruits are the beſt fare
On which thou mak'ſt us dine.
5 Pardon of ſin, and peace with God,
Do make a noble feaſt;
Coſtly to Chriſt, tho' free to us:
Moſt ſweetly do they taſte.
5 Here we ſet forth our ſuff'ring Lord,
As bleeding unto death;
Likewiſe the ſorrows of his ſoul,
When lying under wrath:
6 The nails which pierc'd his hands and feet,
Which cauſed ſtreams of blood;
The thorns which crown'd his bleſſed head,
And ſwell'd the crimſon flood.
7 Since Chriſt requires us for to ſhew
His love to us when loſt,
What wounds, and blood, and agonies,
To ſave us, it did coſt;
8 Thus we review thy death for us,
O Lamb, for ſinners ſlain:
We praiſe thy love, and reſt upon
The merit of thy pain.

HYMN XXXIX.

The Believers Work at the Holy Supper.

1 I'LL ſit beneath Immanuel's croſs,
Under theſe ſhow'rs of blood:
On my hard heart cauſe drops to light
From thy wounds, O my God.
2 My Lord I ſee nail'd to the tree,
And dying for my ſin;
Thy ſide wide open'd with a ſpear,
To lodge my ſoul therein.
3 I kiſs the nail-holes in thy hands,
And ſide the ſpear did pierce:
I ſhelter here, this cave me hides
When ſtorms blow ſharp and fierce.
4 My heart doth bleed, my eyes do drop,
When I thy anguiſh ſee,
And think theſe bruiſes ſore and pangs
Were all deſerv'd by me.
5 I ſee my ſins prepar'd the croſs,
The thorns, the nails, and ſpear,
Which tore thy fleſh: they made thy ſoul
The pains of hell to bear.
6 In thy wounds I ſin's ill do ſee;
In ſin I'll not proceed,
No more abuſe thy love, nor make
Thy wounds afreſh to bleed.
7 I mourn, and hate my cruel ſins,
Which pierc'd my Lord to death:
Theſe murderers ſhall find no more
Place in my ſoul to breathe.
8 Awake, my ſoul, with all thy pow'rs
Join with the hoſts above,
To celebrate forgiving grace,
And praiſe redeeming love.

HYMN XL.

Sweet Fruits of CHRIST's Sufferings.

1 THY goſpel, Lord, holds forth thy love
In ſweet and melting ſounds,
And us a ſov'reign balm preſents
From Jeſu's bleeding wounds.
2 It is thy pain that giveth eaſe
To my diſeaſed ſoul;
When I am full of pains and wounds,
Thy ſtripes do make me whole.
3 Thy cries bring anſwers to my pray'rs,
Thy wounds are my refuge;
Thy blood doth waſh my crimſon guilt,
And ſave from wrath's deluge.
4 Thy croſs doth bring me nigh to God,
And doth his wrath appeaſe;
Thy blood brings pardon for my guilt,
And gives my conſcience eaſe.
5 Thy death hath purchas'd life to me;
Thy grave hides all my ſin,
And all the curſes of the law;
Which yields great peace within.
6 Vaſt ſums of debt for us thou paid
With thy own dear heart's blood,
And calls us to be pure and white,
By waſhing in this flood.
7 This is our loving Ranſomer,
Who our whole curſe endur'd;
And, having paid our dreadful debt,
Our rooms in heav'n ſecur'd.
8 To him that lov'd us unto death
All honour we will give:
He ſhed his blood our ſouls to waſh;
We'll to his glory live.

HYMN XLI.

The Believing Soul's Feaſt.

1 HERE faith may ſpy our Saviour's fleſh
Upon the table ly;
Salvation flow in ſtreams of blood,
To drive our ſins away.
2 Grant, Lord, thy preſence at this feaſt,
And make it a good day:
Give to each gueſt what thou ſeeſt beſt;
Empty ſend none away.
3 To thee we look for living bread;
We languiſh and are faint:
If faſting thou ſhalt us diſmiſs,
Our ſouls will die for want.
4 Thy heav'nly manna, Lord, rain down
Our ſp'ritual ſtrength repair;
Give food, till we ſhall get above,
And feaſt with Jeſus there.
While in this deſert we ſojourn,
Send us grace from above;
Our ſouls refreſh, our faith increaſe,
And warm our hearts with love.
6 Thine ordinance, Lord, countenance;
Shew us thy ſmiling face:
Cauſe ſtreams of living waters flow
In channels of thy grace.
7 Thy people, Lord, lament for thee:
O comfort them that mourn;
Meet with them as in former days,
To goſpel feaſts return.
8 Charge not on us our former ſins;
Let all thine anger ceaſe:
Look to the croſs on Calvary,
And bid us go in peace.

HYMN XLII.

Thankſgiving after a Goſpel-Feaſt.

1 I Bleſs God for the food he gave
To me a worm to eat,
And that himſelf did condeſcend
To ſit with me at meat.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 He made me ſhare immortal cheer,
And ſweetly taſte his grace;
My hungry ſoul he did refreſh,
And looſe my tongue to praiſe.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 "What ſhall I render to my God
For all his gifts to me,"
And for this gift unſpeakable,
His Son for me to die?
Hallelujah, &c.
4 He from his fulneſs did me feaſt
With riches of his grace;
He took me in his loving arms,
And ſhew'd his ſmiling face.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 My heart when faint he did ſupport,
Diſpell'd my guilty fears:
He ſet my feet upon the rock,
And wip'd away my tears.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 His pard'ning voice makes me to ſing,
And doth inflame my love;
His Spirit lifts my thoughts from earth
Unto the things above.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 I praiſe thy name, who pity'd me,
Poſſeſt my heart as thine,
Reſtor'd me thy ſalvation's joy,
Fill'd me with love divine.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 In heav'n thy ſaints feaſt on thy love,
Where living ſtreams do flow;
They praiſe their Head in hymns above,
And we in hymns below.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN XLII.

Suitable Walking after a Goſpel-Feaſt

1 TO Chriſt we now devoted are,
By ſolemn oath we're thine:
Give grace and ſtrength now to obey
And love thy law divine.
2 Since for us thou haſt bled and dy'd,
To thee our all we give;
And for our ſins haſt ſatisfy'd,
To thee we'll only live.
3 Help us to grow in faith and zeal,

And thrive in every grace ;
And let Chriſt's love conſtrain us ſtill
To run our Chriſtian race.
4 O let us walk with tenderneſs,
And with humility :
Lord, break the power of unbelief,
Our heart-ſins mortify.
5 We'll make them our familiars,
Who our dear Lamb do love,
We'll travel in their company,
Who ſeek the land above.
6 But looſe companions we will flee,
Who would lead us aſtray :
To ſinful thoughts and tempting ſnares
We will no more give way.
7 May I the Lamb now imitate,
And in his footſteps tread,
And ſtill grow in conformity
To my exalted Head.
8 Lord, give more faith, more love and hope,
That I may live to thee,
And by my converſation ſhew
The Lamb hath dy'd for me.
9 Thou meeteſt them who do rejoice
In thy ſweet ways to go,
Who would their days ſpend to thy praiſe
While they are here below.

HYMN XLIV.

Revive Primitive Chriſtianity.

1 BLeſt Spirit come with mighty pow'r,
And melt mens hearts in tears ;
Thy work revive throughout the lands
In theſe declining years.
2 Let yet God's ordinance be lov'd,
Chriſt's dying words thought on ;
Let cold and careleſs ſouls be mov'd
To honour God's dear Son.
3 When the firſt ſaints oft broke thy bread
With love and life divine,
They drank the ſpirit of their Head,
As well's their ſacred wine.
4 Their meek and pure lives did proclaim,
They liv'd and walk'd with God :
To aliens they endear'd the Lamb,
And ſpread his fame abroad.
5 Their zealous hearts would nothing know
But Jeſus crucify'd ;
Him they confeſs'd while here below,
And martyrs for him dy'd.
6 Their love to Jeſus was ſo ſtrong,
All tortures they endur'd :
While they the ſlain Lamb made their ſong,
Thus ſtrangers they allur'd.
7 O where's that ancient holy flame
That in their hearts abode,
Which made them witneſs for the Lamb,
And ſuffer for their God ?
8 O God, ſend ſhow'rs of grace, and cauſe
Mens backward wills to yield,
And turn us from a wilderneſs
Unto a fruitful field.
9 Cauſe numbers flee to Jeſu's wounds,
Convince them there is room ;
Rebels ſubdue, reign in their ſouls :
O let thy kingdom come.

HYMN XLV.

Revenge the Death of CHRIST upon Sin.

QUESTION.

1 O Harmleſs undefiled Lamb,
What caus'd thy wounds and pain ?
Thou knew'ſt no ſin, thou did'ſt no wrong ;
What caus'd thee to be ſlain ?

ANSWER.

2 " Of all my wounds and anguiſh ſore,
My preſſures and complaints,
And of my racking bloody death,
Your ſins were inſtruments.
3 To you theſe bitter pains belong'd,
On you they would been laid ;
But love to you made me them bear,
That God's wrath might be ſtay'd."
4 O monſtrous ſin, thou murderer !
Can I be reconcil'd
To ſuffer thee to lodge with me ?
No more to this I'll yield.
5 I bitterly bewail my ſins,
Which gave my Saviour pain :
I them abhor, and caſt to door ;
They ſhall no more remain.
6 I'll ſin purſue, the Lamb that ſlew ;
All luſts I'll crucifie,
By nailing them to Jeſu's croſs,
Till they expire and die.
7 Subdue my heart, O mighty King ;
Let no corruption live :
Kill praſſion, pride, and all thy foes,
Let none of them ſurvive.
8 Tear up the roots of inbred ſin,
And let it rage no more ;
All ſatan's pleniſhing break down,
And turn it to the door.

HYMN XLVI.

The Complaints of ſerious Souls.

1 WHen doubts and fears oppreſs my ſoul,
In Chriſt's arms let me fall ;
For he's my ſtrength and righteouſneſs,
My Surety, and my All.
2 Allow me, Lord, to fall and ly
At thy dear pierced feet,
To ſpread out my complaints and griefs,
And taſte thy mercy ſweet.
3 With ſhame and grief I do bewail
That my heart is not ſoft,
For all the wounds my ſins gave Chriſt,
Which made him bleed ſo oft.
4 Alas ! I oft turn cold and dead,
And backward to obey ;
Yea, ſlow to praiſe the Lamb of God,
And negligent to pray.
5 Backſliding hearts thou ſeeſt we have,
Which wander and grow cold :
Lord, bring again thy ſtraying ſheep
Into thy happy fold.
6 Whatever croſs thou lay'ſt on us,

Give ſtrength to bear the load ;
Let it be pain or poverty,
We'll not refuſe the rod.
7 But, Lord, we dread inward decays
Of love and holineſs ;
From theſe our ſouls relieve and keep,
And with thy preſence bleſs.
8 My Lord, betwixt my ſoul and thee
The breaches all make up :
No cold nor dryneſs let there be ;
Withhold this bitter cup.
9 Let Jeſu's blood bring mountains down,
And diſtance all remove :
Make me, like Enoch, walk with God,
And ſpend my time in love.

N. B. I advertiſe now (as I did before the 13th Hymn) that the fourteen following Hymns are compoſed in different Meaſures. See the Reaſon given before.

HYMN XLVII.

The REPENTING PRODIGAL.

1 FAther, behold, thy ſon,
A wand'ring prodigal,
By ſin and folly quite undone,
Now at thy feet doth fall.
2 Aſham'd of all my ways,
My wand'rings I confeſs ;
I ſee great need of Jeſu's blood,
And his pure righteouſneſs.
3 Open thine arms to me,
And take the wand'rer home :
By goſpel-offers I'm aſſur'd,
Thro' Chriſt to me there's room.
4 I ſelf-condemned ly ;
O hear my humble pray'r :
Thou feeds the ravens when they cry,
Soul-food for me prepare.
5 Father of mercies, hear ;
Thy bleſſing now beſtow :
For this I cry, and wreſtling ly,
And will not let thee go.
6 O ſay, "This is my ſon,
Once dead, but now doth live ;
Once loſt, but now in Chriſt is found ;
I do him home receive."
7 O great Immanuel,
Accept my new-born cry ;
Behold the travail of thy ſoul
Which doth thee ſatisfy.
8 By faith I thee embrace,
Thy blood I do apply :
O ſend thy Spirit with his grace,
My ſoul to ſanctify.

HYMN XLVIII.

Weak FAITH not rejected.

1 I See Chriſt's bleeding ſide ;
Lord, hide me in thy wounds :
Thy ſheltering ſuch helpleſs ſouls
Unto thy praiſe redounds.
2 Into thy arms I fall,
In free love me embrace :
In weakneſs great on the I call,
O ſhew thy ſmiling face.
3 I wait at thy command,
Until the pool ſhall move,
When thou wilt ſend thy healing pow'r
To cure me in thy love.
4 Thou know'ſt my feeble voice,
Which I to thee direct :
The goſpel method is my choice,
All others I reject.
5 Thou know'ſt my heart's deſire,
My doubts and fears doſt ſee :
Thy ſounding bowels cauſe me hear,
And kindly ſay to me,
6 "Poor ſoul of little faith,
O wherefore doſt thou doubt ?
Whoe'er he be that comes to me,
Him will I not caſt out."
7 On thy word I depend,
Thou faithful art and true ;
My weak faith ſtrengthen and defend,
My unbelief ſubdue.
8 Teach me to know thy name
JESUS, and it to bleſs ;
Thy title alſo to proclaim,
'The Lord our Righteouſneſs.'

HYMN XLIX.

The Remembrance of CHRIST in the Supper.

1 CHriſt in that night he was betray'd,
Took bread, gave thanks, it brake, and ſaid,
"My broken body here you ſee ;
"Take, eat it, and remember me."
2 Thus alſo he the cup did take ;
"Here ſealing blood ſhed for your ſake,
"Which doth my teſt'ment ratiſie :
"Let all drink and remember me."
3 Your pardon, with what's for your good,
Is purchaſt by my deareſt blood :
My blood to you makes pardon free ;
In drinking, then, remember me.
4 For hungry ſouls here's manna rare,
God ſends from heaven for your fare ;
This manna falls now plenteouſlie :
In eating, then, remember me.
5 Here God ſits on a throne of grace,
Where ſinful men may ſee his face :
My blood procures your acceſs free ;
In drinking, then, remember me.
6 See here the Tree of Life with fruit,
And leaves which heal and ſtrength recruit ;
Theſe I ſhake down, poor ſoul, to thee :
Eat freely, and remember me.
7 See Jacob's ladder here ſet up,
A covenanting God at top :
Climb, and God will tranſact with thee ;
In doing this, remember me.
8 Here runs of Life the river pure,
Which our ſoul-wounds doth cleanſe and cure ;
It freely runs to all, you ſee :
By faith drink, and remember me.

HYMN L.

Admire the LAMB ſlain.

1 COme here, admire, and gaze a while;
Behold Chriſt pierc'd for ſinners vile:
Who can this glorious truth explain?
Th' immortal God, the Lamb is ſlain.
2 Look not aſide to dung and droſs,
But glory only in the croſs;
And always in your thoughts retain
Theſe melting words, the Lamb is ſlain.
3 Draw near the croſs, that bloody tree;
Rich fruits it bears for you and me.
Help, Lord, to know, and ſtill maintain,
The Lamb of God for me was ſlain.
4 Thy ſuff'rings, Lord, I weep to ſee,
Theſe ſtripes and wounds I brought on (thee:
From ſins of all kinds I'll abſtain,
Theſe nails by which the Lamb is ſlain.
5 The croſs is now a tree of life
That men relieves from ſinking grief,
Yea, life to dead ſouls doth regain;
Draw life from this, The Lamb is ſlain.
6 No flaming ſword doth guard this tree,
Its fruit is to all ſinners free:
Good news this is to fallen men;
Come eat and live, the Lamb is ſlain.
7 Dear Lamb, thine everlaſting love
Draws men from hell to heav'n above:
Thy love doth us to ſing conſtrain
This heav'nly ſong, the Lamb is ſlain.
8 The Lamb redeems us by his blood,
And makes us kings and prieſts to God:
All praiſe and honour doth pertain
Unto the Lamb for ſinners ſlain.

HYMN LI.

Trace CHRIST's Sufferings.

1 LEt's trace Chriſt's ſteps, like foll'wers brave,
From the bleſt feaſt unto the grave;
Nor leave him when to Calv'ry led,
Like thoſe who him forſook and fled.
2 Firſt to Gethſemane we'll go,
There floods of wrath him overflow;
Both fears and foes beſet him round,
Our ſins him preſs down to the ground.
3 There he lies in a bloody ſweat,
Which him o'erſpread from head to feet;
He's bruis'd, he pours out prayer's and cries
With floods of tears from both his eyes.
4 His friends prove falſe; one him betrays,
Another him with oaths denies:
Men ſeize and bind him like a thief,
His friends him leave without relief.
4 Amidſt his foes he's left alone,
He's buffeted and ſpit upon,
His head is crown'd with wreaths of thorn,
His body is with ſcourges torn.
6 He's load with ſcoffs and blaſphemies,
Baſely inſulted, charg'd with lies;
Found innocent, yet doom'd to die,
And bear his croſs to Calvary.
7 For us a ſhameful death he dy'd;
Between two thieves he's crucify'd:
He's nail'd, and jeer'd by cruel men,
With lingring torments pierc'd and ſlain.
8 His God, his ſun, withdrew their light;
Earth, rocks and men were in a fright:
Yet he by death ſubdu'd his foes,
And from the grave in triumph roſe.

HYMN LII.

The Soul wondering at REDEEMING LOVE.

1 HOw full of wonder is that love,
That made God leave his throne above,
To dwell in clay with men below,
And death for them to undergo!
2 That God, who keeps the key of death,
Should on a croſs reſign his breath!
To bring us pleaſure, ſhould feel pain;
To give us life, he ſhould be ſlain!
3 Great love! that made Chriſt groan and die,
Yea, rend the heavens with his cry,
That loud cry, 'My God, my God, why
Haſt thou forſaken me, to-day!'
4 Our Lamb hell's pains for us would bear;
Let him the crown for ever wear:
Let all who love his worthy name
In ſongs of triumph ſpread his fame.
5 Inflame our hearts, refine our tongues,
To praiſe with heav'nly thoughts and ſongs:
O let our hearts be tun'd with love,
And make us meet for ſongs above.
6 Deep in my ſoul his truth ingrain,
My glorious friend the Lamb is ſlain:
I'll wondring ly, that God ſhould dy
For man that was his enemy.
7 O holy Ghoſt, come from above,
Withdraw my heart from worldly love,
That I may think of nought beſide,
My God, my Saviour crucify'd.
8 With Simeon, I the Lamb embrace,
And cry, 'Lord let me go in peace;
Now make me meet with ſaints above,
To ſing thy everlaſting love.

HYMN LIII.

The bleſſed Fruits of the curſed Tree.

1 IN mournful ſongs we will record
The pangs and ſorrows of our Lord,
The tears and blood he for us ſpilt,
To make atonement for our guilt.
My Jeſus on the curſed tree
Did bow his dying head for me.
2 The dying pangs of our dear Lord
The honour of God's law reſtor'd;
The death and ſuff'rings he endur'd
Eternal life for us procur'd.
Our glorious Jeſus, by his love,
Hath made the curſe a bleſſing prove.
5 We praiſe the Lamb, our deareſt Lord,
Whoſe hands and feet for us were bor'd:
It was the croſs, that curſed tree,
On which the prince of life did die;
Accurs'd it was, yet divine love
Hath made the curſe a bleſſing prove.

4 Each heavy blow, and bloody ſtripe,
Our ſums of debt quite out doth wipe:
Then all our debt was fully paid,
When he on Calv'ry bow'd his head.
That tree of death to us is made
A tree of life with pleaſant ſhade.
5 Behold, Chriſt's blood his garments dy'd,
When he was bruis'd and crucify'd:
He dy'd upon the curſed tree,
My precious ſoul from hell to free.
That tree of death to us is made
A tree of life with pleaſant ſhade.
6 Chriſt bore the curſe for wretched men;
To buy us heav'n, our Lamb was ſlain:
His wounds ſtand open to receive
All helpleſs ſinners who believe.
My Jeſus on the curſed tree
Did bow his dying head for me.

HYMN LIV.

CHRIST's Blood calling aloud to us.

1 I Hear my Saviour cry aloud,
O ſinner, haſten to my blood;
Each drop of blood cries to thee, Come,
In my pierc'd ſide yet there is room.
Let ſinners come, and no more doubt;
For 'him that comes I'll not caſt out.'
2 My blood ſhall ranſom all from wrath,
Who truſt and look to me by faith:
My righteouſneſs is free to all,
Who come to me upon my call.
Let ſinners come and no more doubt;
For 'him that comes I'll not caſt out.'
3 A ſaviour you cannot find
In creatures doings who have ſinn'd;
Pure righteouſneſs you ſeek in vain
In any but the Lamb that's ſlain.
To my wounds let the guilty fly,
For love to you brought me to dy.
4 Of works no more let ſinners boaſt;
Your inſide view, and cry, we're loſt:
Truſt in my blood, who for you dy'd:
Look to me and be juſtify'd.
To my wounds let the guilty fly,
For love to you brought me to dy.
5 Bleſt Lord, I hear thy gracious call,
And gladly at thy feet do fall;
The welcome offers of thy grace
My ſoul doth heartily embrace:
To Chriſt I fly, and do confeſs,
He is 'the Lord our righteouſneſs.'
6 Dear Lamb, thy voice doth ſweetly ſound,
I ſee a fountain in each wound;
The ſtreams which thence do freely flow,
Black ſouls do waſh as white as ſnow.
I'll ſhelter take, in all diſtreſs,
Under my Saviour's righteouſneſs.

HYMN LV.

Mourn for Sin, that pierced the LAMB.

1 MY ſoul, weep o'er thy ſin and guilt,
For which thy Saviour's blood was Mourn for thy pride and unbelief, (ſpilt;
For which he dragg'd was like a thief:
He for thy debt his heart's blood paid;
My Lamb, my Love is crucify'd.
2 I ſee the drops of bloody ſweat
Fall from thy forehead to thy feet;
Theſe drops beſmear thy raiment all,
They move my tears as they do fall:
How heavy are my ſins when weigh'd
My Lamb, my Love is crucify'd.
3 Upon hard hearts let theſe drops light,
Who are not moved at the ſight;
Let hearts which terrors cannot move
Now be diſſolv'd by Jeſu's love:
Still I muſt look on ſin with pain,
Since for my ſins the Lamb was ſlain.
4 My ſins did ſpit in Jeſu's face,
They would the Prince of life diſgrace.
To ſhame they ſought him to expoſe,
They nail'd him naked to the croſs;
And bleeding, lift up on the tree,
Long hung the Man that dy'd for me.
5 My ſins thee griev'd and ſtabb'd thy heart;
They wounded thee in ev'ry part:
By ſin thy bleſſed fleſh was torn.
I view thee whom I pierc'd and mourn;
Thy bleeding body, pierc'd and tore.
I kiſs, and bleſs and thee adore.
6 Our griefs and burdens, gilt and ſhame,
Were all laid on the ſpotleſs Lamb:
Had he refus'd them, I had been
Quite ſunk and loſt in guilt and ſin;
But juſtice now is ſatisfy'd,
My Lamb, my Love is crucify'd.

HYMN LVI.

The ſoul bemoaning its Caſe to GOD.

1 TO God complaints and tears I ſend;
When ſhall my ſins and groanings end?
By unbelief I faint and fall,
Yet falling I for pity call:
I'm weaker than a bruiſed reed,
Always from Chriſt I ſtrength do need.
2 I nothing have me to commend,
My ſtony heart I cannot rend;
By nature I have nothing good:
Thou ſaw'ſt me in my filth and blood;
Yet then, in love, thou bids me live,
And for my ſoul a ranſom gave.
3 I'm dull when thee I come before,
I'm lifeleſs when I ſhould adore:
From clogs of ſin my ſoul ſet free;
Lord, rouze my ſoul to worſhip thee,
My drouzy frame I do abhor;
Awake me, that I ſleep no more.
4 A feeble helpleſs creature I
Do at thy pleaſure live or die:
O lift the rod, thy wrath remove,
My heart ſubdue to thee by love;
My ſins forgive, and to me turn:
Spare me, for ſin to weep and mourn.
5 Lord, rule my heart, and in me live,
And let no darling luſt ſurvive:
O bring my wand'rings to an end,
That ſo my thoughts may upward tend.

Thy feeble duſt with pity ſee;
It faints and creeps to win to thee.
6 O Father of my dying Lord,
Fulfil to me his gracious word:
Thy Spirit grant, for which he pray'd;
His influences on me ſhed.
Nothing but ſin I thee can give;
But quicken me, and I ſhall live.

HYMN LVII.

Give Thanks for REDEEMING LOVE.

1 FAther, thy love ſhines in thy Son;
Thou gav'ſt him, tho' thou had'ſt but one,
To ranſom a rebellious race,
And us tranſlate from ſin to grace.
O, for his ſake, our ſins remove,
And we'll exalt redeeming love.
2 Dear Jeſus bore the ſins of men;
Th' immortal God, the Lamb was ſlain.
Eternal bleſſings on the Lamb,
Let angels trumpet out his fame;
With angels bright, and ſaints above,
We'll join, and ſing his dying love.
3 We thee adore, O Chriſt the Son,
Who with thy Father dear art One,
And One the Holy Ghoſt with thee,
The One Eternal God in Three:
O make us meet with ſaints above
To magnify redeeming love.
4 Thou ſaw'ſt that all our pow'r was gone,
And to redeem us there was none:
If for us thou wouldſt not atone,
Eternally we were undone;
Therefore thou left thy throne above,
Vail'd thy perfections all but love.
5 For us thou pray'd, for us waſt ſlain,
For us thou lives and reigns again;
For us thy blood did once atone,
And now it pleads before thy throne.
To Jeſus only we do fly,
And on his ſacrifice rely.
6 For us Chriſt lives to interceed,
For us he doth this moment plead:
"Forgive their thoughts and actions too;
"Father, they know not what they do."
Lord, ſince our Surety paid the debt,
Our ſouls from wrath at freedom ſet.

HYMN LVIII.

CHRIST's Incarnation wonderful.

1 JEſus, immortal Son of God,
Thou choſe with mortals thy abode,
A virgin's womb thou didſt not ſcorn:
Angels are ſtruck to ſee thee born;
Thee, who the earth's foundation laid,
A little ſucking infant made.
2 Him whom the heav'ns cannot contain,
Behold, a woman's knees ſuſtain.
Great God, all praiſe we offer thee,
That thou vouchſaf'ſt a man to be,
To ſave loſt men from wrath and ſin,
That we might heaven enter in.
3 Let all admire that divine love,
Thich brought thee from thy throne above,
Our fleſh and frailties to aſſume,
To dy, and ly within a tomb;
That ſtrangers, who were far from God,
Might be brought nigh by Jeſu's blood.
4 Of him who did ſalvation bring,
Continually I'll think and ſing;
The Lamb ſhall be my conſtant theme,
I'll ſing his birth, his blood and name:
The Lamb is worthy that was ſlain,
On God's eternal throne to reign.
5 Us he did love when enemies;
To ſave us, on the croſs he dies.
'Tis finiſh'd, with loud voice he cry'd;
'You're ſafe, my friends, for all is paid;
'And, as my blood doth now atone,
'It goes to plead before the throne.'
6 No angel's tongue can ever tell
The glory of Immanuel.
O, for his ſake, my ſins forgive,
And let repenting ſinners live;
For me accept Chriſt's righteouſneſs,
And with more grace me daily bleſs.

HYMN LIX.

CHRIST is our Treaſure and Bliſs.

1 I'LL not ſeek my treaſure here
In this dry barren land;
Shadows only here appear,
And cares on ev'ry hand:
I would mount above to taſte
The feaſt thou gives to ſaints ſo free.
Lord, come down to me with haſte,
Or take me up to thee.
2 Jeſus purchas'd all my bliſs,
On him my hopes depend,
He himſelf my treaſure is;
Lord, keep me to the end.
Jeſus purchas'd me a feaſt,
When he dy'd on the curſed tree.
Lord, come down to me with haſte,
Or take me up to thee.
3 Hide me in thy bleſſed wounds,
And cleanſe me in thy blood;
Glory to thy name redounds
When thou doſt ſinners good:
Let me have thee for my gueſt,
Be not a ſtranger unto me.
Lord, come down to me with haſte,
Or take me up to thee.
4 Well thou know'ſt my ſin and ſhame;
Forgive me, and ſpeak peace:
Jeſus, cauſe me know thy name,
Shew me thy ſmiling face:
Lord, thy mercy ſtill doth laſt;
For good a token let me ſee.
Lord, come down to me with haſte,
Or take me up to thee.
5 Now by faith the Lamb we ſee
With pleaſure and delight;
Much increas'd our joy will be
When faith is turn'd to ſight:
I deſire with Chriſt to reſt,
Where I his face may clearly ſee.
Lord, come down to me with haſte,
Or take me up to thee.

HYMN LX.

CHRIST interpoſing for fallen Man.

1 OF ſhadows men dream
But we will proclaim
The Lamb's death and conqueſts, and ſound forth his name.
He ſaw when we fell,
Our face was to hell;
Our Lamb interpoſed for men that rebel.
2 Soon did he begin
For us to ſtep in:
" O Father, forgive them, they know not their ſin.
" Them do not conſume,
" For I the Lamb come
" To ſatisfy juſtice in guilty mens room."
3 He was not deny'd,
The Father comply'd:
Our guilt he laid on him, and for it he dy'd.
He's nail'd to the tree,
Us captives to free
From ſin and hell priſon, with God's enemie.
4 Our Lamb we'll adore,
Though devils do rore,
Envy us, purſue us, and tempt us ſo ſore.
They rage all in vain
But cannot detain
One ſoul as a captive, for whom the Lamb's ſlain.
5 His lambs Chriſt doth mind,
To weak ones he's kind;
He'll not dwell in heaven, and leave one behind:
For me he makes room
And then he will come,
Me ſafely to carry to my bleſſed home.
6 Griev'd ſoul, keep his road,
Pore not on ſins load,
Inſtead of thy Saviour, all cover'd with blood.
Chriſt ſaith, Look on me
(For eaſe) on the tree;
Look ſtraight to thy ſurety, and thou ſhalt be free.
7 When I'm with ſin preſt,
And fears are increaſt,
I'll look up to Jeſus, who gives ſinners reſt.
I will look to thee,
Dear Lord, on the tree;
Yea, ſing of thy bowels, and bleeding for me.

HYMN LXI.

A Song of Praiſe, and Addreſs to the bleſſed TRINITY.

1 TO God Almighty, One in Three,
Eternal praiſe be giv'n;
Who us from hell, thro' Chriſt, ſet free,
To reign with him in heav'n.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 Unto the Father, and the Son,
And Spirit ever bleſt,
The undivided Trinity,
Be praiſes ſtill addreſt.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 Father, thou gav'ſt great proof of love,
To men by ſin undone,
When for our ranſom thou ſent down
Thy dear and only Son.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 When we were ſinking to the pit,
How did thy bowels move!
To ſave us, thou wouldſt have him die:
Great proof that God is love!
Hallelujah, &c.
5 The dear Son's love let all men praiſe,
Who from the Father came
At time appointed, for to be
Our ſacrificed Lamb.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 Father, to us thy Spirit ſend,
For which thy Son did pray:
Let him apply Chriſt's blood and fruits,
And baniſh ſin away.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 May he thine image on us ſtamp,
And what we loſt reſtore.
And cauſe us to obey thy will,
With all our mind and pow'r.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 Let ſaints and angels join in one,
That great love to proclaim
Of him that ſits upon the throne,
And of the worthy Lamb.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN LXII.

CHRIST's Beauty and Lovelineſs.

1 SINCE I beheld thy wondrous love
Diſplay'd upon the croſs,
The world and all things here below
Do look like dung and droſs.
2 The Faireſt of ten thouſand I
Will make my pleaſing theme;
I'll ſing his love and conſtancy,
His beauty and his name.
3 There's nothing ſounds ſo ſweet to me
As Chriſt's Name, Blood, and Croſs:
Beſides the merits of his death,
All things I count for loſs.
4 Since Jeſus for our ſins would die,
Who would not love the Lamb?
Thy perſon's lovely and to me
Moſt ſweetly ſounds thy name.
5 Thou'rt white and ruddy in my eyes,
Fairer than ſons of men:
Thou altogether lovely art,
The Chief of thouſands ten.
6 Could men by faith mount up to ſee
Our ſhining Saviour dear,
Had they the ſmalleſt glimpſe of thee,
Creatures would diſappear.
7 Who can thy worth and love declare?
Thy pity knows no bounds:
The vileſt men thou calls to flee
Into thy open wounds.
8 I then accept thine offer free
To ſave my ſoul from hell:

Since winds and ſeas thy word obey,
Should hearts of men rebel!

HYMN LXIII.

Thanks to CHRIST for his Love and Sufferings.

1 LET us together meet and praiſe
The ſlaughter'd Lamb of God,
And with joint hearts ſing forth his grace,
His Name, his Love, and Blood.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 Into this wilderneſs he came
For three and thirty years,
To ſeek his poor, loſt, ſtraying ſheep
With many pray'rs and tears.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 The moſt deſpis'd he would not loſe,
But after them he ſought;
He ſtopt not till he found them all,
And with a price them bought.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 The price was great; his blood divine
For them muſt all be ſhed:
In love, to ſave from hell and ſin,
Chriſt's veins moſt freely bled.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 O bleſs the Lamb who gave himſelf
For Adam's ſinking crew,
To purchaſe our redemption,
When hell-fire was our due.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 He took our guilt and curſes due,
Our freedom to obtain:
He lov'd our ſouls; and, them to ſave,
The Prince of life was ſlain.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 To Chriſt we'll live, to Chriſt we'll die,
Who was our ſacrifice;
He well deſerves our life and death,
Who bought's with ſuch a price.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 Let hearts, and tongues, and all unite,
Chriſt's love and fame to raiſe;
Let all our actions honour him,
And our whole lives be praiſe.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN LXIV.

Let CHRIST's Kingdom come.

1 THE coming of thy kingdom, Lord,
Is our heart's great delight:
The thrones and kingdoms of thy foes
Them conquer in thy might.
2 Cauſe many glory in the Lord,
And in his ſtreaming blood;
For nothing can mens hearts ſubdue
But that o'erflowing flood.
3 The well which from thy ſide doth ſpring
Keep open to us ſtill,
That we and ev'ry thirſty ſoul
May come and drink our fill.
4 O let the number be increas'd
Of them thy wounds that know,
And feel the virtue of that blood
Which from the ſame did flow.
5 Teach men to come to God by thee,
Cauſe them from ſloth ariſe;
Shew them thy death is unto God
A pleaſing ſacrifice.
6 Send days of pow'r to bow their wills
Thine offers to embrace;
Make theſe, who earthly things admire,
Admirers of free grace.
7 O Father of our ſlaughter'd Lamb,
Remember men for good;
Be mindful of his pray'rs and tears,
And hear his ſpeaking blood.
8 Thy Spirit grant, for which he pray'd;
Convictions make like darts.
O Father, glorify thy Son,
And melt ten thouſand hearts.

HYMN LXV.

The convinced Soul coming to CHRIST.

1 I Am now ſenſible of guilt;
Lord hear the leper's pray'r:
O Jeſus, Maſter, if thou wilt,
Thou canſt me cleanſe and ſpare.
2 Where can a burden'd conſcience go
But unto Jeſu's blood?
What can waſh our deep ſtains of guilt,
But this ſoul-cleanſing flood?
3 When I am made to ſee my guilt,
Hide not this blood from me:
If this relief ſhould be conceal'd,
I'll ſink in miſerie.
4 Such hiding ſure comes not of thee;
'Tis I who am to blame:
My heart proves falſe, it ſhuts thee out;
I unbelieving am.
5 Oh, juſtly vile unthankful I
May be ſhut out by thee;
But, Father, look on Jeſu's wounds,
And hear them plead for me.
6 Altho' my ſins have ſwell'd up high,
And do for vengeance call,
Chriſt's blood like to a mighty ſea,
Can quickly drown them all.
7 Thou Son of David, hear my cry,
Let me receive my ſight:
Stand ſtill and call me: paſs not by,
My darkneſs turn to light.
8 Come, ſay unto my grieved ſoul,
Now ſore oppreſt with fear,
Your ſins are freely pardoned;
Fear not, be of good cheer.

HYMN LXVI.

Senſible Souls crying to GOD, and pleading CHRIST's Blood.

1 LAME ſouls here at Betheſda's pool
Wait till the waters move:
Lord, ſtir the pool, and help us in;
Our cure comes from above.

2 Chriſt's blood, which mighty changes works,
Can all our plagues remove:
Let this blood ſtream into our hearts,
Them ſoften by thy love.
3 Thy blood's my balm, my help, my hope;
To it with guilt I flee:
When ſin me ſtings, I mourn, I run
To plunge me in this ſea.
4 When I as dead in ſin do ly,
Lord, haſten to my grave:
Raiſe me, like Laz'rus, with thy cry;
From ſp'ritual death me ſave.
5 When my heart's barren, hard or cold,
With heav'nly rain me bleſs:
Riſe, ſhine on me with warming beams,
Thou Sun of righteouſneſs.
6 When ſin and ſatan me delude,
And make me go aſtray,
Lead my by faith to Jeſu's clefts,
So I'll regain my way.
7 Make me repent, in Chriſt believe,
My carnal heart renew:
Thus make me meet for heav'n above,
Where ſaints thy face do view.
8 In me exert thy ſov'reign grace,
And conquer all my pow'rs:
Let Chriſt's blood draw my heart to him,
And make it ſoft like ſhow'rs.
9 Jeſus, I aſk, I ſeek, and knock,
As thou doſt me command:
Now let me find; make good thy word,
For this I waiting ſtand.

HYMN LXVII.

The Holy Spirit makes the Goſpel-feaſt.

1 COME holy Spirit, from above,
And on my garden blow;
Come with the north and ſouth winds both,
And make the ſpices flow;
2 That to his garden Chriſt may come,
His pleaſant fruits to eat:
And let my ſoul be honoured
To ſit with him at meat.
3 Ah! now our love is waxed cold,
Chriſt's table is deſpis'd:
To vice and ſloth mens ſouls are ſold,
Our ſlain Lamb is not priz'd.
4 Cauſe heaven's dews drop from above,
To ſoften hearts of ſtone;
Cauſe men to grieve for ſlighting Chriſt,
And all their ſins bemone.
5 Lord, ſend a ſpark of heav'nly fire,
Our coldneſs to remove:
To ſeek thy face with ſtrong deſire,
Inflame our hearts with love.
6 O let thy Spirit ſhew to us
The Lamb was for us ſlain;
Thus warm our hearts, and thro' thy grace,
We'll not lodge ſin again.
7 And, when thou mak'ſt our hearts to burn,
Preſerve this loving frame;
Send new ſupplies ſtill from above,
To keep alive the flame.
8 Thy righteouſneſs and ſtrength, dear Lord,
Continually we need:
O for our daily food us teach
By faith on thee to feed.
9 Give new degrees of faith and love,
Send more ſtill from above;
Give more and more, till we perceive
To us thy ſpecial love.

HYMN LXVIII.

A Goſpel-walk after a Goſpel-feaſt.

1 ALL glory to the Lamb our God,
In whom we have believ'd:
The ſymbols of his body broke
From him we have receiv'd.
2 Great King, rule o'er our conquer'd hearts,
Our faculties poſſeſs;
Whate'er in them mints to rebel,
That quickly, Lord, ſuppreſs.
3 Help me to hate ſin, and it count
The author of my woe,
And war againſt it to declare,
As Chriſt's moſt deadly foe.
4 Let bleeding love me influence,
God, who is love, to ſerve,
And conſtantly his holy laws
To love and them obſerve.
5 The narrow way Chriſt did command,
He walk'd himſelf therein:
O give me grace to follow him,
Abhorring ev'ry ſin.
6 The love of Chriſt my heart conſtrains
To love his members too,
And all that unto him pertain,
Be they deſpis'd or few.
7 Since for his flock, where'er they dwell,
Chriſt his heart's blood did ſhed,
I'll fellowſhip ſtill hold with all
Who hold it with the Head.
8 In harmony with them I'll join
Our Jeſu's name to raiſe,
And call the angels to our help,
Redeeming love to praiſe.
9 Some lively ſouls in heaven's road
Go forward cheerfully;
And ſhall we in thy ways but creep,
Whilſt other Chriſtians fly?
10 Kill ſin in us, and quite ſubdue
All that againſt thee ſtrives:
Write HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD
On all our hearts and lives.

HYMN LXIX.

Addreſs to the HOLY SPIRIT.

1 COme, heav'nly Dove, and be my guide
Quite thro' the wilderneſs:
Chriſt is my way, with holineſs,
In this me lead to bliſs.
2 Do thou poſſeſs my yielding heart
With true faith, hope and love;
Renew my ſoul, and make me long
To dwell with God above.
3 Me perfect make in holineſs,
That I may be found meet

In heav'n to live with Chriſt and ſaints,
Where praiſing work is ſweet.
4 Moſt holy Sp'rit, I do commit,
To thee my heart and frame:
Thy workmanſhip in me maintain,
For honour of thy name.
5 In me pull down all pow'r of ſin,
And with me make abode,
And purify my heart within,
A temple meet for God.
6 Come dwell, and witneſs in my heart
That I'm a child of God;
This would me feaſt, and make me ſing
Thro' all the heav'nly road.
7 Thy Spirit, Lord, take not from us,
Leſt from thy paths we ſlide,
And all our pious purpoſes
Quite drop and lay aſide.
8 But Chriſt, who dy'd, is now alive,
And lives for us to plead:
And hence we truſt his Sp'rit will ſtay,
To help us in our need.

HYMN LXX.

A penitent returning Backſlider.

1 ONce I my Saviour did enjoy,
Sweet was his love to me:
I liv'd and much convers'd with him,
Then well did we agree.
2 While Chriſt I lov'd, his love I knew;
But, when my love wax'd dry,
The clouds turn'd thick, and my heart hard,
And formal was my cry.
3 Alas! I have God's Spirit griev'd,
And caus'd him to withdraw:
No wonder clouds thy face do hide,
When I forget thy law.
4 When thy good Spirit is withdrawn,
I ly before the Lord,
Much like a lump of lifeleſs clay:
Lord, ſend a quick'ning word.
5 O that it were with me again
As it was in months paſt!
Thy Spirit I would no more grieve
Nor thy ſweet favours waſte.
6 Oh! I'm unworthy of a ſmile,
I bluſh with thee to meet:
If I mayn't ſee my Saviour's face,
I'll kiſs his pierced feet.
7 Backſliding ſouls thou bid'ſt return,
That them thou mayeſt heal:
With tears let me return to thee,
Whoſe word doth never fail.
8 In mercy turn thy face to me,
And all my clouds diſpel:
Thy controverſy plead no more;
Thy anger is like hell.
9 My evidences, Lord, clear up;
Let ſin them blot no more:
Reſtore my fellowſhip with thee,
As I have had before.

HYMN LXXI.

View the Sufferings of CHRIST crucified.

1 BEhold, the Lamb ſtands dumb before
His raging murderers;
And while they nail'd and pierc'd him thro',
Moſt patiently he bears.
2 When from each pore his blood did ſpring,
What pangs felt he within!
Great was the load of wrath divine,
That bruis'd him for our ſin.
3 On Calv'ry hill he naked hung,
Pierc'd thro' till he was dead:
Thus both to men and angels he
A ſpectacle was made.
4 View on the croſs our ſuff'ring Lord,
With wounded head and hands,
With pierced ſide, and bleeding heart;
All red with blood he ſtands.
5 'Behold, ſaith he, my agonies
'I ſuffer'd for your guilt;
'What crimſon ſtreams run from my wounds!
'For you this blood was ſpilt.
6 'Your ſins me griev'd, and ſtab'd my heart;
'They pierc'd my hands and feet;
'All this I ſilently endur'd,
'For heav'n to make you meet.'
7 Can I, unmov'd, Chriſt's groanings hear,
Like to an harden'd Jew?
Can I, without a ſigh or tear,
This mournful ſcene review!
8 Forbid it, Lord! I'll bear a part
When I thine anguiſh ſee;
I feel, when I behold thee pierc'd,
And nailed to the tree.
9 Lord, my heart breaks; now thee I ſee,
Whom I have pierc'd, and mourn:
Alas! my ſins drove in the nails
By which thy fleſh was torn.

HYMN LXXII.

CHRIST'S Wounds and Blood the Support of burden'd ſouls.

1 IN all my anxious doubts and fears
I flee to Jeſu's wounds:
His blood calls penitents to hope,
To mourners peace it ſounds.
2 Chriſt's arms outſtretch'd are to embrace
Returning prodigals;
Thy blood doth guſh out, for to waſh
Them from their fouleſt falls.
3 To worſt of men oft virtue flows
From thy wide bleeding wounds;
Thou mak'ſt thy grace oft moſt abound
Where wickedneſs abounds.
4 Lord, where ſhall I my anchor caſt,
But on the rock alone,
Chriſt crucify'd immoveable,
The ſure foundation-ſtone?
5 Tho' earth's foundation be remov'd,
On him my ſoul relies;
In him my Father is well-pleas'd,
Chriſt's blood him ſatisfies.
6 Thy goſpel tells what thy blood works;

From terror it relieves :
Its virtue many thouſands know,
It ſaves whoe'er believes.
7 O bleeding Lamb, with pity view
Theſe fears which me moleſt ;
Let thy blood waſh out crimſon ſins,
In thy wounds give me reſt.
8 When I'm diſtreſt, here will I reſt
My heavy laden ſoul :
O hear my groans, and bear my loads,
My ſin-ſick ſoul make whole.

HYMN LXXIII.

CHRIST'S Free grace, Love and Pity to men.

1 OUR worthy ſlaughter'd Lamb thou art,
Our great High Prieſt indeed ;
Moſt freely on mount Calvary
Thou didſt for mankind bleed.
2 Thy wounds thou mak'ſt our hiding place,
And ſtill thou art our friend :
When wrath purſu'd, thou ſhed'ſt thy blood
That ſo we might be ſkreen'd.
3 For vileſt men, and blackeſt hearts,
Thy wounds did freely bleed :
For well thou know'ſt that of thy blood
Such ſouls ſtand moſt in need.
4 In thee faint hearts do find ſupport,
And troubled minds get peace ;
From thee poor hungry ſouls get food,
And wounded ſpirits eaſe.
5 Thou wilt not quench the ſmoking flax,
But blow it to a flame ;
The bruiſed reed thou never breaks,
But ſtrengthen doſt the ſame.
6 Had'ſt thou left ſaints, ſure they had ſtay'd
With men on earth that dwell :
Thy free grace them diſtinguiſhed,
Or they had dwelt in hell.
7 To thy free love I flee, O Lamb,
For ſcarlet ſinners ſlain,
To free me of my loads of guilt,
And eaſe me of my pain.
8 Thou ſay'ſt believe, and on me reſt,
And you ſhall find relief :
Thy promiſe ſweet I would believe ;
Lord, help my unbelief.
9 On thy blood only I rely,
As doth thy goſpel call :
The great atonement I receive,
Which ſaves believers all.

HYMN LXXIV.

The ANGELS SONG.

1 HOW ſweetly did the angels ſing
At Chriſt's nativity !
Let Adam's race take up their hymn,
And praiſe God chearfully.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 All glory be to God on high,
And peace be on the earth :
Henceforth good-will from heav'n to men,
Becauſe of Jeſu's birth.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 We more than angels ought to praiſe :
For, tho' they ſee God's face,
With ranſom'd men they have no ſhare
In God's redeeming grace.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 Hoſanna to king David's Son,
And to king David's Lord,
Our dear God man, our glorious Prieſt,
Who heav'n to us reſtor'd.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 Let men and angels praiſe the Lamb,
Ev'n Jeſus Chriſt our Lord ;
Let men his ſtripes and wounds for them
With thankful hearts record.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 Becauſe he dy'd, God hath him rais'd,
And glorify'd on high :
Him all the heav'nly hoſts adore,
And praiſe eternally.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 Chriſt's riſing doth us juſtify ;
And his aſcent to God
Doth find us room with ſaints to ſing,
And ever praiſe his blood.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 We ſee thee now at God's right-hand :
Lord, draw us up to thee,
To triumph ever in thy love,
And all thy glory ſee.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN LXXV.

ADDRESS to the FATHER.

1 O Heavenly Father, we thee bleſs,
Who gave the Lamb to men :
The Lamb we bleſs, who did ſubmit
To be for ſinners ſlain.
2 Thou pity'd worms, and them did ſpare,
Yet ſpared not thy Son,
But him did wound and bruiſe to death,
For our ſins to atone.
3 Father of mercies, thro' Chriſt's death,
Thou pardons enemies,
And ſends thy Spirit to their ſouls
With faith and rich ſupplies.
4 Forgive them, Father, Chriſt once cry'd,
They know not what they do :
Forgive us, Father, we now cry ;
Chriſt's blood cries for us too.
5 O Father, thou doſt men purſue
With offers of thy grace ;
And, when refus'd, thou oft repeats
Thy goſpel terms of peace.
6 With many motives thou haſt try'd
Our backward hearts to win :
Thy Sp'rit with patience ſtrives to ſave
Men from the pow'r of ſin.
7 Of thy forbearance and free grace
A monument I am ;
And ſtill thou calls me to embrace
Thy ſacrificed Lamb.
8 Great love ! that I who ſpurn'd thy grace !
Thy pow'r and wrath defy'd,

Should mercy have proclaim'd to me,
  Thro' thy Son crucify'd.
9 O let not men abuſe thy grace
  To ſin, becauſe thou'rt good:
Fill all our hearts with grief and ſhame,
  That we thy grace withſtood.

N. B. The ſeven following hymns are compoſed mainly for young perſons.

HYMN LXXVI.

A SONG for YOUNG ONES.

1 AWake, ye little ones, and ſing
  The honours of the Lamb:
Let every child prepare a ſong
  To God our Saviour's name.
2 Our glorious Redeemer is
  Moſt worthy to receive
Our thanks and praiſe continually,
  Yea, more than we can give.
3 May his great love ſink in our hearts,
  And evermore abide;
Since for us children, ſinners viſe,
  The great IMMANUEL dy'd.
4 How hot and flaming was his love,
  That made him interpoſe
His naked breaſt, to take the ſtroke
  For us who where his foes!
5 May our hearts burn with love to him
  Thro' all eternity;
Since out of burning love to us,
  Chriſt on the croſs did die.
6 We bleſs the Lord, who hath to babes
  This glorious truth reveal'd,
Salvation thro' Chriſt crucify'd,
  From wiſer minds conceal'd.
7 From many is this treaſure hid;
  But thou haſt led our eyes
Unto the pleaſant goſpel field,
  Where this bleſt treaſure lies.
8 By faith and meditation
  Here will we walk and dig,
Till we make rich. and ne'r be put
  From creatures more to beg.

HYMN LXXVII.

A Song for Children.

1 A Little child, O Lord, I am;
  I ſtrength and wiſdom want:
I come to thee, who canſt them both
  In little children plant.
2 A willing child that comes to thee,
  Thou ſay'ſt, thou'lt not caſt out:
Thou bowels haſt of God and man,
  Why therefore ſhould I doubt?
3 Thy goſpel offers reach to all,
  And namely to the young;
Thy words left on record are ſweet,
  How charming is thy tongue!
4 "O come to me, ye burden'd ſouls,
  "With guilt and fears oppreſt;
"By faith your burdens on me caſt,
  "And I will give you reſt.
5 "Your willing necks bend to my yoke,
  "Yield to my government,
"And imitate my holy life;
  "And this you'll ne'er repent.
6 "I'm meek and lowly, learn from me
  "A meek and lowly mind;
"And thus your weary reſtleſs ſouls
  "Shall reſt and quiet find.
7 "My yoke to you ſhall eaſy prove,
  "My burden alſo light:
"For wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs,
  "And all her paths are right."
8 Lord, I believe thy faithful words,
  Thy offers I embrace;
Thine offices I do accept,
  And thank thee for thy grace.

HYMN LXXVIII.

A SONG for YOUNG PERSONS.

1 WE mourn that converts are ſo few:
  Cauſe ſouls like doves flee home,
Make converts fall like morning dew;
  O let thy kingdom come.
2 O Spirit of conviction, ſtrive
  With thoſe of tender years,
And cauſe thy darts pierce all our hearts,
  And melt us into tears.
3 Diſcover ſin in its black hue,
  That we may it deteſt;
And let us ſee God's remedy,
  Chriſt's wounds, wherein to reſt.
4 Thou empties firſt whom thou doſt fill;
  Caſts down whom thou doſt raiſe;
Thou quickens whom the law doth kill,
  And glorifies free grace.
5 Lord, make thy light unto me ſhine,
  To ſhew me what I am;
That I am loſt, without the blood
  Of Chriſt, the worthy Lamb.
6 Take this rebellious heart of mine,
  And bathe it in thy blood:
In it ſet up thy throne and reign;
  Pull down what thee withſtood.
7 O com'rades dear, bring all your hearts
  While young unto the Lamb;
No longer keep him from his right,
  Since for our hearts he came.
8 Who elſe deſerves our love but he,
  His blood that freely ſpilt,
To ſave our ſouls from juſtice' ſword,
  And purge away our guilt?

HYMN LXXIX.

A SONG for CHILDREN.

1 I Read my Saviour did come down
  A little child to be,
And on the croſs did ſhed his blood
  For children ſuch as me;
2 That to this fountain all may come,
  Their ſouls to cleanſe from ſin,
Lord, grant me faith t' apply this blood,
  And bathe my ſoul therein.
3 'Tis little that I know of thee,
  My crucified Lord,

Thy Spirit ſend to teach me more
Out of thy bleſſed word.
4 Lord, in thy word thou calls us all
To come to thee and live:
I come to thee with all my guilt;
My ſoul cleanſe and forgive.
5 My nature change, my heart renew;
No good can I perform:
I'm weak, but yet my Surety's ſtrong;
O help the feeble worm.
6 Lord, in thy ſtrength I'll change my courſe:
O plant grace me within,
And purify my little heart
From ev'ry luſt and ſin.
7 Thou art my Shepherd; lead me on,
Let me not go aſtray:
In thy ſweet ways cauſe me to walk,
And thee with love obey.
8 A humble, meek and loving frame
Into my heart implant:
Help me by faith on thee to lean
For ev'ry grace I want.

HYMN LXXX.

A SONG for YOUNG ONES.

1 THE goſpel ſound doth reach our ears,
Let young ones all rejoice:
The words are charming we do hear,
'Tis Jeſu's melting voice:
2 "Come unto me, incline your ear;
Hear, and your ſouls ſhall live;
A covenant I'll make with you,
And all your ſins forgive."
3 My ſtreaming blood ſhall purge away
The guilt of all your ſin;
My Spirit's warm enliv'ning beams,
Shall life beget within.
4 I'll be your righteouſneſs and ſtrength;
I'll lead you on the way,
Till you arrive in heav'n at length,
And dwell with me for ay.
5 We gladly hear our Saviour's voice,
Which bids us ſinners live:
Cauſe our dry bones begin to ſtir,
To us thy Spirit give.
6 There's none our ſouls do truſt but thee;
On earth there is not one,
Our panting hearts deſire to ſee,
But God in Chriſt alone.
7 That creatures got our thoughts in youth,
We heartily bemoan:
Now we thee chuſe, receive, and love;
To thee we live alone.
8 What ſhall I render to my God
For all his gifts to me,
And for his gift unſpeakable,
The Lamb for us to die?

HYMN LXXXI.

A SONG for YOUNG PERSONS.

1 TO JESU's hand we do commit
The light and love we have:
Preſerve and cheriſh that in us
Which thy good Spirit gave.
2 New-liſted ſoldiers we're to thee,
Our Captain wiſe and ſtrong:
We're ſworn to fight againſt thy foes;
To thy camp we belong.
3 For us Chriſt fought; he pull'd us from
Sin, ſatan, death and hell:
The battle coſt him many wounds;
But lo! it ended well.
4 His garments were all ſtain'd with blood,
But ne'er did quit the field:
His love hath overcome our ſouls,
And cauſ'd our wills to yield.
5 Let ſoldiers all their Captain praiſe,
Their General ſo brave,
Who fought and dy'd, and roſe again,
Their precious ſouls to ſave.
6 Our Lamb alone hath vanquiſhed
Hell's roaring lions all:
Unto him then let thanks be giv'n
By young ones great and ſmall.
7 O that I knew how to the Lamb
My thankfulneſs to ſhew!
Then do his will, and in no ill
Or ſin yourſelf allow.
8 May to the Lamb that once was ſlain,
Be praiſe and glory giv'n
By all that dwell upon the earth,
And all the hoſts of heav'n.

HYMN LXXXII.

A SONG for YOUNG CONVERTS.

1 DEar Lamb, thou haſt thy myſteries
Unto us babes reveal'd:
The weak thou takes, and keeps thy truths
From wiſer minds conceal'd.
2 The nat'ral man cannot conceive
Things which the Spirit teach;
But us thou makes know and believe
The truths thy ſervants preach.
3 More bleſt than many righteous men
Are we in goſpel days:
What things they ſought, we find in Chriſt;
To his free love be praiſe.
4 With other children in the road
To hell we lately went:
From pity, thou thy Spirit ſent,
Our ruin to prevent.
5 To upper worlds we're help'd to go,
With thoſe of heav'nly birth;
While others chuſe to ſtay below,
And ſeek their bliſs on earth.
6 May we each tempting vice avoid,
And no more entertain
Theſe ſins and luſts by which the Lamb
Was crucify'd and ſlain.
7 If in our youth thou call'ſt us off
From this uncertain ſtage,
O give us now of heav'nly bliſs
A ſoul-comforting pledge.
8 If longer thou wilt keep us here,
Be with us all our days;
Fit us to honour thee on earth,
And ſing in heav'n thy praiſe.

HYMN LXXXIII.

Blood and water from CHRIST'S ſide.

1 AS our Redeemer undertook,
For us he ſatisfy'd:
On Calvary he bore our guilt,
There on the croſs he dy'd.
2 There we may ſee from his pierc'd ſide
The mixed current flow
Of blood and water, for to waſh
Black ſinners white as ſnow.
3 It needful was Chriſt's ſide and heart
Should pour a double flood:
By water we are purify'd,
And pardon'd by the blood.
4 O pierced Lamb, with pity view
My woful ſpots and ſtains;
And with that flood them overflow
Which from all ſin doth cleanſe.
5 May I get faith to uſe that blood
That ſtream'd from thee, my Lord:
No comfort have I in the earth
But what thy wounds afford.
6 Grant ſaving faith, thee to receive;
My unbelief remove:
May I thy ſuff'rings all record,
With faith that works by love.
7 Let faith be waxing ſtronger ſtill,
To count the world but droſs,
To hate the moſt beloved ſin,
And nail it to the croſs.
8 Author of faith, to thee we look,
For faith we ſend our cry:
The gift of faith unto us grant,
Our ſouls without it die.

HYMN LXXXIV.

A Dialogue betwixt Pilgrims.

MEN.
1 TELL us, O women ſojourners,
Unto what place ye go?
And why you do not ſeem content
To ſtay on earth below?
WOMEN.
2 All creatures here we empty find,
They can't ſupply our wants:
We go to Chriſt above, our bliſs,
To praiſe him with the ſaints.
M.
3 Have you not many friends on earth
Who with you ſympathize?
Cannot your earthly comforts here
Your hearts to ſtay entice?
W.
4 We're pilgrims here, earth's not our home;
Which makes us long to be
Where Chriſt our friend dwells with his ſaints,
And they him glorifie.
M.
5 Why don't you ſeek your treaſure here,
With others in the land,
Who ſeem well pleas'd with ſenſual things,
And ſomething in their hand?
W.
6 Our treaſure Chriſt laid up above,
He dearly bought our bliſs;
His blood's the price; nay, Chriſt himſelf
Our bleſſed treaſure is.
M.
7 Since Chriſt your treaſure is in heaven,
Your hearts muſt mount above:
Things earthly will not ſuit your minds,
You muſt be where you love.
W.
8 A ſight of Jeſu's love, and blood
Down ſtreaming from the croſs,
Makes all things to us here below
Appear as dung and droſs.
M.
9 Let pilgrims here join heaven's hoſts,
And hallelujahs ſing
To him that ſits upon the throne,
And to the Lamb our King.
W.
10 Hoſanna's of the higheſt ſtrain
To heaven's King be giv'n,
Our Saviour God, who came to men
With news of peace from heav'n.

HYMN LXXXV.

A DIALOGUE.

M.
1 DEar fellow-pilgrims we are glad
To find you in the road
That leads to new Jeruſalem,
The city of our God.
W.
2 Straight to that city we would go,
But we have little ſtrength:
Ah! in the way we move but ſlow;
Fain would we come your length.
M.
3 O haſte unto that city fair,
The Bridegroom waits for you:
He'll clothe, he'll wed, and feaſt you there;
Truſt him, his word is true.
W.
4 Our faith is weak, our grace is ſcant,
In God's ways we but creep;
Our ſins us clog, and tears we want
For them to mourn and weep.
M.
5 Seek for God's Spirit you to draw,
And cauſe you run with ſpeed:
By faith Chriſt's fulneſs ſtill apply;
There you'll get what you need.
W.
6 Lord, draw us, and thick clouds diſpell,
Set heaven in our ſight;
Remove our doubts, grant new ſupplies
Of divine heat and light.
M.
7 Tho' doubts perplex you here below,
No clouds you'll find above;
There in God's light we light ſhall ſee,
Where light is match'd with love.
W.
8 Unto that land of light and love

We'll haſte, Chriſt's face to view ;
We long to ſhare his heav'nly fruits,
Which ſtill continue new.
M.
9 Hoſanna to king David's Son,
And to king David's Lord :
His love proclaim whoſe ſide was pierc'd,
Whoſe hands and feet were bor'd.
W.
10 To Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt,
One God in Perſons Three,
Who us ſalvation brought when loſt,
Still praiſes ſing will we.

HYMN LXXXVI.

A DIALOGUE.

M.
1 COme, waiting virgins, join with us
To praiſe our glorious King :
In harmony lift up your voice ;
Daughters of Zion ſing.
W.
2 The invitation we accept
To ſing of Zion's King ;
To us no earthly buſineſs
Can ſo much pleaſure bring.
M.
3 O virgin-ſouls, the Bridegroom comes
The match to conſummate :
Buy oil in time, and trim your lamps ;
For him look out and wait.
W.
4 Our lamps we'll trim, and look for Chriſt ;
Let ſleep from us be driv'n :
In watching we will join you here,
And join your ſongs in heav'n.
M.
5 We'll jointly cry, "The creature's vain ;
O Lamb there's none but thee
Among the angels, or the ſaints,
Our ſouls can ſatisfie."
W.
6 Good cauſe have we all ſo to cry,
The Lamb appear'd our friend :
When wrath for ſin did burn like fire,
He from the flame us ſkreen'd.
M.
7 Come, hear Chriſt's dying cries and grones,
When nailed to the croſs ;
Come, ſee him red with blood and wounds,
When bearing wrath for us.
W.
8 Our great delight is ſtill to pry
Into Chriſt's wounds and croſs :
Compared with this happineſs,
All things we count as droſs.
M.
9 Siſters, love Chriſt, be not afraid
Of law's curſe, death or hell :
Chriſt bought your ſouls, and paid your debt,
And you in peace may dwell.
W.
10 Chriſt alſo bought your liberty
To be God's ſons and heirs ;
And you may Abba Father cry,
When you ſend up your pray'rs.

HYMN LXXXVII.

A DIALOGUE.

M.
1 O Women, what think ye of Chriſt ?
Is he not white and fair ?
Can any thing you ſee on earth
With God's dear Lamb compare ?
W.
2 Created things are vanity ;
In heav'n or earth there's none
Our panting ſouls deſire to ſee
But God in Chriſt alone.
M.
3 Do you love Chriſt to ſerve and praiſe,
More than the things of ſenſe ?
What do you think of Wiſdom's ways ?
What's your experience ?
W.
4 Chriſt's ſervice is an eaſy yoke,
We feel his burden light ;
And ſweetly in his ways we run,
When his love's in our ſight.
M.
5 Bleſt they who ſee Chriſt's love to them
In his ſore agonie ;
And in the ſtripes which he endur'd
Their ſouls from ſin to free.
W.
6 'Caſt not away your confidence.'
But truſt, and ſtill maintain
The Lamb is our inheritance,
He for our ſins was ſlain.
M.
7 'No condemnation you ſhall know
Who in Chriſt Jeſus are :'
His daughters lodge in Jeſu's wounds,
And pluck you hence who dare ?
W.
8 With him we cloſe, with him we cleave,
Who bled to make us free
From ſin and hell, and bought us life
By dying on the tree.
M.
9 Sure nothing, then, which you do aſk
Shall to you be deny'd ;
When you on ſcripture-grounds can plead,
The Lamb for you hath dy'd.
W.
10 We truſt we've found the Pearl of price,
Which us enriched hath :
In him we'll joy, and him we'll praiſe,
Both in our life and death.

HYMN LXXXVIII.

A DIALOGUE.

M.
1 REjoice, O women, for the Lamb
Your great High Prieſt is made :
He wept, he bled, to buy for you
A crown that ſhall not fade.
W.
2 With ſympathy his pains we feel
He ſuffer'd on the tree,

And all the anguiſh he endur'd
Our ſouls from hell to free.
M.
3 What caus'd the flaming ſword to ſtrike
And wound his ſoul ſo ſore,
And put him to ſuch grief and pain?
Was it our ſins he bore?
W.
4 We blame not Pilate, nor the Jews;
But we our grief renew
For all our ſins in heart and life,
Since they our Saviour ſlew.
M.
5 Mourning with you, we'll view the Lamb
As ſtretch'd upon the croſs,
Who never aſk'd to be reliev'd
Till he aton'd for us.
W.
6 Let's kill ſin too, that ſlew the Lamb;
His laws let us approve:
Conformity we'll ſeek to him;
His ſaints our hearts do love.
M.
7 Let's take Chriſt's blood, ſin to ſubdue,
And waſh out ev'ry ſtain:
Lord, do not turn away thy face
For ſpots which may remain.
W.
8 Lord, lead us daily to this blood,
To give us peace within;
And, that our peace may laſting be,
Our conſcience purge from ſin.
M.
9 Let's go to praiſe the Lamb above,
And in his preſence dwell,
Who hath redeem'd us by his blood
From all the pow'rs of hell.
W.
10 We'll go and join the angels ſong,
To praiſe the worthy Lamb:
That he is worthy of all pow'r
We'll evermore proclaim.

HYMN LXXXIX.

True BRITONS Thankſgiving for their Deliverance from Popery and ſlavery.

1 LET Britiſh hearts and tongues bleſs God,
And in his name rejoice;
All Proteſtants, come ſing aloud,
And make a joyful noiſe.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.
2 Praiſe God for kindneſs to this iſle,
And to our native land,
Who made the battle on us ſmile,
And ſav'd us by his hand.
Hallelujah, &c.
3 In mercy, God preſerves our crown,
In the reformed line;
French ſchemes and projects he breaks down
When hell and Rome combine.
Hallelujah, &c.
4 Papiſts and maſked Proteſtants
Still new rebellions try,
Pop'ry and ſlav'ry to advance
'Gainſt truth and liberty.
Hallelujah, &c.
5 Rome's friends do plot and fight in vain,
Them Zion's King doth ſee:
His goſpel pure he doth maintain,
And give us victory.
Hallelujah, &c.
6 To two Prince Williams, under God,
Great Britain ſtands in debt:
They ſtopt her foes here and abroad:
Let God the glory get.
Hallelujah, &c.
7 He rais'd and bleſt them; his ſtrong hand
Our laws and rights maintains:
He keeps his goſpel in the land,
Us frees from rack and chains.
Hallelujah, &c.
8 We thank God, w're in Britain born,
And not in France or Spain,
Or nations who the goſpel ſcorn,
And worſhip pure diſdain.
Hallelujah, Hallelujah,
Hallelujah, Amen.

HYMN XC.

ANOTHER.

1 CHriſt ſees his church in all her ſtraits
And hears his people's cries.
The plots of foes, however cloſe,
Are all before his eyes.
2 When Antichriſt with all his train,
Raze Zion quite, do cry:
Her mighty King above doth reign,
And all their rage defy.
3 Let Britain ne'er forget her God,
Who guards her, and preſerves
Religion, laws and liberties;
Smites not, as ſhe deſerves.
3 Ah Lord, our land's provoking ſins
Call for a ſecond flood:
A deluge ſend from Calvary,
To drown them in thy blood.
5 To Britain true repentance give,
On fleets and armies ſmile;
Change hearts and lives, their ſins forgive:
Abide ſtill in our iſle;
6 About her be a wall of fire,
The glory us among;
Protect us ſtill from Romiſh ire,
And all who would us wrong.
7 Let reformation from the throne
Spread both to rich and poor:
In ev'ry houſe let God be prais'd,
And ſin caſt to the door.
8 What ſhall we render to our God
For all his gifts to us?
And for his gift unſpeakable,
Chriſt bleeding on the croſs?

HYMN XCI.

BELIEVERS Food at CHRIST'S Table.

1 THE angels bright above
Do not partake this food:

They feaſt upon their Maker's love,
But not a Saviour's blood.
2 Here Chriſt his flock doth feed
With food of rareſt kinds,
Pardon and peace bought with his blood,
Moſt fit for troubled minds.
3 I'll feed and waſh me clean
In ſtreams of Jeſu's blood:
Lord, purge my ſoul from ev'ry ſtain
In that ſoul-cleanſing flood.
4 God's pity I admire:
When wrath 'gainſt man did ſwell,
He ſent his Son to bear our ſins,
And ſave our ſouls from hell.
5 Father, regard thy Son,
Who for us interceeds;
His blood cries louder than our ſins,
And for remiſſion pleads.
6 Thou ſay'ſt, a feaſt above
Shall to thy flock be giv'n;
What's wanting at the table here
Shall be made up in heav'n.
7 To Chriſt, when they aſcend,
They'll need theſe ſigns no more;
They'll feaſt and ſhare of heav'nly fare
Chriſt keeps for them in ſtore.
8 Lord, take me to that feaſt,
Where I ſhall ſee thy face,
And evermore feed and adore,
And bleſs thee for thy grace.

HYMN XCII.

CHRIST's dying Love to be remembered.

1 CHriſt ſaid, when men fell under doom,
To do thy will, O God, I come;
I freely come, I freely die,
For guilty men to ſatisfie.
2 Thou, Lord, for them who hated thee,
Didſt ſhed thy blood abundantlie;
Thy ſoul for ſin an off'ring made,
And thus our dreadful debt was paid.
3 That night our Jeſus was betray'd,
He took, he bleſs'd, he brake the bread,
In mem'ry of Chriſt crucify'd,
He ſaid, Do this, then went and dy'd.
4 "Do this, my friends, till I return;
Look on my wounds for ſin, and mourn:
Yet eat and drink ſtill thankfully;
This feaſt keep, and remember me."
5 A moving ſight, Lord, here I ſee,
My bleeding Lamb nail'd to the tree:
May I, while feeding here, be found
Cloſs prying into ev'ry wound.
6 Here is God's righteouſneſs brought near,
Clothing for naked ſouls to wear:
This robe, ſaith Chriſt, I wrought for thee;
Come put it on, remembring me.
7 Here's refuge, peace, eternal life,
Come ſhare and baniſh unbelief:
My blood wipes out the deepeſt ſtain;
Feed on this truth, The Lamb is ſlain.
8 This truth makes angels fall and cry,
How wondrous is this myſtery!
Ten thouſand thouſands do the ſame,
Who miniſter before the Lamb.

HYMN XCIII.

CHRIST our RIGHTEOUSNESS and the SOUL's ALL.

1 CHRIST feeds his flock, he calls their names,
His boſom bears the tender Lambs:
Look on the weak and bruiſed reed,
Which from thee ſtrength doth always need.
2 I'm weak and ſinful, deareſt Lamb;
But come and take me as I am:
O waſh me in thy precious blood,
And ſo preſent me unto God.
3 The goſpel-news my faith ſuſtain:
Which ſay, for us the Lamb was ſlain:
To Jeſus let the guilty fly,
Who out of love for men would dy.
4 "I none deſire to know beſide,
Chriſt Jeſus, and him crucify'd."
Accept me in his righteouſneſs,
And in my heart his love increaſe.
5 My robes are Jeſu's righteouſneſs,
My ſoul is faireſt in this dreſs:
Put on me righteouſneſs divine;
Say, Chriſt, with all he hath, is mine.
6 Thy viſit would revive my ſoul,
Thy gracious preſence makes me whole:
Come down, Lord, ſhew thyſelf to me,
Or elſe take up my ſoul to thee.
7 When Chriſt draws nigh, there's none can (move,
Nor part my heart from his ſweet love:
I then cry, "I'll not let thee go,
Till from thee bleſſings to me flow."
8 I'll glory only in our Lord,
By whom our nature is reſtor'd:
On Jeſus all my hopes depend.
Lord, love me, keep me to the end.

HYMN XCIV.

CHRIST's wondrous Love and Blood.

1 THE heav'ns and earth do brightly ſhine,
With rays of glorious pow'r divine:
But of our mercies Chriſt's the ſpring,
Let men his acts and battles ſing;
His wondrous love that made him dy
For man his mortal enemy.
2 Since finite off'rings all were vain,
Of ſin to purge away the ſtain;
Chriſt ſaid, I come a ſacrifice
That juſtice fully ſatisfies.
Amazing love that God ſhould die
For man his mortal enemy!
3 My Lord, amidſt his agonies,
His dying grones and bitter cries,
Did pray for us who us'd him ſo,
'Father they know not what they do.'
Chriſt's blood did then for us atone,
And now it pleads before the throne.
4 They're bleſt who know their ſins forgiv'n,
In Jeſu's wounds they have found heav'n,
With faith I'll view thy blood and croſs;

The world compar'd with thee is droſs.
I'll praiſe King David's Son and Lord,
And wiſh him ev'ry where ador'd.
5 No angel's tongue can ever tell
The glory of Immanuel:
All his love-wonders, and his name,
Eternity can not proclaim.
Lord, make us meet with ſaints above,
To ſing thy everlaſting love.

HYMN XCV.

The RICHES and GLORY of Saints above.

1 CHRIST's poverty and ſtate ſo mean
For us great riches did obtain.
Tho' ſtrangers here, and poor in hand,
We journey to the promis'd land:
Chriſt's riches there are largely giv'n;
All wants ſhall be made up in heav'n.
2 In heav'n the King unvails his face,
Which makes't a glorious dwelling place:
When ſhall the happy minute come
I'll change my baniſhment for home,
And mount and make my bleſt abode
With my dear Lamb, my Lord and God?
3 Above the ſaints for ever reſt
In Jeſu's their Redeemer's breaſt:
In holineſs they're pure and white,
They ſpotleſs ſhine like morning light.
O draw me up, the Lamb to ſee,
And live with him that dy'd for me.
4 For us our Lord roſe from the dead,
And did aſcend his blood to plead:
The napkin left, when he did riſe,
From tears may wipe the mourners eyes.
Since he hath got the victorie,
Sufficient is his grace for me.
5 Let's wait till Chriſt our judge appear,
And cauſe the dead his voice to hear:
My abſolution he'll proclaim,
And 'mong his ſaints enrol my name;
[illegible]'ll with his hands put on my crown,
And bid me on his throne ſit down.

HYMN XCVI.

The Lord's People feaſting at his Table.

1 JESUS, thy feaſt we celebrate;
At thy command the bread we eat
And drink the cup of ſacred wine;
To ſhew thy death thy friends combine;
Do this we will, and ſo prepare
To meet thee coming in the air.
2 Thy table ſhews thy love and grace,
And entertains our ſouls with peace:
Our hearts by right are only thine;
Poſſeſs them, Lord, with love divine:
Nail our deſires unto the croſs;
For all beſide thee is but droſs.
3 Feed ſouls, and on their graces ſhine,
And all their pow'rs poſſeſs as thine:
In ſtrength of this meal let us move
Towards the mount of God above;
To feel thy pow'r, to hear thy voice,
To taſte thy love is all our choice.
4 Chriſt made me at his table dine,
He raviſh'd me with love divine;
He gave a taſte of future bliſs:
I ſaid, He's mine, and I am his;
All treaſures here thou'rt far before:
Since Chriſt is mine I aſk no more.
5 My heart and pow'rs invite the King,
My tongue is looſ'd his praiſe to ſing:
With me, let all the hoſts above
Shew forth the praiſe of matchleſs love:
JESUS, poſſeſs my heart alone,
And in me let thy will be done.

HYMN XCVII.

The Love and ſacrifice of CHRIST.

1 CHriſt Jeſus the Lamb,
To ſave us he came;
His love to poor ſinners is always the ſame.
2 The love in his breaſt
Cannot be expreſt;
Part of it we'll utter, and wonder out the reſt.
3 When no ſacrifice
Could for man ſuffice,
Chriſt would be incarnate, to pay his ſoul's price,
4 In ſin men did ly,
None pardon could buy;
Love brought the Creator for creatures to die.
5 Man he would be made,
His blood all would ſhed,
Even ly in the grave that all might be paid.
6 All off'rings were vain
But Chriſt for us ſlain;
This ſacrifice only our peace can obtain.
7 His dear Son God gave
To ly in a grave,
And wade thro' hell's ſorrows, loſt ſinners to ſave.
8 Chriſt's death makes us gaze!
Who can this love praiſe!
It doth the bright angels and ſaints all amaze.
9 Chriſt for us was dead,
Now lives as our Head;
For us in the heaven's his blood he doth plead.
10 Exalted he ſtands
Shews his bleeding hands:
Chriſt, having paid juſtice, our freedom demands.
11 Salvation he brings
Which in our ears rings
To make us more happy than great earthly kings.
12 Chriſt's blood we hear call
All ſorts great and ſmall;
His wounds do perſuade us in his arms to fall.

HYMN XCVIII.

CHRIST's Love makes him die, riſe, aſcend, and return.

1 LOVE did condeſcend
Our Lord down to ſend
To be our peace-maker, the ſtrife for to end.
2 Chriſt wept and did cry,
And for our ſins die;
Love brought him from heaven, in grave for 3 Love made him awake, (to lie.

To heaven go back;
Love will make him return again for our ſake.
4 Above Chriſt makes room
For ſaints when they come;
Firſt here he prepares them, then brings them all home.
5 Some time he now ſtays,
Yet he'll the dead raiſe,
And conveen his people to ſhew forth his praiſe.
6 O when ſhall time end,
That I may aſcend
Eternity wholly in praiſes to ſpend!
7 The love of the Lamb
To ſinners doth flame:
Tho' ſin do defile me, take me as I am.
8 Thy blood me can cleanſe
From my fouleſt ſtains;
Of ſin it can purge out the very remains,
9 Things ſmall to me ſeem
Which here men eſteem:
Chriſt only I want, me from ſin to redeem.
10 Let all him believe,
Who can ſin forgive,
And all from its bondage their ſouls can relieve.
11 Chriſt all men will try,
Our Judge comes away;
His flock he will gather in that ſolemn day.
12 Their names he doth mind,
To weak ones he's kind;
He'll not go to heav'n, and leave one behind.

HYMN XCIX.

Faith ſtruggling with Unbelief.

1 CHRIST doth ſave men in his love,
From death's ſting, ſin and hell;
Them he fits to ſing above,
And in his preſence dwell.
From our fears, Lord, us relieve
To penitents thy word ſpeaks life:
Thy ſure promiſe I believe;
'Lord, help my unbelief.'
2 Let my lamp be ready trim'd
Againſt the Bridegroom come;
Let my ſoul be well prepar'd
That with him I get room.
All believers thou'lt receive,
And bear up under fear and grief:
Thy ſure promiſe I believe;
'Lord, help my unbelief.'
3 Love brought Chriſt down for to die,
Love laid him in a tomb;
Love cauſed him aſcend on high,
To find his people room.
All thy friends wilt thou revive,
In ſtraits and fears grant them relief:
Thy ſure promiſe I believe;
'Lord, help my unbelief.'
4 Cauſe us to ſee thy love to us
In thy ſore agonie,
And in thy wounds on the croſs,
When for us thou didſt die.
Them thou loves who to the cleave,
And of all friends thee count the chief:
Thy ſure promiſe I believe;
'Lord, help my unbelief.'
5 Here 'tis ſweet to view thy love,
And ſee thy face in part;
Far more ſweet it is aobve
To ſee thee as thou art.
Thou to meek ones life wilt give,
And them wilt ſave from ſin and ſtriſe:
Thy ſure promiſe I believe;
'Lord, help my unbelief.'

HYMN C.

CHRIST our Shephered. Pſal. xxiii.

1 THE Lord himſelf my ſhepherd is,
That doth me daily feed:
Since he is mine, and I am his,
He will ſupply my need.
2 To verdant fields he doth me lead
For paſture and for reſt,
Where living ſtreams do gently glide;
He feaſts me with the beſt.
3 In love he doth my ſoul reclaim,
When from him I do ſtray:
Not for my worth, but for his name,
He guides me in his way.
4 When I go thro' the ſhades of death,
No evil then I'll fear:
His rod and ſtaff, and heav'nly breath,
Will yield me comfort there.
5 In ſight of all my deadly foes
Thou doſt my table ſpread;
My cup with good things overflows,
Freſh oil anoints my head.
6 Goodneſs and mercy, I believe,
Shall wait me all my days;
And in God's houſe I'll ever live,
To trumpet forth his praiſe.

DOXOLOGY. Jude 24.

NOW unto our Redeemer ſtrong;
Who by his mighty arm
Can keep from falling into ſin,
And ſave us from all harm;
Who can preſent us unto God
Quite faultleſs and complete,
Before the glory of his face,
With joys exceeding great:
To God our Saviour only wiſe
Be ſtill aſcribed, then,
All glory, pow'r and majeſty,
Both now and ay. Amen.
Let's worſhip with the heav'nly hoſt
JEHOVAH One in Three:
Praiſe Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt,
To all eternitie.
